Scores of cases likewise have found evidence offered by the debt collector insufficient to meet its burden of showing that it had in place reasonable procedures to avoid the alleged violation.[114] And because mistaken interpretations of the FDCPA do

111 See Lupia v. Medicredit, Inc., 8 F.4th 1184 (10th Cir. 2021) (finding nothing in record to show that collector's policies were designed to avoid making unauthorized calls to consumers); Kottler v. Gulf Coast Collection Bur., Inc., 847 Fed. Appx. 542 (11th Cir. 2021) (collection agency's procedures not reasonably tailored to identify debt covered by the workers' compensation law); Von Esch v. Asset Sys., Inc., 823 Fed. Appx. 543, 544 (9th Cir. 2020) (collection agency presented sufficient and unrebutted evidence to prove that its procedures were "reasonably adapted to avoid demanding the wrong principal sum"); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011); Johnson v. Riddle, 443 F.3d 723 (10th Cir. 2006) (procedures to avoid clerical errors not reasonably adapted to prevent legal errors); Jenkins v. Heintz, 124 F.3d 824 (7th Cir. 1997); Smith v. Transworld Sys., Inc. 953 F.2d 1025, 1035 (6th Cir. 1992) (Krupansky, C.J., concurring in part and dissenting in part; objecting to majority ruling by describing how collector intentionally structured procedure that made mistake inevitable); Guevara v. Constar Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 2020 WL 3001390, at *12 (M.D. Pa. June 4, 2020) (no explanation of any procedures designed to prevent specific error of overstating debt amount to consumer when credit adjustment was applicable to his account); Pettitt v. Chiari & Ilecki, L.L.P., 419 F. Supp. 3d 627, 637–638 (W.D.N.Y. 2019) (denying summary judgment because whether debt collector's procedures were reasonably adapted to avoid error—here, collecting on time-barred debt— is generally fact question for jury); Motes v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 233 F. Supp. 3d 1256, 1267 (N.D. Ala. 2017); VanHuss v. Rausch, Sturm, Israel, Enerson & Hornik, 2017 WL 1379402 (W.D. Wis. Apr. 14, 2017) (although law firm had extensive written materials explaining how debt verification request should be handled, it did not provide description of any training of its mailroom employees on how to handle consumer's debt verification letters when they arrived, or how to confirm that a piece of mail was properly received and routed); Montgomery v. Shermeta, Adams & Von Allmen, P.C., 885 F. Supp. 2d 849, 857–858 (W.D. Mich. 2012) (though law firm may have had procedures in place to prevent the sort of violation described, fact that computer generated multiple letters after cease letter was received raised issue of fact as to whether those procedures were reasonable); Coleman v. Credit Mgmt., L.P., 2011 WL 5248219, at *4–5 (N.D. Tex. Nov. 2, 2011) (policy of removing incorrect numbers once on notice that number is incorrect and then coding such number was proven effective by absence of calls after plaintiff informed defendant of its mistake); Welker v. Law Office of Daniel J. Horwitz, 699 F. Supp. 2d 1164 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (no evidence explaining any measures used to avoid computer glitches such as occurred here or of preventing letters that accidentally omitted certain warnings required by FDCPA). Cf. Stinson v. Receivables Mgmt. Bur. Inc., 2013 WL 1278966 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 26, 2013) (collector could reasonably rely on recipient at wrong phone number to state it was wrong number).

112 889 F.3d 337 (7th Cir. 2018).

113 Id. at 350 n.9 (quoting Flores v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 5891032, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 29, 2017)).

114 See, e.g., Lupia v. Medicredit, Inc., 8 F.4th 1184 (10th Cir. 2021) (agreeing with district court's determination that no reasonable jury could find procedure allowing three-day lag between receipt of debtor's dispute and logging of that dispute into collector's system to be reasonably adapted to prevent unauthorized contact with debtor); Wagner v. Chiari & Ilecki, L.L.P., 973 F.3d 154 (2d Cir. 2020) (reasonable jury could find that collector did not maintain reasonable procedures to avoid its error where collector had no written policies to cover circumstances at issue); Weinstein v. Mandarich Law Grp., L.L.P., 798 Fed. Appx. 88 (9th Cir. 2019) (upholding district court finding that debt collector did not explain how its computer system's procedure was adapted to avoid error, citing Reichert v. Nat'l Credit Sys, Inc., 531 F.3d 1002, 1007 (9th Cir. 2008)); Leeb v. Nationwide Credit Corp., 806 F.3d 895 (7th Cir. 2015) (general policy against sending particular form letter in response to consumer's § 1692g dispute letter was not adequate "procedure," as it did not provide collector's employees with adequate procedure to respond); Hepsen v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 383 Fed. Appx. 877, 884 (11th Cir. 2010) (debt collector did not establish that its policies guard against collection of inaccurate debts, because it had no policy in place to verify existence or amount of debts before sending demand notices); Reichert v. Nat'l Credit Sys, Inc., 531 F.3d 1002, 1007 (9th Cir. 2008) ("debt collector has an affirmative obligation to maintain procedures designed to avoid discoverable errors, including, but not limited to, errors in calculation and itemization"); Johnson v. Columbia Debt Recovery, L.L.C., 2021 WL 796332 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 2, 2021) (no evidence for reasonable jury to conclude that collector maintained specific procedure adapted to avoid error at issue, namely continuing to credit-report nonexistent judgment, and mistaken belief that unlawful detainer had proceeded to judgment and then garnishment was not bona fide error); McClanahan v. Medicredit, Inc., 2020 WL 6204419 (M.D. Tenn. Oct. 22, 2020) (dispute of material fact as to whether flawed electronic file contained readily discoverable error and whether agency maintained procedures reasonably adapter to avoid that error); Burr v. Evergreen Prof'l Recoveries, Inc., 2020 WL 4261137 (W.D. Wash. July 24, 2020) (where there was evidence only of system of coding accounts as disputed or paid, there was no evidence that collection agency had procedures to double-check coding before it was implemented, or to audit coding after it had been completed); Hassine v. Simon's Agency, Inc., 2020 WL 3481815 (D.N.J. June. 26, 2020) (the "Policies and Procedures" document agency produced contained vague reference to "steps" and "guidance" that agency takes, but did not actually provide specific details as to what procedures are followed); Malone v. Accounts Receivable Res., Inc., 408 F. Supp. 3d 1335 (S.D. Fla. 2019) (reliance on creditor to report only debts that are validly due and owing is not procedure reasonably adapted to avoid readily discoverable errors, in particular error here—that consumer's treatment at medical center was result of workplace injury); Torres v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1508535 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 27, 2018) (debt buyer failed to establish bona fide error defense where it claimed it did not know that consumer had counsel because its three prior debt collectors failed to notify it of representation, which contradicted its insistence that it had policies in place to ensure that such critical information was retained and shared); Foster v. Green Tree not support a bona fide error defense under Jerman, the training of debt collection employees on FDCPA requirements may not be a procedure relevant to the errors that may be a basis for a bona fide error defense.[115]

Some courts find for the defendant if reasonable procedures are in place, even if the collector could have taken more effective steps to avoid the error.[116] Many courts have found that a

Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5151354 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 3, 2017) (though mortgage servicer maintained some procedures to avoid errors regarding communication with represented consumers, there was no evidence that it maintained policies requiring communication with its foreclosure counsel or procedures to review its own foreclosure file to determine whether borrower was represented); Fausz v. NPAS, Inc., 237 F. Supp. 3d 559 (W.D. Ky. 2017) (denying summary judgment, finding genuine issue of material fact as to whether collector maintained reasonable procedures to assure that it was not collecting on defaulted medical debts); Cooper v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 2017 WL 2404952 (N.D. Ill. June 2, 2017) (debt collector falsely wrote to consumer that it would update consumer's report at credit bureau, when it had no intention of taking such action; bona fide error defense fails because debt collector had no procedures in place to avoid its FDCPA violation); Garcia v. Creditors Specialty Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 6778681, at *7 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 16, 2016) (argument of owner/president that "he instructed the service company to make only visible the debtor's name and address" insufficient because "mere instruction without more does not constitute 'maintenance of procedures reasonably adapted to avoid any such errors'"); Rawson v. Source Receivables Mgmt., L.L.C., 215 F. Supp. 3d 684 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 6, 2016) (collection agency did not establish it had reasonable system to ensure that its collection letters complied with § 1692g(a)(2)'s requirement of identifying debt's current owner); Kersten v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2015 WL 105797 (D. Or. Jan. 7, 2015) (agency presented no evidence that it maintained "procedures reasonably adapted" to prevent representatives from leaving voice messages that omitted identifying information); Lassiter v. Integrity Sol. Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 1040677 (D. Colo. Mar. 18, 2014) (rejecting collector's bona fide error defense where collector's training materials indicated that employees were trained on general requirements of FDCPA but did not show existence of internal account-handling policies tailored to avoid contacting represented consumer who had also sent cease contacts letter to collector); Webster v. ACB Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 15 F. Supp. 3d 619, 629 (D. Md. 2014) (finding collector violated FDCPA by continuing to communicate with consumer after receiving cease and desist request); Grant-Fletcher v. McMullen & Drury, P.A., 964 F. Supp. 2d 514 (D. Md. 2013) (debt collector failed to maintain procedures designed to avoid discoverable errors, including, but not limited to, error in including fee not yet due); Long v. Nationwide Legal File & Serve, Inc., 2013 WL 5219053 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 17, 2013) (no procedures that would avoid filing of false proofs of service); Elzaghal v. Ray Klein, Inc., 2012 WL 4863704 (D. Or. Oct. 11, 2012) (debt collector provided no documentation establishing policy or training procedures regarding expungement of debt from credit records); Abernathy v. NCC Bus. Serv., Inc., 2012 WL 4320810 (N.D. Miss. Sept. 18, 2012) (generic description of defendant's dialing system was insufficient); Smith v. Nat'l Credit Sys., Inc., 807 F. Supp. 2d 836 (D. Ariz. 2011) (not established where failed to identify procedure regarding disputed debts); Miller v. Gurstel, Staloch & Chargo, P.A., 2011 WL 1404971, at *3 (D. Minn. Apr. 13, 2011) ("no evidence of any procedure designed to avoid coding mistakes"); Bacelli v. MFP, Inc., 729 F. Supp. 2d 1328 (M.D. Fla. 2010) (presented no evidence of agreement or understanding with creditor that it would not refer accounts in bankruptcy, and no evidence that its reliance on creditor had proved effective in avoiding past errors); Johnson v. Prof'l Collection Consultants, 2010 WL 2196571 (S.D. Cal. May 28, 2010) (no evidence of procedures designed to verify accuracy of address received from creditor prior to mailing letters to debtor); Midland Funding L.L.C. v. Brent, 644 F. Supp. 2d 961, 972 (N.D. Ohio 2009) (no bona fide error defense where "no explanation for how the mistake of preparing a form affidavit that asserts personal knowledge on the part of an affiant who could not possibly have it could be without intent"); Rice v. Troon Co. Partners, 2009 WL 935745, at *2 (W.D. Okla. Apr. 3, 2009) (no explanation of procedures used to generate letters to debtors or to prevent specific clerical error at issue, namely "using the wrong computer template or otherwise printing a document on TC letterhead and, without noticing the error despite distinct letterheads, mailing a TC letter to a TCP debtor"). See also Lynch v. Fin. Recovery Serv. of Minn., Inc., 2013 WL 11971263 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 30, 2013) (reasonable jury could find that debt collector did not have reasonable procedures in place to avoid placement of calls without disclosing caller's identity and certainly that any such procedures "were not reasonably adapted to avoid this specific error," since plaintiff allegedly received two noncompliant messages); In re Accelerated Recovery Sys., Inc., 431 B.R. 138 (W.D. Va. 2010) (defendant offered no evidence of procedures); Holmes v. Mann Bracken, L.L.C., 2009 WL 5184485, at *9 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 22, 2009) (could not determine if Mann Bracken employed "procedures designed to avoid such errors"); Allen v. NCO Fin. Serv., Inc., 2002 WL 1291791 (N.D. Ill. June 10, 2002) (no bona fide error defense where defendant produced no documents or affidavits of procedures in place). But see Puglisi v. Debt Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 822 F. Supp. 2d 218 (E.D.N.Y. 2011) (established defense where defendant's employees received training and mentoring, and must pass an exam); Thomas v. Boscia, 2009 WL 2778105, at *4–5 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 28, 2009) (established bona fide error defense by showing "numerous safeguards" to identify cases in bankruptcy). Additional cases are summarized at Appx. E.3.6.1, infra.

115 See Leeb v. Nationwide Credit Corp., 806 F.3d 895 (7th Cir. 2015). See also § 12.2.2, supra; § 12.2.9.3, infra.

116 See Ross v. RJM Acquisitions Funding, L.L.C., 480 F.3d 493, 498 (7th Cir. 2007) (bankruptcy missed in computer search due to consumer's use of nickname; reasonable procedures required, not "state of the art" technology); Ewing v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 2021 WL 243598, at *6 (S.D. Ind. Jan. 25, 2021) (bona fide error defense established where evidence showed reasonable procedures in place to avoid error of continuing to report debt that was previously disputed even though collector did not have procedures in place to redirect improperly forwarded faxes); McInerney v. Roosen Varchetti & Olivier P.L.L.C., 2017 WL 4778724 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 23, 2017) (collection law firm was entitled to bona fide error defense where its act of filing suit in wrong venue was unintentional factual error and law firm reasonably relied on consumer's representations regarding address and on its own procedure to investigate any change of address order on file with Postal Service); Polster v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 2017 WL 1196888 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2017) (granting defense even though collector could not scrub the debt for bankruptcy because it was proceeding without the consumer's social security number); Rhinehart v. CBE Grp., Inc., 714 F. Supp. 2d 1183 (M.D. Fla. 2010) (procedures need not be foolproof). See also Berry v. Van Ru Credit, 2017 WL 4342072, at *1 (D. Utah Sept. 29, 2017) (bona fide error defense applied to § 1692d(6) violation where the collection agent did not identify his employer's identity; however, evidence of several prior calls by the agent with the consumer—in which the agent properly identified himself—demonstrated that "there was ample evidence" of the agency's maintenance of "specific and extensive procedures to avoid such errors"); Stratton v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 171 F. Supp. 3d 585, 603 (E.D. Ky. 2016) (stating in dicta that defense would be available), aff'd on other grounds, 706 Fed. Appx. 840 (6th Cir. 2017).

collector's procedures were reasonable even though they did not prevent the error,[117] while other courts have rejected the defense under those circumstances.[118]

To establish the defense, the collector must not only maintain procedures to comply with the Act, but also maintain a system of checks and reviews to guard against errors that can result in violation of the statute.[119] If the error occurs routinely, the procedures should be found inadequate.[120] If the collector fails to follow the procedures that it has nominally established,[121] or the procedures were not in place at the time of the error,[122] the defense may be denied.

Reasonable procedures that courts have found persuasive for some types of errors include training manuals and 117 See Heisler v. Convergent Healthcare Recoveries, Inc., 2020 WL 1249481, at *12 (E.D. Wis. Mar. 16, 2020) (while procedure did not prevent particular error, it prompted change to avoid this error in future); McCorriston v. L.W.T., Inc., 536 F. Supp. 2d 1268 (M.D. Fla. 2008) (procedures were "reasonably adapted" to prevent using wrong statute of limitations); Voris v. Creditors Alliance, Inc., 2007 WL 4219198 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 28, 2007) (defendant maintained procedures to determine whether debt was for consumer or commercial purposes); Lovelace v. Stephens & Michaels Assoc., Inc., 2007 WL 3333019 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 9, 2007) (collector had reasonable procedures to only identify herself and discuss the debt once she determined that she was speaking with consumer, but third party misrepresented himself as consumer); Herbert v. Monterey Fin. Serv., Inc., 2001 WL 1266299 (D. Conn. Sept. 28, 2001) (finding reasonable procedures despite staff procedure for calling dispute to attention of manager, who then had to specifically direct computer operators to enter dispute code); Moya v. Hocking, 10 F. Supp. 2d 847 (W.D. Mich. 1998) (error unintentional because referral information provided by creditors was inaccurate and defendants maintained reasonable and adequate procedures to avoid such violations).

118 Garcia v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 401 F. Supp. 3d 241, 256 (D. Conn. 2019) (defendant failed to show reasonable procedures were in place to catch errors where it knew debtors make payments to their creditors, it captured this information in its case management system, and also knew that information should have been programmed into its form letter, yet did not catch omission of credit for such payment); Hernandez v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 2874059 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 25, 2007) (no reasonable jury could find that violation was in good faith or that defendant maintained reasonable preventive procedures where notice added language foreign to Graham Leach-Bliley form notice); Seeger v. AFNI, Inc., 2007 WL 1598618 (E.D. Wis. June 1, 2007) (defendants failed to procure and examine contract before imposing unauthorized fee); Thompson v. D.A.N. Joint Venture III, L.P., 2007 WL 1625926 (M.D. Ala. June 5, 2007) (debt buyer had no procedures in place to prevent filing of time-barred lawsuits); Smith v. Am. Revenue Corp., 2005 WL 1162906 (N.D. Ind. May 16, 2005) (denying defense due to utter absence of any manuals or instructions on FDCPA and conclusory reference to attorney review); Wehrheim v. James M. Secrest, P.C., 2002 WL 31427515 (S.D. Ind. Oct. 9, 2002) (evidence did not establish who reviewed and proofread the draft foreclosure complaint, their education or training, or whether they were supervised); Adams v. Law Offices of Stuckert & Yates, 926 F. Supp. 521 (E.D. Pa. 1996) (posting a reminder to include required language in correspondence next to a word processor, as opposed to system of proofreading letters, was inadequate). See also Hartman v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 569 F.3d 606 (6th Cir. 2009) (reversing summary judgment for defendants where evidence supported conclusion that violation was intentional, and procedures were not designed to avoid violation at issue).

119 See Mogg v. Jacobs, 2016 WL 4395899, at *5–6 (S.D. Ill. Aug. 18, 2016) (jury could find that reasonable procedures had been implemented to alert defendant attorney of bankruptcy notices connected with cases referred to him and that any failures were due either to postal service errors or isolated clerical errors within collection agency); McDermott v. Marcus, Errico, Emmer & Brooks, P.C., 911 F. Supp. 2d 1, 60 (D. Mass. 2012) (where law firm had practice in place to ensure accuracy of legal bills, and associates reviewed their time slips, and a partner then reviewed bills before they were sent out, testimony that legal fees in letter were correct where amounts in letter differed from amounts due in invoices constituted proof that error was intentional), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 775 F.3d 109 (1st Cir. 2014); Marino v. Hoganwillig, P.L.L.C., 910 F. Supp. 2d 492, 499 (W.D.N.Y. 2012) (since mere existence of generic procedures is not enough, debt collector must show that it took precautions meant to eliminate specific error complained of; genuine issue of material fact as to whether agency's act of sending debtor two letters following receipt of a cease-and-desist letter was bona fide error); Wetzel v. AFNI, Inc., 2011 WL 6122963, at *5 (D. Or. Oct. 20, 2011) (procedures were "reasonably adapted" to avoid error of sending letter to the wrong person where debt collector, instead of relying on LexisNexis's past reliability, accepts new information provided by LexisNexis only if address is newer and if identifying characteristics, such as Social Security numbers, match), adopted, 2011 WL 6122957 (D. Or. Dec. 8, 2011); Knighten v. Palisades Collections, L.L.C., 721 F. Supp. 2d 1261, 1271 (S.D. Fla. 2010) (while attorney claimed that firm had procedures to avoid error of filing lawsuit under incorrect party name, there was no explanation of procedures used for cases such as this one, since even though attorneys, legal assistants, and clients themselves reviewed documents of the lawsuit to confirm their accuracy, error was not prevented); Edwards v. McCormick, 136 F. Supp. 2d 795, 802 (S.D. Ohio 2001) ("Though there is no doubt that a principal may lawfully assign to his agent the responsibility of performing the 'error-catching' procedure(s) required to invoke the protection of § 1692k(c), where the principal himself has an essential role in the actual procedure, an abdication of that responsibility necessarily destroys the effectiveness of the procedure itself." (emphasis in original)); Sibley v. Firstcollect, Inc., 913 F. Supp. 469, 472 (M.D. La. 1995) (debt collector presented no evidence that it had system in place to protect it from errors in legal advice where it did not routinely ask for second opinions or require its attorney to do frequent surveys of applicable law, and there was no evidence that collector's attorney employed any procedure reasonably adapted to prevent dissemination of incorrect legal advice); Stebbins v. Allied Account Serv., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22760 (D. Conn. June 23, 1992).

120 See, e.g., Spencer v. Hendersen-Webb, 81 F. Supp. 2d 582, 592 (D. Md. 1999) (procedures "woefully inadequate" where computer program automatically added a 15% attorney fee to every account regardless of the agreement on fees). See also Hepsen v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 383 Fed. Appx. 877 (11th Cir. 2010).

121 See, e.g., Rosales v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., L.P.A., 2020 WL 6681362, at *7 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 12, 2020) ("standard operating procedures" in place prior to filing of complaint were too vague to support bona fide error defense); Canady v. Wisenbaker Law Offices, P.C., 372 F. Supp. 2d 1379 (N.D. Ga. 2005) (once collection firm learned that suit was filed in improper venue, it failed to follow procedures requiring it to abandon suit).

122 Rosales v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., L.P.A., 2020 WL 6681362, at *7 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 12, 2020) (specific auditing procedure was developed several months after consumer filed suit); Durham v. Cont'l Cent. Credit, 2009 WL 3416114 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 20, 2009) (the fact that corrective procedures had been put into place suggests that there were no safeguards previously in place to establish a bona fide error defense); Simmons v. Miller & Steeno, P.C., 2002 WL 31898324 (E.D. Mo. Dec. 30, 2002) (collector had adopted a procedure to prevent FDCPA violations but it was not in place until after the letter at issue had been sent).

ıctions on referrals, computer systems, review
ɔaths from the creditor verifying the charge.[123]
s failure to introduce evidence to rebut the use-/stems and procedures described by the collec-
[124]

; have commented on the procedures that are ɔnable to avoid errors of state law.[125] General ɛp abreast of the law are insufficient.[126] The
: has found that an attorney's procedures were when the procedures included review of legal pared by the American Creditor Association Bar Association, submission of form letters nd regular reading of excerpts of the relevant utes. The court concluded:

consulted an attorney in Wisconsin on state or did it ask a Wisconsin governmental agency was entitled to charge a collection fee as the ɛ debt. . . . In the end, AFNI is not arguing that an informed, but mistaken, legal opinion. It at its ignorance of the law should be excused ttempted to keep itself informed about the law ɛ various trade association communications.
enough, in our view, to support the bona fide ɛe.[127]

nust closely oversee nonlawyers who are using ɛtterhead.[128]

12.2.9.2 When Is Reliance on the Creditor a Reasonable Procedure?

A debt collector may assert that where it relies on the creditor to provide relevant and accurate information about a debt, such reliance constitutes a reasonable procedure, even if the debt collector itself did not maintain procedures. Is such reliance sufficient?

In Owen v. I.C. System, Inc.,[129] the Eleventh Circuit reversed summary judgment for the debt collector concluding that it was not entitled to the bona fide error defense where the collection agency relied on its contract with the creditor, placing the responsibility for checking for unauthorized and illegal charges on the creditor while maintaining no procedures of its own to detect such contractual overcharges.

Some courts hold that collectors are permitted to rely on information provided by the creditor without procedures to check the amount or validity of the claim,[130] and others require that the collector have some procedures to review creditor information.[131] However, the Eleventh Circuit in Hepsen[132] and the Ninth Circuit in Clark[133] recognized that the debt collector is strictly responsible under FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A) for accurately stating the amount of the debt and cannot establish a bona fide error defense if it lacked reasonable procedures to avoid the inaccuracy. Other courts will also deny the defense when the collector failed to spell out the creditor's duties or otherwise failed to undertake reasonable procedures to catch creditor errors.[134]

Evidence that the collector has procedures in place to promptly correct an error once it occurs can be essential to its prevailing on the defense.[135] For example, a collector may rely

---

ɹewis v. ACB Bus. Serv., Inc., 135 F.3d 389 (6th Cir. 1998); Heinz, 124 F.3d 824 (7th Cir. 1997); Pasquale v. Law Offices & Kennard, 940 F. Supp. 2d 1151 (N.D. Cal. 2013); Rose v. 13 WL 1563655 (W.D. Va. Apr. 12, 2013) (defense shown ɛs, training, and monitoring); Hepsen v. J.C. Christensen & ıc., 2009 WL 3064865 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 22, 2009), aff'd, 383 ɛ. 877 (11th Cir. 2010); Zaborac v. Mut. Hosp. Serv., Inc., 2005

129 629 F.3d 1263 (11th Cir. 2011).

130 See § 12.2.7, supra.

131 See Shapiro v. Haenn, 222 F. Supp. 2d 29 (D. Me. 2002) (procedures to review documentation from creditor were reasonable); Axtell v. Collections U.S.A. Inc., 2002 WL 32595276 (D. Ariz. Oct. 22, 2002) (creditor's representation that it would assign only amounts legally to screen out debts that have been discharged in hat reliance is reasonable, but the collector must if a discharged debt slips through.[136] Another

: the debt collector lacked adequate procedures loyee called a consumer when the creditor rethe debt collector for collection, without check-e collector's do-not-call list, and the collector it had later acquired a system that did just that.[137] ulation F (effective November 30, 2021), use of ess obtained from a creditor or a prior debt collect of reasonable procedures to prevent third-party
1 email communications if certain procedures
[38] Additionally, whether the email address was 1 the creditor or prior debt collector, the debt col-ıot send an email address to email address if it previous communication to that email address third-party disclosure.[139]

Debt Collection Employee Training As a Reasonable Procedure

staken interpretations of the FDCPA do not supide error defense under Jerman,[140] the training of on employees on FDCPA requirements should not reasonable procedure.[141] The same result should ors of state or other federal law in most jurisdic-courts have sometimes found persuasive a debt vidence regarding employee training, including l seminars, as a basis for the defense for some

However, training is insufficient without monitoring for and correcting violations.[144] Training has been found insufficient where the debt collector does not provide the details of the training or explain how the training was designed to prevent the specific error at issue.[145] But where a collector trains employees not only on the requirements of the FDCPA but also on how to handle the specific matter at issue (such as how to handle disputed debts), and the collector has reasonable procedure in place alongside the employee training, a bona fide error may be established.[146]

Subscribing to this treatise was found part of a reasonable procedure by the Sixth Circuit in a case reversed by the Supreme Court, although the authors believe that debt collector subscribers should be required to rely on the treatise's

Cir. 1998). See also Ross v. Northland Grp., Inc., 2011 WL
1, at *2 (D. Minn. Feb. 9, 2011) (denying consumer's motion nary judgment as to bona fide error defense in case involving : identity; collection agency contended that "it has serviced millions of debts and has never before had this particular type occur" and that "the address mix-up seems to have originated dit-reporting agency and not from Northland").

false, deceptive or misleading representations, such as falsely stating the character, amount or legal status of the debt" supported finding that servicer had reasonable procedures in place; court notes that it was "uncontroverted and uncontroversial " that if employee had "simply followed the checklist and abided by her FDCPA training," she would not have made error that led to consumer's receipt of challenged billing statements); Green v. Stellar Recovery, Inc., 2013 WL 12106089, at *3 (D. Colo. June 6, 2013) (issue of material fact as to bona fide error defense where debt collector provided "specific citations to and information about specific policies and training materials allegedly provided to new hires and used as ongoing training to its employees to educate them not to make statements that violated the FDCPA, including certain specified statements that are at issue here"); Puglisi v. Debt Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 822 F. Supp. 2d 218, 228 (E.D.N.Y. 2011) (finding that debt collector's compliance procedures, "including written procedures in the form of a Company Manual and a Training Manual, specific classroom training for compliance with the FDCPA and State law issues, employee examinations, review of communications, mentoring by the senior-most collectors, and various seminars and training programs as part of defendant's membership in its trade association" were sufficient to entitle it to bona fide error defense).

144 See, e.g., Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337, 349 n.9 (7th Cir. 2018) (while evidence demonstrated that debt collector provided training sessions and manual to employees about recognizing and processing disputes, there was no evidence of measures "in place to prevent careless misreading of letters, such as having employee text—rather than ignore it—for their subscription to count as part of a reasonable procedure to avoid errors.[147]

12.2.9.4 Reasonable Procedures for Emails and Text Messages

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) establishes certain requirements applicable to debt collector communications via emails, text messages and social media. Regulation F also sets out procedures the collector can take in using email and text messaging communications that can lead to a bona fide error defense when sending an email or text message that leads to a third-party in violation of Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(1).[148] Regulation F does not specify procedures that could lead to a bona fide error defense relating to other types of electronic messages, including direct messages via social media.[149]

Compliance with the email and text message procedures does not provide a safe harbor for the debt collector, but only establishes reasonable procedures for a bona fide error defense as to third party communications. Compliance does not lead to a bona fide error defense if the violation is intentional or otherwise does not involve a bona fide error. Nor do the procedures necessarily lead to a bona fide error defense for other Regulation F provisions. On the other hand, failure to comply with these procedures is not an independent Regulation F violation.

The reasonable procedures for email and text message communications outlined in Regulation F require the debt collector to take steps to reasonably confirm and document that the debt collector obtained the email address or phone number for text messages in a way that indicates it was a valid email address or phone number for the consumer and continues to be one.[150] These procedures are indicated in some detail in Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4) for emails and Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(5) for text messages. The collector must also take steps to reasonably confirm and document, pursuant to Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3)(ii), that the debt collector did not communicate with the consumer by sending an email to an email address or a text message to a telephone number that the debt collector knows has led to a prohibited third-party disclosure. All of these procedures are examined in detail at § 5.7.9, supra.

12.3 FDCPA Statute of Limitations

12.3.1 Overview

The FDCPA limitations period is "one year from the date on which the violation occurs."[151] The Supreme Court, in 2019, ruled that the period begins to run from when the violation occurs, and not from when the consumer discovers the violation.[152] The Court left open extending the statute of limitations based on equitable tolling or on the equitable fraud-specific discovery rule, as discussed at § 12.3.4, infra. Because the FDCPA provides a statutory limitations period, the equitable defense of laches is not available.[153]

As is typical for most statutes of limitations, the limitations period uses the date the consumer files the FDCPA action, not the date that the consumer serves the complaint on the defendant. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 4(m) requires the service be completed within ninety days, so that service of process can be as many as fifteen months after the violation, as long as the action is filed with the court within one year.

For many types of FDCPA violations, such as abusive phone calls, the one-year period is not a problem if the victim complains to a lawyer soon after the abuse. But a consumer may not detect, until after the limitations period has run, violations arising from debt collector reports to credit reporting agencies or from the improper service of a debt collection lawsuit. A violation time-barred under the FDCPA may be actionable under a UDAP, tort, or state debt collection statutory claim if state law provides a longer limitations period or allows the period to begin after the consumer discovers the violation.[154]

With the possible exception of the Eighth Circuit,[155] courts find the statute of limitations is procedural, not jurisdictional, so that if the debt collector does not raise this affirmative defense in a timely manner, it is deemed lost.[156] The defendant

147 Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 538 F.3d 496 (6th Cir. 2008), rev'd on other grounds, 559 U.S. 573, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010).

148 See Reg. F §§ 1006.6(d)(3). See § 5.7.9, supra.

149 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,777 (Nov. 30, 2020).

150 See Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3)(i). See § 5.7.9, supra.

151 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(d).

152 Rotkiske v. Klemm, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S. Ct. 355, 205 L. Ed. 2d 291 (2019).

153 See Prindle v. Carrington Mortg. Serv., L.L.C., 2016 WL 9504253 (M.D. Fla. May 27, 2016), citing Petrella v. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Inc., 572 U.S. 663, 666, 679–680, 134 S. Ct. 1962, 188 L. Ed. 2d 979 (2014).

154 See Ch. 16, infra. See, e.g., Harrington v. CACV, L.L.C., 508 F. Supp. 2d 128 (D. Mass. 2007); Kouabo v. Chevy Chase Bank, 336 F. Supp. 2d 471 (D. Md. 2004).

155 Hageman v. Barton, 817 F.3d 611 (8th Cir. 2016) (FDCPA statute of limitations is jurisdictional); Mattson v. U.S. West Commc'ns, Inc., 967 F.2d 259, 262 (8th Cir. 1992) (same). These rulings are now open to question because of the Supreme Court's decision in Rotkiske v. Klemm, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S. Ct. 355, 205 L. Ed. 2d 291 (2019), discussing the application of the fraud-based discovery rule that would not be available if the limitations period is jurisdictional. See §§ 12.3.4, 12.3.5, infra.

156 Marshall-Mosby v. Corporate Receivables, Inc., 205 F.3d 323 (7th Cir. 2000); Betskoff v. Enter. Rent A Car Co. of Baltimore, L.L.C., 2012 WL 32575 (D. Md. Jan. 4, 2012) (statute of limitations not a jurisdictional bar). See also Maynard v. Cannon, 2006 WL 2403591 (D. Utah Aug. 21, 2006) (FDCPA statute of limitations procedural); Barnett v. Experian Info. Solutions, 2004 WL 4033379 (E.D. Tex. Sept. 28, 2004) (same); Hooper v. Capital Credit & Collection Serv., Inc., 2004 WL 825616 (D. Or. Jan. 16, 2004) (same); Clark v. Bonded Adjustment Co., 204 F.R.D. 662 (E.D. Wash. 2002); In re Maxwell, 281 B.R. 101 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2002).

has the burden to raise[157] and establish[158] a statute of limitations defense.

Even if an FDCPA violation is time-barred, the violation may nevertheless be admissible to show background and to establish a foundation for other evidence, as well as to show the plaintiff's vulnerable state of mind and establish the extent of general damages and a pattern of abuse.[159] Conduct beyond the limitations period also goes to the frequency and persistence of the collector's non-compliance, which is a statutory factor in determining the amount of statutory damages.[160]

A state renewal statute cannot extend the limitations period to the filing of a claim under the FDCPA, in which Congress established an express statute of limitations.[161]

12.3.2 Events That Start the Limitations Period Running

12.3.2.1 Determining the Applicable Date for Debt Collectors' Letters

Some courts start the limitations period running on the date that a collection letter is mailed, reasoning that this is the collector's last opportunity to comply with the FDCPA.[162] The Eleventh Circuit agreed, but the court added five days to the mailing date where the violation involved the verification requirement, which gives the collector five days after the initial communication to deliver the verification notice.[163] Other courts rely on the date that the consumer receives the letter.[164]

12.3.2.2 The Applicable Date for Violations Involving Collection Lawsuits

The Fifth and Tenth Circuits and many lower courts hold that the FDCPA limitations period does not being to run until the consumer is served with or learns of the collection lawsuit, not earlier when the collector files the complaint with a court.[165] Otherwise the debt collector could avoid the FDCPA's

157 See, e.g., Michalak v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 604 Fed. Appx. 492 (6th Cir. 2015); Goodin v. Bank of Am., 2015 WL 3866872 (M.D. Fla. June 23, 2015); Duranseau v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2015 WL 632144 (D. Minn. Feb. 13, 2015); Horwitz v. Wells Fargo, 2012 WL 5862752 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 19, 2012).

158 See, e.g., Cain v. Thompson, 2020 WL 42897, at *2 (W.D. Ky. Jan. 3, 2020); Basile v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2011 WL 4368510 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 19, 2011).

159 See Kapsis v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing Inc., 923 F. Supp. 2d 430 (E.D.N.Y. 2013); Blue v. Bronson & Migliaccio, 2010 WL 4641666, at *3 (D. Or. Nov. 4, 2010); Mathis v. Omnium Worldwide, 2005 WL 3159663 (D. Or. Nov. 27, 2005) (may use actions to support claims of abuse, harassment, or knowledge of attorney's representation); Joseph v. J.J. Mac Intyre Cos., L.L.C., 281 F. Supp. 2d 1156, 1162 (N.D. Cal. 2003); Padilla v. Payco Gen. Am. Credits, Inc., 161 F. Supp. 2d 264, 273 (S.D.N.Y. 2001); Pittman v. J.J. Mac Intyre Co. of Nev., Inc., 969 F. Supp. 609, 612 (D. Nev. 1997). See also Warren v. Halstead Indus. Inc., 802 F.2d 746, 753 (4th Cir. 1986) ("Even where such past discriminatory acts are time-barred for purpose of a particular claim, the Supreme Court has stated that this type of showing 'may constitute relevant background evidence in a proceeding in which the status of a current practice is at issue.' . . . citing United Air Lines v. Evans, 431 U.S. 553, 558, 97 S. Ct. 1885, 52 L. Ed. 2d 571 (1977)."); Goldsmith v. Aargon Agency, Inc., 2018 WL 1567848, at *6, n.8 (D. Nev. Mar. 30, 2018); Derrickson v. Circuit City Stores, Inc., 84 F. Supp. 2d 679, 685, n.1 (D. Md. 2000).

160 See § 11.9.5, supra.

161 Edwards v. Solomon and Solomon, P.C., 829 Fed. Appx. 425 (11th Cir. 2020).

162 See Freyermuth v. Credit Bur. Serv., Inc., 248 F.3d 767 (8th Cir. 2001); Maloy v. Phillips, 64 F.3d 607 (11th Cir. 1995); Mattson v. U.S. West Commc'ns, Inc., 967 F.2d 259, 261 (8th Cir. 1992); Pierce v. Roosen Varchetti & Olivier—Ga. P.L.L.C., 2020 WL 1154757 (M.D. Ga. Mar. 10, 2020); Coure v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1807011 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 20, 2018); Munoz v. Rushmore Mgmt. Loan Serv. L.L.C., 2017 WL 5629645 (S.D. Ohio. Nov. 22, 2017); Guevara v. Client Serv., Inc., 2011 WL 5082251 (D.N.J. Oct. 26, 2011); Vitullo v. Mancini, 684 F. Supp. 2d 747 (E.D. Va. 2010); Smith v. Rubin & Raine, L.L.C., 2009 WL 2143644 (D.N.J. July 14, 2009); Boudreaux v. Fulcher, Brooks & Daniels, L.L.C., 2008 WL 11337504 (W.D. Mo. Oct. 29, 2008); Pagan v. Monterrey Collection Serv., 2007 WL 966009 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 29, 2007); Camacho v. Nat'l Credit Adjustment Agency, 2007 WL 760416 (E.D. Wash. Mar. 8, 2007); Friedman v. Anvan Corp., 1998 WL 559779 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 28, 1998). See also McCready v. Harrison, 67 Fed. Appx. 971 (7th Cir. 2003); Blakemore v. Pekay, 895 F. Supp. 972 (N.D. Ill. 1995).

163 Maloy v. Phillips, 64 F.3d 607 (11th Cir. 1995). Accord Gil v. Allied Interstate L.L.C., 2017 WL 5135600 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 3, 2017); Ivy v. Nations Recovery Ctr., Inc., 2012 WL 2049387 (E.D. Tenn. June 6, 2012); Zarwell v. King & Nordlinger, L.L.P., 2006 WL 5503909 (D. Md. June 6, 2006), aff'd, 254 Fed. Appx. 249 (4th Cir. 2007); Cole v. Noonan & Lieberman, Ltd., 2005 WL 2848446 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 26, 2005); Drumright v. Collection Recovery, Inc., 500 F. Supp. 1 (M.D. Tenn. 1980); Russell v. Bowman, Heintz, Boscia & Vician, P.C., 744 N.E.2d 467 (Ind. Ct. App. 2001).

164 Brewi v. RMS-Recovery Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 2020 WL 1866472, at *5 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 13, 2020) (court notes that "the Second Circuit has not yet spoken on the issue of whether an FDCPA violation occurs at the time a debt collector sends a letter to a debtor or whether it occurs when the debtor receives the communication," but holds that it was "persuaded by the decisions of other district courts in this Circuit that the one-year statute of limitations period for a violation under the FDCPA begins to run on the date the consumer received the debt collection letter"), adopted, 2020 WL 746650 (Feb. 14, 2020); Somerset v. Stephen Einstein & Assoc., 351 F. Supp. 3d 201, 214 (E.D.N.Y. 2019); Sprouse v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 2019 WL 405634, at *4 (E.D. Tenn. Jan. 31, 2019) ("A cause of action based on defects apparent in a letter sent by a debt collector accrues at the time that the debtor receives the letter."); Setton v. Cohen Hurkin Ehrenfeld Pomerantz & Tenenbum, L.L.P., 2014 WL 4724704 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 22, 2014); Sylvester v. Laks, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21777 (N.D. Ohio Aug. 1, 1991). See also Bates v. C&S Adjusters, Inc., 980 F.2d 865, 868 n.2 (2d Cir. 1992) (noting that, although the court "need not decide the issue today," at least one court had indicated that a cause of action "might not accrue until receipt of the collection notice").

165 Serna v. Law Office of Joseph Onwuteaka, P.C., 732 F.3d 440, 446 (5th Cir. 2013); Johnson v. Riddle, 305 F.3d 1107 (10th Cir. 2002); Claiborne v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2020 WL 2842674 (M.D. Ga. June 1, 2020); Mora v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 408 F. Supp. 3d 297 (W.D.N.Y. 2019); Crisostomo v. Weigel, 2018 WL 7198182 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 6, 2018), adopted, 2019 WL 650415 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 16, 2019); Fish v. Stone, Higgs & Drexler, P.C., 2017 WL 6757575 (W.D. Tenn. Dec. 29, 2017); Williams v. Bank of Am., 2017 WL 3662441 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 24, 2017); Dakowa v. MSW Capital, L.L.C., 2017 WL 662975 (D. Minn. Feb. 17, 2017); Living Life v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 2016 WL 1562912 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 15, 2016); Jenkins-Brown v. Liberty Acquisitions Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 8710010 (D. Or. Feb. 26, 2016); Sam v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 2015 WL 114076 application to its litigation altogether by delaying service for a year.[166]

Other courts, though, start the FDCPA statute of limitations running on the day the state court complaint violating the FDCPA was filed.[167] Those courts typically adopt the collection letter analogy that the date of sending the letter is the creditor's last day to comply with the FDCPA. The comparison is incomplete, however, because unlike a letter placed in the mail, the collector may control when and whether the consumer is served with a lawsuit, after the complaint is forwarded to the court. In addition, even courts that use the date the lawsuit is filed with the court may delay running the limitations period if the consumer can show fraudulent concealment.[168] Some decisions do not reach the question whether to use the date of filing or the date of service, but reject using the date the complaint is mailed to the court.[169]

Some courts refuse to start the limitations period as of the date when judgment is entered,[170] but other courts hold the limitations period commences when the collector's lawsuit is dismissed or a default judgment taken, because the state court lawsuit constitutes a continuing wrong that is not completed until the date of dismissal.[171]

12.3.2.3 The Applicable Date for Postjudgment Remedies

For statute of limitations purposes, a garnishment action or lien is a new action, running the one-year period from the date of the postjudgment action, not the filing of the underling collection action that produced the judgment.[172] Using any other

(W.D.N.Y. Jan. 8, 2015); Smith v. Lerner, Sampson, & Rothfuss, 2015 WL 1809311 (N.D. Ohio Apr. 20, 2015); Archer v. Aldridge Connors, L.L.P., 998 F. Supp. 2d 1360 (S.D. Fla. 2014); Davis v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 12778833 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 11, 2014); Lautman v. 2800 Coyle St. Owners Corp., 2014 WL 2200909, at *7 (E.D.N.Y. May 23, 2014) (collecting cases); McDermott v. Marcus, Errico, Emmer & Brooks, P.C., 911 F. Supp. 2d 1 (D. Mass. 2012), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 775 F.3d 109 (1st Cir. 2014); Polinsky v. Cmty. Health Partners Reg'l Health Sys., 858 F. Supp. 2d 891 (N.D. Ohio 2012); Duffey v. Pope, 2012 WL 4442753 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 25, 2012); Langendorfer v. Kaufman, 2011 WL 3682775 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 23, 2011) (venue violation); Allen v. Bank of Am. Corp., 2011 WL 3654451 (D. Md. Aug. 18, 2011); Perez v. Bureaus Inv. Grp. No. II, L.L.C., 2009 WL 1973476 (S.D. Fla. July 8, 2009); Anderson v. Gamache & Myers, P.C., 2007 WL 1577610 (E.D. Mo. May 31, 2007); Wyles v. Excalibur I, L.L.C., 2006 WL 2583200 (D. Minn. Sept. 7, 2006); Ross v. North MS Health Serv., Inc., 2006 WL 218173 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 27, 2006). See also Hendricks v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2014 WL 12534774 (E.D. Tenn. Sept. 30, 2014); Ison v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, 2007 WL 2769674 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 18, 2007) (rejecting date of filing and finding it unnecessary to decide between the date the summons and complaint were mailed to or received by consumer); Prade v. Jackson & Kelly, 941 F. Supp. 596, 599–600 (N.D. W. Va. 1996), aff'd, 135 F.3d 770 (4th Cir. 1998).

166 Serna v. Law Office of Joseph Onwuteaka, P.C., 732 F.3d 440, 446 (5th Cir. 2013); Johnson v. Riddle, 305 F.3d 1107, 1114 (10th Cir. 2002).

167 DeStefano v. Udren Law Offices P.C., 802 Fed. Appx. 688, 691 (3d Cir. 2020); Tyler v. DH Capital Mgmt., Inc., 736 F.3d 455, 465 (6th Cir. 2013); Bybee v. Kovitz, Shifrin Nesbit, 2019 WL 414662 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 1, 2019); Brewer v. William C. Grossman, P.L.L.C., 2018 WL 4688944 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 28, 2018) ("In an action contending that a lawsuit was filed in violation of the FDCPA, the statute of limitations begins to run when the debt-collection suit is filed rather than when the trial court issues its judgment."); Beavers v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 2568918 (E.D. Ark. June 13, 2017); Anderson v. Jefferson Capital Sys., L.L.C., 2016 WL 9558952 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 7, 2016), adopted, 2017 WL 3836126 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 27, 2017); Beekman v. EXL Legal, P.L.L.C., 2016 WL 8678038 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 21, 2016); Billups v. Deutsche Bank, 2016 WL 3633320 (N.D. Ill. July 6, 2016); Boldon v. Riverwalk Holdings, Ltd., 2016 WL 900639 (D. Minn. Mar. 9, 2016); DePizzo v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 2015 WL 5675098 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 25, 2015); Toops v. Citizens Bank of Logan, Ohio, 2015 WL 1526411 (S.D. Ohio Apr. 2, 2015); Vaughn v. Nat'l Collegiate Student Loan Tr. 2006-3, 2014 WL 6686751 (E.D. Tenn. Nov. 26, 2014); Burd v. Manley Deas Kochalski P.L.L.C., 2014 WL 12572908 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 31, 2014); Judy v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore L.L.C., 2010 WL 431484 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 29, 2010); Kline v. HomEq, 2008 WL 11351581, at *4 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 25, 2008); Beler v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker, & Moore, L.L.C., 2007 WL 1062835 (C.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 2007); Kondratick v. Beneficial Consumer Disc. Co., 2005 WL 2314042 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 21, 2005). See also Hansen v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 2015 WL 3652838 (M.D. Fla. June 11, 2015) (FDCPA statute of limitations began to run the day after filing of proof of claim); Zenon v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2008 WL 506231 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 21, 2008).

168 See § 12.3.4, infra.

169 Rosado v. Taylor, 324 F. Supp. 2d 917 (N.D. Ind. 2004).

170 See Balik v. Blitt and Gaines, P.C., 2015 WL 764013 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 21, 2015) (alleged fair venue violation did not occur when judgment was obtained). See also Brewer v. William C. Grossman, P.L.L.C., 2018 WL 4688944 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 28, 2018) ("In an action contending that a lawsuit was filed in violation of the FDCPA, the statute of limitations begins to run when the debt-collection suit is filed rather than when the trial court issues its judgment."); Oyegbola v. Advantage Assets Inc. II, 2009 WL 4738074 (D. Mass. Dec. 7, 2009); Calka v. Kucker, Kraus & Bruh, L.L.P., 1998 WL 437151 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 3, 1998).

171 See Wade v. Account Resolution Corp., 2016 WL 4415353 (E.D. Mo. Aug. 19, 2016); Hoang v. Worldwide Asset Purchasing, L.L.C., 2009 WL 3669883 (S.D. Ill. Nov. 2, 2009). See also Mattson v. U.S. West Commc'ns, Inc., 967 F.2d 259, 261 (8th Cir. 1992); Ness v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 933 F. Supp. 2d 1156, 1165 (D. Minn. 2013). But see Rivas v. Bank of New York Mellon, 676 Fed. Appx. 926 (11th Cir. 2017), aff'g, 2015 WL 13203925 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 24, 2015); Bjerke v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2017 WL 2869957, at *4 (W.D. Wis. July 5, 2017) (calling the Hoang case "an outlier").

172 See, e.g., Hageman v. Barton, 817 F.3d 611, 619 (8th Cir. 2016); McCrobie v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 664 Fed. Appx. 81 (2d Cir. Nov. 10, 2016); Stennett v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1205589 (W.D. Ky. Mar. 30, 2017); Osinubepi-Alao v. Plainview Fin. Serv., Ltd., 44 F. Supp. 3d 84 (D.D.C. 2014); Collins v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 290 F.R.D. 689, 698 (S.D. Fla. 2013); Reese v. CAC Serv., Inc., 2011 WL 830084 (D. Or. Mar. 3, 2011); Malik v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2009 WL 5197820, at *5 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 22, 2009); Watkins v. Peterson Enter., Inc., 57 F. Supp. 2d 1102, 1106 (E.D. Wash. 1999); Blakemore v. Pekay, 895 F. Supp. 972, 982–983 (N.D. Ill. 1995). Cf. Somerset v. Stephen Einstein & Assoc., 351 F. Supp. 3d 201, 214 (E.D.N.Y. 2019) (statute of limitations began to run upon receipt of income execution, not upon entry of default judgment).

A series of 2015 decisions out of the Northern District of Illinois come to the opposite conclusion, which would have the unwanted effect of insulating many garnishment proceedings from the FDCPA. See Murry v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore, L.L.C., 2015 WL 7008139 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 12, 2015); Radcliffe v. Russel G. Winick & Assoc., 2015 WL 3629950 (N.D. Ill. June 9, 2015); Maldanado v. Freedman Anselmo Lindberg, L.L.C., 2015 WL 2330213 (N.D. Ill. May 14, 2015); McCauley v. Hunter, 2015 WL 2193805 (N.D. Ill. May 7, 2015).

approach would be nonsensical where the postjudgment action occurs over a year from the filing of the underlying collection lawsuit.[173]

The Second Circuit has held that an FDCPA violation occurs when the wrong consumer's bank account is frozen and the consumer's cause of action becomes complete, not when the collection lawyer mails notice to the bank requesting the freeze.[174] When a judgment creditor failed to timely file a satisfaction of judgment, the FDCPA statute of limitations was held to begin to run at the end of the state statute's mandated period of sixty days following payment of the judgment to file the satisfaction of judgment.[175]

After a foreclosure action discharges a debt, the limitations period starts where the collector seeks to collect on the discharged debt, not from when the foreclosure action was filed.[176]

12.3.2.4 Other Applicable Dates

A claim based on the addition of unlawful fees to a dishonored check accrues on the date the demand for payment is made, not the date the check was written.[177]

The limitations period began to run not when the consumer paid the debt in full, but when the collector later assigned the debt to another and failed to disclose the full payment to the assignee.[178]

The limitations period began to run when a collector improperly withdrew money from the consumer's bank account, not when the collector first deceptively obtained the banking account information.[179] But a court has found that the limitations period first began to run from when the consumer's vehicle was repossessed, not when the consumer later temporarily regained possession before the car was impounded by the sheriff.[180]

12.3.3 When a Series of Violations Occurs

12.3.3.1 The General Rule

The general rule is that the statute of limitations begins anew and runs separately for each discrete violation of the FDCPA, notwithstanding that the violation is repetitive of an earlier violation in a series of communications or other collector actions which occurred outside the limitations period.[181] Some support had existed for the contrary rule that the statute of limitations for FDCPA claims runs from the date of the initial violation and that later violations of the same kind do not reset the limitations period.[182] However, that case law has been 173 But see Hill v. Freedman Anselmo Lindberg, L.L.C., 2015 WL 2000828 (N.D. Ill. May 1, 2015) (period runs from filing of lawsuit not the filing of postjudgment process to discover defendant's assets); Hendricks v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2014 WL 12534774 (E.D. Tenn. Sept. 30, 2014) (limitations period does not run from postjudgment subpoena of consumer's financial information, but from filing of underlying lawsuit).

174 Benzemann v. Citibank, 806 F.3d 98 (2d Cir. 2015).

175 Crossman v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2014 WL 2612031 (M.D. Fla. June 11, 2014) (rejecting continuing violation theory; discovery or tolling rules not argued).

176 See Devine v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 2015 WL 6555424 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 28, 2015).

177 Eaton v. Credit Bur., Inc., 2007 WL 2781844 (D.N.D. Sept. 21, 2007).

178 Salgado v. Harvard Collection Serv., Inc., 2001 WL 803683 (N.D. Ill. July 17, 2001).

179 Dyer-Andrews v. Academy Collection Serv., Inc., 2005 WL 1871120 (D. Colo. Aug. 5, 2005).

180 James v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 47 F.3d 961 (8th Cir. 1995).

181 Bender v. Elmore & Throop, P.C., 963 F.3d 403, 407 (4th Cir. 2020) ("[N]othing in the FDCPA suggests that 'similar' violations should be grouped together and treated as a single claim for purposes of the FDCPA's statute of limitations. To the contrary, we long have held that a 'separate violation' of the FDCPA occurs 'every time' an improper communication, threat, or misrepresentation is made."); Gomez v. Cavalry Portfolio Serv., L.L.C., 962 F.3d 963, 966 (7th Cir. 2020) ("That Cavalry sent earlier letters that also demanded $1,600 in interest for time between the write-off and the Bank's sale of the debt to Cavalry is neither here nor there. Each violation of a federal statute carries its own period of limitations."); Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685, 694 (8th Cir. 2017) (each alleged FDCPA violation is evaluated individually to determine whether any portion of claim is barred by statute of limitations, and it does not matter that debt collector's violation restates earlier assertions); Michalak v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 604 Fed. Appx. 492, 493 (6th Cir. 2015); Llewellyn v. Allstate Home Loans, Inc., 711 F.3d 1173, 1188 (10th Cir. 2013), adopting Solomon v. HSBC Mortg. Corp., 395 Fed. Appx. 494, 497 (10th Cir. 2010), rev'd on other grounds, 504 Fed. Appx. 702 (10th Cir. 2012); Purnell v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 303 Fed. Appx. 297, 301–302 (6th Cir. 2008); Mayfield v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2021 WL 3492149, at *4–5 (D. Minn. Aug. 9, 2021); Evans v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2020 WL 5848619 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2020); Mitchell v. U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n as Tr. for Master Asset Backed Sec. Tr. 2005-FRE1, 2020 WL 3050739 (D. Md. June 8, 2020); Rusk v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 2772771 (S.D. Ga. May 28, 2020); Hicks v. Seterus, Inc., 2018 WL 3208177 (N.D. Ohio June 29, 2018); Segovia v. Phoenix Recovery Group, 2018 WL 6809568 (W.D. Tex. Dec. 26, 2018); Willis v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2018 WL 4169327 (W.D. Tex. July 11, 2018), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2019 WL 2565243 (W.D. Tex. Mar. 8, 2019), aff'd, 803 Fed. Appx. 761 (5th Cir. 2020); Yeager v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1004742 M.D. Ala. Feb. 21, 2018); Munoz v. Rushmore Mgmt. Loan Serv. L.L.C., 2017 WL 5629645 (S.D. Ohio. Nov. 22, 2017); Gentleman v. Massachusetts Higher Educ. Assistance Corp., 272 F. Supp. 3d 1054 (N.D. Ill. 2017); Werbicky v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 1248697 (D. Nev. Mar. 28, 2016); Jean-Baptiste v. Bus. Law Grp. P.A., 2016 WL 4163574 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 4, 2016); Devine v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 2015 WL 6555424 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 28, 2015); Head v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4276148 (D. Kan. July 14, 2015); Wisdom v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2015 WL 1892956 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 24, 2015); Ghawi v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 2015 WL 6958010 (D. Conn. Nov. 10, 2015); Kapsis v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing Inc., 923 F. Supp. 2d 430 (E.D.N.Y. 2013); LeDoux v. JP Morgan Chase, 2012 WL 5874314 (D.N.H. Nov. 20, 2012); Ellis v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 274 F.R.D. 53 (D. Conn. 2011); Basile v. I.C. Sys. Inc., 2011 WL 4368510 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 19, 2011); Blue v. Bronson & Migliaccio, 2010 WL 4641666, at *3 (D. Or. Nov. 4, 2010); Ehrich v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 2009 WL 4545179 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 4, 2009); Murphy v. MRC Receivables Corp., 2007 WL 148823, at *3 (W.D. Mo. Jan. 12, 2007); McCorriston v. L.W.T., Inc., 536 F. Supp. 2d 1268, 1272 (M.D. Fla. 2008); Akalwadi v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 336 F. Supp. 2d 492, 501 (D. Md. 2004); Kaplan v. Assetcare, Inc., 88 F. Supp. 2d 1355, 1360 (S.D. Fla. 2000); Pittman v. J.J. Mac Intyre Co. of Nev., 969 F. Supp. 609, 611 (D. Nev. 1997).

182 See, e.g., Bey v. Shapiro Brown & Alt, L.L.P., 997 F. Supp. 2d 3 315–316 (D. Md. 2014), aff'd, 584 Fed. Appx. 135 (4th Cir. 2014).

expressly overruled,[183] or so discredited by the string of consistent circuit court rulings cited in the initial footnote here, that the stated general rule can now be considered established law. Indeed, the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau has approved and adopted this rule in an amicus brief.[184]

Accordingly, when a collector is obligated to stop communicating, each subsequent letter is a violation starting its own limitations period.[185] Similarly, where a collector fails to verify a debt, subsequent communications within one year of the FDCPA suit are actionable, even if the failure to provide verification was more than a year earlier.[186]

Where there is a violation each month that a collector reports to a credit reporting agency, the more recent reports can be actionable even if the first report was outside the limitations period.[187] Where one error in applying payments resulted in a series of late fee assessments, the assessments within a year of suit are actionable, even if the earlier assessments are not.[188]

Where an incorrect calculation of the amount due was made over a year earlier, an attempt to collect that amount within the year is actionable.[189] Where a collector initially sought an excessive amount more than a year earlier, the actual collection of that amount is actionable.[190] A new limitations period applies to each of multiple attempts to foreclose on property without owning the note.[191]

There is a limited exception to this rule where the collector's filing of a collection lawsuit violates the FDCPA and where other aspects of that litigation continue the same FDCPA violation. The extent and viability of this exception is examined at § 12.3.3.2, infra.

Generally, where there is a series of violations, some within the limitations period and some outside it, the violations within the period cannot serve to bring the earlier violations within the limitations period. One possible exception to this rule is the "continuing violation" theory examined at § 12.3.3.3, infra.

12.3.3.2 Litigation Activity

There is less clarity as to when the statute of limitations begins to run where the FDCPA violations involve collection litigation. (The separate issue as to what date to use for the filing of a lawsuit is examined at § 12.3.2.2, supra.)

A number of courts find that where the filing of a lawsuit involves a FDCPA violation, and that violation is repeated throughout the course of the litigation, the limitations period runs from the filing of the lawsuit, not separately for the subsequent litigation activity repeating or emanating from the same violation.[192] This inconsistency with the general rule of the 183 Bender v. Elmore & Throop, P.C., 963 F.3d 403, 407, n.1 (4th Cir. 2020).

184 See CFPB amicus brief, Bender v. Elmore & Throop, P.C., 18-cv-979 (4th Cir. May 28, 2019), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov. See also § 3.4.4.4, supra (discussing deference to federal agency interpretations of FDCPA).

185 Murphy v. MRC Receivables Corp., 2007 WL 148823, at *3 (W.D. Mo. Jan. 12, 2007).

186 See, e.g., Purnell v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 303 Fed. Appx. 297, 304 (6th Cir. 2008), aff'g, 2007 WL 421828 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 2, 2007); Ghawi v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 2015 WL 6958010 (D. Conn. Nov. 10, 2015).

187 Purnell v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 303 Fed. Appx. 297 (6th Cir. 2008), aff'g, 2007 WL 421828 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 2, 2007). See also James v. MRC Receivables Corp., 2018 WL 3213147, at *4 (W.D. La. June 28, 2018); Ramos v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 6434423, at *8 (D.N.J. Oct. 31, 2016); Walkabout v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2016 WL 1169540 (W.D. Okla. Mar. 22, 2016); Brooks v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2013 WL 1010455 (D. Md. Mar. 13, 2013) Kasalo v. Monco Law Offices, S.C., 2009 WL 4639720 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 7, 2009) (multiple credit reports); Boccone v. Am. Express Co., 2007 WL 2914909, at *4 (D. Md. Oct. 4, 2007) (multiple credit reports); Malm v. Household Bank, 2004 WL 1559370 (D. Minn. July 7, 2004) (failure to report dispute not time-barred because of time-barred credit reports).

188 Pucci v. Bank of Am., 2015 WL 12843199 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 12, 2015).

189 Beeks v. ALS Lien Serv., 2014 WL 7785745 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 18, 2014). See also Lindsey v. EquityExperts.org, L.L.C., 2020 WL 5548770, at *3 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 24, 2020) (statute of limitations began to run when defendant tried to collect charge arising from payoff letter, not when charge posted; "To allow the mere posting of the charge to trigger the statute of limitations would allow a debt collector to post a charge and burn a debtor's statute of limitations by delaying a demand for payment. The statutes also requires something more active than an accounting entry to establish a violation—at least an attempt to collect a debt.").

190 Whittingham v. Mortg. Elec. Registration Serv., Inc., 2007 WL 1456196 (D.N.J. May 15, 2007). See also Werbicky v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 1248697 (D. Nev. Mar. 28, 2016); Blackburn v. Mapother & Mapother, P.S.C., 2014 WL 1418224 (W.D. Ky. Apr. 14, 2014); McDonald v. Asset Acceptance L.L.C., 296 F.R.D. 513 (E.D. Mich. 2013). But see Taylor v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3443209, at *6 (C.D. Ill. Aug. 10, 2017); Wirtz v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 2016 WL 2642999 (D. Minn. May 9, 2016); Aghazu v. Severn Sav. Bank, 2016 WL 808823 (D. Md. Mar. 2, 2016); Angers v. Pennymac Loan Serv., L.L.C., 2014 WL 6668001 (D.N.J. Nov. 24, 2014); Sierra v. Foster & Garbus, 48 F. Supp. 2d 393, 395 (S.D.N.Y. 1999).

191 Quintana v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 690906 (D. Ariz. Feb. 24, 2014).

192 See, e.g., Smith v. Lerner, Sampson & Rothfuss, L.P.A., 658 Fed. Appx. 268, 273 (6th Cir. 2016); Haye v. Collection Pros., Inc., 2021 WL 2176478, at *7–10 (D. Wyo. Jan. 22, 2021); Trupp v. Bank of Am., 2020 WL 1815940 (W.D. Ky. Apr. 9, 2020); Cain v. Thompson, 2020 WL 42897 (W.D. Ky. Jan. 3, 2020); Thorpe v. Ertz, 2018 WL 616123 (D. Alaska Jan. 29, 2018); Bainbridge v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1178047 (M.D. Pa. Mar. 30, 2017); Phillips v. Archstone Simi Valley L.L.C., 2016 WL 7444550 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 15, 2016); Cutler ex rel. Jay v. Sallie Mae, Inc., 2015 WL 1909482 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 24, 2015); Wies v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2015 WL 569897 (N.D. Ind. Feb. 11, 2015); Sapaula v. Blitt & Gaines, P.C., 2015 WL 1407296 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 24, 2015); Prowell v. Cam Credits, Inc., 2015 WL 2239309, at *3 (D. Or. May 12, 2015); Harris v. Barton, 2014 WL 3701037 (E.D. Mo. July 25, 2014); Bihn v. Fifth Third Mortg. Co., 2013 WL 5657598 (S.D. Ohio Oct. 16, 2013); Simard v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2011 WL 4543956 (D. Mass. Sept. 28, 2011); Hunnicutt v. CACH, L.L.C., 2011 WL 2600651 (M.D. Fla. June 30, 2011); Oyegbola v. Advantage Assets Inc. II, 2009 WL 4738074 (D. Mass. Dec. 7, 2009); Nutter v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 500 F. Supp. 2d 1219, 1223 (D. Minn. 2007); Wilhelm v. Credico, Inc., 455 F. Supp. 2d 1006 (D.N.D. 2006), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.3d 416 (8th Cir. 2008) (lower court adopted theory; appellate court ignored it); Calka v. Kucker, Kraus & Bruh, L.L.P., 1998 WL 437151 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 3, 1998). See also Jodway v. Orians, P.C., 759 Fed. Appx. 374 (6th Cir. 2018); Lindsay v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt., Serv., L.L.C., 2017 WL 1230822 (D. Md. Apr. 4, 2017); Hansen v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 2015 WL 3652838 (M.D. Fla. June 11, 2015). See also Walker v. Pitnell, ___ Fed. Appx. ___, renewal of the statute of limitations for each discrete FDCPA violation[193] reflects the unique features of litigation compared to other forms of collection activity. The prevailing rationale is that "[l]ater court filings and testimony making the same assertion are not akin to discrete communications that are separately actionable under the statute."[194]

Some courts take the opposite view, that the FDCPA statute of limitations starts with the debt collector's last opportunity to comply with the FDCPA in a state court collection suit, such as the point the collector seeks a default judgment or the case is dismissed.[195] The Eighth Circuit and other courts reject this approach.[196]

Even if a court were to accept this exception for litigation conduct that relates back to the filing of the suit, the exception has limited application. Filing of the lawsuit starts a new limitations period, even if a related violation occurred prior to the filing of the lawsuit.[197] That is also the case where a collector files a second lawsuit—the limitations period starts no sooner than the filing of the second suit, not the first lawsuit.[198] Similarly, where a lawsuit is settled and then the collector reinstates the litigation or falsely indicates it has a judgment, the limitations period starts from the later activity, not from the date the case was first filed before settlement.[199]

A new limitations period necessarily begins to run from any new violation occurring during litigation where that violation was not apparent in the collector's originally filed complaint.[200] Consequently, the following (and many other) FDCPA violations occurring during a collection suit start the running the FDCPA statute of limitations for that new violation:

- Violations related to false affidavit of service, if occurring after the filing date;[201]
- Violations related to discovery[202] or refusal to provide documentation later in the case as to the amount owed;[203]
- Violations related to summary judgment motions;[204]
- Claims related to later-filed, falsified billing statements not part of the original complaint;[205] and
- Obtaining unlawful attorney fees that had not been specified in the complaint.[206]

12.3.3.3 The "Continuing Violation Theory"

The continuing violation theory seeks to bring within the limitations period conduct over one year old where the conduct is closely linked to later conduct falling within the limitations period. The Supreme Court addressed the continuing violation theory in National Railroad Passenger Corp. v. Morgan,[207] an employment discrimination case, and held that it applied when the unlawful conduct required a pattern of activities that would occur over time and would not be actionable until the pattern reached a point that it was actionable:

> A hostile work environment claim is composed of a series of separate acts that collectively constitute one "unlawful 2021 WL 2816715, at *1 (2d Cir. July 7, 2021) ("we have not decided whether a repeated but otherwise identical misrepresentation in a court filing counts as a separate FDCPA violation for statute of limitations purposes").

193 See § 12.3.3.1, supra.

194 Haye v. Collection Pros., Inc., 2021 WL 2176478, at *10 (D. Wyo. Jan. 22, 2021).

195 See Wade v. Account Resolution Corp., 2016 WL 4415353 (E.D. Mo. Aug. 19, 2016); Hoang v. Worldwide Asset Purchasing, L.L.C., 2009 WL 3669883 (S.D. Ill. Nov. 2, 2009). See also Mattson v. U.S. West Commc'ns, Inc., 967 F.2d 259, 261 (8th Cir. 1992); Ness v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 933 F. Supp. 2d 1156, 1165 (D. Minn. 2013). But see Bjerke v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2017 WL 2869957, at *4 (W.D. Wis. July 5, 2017) (calling the Hoang case "an outlier").

196 See Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685, 694 (8th Cir. 2017); Quintana v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 690906 (D. Ariz. Feb. 24, 2014); Brown v. Udren Law Offices P.C., 2011 WL 4011411, at *6 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 9, 2011); Gruen v. EdFund, 2009 WL 2136785 (N.D. Cal. July 15, 2009) (rejecting theory as unpersuasive).

197 See Beals v. Bank of Am., 2011 WL 5415174, at *17 (D.N.J. Nov. 4, 2011); Young v. Thieblot Ryan, P.A., 2011 WL 6217007 (D. Md. Dec. 12, 2011). See also Dunn v. Adams, Stepner, Woltermann & Dusing, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 6135043, at *3 (E.D. Ky. Nov. 19, 2019).

198 Cortellessa v. Udren Law Offices P.C., 2016 WL 4554539 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 1, 2016); Fuller v. Lerner, Sampson, Rothfuss, L.P.A., 2012 WL 4361454 (N.D. Ohio May 14, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 4361448 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 21, 2012).

199 Glazewski v. CKB Firm, P.C., 2015 WL 661278 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 15, 2015); Brown v. Udren Law Offices P.C., 2011 WL 4011411, at *5 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 9, 2011). See also Poghosyan v. First Fin. Asset Mgmt., Inc., 2020 WL 433083 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 28, 2020) (attempt to collect debt in 2018 was within statute of limitations, even though debt had been settled in 2010 where consumer alleged that conduct that violated FDCPA was subsequent attempt to collect on debt that was uncollectible, because it had been settled).

200 See Dakowa v. MSW Capital, L.L.C., 2017 WL 662975 (D. Minn. Feb. 17, 2017); Cortellessa v. Udren Law Offices P.C., 2016 WL 4554539 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 1, 2016); Smith v. Discover Bank, 2015 WL 1021423 (E.D. Ky. Mar. 9, 2015); Glazewski v. CKB Firm, P.C., 2015 WL 661278 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 15, 2015); Brown v. Udren Law Offices P.C., 2011 WL 4011411, at *6 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 9, 2011); Jones v. Inv. Retrievers, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1565851, at *3 (M.D. Pa. Apr. 25, 2011). See also Almashhadani v. Norris McLaughlin, P.A., 2021 WL 2454456 (E.D. Pa. June 16, 2021); Hemphill v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 2018 WL 4929864, at *4 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 10, 2018); Strader v. U.S. Bank, 2018 WL 741425, at *13 (W.D. Pa. Feb. 7, 2018).

201 Rendon v. HBLC, Inc., 2017 WL 7275423 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 25, 2017).

202 Dakowa v. MSW Capital, L.L.C., 2017 WL 662975 (D. Minn. Feb. 17, 2017) (allegation that discovery itself was confusing and misleading did not relate back to assertions made in original state court complaint). See also Nutter v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 500 F. Supp. 2d 1219, 1223 (D. Minn. 2007) ("because plaintiffs filed this federal action within a year of the alleged discovery-related misrepresentation, the statute of limitations does not bar this claim").

203 Jones v. Inv. Retrievers, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1565851, at *4 (M.D. Pa. Apr. 25, 2011).

204 Dakowa v. MSW Capital, L.L.C., 2017 WL 662975 (D. Minn. Feb. 17, 2017) (discrete act that was not barred by statute of limitations).

205 Smith v. Discover Bank, 2015 WL 1021423 (E.D. Ky. Mar. 9, 2015).

206 Walton v. Franklin Collection Agency, Inc., 190 F.R.D. 404 (N.D. Miss. 2000). See also Hemphill v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 2018 WL 4929864, at *4 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 10, 2018) (alleged misstatement regarding attorney fees made during litigation had previously gone unmentioned by defendants and thus was novel representation of consumer's debt, and by challenging new fees consumer was not challenging validity of foreclosure action).

207 Nat'l R.R. Passenger Corp. v. Morgan, 536 U.S. 101, 122 S. Ct. 2061, 153 L. Ed. 2d 106 (2002).

> employment practice." . . . It does not matter, for purposes of the statute, that some of the component acts of the hostile work environment fall outside the statutory time period. Provided that an act contributing to the claim occurs within the filing period, the entire time period of the hostile environment may be considered by a court for the purposes of determining liability.[208]

A time-barred action as part of a series of actions can be actionable if the actions in themselves are not violations, but requires the series of the actions to produce the violation. A good example of a continuing violation in the FDCPA context is where the consumer's harassment claims rested on the volume and pattern of calls, and not on any one call.[209] Another example might be an oral promise where the collector's later actions prove that promise to be false.[210]

Care must be taken to raise the theory in such a proper context. Courts are likely to reject the theory in other contexts, particularly involving collection litigation with no new or different violation beyond the violation initially committed.[211]

Where there has been a pattern of conduct, where each action is independently sufficient to violate the Act, and the final act in the pattern occurred within the limitations period, the court will have separate grounds to find the claim within the FDCPA's statute of limitations without needing to rely on a continuing violation theory.[212]

12.3.4 Equitable Tolling and the Fraud-Based Discovery Rule

The Supreme Court has ruled that the FDCPA one-year limitations period begins to run from the violation's occurrence, not from when the consumer discovers the violation.[213] Nevertheless, this subsection explains how equitable principles can extend the FDCPA statute of limitations beyond one year, either because fraud prevented the consumer's discovery of the violation (the fraud-based discovery rule) or by tolling the limitations period after it starts to run (equitable tolling).

The 2019 Supreme Court decision in Rotkiske v. Klemm includes a discussion of these equitable principles as applied to the FDCPA statute of limitations.[214] The majority decision, in rejecting a discovery rule for the FDCPA statute of limitations, specifically modified that holding by stating the period begins to run on the violation date "absent the application of an equitable doctrine,"[215] thus recognizing that equitable principles can prevent expiration of the FDCPA statute of limitations. Justice Sotomayor, in a concurring opinion, states in regard to fraud-specific equitable tolling: "Nothing in today's decision prevents parties from invoking that well-settled doctrine."[216]

Justice Ginsburg's dissent also states: "Unlike the general discovery rule, there is no reason to believe the FDCPA displaced the fraud-based discovery rule. The Court does not hold otherwise."[217] She cites to Justice Scalia's concurring opinion in TRW Inc. v. Andrews that "the ordinarily applicable time trigger does not apply when fraud on the creditor's part accounts for the debtor's failure to sue within one year of the creditor's violation."[218]

The majority opinion does not decide whether equitable tolling applies in the case before it because the question was

---

208 536 U.S. at 117.

209 See Muzyka v. Rash Curtis & Assoc., 2019 WL 2869114, at *6 (E.D. Cal. July 3, 2019); Hernandez v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 2019 WL 856406, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 2, 2019); Hollis v. LVNV Funding, 2019 WL 1091336, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 2, 2019); Dore v. Five Lakes Agency, Inc., 2015 WL 4113203 (N.D. Ill. July 8, 2015); Bennett v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2013 WL 6320851 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 22, 2013); Hockenhull v. Law Office Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 2012 WL 6525504 (D.R.I. Dec. 13, 2012); Tucker v. Mann Bracken, L.L.C., 2009 WL 151669, at *3 (M.D. Pa. Jan. 21, 2009); Joseph v. J.J. Mac Intyre Cos., 281 F. Supp. 2d 1156, 1161 (N.D. Cal. 2003).

210 See Padilla v. Payco Gen. Am. Credits, Inc., 161 F. Supp. 2d 264, 273 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

211 See, e.g., Jodway v. Orlans, P.C., 759 Fed. Appx. 374, 379–380 (6th Cir. 2018); McNair v. Maxwell & Morgan P.C., 728 Fed. Appx. 751, 752 (9th Cir. 2018); Gajewski v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 650 Fed. Appx. 283, 286 (7th Cir. 2016); Slorp v. Lerner, Sampson & Rothfuss, 587 Fed. Appx. 249, 259 (6th Cir. 2014); Peterson v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 430 Fed. Appx. 112 (3d Cir. 2011); Schaffhauser v. Citibank, 340 Fed. Appx. 128, 131 (3d Cir. 2009); Haye v. Collection Pros., Inc., 2021 WL 2176478, at *7–10 (D. Wyo. Jan. 22, 2021) (collecting cases); Feder v. SB2, Inc., 2020 WL 996442 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 2, 2020); Michelo v. National Collegiate Student Loan Tr. 2007-2, 419 F. Supp. 3d 668, 694 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 11, 2019); Hedayati v. Perry Law Firm, A.P.L.C., 2018 WL 3154894, at *4 (C.D. Cal. May 16, 2018); Whitt v. Richland Holdings, Inc., 2018 WL 2972925, at *7–8 (D. Nev. Apr. 27, 2018) (finding that while some of the alleged acts were "interrelated because they deal with the same allegedly unlawful collection fees and interest rates," they were "not sufficiently linked to constitute one pattern of conduct": "Each act is alleged to have violated specific provisions of the FDCPA, occurred on different days, involved different conduct, and extended over multiple years. Any one of those acts could independently give rise to liability if it were timely brought."); Thorpe v. Ertz, 2018 WL 616123, at *3 (D. Alaska Jan. 29, 2018) (no authority providing that "that subsequent filings made in the course of litigation constitute continuing, separate violations of the FDCPA"); Goldsmith v. Aargon Agency, Inc., 2018 WL 1567848, at *6 (D. Nev. Mar. 30, 2018); Tepper v. Amos Fin., L.L.C., 2017 WL 3446886, at *9 n.2 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 11, 2017) ("Each written contact from Amos regarding the Tepper Loan is different from the last; they are independent events, each to be scrutinized on its own terms"), aff'd on other grounds, 898 F.3d 364 (3d Cir. 2018); Gentleman v. Massachusetts Higher Educ. Assistance Corp., 272 F. Supp. 3d 1054, 1066 (N.D. Ill. 2017); Stennett v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1205589 (W.D. Ky. Mar. 30, 2017); Allen v. Bank of Am., 2012 WL 5412654 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 6, 2012).

212 See, e.g., Devlin v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 2012 WL 4469139 (D. Mass. Sept. 25, 2012) ("suit may be timely either because the defendant engaged in a pattern of wrongful conduct under a continuing violation theory or because the March 2011 letter was a discrete act and was within the statutory period"). See also Deangelo v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 3468061, at *5 (D.N.J. June. 25, 2020) (later efforts to collect debt that defendants knew was time-barred when action resulting in default judgment was first brought was new conduct within one-year statute of limitations period).

213 See § 12.3.2.2, supra.

214 ___ U.S. ___, 140 S. Ct. 355, 205 L. Ed. 2d 291 (2019).

215 Id., 140 S. Ct. at 357.

216 Id. at 362.

217 Id. at 363.

218 Id. at 362, citing TRW Inc. v. Andrews, 534 U.S. 19, 27, 122 S. Ct. 441, 151 L. Ed. 2d 339 (2001).

not properly raised before the Court. Justice Ginsburg explains why it would apply if properly raised: "By knowingly arranging for service of the complaint against Rotkiske at an address where Rotkiske no longer lived, and filing a false affidavit of service, Rotkiske alleges Klemm engaged in fraud. Such fraud, I would hold, warrants application of the discovery rule to time Rotkiske's FDCPA suit from the date he learned of the default judgment against him."[219]

Justice Ginsburg's opinion also distinguishes the fraud-based discovery rule from equitable tolling. Equitable tolling pauses or "tolls" a statutory limitations period after it has commenced.[220] "A litigant qualifies for equitable tolling only if he establishes "(1) that he has been pursuing his rights diligently, and (2) that some extraordinary circumstance stood in his way and prevented timely filing."[221]

By contrast, the fraud-based discovery rule sets the time at which a claim accrues, i.e., the time when the statute of limitations commences to run.[222] When a plaintiff is injured by fraud, the bar of the statute does not begin to run until the fraud is discovered.[223]

The majority decision, Justice Sotomayor's concurrence, and Justice Ginsburg's dissent all recognize the continued viability of equitable principles to extend the FDCPA's statute of limitations. The unanimous en banc opinion of the Third Circuit, that the Supreme Court affirmed, also reaches the same conclusion.[224] This should put to rest contrary rulings from the Eighth Circuit and some lower courts that the FDCPA limitations period is jurisdictional and therefore not subject to equitable tolling rules.[225]

Even before the Court's decision in Rotkiske, the Ninth Circuit and many lower courts rejected the Eighth Circuit view. The Ninth Circuit remarked that the Eighth Circuit opinion "was made without any real analysis" and that the word "jurisdiction" was likely "used in a somewhat colloquial sense."[226] While the subsection establishing the FDCPA limitations period is titled "Jurisdiction," this title was given by the Law Revision Counsel after enactment, and it is not part of the law as enacted by Congress.[227]

The fraud-based discovery rule must be distinguished from a general application of the discovery rule, which the Supreme Court rejected in Rotkiske. The fraud-based discovery rule requires more than that consumers did not understand their FDCPA rights.[228] Without proof of the defendant's fraud, the consumer's mere failure to discover the violation is insufficient.[229] Fraud in the transaction is not enough—the fraud must prevent the consumer from discovering the violation.[230]

But Justice Ginsburg's opinion in Rotkiske finds that the fraud-based discovery rule applies where there is fraud, even though the plaintiff's claim alleges a FDCPA violation and does not include a fraud claim. "I do not view the fraud-based discovery rule as so confined and would hold that the rule governs if either the conduct giving rise to the claim is fraudulent, or if fraud infects the manner in which the claim is presented. That understanding of the rule is consistent with its equitable roots and historic rationale."[231]

A good example of facts that would lead to application of the fraud-based discovery rule are those detailed by Justice Ginsburg in Rotkiske—the collector's false affidavit of service

219 Id. at 362–363.

220 Id. at 363, citing Lozano v. Montoya Alvarez, 572 U.S. 1, 10, 134 S. Ct. 1224, 188 L. Ed. 2d 200 (2014).

221 Id at 363, citing Menominee Indian Tribe of Wis. v. United States, 577 U.S. 250, 255,136 S. Ct. 750, 193 L. Ed. 2d 652 (2016).

222 Id., citing Merck & Co v. Reynolds, 559 U.S. 633, 644–645, 130 S. Ct. 1784, 176 L. Ed. 2d 582 (2010).

223 Id., citing Merck & Co v. Reynolds, 559 U.S. 633, 644–645, 130 S. Ct. 1784, 176 L. Ed. 2d 582 (2010).

224 Rotkiske v. Klemm, 890 F.3d 422, 428–429 (3d Cir. 2018) (en banc).

225 Hageman v. Barton, 817 F.3d 611 (8th Cir. 2016); Mattson v. U.S. West Commc'ns, Inc., 967 F.2d 259, 262 (8th Cir. 1992); Thompson v. Nat'l Credit Adjusters, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6003955 (D. Minn. Nov. 30, 2011); Deaville v. Capital One Bank, 425 F. Supp. 2d 744 (W.D. La. 2006); Hutt v. Albert Einstein Med. Ctr., 2005 WL 2396313, at *8 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 28, 2005); Zhang v. Haven-Scott Assoc., Inc., 1996 WL 355344 (E.D. Pa. June 21, 1996); Chisolm v. Charlie Falk Auto Wholesalers, Inc., 851 F. Supp. 739, 749 (E.D. Va. 1994); Friedman v. HHL Fin. Serv., Inc., 1993 WL 286487 (N.D. Ill. July 29, 1993). See also McMenamin v. Phelan Hallinan, L.L.P., 2015 WL 5515347 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 20, 2015) ("FDCPA is generally characterized as a "strict liability" statute because "it imposes liability without proof of an intentional violation"; thus, FDCPA's statute of limitations is not subject to waiver or tolling); Dixon v. Law Offices of Peter E. Meltzer & Assoc., 2007 WL 275877, at *3 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 26, 2007) (no tolling of the FDCPA statute of limitations); Hutt v. Albert Einstein Med. Ctr., 2005 WL 2396313, at *8 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 28, 2005) (FDCPA statute of limitations not subject to tolling or waiver).

226 Mangum v. Action Collection Serv., Inc., 575 F.3d 935, 940 n.14 (9th Cir. 2009).

227 Id. at 939–940. See also Brady v. Credit Recovery Co., 160 F.3d 64, 66 (1st Cir. 1998) (citing Pub. Law No. 90-321, § 502 (May 29, 1968) when refusing to rely on FDCPA captions to define term); Pub. Law No. 90-321, 82 Stat. 146, 147, § 502 (May 29, 1968) (reported as note following 15 U.S.C. § 1601; "Captions and catchlines are intended solely as aids to convenient reference, and no inference as to the legislative intent with respect to any provision enacted by this Act.").

228 See, e.g., Maldanado v. Freedman Anselmo Lindberg, L.L.C., 2015 WL 2330213 (N.D. Ill. May 14, 2015); Hunt v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2014 WL 1028391 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 17, 2014).

229 Martin v. Grehn, 546 Fed. Appx. 415, 420 (5th Cir. 2013); Pletos v. Makower Abbate Guerra Wegner Vollmer, P.L.L.C., 2017 WL 3727173 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 30, 2017), aff'd on other grounds, 731 Fed. Appx. 431 (6th Cir. 2018); Aghazu v. Severn Sav. Bank, 2016 WL 808823 (D. Md. Mar. 2, 2016); Stephens v. Troy Capital, L.L.C., 2015 WL 2078895 (M.D. Tenn. May 4, 2015); Coles v. Zucker Goldberg & Ackerman, 2015 WL 4578479 (D.N.J. July 29, 2015); Byrd v. Law Offices of John D. Clunk Co., L.P.A., 2010 WL 816932 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 8, 2010); Whittiker v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 605 F. Supp. 2d 914 (N.D. Ohio 2009); Oyegbola v. Advantage Assets Inc. II, 2009 WL 4738074 (D. Mass. Dec. 7, 2009). See also Iler v. Wells Fargo, 2020 WL 2794529, at *3 (S.D. Ohio May 29, 2020); Faircloth v. AR Res., Inc., 2020 WL 820307, at *8 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 19, 2020); Doughty v. Phelan, Hallinan, Diamond & Jones, L.L.P., 2019 WL 1426290, at *2 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 29, 2019).

230 See Ruth v. Unifund CCR Partners, 604 F.3d 908 (6th Cir. 2010); Mason v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2017 WL 6994577 (N.D. Ga. July 27, 2017), adopted, 2017 WL 8186866 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 29, 2017).

231 Rotkiske v. Klemm, ___ U.S., ___, 140 S. Ct. 355, 365, 205 L. Ed. 2d 291 (2019).

in conjunction with sewer service.[232] It is no defense for the collector that the consumer could have discovered the lawsuit if the consumer had checked the court records.[233]

The fraud-based discovery rule can also apply where the collector fraudulently represented that the consumer would not be sued if the matter was settled, and the consumer never received service of the lawsuit.[234] Other fraudulent documents or representations also can trigger the fraud-based discovery rule if they mask the FDCPA violation from the consumer.[235]

As explained above, the fraud-based discovery rule is different than equitable tolling. A good example of equitable tolling is where the consumer seeks to bring an action within the one-year limitations period, but the defendant insists on enforcement of an arbitration requirement and then refuses to participate in the arbitration. Even though the limitations period would have expired before the consumer had an opportunity subsequently to bring the action in court, equitable tolling allows for the action to be brought.[236]

Other examples of equitable tolling include where the consumer filed the action within the limitations period, but the case must be re-filed again for technical reasons,[237] or where the limitations period is tolled during the pendency of a subsequently dismissed class action.[238] If the consumer has no control over discovery delays, and only after discovery learns that a new party defendant should be added, equitable tolling should apply to allow for the addition of that defendant.[239]

Mental and/or physical illness delaying the filing of the FDCPA claim can be the basis for equitable tolling.[240] The statute of limitations can be tolled where the consumer delayed a lawsuit at the defendant's inducement.[241]

12.3.5 Counting the One-Year Period

Most courts follow Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 6(a)(1)(A) that the day of the violation is not counted, so that a suit filed on the anniversary date is not time-barred.[242] A suit filed on July 1, 2020, is within the limitations period where the violation occurred on July 1, 2019.

Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 6(a)(1)(C), if the anniversary date is a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the deadline is extended to the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or a legal holiday.[243] Only the Eighth Circuit and a few lower courts hold that the FDCPA limitations period is jurisdictional and therefore not subject to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 6(a)(1),[244] and even those decisions are suspect now that the Supreme Court has indicated that equitable principles apply to the FDCPA statute of limitations—which is inconsistent with the limitations period being jurisdictional.[245]

12.3.6 When Is the FDCPA Complaint Deemed Filed?

The consumer's amended FDCPA complaint relates back to the date of filing of the consumer's original complaint if

232 See Kearney v. Cavalry Portfolio Serv., L.L.C., 2014 WL 3778746 (E.D.N.Y. July 31, 2014); Coble v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 824 F. Supp. 2d 568 (S.D.N.Y. 2011); Sykes v. Mel Harris & Assoc., L.L.C., 757 F. Supp. 2d 413, 422 (S.D.N.Y. 2010). See also Butler v. J.r.S-1, Inc., 2016 WL 1298780 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 4, 2016); Kubiski v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2009 WL 774450 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 25, 2009) (consumer was served with complaint two years after collection lawsuit was filed).

233 See Bevan v. Butler & Assoc., 2017 WL 6557418 (D. Kan. Dec. 22, 2017).

234 See Scott v. Greenberg, 2017 WL 1214441 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2017); Pate v. Law Office of Joe Pezzuto, L.L.C., 2014 WL 12586733 (C.D. Cal. June 16, 2014).

235 See Galima v. Ass'n of Apartment Owners of Palm Court, 2017 WL 1240181 (D. Haw. Mar. 30, 2017); Rivera v. JPMorgan Chase & Co., 2015 WL 12851710 (S.D. Fla. July 9, 2015).

236 Soberanis v. City Title Loan, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1232437 (D.S.C. Apr. 3, 2017).

237 Neal v. Buffaloe & Assoc., 2012 WL 1883419 (M.D. Tenn. May 22, 2012) (FDCPA statute of limitations was equitably tolled where plaintiff had to refile for lack of personal jurisdiction over the defendant).

238 Am. Pipe & Constr. Co. v. Utah, 414 U.S. 538, 558–559, 94 S. Ct. 756, 38 L. Ed. 2d 713 (1974) (non-FDCPA case). See also Johnson-Morris v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 194 F. Supp. 3d 757 (N.D. Ill. 2016). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

239 See Sweet v. Audubon Fin. Bur., L.L.C., 2016 WL 9777177 (D.N.M. June 27, 2016).

240 Garrett v. Empire Cooler Serv., Inc., 2004 WL 2011399 (N.D. Ill. June 21, 2004), citing Barnhart v. United States, 884 F.2d 295, 300 (7th Cir. 1989). But see Avoki v. Carolina Telco Fed. Credit Union, 2018 WL 3551524, at *5 (W.D.N.C. July 24, 2018) (plaintiff failed to show that he was unable to bring suit prior to his illness or that he made any effort to seek stay or tolling of his prior suit because of illness).

241 See Wilson v. Gordon & Wong Law Grp., P.C., 2013 WL 6858975 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 24, 2013) (recognizing doctrine, but finding plaintiff's reliance on possibility of settlement unjustified).

242 See Johnson v. Riddle, 305 F.3d 1107 (10th Cir. 2002); Maloy v. Phillips, 64 F.3d 607 (11th Cir. 1995); Broderick v. Viking Client Serv., Inc., 2017 WL 4269962, at *3 (D.N.J. Sept. 26, 2017); Diena v. Certified Credit & Collection Bur., Inc., 2015 WL 570247 (D.N.J. Feb. 11, 2015); McDonald v. Richard J. Boudreau & Assoc., L.L.C., 2013 WL 3479273 (D.R.I. July 10, 2013); Danow v. Borack, 2006 WL 5516577 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 30, 2006), rev'd on other grounds, 197 Fed. Appx. 853 (11th Cir. 2006); Hooper v. Capital Credit & Collection Serv., Inc., 2004 WL 825616 (D. Or. Jan. 16, 2004); Clark v. Bonded Adjustment Co., 204 F.R.D. 662 (E.D. Wash. 2002); Clark v. Bonded Adjustment Co., 176 F. Supp. 2d 1062 (E.D. Wash. 2001); Souife v. First Nat'l Bank of Commerce, 452 F. Supp. 818 (E.D. La. 1978), aff'd, 653 F.2d 142 (5th Cir. 1981).

243 See, e.g., Krier v. United Revenue Corp., 2020 WL 2065618, at *4 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 28, 2020); Taymuree v. Nat'l Student Loan Tr. 2007-2, 2017 WL 952962, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 13, 2017); Horowitz v. GC Serv. L.P., 2015 WL 1959377 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 28, 2015).

244 Hageman v. Barton, 817 F.3d 611 (8th Cir. 2016); Mattson v. U.S. West Commc'ns, Inc, 967 F.2d 259, 262 (8th Cir. 1992); Thompson v. Nat'l Credit Adjusters, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6003955 (D. Minn. Nov. 30, 2011); Dixon v. Law Offices of Peter E. Meltzer & Assoc., 2007 WL 275877 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 26, 2007); Deaville v. Capital One Bank, 425 F. Supp. 2d 744 (W.D. La. 2006); Hutt v. Albert Einstein Med. Ctr., 2005 WL 2396313, at *8 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 28, 2005); Zhang v. Haven-Scott Assoc., Inc., 1996 WL 355344 (E.D. Pa. June 21, 1996); Chisolm v. Charlie Falk Auto Wholesalers, Inc., 851 F. Supp. 739, 749 (E.D. Va. 1994); Friedman v. RHL Fin. Serv., Inc., 1993 WL 286487 (N.D. Ill. July 29, 1993).

245 See § 12.3.4, supra.

a closely related defendant is added or if added violations relate to the same events as the initial complaint, even if the violations are of different FDCPA provisions.[246] Similarly, an FDCPA claim in an amended complaint has been found to relate back to an original complaint that just alleged TILA violations, where the claims all involved the same credit transaction.[247]

The filing of the consumer's original complaint determines the date the complaint is filed, not when the case is moved to a different venue to exercise personal jurisdiction on the defendant.[248] However, the consumer may not add a defendant in an amended complaint after the FDCPA statute of limitations has run where the consumer's omission of the proposed defendant was intentional.[249]

The limitations period counts the date a complaint and a petition to proceed in forma pauperis is presented to the court, even if the complaint is not formally enrolled on the court's records until the later date when the fee waiver is granted.[250] If the fee waiver is denied, the consumer may timely file by paying the filing fee within three days of the order denying the fee waiver, and this delay should not affect the timeliness of the filing of the complaint.[251] Where, however, the complaint is dismissed because the plaintiff chooses not to pay the filing fee, the limitations period may be computed from the date a new complaint is filed with an accompanying filing fee.[252]

12.3.7 Recoupment After Running of the Limitations Period

When a debt buyer brings a collection action against a consumer, the consumer might raise FDCPA counterclaims against the debt buyer for its earlier collection conduct.[253] If the limitations period has run on those FDCPA claims, the question arises whether those claims can still be raised by way of recoupment to offset the debt buyer's recovery in the collection action.

246 See Kuehn v. Cadle Co., 335 Fed. Appx. 827 (11th Cir. 2009) (amendment to change name of defendant to closely related defendant relates back); Albright v. Clayton & Myrick, P.L.L.C., 2020 WL 2526457, at *2–3 (E.D. Mo. May 18, 2020) (claim asserted in amended complaint arose out of the conduct, transaction, or occurrence set forth in original pleading, and relation back would not prejudice added defendant in defending merits of case); Hernandez v. BC Serv., Inc., 2020 WL 2308233, at *4 (S.D. Ill. May 8, 2020) (claim alleging "completely new facts" that were unrelated to initial complaint did not relate back, but claims alleging facts similar to those in original claims did relate back); Chan v. Forster & Garbus, L.L.P., 2019 WL 2265135 (C.D. Cal. May 24, 2019); Schultz v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2019 WL 2083302, at *8 (D.N.J. May 13, 2019) (in amended complaint consumer relied on language identical to that originally used to allege violations of the same provisions of the FDCPA, "changing his allegations only by supplementing additional letters"); Vanover v. Carruthers, 2018 WL 1407047, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 24, 2018) (newly claimed violations were directly related to conduct alleged in original complaint); Harrer v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6995559 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 30, 2016); Nepomuceno v. Focus Receivables Mgmt., L.L.C., 2015 WL 5608130 (D.N.J. Sept. 23, 2015) (adding facts and clarifying which subsections of the FDCPA defendants allegedly violated related back); McQueen v. Huddleston, 2015 WL 3746733 (W.D.N.Y. June 15, 2015) (amended complaint adding the another name of collector related back); Horowitz v. GC Serv. L.P., 2015 WL 1959377 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 28, 2015); Klemp v. Columbia Collection Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 5324318 (D. Or. Oct. 17, 2014) (new allegation arises out of the same attempts to collect more than was owed); Midland Funding L.L.C. v. Brent, 644 F. Supp. 2d 961 (N.D. Ohio 2009) (claim of excessive interest which arose out of the same circumstances); Jackson v. Adcock, 2004 WL 1900484 (E.D. La. Aug. 23, 2004); Shula v. Lawent, 2002 WL 31870157 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 23, 2002), aff'd, 359 F.3d 489 (7th Cir. 2004); Canterbury v. Columbia Gas, 2001 WL 1681132 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 25, 2001); Brink v. First Credit Res., 57 F. Supp. 2d 848 (D. Ariz. 1999). But see Echlin v. PeaceHealth, 887 F.3d 967, 978 (9th Cir. 2018) (district court did not err in finding that amendment would have been futile where "materially different" claim that "would not rely on all the same facts and evidence" would not have related back to original complaint); Peragine v. William C. Grossman Law, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 7293392, at *6 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 30, 2019) (denying consumer leave to file second amended complaint seeking to add debt collector defendants that were known to consumer at time of original complaint, since claims did not relate back to prior complaints and were time-barred); Mendoza v. Forster, Garbus & Garbus, 2018 WL 785857, at *4 (D.N.J. Feb. 8, 2018) (no relation back where proposed amendment directly reversed a crucial factual allegation in the original complaint and thus reversed the legal theory plaintiff had relied upon, and where the addition of the proposed defendants depended upon such reversal; when an amendment seeks to change a party as opposed to changing just the allegations, the relation back rule is more difficult to satisfy); Smith v. Rubin & Raine, L.L.C., 2009 WL 2143644 (D.N.J. July 14, 2009) (new FDCPA claims alleged in amended complaint were time-barred because they raised new violations based on new facts); Peralta v. Accept Acceptance, L.L.C., 2009 WL 723910 (W.D. Mich. Mar. 10, 2009) dismissing as time-barred new claims that did not arise out of same conduct, transaction, or occurrence as claim in original complaint); Aikens v. Talbot Hoevel & Assoc., P.C., 1996 WL 675780 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 19, 1996); Byes v. Accelerated Cash Flow, Inc., 1996 WL 337222 (E.D. La. June 18, 1996).

247 McLean v. Joel Acceptance Co., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13630 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 19, 1983). See also Pawelczak v. Fin. Recovery Serv., Inc., 286 F.R.D. 381 (N.D. Ill. 2012). But see Glover v. F.D.I.C., 698 F.3d 139 (3d Cir. 2012).

248 See Thoennes v. Masari Inv., L.L.C., 2009 WL 4282807 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 25, 2009).

249 See Nunez v. Mandarich Law Grp., L.L.P., 2017 WL 4742194 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 19, 2017). See also Peragine v. William C. Grossman Law, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 7293392, at *6 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 30, 2019) (no relation back where plaintiff did not make a mistake in choosing to sue only one defendant and not others: "Such a choice defeats any claim that Plaintiff made a mistake in naming a defendant sufficient to trigger the relation back doctrine contained in Rule 15(c).").

250 Abrams v. Hilco Receivables, L.L.C., 2011 WL 5138635 (W.D. Wash. Oct. 28, 2011); Peters v. Collection Tech., Inc., 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21810 (D. Or. Dec. 5, 1991). See Prade v. Jackson & Kelly, 941 F. Supp. 596, 599–600 (N.D. W. Va. 1996), aff'd, 135 F.3d 770 (4th Cir. 1998) (table).

251 Serna v. Law Office of Joseph Onwuteaka, P.C., 732 F.3d 440, 449 (5th Cir. 2013) (where plaintiff timely filed his original FDCPA complaint and IFP application on August 12, 2011, two days before the expiration of the limitations period, the district court then denied his IFP application on August 15, 2011, and provided notice of its denial by mail and electronic means, consumer was entitled under Federal Rule 6 to three days to file his complaint and filing fee, making his filing on August 18 timely).

252 Kueter v. Chrysler Fin. Corp., 2000 WL 762230 (D. Me. Apr. 5, 2000).

253 See generally National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 5.7.1.2 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

There is extensive TILA case law providing for such recoupment claims.[254] There is little or no such case law examining the issue under the FDCPA, but the outcome will likely be determined by how related the FDCPA claims are to the collection action, and how the forum state where the collection action is brought interprets its law of recoupment.[255]

12.4 Good Faith Conformity with CFPB Advisory Opinions

12.4.1 Overview

The FDCPA specifies a defense of good faith conformity with a formal Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) advisory opinion, even if the opinion is later ruled invalid:

> (e) No provision of this section imposing any liability shall apply to any act done or omitted in good faith in conformity with any advisory opinion of the [Consumer Financial Protection] Bureau, notwithstanding that after such act or omission has occurred, such opinion is amended, rescinded, or determined by judicial or other authority to be invalid for any reason.[256]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) lists CFPB-issued[257] advisory opinions. The CFPB currently lists only one FDCPA advisory opinion.[258] That advisory opinion provides a safe harbor from FDCPA liability for certain actions taken in compliance with RESPA Regulation X mortgage servicing rules and Truth in Lending Regulation Z.[259] That advisory opinion is explained in more detail at Appx. B.2.2, infra, and its full text is reproduced as companion material to the digital version of this treatise under "Primary Sources." The CFPB will update Appendix C to list any new advisory opinions issued by the Bureau.[260]

In 2020, the CFPB issued an Advisory Opinions Policy that prescribes procedures for issuing advisory opinions.[261] Regulation F provides that, "A request for an advisory opinion may be submitted in accordance with the instructions regarding submission and content of requests applicable to any relevant advisory opinion program that the Bureau offers."[262]

The CFPB has issued other debt collection guidance documents,[263] but these documents do not claim to be advisory opinions for the purposes of FDCPA § 1692k(e). In 2019, the CFPB finalized a Compliance Assistance Sandbox Policy under which it planned to issue "approvals" of the practices of specific entities intended to trigger the good-faith defense of EFTA, TILA or the FDCPA.[264] The CFPB has not issued any actual FDCPA-related approvals under this policy.

Another CFPB policy issued in 2020, the No-Action Letter Policy, results in a commitment by the CFPB that it will not take certain actions. But the CFPB has made clear that a no-action letter does not result in legal conclusions or interpretations.[265] Consequently, a No-Action Letter does not trigger the good-faith defense and should receive no deference as an interpretation beyond the extent to which it binds the CFPB with respect to the entity receiving the NAL.

The Truth in Lending Act (TILA) provides a similar good faith conformity defense,[266] and courts may find useful, in construing the FDCPA defense, cases interpreting that TILA defense.[267] Courts rule that a defendant must specifically plead TILA's good faith conformity defense in order for a court to consider it[268] and that evidence must support the pleading.[269] To establish the defense, the defendant must show good faith[270] conformity with[271] and reliance upon[272] an agency's advisory opinion.

12.4.2 Inapplicability of FTC Advisory Opinions

The FDCPA defense of good faith conformity with an advisory opinion at one time applied to FTC advisory opinions.[273]

254 See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 12.2.5 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

255 Cf. Crawford v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4249498 (M.D. Ala. Aug. 9, 2016) (rejecting recoupment counterclaim since FDCPA claim did not arise out of same operative facts).

256 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(e). See also Reg. F Appx. C(1).

257 See § 12.4.2, supra, for an explanation why compliance with older FTC advisory opinions on the FDCPA should not provide a defense because the CFPB has not adopted those opinions.

258 See Reg. F Appx. C(3).

259 See 81 Fed. Reg. 71,977 (Oct. 19, 2016).

260 See Reg. F Appx. C(1).

261 CFPB, Advisory Opinions Policy, 85 Fed. Reg. 77,987 (Dec. 3, 2020).

262 Reg. F Appx. C(2).

263 See Appx. B, infra.

264 84 Fed. Reg. 48,246, 48,251 (Sept. 13, 2019).

265 84 Fed. Reg. 48,229 (Sept. 13, 2019). See id. at 48,243 ("The Bureau expects a No-Action Letter will: . . . State that the letter: . . . does not purport to express any legal conclusions regarding the meaning or application of the laws and/or regulations within the scope of the letter."); id. at 48,237 (rejecting request from some commenters that no-action letters state the CFPB's conclusion that the product or service in question, implemented consistently with the terms and conditions of the letter, does not violate applicable law). No-action letters also are adopted without public notice and opportunity to comment.

266 15 U.S.C. § 1640(f).

267 See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending §§ 12.4.2.1, 12.4.2.2, 12.4.3 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

268 E.g., Pollock v. Gen. Fin. Corp., 552 F.2d 1142 (5th Cir. 1977).

269 Id.; Leon v. Washington Mut. Bank, 164 F. Supp. 2d 1034 (N.D. Ill. 2001). See also Arias v. Albuquerque Nat'l Bank, Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) ¶ 97,749 (D.N.M. 1979); Smith v. Lewis Ford, Inc., 456 F. Supp. 1138 (W.D. Tenn. 1978); Gillard v. Aetna Fin. Co., 414 F. Supp. 737 (E.D. La. 1976).

270 E.g., Jones v. Cmty. Loan & Inv. Corp., 544 F.2d 1228 (5th Cir. 1976).

271 E.g., Franklin v. First Money, Inc., 599 F.2d 615 (5th Cir. 1979); McGowan v. King, Inc., 569 F.2d 845 (5th Cir. 1978); Harris v. Household Fin. Corp., Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) ¶ 97,924, 12 Clearinghouse Rev. 239 (D.D.C. 1978).

272 E.g., Arias v. Albuquerque Nat'l Bank, Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) ¶ 97,749, 13 Clearinghouse Rev. 100 (D.N.M. 1979); Houston v. Atlanta Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 414 F. Supp. 851 (N.D. Ga. 1976); Lewis v. Walker-Thomas Furniture Co., 416 F. Supp. 514 (D.D.C. 1976).

273 As originally enacted, 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(e) specified "with any advisory opinion of the Commission." Pub. L. No. 95-109, § 813, 91 Stat. 874 (Sept. 20, 1977).

When the CFPB was established in 2010, Congress amended the FDCPA to vest advisory opinion authority in the CFPB instead of the FTC and amended the good faith conformity provision to only apply to CFPB advisory opinions.[274] Congress did not provide for the continued legal force of previous FTC advisory opinions when it transferred authority to the CFPB.[275]

The CFPB's list of applicable advisory opinions found in Regulation F does not include the FTC advisory opinions.[276] In addition, the FTC has removed its four FDCPA advisory opinions from its website.[277] Also removed from its website are hundreds of informal staff letters on the FDCPA.[278] The FTC staff also compiled a commentary to the FDCPA.[279] But neither the staff letters nor the staff commentary are advisory opinions, which were issued by the FTC Commissioners.

It is clear that the good faith conformity defense does not apply to the FTC staff letters or commentary, and it also appears no longer to apply to the four FTC advisory opinions. Of course, courts may consider the FTC materials, particularly as historical context for interpreting the FDCPA.

12.5 Regulation F Safe Harbors

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides nine new provisions that it either specifically identifies as safe harbors for debt collectors or that function as safe harbors. For simplicity, we refer to all nine as safe harbors in this section.

These safe harbors do not set out requirements for debt collectors, but instead indicate that general standards are met if the collector complies with certain actions or disclosures. The general standards can be met by alternative actions or disclosures, but engaging in the specified conduct, while optional, provides a safe harbor from violation of a specific provision. Conduct or disclosures as specified in the safe harbor immunize the debt collector from the specific violation indicated and not from other possible Regulation F violations.

The nine safe harbors are discussed in the prior substantive chapters on the FDCPA and Regulation F. They are:

- Reg. F § 1006.2(j): Voicemails complying with definition of limited content messages do not violate requirements as to third-party communications, meaningful disclosure of the debt collector's identity, or that the call is to collect a debt or that the caller is a debt collector. See §§ 5.7.8, 6.8, 7.2.11.2, supra.
- Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)(i)-2: In determining the consumer's time zone to avoid calls at inconvenient times, where the collector has conflicting or ambiguous information regarding a consumer's location, then, absent knowledge to the contrary, the collector's call is at a convenient time if it would be convenient in all possible time zones where the debt collector's information indicates the consumer might be located. See § 5.4.2, supra.
- Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3): Complying acquisition of email addresses and phone numbers for text message meet the reasonable procedure prong of the bona fide error defense if the email or text, nevertheless, results in a third-party communication. See § 5.7.9, supra.
- Reg. F § 1006.22(g): Where an email address or phone number for text messages is obtained and used pursuant to Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3) procedures, a debt collector's use of that email address or phone number for text messages is not unfair or unconscionable even if the email or text message reveals the debt collector's name or other information indicating that the communication relates to the collection of a debt. See § 8.9, supra.
- Reg. F Official Interpretation § 30(a)(1)-2: Debt collectors must wait a reasonable period of time to receive a notice of undeliverability before furnishing information about the debt to a consumer reporting agency. A reasonable time period is fourteen consecutive days. See § 8.12, supra.
- Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(2): Use of the CFPB's model validation notice or a substantially similar notice provides a safe harbor as to the Regulation F validation information and form requirements. See § 9.3b.2, supra.
- Reg. F Official Interpretation § 34(e)-1: If a debt collector sends a consumer a validation notice translated into a language other than English, the translation must be complete and accurate. The language obtained from the CFPB website is considered a complete and accurate translation. See § 9.3b.4, supra.
- Reg. F § 1006.38(b)(2): A debt collector has not overshadowed or acted inconsistently with disclosure of the consumer's right to dispute the debt or request the original creditor's identity if it uses the model validation notice and otherwise responds to the dispute as required by Regulation F. See § 9.5.1, supra.
- Reg. F Official Interpretation § 42(a)(1)-3: Written disclosures are sent in a manner that is reasonably expected to provide actual notice if mailed to the consumer's last known address, unless the debt collector knows or should know that the consumer does not reside or receive mail at that location, or is notified the mail was not delivered. See § 9.3.3, supra.

12.6 Defenses Based on Prior Litigation or Immunities

12.6.1 Overview

A number of rules fostering judicial economy may bar FDCPA claims involving separate, but related lawsuits. Most typically this occurs when the consumer was first sued by a creditor or debt buyer in state court and the consumer then seeks to bring a separate FDCPA suit against the debt buyer, 274 Pub. L. No. 111-203, tit. X, § 1089(1), 124 Stat. 1376 (July 21, 2010).

275 Id.
276 Reg. F Appx. C(3).
277 FTC Advisory Opinions are reproduced in full at Appx. C.1, infra.
278 An index of FTC informal staff letters is included at Appx. C.3, infra, and the letters themselves are found as companion material to the digital version of this treatise.
279 Appx. C.2, infra, reproduces the FTC Staff Commentary on the FDCPA.

the collection attorney, or a collection agency. These rules support judicial economy by avoiding repetitious adjudications of identical or closely related matters in different suits:

- Compulsory counterclaims—that a FDCPA claim should have been brought in the prior litigation as a counterclaim;[280]
- Res judicata or claim preclusion—that the prior litigation forecloses the FDCPA claim because the two claims are essentially the same;[281]
- Collateral estoppel or issue preclusion—that consideration of a specific issue related to the FDCPA case has already been decided in the prior litigation;[282]
- Judicial estoppel—preventing a litigant from taking opposite positions on the same issue found in the two litigations;[283]
- Comity—where related issues are being determined in another court, a federal court hearing the FDCPA claim may stay its proceedings pending the outcome of the case;[284] and
- The Rooker-Feldman doctrine, which limits federal district courts' jurisdiction to review of the judgments of state courts and is discussed in § 12.6.4, infra.[285]

FDCPA claims arising from bankruptcy proceedings may have to be raised in a bankruptcy court or under the Bankruptcy Code. These issues are discussed in Chapter 13, infra. Also not discussed in this section are various frivolous claims a collector may raise, such as that the ability to seek under state law a sanction in a state court collection action for the plaintiff or plaintiff attorney's frivolous, groundless, or bad faith conduct would somehow displace the consumer's federal right to sue under the FDCPA.[286]

A related but different issue is whether various immunities or privileges bar liability under the FDCPA:

- Litigation immunity or privilege that in certain situations protects the litigation conduct of a plaintiff or plaintiff's attorney in a state court collection case from subsequent litigation concerning that conduct;[287]
- Witness immunity that in certain situations may protects the conduct of a witness or an affiant in one case from liability in a subsequent litigation;[288] and
- Sovereign immunity that protects certain parties with a governmental function from being sued.[289]

280 See § 12.6.2, infra.
281 See § 12.6.2, infra.
282 See § 12.6.2, infra.
283 See § 12.6.2, infra.
284 See § 12.6.3, infra.
285 See § 12.6.4, infra.
286 See Weniger v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 2004 WL 2609192 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 17, 2004) (defendant attorneys' argument that state court counterpart of Rule 11 was exclusive remedy for debt collector's abusive litigation was frivolous).
287 See § 12.6.6.2, infra.
288 See § 12.6.6.3, infra.
289 See § 12.6.5, infra.

12.6.2 Res Judicata, Preclusion, Collateral Estoppel, and Compulsory Counterclaim Rules

Res judicata and collateral estoppel are defenses available to prevent a second suit, e.g., an FDCPA suit following a debt collection or foreclosure action, proceeding on claims or issues determined,[290] or that should or could[291] have been determined, in a prior suit.[292] While a court may find that a collection attorney defendant in an FDCPA suit was not in privity with their debt collector client under state law in a prior state debt collection suit, and therefore not protected by res judicata,[293] other courts find that state law considers a collection lawyer to be in privity with its creditor client, and therefore protected by res judicata.[294]

290 See Mains v. Citibank, 852 F.3d 669, 678 (7th Cir. 2017). See also Dekom v. Fannie Mae, 846 Fed. Appx. 14 (2d Cir. 2021); Rodrigues v. Unifund CCR, L.L.C., 690 Fed. Appx. 799, 801 (3d Cir. 2017) (dismissing consumer's claims related to debt collector's actions in a prior state court collection suit pursuant to "New Jersey's 'idiosyncratic' application of res judicata principles . . . rooted in the belief that 'the adjudication of a legal controversy should occur in one litigation in only one court' "); Humphreys v. McCabe Weisberg & Conway, P.C., 686 Fed. Appx. 95, 97 (3d Cir. 2017) (homeowner's FDCPA claim that the foreclosure law firm made false statements concerning Wells Fargo's enforcement rights in the foreclosure case were precluded, as the state foreclosure proceeding resolved that Wells Fargo had standing to foreclose on the property).
291 See Covert v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 779 F.3d 242 (4th Cir. 2015); Osowiecki v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 779509 (D. Md. Feb. 18, 2020) (because FDCPA claim arose out of same transaction at issue in state foreclosure proceeding, consumer could have raised them as counterclaims); Geraldo v. Richland Holdings, Inc., 2017 WL 3174918 (D. Nev. July 26, 2017) (FDCPA claims involving the amount of the debt and the debt collection suit should have been brought as compulsory counterclaims in the prior state debt collection suit as required by Nevada's compulsory counterclaim law); Wallace v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2014 WL 4772029 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 24, 2014) (FDCPA claims that could have been asserted in the state court foreclosure action were barred by Michigan's res judicata and collateral estoppel rules).
292 See Appx. E.3.6.7, infra.
293 See Worley v. Engel, 2017 WL 4862766 (D. Minn. Oct. 26, 2017) (denying motion to dismiss because res judicata did not bar the claim as the eviction attorney (the defendant in this FDCPA suit) was not in privity with the landlord (the eviction attorney's client in the prior state court proceeding); second amended FDCPA complaint raised different claims from the state-court claims so claim preclusion did not apply); Reyes v. Kenosian & Miele, L.L.P., 619 F. Supp. 2d 796 (N.D. Cal. 2008) (no preclusion because law firm was not a party to the state court complaint and not in privity with a party). See also Finch v. Slochowsky and Slochowsky, L.L.P., 2020 WL 5848616, at *5 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2020) (law firm was not party to Housing Court eviction proceedings against plaintiff, so consumer would not have been required to raise FDCPA counterclaims in Housing Court proceedings against law firm); O'Donnell v. Vial Fotheringham L.L.P., 2020 WL 6365521, at *10 (D. Or. Sept. 15, 2020) (law firm was not party to foreclosure action and was not in privity with condominium association, so FDCPA claims were not precluded).
294 See Cross v. Arakaki, 284 Fed. Appx. 443, 444 (9th Cir. 2008) (court split 2–1 on the issue); McGhee v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2013 WL 4495797, at *4 (D. Md. Aug. 20, 2013) (res judicata shielded foreclosure attorneys from subsequent FDCPA suit as they were in privity

Judicial estoppel may similarly bar a party from taking a contradictory position in a later suit from one taken in prior suit.[295] In general though, judicial estoppel does not apply to conduct engaged in after a collection or foreclosure judgment.[296]

Compulsory counterclaim rules may require joinder of counterclaims bearing a close logical or evidentiary relationship to the plaintiff's claim and may determine the claims that should have been litigated in the prior proceeding. State compulsory counterclaim rules vary greatly from state to state. A compulsory counterclaim "arises out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim."[297] This rule encourages judicial efficiency by requiring parties to litigate all closely related claims in a single suit. However, res judicata and compulsory counterclaim rules have exceptions and involve distinctions meant to avoid denying a person their day in court.[298]

In the context of the FDCPA, the two rules may determine whether an earlier judgment in a debt collection suit bars a later FDCPA suit related to activities in the prior collection suit or the debt involved in the prior suit. If the law of the jurisdiction in which the prior action was decided (usually a state court) would hold the consumer's FDCPA claim to be a compulsory counterclaim to the debt collection suit, the second court may bar the later FDCPA claim.

However, most of the courts that have considered the issue have found that most FDCPA claims were not compulsory counterclaims in the prior debt collection suit or foreclosure action.[299] If the state compulsory counterclaim rule is unfavorable to the consumer, there is support for arguing that the federal compulsory counterclaim rule applies.[300] If there was a dismissal with no judgment on the merits in the prior case[301] or the prior case is still pending without a judgment,[302] there can be no preclusion in the second suit. If the decision in the prior suit did not clearly state the basis for its decision, res judicata may not be available.[303] The defense is waived if not timely raised and may not be untimely raised sua sponte by the court.[304]

This issue should not arise in states that bar a debt collector from suing to recover a debt in its own name and the defendant in the second suit is a debt collector, as the parties must be the same[305] or in privity with each other.

The appellate courts are uniform in finding no res judicata in an FDCPA case because of a prior state debt collection judgment without a showing that operative facts or claims that were resolved in the first judgment are questioned by the new claims.[306] The district courts also are consistent in finding that most FDCPA claims were distinct from the claim on the debt and were not compulsory counterclaims in the prior collection with plaintiffs in foreclosure suit). Cf. Tiene v. Law Office of J. Scott Watson P.C., 2018 WL 6267166, at *3 (3d Cir. Nov. 29, 2018) (assumes creditor's collection attorney in state court in privity with creditor plaintiff for res judicata purposes); Mendelson v. Southeast Mortg., Inc., 2012 WL 3582630 (N.D. Ga. July 26, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 3579779 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 16, 2012) (consumer was collaterally estopped from claiming that underlying transaction created non-business consumer debt since earlier adjudication on TILA claim in another case had determined that identical transaction was for business purposes and current defendant—attorneys for party in prior case—were in privity with their former client).

---

295 See, e.g., Haddad v. Randall S. Miller Assoc., 587 Fed. Appx. 959 (6th Cir. 2014) (affirming dismissal of homeowners' suit challenging underlying foreclosure, since homeowners were barred from challenging validity of mortgage by judicial estoppel arising from their sworn representation made in their bankruptcy filing that mortgage was uncontested).

296 Morgan v. Carrington Mortg. Services, 719 Fed. Appx. 735 (10th Cir. 2017) (state court foreclosure proceeding not entitled to res judicata treatment for FDCPA claims, because claims arose after foreclosure or dealt with postjudgment proceedings still on appeal); Shaffer v. Servis One, Inc., 347 F. Supp. 3d 1039 (M.D. Fla. 2018) (FDCPA claims arising from enforcement of judgment do not implicate res judicata).

297 E.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a).

298 See Neff v. Flagstar Bank, 520 Fed. Appx. 323 (6th Cir. 2013).

299 See Appx. E.3.6.7, E.3.11, infra. See, e.g., Morgan v. Carrington Mortg. Serv., 2017 WL 481429 (10th Cir. Feb. 6, 2017) (homeowner's FDCPA claims not precluded by Oklahoma preclusion rules as they were based on loss mitigation events occurring after her answer in the state foreclosure proceeding involving her home); Rendon v. HBLC, Inc., 2017 WL 7275423 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 25, 2017) (where the issue of sewer service of the state debt collection suit on the consumer was not clearly resolved in state court's dismissal of the collection suit for lack of prosecution, preclusion did not apply); Infante v. Samara Portfolio Mgmt., L.L.C., 2017 WL 1102757, at *3 (E.D. Tex. Jan. 20, 2017), adopted, 2017 WL 1113322 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 23, 2017) (FDCPA § 1692i claim was not a compulsory counterclaim to the state debt collection suit); France v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 2018 WL 1695405 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 6, 2018) (FDCPA claims did not arise from same transaction as foreclosure and were not compulsory counterclaims that should have been included in state court action).

300 See Lewis v. Marinosci Law Grp., P.C., 2013 WL 5789183 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 29, 2013) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 14 provides that claims against third parties are never compulsory); Rotenberg v. MLG, P.A., 2013 WL 5664886 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 17, 2013).

301 See Tyler v. DH Capital Mgmt., Inc., 736 F.3d 455 (6th Cir. 2013); Matute v. A.A. Action Collection Co., 2017 WL 2573714 (D.N.J. June 13, 2017); White v. Sherman Fin. Grp., L.L.C., 984 F. Supp. 2d 841 (E.D. Tenn. 2013); Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163 (E.D.N.Y. 2013).

302 See, e.g., Adams v. Albertelli, 2016 WL 931103 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 11, 2016).

303 See Tiene v. Law Office of J. Scott Watson P.C., 2018 WL 6267166, at *3 (3d Cir. Nov. 29, 2018) (overturning district court's finding that Pennsylvania res judicata applied, as it failed address whether the state court found its determination in prior proceeding was essential to its judgment); Harrington v. DH Capital Mgmt., Inc., 2014 WL 5776203 (W.D. Ky. Nov. 5, 2014) (since applicable state law required that the matter have actually been decided in the earlier case and the state court did not fully explain the basis for its rejection of the consumer's motion to vacate, res judicata did not apply).

304 See Sykes v. Mel S. Harris & Assoc., 780 F.3d 70, 100 n.5 (2d Cir. 2015) ("Res judicata is an affirmative defense that must be pleaded."); Neff v. Flagstar Bank, 520 Fed. Appx. 323 (6th Cir. 2013).

305 See Kolker v. Duke City Collection Agency, 750 F. Supp. 468 (D.N.M. 1990) (debt collector's practice of bringing suit to collect consumer debts on contingency basis, using its own attorney, constituted unauthorized practice of law); § 16.5.3, infra.

306 See Whitaker v. Ameritech Corp., 129 F.3d 952 (7th Cir. 1997); Peterson v. United Accounts, Inc., 638 F.2d 1134 (8th Cir. 1981). See also Cousins v. Duane St. Assoc., 7 Fed. Appx. 85 (2d Cir. 2001); Roban v. Marinosci Law Grp., 34 F. Supp. 3d 1252 (S.D. Fla. July 29, 2014).

suit.[307] However, an FDCPA claim contesting issues that were adjudicated by the state court, such as liability for the debt,[308] the ownership of the debt,[309] or the amount owed, is likely to be barred.

In a nonprecedential decision, the Third Circuit found that New Jersey's unique entire-controversy doctrine did not require FDCPA claims to be raised as counterclaims in the debt collector's collection suit on the debt involved in the FDCPA claims. The state court collection action had been dismissed with prejudice when the debt buyer dismissed its claim. The consumer had raised the statute of limitations as defense in the state action but not as a counterclaim. Subsequent to the state court dismissal, the consumer brought suit on the FDCPA claim that the debt collector had filed a time-barred state collection action. The Third Circuit found:

> While there is a commonality of parties, the two actions do not arise out of a common nucleus of operative facts sufficient to trigger the necessity of creating a complete litigation as contemplated by the entire controversy doctrine. It is the potentially abusive and harassing nature of the efforts Midland was alleged to have employed in collecting the debt which factually sets apart the two actions. Accordingly, we affirm the District Court's determination that did not bar Mrs. Jackson's FDCPA claim under these circumstances.[310]

This is consistent with the related rule that federal courts generally will not exercise supplemental jurisdiction in an FDCPA action over the collector's counterclaim for the amount of the debt, because the two matters involve distinct issues.[311]

Even if the FDCPA claim is not precluded, some district courts may require the consumer to file the FDCPA claim as a permissive counterclaim in the state suit and may stay its own proceedings unless the state court fails to address the FDCPA claim.[312] One court found that a state court judgment barred an 307 See Appx. E.3.11, infra. See, e.g., Dixon v. J. Scott Watson, P.C., 2018 WL 4110605 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 28, 2018) (§ 1692*i* claim was not precluded as state court tuition collection suit did not consider where tuition agreement was signed—the central § 1692*i* issue); Gonzalez v. Allied Collection Serv., Inc., 2018 WL 715359, at *4 (D. Nev. Feb. 5, 2018) (neither issue preclusion or judicial estoppel applied to spouse's allegation that debt collector sought attachment of her funds when her husband's medical bill had been paid); Hines v. HSBC Bank, 2016 WL 5716749 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2016) (post-foreclosure collection-related claims were not barred by res judicata or collateral estoppel); Aqeel v. Cach L.L.C., 2016 WL 5334751 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 22, 2016); Jones v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3940310 (E.D. Pa. July 20, 2016); Adams v. Albertelli, 2016 WL 931103 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 11, 2016) (denying dismissal to foreclosure attorneys as FDCPA claim was not compulsory counterclaim in pending foreclosure suit); Roban v. Marinosci Law Grp., 34 F. Supp. 3d 1252 (S.D. Fla. 2014); Carrero v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2014 WL 6433214 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 27, 2014); Collins v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 991 F. Supp. 2d 1195 (S.D. Fla. 2013); Hall v. MLG, P.A., 981 F. Supp. 2d 1267 (S.D. Fla. 2013); Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163 (E.D.N.Y. 2013); Birge v. Smeall, 2013 WL 5789273 (D. Neb. Sept. 20, 2013); Garcia v. Jenkins/Babb L.L.P., 2012 WL 3847362 (N.D. Tex. July 31, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 3846539 (N.D. Tex. Sept. 5, 2012); Bohannon-Hingston v. Brachfeld Law Grp., 2011 WL 6211756 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 2011); Nikkel v. Wakefield & Assoc., Inc., 2011 WL 4479109 (D. Colo. Sept. 26, 2011); Blaxill v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 2011 WL 1299350 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 4, 2011); Naranjo v. Universal Sur. of Am., 679 F. Supp. 2d 787 (S.D. Tex. 2010); Meyer v. Debt Recovery Solutions of Ohio, Inc., 2010 WL 3515663 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 2, 2010); Swain v. CACH, L.L.C., 699 F. Supp. 2d 1117 (N.D. Cal. 2009); Druther v. Hamilton, 75 Fed. R. Serv. 3d 316 (W.D. Wash. 2009); Gutierrez v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2009 WL 10699516 (W.D. Tex. Mar. 16, 2009); Cowan v. Palisades Collection, Inc., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44706 (C.D. Cal. June 19, 2007); Clabault v. Shodeen Mgmt., 2006 WL 87600 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 6, 2006); Todd v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis, Co., L.P.A., 348 F. Supp. 2d 903 (S.D. Ohio 2004), aff'd on other grounds, 434 F.3d 432 (6th Cir. 2006); Egge v. Healthspan Serv. Co., 115 F. Supp. 2d 1126 (D. Minn. 2000); Walton v. Franklin Collection Agency, Inc., 1999 WL 33537147 (N.D. Miss. May 5, 1999); Azar v. Hayter, 874 F. Supp. 1314 (N.D. Fla. 1995), aff'd without op., 66 F.3d 342 (11th Cir. 1995); Watson v. Auto Advisors, Inc., 822 N.E.2d 1017 (Ind. Ct. App. 2005); Caputo v. Koenig, 46 N.Y.S.3d 880 (N.Y. App. Div. 2017). See also Keller v. Hosp. of Morristown, 2016 WL 6956621 (E.D. Tenn. Nov. 28, 2016); Frazier v. Matrix Acquisitions, L.L.C., 873 F. Supp. 2d 897 (N.D. Ohio 2012) (claim that the collection suit was brought in violation of § 1692i was not precluded); Todd v. Weltman Weinberg, Reis & Co., L.P.A., 2008 WL 419943 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 14, 2008) (challenge to false garnishment affidavit, not amounts owed, not precluded); Stolicker v. Muller, Muller, Richmond, Harms, Myers, & Sgroi, P.C., 387 F. Supp. 2d 752 (W.D. Mich. 2005) (FDCPA claims not barred by collateral estoppel); §§ 16.2.5.1, 16.2.5.2, 16.2.5.3, Appx. E.3.6.7, infra. Cf. Collins v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 991 F. Supp. 2d 1195 (S.D. Fla. 2013) (debt collector's collateral estoppel claim was denied where "it is not at all clear that this issue—whether Erin Capital violated the FDCPA—was fully litigated in the underlying state action, or that it was a critical and necessary part of the state court's determination"); In re Simmerman, 463 B.R. 47 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2011) (denying motion to dismiss since question of whether judicial estoppel barred consumers' FDCPA claim based on their failure to disclose cause of action during their prior bankruptcy case required consideration of facts outside pleading).

308 See Mizysak v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2020 WL 956355 (E.D. Wis. Feb. 27, 2020); Clark v. Cavalry Portfolio Serv., L.L.C., 2017 WL 6757224 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 29, 2017) ("[U]nder New York law a default judgment, such as that against plaintiff, has res judicata effect equal to that of a judgment on the merits.").

309 See Mains v. Citibank, 852 F.3d 669, 678 (7th Cir. 2017) (issue preclusion prevented federal courts from considering Chase's authority to collect a mortgage debt when state judgment had decided Chase had that authority); Eager v. Credit Bur. Collection Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 5719224 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 18, 2013) (collateral estoppel applied since the validity of the allegedly nonexistent assignments was necessarily determined in state court); McGhee v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2013 WL 4495797 (D. Md. Aug. 20, 2013).

310 Jackson v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 468 Fed. Appx. 123, 126 (3d Cir. 2012). See also Estate of Torsiello ex rel. Torsiello v. McGovern Legal Serv., L.L.C., 2014 WL 4758024 (D.N.J. Sept. 24, 2014) (N.J.'s entire controversy doctrine did not bar consumer's FDCPA claim against the attorney for the creditor in the underlying state collection suit). Cf. Salerno v. Selene Fin., 2021 WL 973492, at *3 (D.N.J. Mar. 16, 2021) (denying motion to dismiss on grounds that consumer's FDCPA claims were barred by New Jersey's entire controversy doctrine, because she could raise them in ongoing foreclosure proceeding, noting that "where the underlying state foreclosure proceeding is ongoing and has not been adjudicated on the merits, Courts have found the doctrine inapplicable to bar the federal plaintiff's claims").

311 See § 12.8, infra.

312 See Peterson v. United Accounts, Inc., 638 F.2d 1134 (8th Cir. 1981); Foster v. Ford, 2005 WL 1645953 (N.D. Ohio July 13, 2005). Cf. Cunningham v. MBNA Am. Bank, 8 So. 3d 438, 441 (Fla. Dist. Ct.

FDCPA claim that could have been raised in the state action, even if it was not a compulsory counterclaim.[313] Courts generally will not stay a state court collection action pending resolution of FDCPA claims.[314]

In a recent Eighth Circuit decision, the court decertified a class after concluding that the defendant was not liable under the FDCPA to any class member who unsuccessfully litigated the defendant's use of a standard-form pleading in state court, concluding that collateral estoppel undermined commonality and predominance in the class.[315]

Of course, if the consumer actually litigated the FDCPA claim in the prior proceeding, the claim is almost certainly barred from relitigation by res judicata or collateral estoppel.[316] This may be the case in some states even if the consumer's claims in the prior action were brought under state law but raised essentially the same issues as the FDCPA claim.[317] A dismissal with prejudice in the prior suit, even without a ruling on the merits, may be a bar to a second suit in some states.[318]

Conversely, if the consumer's FDCPA claims were dismissed without prejudice in the state court action, the state court judgment on the debt would have no collateral estoppel or res judicata effect on the subsequent FDCPA claims.[319] Where the pro se consumer had accepted an offer of judgment from a debt collector for abusive phone calls, res judicata did not bar a suit for later abusive calls by the same debt collector. The court stated: "In any event, it seems to the Court that, if Defendant stopped calling Plaintiff, Plaintiff would stop filing suits against it."[320]

Where the defendant obtained a judgment on a check in state court, the consumer's FDCPA claim that the defendant sought fees that were not authorized by state law was barred by res judicata as the state court had awarded those fees.[321]

Even if a consumer should have asserted an FDCPA claim as a compulsory counterclaim in a prior action, a court may still allow the FDCPA claim under the exceptions and distinctions it makes to temper the effects of res judicata eliminating

App. 2009) (in MBNA arbitration confirmation action, dismissal of consumer's FDCPA counterclaim, alleging misuse of NAF arbitration process to secure payment of credit card debt, was not final and therefore not appealable, as FDCPA claim was compulsory counterclaim under state law "inextricably tied to the transaction or occurrence underlying MBNA's claim").

313 See Sheahy v. Primus Auto. Fin. Serv., Inc., 284 F. Supp. 2d 278 (D. Md. 2003). See also Christian v. M & R Collection Adjustment, Inc., 307 S.E.2d 523 (Ga. Ct. App. 1983). But see Jackson v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 468 Fed. Appx. 123 (3d Cir. 2012).

314 Saunders v. Stigers, 773 A.2d 971 (Conn. App. Ct. 2001); Green Tree Fin. Servicing Corp. v. Lewis, 720 N.Y.S.2d 843 (N.Y. App. Div. 2001).

315 Powers v. Credit Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 776 F.3d 567 (8th Cir. 2015).

316 See Appx. E.3.11, infra. See, e.g., Mains v. Citibank, 852 F.3d 669 (7th Cir. 2017); Metzenbaum v. Huntington Nat'l Bank, 124 F.3d 198 (6th Cir. 1997) (table) (text at 1997 WL 579155); Mays v. Brent, 546 F.2d 1154 (5th Cir. 1977); Phelps v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 2013 WL 6094572 (D.N.J. Nov. 19, 2013) (consumer's settlement with Midland Funding of a prior state court collection action precluded this FDCPA action against Midland Funding, but not against Midland Credit and Encore, which were not parties to the settlement); Collins v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2013 WL 3808097 (D. Ariz. July 23, 2013), Smith v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2011 WL 2560234 (N.D. Ill. June 28, 2011); Cortez v. Pharia L.L.C., 2011 WL 2455724 (S.D. Tex. May 18, 2011); Vacanti v. Apothaker & Assoc., P.C., 2010 WL 4702382 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 12, 2010); Seaworth v. Messerli, 2010 WL 3613821 (D. Minn. Sept. 7, 2010) (pro se consumer), aff'd, 414 Fed. Appx. 882 (8th Cir. 2011); Miller v. Bank of Am., 2010 WL 1489990 (D. Md. Apr. 12, 2010); Bond v. U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 2010 WL 1265852 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 29, 2010) (pro se consumer); Hawkins v. Citicorp Credit Serv., Inc., 665 F. Supp. 2d 518 (D. Md. 2009), aff'd, 405 Fed. Appx. 789 (4th Cir. 2010); Dexter v. Tran, 654 F. Supp. 2d 1253 (E.D. Wash. 2009); Cooper v. F.A. Mgmt. Solutions, Inc., 2007 WL 4326800 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 7, 2007); Johnson v. Chase Manhattan Mortg. Corp., 2006 WL 2506598 (D.D.C. Aug. 28, 2006); Tagayun v. Citibank, 2006 WL 5100512 (D.N.J. June 9, 2006). See also Dunavant v. Sirote & Permutt, P.C., 603 Fed. Appx. 737 (11th Cir. 2015) (foreclosing attorney was, for purpose of res judicata, in privity with the mortgage holder, which had been a successful defendant in state court on the same claim under § 1692f(6) that was before the federal court, requiring dismissal); Lifeng Lee Hsu v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 378 Fed. Appx. 196 (3d Cir. 2010); Minton v. Cach, L.L.C., 2014 WL 4764183 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 25, 2014) (consumer's claim that execution on five-year-old default state court judgment was illegal because the judgment included unlawful interest barred by Rooker-Feldman and res judicata); Hawkins v. Citicorp Credit Serv., Inc., 665 F. Supp. 2d 518 (D. Md. 2009); Sprinkle v. SB&C Ltd., 472 F. Supp. 2d 1235 (W.D. Wash. 2006) (validity of a state court garnishment could not be relitigated, but FDCPA claims arising out of attempt to garnish were not litigated in state court); O'Neil v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 210 P.3d 482 (Colo. App. 2009) (reversing finding of claim preclusion). Cf. Marshall v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 2011 WL 345988 (E.D. Ark. Feb. 1, 2011) (no consumer rights under § 1692g as bankruptcy determined that the debt was consumer's obligation), aff'd, 445 Fed. Appx. 900 (8th Cir. 2011). But see Riley v. Giguiere, 631 F. Supp. 2d 1295 (E.D. Cal. 2009) (state court's ruling in setting aside default judgment on basis of improper service precluded federal court's redetermination of same issue).

317 See Mains v. Citibank, 852 F.3d 669 (7th Cir. 2017). See also Mir v. Frandzel, Robin, Bloom, Csato, L.C., 2016 WL 4425715 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 16, 2016) (where all facts alleged in this case occurred before 2014 suit involving same parties that did not include FDCPA claim and were pleaded in that action, current FDCPA suit based on same facts was barred by claim preclusion or res judicata).

318 See Lintz v. Credit Adjustments, Inc., 2008 WL 835824 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 28, 2008) (where settled state claims and later federal claim arose from same transaction and could have been raised in prior action, it was precluded); Sibersky v. Borah, Goldstein, Altschuler & Schwartz, P.C., 2000 WL 1448635 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 22, 2000) (whether state release also released federal FDCPA claims was factual question of intent); Sundwall v. Reiner & Reiner, P.C., 1997 WL 117286 (D. Conn. Feb. 27, 1997). But cf. Schuh v. Druckman & Sinel, L.L.P., 602 F. Supp. 2d 454 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) (FDCPA claim that payout figure, given two years after a foreclosure judgment, was inflated was not barred by N.Y. res judicata).

319 See Columbo v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2009 WL 10666897 (S.D. Fla. July 29, 2009) ("A dismissal without prejudice is not an adjudication on the merits and thus does not have a res judicata effect. . . . In order for an issue to be precluded under the doctrine of collateral estoppel, Asset must demonstrate that 'the precluded issue was actually litigated in the prior proceeding.'"); Jenkins v. Gen. Collection Co., 538 F. Supp. 2d 1165 (D. Neb. 2008) (claim that defendant brought time-barred claims not precluded as it was not litigated in state court collection action); Silva v. Mid Atl. Mgmt. Corp., 277 F. Supp. 2d 460 (E.D. Pa. 2003).

320 Mack v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 140034, 2015 WL 140106 (E.D. Tex. Jan. 7, 2015).

321 Sorenson v. Yonek, 2011 WL 809664 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 28, 2011).

a party's day in court,[322] especially where the prior case was decided by a default judgment.[323] In one case, a federal court ruled that a TILA claim was a compulsory counterclaim to a prior state foreclosure action, but the court only applied its holding prospectively, since the plaintiffs before the court would otherwise suffer an unexpected forfeiture.[324] A creditor's judgment against the consumer would not provide a res judicata defense to a different party, such as a collection agency subsequently hired by the creditor.[325]

Res judicata may prevent a consumer from bringing a second FDCPA suit for a debt collector's continuation of conduct that was found not to violate the FDCPA in the first suit.[326]

Prior litigation of an issue can also work in the consumer's favor. For example, a state court's dismissal of a debt collection suit as time-barred was dispositive of the statute of limitations issue in a later federal court FDCPA claim.[327]

In a twist, in Bauman v. Bank of America,[328] a homeowner brought a subsequent declaratory judgment action alleging that a mortgagee had waived its right to foreclosure against their house when it failed to file a foreclosure counterclaim in the homeowner's prior FDCPA suit against the mortgagee. The Sixth Circuit rejected the homeowner's claim because the foreclosure counterclaim would have been permissive and not mandatory in the prior FDCPA suit, as the claims involved many different issues and types of evidence.

Issues of preclusion of a consumer's FDCPA claim related to the consumer's bankruptcy are addressed in Chapter 13, infra.

The federal equitable rule against claim-splitting may prohibit two suits comprising the same claim in different courts involving the same parties, requiring dismissal of the second suit.[329]

12.6.3 Comity and Abstention

Res judicata or collateral estoppel[330] will not foreclose an FDCPA action in federal court if a related state court collection action is still pending. Nevertheless, concerns of comity may lead the federal court to stay its proceedings pending resolution of the state court collection action under either the Colorado River or the Younger doctrines.

The U.S. Supreme Court's Colorado River doctrine[331] is a narrow and extraordinary exception to a court's duty to adjudicate a controversy properly before it, allowing a federal court to stay an action when there is an ongoing parallel action in state court.[332] The federal court must determine whether the concurrent state and federal actions are actually parallel, including whether substantially the same parties are involved, and also whether "exceptional circumstances" exist to justify abstention.[333] There must be a substantial likelihood that the state litigation will dispose of all claims presented in the federal case, with any doubt favoring the federal court keeping the case.[334] Abstention is even less likely where the federal court is hearing a federal claim such as the FDCPA.[335]

322 See, e.g., 1B J. Moore's Federal Practices ¶ 405 (1999); C. Wright, Law of Federal Courts § 79 (5th ed. 1994). See also Kelly v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 2007 WL 2381536 (D. Colo. Aug. 17, 2007) (FDCPA claims not litigated in state court).

323 See Estate of Izzo v. Vanguard Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1194464 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 30, 2017); Lewis v. Marinosci Law Grp., P.C., 2013 WL 5789183 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 29, 2013); Anderson v. Gamache & Myers, P.C., 2007 WL 1577610 (E.D. Mo. May 31, 2007) (state court default judgment did not address issues or claims in plaintiff's case, which was also not the same as plaintiff's FDCPA cause of action); Flores v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2007 WL 433239 (D. Or Jan. 31, 2007) (issue preclusion does not attach by virtue of judgment taken by default).

324 Chapman v. Aetna Fin. Co., 615 F.2d 361 (5th Cir. 1980).

325 Gasser v. Allen County Claims & Adjustment, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20361 (N.D. Ohio Nov. 2, 1983) (to permit the bar would frustrate purposes of FDCPA). See Reyes v. Kenosian & Miele, L.L.P., 619 F. Supp. 2d 796 (N.D. Cal. 2008) (no preclusion because law firm was not party). But cf. Riley v. Giguiere, 631 F. Supp. 2d 1295 (E.D. Cal. 2009) (collection attorney in privity with her state court landlord client).

326 See Hernandez v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 970 F. Supp. 2d 1194 (D. Colo. 2013).

327 See Pincus v. Law Offices of Erskine & Fleisher, 617 F. Supp. 2d 1265 (S.D. Fla. 2009).

328 808 F.3d 1097 (6th Cir. 2015).

329 See Vanover v. NCO Fin. Serv., Inc., 857 F.3d 833, 840–841 (11th Cir. 2017) (citing Katz v. Gerardi, 655 F.3d 1212, 1214 (10th Cir. 2011) and Stark v. Starr, 94 U.S. 477, 485, 24 L. Ed. 276 (1876)). See also Calvert v. Alessi & Koenig, L.L.C., 2013 WL 3833053 (D. Nev. July 22, 2013) (where consumer filed a separate complaint for each of four challenged letters, court consolidated cases and awarded only $1000 because of principle against claim splitting; citing Clements v. Airport Auth. of Washoe County, 69 F.3d 321, 328 (9th Cir. 1995)).

330 See § 12.6.2, supra.

331 Colorado River Water Conservation Dist. v. United States, 424 U.S. 800, 96 S. Ct. 1236, 47 L. Ed. 2d 483 (1976).

332 Colorado River Water Conservation Dist. v. United States, 424 U.S. 800, 96 S. Ct. 1236, 47 L. Ed. 2d 483 (1976). See also Jackson v. Safeguard Props., L.L.C., 2017 WL 1209544, at *1–2 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2017); Visceglie v. Seterus, Inc., 2017 WL 4863903, at *2–4 (M.D. Fla. May 1, 2017); Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Serv., LP, 955 F. Supp. 2d 163, 175 (E.D.N.Y. 2013); Owens v. Ronald R. Wolf & Assoc., P.L., 2013 WL 6085121, at *5 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 19, 2013).

333 Jackson v. Safeguard Props., L.L.C., 2017 WL 1209544, at *1–2 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2017); Visceglie v. Seterus, Inc., 2017 WL 4863903, at *2–4 (M.D. Fla. May 1, 2017); Ashley v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Serv., L.L.C., 2017 WL 1135294 (D.S.C. Mar. 27, 2017).

334 Wiley v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2020 WL 6136146 (D. Minn. Oct. 19, 2020); Jackson v. Safeguard Props., L.L.C., 2017 WL 1209544, at *1–2 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2017); Visceglie v. Seterus, Inc., 2017 WL 4863903, at *2–4 (M.D. Fla. May 1, 2017); Nyberg v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 8711506 (D. Or. Jan. 22, 2016) (while many issues will be identical, not all will be); Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Serv., LP, 955 F. Supp. 2d 163, 175 (E.D.N.Y. 2013); Owens v. Ronald R. Wolf & Assoc., P.L., 2013 WL 6085121, at *5 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 19, 2013).

335 Strader v. U.S. Bank, 2018 WL 741425 (W.D. Pa. Feb. 7, 2018) (rejecting Younger and Colorado River abstention arguments where debtor's FDCPA counterclaims dismissed without prejudice from state court foreclosure action); Dowell v. Bayview Loan Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 9486188 (M.D. Pa. May 4, 2017) (mag.; rejecting Colorado River abstention over certain FDCPA claims despite pending state court foreclosure); Visceglie v. Seterus, Inc., 2017 WL 4863903, at *2–4 (M.D. Fla. May 1, 2017); Owens v. Ronald R. Wolf & Assoc., P.L., 2013 WL 6085121, at *5 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 19, 2013).

The same is the case where the state court plaintiff and the FDCPA defendant are not identical.[336] The same may be the case where the state court action has one consumer defendant and the federal FDCPA claim is a class action.[337]

A federal FDCPA action and a state collection action are not parallel where one deals with misconduct in the collection action and the other with whether the consumer owes the debt.[338] When both a state and a federal action are dependent on an analysis of state law or a federal action depends on the resolution of an issue in state court, the federal court may stay its FDCPA proceedings under Colorado River.[339] Colorado River may also apply when the consumer raises FDCPA counterclaims in the state case that are essentially the same as the FDCPA claims in the federal case.[340]

Younger is another federal abstention doctrine distinct from Colorado River,[341] whereby a federal court might stay, but not dismiss, a FDCPA damages claim where there is a parallel state proceeding.[342] Only exceptional circumstances justify a federal court's refusal under Younger to decide a case in deference to the state court, and the only circumstance relevant to the FDCPA is a civil proceeding uniquely in furtherance of the state court's ability to perform its judicial functions.[343]

A federal court FDCPA claim for damages certainly does not interfere with a state court's ability to perform its judicial functions in ruling on a collection lawsuit. FDCPA defendants typically raise a Younger defense only where the parallel state proceeding is one to foreclose on the consumer's home. Even then Younger should not apply, as an FDCPA claim for damages does not interfere with the foreclosure process.[344] One possible exception is where a consumer (usually acting pro se) seeks as FDCPA relief an injunction of the state court foreclosure proceeding.[345]

12.6.4 The Rooker-Feldman Doctrine

12.6.4.1 The Doctrine's Supreme Court History

Collectors use, but with declining frequency, the Rooker-Feldman doctrine as a defense in cases where the FDCPA violations relate to the collector's state court collection lawsuit.[346] The doctrine is based on two Supreme Court decisions.

336 Visceglie v. Seterus, Inc., 2017 WL 4863903, at *2–4 (M.D. Fla. May 1, 2017); Visceglie v. Seterus, Inc., 2017 WL 4862230 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 27, 2017) (rejecting Colorado River abstention asserted by foreclosure law firm; firm not party to pending judicial foreclosure proceeding). See also Claflin v. Mandarich Law Grp., L.L.P., 2014 WL 688962 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 21, 2014). But see Norris v. Miller, 926 F. Supp. 776 (N.D. Ill. 1996).

337 Beals v. Bank of Am., 2011 WL 5415174, at *8 (D.N.J. Nov. 4, 2011).

338 Terry v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2020 WL 8172989 (D. Alaska Oct. 16, 2020); Flores v. Forster & Garbus, L.L.P., 2020 WL 5603486 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 17, 2020); McCrobie v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 359 F. Supp. 3d 239 (W.D.N.Y. Feb. 15, 2019) (Colorado River abstention not appropriate where state court proceedings concerned validity of consumer's underlying debts, not whether debt collector violated FDCPA in attempting to collect those debts); Visceglie v. Seterus, Inc., 2017 WL 4863903, at *2–4 (M.D. Fla. May 1, 2017); Jackson v. Safeguard Props., L.L.C., 2017 WL 1209544 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2017); Borg v. Phelan, Hallinan, Diamond & Jones, P.L.L.C., 2016 WL 6582901 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 7, 2016) ("As it is uncertain whether this case and the foreclosure action share substantially the same parties and issues, the Court declined to dismiss or stay the case pursuant to the Colorado River doctrine."); Claflin v. Mandarich Law Grp., L.L.P., 2014 WL 688962 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 21, 2014) (filing collection action in inconvenient venue); Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Serv., LP, 955 F. Supp. 2d 163, 175 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (FDCPA claims relate to misrepresentations in the complaint as to who owns the debt and whether the plaintiff is properly licensed); Owens v. Ronald R. Wolf & Assoc., P.L., 2013 WL 6085121, at *5 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 19, 2013); Beals v. Bank of Am., 2011 WL 5415174, at *8 (D.N.J. Nov. 4, 2011); DeHart v. US Bank, 811 F. Supp. 2d 1038 (D.N.J. 2011) (state foreclosure action, seeking judgment of foreclosure, and federal action, seeking only damages for various debt collection practices in connection with foreclosure, but not seeking to invalidate foreclosure proceeding, were not parallel actions and therefore Colorado River abstention was not required). But see Allison v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 989547 (W.D. Ky. Feb. 20, 2018) (because claims were currently pending in state court foreclosure proceedings, court elected to abstain under Colorado River to avoid "duplicative" and "piecemeal" litigation); Dunn v. Daniel S. Gross & Assoc., 2018 WL 583077 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 29, 2018) (staying federal case under Colorado River abstention pending resolution of state foreclosure proceedings since, inter alia, both cases arose out of—and their respective resolutions turned on—whether modified note was enforceable and whether state's ten-year statute of limitations applied).

339 See Allison v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 989547 (W.D. Ky. Feb. 20, 2018) (abstaining under Colorado River to avoid "duplicative" and "piecemeal" litigation where FDCPA claim was debt not owed and where that issue was currently pending in the state court foreclosure proceedings); Allison v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 989547 (W.D. Ky. Feb. 20, 2018) (Colorado River abstention applied to FDCPA claim about authority to foreclose raised in pending state court foreclosure); Spiegel v. Kim, 2017 WL 11596578 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 2, 2017) (staying proceedings where consumer challenged lawfulness of attorney defendant's request for attorney fees in the pending state court action), related case, 2018 WL 11276808 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 24, 2018) (lifting stay after nearly nine months had passed since stay was issued and state court case was not materially closer to resolution); McCray v. Samuel I. White, P.C., 2017 WL 1196586 (D. Md. Mar. 31, 2017) (applying Younger abstention to FDCPA claim involving authority to foreclose in ongoing state foreclosure proceeding); Williams v. Quantum Servicing Corp., 2013 WL 271669 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 23, 2013) (issues before both courts essentially the same); Norris v. Miller, 926 F. Supp. 776 (N.D. Ill. 1996) (interpretation of Florida statute of limitations is the issue in both cases).

340 Popescu v. JP Morgan Chase & Co., 2013 WL 5535867 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 7, 2013).

341 Younger v. Harris, 401 U.S. 37 (1971).

342 Quackenbush v. Allstate Ins. Co., 517 U.S. 706, 721 (1996). See also Ashley v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Serv., L.L.C., 2017 WL 1135294 (D.S.C. Mar. 27, 2017).

343 New Orleans Pub. Serv., Inc. v. Council of City of New Orleans, 491 U.S. 350 (1989).

344 See Lindsay v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt., Serv., L.L.C., 2017 WL 167832, at *1–4 (D. Md. Jan. 17, 2017); Beals v. Bank of Am., 2011 WL 5415174, at *8 (D.N.J. Nov. 4, 2011); Whittiker v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 605 F. Supp. 2d 914, 922 (N.D. Ohio 2009); Williams v. Edelman, 2005 WL 8154686 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 6, 2005).

345 McCray v. Samuel I. White, P.C., 2017 WL 1196586 (D. Md. Mar. 31, 2017); Wilder v. Hutchens, Senter, Kellam & Pettit, P.A., 2014 WL 4854599, at *3 (W.D.N.C. Sept. 30, 2014).

346 See Appx. E.3.7.7, infra.

Rooker[347] and Feldman,[348] discussing limited federal jurisdiction to review prior state litigation. The doctrine gives effect to 12 U.S.C. § 1257, which generally lodges federal appellate jurisdiction over final state court decisions exclusively in the U.S. Supreme Court and prohibits lower federal courts from reviewing state court judgments.

Rooker-Feldman thus limits federal court jurisdiction for a consumer's FDCPA claim attacking a state court collection judgment against the consumer. Rooker-Feldman limits federal court jurisdiction; it does not apply to an FDCPA claim heard in state court. It also does not apply where the consumer bringing the FDCPA claim was not a party to the state court collection judgment.[349]

A unanimous Supreme Court in 2005, in Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Arabia, Inc., held that the lower courts had extended the doctrine "far beyond the contours" of the original Supreme Court decisions.[350] Instead it ruled that the doctrine is narrow, confined to "cases brought by state-court losers complaining of injuries caused by state-court judgments rendered before the [federal] district court proceedings commenced and inviting [federal] district court review and rejection of those judgments."[351]

Exxon Mobil limits Rooker-Feldman so that a federal district court does not have jurisdiction "to overturn an injurious state-court judgment"[352] or over later federal action "complaining of an injury caused by a state court judgment and seeking review and rejection of that judgment."[353] Pre-Exxon cases finding Rooker-Feldman to be a defense must be re-evaluated in light of Exxon Mobil, though cases denying the defense before the Exxon decision may still be useful.[354]

Since Rooker-Feldman is a jurisdictional doctrine, it often will be raised early in the FDCPA action, but it can also be raised at any time. As will be described in the following subsections, the defense is generally avoided by careful drafting of the FDCPA claims. Usually a case that is subject to Rooker-Feldman is also subject to defenses related to res judicata or collateral estoppel.[355]

Decisions applying the Rooker-Feldman doctrine are often confusing and inconsistent with each other. The doctrine is discussed in the context of foreclosure litigation in National Consumer Law Center, Home Foreclosures § 8.7.5 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library. Its application to claims under the Truth in Lending Act, particularly rescission, is discussed in National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 11.4.2.5 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

12.6.4.2 Doctrine Requires a Final State Judgment for the Collector

Rooker-Feldman limits federal court challenges to state court judgments.[356] Rooker-Feldman does not apply where there is no final state court judgment or where the judgment is in the consumer's favor.[357] It does not apply when the state court action was settled and dismissed with prejudice.[358] Rooker-Feldman does not apply if the state court judgment is vacated prior to the filing of the FDCPA action.[359]

The defense is not applicable where the federal action is filed prior to entry of the state judgment.[360] The doctrine does not displace concurrent state and federal court jurisdiction. A federal court might abstain or stay its proceeding on the basis of comity,[361] and claim preclusion may affect the federal case if a state court judgment is the first to be entered.[362]

12.6.4.3 FDCPA Claims Vulnerable to Rooker-Feldman

The Rooker-Feldman defense may apply where the consumer's FDCPA claim is poorly drafted as a direct attack on the state court judgment. An example might be where a state court judgment rules that the collector is the debt's owner, and the FDCPA claim is that the collector does not own the debt.[363] As described in § 12.6.4.4, infra, though, the defense should not apply where the FDCPA claim is that the collector submitted a false affidavit in the state court proceeding indicating that it owned the debt, even if the state judgment is based upon the collector owning the debt.

347 Rooker v. Fid. Tr. Co., 263 U.S. 413, 44 S. Ct. 149, 68 L. Ed. 362 (1923).

348 Dist. of Columbia Ct. of Appeals v. Feldman, 460 U.S. 462, 103 S. Ct. 1303, 75 L. Ed. 2d 206 (1983).

349 See Lance v. Dennis, 546 U.S. 459, 126 S. Ct. 1198, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1059 (2006).

350 Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Arabia, Inc., 544 U.S. 280, 125 S. Ct. 1517, 161 L. Ed. 2d 454 (2005).

351 544 U.S. at 284. Accord Lance v. Dennis, 546 U.S. 459, 126 S. Ct. 1198, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1059 (2006).

352 Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Arabia, Inc., 544 U.S. 280, 125 S. Ct. 1517, 161 L. Ed. 2d 454 (2005).

353 Id.

354 See § 12.6.4.4, infra.

355 See § 12.6.2, supra.

356 See VanderKodde v. Mary Jane M. Elliott, P.C., 951 F.3d 397 (6th Cir. 2020) (in Michigan, writ of garnishment is not judgment and Rooker-Feldman does not apply to "ministerial" actions by court clerks); Van Hoven v. Buckles & Buckles, P.L.C., 947 F.3d 889 (6th Cir. 2020) (same).

357 See Brake v. Slochowsky & Slochowsky, L.L.P., 504 F. Supp. 3d 103 (E.D.N.Y. 2020); Foster v. Velocity Invs., L.L.C., 2007 WL 2461665 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 24, 2007); Blevins v. Hudson & Keyse, Inc., 395 F. Supp. 2d 655 (S.D. Ohio 2004).

358 Johnson v. Riddle, 305 F.3d 1107 (10th Cir. 2002).

359 See Mains v. Citibank, 852 F.3d 669 (7th Cir. 2017); Rendon v. HBLC, Inc., 2017 WL 7275423 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 25, 2017); Rubio v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 13650046 (N.D. Cal. July 21, 2015); Hopkins v. Capital One Bank, 2015 WL 327631 (W.D. Wis. Jan. 26, 2015).

360 Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Arabia, Inc., 544 U.S. 280, 125 S. Ct. 1517, 161 L. Ed. 2d 454 (2005). See also Adams v. Albertelli, 2016 WL 931103 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 11, 2016); Kirk v. Gobel, 622 F. Supp. 2d 1039 (E.D. Wash. 2009); Johnson v. CGR Serv., Inc., 2005 WL 991770 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 7, 2005).

361 See § 12.6.3, supra.

362 Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Arabia, Inc., 544 U.S. 280, 125 S. Ct. 1517, 161 L. Ed. 2d 454 (2005). See also Todd v. U.S. Bank, 685 Fed. Appx. 103 (3d Cir. 2017).

363 See Mains v. Citibank, 852 F.3d 669 (7th Cir. 2017). See also Andress v. Daubert Law Firm, L.L.C., 667 Fed. Appx. 154 (7th Cir. 2016).

ooker-Feldman defense might apply to a the debt is not owed, where the court judgdebt is owed,[364] or where the FDCPA claim is were not owed where the court awarded e defense may also apply where the FDCPA llector is seeking to collect on an improper that amount is authorized by the state court these cases, it is better to allege deceptive n the state court litigation relating to these im seeking to void or enjoin enforcement of nent is likely to run afoul of the defense.[367]

the case where the FDCPA remedy sought
: consumer any amount the consumer pays ate court judgment.[368] An FDCPA claim that a challenge to a state court foreclosure order ct to the doctrine.[369] Again, it is best instead independent of the judgment and seeking a on the judgment amount.

nsone Law, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4089349 (E.D. Mo. Aug. 2,
v. Cach L.L.C., 992 F. Supp. 2d 987 (C.D. Cal. 2014), enriques, 2013 WL 1704937 (E.D. Cal. Apr. 19, 2013).
ño v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4682052 (E.D.
017).

Bank, 685 Fed. Appx. 103 (3d Cir. 2017) (default judgin state court foreclosures precluded debt collection postjudgment attorney fees allowed by judgments);
l-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 548 F.3d 600, 606, 607 (7th Cir.

ank, 852 F.3d 669 (7th Cir. 2017); Minton v. Cach, L.L.C.,
183 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 25, 2014). See also Mason v. Midland

12.6.4.4 Defense Inapplicable Where Conduct Is Independent of State Court Judgment

The Rooker-Feldman doctrine is the product of a statute, 12 U.S.C. § 1257, which limits federal jurisdiction to review final state court decisions. It is not a constitutional doctrine. The Supreme Court has stated: "Congress, if so minded, may explicitly empower district courts to oversee certain state court judgments."[370]

Congress clearly intended the FDCPA to provide federal court jurisdiction, even where the subject of the claim relates to the conduct of state court litigation. This was affirmed by the Supreme Court in Heintz v. Jenkins.[371] A number of FDCPA provisions also apply to state court collection actions, such as the prohibition against filing collection suits in distant forums[372] or using a deceptive summons.[373] Other provisions exempt certain aspects of the collection litigation,[374] an unnecessary provision if the Act did not apply to collection litigation conduct.

Rooker-Feldman may apply where an FDCPA claim directly attacks the state court judgment. It does not apply if the FDCPA claim is not a challenge to that judgment, but is independent of the judgment, even if the challenged conduct has a relationship to the judgment.

Rooker-Feldman does not apply to the collector's collection actions that occur prior to[375] or even during the state court collection litigation, but that do not challenge the judgment itself.[376] The doctrine does not bar an FDCPA claim that the collector illegally sought excessive fees in a collection suit where the judgment did not award the collector the excessive fees.[377]

Where the consumer's FDCPA claim repeats claims that were asserted in a counterclaim that the state court judge dismissed as non-germane to the collection action, Rooker-Feldman should not apply even if the state court entered judgment on the debt against the consumer.[378] Rooker-Feldman may apply to a FDCPA claim that the judgment itself damaged the consumer's credit rating, but not to an independent claim that the collector damaged the consumer's credit rating by reporting the debt and failing to retract the report upon verifying that the debt had been satisfied.[379]

An FDCPA claim that the collector failed to verify the debt when requested is consistent with a state court judgment that the consumer owes the debt.[380] An FDCPA challenge to the service of process in the state court does not challenge the state court judgment and is grounds for a separate federal challenge.[381] The same is the case with an FDCPA challenge to the venue in which the collector brought the state court action.[382]

Rooker-Feldman does not apply where the FDCPA challenge is not to the substance of the judgment, but to the collector's conduct in seeking that judgment.[383] A federal court FDCPA challenge to deception in the collector's complaint or affidavits is not foreclosed, since that is independent of a challenge to the judgment itself.[384] The doctrine also does not apply where the FDCPA claim is that the collector is unlicensed, even if the unlicensed collector obtained a court judgment.[385] The doctrine does not apply where the consumer does not challenge a foreclosure judgment, but only the collector's failure to follow FDCPA disclosure requirements.[386]

Challenging the practice of suing on a time-barred debt is not a direct attack on the judgment.[387] Nor is a claim based on the amount of interest the collector sought, not the amount awarded in the judgment, even where a default judgment resulted in the two being the same.[388] The doctrine does not apply to a collector attorney's conduct in obtaining a settlement from the consumer—the challenge is to deceptive conduct and not to the judgment.[389]

A claim based upon a debt collector's conduct after the judgment is also not an attack on the judgment.[390] Neither is a challenge to determine whether the consumer's valid debt was forgiven by the creditor at some point following the state court judgment.[391] An FDCPA claim concerning dunning letters or other communications aimed at collecting on a judgment

378 Destefano v. Udren Law Offices, P.C., 2017 WL 2812886, at *7 (D.N.J. June 29, 2017).

379 McCammon v. Bibler, Newman & Reynolds, P.A., 515 F. Supp. 2d 1220 (D. Kan. 2007).

380 See, e.g., Ferrer v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5508528 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 16, 2017). See also George v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2017 WL 3316065 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 2, 2017) (rejecting application of Rooker-Feldman, so that validation notice claim not precluded).

381 Wood v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 698 Fed. Appx. 260, 263 (6th Cir. 2017); Keller v. Hosp. of Morristown, 2016 WL 6956621 (E.D. Tenn. Nov. 28, 2016); Engelen v. Erin Capital Mgmt., 2011 WL 3844587 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 30, 2011); Blaxill v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 2011 WL 1299350 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 4, 2011).

382 Gibson v. Grupo de Ariel, L.L.C., 2006 WL 42369, at *2 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 9, 2006).

383 See, e.g., Mayotte v. U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n for Structured Asset Inv. Loan Tr. Mortg. Pass-Through Certificates, Series 2006-4, 880 F.3d 1169, 1176 (10th Cir. 2018); Elyazidi v. SunTrust Bank, 780 F.3d 227, 233 (4th Cir. 2015) (Rooker-Feldman doctrine does not bar claim that collection firm misrepresented in collection action complaint that consumer owed attorney fees that had not yet been incurred, even though court ultimately awarded fees in that amount after they had been incurred); Brake v. Slochowsky & Slochowsky, L.L.P., 504 F. Supp. 3d 103 (E.D.N.Y. 2020); Cutts v. Richland Holdings, Inc., 2018 WL 1073135 (D. Nev. Feb. 27, 2018), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 773 Fed. Appx. 954 (9th Cir. 2019) (reversing District Court's conclusion that claim preclusion bars abuse of process claim but affirming ruling that it bars misrepresentation and civil conspiracy claims); Geraldo v. Richland Holdings, Inc., 2017 WL 3174918 (D. Nev. July 26, 2017); Haney v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 2017 WL 1404103 (D. Colo. Mar. 9, 2017); Sykes v. Mel S. Harris & Assoc., 780 F.3d 70, 94–95 (2d Cir. 2015); Gabriele v. Am. Home Mortg. Serv., Inc., 503 Fed. Appx. 89 (2d Cir. 2012); In re FDCPA Cognate Cases, 2016 WL 1273349 (W.D. Mich. Mar. 28, 2016); Mueller v. Barton, (E.D. Mo. Sept. 12, 2014); Woltring v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2014 WL 2708581 (E.D. Wis. June 16, 2014); McDermott v. Barton, 2014 WL 6704544, at *4 (S.D. Ill. Nov. 26, 2014); Adeniji v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2014 WL 117105 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 13, 2014); Gonzalez v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 26283 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 2, 2014); Eager v. Credit Bur. Collection Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 5719224, at *2 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 18, 2013); Montalbano v. Nat'l Arbitration Forum, L.L.C., 2012 WL 3233595 (D. Md. Aug. 3, 2012) (RICO and FDCPA claims that defendants were involved in a fraudulent arbitration enterprise are not barred by state court judgment confirming arbitration award where plaintiff does not seek to overturn that judgment); Dexter v. Tran, 654 F. Supp. 2d 1253, 1260 (E.D. Wash. 2009); Whittiker v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr, Co., 605 F. Supp. 2d 914, 922 (N.D. Ohio 2009); McCammon v. Bibler, Newman & Reynolds, P.A., 493 F. Supp. 2d 1166, 1171 (D. Kan. 2007); Anderson v. Gamache & Myers, P.C., 2007 WL 1577610, at *6 (E.D. Mo. May 31, 2007); Kelly v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 2007 WL 2381536 (D. Colo. Aug. 17, 2007); Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783, 798 (S.D. Ohio 2006).

384 Janson v. Katharyn B. Davis, L.L.C., 806 F.3d 435 (8th Cir. 2015); Lautman v. 2800 Coyle Street Owners Corp., 2014 WL 4843947, at *6–7 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 26, 2014); Harrington v. DH Capital Mgmt., Inc., 2014 WL 5776203 (W.D. Ky. Nov. 5, 2014); Hageman v. Barton, 2014 WL 5320265 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 17, 2014); Ness v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 933 F. Supp. 2d 1156, 1162 (D. Minn. 2013); Hammond v. Citibank, 2011 WL 4484416 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 27, 2011); Jenkins v. Gen. Collection Co., 538 F. Supp. 2d 1165, 1172 (D. Neb. 2008); Cano v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 2013 WL 3930087 (E.D. La. July 29, 2013); Whittiker v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 605 F. Supp. 2d 914 (N.D. Ohio Mar. 17, 2009).

385 Collins v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 991 F. Supp. 2d 1195 (S.D. Fla. 2013); Bradshaw v. Hilco Receivables, L.L.C., 765 F. Supp. 2d 719 (D. Md. 2011).

386 Johnson-Gellineau v. Steine & Assoc., 2018 WL 1605574 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 29, 2018).

387 Naranjo v. Universal Sur. of Am., 679 F. Supp. 2d 787, 794 (S.D. Tex. 2010); Jenkins v. Gen. Collection Co., 538 F. Supp. 2d 1165, 1172 (D. Neb. 2008); Stolicker v. Muller, Muller, Richmond, Harms, Myers, & Sgroi, P.C., 387 F. Supp. 2d 752, 755 (W.D. Mich. 2005). See also Bond v. U.S. Bank, 2010 WL 1265852, at *4 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 29, 2010).

388 Martinez v. CACH, L.L.C., 2011 WL 2560251, at *3 (S.D. Cal. June 27, 2011).

389 Cameron v. LR Credit 22, L.L.C., 998 F. Supp. 2d 293, 297 (S.D.N.Y. 2014); Turner v. Nesbit, 2014 WL 6908541 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 8, 2014). See also In re FDCPA Cognate Cases, 2016 WL 1273349 (W.D. Mich. Mar. 28, 2016); Nikkel v. Wakefield & Assoc., Inc., 2011 WL 4479109 (D. Colo. Sept. 26, 2011).

390 See, e.g., Mueller v. Barton, (E.D. Mo. Sept. 12, 2014). See also Ahmed v. West Coast Servicing Inc., ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2021 WL 2072192 (E.D. Pa. May 24, 2021); Smith v. Kramer & Frank, P.C., 2009 WL 4725285, at *3 (E.D. Mo. Dec. 2, 2009).

391 Bampoky v. Daubert Law Firm, L.L.C., 2021 WL 1087040 (E.D. Wis. Mar. 22, 2021).

ge the judgment.[392] A garnishment order is re the FDCPA claim relates to the collector's to the consumer of the garnishment,[393] or the per service of the garnishment order on a ldition of allegedly improper fees to the total garnished.[395]

an is not a defense to a claim based upon isrepresentations in its affidavits seeking to ment order—the claim does not challenge the presentations in obtaining the order.[396] But mer challenges the substance of the judgment ament affidavit as false, and the court rules in order that the affidavit is accurate, the con- able to bring the same challenge in a federal tion.[397]

reign Immunity and Government ncies

does not apply to the conduct of federal, state, ment employees.[398] The explicit language of 6)(C) excludes from the definition of debt col- d employees of government entities, and not entities themselves.[399] However, the govern- e likely to claim sovereign immunity.

that sovereign immunity applies to the ducation and by extension other federal agen- cannot be liable under the Act. There is no Congress intended to abrogate that immunity e FDCPA.[400] A federal agency suing the con- waive its sovereign immunity when the con- s to sue the agency under the FDCPA.[401]

The Eleventh Amendment protects states from being sued in federal court, unless abrogated by Congress for a particular statute or waived by the state. Congress did not abrogate that immunity when it enacted the FDCPA.[402] The Amendment also protects arms of the state, and state student loan guaranty agencies are generally found to be arms of the state.[403] As a result states can only be sued under the FDCPA in the courts of that state. If a state is sued in state court and removes the case to federal court, it has waived its Eleventh Amendment protection.[404] If sued in the courts of the state, the extent of the state's sovereign immunity and whether that immunity has been waived will be a matter of state law.[405]

12.6.6 Litigation and Witness Immunity

12.6.6.1 Generally

Litigation immunity is generally not a FDCPA defense to the actions of collectors or their attorneys in a state court collection action.[406] Witness immunity based on Noerr-Pennington doctrine (the right to petition legislatures and the courts under the First Amendment) is generally not a defense that protects from FDCPA liability witnesses in state court collection litigation.

12.6.6.2 Litigation Immunity and Litigation Privilege

Courts uniformly reject litigation immunity as a defense to collector or collection attorney FDCPA liability for their conduct in their state court collection litigation.[407] Some courts 402 Kozaczek v. New York Higher Educ. Serv. Corp., 503 Fed. Appx. 60 (2d Cir. 2012); Codar, Inc. v. State of Arizona, 168 F.3d 498 (9th Cir. 1999); Abellard v. Oklahoma Student Loan Auth., 2018 WL 654462 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 29, 2018); Sorrell v. Illinois Student Assistance Comm'n, 214 F.

'ivilege protects collection litigation der state debt collection statutes,[408] f a defamation claim.[409] Such cases, ne FDCPA.

in Heintz v. Jenkins ruled that the lection activities of lawyers in the z does not discuss litigation immunity, implicit in this holding is that collection attorneys are not protected by the litigation privilege.[411] Moreover, a number of FDCPA provisions prohibit certain litigation activities, such as limiting collection suits to convenient forums[412] and prohibiting collection lawyer misrepresentations about legal process and the need to file a written answer to avoid default judgment.[413] Another FDCPA provision exempts from liability certain litigation conduct.[414] None of these provisions would make sense if litigation immunity applied to FDCPA claims.

Nor does the constitutional right to petition the government, as enunciated in the Noerr-Pennington doctrine[415] provide a defense to an FDCPA claim for litigation misconduct. While the collector may have the right to use the courts, it does not have the right to use them in a deceptive or unlawful way.[416] For example, "[n]o debt collector has a legitimate interest in pursuing collection litigation without notifying debtors, or in seeking to default incompetent debtors without notice to their lawyers or guardians."[417] And of course the litigation immunity defense does not apply to conduct not involving litigation.[418] doval v. Law Office of John Bouzane, 2016 WL 5, 2016); Rubio v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2015 Cal. July 21, 2015); Parker v. CitiMortg., Inc., .D. Fla. July 10, 2014); Gates v. MCT Grp., Inc., .D. Cal. Feb. 18, 2014), aff'd on other grounds, 9th Cir. 2017); Lewis v. Marinosci Law Grp., 3 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 29, 2013); Eager v. Credit Bur. 2013 WL 5719224 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 18, 2013); Peaks Fin. Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 485763 (S.D. rr v. Kimball, Tirey & St. John L.L.P., 2012 WL Aug. 14, 2012); Kline v. Mortg. Elec. Sec. Sys., S.D. Ohio 2009); Eckert v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., (E.D. Mo. 2009); Gallagher v. Gurstel, Staloch & Supp. 2d 795 (D. Minn. 2009); Eads v. Wolpoff , 538 F. Supp. 2d 981 (W.D. Tex. 2008); Jenkins 'o., 538 F. Supp. 2d 1165 (D. Neb. 2008); N. Star s, L.L.C. v. Krig, 2008 WL 346021 (M.D. Fla. an v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich, N.D. Ohio June 20, 2007), aff'd on other grounds, r. 2008), rev'd on other grounds, 559 U.S. 573, 130 d. 2d 519 (2010); Ison v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, 6 (S.D. Ohio 2007); Nutter v. Messerli & Kramer, 2d 1219 (D. Minn. 2007); Oei v. N. Star Capital; 'ed. Bank, 2006 WL 4495659 (E.D. Ark. Feb. 2, 'at Seneca Fin. Corp., 2005 WL 2372851 (S.D. Ohio ivarrubias v. Zee Law Grp., 2017 WL 6570281 (Cal. 2017); Deutsche Bank v. Lichtenfels, 48 Conn. L. uper. Ct. 2009); Appx. E.3.6.6, infra. See also Akar g. Ass'n, 2011 WL 6288055 (D. Mass. Dec. 1, 2011); ate Mgmt. Serv. L.L.C., 2011 WL 5419679 (D.N.H.

Appeals for the Seventh Circuit held that it does. We agree with the Seventh Circuit and we affirm its judgment."). See § 4.3.1, supra.

411 Hartman v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 569 F.3d 606, 615–617 (6th Cir. 2009).

412 15 U.S.C. § 1692*i*.

413 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(15).

414 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(D).

415 This doctrine was first announced in United Mine Workers of Am. v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657, 85 S. Ct. 1585, 14 L. Ed. 2d 626 (1965), Eastern R.R. Presidents Conference v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc., 365 U.S. 127, 81 S. Ct. 523, 5 L. Ed. 2d 464 (1961). It was extended to the right to petition in the courts in California Motor Transp. Co. v. Trucking Unlimited, 404 U.S. 508, 92 S. Ct. 609, 30 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1972).

416 Hartman v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 569 F.3d 606, 615–617 (6th Cir.

12.6.6.3 Witness Immunity

Witness immunity will rarely apply to an FDCPA action. The defense does not apply at all when used to protect actions by the collection attorney, when not acting as a witness. It may not even apply to a witness who is an employee of the collector.[419] It does not apply to an affidavit attached to the complaint[420] or to an affidavit to institute a garnishment.[421]

It does not apply at all to FDCPA claims for litigation conduct unrelated to witness testimony even if an employee of the collector testifies in the collection action.[422] Nor does it apply to non-litigation conduct seeking to collect on a judgment.[423] Other courts reject general application of the witness immunity defense to the FDCPA as inconsistent with the FDCPA and the Supreme Court's ruling in Heintz.[424]

12.7 Other Defenses

12.7.1 Overview

Courts generally refuse to imply new defenses under the FDCPA, but these attempts should be taken seriously, particularly before some courts. Pointing out the FDCPA's purposes and requirements often will be useful in countering these novel approaches. This section examines a number of such defenses. Other defense strategies are listed at § 12.1, supra, with references to other chapters where they are examined.

12.7.2 Technical, De Minimis, or Harmless Violations

Defendants may claim that a violation is only technical or de minimis, and on rare occasion a court may prove receptive.[425] To overcome this argument, point out the care that Congress took in crafting each FDCPA protection,[426] explain the violation is not de minimis because of the provision's purposes,[427] argue that the statute provides strict liability and courts must enforce the FDCPA's plain language,[428] and argue that the courts should not substitute their judgment for that of Congress.[429]

Whether a consumer's harm from a FDCPA violation is sufficient to create a case or controversy to allow for a federal court's Article III standing to hear a FDCPA case is examined in some detail at § 11.10, supra. If there is standing for the case, then size of the injury is not a defense under the FDCPA. Statutory damages can be awarded even when no actual damages are proven. This, instead, goes to the amount of damages rather than liability.[430]

12.7.3 Defendant's Good Faith or Lack of Intent

That the debt collector acted in good faith is no defense to an FDCPA violation.[431] Following a state law that conflicts

419 Foster v. Velocity Invs., L.L.C., 2007 WL 2461665 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 24, 2007).

420 Hartman v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 569 F.3d 606, 615–617 (6th Cir. 2009); Gionis v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, 238 Fed. Appx. 24 (6th Cir. 2007); Foster v. Velocity Invs., L.L.C., 2007 WL 2461665 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 24, 2007). See also Ison v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, 2007 WL 2769674 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 18, 2007); Blevins v. Hudson & Keyse, Inc., 395 F. Supp. 2d 662 (S.D. Ohio 2004). But see Reynolds v. Persolve, L.L.C., 2008 WL 379695 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 11, 2008) (finding witness immunity defense as alternative ground for dismissal where consumer did not respond to motion to dismiss); Cox v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 2007 WL 772937 (E.D. Mo. Mar. 9, 2007) (same); Etapa v. Asset Acceptance Corp., 373 F. Supp. 2d 687 (E.D. Ky. 2004); Beck v. Codilis & Stawiarski, P.A., 2000 WL 34490402 (N.D. Fla. Dec. 26, 2000).

421 Todd v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., L.P.A., 434 F.3d 432 (6th Cir. 2006); Jordan v. Thomas & Thomas, 2007 WL 2838474 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 26, 2007).

422 Clark v. Bonded Adjustment Co., 176 F. Supp. 2d 1062 (E.D. Wash. 2001).

423 Schuh v. Druckman & Sinel, L.L.P., 602 F. Supp. 2d 454 (S.D.N.Y. 2009).

424 See Hartman v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 569 F.3d 606, 615–617 (6th Cir. 2009); Kelly v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 443 F. Supp. 2d 954 (S.D. Ohio 2005), appeal dismissed, 447 F.3d 944 (6th Cir. 2006); Hartman v. Asset Acceptance Corp., 467 F. Supp. 2d 769 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 29, 2004). See also Stolicker v. Muller, Muller, Richmond, Harms, Myers, and Sgro, P.C., 2005 WL 2180481 at note 6 (W.D. Mich. Sept. 9, 2005).

425 See Volden v. Innovative Fin. Sys., Inc., 440 F.3d 947 (8th Cir. 2006) (omission of creditor's name found too technical to be a violation where consumer knew who the creditor was); Parks v. Chlan, 1996 WL 243473 (D. Md. May 3, 1996) (due to a clerical error, dunning letter for a paid hospital bill indicated an amount due of $0.00; collector acknowledged the error and advised the consumer to "tear up the letter"; summary judgment entered for collector on the dubious basis of a bona fide error defense).

426 See § 3.4.2, supra.

427 See §§ 3.1, 3.4.2, supra. See also Ghanta v. Immediate Credit Recovery, Inc., 2017 WL 1423597, at *8 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 18, 2017) (collection agency's "failure to provide sufficient debt verification and failure to send it through the statutorily prescribed means is not a de minimis violation").

428 See Heintz v. Jenkins, 514 U.S. 291, 115 S. Ct. 1489, 131 L. Ed. 2d 395 (1995); Kimble v. W. Ray Jamieson, P.C., 2018 WL 814225, at *7 (W.D. Tenn. Feb. 9, 2018) ("[T]he FDCPA must be enforced as written, even if the violation is innocent or de minimis."). See also Racick v. Dominion Law Assoc., 270 F.R.D 228 (E.D.N.C. 2010) (consumer argued that statute provides for strict liability).

429 See Heintz v. Jenkins, 514 U.S. 291, 115 S. Ct. 1489, 131 L. Ed. 2d 395 (1995); § 3.4.1, supra.

430 See Huff v. Dobbins, Fraker, Tennant, Joy & Perlstein, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 12055 (7th Cir. June 2, 1999) (court was bound to follow plain language of FDCPA); Ditty v. Check Rite, Ltd., 182 F.R.D. 639, 644 (D. Utah 1998) (does not matter whether or not plaintiff read letter or paid unlawful fee; "it is the sending of the illegal letter that creates liability"); Crawford v. Equifax Payment Serv., Inc., 1998 WL 704050 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 30, 1998) ("defense" that the consumer suffered no actual damages was stricken, as none required); Gasser v. Allen County Claims & Adjustments, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20361 (N.D. Ohio Nov. 2, 1983) (collector's alleged oral representations to consumer could not cure violations in dunning letter). Cf. Johnson v. Eaton, 80 F.3d 148 (5th Cir. 1996) (jury found that collection lawyer's assistant had violated FDCPA, but that consumer had sustained no actual or statutory damages as a result of that violation; award of attorney fees to consumer for assistant's violation was improper; consumer awarded $500 statutory damages against lawyer; fee award against lawyer was proper).

431 See Rahman v. San Diego Accounts Serv., 2017 WL 1387206 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 18, 2017). See also Lewis v. Hanks, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21807, at *3 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 26, 1991).

with an FDCPA requirement is no defense to the FDCPA violation.[432] Nor is a collector's correction of a violation a valid defense.[433] It is no defense that the FDCPA violation was unintentional.[434] The FDCPA is a strict liability statute.[435] The FDCPA's only allowed FDCPA defense in this area is if the collector has complied with the requirement of the statutory bona fide error defense.[436]

12.7.4 Consumer's Culpability

Collectors argue unsuccessfully that the consumer is unworthy of protection (and presumably a suitable target for the collector's abuse) because of some perceived or actual misdeed committed by the consumer.[437]

For example, consumers are not held to have assumed the risk that third parties would overhear the collector's voice mail.[438]

Any claim the collector or creditor has against the consumer should be brought as an independent claim,[439] and is not a defense to an FDCPA claim.

One defense strategy that bears highlighting is for the debt collector to go on the offensive and sue the consumer in the debt collector's distant home state alleging that the consumer has created long arm jurisdiction in that state by mailing to the debt collector a demand letter for consumer protection claims. This claim of long arm jurisdiction has been rejected.[440] The tactic is costly enough for consumers that many consumer attorneys avoid sending demand letters to distant debt collectors, unless they know the recipient does not engage in this practice.[441]

While the FDCPA focuses on misconduct by debt collectors,[442] not the consumer's conduct, some judges and juries will react negatively to consumers who appear to be unlawfully gaming the financial and legal systems.[443] Care should be taken to probe the client's story to avoid embarrassment, and potential sanctions, if the client fabricated some part of the FDCPA claim[444] or concealed their own misbehavior in dealing with the creditor or debt collector.[445]

12.7.5 Consumer's Waiver of FDCPA Protection

That the consumer has paid on a debt is not a defense to an FDCPA claim. The voluntary payment doctrine is not a defense to an FDCPA claim.[446]

---

432 See Fisher v. Bernhardt and Strawser, P.A., 2013 WL 3990744 (W.D.N.C. Aug. 2, 2013) (state rules of civil procedure requiring collector to confer directly with the pro se consumer defendant in state court even after the consumer retained an attorney not a defense).

433 See Holton v. Huff, 2012 WL 1354024 (M.D. Pa. Apr. 16, 2012); Montgomery v. Donnett, 2006 WL 293727 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 7, 2006).

434 See Jenkins v. Heintz, 124 F.3d 824 (7th Cir. 1997). See also Heritage Pac. Fin., L.L.C. v. Monroy, 156 Cal. Rptr. 3d 26 (Cal Ct. App. 2013) (debt collector's ignorance of the law of assignments did not provide it with an affirmative defense to FDCPA).

435 See § 3.2.4, supra. See also Engelen v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 544 Fed. Appx. 707 (9th Cir. 2013); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenberg & Lauinger, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011); Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Serv., Inc., 460 F.3d 1162, 1177 (9th Cir. 2006); Turner v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 330 F.3d 991 (7th Cir. 2003).

436 See § 12.2, supra.

437 See § 3.2.6, supra; Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Check Investors, Inc., 502 F.3d 159 (3d Cir. 2007) (fraudulent consumers still covered by FDCPA's protections); Goss v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2020 WL 2219048 (N.D. Ill. May 7, 2020) (unclean hands not a defense in an FDCPA action); Johnson v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2017 WL 3705838 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 28, 2017) (no defense that collection violations caused by consumer failing to pay the debt); Beckles v. Aldridge Connors, L.L.P., 2013 WL 5355481 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 27, 2013) (consumer's failure to make payments did not preclude FDCPA claim); Sewell v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 2011 WL 32209 (E.D. Tenn. Jan. 5, 2011) (no comparative fault defense); Mejia v. Marauder Corp., 2007 WL 806486 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 15, 2007) (no fraud or unclean hands exception to FDCPA even if consumer never intended to repay loan); Irwin v. Mascott, 96 F. Supp. 2d 968 (N.D. Cal. 1999) (consumer's alleged fraudulent intent was irrelevant); Ditty v. Check Rite, Ltd., 182 F.R.D. 639 (D. Utah 1998) (FDCPA protects even dishonest check-writers). See also Appx. E.3.6.2, infra.

438 See Branco v. Credit Collection Serv. Inc., 2011 WL 3684503 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2011).

439 See, e.g., Buser v. Asset Recovery Grp., Inc., 2014 WL 693493 (D. Or. Feb. 21, 2014) (collection agency's claim for fraud against FDCPA plaintiff's roommate, who answered debt collector's call to plaintiff and pretended to be plaintiff).

440 See Riddle & Assoc. v. Morcos, 2007 WL 2061054 (D. Utah July 12, 2007) (dismissing Utah SLAPP suit on due process grounds where the only Utah contacts by debtor's attorney were two letters mailed to the debt collector).

441 See § 2.5.7.6, supra.

442 See Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Check Investors, Inc., 502 F.3d 159, 170–171 (3d Cir. 2007).

443 See, e.g., Terran v. Kaplan, 109 F.3d 1428 (9th Cir. 1997) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 sanctions upheld when FDCPA claims were made without adequate investigation). See also Hemmingsen v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 674 F.3d 814 (8th Cir. 2012).

444 See, e.g., Goodson v. Designed Receivable Solutions, Inc., 2016 WL 5799321 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 21, 2016) (an unusual, but cautionary case: granting summary judgment for collection agency and dismissing § 1692d claim based on evidence of two recorded telephone calls several days apart, where transcripts revealed short, polite conversations in which representative determined that debt had recently been paid to medical provider); Camacho v. Northland Group, Inc., 2014 WL 12586233 (D. Mass. Sept. 17, 2014) (granting summary judgment for collection agency on claims that it made threatening telephone calls where its "extensive and undisputed documentary evidence of its phone records showing all calls placed to plaintiff, together with certified transcripts of each . . . reflect that no such threats took place"); Wolfe v. GC Services, L.P., 2009 WL 230637 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 30, 2009) (consumer's call log in no small part a fabrication made in bad faith). See also § 2.2.5, supra.

445 See Scroggin v. Credit Bur., Inc., 973 F. Supp. 2d 961 (E.D. Ark. 2013) (where consumer bragged online that he had set up debt collector for its FDCPA violations and publicly reviled debt collector and its counsel during litigation, court awarded debt collector over $30,000 in attorney fees and jury refused to award damages), aff'd, 576 Fed. Appx. 632 (8th Cir. 2014). See also Huebner v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 85 F. Supp. 3d 672 (E.D.N.Y. 2015) (consumer called debt collector and tried to get it to commit an FDCPA violation).

446 See Hamid v. Stock & Grimes, L.L.P., 876 F. Supp. 2d 500 (E.D. Pa. 2012); Gonzalez v. Codilis & Assoc., P.C., 2004 WL 719264 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2004); Scott v. Fairbanks Capital Corp., 284 F. Supp. 2d 880 (S.D. Ohio 2003).

A release signed in connection with a suit to collect a debt does not release the collector of liability for a subsequent FDCPA claim, unless the waiver clearly states that it does.[447] But the consumer's release in a prior FDCPA suit may be construed to preclude a second FDCPA suit against the same debt collector for misconduct occurring prior to the filing of the first suit.[448]

12.7.6 Preconditions to FDCPA Lawsuit

The consumer requesting the collector to verify a debt is not a precondition to the consumer bringing an FDCPA suit against the collector. Nothing in the FDCPA requires consumers to use the section 1692g debt verification procedure, and section 1692g(c) explicitly prohibits construing the failure of the consumer to seek verification as an admission of liability.[449]

Courts also reject the defense that mortgage provisions requiring the consumer to provide notice before filing suit apply to the consumer's FDCPA action.[450] Nor is there any general requirement that a consumer contact the debt collector before filing suit.[451]

12.8 Collection Counterclaims to Consumer's FDCPA Claim

Where a consumer brings a federal court FDCPA action against a debt buyer (or a creditor covered by the FDCPA), the defendant may seek supplemental jurisdiction to bring a state law counterclaim on the underlying debt. Collection agency defendants sometimes can seek this as well on behalf of the creditor, but in many states this practice is viewed as the unauthorized practice of law[452] or is prohibited by a debt collection statute.

While federal courts have discretion to hear state law counterclaims, they usually do not hear state law counterclaims on the underlying debt to the consumer's FDCPA claim,[453] though they will do so occasionally.[454] Courts are particularly likely to deny supplemental jurisdiction where the collection counterclaims do not involve the same controversy, the same evidence, or the same federal law and policy. Such a counterclaim also impedes the Congressional intent in enacting the FDCPA and chills the raising of FDCPA claims.[455]

If the collector does file a counterclaim, the consumer must file a motion to dismiss or an answer or the counterclaim may be granted.[456]

FDCPA actions brought in state courts do not involve federal jurisdiction issues, and state procedural law governs what claims a party may join.

12.9 Creditor Garnishment of Consumer's FDCPA Claim or Recovery

Consider a situation where a creditor obtains a default or other judgment against a consumer, and the consumer then successfully sues the creditor's collection agency or attorney under the FDCPA. A creative creditor may seek to serve a garnishment order on its own collection agency or attorney

447 See Estate of Torsiello ex rel. Torsiello v. McGovern Legal Serv., L.L.C., 2014 WL 4758024 (D.N.J. Sept. 24, 2014); Hines v. G. Reynolds Sims & Assoc., P.C., 2013 WL 1774938 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 25, 2013).

448 Palmer v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 2017 WL 550054 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 9, 2017).

449 See § 9.6, supra. See also Eide v. Colltech, Inc., 987 F. Supp. 2d 951 (D. Minn. 2013).

450 See Foster v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5151354, at *3 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 3, 2017); Belcher v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 7243100, at *4 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 15, 2016); Colon v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2015 WL 7422598, at *2 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 17, 2015).

451 See Branco v. Credit Collection Serv. Inc., 2011 WL 3684503 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2011).

452 See §§ 16.5.1, 16.5.2, 16.5.3, infra (discussion of unauthorized practice laws). See also Kolker v. Sanchez, 1991 U.S. Dist. 20783 (D.N.M. 1991) (attorney filing suit in name of collection agency rather than true creditor engaged in the unauthorized practice of law in violation of § 1692e); Kolker v. Duke City Collection Agency, 750 F. Supp. 468 (D.N.M. 1990) (debt collector's practice of using its own attorney to bring suit for collecting consumer debts on contingency basis constituted unauthorized practice of law).

453 See Appx. E.2.7.2, infra. See also Nichols v. Niagara Credit Recovery, Inc., 2013 WL 1899947 (N.D.N.Y. May 7, 2013); Robles v. Ally Bank, 2013 WL 28773 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 2, 2013); Harris v. Jacobs, Marsh, L.L.C., 2012 WL 3655334 (W.D.N.Y. Aug. 23, 2012); Unangst v. Evans Law Assoc., P.C., 798 F. Supp. 2d 409 (N.D.N.Y. 2011); Balk v. Fererstein & Smith, L.L.P., 2011 WL 1560984 (W.D.N.Y. Feb. 18, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 1557948 (W.D.N.Y. Apr. 25, 2011); Martin v. Law Offices of John F. Edwards, 262 F.R.D. 534 (S.D. Cal. 2009); Randall v. Nelson & Kennard, 2009 WL 2710141 (D. Ariz. Aug. 26, 2009); Hurtado v. TAM Fin. Corp., 2007 WL 1746884 (W.D. Tex. June 5, 2007); Avery v. First Resolution Mgmt. Corp., 2007 WL 1560653 (D. Or. May 25, 2007); Evans v. Am. Credit Sys., Inc., 2003 WL 23018529 (D. Neb. Dec. 10, 2003); Orloff v. Syndicated Office Sys., 2003 WL 22100868 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 20, 2003); Taylor v. Bryant, Inc., 275 F. Supp. 2d 1305 (D. Nev. 2003); Berrios v. Sprint Corp., 1998 WL 199842 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 16, 1998); Hart v. Clayton-Parker & Assoc., Inc., 869 F. Supp. 774 (D. Ariz. 1994). See also Tworek v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2010 WL 707365 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 23, 2010) (denying defendant's motion for summary judgment asserting that amount of its setoff of debt allegedly exceeded plaintiff's affirmative claims); Appx. E.3.7.2, infra.

454 See Hunt v. 21st Mortg. Corp., 2012 WL 3903783 (N.D. Ala. Sept. 7, 2012); Waid v. Credit Collections, Inc., 2011 WL 5555683 (W.D. Okla. Nov. 15, 2011); Mufwene v. Am. Credit Exch., 2010 WL 4539451 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 3, 2010); Mathy v. Chase Manhattan Bank, 2009 WL 3489398, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 26, 2009); Gerber v. Citigroup, Inc., 2009 WL 2058576 (E.D. Cal. July 14, 2009); Padilla v. Clovis & Roche, Inc., 2007 WL 4264582 (N.D.N.Y. Nov. 30, 2007); Krutchkoff v. Fleet Bank, 960 F. Supp. 541 (D. Conn. 1996); Sluys v. Hand, 831 F. Supp. 321 (S.D.N.Y. 1993). See also Rahman v. San Diego Accounts Serv., 2017 WL 1387206 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 18, 2017).

455 See, e.g., Campos v. W. Dental Serv., Inc., 404 F. Supp. 2d 1164 (N.D. Cal. 2005); Sparrow v. Mazda Am. Credit, 385 F. Supp. 2d 1063 (E.D. Cal. 2005); Ballard v. Equifax Check Serv., Inc., 186 F.R.D. 589 (E.D. Cal. 1999).

456 See Skoczylas v. Atl. Credit & Fin., Inc., 2002 WL 55298 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 15, 2002).

to seize the amounts the collection agency must pay the consumer in damages and attorney fees.

A federal court has prevented such a garnishment as inconsistent with the Congressional intent for the FDCPA to eliminate abusive debt collection and to encourage consumer access to an attorney. In particular, an attorney might think twice about representing the consumer where there is a risk that the prevailing consumer's attorney fee award goes to the creditor and not to the attorney.[457] The Fifth and Ninth Circuits have reached a similar result in Truth in Lending Act litigation.[458]

Even more creatively, a collector with a judgment against the consumer obtained an order for the sheriff to levy on the consumer's FDCPA claim against the collector, and then the collector purchased at the sheriff's auction the consumer's claim against the collector. The Ninth Circuit disallowed the effect of the collector's actions and allowed the consumer to bring FDCPA claims against the collector. In Arellano v. Clark County Collection Service, L.L.C., the Ninth Circuit held that "[d]ebt collectors cannot evade the restrictions of the Act by forcing a debtor's [FDCPA] claims to be auctioned, acquiring the claims, and dismissing them. To allow otherwise would thwart enforcement of the FDCPA and undermine its purpose."[459]

12.10 Attorney Fees and Sanctions Against Consumers or Their Attorney

12.10.1 Statutory Attorney Fees Awards to FDCPA Defendants

12.10.1.1 Generally

The FDCPA provides:

> (3) On a finding by the court that an action under this section was brought in bad faith and for the purpose of harassment, the court may award to the defendant attorney's fees reasonable in relation to the work expended and costs.[460]

This language was modified from the original proposal in a Senate minority debt collection bill[461] that provided that such fees "shall" be awarded. In the final bill the wording was changed to "may award." As a result, a court has discretion not to award attorney fees to a defendant even when there is a finding of both bad faith and harassment. Appellate courts will review a lower court's decision under this provision only for an abuse of discretion.[462]

A defendant's claim for attorney fees must be raised by motion after the dismissal of the consumer's FDCPA claim, not as a counterclaim to the FDCPA claim.[463] A debt collector's counterclaim for attorney fees should be met with a motion to dismiss, especially because fee claims have the potential for intimidation.

The FDCPA provision of fees for the defendant's attorney fees does not make the consumer's lawyer responsible for the FDCPA defendant's fees, even where it makes the consumer responsible for them.[464] The Supreme Court has held that an 457 Isa v. Law Office of Timothy Baxter & Assoc., 2013 WL 5692850 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 21, 2013). But see Kaylor-Trent v. John C. Bonewicz, P.C., 2013 WL 980290 (C.D. Ill. Mar. 13, 2013).

458 See Dias v. Bank of Hawaii, 732 F.2d 1401, 1403 (9th Cir. 1984), modified, 764 F.2d 1292 (9th Cir. 1985); Wright v. Tower Loan of Mississippi, Inc., 679 F.2d 436, 446 (5th Cir. 1982); Plant v. Blazer Fin. Serv., Inc. of Georgia, 598 F.2d 1357, 1365–1366 (5th Cir. 1979). See also Olevares v. Viking Dodge, Inc., 626 F. Supp. 114 (N.D. Ill. 1985).

459 875 F.3d 1213, 1218 (9th Cir. 2017).

460 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(3).

461 S. 1130, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 805(c) (1977).

462 See, e.g., Jacobson v. Healthcare Fin. Serv., Inc., 516 F.3d 85 (2d Cir. 2008); Morgovsky v. Creditor Collection Serv., 166 F.3d 343 (9th Cir. 1998); Duranseau v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 644 Fed. Appx. 702, 707 (8th Cir. 2016); Diaz v. First Marblehead Corp., 643 Fed. Appx. 916, 922 (11th Cir. 2016). Cf. Welch v. Credit Adjustment Co., 161 F.3d 19 (10th Cir. 1998) (district court's finding that plaintiff did not bring the FDCPA suit in bad faith or for purpose of harassment was reviewed for clear error (citing Swanson, 869 F.2d at 1229) and affirmed).

463 Emanuel v. Am. Credit Exch., 870 F.2d 805 (2d Cir. 1989); Juras v. Aman Collection Serv., Inc., 829 F.2d 739 (9th Cir. 1987); Haverstick v. J&M Sec., L.L.C., 2016 WL 6560402 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 3, 2016); Walter v. HSM Receivables, 2014 WL 5394986 (D. Colo. Oct. 23, 2014); Spencer v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2013 WL 797335 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 4, 2013); Noreikas v. Roach, 2013 WL 28082 (S.D. Ohio Jan. 2, 2013); Johnson v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2012 WL 4483916 (E.D.N.C. Sept. 27, 2012); Whatley v. AHF Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 2012 WL 4062508 (E.D. Tex. Aug. 16, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 4059906 (E.D. Tex. Sept. 14, 2012); Borges v. Thomas F. Farrell, P.C., 2012 WL 3473109 (D. Colo. Aug. 14, 2012); Marcum v. Eastman Credit Union, 2011 WL 1225792 (E.D. Tenn. Mar. 30, 2011); Coleman v. Credit Mgmt. L.P., 2011 WL 913210 (N.D. Tex. Mar. 16, 2011); Allen v. Scott, 2011 WL 219568 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 19, 2011); Kropf v. TCA, Inc., 752 F. Supp. 2d 797 (E.D. Mich. 2010); Kirscher v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2006 WL 145162 (D. Minn. Jan. 18, 2006); Young v. Reuben, 2005 WL 1484671 (S.D. Ind. June 21, 2005); Micare v. Foster & Garbus, 132 F. Supp. 2d 77 (N.D.N.Y. 2001); Johnson v. Ardec Credit Serv., Inc., 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24889 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 21, 1984). See also Young v. McDowell Serv., 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21814 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 30, 1991) (no discovery on § 1692k(a)(3) claim prior to ruling on merits of FDCPA claims). But see Erickson v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2009 WL 4884424 (W.D. Tenn. Dec. 8, 2009); Stoddard v. Nationwide Recovery Serv., Inc., 2003 WL 25273708 (D.N.H. Nov. 25, 2003).

464 See Tejero v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 955 F.3d 453, 462 (5th Cir. 2020) (§ 1692k(a)(3) "permits fee awards only against parties, not against their counsel" since permitting fee awards against counsel is contrary to common law and not specifically allowed by the FDCPA); Hyde v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 567 F.3d 1137 (9th Cir. 2009); Camacho v. Bridgeport Fin., Inc., 430 F.3d 1078 (9th Cir. 2005). Cf. Ceresko v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 484 Fed. Appx. 113 (9th Cir. 2012) (2–1 decision) (affirming a $10,467 award against the consumer plaintiff; agreeing that the underlying FDCPA action was brought in bad faith and for the purpose of harassment because the plaintiff's counsel suffered the same failure to state an FDCPA violation in two previous lawsuits). But see Forto v. Capital One Bank, 2017 WL 4168529 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 20, 2017) (finding that the consumer and her counsel brought action in bad faith and for the purpose of harassment; awarding collection agency a total of $57,457.50 to be paid jointly and severally by the consumer and her attorneys); CUDA & Assoc., L.L.C. v. Evon, 2009 WL 5698132 (Conn. Super. Ct. Dec. 16, 2009) (FDCPA does not preempt a state law claim against a consumer and her attorney for allegedly filing a vexatious FDCPA case); Appx. E.3.6.4, infra.

attorney is liable for the other attorney's fees under a statute only where that statute explicitly so provides.[465]

If the consumer voluntarily dismisses the FDCPA case, some courts find that the collector is not a "prevailing party" and therefore may not recover statutory attorney.[466] Attorney fees may not be awarded against a consumer who prevails on any of their FDCPA claims, even if others are dismissed.[467]

Courts have ruled that the FDCPA § 1692k(a)(3) provision does not prevent state courts from issuing sanctions under state rules[468] or bankruptcy courts issuing such sanctions under the Bankruptcy Code.[469]

12.10.1.2 The Bad Faith and Harassment Standards

The FDCPA provision states that attorney fees can be awarded to a debt collector only if the court finds that the action was brought by a consumer both in bad faith and for the purpose of harassment.[470] Proof of only one or the other is insufficient to recover fees. This comports not only with the statutory language ("bad faith and for the purpose of harassment"), but is consistent with the legislative history. The Senate minority bill.[471] required an award of attorney fees on a finding either bad faith or harassment. The final version requires both elements.

The FDCPA provision can thus be distinguished from statutory provisions providing fees for a prevailing party, and also distinguished from federal statutes[472] and the federal common law rule that provide for awards if either bad faith or harassment or some other standard is met.[473] In the absence of a showing that a case was brought both in bad faith and for the purposes of harassment, a court may not award fees under this provision against the consumer, even if the consumer's lawsuit is without merit.[474]

---

465 See Lamie v. United States Tr., 540 U.S. 526, 124 S. Ct. 1023, 157 L. Ed. 2d 1024 (2004); Roadway Express, Inc. v. Piper, 447 U.S. 752, 761, 100 S. Ct. 2455, 65 L. Ed. 2d 488 (1980) (indicating that fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 may be recovered only against a party, not the party's attorney). See also Heckethorn v. Sunan Corp., 992 F.2d 240, 242 (9th Cir. 1993); Healey v. Chelsea Res., Ltd., 947 F.2d 611, 624 (2d Cir. 1991).

466 See Smalley v. Account Serv. Collections, Inc., 2017 WL 1092678 (W.D. Pa. Mar. 23, 2017). See also Marx v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 668 F.3d 1174, 1178 (10th Cir. 2011) ("When a defendant prevails and the court finds that the suit was brought in bad faith and for the purpose of harassment, then (in the court's discretion) that defendant may also recover attorney's fees."), aff'd, 568 U.S. 371, 133 S. Ct. 1166, 185 L. Ed. 2d 242 (2013); Rubakha v. Kenneth J. Breitbart & Assoc., P.A., 2014 WL 2452575 (D. Md. May 30, 2014); Felton v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2014 WL 1408054 (D. Colo. Apr. 11, 2014).

467 See Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., 164 F.3d 81 (2d Cir. 1998) (§ 1692k(a)(3) not available where FDCPA claim prevailed); Moore v. Diversified Collection Serv., Inc., 2009 WL 1873654 (E.D.N.Y. June 29, 2009); Eckert v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 647 F. Supp. 2d 1096 (E.D. Mo. 2009); Randall v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2009 WL 2358350 (D. Neb. July 23, 2009); Gonzalez v. Lawent, 2004 WL 2036409 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 10, 2004) (other issues remained unresolved); Dechert ex rel. Estate of Oyler v. The Cadle Co., 2004 WL 2999112 (S.D. Ind. Nov. 10, 2004), rev'd on other grounds, 441 F.3d 474 (7th Cir. 2006); Blum v. Lawent, 2003 WL 22078306 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 8, 2003).

468 CUDA & Assoc., L.L.C. v. Evon, 2009 WL 5698132 (Conn. Super. Ct. Dec. 16, 2009) (FDCPA does not preempt a state law claim against a consumer and her attorney for allegedly filing a vexatious FDCPA case); Ziobron v. Crawford, 667 N.E.2d 202 (Ind. Ct. App. 1996) (FDCPA did not preempt state law claim awarding damages to a collector for malicious prosecution based on FDCPA claim considered legally correct but technical by the court).

469 See, e.g., In re Cooper, 253 B.R. 295 (Bankr. N.D. Fla. 2000) (granting sanctions of $5000 to creditor's attorney against the consumers' attorney under Bankr. R. 9011 for the costs of defending against a groundless FDCPA claim).

470 See Sorensen v. Credit Int'l Corp., 475 Fed. Appx. 244 (9th Cir. 2012) (reversing award of $250 in attorney fees made by the lower court to the debt collector without a finding that the litigation was brought in bad faith and for the purpose of harassment); Smith v. Solomon and Solomon, P.C., 887 F. Supp. 2d 334 (D. Mass. 2012), aff'd, 714 F.3d 73 (1st Cir. 2013); S. Rep. No. 382 at 5, reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra; Appx. E.3.6.4, infra.

471 S. 1130, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 805(c) (1977).

472 See, e.g., Christiansburg Garment Co. v. EEOC, 434 U.S. 412, 98 S. Ct. 694, 54 L. Ed. 2d 648 (1978) (EEOA); Smyth v. Merchants Credit Corp., 2014 WL 12707240, at *2 (W.D. Wash. May 14, 2014) (where jury found no FDCPA violations, "conclusory assertions of frivolous claims, absent evidence of bad faith or harassing purpose" were insufficient for a debt collector to recover attorney fees under § 1692k(a)(3)); RBC Bank (USA) v. Glass, 773 F. Supp. 2d 1245 (N.D. Ala. 2011) (marked difference between FDCPA and RESPA is that FDCPA requires a showing that non-prevailing plaintiff asserted his claim in bad faith, whereas under RESPA fees to prevailing party are a matter of discretion for court). See also Dexter v. Tran, 2009 WL 5208800 (E.D. Wash. Dec. 22, 2009) (defendants not entitled to recover attorney fees and costs by virtue of parties' reaffirmation agreement because consumer brought this action pursuant to the FDCPA only and did not allege breach of reaffirmation agreement; to recover fees defendant would have to meet requirements of § 1692k(a)(3)).

473 See Alyeska Pipeline Serv. v. Wilderness Soc'y, 421 U.S. 240, 258–259, 95 S. Ct. 1612, 44 L. Ed. 2d 141 (1975).

474 See Johnson v. Eaton, 80 F.3d 148 (5th Cir. 1996); Kurzdorfer v. Constar Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 490 F. Supp. 3d 663 (W.D.N.Y. 2020); Thomas v. Stokes & Clinton, P.C., 2014 WL 11279816 (N.D. Ala. Aug. 27, 2014); Montero-Hernandez v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2014 WL 505119 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 7, 2014); Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Serv., Inc., 2012 WL 12863967 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 13, 2012); Neal v. CAC Fin. Corp., 2011 WL 4072144 (D. Or. Sept. 13, 2011); Fields v. Law Offices of James West, P.C., 2010 WL 2245036 (M.D. Ala. June 4, 2010); Parker v. Shaw & Lines, L.L.C., 2010 WL 1640963 (D. Ariz. Apr. 20, 2010); Campbell v. Credit Bur. Sys. Inc., 655 F. Supp. 2d 732 (E.D. Ky. 2009); Hoang v. Worldwide Asset Purchasing, L.L.C., 2009 WL 3669883 (S.D. Ill. Nov. 2, 2009); Hinds v. Credigy Receivables, Inc., 2008 WL 5381345 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 23, 2008) ("The standard for bad faith is higher than the standard for mere frivolousness."); Deere v. Javitch, Block &

Of course, where both the bad faith and harassment standards are met, a court has discretion to award such fees.[475] But a court has noted: "Section 1692k(a)(3) should be construed narrowly as not to discourage private litigation under the FDCPA."[476] Courts may be especially reluctant to award attorney fees against pro se litigants.[477] Nor should attorney fees be awarded where the consumer does not prevail, but in good faith was seeking to overturn existing FDCPA precedent.[478]

The defendant has the burden of proving the plaintiff's subjective bad faith and the plaintiff's harassing purpose in instituting the FDCPA action.[479] To prove bad faith or harassment, the defendant must show not only that the plaintiff had no basis for believing that the defendant violated the Act, but also that the plaintiff did not entertain a subjective belief that that Act had been violated.[480]

Rathbone, L.L.P., 413 F. Supp. 2d 886 (S.D. Ohio 2006); Tagayun v. Citibank, 2006 WL 5100512 (D.N.J. June 9, 2006); Lemieux v. Jensen, 2004 WL 302318 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 29, 2004) (consumer could not determine whether the attorney regularly collected debts until he filed suit, and when he found out his mistake, he promptly dismissed the FDCPA suit); Turner v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 211 F. Supp. 2d 1108 (N.D. Ill. 2002) (though unsuccessful, consumer's FDCPA claims "were a good faith interpretation of the . . . law"), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 330 F.3d 991 (7th Cir. 2003). See also Brooks v. Citibank, 345 Fed. Appx. 260 (9th Cir. 2009) (remanding for factual findings on whether lawsuit was filed in bad faith within § 1692k).

475 See Kraemer v. Fox Hills Owners Ass'n, 697 Fed. Appx. 935 (10th Cir. June 27, 2017) (consumer involved in online harassment of debt collector); LSR Consulting, L.L.C. v. Wells Fargo Bank, 835 F.3d 530 (5th Cir. 2016); Chaudhry v. Gallerizzo, 174 F.3d 394 (4th Cir. 1999); Bjornsdotter v. Suttell & Hammer, P.S., 2020 WL 2840245, at *2 (D. Or. June 1, 2020) (claims were "clearly untenable from the outset of this litigation," and plaintiff's attorneys "lobbed several insults and accusations at Defendants, which supports an inference that she sought to embarrass or annoy them"); Cobb v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 2020 WL 1158468, at *14 (D. Conn. Mar. 10, 2020) (awarding fees based on consumer's attorney's "behavior during this litigation, in combination with the baselessness" of claim); Huebner v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 85 F. Supp. 3d 672 (E.D.N.Y. 2015) (consumer called debt collector and tried to get it to commit an FDCPA violation); Diaz v. First Marblehead Corp., 2014 WL 7251648 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 3, 2014), adopted, 2014 WL 7251653 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 18, 2014) (based on attorney's experience in another case, attorney knew loan servicers obtaining debt before default were not FDCPA debt collectors); Nguyen v. Capital One Bank, 2014 WL 1344512 (E.D. Mo. Apr. 4, 2014); Scroggin v. Credit Bur., Inc., 973 F. Supp. 2d 961 (E.D. Ark. 2013), aff'd, 576 Fed. Appx. 632 (8th Cir. 2014); Jones v. Ravitz, 2007 WL 2004755 (E.D. Mich. July 6, 2007) (case was nonsense); Dean v. Gillette, 2005 WL 2810539 (D. Kan. Oct. 27, 2005) (awarding some $42,000 in fees to defendant creditor but refusing to award fees to defendant attorney); Nat'l Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Hartel, 782 F. Supp. 22 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (insurer was awarded attorney fees including time expended in obtaining a declaratory judgment that it was not in violation of the FDCPA).

476 Wattie-Bey v. Modern Recovery Solutions, 2016 WL 8229211, at *4 (M.D. Pa. Dec. 30, 2016), adopted, 2017 WL 529989 (M.D. Pa. Feb. 9, 2017).

477 See, e.g., Grimsley v. Focus Fin. Serv., 2016 WL 9176591 (S.D. Fla. July 22, 2016), adopted, 2017 WL 2665156 (S.D. Fla. June 19, 2017); Rink v. Bernhardt & Strawser P.A., 2014 WL 113577 (W.D.N.C. Jan. 10, 2014); Harris v. Crisis Collections Mgmt., L.L.C., 2013 WL 1759609 (D. Nev. Apr. 24, 2013); Geist v. Onewest Bank, 2011 WL 223727 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 24, 2011); Murungi v. Mercedes Benz Credit Corp., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19490 (E.D. La. Nov. 20, 2001). See also Gulley v. Markov & Krasny Assoc., P.C., 2011 WL 1630670 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 26, 2011), aff'd on other grounds, 664 F.3d 1073 (7th Cir. 2011). But see Kraemer v. Fox Hills Owners Ass'n, 697 Fed. Appx. 935 (10th Cir. June 27, 2017) (affirming the § 1692k(a)(3) award of $33,700 attorney fees to the debt collector against the pro se consumer for filing the FDCPA case in bad faith where similar FDCPA claims had been decided against her in earlier state court cases and there was evidence showing the consumer harassed the debt collector online); Cortez v. Mann Bracken, L.L.P., 2011 WL 4424293 (Tex. App. Sept. 22, 2011) (affirming award of attorney fees against pro se plaintiff, finding that trial court's determination of bad faith and purpose of harassment was supported by facts).

478 Winn v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2007 WL 2701941 (D. Ariz. Sept. 14, 2007); Bezpalko v. Gilfillan, Gilpin & Brehman, 1998 WL 321268, at *7 (E.D. Pa. June 17, 1998) ("In order for such necessary adjustments in the law to be made, attorneys must bring to the attention of the courts the need and reasoning for such a change.").

479 Guerrero v. RJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 499 F.3d 926 (9th Cir. 2007). See Johnson v. Eaton, 80 F.3d 148 (5th Cir. 1996); Mayhall v. Berman & Rabin, P.A., 13 F. Supp. 3d 978, 984 (E.D. Mo. 2014); Thompson v. S & S Recovery, Inc., 2013 WL 5278022 (S.D. Miss. Sept. 18, 2013); Branco v. Credit Collections Serv., Inc., 2012 WL 1143562 (E.D. Cal. Apr. 4, 2012); Bank v. Cooper, 2009 WL 1491227 (E.D.N.Y. May 27, 2009), aff'd on other grounds, 356 Fed. Appx. 509 (2d Cir. 2009); Sanchez v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 649 F. Supp. 2d 1374 (N.D. Ga. 2009); Black v. Equinox Fin. Mgmt. Solutions, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16767 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 1, 2007); Grant v. Barro, 2007 WL 3244986 (M.D. La. Nov. 1, 2007); Walthorn v. Law Offices of Timothy E. Baxter, P.C., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 54030 (W.D. Mich. Aug. 2, 2006); Ricciardi v. Serv. Credit Union, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28468 (D.N.H. May 11, 2006); Hooper v. Capital Credit & Collection Serv., Inc., 2005 WL 2297062 (D. Or. Sept. 20, 2005) (following a jury trial, which resulted in a $1570 actual damage award against collection agency and a defense verdict for agency's named employee, denying any additional statutory damages, awarded plaintiff $17,467 in attorney fees, and denying any fees to exonerated employee since claims against her were not "brought in bad faith and for the purpose of harassment"); Phernetton v. First Revenue Assur., 2003 WL 21246037 (D. Minn. May 19, 2003); Wilson v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2003 WL 21488206 (M.D. Fla. June 10, 2003); Degrosiellier v. Solomon & Solomon, P.C., 2001 WL 1217181 (N.D.N.Y. Sept. 27, 2001); Csugi v. Monterey Fin. Serv., Inc., 2001 WL 1841444 (D. Conn. Oct. 30, 2001); Countryman v. Solomon & Solomon, 2000 WL 156837 (N.D.N.Y. Feb. 7, 2000); Filsinger v. Upton, Cohen & Slamowitz, 2000 WL 198223 (N.D.N.Y. Feb. 17, 2000); Olson v. Carter-Jones Collections, 2020 WL 5869078 (Cal. Ct. App. Oct. 2, 2020); Allied Collection Serv., Inc. v. Byrd, 2007 WL 2340784 (Ky. Ct. App. Aug. 3, 2007); Mendez v. Apple Bank for Sav., 143 Misc. 2d 915 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1989); Conley v. KCA Fin. Serv., Inc., 931 P.2d 808 (Or. Ct. App. 1997). Cf. Corridean v. Restore Fin. Serv. Network, L.L.C., 2007 WL 1989622 (D. Or. July 6, 2007) (costs but no fees, though action brought to punish defendants for pursuing a debt plaintiff did not owe, where action not brought in bad faith and for purpose of harassment); Sierra v. Garbus, 48 F. Supp. 2d 393 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (attorney fees of $4586.60 awarded to collection firm, pursuant to § 1692k(a)(3), against consumer and his attorney for bringing a meritless FDCPA suit several times; prior suits claimed violation of FDCPA for unreasonable addition of $507.92 in attorney fees on $3500 credit card debt).

480 See Johnson v. Eaton, 884 F. Supp. 1068 (M.D. La. 1995), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 80 F.3d 148 (5th Cir. 1996) (withdrawal by the consumer of an actual damages claim for emotional distress shortly before trial did not constitute in itself a basis for finding of bad faith or harassment under § 1692k(a)(3)); Friedman v. HHL Fin. Serv., Inc., 1994 WL 22969 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 25, 1994); Phillips v. Amana Collection Serv., 1992 WL 227839 (W.D.N.Y. Aug. 25, 1992) (because Congress

A consumer's mistaken belief in the merits of their claim undermines a finding of bad faith.[481] This is even more the case where the defendant's resistance to discovery prevented the consumer from timely learning that a case was not meritorious.[482] Similarly, there is no bad faith where the consumer in good faith relied on the consumer's attorney and it was the attorney who decided to bring a meritless claim.[483]

To show bad faith, the debt collector must establish that there was no legal or factual basis for any of the consumer's claims.[484] For example, while expressing skepticism about the merits of plaintiff's attorney's claims and finding his "aggressive use of the Act unworthy of commendation," the Ninth Circuit upheld the denial of fees, because the claims were "minimally colorable" and the defendant offered no evidence of bad faith other than conclusory assertions.[485]

Even if the consumer has a collateral purpose in suing and refusing to accept a settlement offer, this does not establish bad faith if there is merit to the FDCPA claims.[486]

Bad faith is not to be inferred even where the consumer was not misled or harmed by the violation because the Act encourages private enforcement of the Act.[487] Even if there is no basis for the consumer's FDCPA claim, such as where authorized the award of additional damages and attorney fees for enforcement of the FDCPA by "private attorneys general," the award of sanctions or costs to the collector would be inappropriate on the collector's contention that the consumer demonstrated only "technical" violations); Knowles v. Credit Bur., 1992 WL 131107 (W.D.N.Y. May 28, 1992) (failed to demonstrate that the consumer brought the suit in bad faith and for the purpose of harassment). See also Franco v. Maraldo, 2000 WL 288378 (E.D. La. Mar. 16, 2000) (plaintiff and his attorney could have "plausibly" believed that the defendant attorney was a debt collector).

---

481 See Johnson v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, L.P., 2013 WL 3834400 (S.D. Fla. July 24, 2013); Harris v. Crisis Collections Mgmt., L.L.C., 2013 WL 1759609 (D. Nev. Apr. 24, 2013).

482 Conover v. BYL Collection Serv., L.L.C., 2012 WL 4363740 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 21, 2012). See also Bendickson v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2016 WL 4408822 (D. Minn. Aug. 16, 2016) (collection firm's request for fees rejected in part because it unreasonably refused to allow consumer's attorney to listen to recording that was linchpin of its defense).

483 Diaz v. First Marblehead Corp., 643 Fed. Appx. 916 (11th Cir. 2016). But cf. Alcivar v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 2020 WL 2559845 (E.D.N.Y. May 20, 2020) (awarding prevailing defendant $33,916.84 in attorney fees and sanctions under U.S.C. § 1927 where consumer's attorneys filed "a meritless case" without "client's involvement or knowledge," finding that § 1692k(a)(3) relates to behavior of counsel when it brings case without its client's knowledge or involvement).

484 See Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 333 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2003); Navarro v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2020 WL 2199478, at *2 (D. Ariz. May 6, 2020) (claim "may have rested on faulty logic" but was not "wholly baseless"); Mellon v. Monarch Recovery Mgmt., Inc., 2017 WL 4776738 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 17, 2017) (although court was "troubled" by counsel's filing of three duplicative, putative class action cases for different consumers involving a debt collector's form letter for the same bank on various credit card accounts, such conduct did not rise to the level of bad faith); Fields v. Credit Mgmt. Sys., 2016 WL 9088755 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 20, 2016); Philhower v. Express Recovery Serv. Inc., 2014 WL 1648724 (D. Utah Apr. 23, 2014); Abby v. Paige, 2013 WL 12246348 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 2, 2013), adopted, 2013 WL 12246349 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 1, 2013) (plaintiff prevailed on one of her FDCPA claims; the fact that Plaintiff recovered less than the amount defendant offered under Rule 68 did not establish that Plaintiff litigated the claim in bad faith and for the purpose of harassment); Chavez v. Northland Grp., 2011 WL 317482 (D. Ariz. Feb. 1, 2011); Andre v. CCB Credit Serv., Inc., 2010 WL 3222500 (S.D. Fla. July 21, 2010), adopted, 2010 WL 3222501 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 13, 2010); Tucker v. CBE Grp., Inc., 710 F. Supp. 2d 1301 (M.D. Fla. 2010); Acosta v. Campbell, 2009 WL 4639704 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 4, 2009) (colorable claim made); Allers-Petrus v. Columbia Recovery Grp., L.L.C., 2009 WL 1160061 (W.D. Wash. Apr. 29, 2009) (denying debt collector's motion for attorney fees and costs pursuant to § 1692k(a)(3)); Sorey v. Computer Credit, Inc., 2006 WL 1896401 (S.D.N.Y. July 7, 2006) (action was "not objectively baseless"); Kaiser v. Braje & Nelson, L.L.P., 2006 WL 1285143 (N.D. Ind. May 5, 2006) (consumer had colorable claim); Guidry v. Clare, 442 F. Supp. 2d 282 (E.D. Va. 2006) ("the standard for sanctions liability under the FDCPA essentially mirrors Rule 11's 'improper purpose' analysis"; where five of seven of plaintiff's claims were "frivolous," "baseless," without "even a scintilla of evidence," and thus unsupported in fact or law, court awarded debt collector sanctions under its inherent powers, Rule 11 and § 1692k(a)(3), finding harassment by the plaintiff); Dean v. Gillette, 2005 WL 2810539 (D. Kan. Oct. 27, 2005); Shah v. Collecto, Inc., 2005 WL 2216242 (D. Md. Sept. 12, 2005) (suit must be completely without merit); Oliphant v. Simboski, 2005 WL 927169 (D. Conn. Apr. 19, 2005); In re Faulkner, 1998 WL 34342248 (Bankr. E.D. Va. May 12, 1998). See also Arutyunyan v. Cavalry Portfolio Serv., 2013 WL 500452 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 11, 2013) (mere inartful pleading and failure to state a claim did not demonstrate that an action was brought in bad faith). But see Scroggin v. Credit Bur., Inc., 973 F. Supp. 2d 961 (E.D. Ark. 2013) (awarding debt collector over $30,000 in fees where the consumer bragged online that he set up the debt collector for its FDCPA violations and publicly reviled the debt collector and its counsel during the litigation; jury found for the plaintiff but refused to award any damages), aff'd, 576 Fed. Appx. 632 (8th Cir. 2014).

485 Guerrero v. RJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 499 F.3d 926 (9th Cir. 2007). See also Baylon v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 7494256 (D.N.M. Mar. 9, 2016); Brown v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 2015 WL 225727 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 16, 2015), aff'd, 804 F.3d 740 (6th Cir. 2015); Rubakha v. Kenneth J. Breitbart & Assoc., P.A., 2014 WL 2452575 (D. Md. May 30, 2014); Boon v. Prof'l Collection Consultants, 2014 WL 12526274 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 11, 2014) (denying attorney fees as filing of third amended complaint, without more, did not rise to level of bad faith or harassment); Woodward v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 2014 WL 809003 (D.N.J. Feb. 28, 2014); Eide v. Colltech, Inc., 987 F. Supp. 2d 951 (D. Minn. 2013); Ford v. Principal Recovery Grp., Inc., 2012 WL 930334 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 19, 2012); Carman v. CBE Grp., Inc., 782 F. Supp. 2d 1223 (D. Kan. 2011); Mahan v. Retrieval-Masters Credit Bur., Inc., 777 F. Supp. 2d 1293 (S.D. Ala. 2011); Bergey v. Accelerated Receivables, 2011 WL 6012502 (W.D.N.Y. Nov. 2, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 6012499 (W.D.N.Y. Dec. 1, 2011); Hammett v. AllianceOne Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2011 WL 3819848 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 30, 2011); Henderson v. N.A.R., Inc., 2011 WL 2312170 (D. Utah June 10, 2011); Hasbrouck v. Arrow Fin. Serv. L.L.C., 2011 WL 1899250 (N.D.N.Y. May 19, 2011); Karns v. QAR, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1791296 (S.D. Fla. Apr. 18, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 1770830 (S.D. Fla. May 10, 2011); Jackson v. Diversified Collection Serv., Inc., 2011 WL 1235553 (D. Colo. Mar. 31, 2011); In re Holyfield, 2017 WL 2274939 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. May 24, 2017).

486 Juras v. Aman Collection Serv., Inc., 829 F.2d 739 (9th Cir. 1987).

487 Jacobson v. Healthcare Fin. Serv., Inc., 516 F.3d 85 (2d Cir. 2008). See also Schultz v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2012 WL 5332194 (N.D. Iowa Oct. 29, 2012). But see Yitzchok Majerowitz v. Stephen Einstein & Assoc., 2013 WL 4432240 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 15, 2013) (awarding debt collector attorney fees pursuant to § 1692k(a)(3) as the consumer's § 1692e(11) claim was frivolous as he knew the caller was debt collector all along, and he concealed that he was a frequent filer of FDCPA suits).

FDCPA claims are time-barred, there is no bad faith if the FDCPA claim is joined with a successful alternative.[488]

That the consumer has lost similar claims in other litigation does not prove bad faith.[489] The consumer voluntarily dismissing an action early in the litigation does not show bad faith, but the contrary.[490]

Similarly, the defendant's burden to also show harassment is not an easy one to meet.[491] Conduct after filing the FDCPA suit is not relevant to a claim that the action was brought for purposes of harassment.[492]

A consumer's prior FDCPA claims do not show a vexatious litigator when most of those cases are settled.[493]

12.10.2 Rule 11 Sanctions

An FDCPA defendant's ability to recover attorney fees via sanctions under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 11 is different from its ability to recover attorney fees under FDCPA § 1692k(a)(3).[494] Rule 11 sanctions are addressed to the consumer's attorney or to an unrepresented consumer,[495] while the FDCPA § 1692k(a)(3) liability for the defendant's attorney fees are born by the consumer. Rule 11 is also available against the debt collector's attorney.

Rule 11 sanctions can include a number of different monetary and non-monetary options in addition to or instead of attorney fees.[496] "A sanction imposed under [Rule 11] must be limited to what suffices to deter repetition of the conduct or comparable conduct by others similarly situated."[497]

Arguably, FDCPA § 1692k(a)(3) standards override any looser standards under Rule 11, at least for the defendant's attorney fees.[498]

Claims under Rule 11 may not be asserted as an affirmative defense or counterclaim but may be raised later in the case.[499] Rule 11 sanctions must be based upon a reasonable inquiry into the consumer attorney's factual[500] and legal[501] basis for the FDCPA claim and, even if there was no basis for the claim, whether it was still brought in good faith.[502] After such an inquiry, many courts deny the debt collector a sanction of attorney fees,[503] while other courts have required the consumer's 488 See Strange v. Armor Sys. Corp., 2004 WL 46244 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 7, 2004) (FDCPA claim joined with a Fair Credit Reporting Act claim that was not time-barred; court should consider entire suit, not just the FDCPA claim).

489 Crail v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2016 WL 4592208 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 2, 2016).

490 See Millard v. Northland Grp., Inc., 2014 WL 6455986 (D. Nev. Nov. 17, 2014).

491 See Cohen v. Potenza, 2016 WL 6581233 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 3, 2016) (evidence required to prevail); Ford v. Principal Recovery Grp., Inc., 2012 WL 930334 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 19, 2012); Shah v. Collecto, Inc., 2005 WL 2216242 (D. Md. Sept. 12, 2005); Phernetton v. First Revenue Assur., 2003 WL 21246037 (D. Minn. May 19, 2003); Jones v. Weiss, 95 F. Supp. 2d 105 (N.D.N.Y. 2000) (inadequate evidence that FDCPA suit was instituted only to harass); Campion v. Credit Bur. Serv., Inc., 2000 WL 33255504 (E.D. Wash. Sept. 19, 2000); Riebe v. Juergensmeyer & Assoc., 979 F. Supp. 1218 (N.D. Ill. 1997); Villarreal v. Snow, 1997 WL 116801 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 12, 1997); Knowles v. Credit Bur., 1992 WL 131107 (W.D.N.Y. May 28, 1992).

492 See Arutyunyan v. Cavalry Portfolio Serv., 2013 WL 500452 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 11, 2013). But see Scroggin v. Credit Bur., Inc., 973 F. Supp. 2d 961 (E.D. Ark. 2013), aff'd, 576 Fed. Appx. 632 (8th Cir. 2014).

493 Wattie-Bey v. Modern Recovery Solutions, 2016 WL 8229211, at *4 (M.D. Pa. Dec. 30, 2016), adopted, 2017 WL 529989 (M.D. Pa. Feb. 9, 2017).

494 See De Dios v. Int'l Realty & Invs., 641 F.3d 1071, 1076 (9th Cir. 2011) ("vexatious litigation strategy" in filing nine separate, but identical, actions for alleged violations of the FDCPA instead of a single action); Huff v. Dobbins, Fraker, Tennant, Joy & Pearlstein, 243 F.3d 1086 (7th Cir. 2001); Chaudhry v. Gallerizzo, 174 F.3d 394 (4th Cir. 1999); Terran v. Kaplan, 109 F.3d 1428 (9th Cir. 1997); Torres v. Am. Tel. & Tel. Co., 1990 WL 130690 (7th Cir. Sept. 12, 1990). See also Diaz v. First Marblehead Corp., 643 Fed. Appx. 916, 922 (11th Cir. 2016) (Rule 11 violated where FDCPA complaint made clear on its face that FDCPA did not apply). Cf. Wissner v. DeWitt Law Firm, P.A., 2019 WL 11502877 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 4, 2019), adopted sub nom. In re Phillips, 2019 WL 11502881 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 23, 2019) (denying attorney fees under § 1692k(a)(3) and sanctions under § 1927, but imposing sanctions under Rule 11 for "objectively frivolous" claim). But cf. Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., 164 F.3d 81 (2d Cir. 1998) (to the extent request for Rule 11 sanctions could be construed as request for fees under the FDCPA, the FDCPA's standards must be met). See also § 12.10.1, supra, for a discussion of fees under section 1692k(a)(3).

495 See Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b). See also Tacoronte v. Cohen, 654 Fed. Appx. 445 (11th Cir. 2016).

496 Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c)(4).

497 Id.

498 See Boland Marine & Mfg. Co. v. Rihner, 41 F.3d 997 (5th Cir. 1995) (Rule 11 did not apply to an action where the provisions of the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act were more specific about fee shifting). See also Phillips v. Amana Collection Serv., 1992 WL 227839 (W.D.N.Y. Aug. 25, 1992) (because Congress encouraged enforcement of the FDCPA by "private attorneys general," sanctions or costs to the collector would be inappropriate on the collector's contention that the consumer demonstrated only "technical" violations); Clayton v. Bryan, 753 So. 2d 632 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2000) (state's offer of judgment statute providing for fee award preempted by FDCPA attorney fee provisions, 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(3)).

499 Crow v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 2007 WL 1247393 (D. Minn. Apr. 19, 2007).

500 See Rodriguez v. Credit Bur., 1993 WL 535174 (6th Cir. Dec. 27, 1993); Marin v. Alvarez, Armas & Borron, P.A., 2010 WL 338839 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 28, 2010); Argentieri v. Fisher Landscapes, Inc., 15 F. Supp. 2d 55 (D. Mass. 1998), later op., 27 F. Supp. 2d 84 (D. Mass. 1998).

501 See Torres v. Am. Tel. & Tel. Co., 1990 WL 130690 (7th Cir. Sept. 12, 1990); Shepard-Hall v. Gordon & Wong Law Grp., 2017 WL 2654855 (E.D. Cal. June 20, 2017); Williams v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, L.L.P., 2006 WL 1672897 (S.D. Ohio June 12, 2006); Martens v. Countrywide Home Loans Serv., L.P., 2006 WL 544209 (E.D. Mo. Mar. 3, 2006).

502 See Kegley v. Miles Mgmt. Corp., 1992 WL 370251 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 3, 1992).

503 See, e.g., Duranseau v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 644 Fed. Appx. 702, 707 (8th Cir. 2016); Macelus v. Capital Collection Serv, 2017 WL 5157389, at *3–4 (D.N.J. Nov. 7, 2017) (even though the complaint "verges on the silly," "is bereft of merit," and "presented precious little to show this claim was remotely meritorious," court denied Rule 11 sanctions because "some courts have entertained similar actions"); Mellon v. Monarch Recovery Mgmt., Inc., 2017 WL 4776738 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 17, 2017) (although court was "troubled" by counsel's filing of three duplicative, putative class action cases for different consumers involving a debt collector's form letter for the same bank on various credit card accounts, such conduct did not rise to the level of bad faith); Seamans v. Hoffman, Swartz & Assoc., Inc., 2017 WL 3780317 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 31, 2017) (denying Rule 11 sanctions where motion attorney under Rule 11 to pay the debt collector's attorney fees and costs.[504]

12.10.3 Sanctions for Multiplying Proceedings, 28 U.S.C. § 1927

28 U.S.C. § 1927 provides:

> Any attorney or other person admitted to conduct cases in any court of the United States or any Territory thereof who so multiplies the proceedings in any case unreasonably and vexatiously may be required by the court to satisfy personally the excess costs, expenses, and attorneys' fees reasonably incurred because of such conduct.

This statute was applied in a case where a debt collector responded that the consumer attorney's FDCPA demand letter was frivolous and filed a declaratory action. When the consumer filed an FDCPA counterclaim on the same frivolous grounds, the court, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1927, awarded over $18,000 in sanctions for the debt collector. The Seventh Circuit affirmed and held that sanctions should go not only to the collector, but also the collector's attorney.[505]

The Ninth Circuit has also affirmed a sanction award against the consumer's attorney under 28 U.S.C. § 1927 based on a groundless motion to disqualify the defense counsel.[506] A federal court also awarded over $79,000 in sanctions against a consumer's attorney for failing to communicate to the client the collector's proposal for an FDCPA case's settlement.[507] Sanctions under 28 U.S.C. § 1927 can be awarded if the consumer attorney continues to litigate after it is clear the case is hopeless,[508] or if the attorney brings a case shortly after filing suit against the same defendant on the same facts and asserting the same claims that were dismissed.[509] Sanctions may also be awarded where the consumer's attorneys file a meritless case without their client's involvement, participation, or knowledge.[510] Sanctions might be awarded even when not meeting the standards under FDCPA § 1692k(a)(3) for such an award.[511]

Nevertheless, a debt collector's request for sanctions under 28 U.S.C. § 1927 are more often rejected, such as where the blame could be put on both sides,[512] where the consumer's FDCPA claims had some merit,[513] where the consumer attorney acted in good faith,[514] or where the consumer attorney's conduct was not egregious enough.[515] The statute also does not apply to original filings in the case, only subsequent conduct after the case is initiated.[516]

12.10.4 Cost Awards for Prevailing FDCPA Defendants

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d)(1) provides that unless a federal statute provides otherwise, that costs (other than attorney fees) may be awarded to the prevailing party. The FDCPA is no exception.

An argument could be made that FDCPA § 1692k(a)(3) is a federal statute providing otherwise—it provides for an award of costs only where an FDCPA action is brought in bad faith and for purposes of harassment. But the Supreme Court in Marx v. General Revue Corp.,[517] ruled to the contrary for sanctions was not made until after judgment; because suit did not lack factual basis, court did not have to address argument that suit was brought for improper purpose); Muhammad v. Reese Law Grp., 2017 WL 2578915 (S.D. Cal. June 14, 2017) (denying the collection law firm's motion for Rule 11 sanctions where the consumer's FDCPA claims were not objectively baseless and where her counsel conducted a reasonable inquiry before signing the complaint); Infante v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2017 WL 2445133 (N.D. Ill. June 6, 2017) ("As a general matter, Rule 11 and § 1927 do not require litigants and counsel to abandon pursuit of claims in the face of contrary evidence.").

504 See, e.g., Tacoronte v. Cohen, 654 Fed. Appx. 445 (11th Cir. 2016); Diaz v. First Marblehead Corp., 643 Fed. Appx. 916, 922 (11th Cir. 2016); Chaudhry v. Gallerizzo, 174 F.3d 394 (4th Cir. 1999); Oganyan v. Square Two Fin., 2012 WL 4466607 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 26, 2012); Ford v. Principal Recovery Grp., Inc., 2011 WL 4549200 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 29, 2011); Schaffhauser v. Citibank, 2007 WL 3342788 (M.D. Pa. Nov. 8, 2007); Grimard v. Palmer, Reifler & Assoc., P.A., 2007 WL 2221396 (E.D. Mich. July 31, 2007); Wilkinson v. Wells Fargo Bank MN, 2007 WL 1655222 (E.D. Wis. June 6, 2007), aff'd, 268 Fed. Appx. 476 (7th Cir. 2008); Jones v. Fisher Law Grp., P.L.L.C., 334 F. Supp. 2d 847 (D. Md. 2004).

505 Riddle & Assoc., P.C. v. Kelly, 414 F.3d 832 (7th Cir. 2005).

506 De Dios v. Int'l Realty & Invs., 641 F.3d 1071, 1076–1077 (9th Cir. 2011).

507 Blowers v. Lerner, 2016 WL 4575315 (E.D. Va. Aug. 31, 2016), modified, 2017 WL 4080990 (E.D. Va. Sept. 14, 2017).

508 Conner v. BCC Fin. Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 597 F. Supp. 2d 1299 (S.D. Fla. 2008).

509 Wiley v. Notte & Kreyling, P.C., 2019 WL 8587293, at *3 (N.D. Ga. May 10, 2019) (disagreement with binding precedent was not valid basis for filing second lawsuit that was substantially similar to the one previously dismissed, and counsel's conduct was "objectively in bad faith, as well as vexatious").

510 Alcivar v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 2020 WL 2559845 (E.D.N.Y. May 20, 2020).

511 Pescatrice v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 2007 WL 9611055 (S.D. Fla. May 8, 2007). See also Lacayo v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2020 WL 2488377 (S.D. Fla. Apr. 13, 2020) (denied defendants' request for attorney fees under § 1692k(a)(3) since there was no proof that the consumers knew the action was meritless, but awarded fees under 28 U.S.C. § 1927 where consumers' attorney's conduct was deemed unreasonable and vexatious).

512 See Duranseau v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 644 Fed. Appx. 702, 707 (8th Cir. 2016); Anderson v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2010 WL 1752609 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 29, 2010).

513 See Duranseau v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 644 Fed. Appx. 702, 707 (8th Cir. 2016). See also Infante v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 2445133 (N.D. Ill. June 6, 2017); Stewart v. Chambless, 2016 WL 3583811 (M.D. Ala. June 30, 2016); Smyth v. Merchants Credit Corp., 2014 WL 12707240, at *2 (W.D. Wash. May 14, 2014); Montero-Hernandez v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2014 WL 505119 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 7, 2014); Anderson v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2010 WL 1752609 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 29, 2010).

514 See Mellon v. Monarch Recovery Mgmt., Inc., 2017 WL 4776738 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 17, 2017). See also Carner v. MGC Mortg., Inc., 2020 WL 7481170 (S.D. Fla. May 13, 2020), adopting 2020 WL 7481269 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 23, 2020).

515 See Appx. E.3.6.4, infra.

516 See Montero-Hernandez v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2014 WL 505119 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 7, 2014).

517 568 U.S. 371, 133 S. Ct. 1166, 185 L. Ed. 2d 242 (2013).

that FDCPA § 1692k(a)(3) was not a federal statute providing otherwise.

The Court in Marx also clarified that the award of costs to the prevailing party is not mandatory and that the court has discretion as to the award of costs, for example in a situation where the consumer is indigent.[518] A defendant has not prevailed and is not entitled to costs where the consumer voluntarily dismisses the suit.[519]

12.10.5 Other Sources of Fee Awards for the Collector's Attorney

Courts may seek to award sanctions under their inherent authority or through a civil contempt order.[520]

One court required that such sanctions must involve bad faith, which requirement may not be met even "in instances where a litigant's arguments are characterized as frivolous, outrageous, inexcusable, or even when the litigant's behavior is appalling."[521]

The federal removal statute provides "An order remanding the case may require payment of just costs and any actual expenses, including attorney fees, incurred as a result of the removal."[522] If a collector sues the consumer in state court and the consumer removes the case to federal court (such as incorrectly assuming an FDCPA counterclaim provides federal jurisdiction), the consumer may owe the defendant's attorney fees to remand the case to state court.[523]

A litigious collector may try other theories to recover attorney fees from a FDCPA plaintiff, such as a counterclaim or separate action for abuse of process or malicious prosecution,[524] or even for libel.[525]

518 568 U.S. 371, 386 n.9, 133 S. Ct. 1166, 185 L. Ed. 2d 242 (2013). See also Tallman v. Freedman Anselmo Lindberg L.L.C., 2013 WL 4041412 (C.D. Ill. Aug. 7, 2013) (no award of costs to defendant where consumer incapable of paying court-imposed costs). But see Raya v. NPAS, Inc., 2020 WL 3550002 (E.D. Va. May. 11, 2020) (court declined to award prevailing defendant attorney fees pursuant to § 1692k(a)(3), but did award costs of $2,910.47 despite plaintiff's claim of indigency).

519 See Montgomery v. Sessoms & Rogers, P.A., 2013 WL 593949 (E.D.N.C. Feb. 15, 2013).

520 See Ozmun v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 912286 (W.D. Tex. Feb. 15, 2018) (contempt sanction where consumer violated amended scheduling order by failing to extend settlement offer and to designate witnesses, experts, and exhibits by extended deadline).

521 See Fields v. Credit Mgmt. Sys., 2016 WL 9088755 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 20, 2016).

522 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

523 U.S. Bank v. Butler, 2011 WL 13234968, at *2 (E.D.N.C. Aug. 26, 2011).

524 Compare Ziobron v. Crawford, 667 N.E.2d 202 (Ind. Ct. App. 1996) (malicious prosecution claim could proceed); Egan v. Williams, 709 A.2d 1057 (R.I. 1998) (abuse of process counterclaim against consumer could proceed, but not against the consumer's attorneys), with Emanuel v. Am. Credit Exch., 870 F.2d 805 (2d Cir. 1989) (malicious prosecution counterclaim by a collector in FDCPA action cannot succeed if FDCPA claim was successful), Traverso v. Sharinn, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19095 (D. Conn. Apr. 9, 1989) (dismissing as premature in FDCPA suit a counterclaim for malicious prosecution), and In re Germain, 249 B.R. 47 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 2000) (malicious prosecution claim not allowed).

525 See Conner v. Instant Cash Advance, 2003 WL 446378 (S.D. Ind. Feb. 20, 2003) (dismissing counterclaim for libel for failure to state cause of action).

Chapter 13 Bankruptcy and Affirmative Claims Arising from Debt Collection

13.1 Introduction

13.1.1 Effect of Bankruptcy on Debt Collection Claims

Claims against debt collectors and consumer bankruptcy filings often go hand-in-hand. Consumers who have filed or are considering filing for bankruptcy have frequently suffered from abusive debt collection practices. Virtually all bankruptcy debtors have received dunning letters and phone calls from debt collection agencies and collection lawyers, and many of these communications violate the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act and state debt collection laws. Potential bankruptcy clients should be asked to identify and bring in all collection letters that they have received and to describe the date and contents of telephone calls received from debt collectors.

If a consumer has potential claims against debt collectors but nevertheless files for bankruptcy, it is important to understand how bankruptcy will affect those claims.[1] This impact varies, depending upon whether the debt collection claims arose before, during, or after the bankruptcy case was filed, and on whether the bankruptcy case proceeded under chapter 7 or chapter 13. A bankruptcy will also have an effect on who can bring the claims against the debt collector and the procedure for recovery of the consumer's attorney fee. A bankruptcy filing also provides options to litigate the debt collection claim in the bankruptcy court.

In addition, debt collection claims can arise out of or in conjunction with a bankruptcy case. Courts are divided over whether the Bankruptcy Code provides the only remedy for such claims, or whether debtors may also seek remedies under state and federal fair debt collection laws.

13.1.2 Organization of This Chapter

An understanding of the interrelation of a consumer bankruptcy and debt collection claims requires an understanding of certain key bankruptcy features, including the automatic stay, the property of the estate, exemptions, and the bankruptcy discharge. For those less familiar with these concepts, § 13.2, infra, provides bankruptcy basics: an overview of chapters 7 and 13 bankruptcies, how they differ, and their advantages and disadvantages, and then covers in more detail the key concepts of the automatic stay, property of the estate, exemptions, and the discharge.

More detail on these topics and a complete discussion of the bankruptcy process can be found in Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice.[2] That treatise is recommended for those considering using bankruptcy to assist their clients. In addition, NCLC's Guide to Surviving Debt[3] offers an overview of when to file for bankruptcy and the advantages and disadvantages of such a filing.

Section 13.3, infra, considers the impact of a bankruptcy filing on a consumer bringing a debt collection claim during or after the bankruptcy, where the debt collection claim arose before the bankruptcy filing. Topics of particular importance are the impact of not disclosing the debt collection claim on the bankruptcy schedules, and standing and judicial estoppel problems where the claim has not been scheduled. Section 13.4, infra, then examines the impact of a bankruptcy filing where the debt collection claim arose during or after the bankruptcy case.

Section 13.5, infra, covers the litigation of debt collection claims in the bankruptcy proceeding. Section 13.6, infra, considers the payment of the consumer's attorney fees where the consumer has filed bankruptcy.

Section 13.7, infra, examines federal and state debt collection claims that relate to the debt collector's actions during and after the bankruptcy case. Do the FDCPA and state laws apply where the Bankruptcy Code provides remedies for the same conduct? A 2017 Supreme Court case addressed issues that arise when debt collection claims relate to a debt collector's actions in filing a bankruptcy proof of claim, and this topic is treated in depth in § 13.7.3, infra.

13.2 Bankruptcy Basics

13.2.1 Chapter 7 Overview

A bankruptcy case filed under chapter 7 is often called a "liquidation." In a chapter 7 case, the debtor's assets are examined by a court-appointed trustee to determine if anything is available to be sold or recovered for the benefit of creditors. Certain property cannot be liquidated by the trustee because it is exempt.[4] In most consumer cases, virtually all of the debtor's assets are exempt.

To be eligible to file a chapter 7 bankruptcy, a debtor, with limited exception, must receive budget and credit counseling within the 180 days before the bankruptcy case is filed.[5] To

1 See § 13.3, infra.

2 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

3 National Consumer Law Center, Surviving Debt Ch. 24 (2019 ed.), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

4 See § 13.2.5, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice Ch. 10 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

5 11 U.S.C. § 109(h). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 3.2.1.5 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

receive a discharge, the debtor must complete a financial education course.[6] Both sessions can be completed online or over the phone with little difficulty.

Debtors whose debts are primarily consumer debts and whose income is above the median family income for family size for their state of residence are subject to the "means test" in section 707(b) of the Bankruptcy Code.[7] This test was intended to make it more difficult for wealthy consumers to file a chapter 7 bankruptcy. After the application of the means test, debtors whose disposable income exceeds a certain threshold may have their cases dismissed as abusive, or they may have to convert to a chapter 13 bankruptcy.

Creditors may ask debtors in bankruptcy to reaffirm a debt.[8] A reaffirmation is an agreement by which the debtor agrees to remain legally obligated on some or all of a debt to a creditor that would otherwise be discharged.[9] Debt collectors have been known to use a variety of coercive levers to lure debtors into giving up the protections of their bankruptcy discharge by making new and binding promises to pay debts that have been discharged. Although the Code does not completely bar reaffirmation of discharged debts, it does restrict them, on the theory that it is rarely a wise step for a debtor.

Reaffirmation agreements must meet the specific requirements set forth in 11 U.S.C. § 524 to be enforceable.[10] Reaffirmation agreements are most common for debts that are secured by property that the debtor wishes to keep.[11] Generally, it is never a good idea for a debtor to reaffirm a credit card debt or other unsecured debt. Careful consideration should also be given to reaffirming store credit cards that purport to be secured. In many instances, a detailed letter of inquiry asking for proof of the security interest will reveal that the creditor does not, in fact, have a valid security interest.

At the conclusion of a chapter 7 case eligible debtors will receive a "discharge" from their debts, except for certain debts that are excluded from discharge.[12] In most cases, a debtor will receive a discharge in a chapter 7 case within approximately four months of the filing of the petition. A discharge may not be available if the debtor has received a discharge in a previous bankruptcy case within certain time periods set forth in the Code.[13]

13.2.2 Chapter 13 Overview

A case filed under chapter 13 is often called a "reorganization" because it provides for the "adjustment of debts." Unlike chapter 7, chapter 13 gives debtors the opportunity to adjust their financial affairs without having to liquidate their non-exempt assets.[14] In a chapter 13 case, the debtor submits a plan to repay creditors all or part of the money owed to them over a three to five year period.[15] If the proposed plan meets the requirements set out in the Bankruptcy Code, it must be confirmed by the bankruptcy court.[16] The effect of confirmation is to bind the debtor and all creditors of the debtor to the terms of the plan.[17] After confirmation, creditors taking actions inconsistent with the plan may be subject to contempt proceedings.[18] The plan is usually funded from the debtor's future income. The debtor makes payments in the amount specified by the plan to the chapter 13 trustee, who in turn, distributes the funds to creditors in accordance with the plan and applicable Code provisions.

To be eligible to file a chapter 13 case, debtors must satisfy the same credit counseling requirements as chapter 7 debtors.[19] In addition, chapter 13 debtors (or debtors and their spouses) must have regular income[20] and have unsecured and secured debts below certain thresholds set forth in the Code.[21]

Upon successful completion of the plan and a financial management course,[22] the debtors receive a discharge from their debts, except for certain debts that are excluded from discharge.[23] In some cases, a chapter 13 debtor may be eligible

6 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(11). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 8.3.3 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

7 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 13.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

8 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.5.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

9 11 U.S.C. § 524(k).

10 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.5.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

11 For more detail on dealing with secured creditors, see National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice Ch. 11 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. For a discussion of reaffirmation agreements, see National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.5.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

12 See § 13.2.6, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (discussing non-dischargeable debts).

13 See § 13.2.6, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice §§ 15.2.2.8, 15.2.2.9 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

14 For a more complete discussion of chapter 13, see National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice Ch. 12 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

15 11 U.S.C. § 1321.

16 11 U.S.C. §§ 1322, 1325. See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice Ch. 12 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

17 11 U.S.C. § 1327(a). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 12.11 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

18 See 11 U.S.C. § 105 (permitting the bankruptcy court to do what is necessary to carry out the provisions of the Code).

19 11 U.S.C. § 109(h). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 3.2.1.5 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

20 11 U.S.C. § 109(e). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 12.2.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

21 11 U.S.C. § 109(e). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 12.2.3 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

22 11 U.S.C. § 1328(g). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 8.3.3 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

23 11 U.S.C. § 1328. See § 13.2.6, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

for a hardship discharge even if the plan is not completed.[24] A discharge may not be available if the debtor has received a discharge in a previous bankruptcy case within certain time periods set forth in the Code.[25]

13.2.3 Choosing to File and Choosing a Chapter

Before a bankruptcy case can be filed, it is necessary that a decision be made that bankruptcy is, in fact, the best vehicle for dealing with the problems facing a particular client. Most of the legal analysis that occurs in a typical consumer bankruptcy case involves comparing bankruptcy with other possible avenues of relief. In some cases, a client's objectives will be fully satisfied by alternatives such as a letter from an attorney asking the debt collector to cease collection contacts[26] or an affirmative suit for abusive debt collection.

In deciding whether to file for relief, a debtor will need to weigh the advantages and disadvantages of bankruptcy. The primary advantages of bankruptcy can be summarized as: the discharge of most debts, the protection of property and income from unsecured creditors, the automatic stay, and tools for eliminating or modifying secured debts.[27] Bankruptcy may also provide a more advantageous litigation forum.[28] The disadvantages of bankruptcy, or reasons not to file, might include: the loss of non-exempt property, the effect on credit history and reputation, possible discrimination after bankruptcy, and the client's personal feelings about not paying their debts.[29] Additionally, opting not to file a bankruptcy will preserve the right to obtain relief in years to come.[30] Clients that are judgment-proof or otherwise not in danger of sustaining any tangible loss may consider waiting to file. On the other hand, the peace of mind that comes from having the burden of debt lifted may justify filing sooner rather than later.

Bound up with the decision to file a bankruptcy case is the question of which type of bankruptcy offers the greatest benefit to the client.[31] For many consumer debtors, chapter 7 offers the quickest and most complete relief. Chapter 7 will be attractive to consumers that have little or no non-exempt property that needs to be protected in a chapter 13. Chapter 7 may also be the better choice for consumers that have little excess income, beyond that necessary for living expenses, with which to pay unsecured creditors through a chapter 13 plan.

The most common reason for filing a chapter 13 is the presence of one or more secured creditors who cannot be satisfactorily handled in any other way.[32] One frequent example is the bank or finance company that is about to repossess a car or foreclose on a home. The automatic stay will generally stop the repossession or foreclosure, and chapter 13 offers debtors a number of ways to deal with secured creditors that are not available to chapter 7 debtors.[33] For example, chapter 13 debtors may be able to lower monthly payments on secured debts or cure long-term loans over a three-to-five year period. Debtors that wish to protect non-exempt assets are likely to find chapter 13 the better choice. Chapter 13 also might be favored because it offers a slightly broader discharge than chapter 7. Individuals are barred from obtaining chapter 7 relief if, within a certain number of years in the past, they received a discharge in another bankruptcy. The time frames depend on the type of prior bankruptcy. Chapter 13 may be an option for a debtor who cannot file a chapter 7 case due to the time limits on repeat filings.[34]

Another factor to consider before filing is the timing of the filing.[35] Of course, in some cases, such as when repossession or foreclosure is threatened, prompt filing may be necessary. In other cases, such as where the debtor has recently transferred property, delay may be more advisable. Issues related to exemptions and the dischargeability of certain debts may also depend on the timing of the bankruptcy filing.

13.2.4 The Automatic Stay

The automatic stay is a fundamental cornerstone of the bankruptcy system.[36] In most cases,[37] it is triggered instantly

24 11 U.S.C. § 1328(b). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 6.2.1 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

25 11 U.S.C. § 1328(f). See § 13.2.6, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice §§ 15.2.2.8, 15.2.2.9 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

26 See § 5.10, supra.

27 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 6.2.1 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

28 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice Ch. 15 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

29 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 6.2.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

30 See § 13.2.6, infra (discussing of the bar to discharge in later cases); National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice §§ 15.2.2.8, 15.2.2.9 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

31 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 6.3.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

32 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 6.3.3 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

33 For more detail on dealing with secured creditors, see National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice Ch. 11 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

34 See § 13.2.6, infra (discussion of time limits on repeat bankruptcy filings).

35 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 6.5 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

36 11 U.S.C. § 362(a). See H.R. Rep No. 95-595, at 340 (1977) ("The automatic stay is one of the fundamental debtor protections provided by the bankruptcy laws. It gives the debtor a breathing spell from creditors. It stops all collection efforts, all harassment, and all foreclosure actions. It permits the debtor to attempt a repayment plan or reorganization, or simply to be relieved of the financial pressures caused by overextension of credit.").

37 Several exceptions to this general rule were added to the Bankruptcy Code in 2005. For debtors who have had one or more cases dismissed in the year preceding their current filing the duration of the stay may be limited or the stay may not come into effect upon filing the case. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 362(c)(3), 362(c)(4); National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.3.3 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

upon the filing of a bankruptcy petition.[38] The main purpose of the automatic stay is to protect the debtor[39] and the debtor's property and to allow the bankruptcy court to deal with the debtor's situation in an orderly manner. With few exceptions,[40] the automatic stay stops creditors from taking any action to collect on a prepetition claim against the debtor,[41] from pursuing or continuing a civil legal action against the debtor,[42] and from exercising control over property of the estate.[43] Courts generally construe the automatic stay prohibitions broadly.[44] In some cases, the creditor may be required to take affirmative action to prevent a violation of the stay.[45] For example, counsel bringing a collection lawsuit against the debtor has a duty to take action to halt the non-bankruptcy court proceedings.[46] Actions taken in violation of the stay, regardless of whether a creditor has notice, are void.[47]

The duration of the automatic stay varies, but in consumer bankruptcy cases, the stay commonly lasts for the duration of the case, three to six months in chapter 7 cases and up to five years in chapter 13 cases.[48] The duration of the stay also depends to some extent on the nature of the action to be stayed. Technically, if no prior case was dismissed in the year prior to filing, the stay continues until the following dates. To the extent the stay is based upon provisions barring an act against property of the estate, the stay continues until the property is no longer property of the estate or until the court order terminating the stay becomes effective, whichever is sooner. To the extent the stay is against any other act, the stay continues until the earliest of the following: the case is closed, the case is dismissed, a discharge is granted or denied, or a court order terminating the stay becomes effective.

Section 362(k)[49] of the Code provides a private right of action for anyone injured by a willful violation of the automatic stay. A willful violation is one committed knowingly; no malice need be shown.[50] To be liable under section 362(k), the creditor must also have notice of the stay.[51] Creditors are notified officially of the automatic stay in the notice of the meeting of creditors sent out by the court. However, this notice usually is not mailed until several weeks after the petition is filed. Therefore, debtor's counsel may give additional notice of the stay to creditors and others who might violate the stay without prompt, clear notice. While formal written notice is not required for a creditor to be subject to the stay, the better practice is to send notice by certified mail, return receipt requested, immediately after the petition is filed. If time is a critical factor, a telephone call, email, or facsimile preceding the mailed notification may be appropriate.[52]

Unlike the FDCPA, there is no bona fide error defense for an automatic stay violation.[53] As a result, courts have routinely rejected creditors' attempts to blame automatic stay violations on computer glitches.[54] Creditors, especially those regularly

38 11 U.S.C. § 362(a).

39 In chapter 13, a codebtor stay prohibits any act or civil legal action to collect all or part of a consumer debt of the debtor from any codebtor. 11 U.S.C. § 1301. See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.4.5 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

40 Section 362(b) contains a list of exceptions to the automatic stay. Most significant to consumer are the exceptions relating to criminal proceedings, certain family law proceedings, and residential tenant evictions. See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.4.6 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

41 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(6). See, e.g., In re Grisham, 2013 WL 427935 (Bankr. D. Haw. Feb. 4, 2013) (condominium association's shutting off utilities was prohibited attempt to collect debt). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.4.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

42 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(1). But see In re Sori, 513 B.R. 728, 733–734 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2014) (summarizing split in case law interpreting scope of stay exception applicable to criminal proceedings related to prepetition debt). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.4.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

43 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(3). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.4.3 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. For a description of property of the estate, see § 13.2.5, infra.

44 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

45 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See, e.g., Cross v. City of Chicago, 584 B.R. 833 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2018) (city required to return vehicle seized for nonpayment of tickets in violation of stay).

46 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.4.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See, e.g., In re Swindle, 584 B.R. 259 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2018) (attorney for condominium association had duty to ensure that order for possession was not enforced postpetition).

47 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.6.1 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

48 11 U.S.C. §§ 362(c) to 362(e). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.3.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

49 11 U.S.C. § 362(k) (formerly § 362(h)).

50 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.6.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

51 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.5 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

Section 342(g)(2) provides that a "monetary penalty" may not be imposed on a creditor under section 362(k) for violation of the stay if the creditor has not received "effective notice" of the order for relief as defined in section 362(g)(1). This provision, when it applies, precludes only the recovery of punitive damages—a monetary penalty—under section 362(k)(1). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.6 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

52 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.5 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

53 See In re Wingard, 382 B.R. 892 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 2008).

54 In re Campion, 294 B.R. 313 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2003) (failure of debt collector to match debtor's name with name in its database did not render violation non-willful); In re Rijos, 263 B.R. 382 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 2001) (creditor's "computer did it" defense allegedly caused by installation of new software system rejected); In re Hill, 523 B.R. 704, 714 (Bankr. D. Mont. 2014) (creditor has affirmative duty to adjust computer system to comply with stay; debt collector violated stay when did not have adequate procedures in effect to prevent negative credit reporting of debt after bankruptcy petition filed); In re Wingard, 382 B.R. 892 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2008) (computer error defense cannot excuse stay violation that resulted from creditor's losing notice of bankruptcy filing); In re Andrus, 2004 WL 2216493 (Bankr. D. Idaho Sept. 23, 2004) (computer error defense by lender rejected); In re McCormack, 203 B.R. 521 (Bankr. D.N.H. 1996) (computer error defense called a "non-starter").

involved with bankruptcy cases, have a duty of establish procedures that ensure compliance with the stay.[55]

Where a creditor has violated the automatic stay, Bankruptcy Code section 362(k) provides for actual damages, costs, and attorney fees, and, if appropriate, punitive damages.[56] The Bankruptcy Code mandates that the court determine actual damages upon a finding of willful violation of the automatic stay.[57] A creditor's good faith belief that it was entitled to take the action that violated the stay is generally not a defense.[58] The only exception is for creditors who act in a good faith belief that Bankruptcy Code section 362(k)(2) applies to the debtor, in which case the recovery against the creditor is limited to actual damages.[59] Most courts hold that emotional distress damages are compensable as actual damages under section 362(k).[60] If the court finds a willful violation of the stay, the debtor is entitled to reasonable attorney fees and costs required to remedy the violation and prosecute an action for damages.[61] Section 362(k) expressly authorizes the award of 55 In re Govero, 439 B.R. 917 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 2010) (creditors cannot avoid liability for willful violation of the stay because they failed to properly keep records of bankruptcy notices); In re Perviz, 302 B.R. 357 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 2003) (creditor must ensure that bankruptcy notices sent to an internally improper, but otherwise valid, corporate address are forwarded in a prompt and timely manner to the correct person/department); In re Stucka, 77 B.R. 777 (Bankr. C.D. Cal.1987) (failure to adopt procedures to prevent stay violations rendered violations "willful" and "wanton").

56 11 U.S.C. § 362(k). See Houck v. Substitute Trustee Serv., Inc., 791 F.3d 473 (4th Cir. 2015) (U.S. district courts as well as bankruptcy courts have subject matter jurisdiction over § 362(k) claims); In re Stanwyck, 450 B.R. 181 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2011) (right to bring action for damages for stay violation survives closing of bankruptcy case and there is no statute of limitations applicable to action); National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.6.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

57 In re Vazquez Laboy, 647 F.3d 367, 375–376 (1st Cir. 2011).

58 Internal Revenue Service v. Murphy, 892 F.3d 29, 37–38 (1st Cir. 2018) (willful violation of stay occurs when defendant knew of automatic stay and took intentional action that violated stay); In re Chesnut, 422 F.3d 298 (5th Cir. 2005) (creditor's belief that property it unilaterally seized was not part of bankruptcy estate is irrelevant to determination of willfulness); In re Atl. Bus. & Cmty. Corp., 901 F.2d 325 (3d Cir. 1990) (creditor landlord acted deliberately in denying debtor access to premises; good faith defense rejected); In re Ozenne; 337 B.R. 214 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2006) (uncertainty about legal status of property under state law does not affect award of compensatory damages for willful stay violation).

59 11 U.S.C. § 362(k)(2) creates a narrow exception for certain creditor actions that may be triggered by the chapter 7 debtor's non-compliance with the "Statement of Intention" provisions for scheduled debts secured by property of the bankruptcy estate, 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(2). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 11.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

60 In re Lansaw, 853 F.3d 657, 669 (3d Cir. 2017) (emotional distress damages recoverable for violation of stay and in appropriate cases no corroborating medical evidence necessary); Lodge v. Kondaur Capital Corp., 750 F.3d 1263 (11th Cir. 2014) (emotional distress damages fall within term "actual damages" in § 362(k), although debtor failed to make adequate showing for recovery in this case); In re Repine, 536 F.3d 512 (5th Cir. 2008) (emotional distress damages are available when supported by specific information, but not based on general assertion of emotional harm); Dawson v. Washington Mut. Bank, 390 F.3d 1139, 1148 (9th Cir. 2004) ("'actual damages' that may be recovered by an individual who is injured by a willful violation of the automatic stay include damages for emotional distress"); Fleet Mortg. Grp., Inc. v. Kaneb, 196 F.3d 265 (1st Cir. 1999) (affirming $25,000 assessment of damages for emotional anguish related to creditor's delay in dismissing foreclosure action after bankruptcy petition filed); Sundquist v. Bank of Am. (In re Sundquist), 566 B.R. 563 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2017) (awarding debtors over one million dollars in actual damages, including $300,000 for emotional harm, for mortgage servicer's foreclosure in violation of stay), later decision vacating judgment based on parties' settlement, 580 B.R. 536 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2018); In re Burns, 503 B.R. 666, 674 (S.D. Miss. 2013) (uncorroborated testimony from debtor may be "particularized and extensive enough" to meet specificity requirement for proof of emotional harm from stay violation); Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C. v. Taylor, 369 B.R. 282 (S.D. W. Va. 2007) (approving award of $5000 emotional distress damages against creditor who visited debtors' home for debt collection purposes on two occasions after bankruptcy petition filed); In re Flynn, 185 B.R. 89 (S.D. Ga. 1995) (expert medical testimony not necessary to establish damages for emotional harm resulting from IRS's stay violation); In re Hill, 523 B.R. 704 (Bankr. D. Mont. 2014) (even if violation of the stay is not egregious, debtor may recover emotional distress damages that arose from stay violation, and debtor may establish emotional distress damages without corroborating evidence if circumstances make it obvious that a reasonable person would have suffered significant emotional harm); In re Juliano, 2012 WL 760312 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. Mar. 2, 2012) (assessing emotional distress damages against bank that continued preauthorized withdrawals from bank account after petition filing); In re Coleman, 2011 WL 5025499 (Bankr. D.S.C. Oct. 20, 2011) (awarding emotional distress and punitive damages against payday lender for harassing debt collection activities in violation of stay; medical evidence not presented); In re Swilling, 2008 WL 4999090 (Bankr. M.D. Ala. Nov. 20, 2008) (awarding $5000 emotional distress damages and $10,000 punitive damages against creditor who refused to turn over debtor's Social Security funds diverted into account controlled by creditor); In re Caffey, 384 B.R. 297 (Bankr. S.D. Ala. 2008) ($5000 emotional distress damages awarded in addition to other compensatory and punitive damages after debtor incarcerated postpetition in creditor's attempt to collect child support from estate property), aff'd, 384 Fed. Appx. 882 (11th Cir. 2010); In re Caldwell, 2006 WL 3541931 (Bankr. D. Or. Dec. 7, 2006) ($50,000 emotional distress award for debtor arrested on outstanding prepetition warrant for non-appearance at debtor's examination hearing; creditor liable for failing to rescind warrant); In re Curtis, 322 B.R. 470 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2005) ($15,000 damages for emotional distress for violations of automatic stay, post-discharge injunction, and FDCPA by communicating directly with debtor regarding debt with knowledge that debtor was represented by counsel and by misrepresenting status of the debt in its demands for payment of discharged second mortgage); In re Covington, 256 B.R. 463 (Bankr. D.S.C. 2000) (emotional distress damages awarded without need for medical testimony). But see Aiello v. Providian Fin. Corp., 239 F.3d 876, 881 (7th Cir. 2001) (financial loss, not emotional harm, constitutes "actual damages"; however, court noted that "under the 'clean-up doctrine' of equity, emotional distress might be compensable if there was a 'financial loss to hitch it to'"); United States v. Harchar, 331 B.R. 720 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 2005) ("it is clear that Congress did not intend to authorize the award of emotional damages under § 362(h)").

61 In re Horne, 876 F.3d 1076 (11th Cir. 2017) (attorney fees must be awarded in connection with obtaining damages judgment for violation of stay and defending judgment on appeal); In re Schwartz-Tallard, 803 F.3d 1095, 1099 (9th Cir. 2015) (en banc; overruling prior Ninth Circuit decision that limited attorney fees recovery under § 362(k) to fees incurred in remedying stay violation); In re Johnson, 580 B.R. 766 (S.D. Ohio 2018) (awarding $422,373 in attorney fees and $100,000 in punitive damages in § 362(k) action; noting defendant's combative litigation tactics in justifying fees award); In re Voll, 512 B.R.

punitive damages.[62] Courts have used a variety of standards to determine appropriate punitive damage awards.[63] Significant punitive damage awards play an important role in deterring future misconduct by large and sophisticated creditors who would otherwise feel little incentive to develop effective procedures to protect the rights of bankruptcy debtors.[64]

132, 141 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 2014) (in § 362(k) proceeding, debtor may recover attorney fees and costs even where debtor did not suffer any form of compensable harm); In re Cousins, 404 B.R. 281 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio Apr. 28, 2009) (need to incur attorney fees alone can be basis for damages to support claim under § 362(k)); In re Will, 303 B.R. 357 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2003) (attorney fees recoverable when incurred to remedy continuing infraction that was initially only technical violation of stay); In re Gagliardi 290 B.R. 808 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2003); In re Robinson, 228 B.R. 75, 85 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1998). See In re Lopez, 405 B.R. 24 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 2009) (reversing bankruptcy court's reduction of attorney fees award by two-thirds of lodestar amount ($27,926) due to relatively low compensatory damages award ($2500); disparity between award for compensatory damages and attorney fees claim not basis for reduction in attorney fees award under § 362(k)); In re Johnson, ___ B.R. ___, 2019 WL 2122732 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. May 14, 2019) (in order to recover fees under § 362(k) counsel providing services pro bono need not have actually billed client for fees).

62 See, e.g., In re Johnson, ___ B.R. ___, 2019 WL 2122732, at *12 n.37 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. May 14, 2019) (collecting decisions awarding punitive damages under § 362(k)); In re Stringer, 586 B.R. 435 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2018) (punitive damages assessed against both creditor and its attorney who initiated garnishment in violation of stay); In re Banks, 577 B.R. 659 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 2017) (punitive damages awarded against experienced collections attorney for failing to dismiss garnishment action after notice of stay); In re Vaughn, 542 B.R. 589, 603 (Bankr. M.D. Ala. 2015) ($50,000 punitive damages against creditor that mistakenly garnished bankruptcy debtor and delayed corrective action); Credit Nation Lending Serv., L.L.C. v. Nettles, 489 B.R. 239 (N.D. Ala. 2013) (punitive damages against repossessing creditor in amount sufficient to cancel debt and discharge lien); In re Rivera, 511 B.R. 6 (Bankr. D. P.R. 2014), aff'd, 2015 WL 4078107 (D. P.R. June 30, 2015) (awarding $100,000 punitive damages in addition to $100,000 emotional distress damages against homeowner association creditor for willful stay violation in pursuing collection of fees during bankruptcy case); In re Law, 497 B.R. 843 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2013) ($10,000 punitive damages assessed against auto finance lender that sent letter demanding postpetition payment as personal liability of debtor who intended to surrender vehicle); In re Stephens, 495 B.R. 608 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2013) (awarding punitive damages in twice amount of debt for refusal to return repossessed vehicle in violation of stay); In re Hildreth, 357 B.R. 650 (Bankr. M.D. Ala. 2006) (assessing $18,000 punitive damages and actual damages against mortgagee at $100 per phone call for each of sixty calls and $1000 per letter for postpetition collection demands to debtor); In re Pawlowicz, 337 B.R. 640 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 2005) (assessing $5000 punitive damages against pawnbroker who sold chapter 13 debtor's possessions); In re Hromidko, 302 B.R. 629 (Bankr. N.D. Iowa 2003) (awarding $5000 actual damages, $5000 punitive damages, and attorney fees against collector who contacted debtor's employer and misrepresented nature of debt and employee's liability for it after creditor was notified of debtor's bankruptcy filing); In re Solfanelli, 206 B.R. 699 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. 1996) (nominal compensatory damages, attorney fees, and $10,000 in punitive damages against bank that violated automatic stay by executing upon funds that had been deposited postpetition), aff'd in relevant part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 230 B.R. 54 (M.D. Pa. 1999), aff'd, 203 F.3d 197 (3d Cir. 2000); In re Kaiser, 158 B.R. 808 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1993) (where mortgagee willfully violated automatic stay by entering debtor's home without permission and by removing and disposing of debtor's personal property, debtor entitled to compensatory damages equal to value of personal property removed ($670), items of sentimental value ($500), reasonable attorney fees, and punitive damages ($7500), and mortgagee deprived of any deficiency claim for offset or recoupment against debtor); In re Jacobs, 100 B.R. 357 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1989) (American Express required to pay $80 lost wages, $200 for embarrassment and humiliation, $500 attorney fees, and $1500 punitive damages for engaging two collection agencies which used threatening and harassing tactics after American Express was informed of bankruptcy petition and that debtor was represented by counsel); Mercer v. D.E.F., Inc., 48 B.R. 562 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1985) (Color Tyme TV Rental required to pay $1510 compensatory, $5000 punitive, and $1907.99 attorney fees for repossession of stereo in spite of automatic stay). See also In re Gates, 2005 Bankr. LEXIS 2034 (Bankr. E.D. Va. May 10, 2005) (where debt collector violated bankruptcy discharge injunction by telephoning consumer , threatening arrest, and withdrawing $50 from her checking account, court found collector, Rapid Recovery Credit & Collections, in contempt and awarded nominal actual damages, $500 punitive damages, attorney fees, an additional sanctions of $50 per day for each day that attorney fees remained unpaid, and permanent injunction of further collection activities; court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over related FDCPA claims and debtor failed to pursue reference back of FDCPA claims).

63 See, e.g., In re Snowden, 769 F.3d 651 (9th Cir. 2014) (punitive damages can be awarded for stay violation under "reckless or callous disregard for the law or rights of others" standard); In re Repine, 536 F.3d 512 (5th Cir. 2008) (adopting "egregious conduct" standard for assessing punitive damages); In re Crysen/Montenay Energy Co. v. Esselen Assoc., Inc., 902 F.2d 1098 (2d Cir. 1990) (finding of "maliciousness or bad faith" supports award of punitive damages); In re Ocasio, 272 B.R. 815 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 2002) (in evaluating propriety of awarding punitive damages court will consider reprehensibility of creditor's conduct, ratio between compensatory and punitive damages, and difference between punitive damage award and civil penalties imposed for comparable conduct); In re Brodgen, 588 B.R. 625, 631 (Bankr. M.D. Ala. 2018) (in assessing punitive damages under § 362(k) court considers five factors, including nature of creditor conduct, harm to debtor, defendant's ability to pay, defendant's motive, and any "provocation by debtor"); In re Jean-Francois, 532 B.R. 449, 457 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 2015) (awarding $50,000 punitive damages where violence accompanied eviction carried out in violation of stay; applying standard that creditor's actions "were conducted in bad faith, with malice, or in a particularly egregious manner"); Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C. v. Taylor, 369 B.R. 282 (S.D. W. Va. 2007) (collecting cases on standards for imposing punitive damages under § 362(k)); In re Escobedo, 513 B.R. 605, 613 (Bankr. D.N.M. 2014) (more than "willful violation" of stay required for punitive damages; here punitive damages appropriate where creditor refused to allow debtor on to his property by threatening to shoot him and hit his dog with a shovel); In re Tezla, 2009 WL 212542 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. Jan. 28, 2009) (punitive damages awarded despite only "minor" actual damages in view of egregious nature of creditor's postpetition debt collection activities, which included twenty-four automated calls in one day to debtor); In re Shade, 261 B.R. 213 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 2001) (primary purpose of punitive damages for willful stay violation is to cause change in creditor's behavior, listing factors for imposing punitive damages); In re Wagner, 74 B.R. 898, 904 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) (for award of punitive damages debtor must show creditor acted with actual knowledge that it was violating the federally protected right or with reckless disregard of whether it was doing so).

64 See, e.g., In re Diviney, 225 B.R. 762 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 1998) ($40,000 punitive damages award merited to deter bank engaged in high volume of bankruptcy work from similar conduct (a repossession) in violation of stay); Sundquist v. Bank of Am. (In re Sundquist), 566 B.R. 563 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2017) (assessing $45 million in punitive damages against mortgage servicer that conducted trustee's sale of debtor's home in violation of stay, with punitive damages payable to various non-profit legal groups), later decision vacating judgment based on

In addition to remedies under Bankruptcy Code section 362(k), the debtor also has remedies for violation of the automatic stay as contempt of a court order.[65] Contempt sanctions can be imposed regardless of whether the violation is in willful disregard of the stay. Sanctions that may be imposed for contempt are similar to those available under section 362(k), except that punitive damages are not available.[66] Several courts have held that proceedings for contempt must be brought by motion, rather than by a complaint instituting an adversary proceeding.[67]

The impact of sovereign immunity should be considered where the creditor violating the stay is a government agency.[68] Bankruptcy Code section 106(a) abrogates sovereign immunity for the federal government with respect to section 362. The Supreme Court's decision in Central Virginia Community College v. Katz,[69] appears to permit most, and perhaps all, bankruptcy proceedings, including actions for violation of the automatic stay, to be brought against state governments.[70] However, punitive damages may not be awarded against government entities, and there are limitations on attorney fees that may be assessed against these units.[71] Even if remedies are precluded under section 362(k) based on sovereign immunity, contempt remedies should remain available.

13.2.5 Property of the Estate and Exemptions

The concepts of property of the estate and exemptions are keys to deciding whether to file a bankruptcy and under which chapter to file. They are also important for understanding how a debtor's federal and state debt collection claims will be treated with respect to bankruptcy.[72]

The term bankruptcy estate describes the aggregation of property rights that can be administered by the court in a bankruptcy case.[73] The estate is created upon the commencement of the case.[74] Based on the broad definition of "property of the estate" found in section 541 of the Bankruptcy Code, virtually all assets and property interests of the debtor as of the time the case is filed come into the bankruptcy estate and are subject to being administered for the benefit of creditors if not exempt. Such property includes intangible, contingent, and future property interests, such as any interest a debtor has in any pending lawsuit or potential cause of action. In chapter 7, most property acquired by the debtor after the commencement of the case does not come into the estate.[75] In a chapter 13 case, property of the estate also includes property and earnings acquired while the case is pending, unless the case is converted to another chapter.[76]

In keeping with the "fresh start" purpose of bankruptcy relief, debtors are permitted to claim certain property as exempt in the bankruptcy process and are allowed to retain parties' settlement, 580 B.R. 536 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2018); In re Iskric, 496 B.R. 355 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. 2013) (assessing $30,000 punitive damages against creditor who failed to release bench warrant in collection proceeding, leading to debtor's postpetition incarceration; court notes not first time same creditor violated stay); In re Crawford, 388 B.R. 506 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2008) (finding that creditor's lack of supervision of agents and subagents led to conduct of foreclosure sale in violation of stay, court assessed $60,000 punitive damages award against creditor to encourage exercise of more effective control over agents); In re Nosek, 363 B.R. 643 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2007) (applying its contempt powers to impose $500,000 punitive damages award, court notes "Ameriquest is a national mortgage company, which supports the contention that the amount of punitive damages must be significant enough to garner its attention"), rev'd, 544 F.3d 34 (1st Cir. 2008) (mortgage servicer's accounting practice did not violate terms of particular confirmed chapter 13 plan at issue, but could be violation if plan had specified manner of application and servicer's practices countered these plan terms); In re Lukach, 2007 WL 1365436 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. May 8, 2007) ($5000 punitive damages assessed against Chase after postpetition collection contacts with debtor, with order providing for $2500 sanctions for each future occurrence); In re Dynamic Tours & Transp., Inc., 359 B.R. 336 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2006) (assessing $50,000 punitive damages against GE, noting that company "is an international corporation with vast resources capable of employing competent staff to understand and abide by bankruptcy law"); In re Cullen, 329 B.R. 52 (Bankr. N.D. Iowa 2005) (punitive damages appropriate against "sophisticated player" in credit industry); In re Shade, 261 B.R. 213 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 2001) ($9000 punitive damages award for postpetition debt collection appropriate against sophisticated creditor with large volume of business in the bankruptcy court).

65 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.6.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

66 See, e.g., In re Dyer, 322 F.3d 1178 (9th Cir. 2003) (although attorney fees may be awarded and mild non-compensatory fines may be necessary under some circumstances, serious punitive penalties not available for civil contempt); In re H Granados Communications, Inc., 503 B.R. 726 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2013) (in action brought under 11 U.S.C. § 105(a) chapter 11 debtor can recover damages, including attorney fees, as remedies for stay violation).

67 Barrientos v. Wells Fargo Bank, 633 F.3d 1186 (9th Cir. 2011); Price v. America's Servicing Co., 2013 WL 1914939 (N.D. Tex. May 19, 2013); In re Frambes, 454 B.R. 437 (Bankr. E.D. Ky. 2011).

68 See Hunsaker v. United States, 902 F.3d 963 (9th Cir. 2018) (Bankruptcy Code § 106(a) waives immunity of IRS for emotional distress damages in action under § 362(k)); National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice §§ 9.6.6, 14.3.2.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

69 546 U.S. 356, 126 S. Ct. 990, 163 L. Ed. 945 (2006).

70 See also In re Omine, 485 F.3d 1305 (11th Cir. 2007) (bankruptcy courts may hold states liable for compensatory damages for stay violations, but § 106(a)(3) limits states' liability for punitive damages, fees, and costs). See also In re Odom, 571 B.R. 687 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2017) (rejecting local government entity's claim for immunity against § 362(k) action, except as to punitive damages).

71 See, e.g., In re Duby, 451 B.R. 664 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 2011) (reversing award of punitive damages against federal agency). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice §§ 9.6.6, 14.3.2.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

72 See § 13.3, infra.

73 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 2.5 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

74 11 U.S.C. § 541.

75 There are exceptions for certain types of property acquired within 180 days of filing. See 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(5).

76 See 11 U.S.C. § 1306(a). But see National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 12.8.5 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (discussing various approaches to treatment of property of bankruptcy estate after confirmation of chapter 13 plan).

this property after bankruptcy free from creditor's claims.[77] Exempting property effectively removes it from the bankruptcy estate. Bankruptcy Code section 522(d) lists the exemptions available under the federal exemption scheme.[78] In some states, the debtor is given the choice between using either the state exemption scheme or the federal bankruptcy exemption scheme. Other states have "opted out" of the federal bankruptcy exemptions, and in those states the debtor may use only the state law exemptions, exemptions provided by federal non-bankruptcy law, and the Code's special exemption for certain retirement funds.[79] A few states have also enacted "bankruptcy specific" exemptions that apply only in bankruptcy cases filed by state residents.[80]

The Bankruptcy Code itself says little regarding the procedure for claiming exemptions, other than that the debtor or a dependent shall "file a list" of property claimed as exempt.[81] The Bankruptcy rules require this list to be filed by the debtor as part of the schedules of property.[82] The list of property claimed as exempt is set forth on Schedule C of Official Form 6. The property must be described with some specificity, otherwise the debtor may have problems later protecting that property.[83] The Code allows objections to claims of exemption by "a party in interest"—usually the trustee or a creditor. If no timely and successful objection to the debtor's exemptions is made, the exemptions listed by the debtor are automatically allowed.[84]

13.2.6 Discharge

The ultimate goal of most consumer bankruptcies is the discharge, which frees the debtor from personal liability on almost all debts.[85] It is this clean slate that normally gives debtors the fresh start that bankruptcy is meant to provide. However, under limited circumstances the court may deny a discharge, or the discharge may be inapplicable to some debts. The most common nondischargeable debts are certain tax debts, domestic support obligations, most student loans, and debts incurred by fraud or false pretenses.[86] Additionally, debtors may be barred from receiving a discharge if they have received a discharge in a prior case within a specified period of time.[87] Chapter 7 debtors may not receive a discharge if they received a prior discharge in a chapter 7 or 11 case commenced within eight years of the current filing.[88] Chapter 7 debtors are also barred from receiving a discharge if they received a discharge under chapter 13 in a case commenced within six years of the current filing.[89] A significant exception to this general bar allows a chapter 7 discharge when the previous chapter 13 case completely, or in large part, paid off unsecured debts. Similarly, a discharge cannot be entered in a chapter 13 case if the debtor received a discharge in a prior chapter 7, 11, or 12 case that was filed within four years before the date of the chapter 13 order for relief.[90] Chapter 13 debtors are also barred from receiving a discharge if they received a discharge in a prior chapter 13 case that was filed within two years before the date of the chapter 13 order for relief.[91]

To become eligible for a discharge in chapter 7 or 13 a debtor must, with very limited exceptions, complete a personal financial management instructional course offered by an approved provider, which can be taken in person, on the telephone, or over the Internet.[92]

Once the discharge order enters, it acts as an injunction that prohibits creditors from taking or continuing any action to collect any discharged debt as a personal liability of the debtor.[93] The discharge injunction covers not only legal proceedings, but also any other acts of creditors, such as dunning, harassment, withholding further credit, threatening criminal proceedings, and the like, whether directed at the debtor or at anyone else.[94] The courts interpret the scope of the discharge

77 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice Ch. 10 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

78 11 U.S.C. § 522(d). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 10.2.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

79 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 10.2.1 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

80 See, e.g., In re Schafer, 689 F.3d 601 (6th Cir. 2012) (upholding Michigan's expanded homestead exemptions applicable only in bankruptcy cases).

81 11 U.S.C. § 522(l). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 10.3 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

82 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 4003.

83 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 10.3 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

84 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 10.3.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

85 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice Ch. 15 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

86 For an in depth discussion of all exceptions to the discharge, see National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

87 Notably, there is no bar on the filing of a case after a previous discharge. See, e.g., In re Bateman, 515 F.3d 272 (4th Cir. 2008).

88 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(8). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.2.2.8 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

89 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(9). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.2.2.9 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

90 11 U.S.C. § 1328(f)(1). See In re Sanders, 551 F.3d 397 (6th Cir. 2008) (time period measured from filing date of previous case to filing date of new case); In re Johnson, 488 B.R. 46 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2013) (same); National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.2.2.9 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

91 11 U.S.C. § 1328(f)(2). See In re Bateman, 515 F.3d 272 (4th Cir. 2008) (two-year period ran from filing date of previous case to filing of current case).

92 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 8.3.3 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

93 11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(2). But see 11 U.S.C. § 524(j) (exception to § 524(a)(2) allows creditor with claim secured by residential real property to communicate with debtor about obtaining periodic payments and avoiding foreclosure despite discharge of personal liability on mortgage debt).

94 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.5.1.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

injunction expansively, as its purpose is to "eliminate any doubt concerning the effect of the discharge as a total prohibition on debt collection efforts."[95]

In both chapter 7 and chapter 13 cases, the discharge automatically voids any judgment obtained at any time to the extent such judgment is a determination of the debtor's personal liability for a discharged debt.[96] Doctrines of finality or issue and claim preclusion do not apply to judgments entered in violation of the discharge order.[97]

Although the rule is not universally applied, in most jurisdictions the discharge order in a chapter 7 case in which no distribution is made to creditors discharges the debtor's personal liability on all prepetition debts, even those not listed on the debtor's bankruptcy schedules. Therefore, a creditor may violate the discharge injunction by attempting to enforce personal liability on such an unlisted debt.[98]

Violation of the discharge injunction is contempt, punishable by awards of damages and attorney fees.[99] Contempt sanctions serve either to coerce a party into future compliance with the discharge order or to compensate the debtor for injury caused by past non-compliance.[100] In Taggart v. Lorenzen the Supreme Court distinguished the scienter threshold for a claim for damages for violation of the automatic stay from the standard that may trigger contempt sanctions for violation of the discharge order.[101] The courts have applied a strict liability standard for violations of the automatic stay. This standard does not consider the creditor's good faith belief that it acted lawfully. In Taggart, the Court adopted a slightly different standard for violations of the discharge order. According to the Supreme Court, a court may hold the creditor in civil contempt of the discharge order "where there is not a 'fair ground of doubt' as to whether the creditor's conduct might be lawful under the discharge order."[102] To avoid contempt the creditor's conduct must be objectively reasonable, a standard that takes into account current judicial interpretations of the scope and impact of the discharge order.

The debtor may enforce the discharge injunction through a contempt of court proceeding brought as a motion (a "contested matter") in the same bankruptcy court that entered the discharge order.[103] As discussed later in this chapter, the courts are divided on the issue of whether the debtor may file a complaint in a different court and seek a wider range of remedies for violation of the discharge injunction.[104]

Damages include compensation for emotional distress.[105] Debt collection harassment destroys the peace of mind that the debtor had a right to expect after the discharge. The debtor's own testimony, without expert evidence, may establish the compensable emotional harm.[106]

There is ample authority to enforce the discharge injunction by requiring disgorgement and other equitable remedies under 11 U.S.C. § 105(a).[107] The court may also award punitive damages for violations of the discharge injunction.[108] An

95 In re McLean, 794 F.3d 1313, 1321 (11th Cir. 2015).

96 Tenn. Student Assistance Corp. v. Hood, 541 U.S. 440, 447, 124 S. Ct. 1905, 158 L. Ed. 2d 764 (2004). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.5.1.3 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

97 In re Gray, 573 B.R. 868 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2017) (Rooker-Feldman doctrine does not bar federal court from determining that state court judgment entered in violation of discharge order is void).

98 In re Hammerle, 529 B.R. 17 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 2015); In re Ritchey, 512 B.R. 847 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2014).

99 11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(2). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.5.1.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

100 In re Covelli, 550 B.R. 256, 269 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2016).

101 Taggart v. Lorenzen, ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1795, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2019).

102 Id. at 1804.

103 See, e.g., In re Marshall, 491 B.R. 217 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2012) (discussing debtor's options of bringing "adversary action" as opposed to "contested matter" in bankruptcy court in response to creditor's violation of discharge order).

104 See § 13.5.1, infra. While courts disagree over whether there is a private right of action under 11 U.S.C. § 524, there is no significant dispute that bankruptcy courts can hear actions to remedy violations of the discharge order pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 105, the bankruptcy courts' general authority to exercise equity powers. See, e.g., In re Orrin, 550 B.R. 228, 240 (S.D.N.Y. 2016).

105 In re Marino, 577 B.R. 772, 787 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2017) (affirming award of emotional distress damages of $119,000 based on $1000 per letter and call mortgage servicer made in in violation of discharge order); McLean v. Greenpoint Credit L.L.C., 515 B.R. 841 (M.D. Ala. 2014) (awarding emotional distress damages for creditor conduct that violated both discharge order and FDCPA), aff'd on these grounds and vacated in part on other grounds, 794 F.3d 1313 (11th Cir. 2015) (vacating award of punitive damages on procedural grounds). See also In re Meyers, 344 B.R. 61 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2006)("[t]here is a direct nexus between the purpose of the discharge order and the emotional distress which may result from the violation of the order"); In re Gervin, 337 B.R. 854 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 2005) ("significant component of the fresh start is being free of the kinds of harassment, threats, and anxiety that debtors were suffering before they filed"), aff'd, 300 Fed. Appx. 293 (5th Cir. 2008) (affirming district court reversal of bankruptcy court's award of contempt damages); In re Feldmeier, 335 B.R. 807 (Bankr. D. Or. 2005) (discharge injunction intended to protect debtors from more than financial harm).

106 See In re Vanamann, 561 B.R. 106, 129–130 (Bankr. D. Nev. 2016) (assessing $60,000 emotional distress damages against mortgage servicer that tried to collect on discharged deficiency debt; court relied solely on debtor's testimony); In re Breul, 533 B.R. 782 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2015); In re Culpepper, 481 B.R. 650 (Bankr. D. Or. 2012); In re Meyers, 344 B.R. 61 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2006); In re Gervin, 337 B.R. 854 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 2005), aff'd, 300 Fed. Appx. 293 (5th Cir. 2008) (affirming district court reversal of bankruptcy court's award of contempt damages); In re Feldmeier, 335 B.R. 807 (Bankr. D. Or. 2005) (finding that "a 'reasonable person' would suffer significant emotional harm" from debt collector's phone call threatening criminal prosecution).

107 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.5.5.7 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See generally In re Garcia, 2013 WL 414177 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. Feb. 1, 2013) (assessing various categories of damages under § 105(a) for debt collector's violation of discharge order, noting dispute among courts over applicability of § 105(a) to claims of violation of the discharge order).

108 See In re Marino, 577 B.R. 772, 789 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2017) (reversing bankruptcy court for refusal to consider award of punitive damages for violation of discharge order); In re Van Winkle, 2017 WL 2729069, at assessment of punitive damages performs an important role in enforcing the congressional intent embodied in the fresh start concept and in the discharge order.[109]

There is no provision in the Bankruptcy Code that prohibits a debtor from voluntarily repaying a discharged debt, but the voluntary repayment must not in any manner have been induced by acts of the creditor.[110] Any agreement in which a debtor reaffirms an obligation to repay a prebankruptcy obligation is subject to the strict requirements of Bankruptcy Code section 524. A creditor's action to enforce any type of repayment agreement made outside of the context of a formal reaffirmation agreement approved by the bankruptcy court violates the discharge order.[111] A number of creditors have engaged in the practice of obtaining reaffirmation agreements during the debtor's bankruptcy, but never filing the agreement with the court.[112] Since reaffirmation agreements are invalid unless they are filed with the court and either approved by the court after a hearing or presented with an affidavit from the debtor's attorney,[113] attempts to collect on the debts represented by these reaffirmation agreements violate the discharge injunction.[114] A judgment based upon a claim that a debtor breached a reaffirmation agreement executed in violation of the Bankruptcy Code is void as entered contrary to the discharge order.[115]

Class actions against a number of major retailers who engaged in this practice, including Sears, May Department Stores, Montgomery Ward, and the Federated Department stores, have resulted in favorable settlements for class members. In Bessette v. Avco Financial Services, Inc.,[116] the First Circuit held that the district and bankruptcy court's equitable powers under Bankruptcy Code section 105 allow a class to obtain a disgorgement order of funds collected in violation of the discharge injunction. However, other courts have held that there is no right of action that allows a class of debtors to pursue relief for violations of the discharge order.[117]

13.3 Bankruptcy's Impact on Consumers' Claims Arising Before Bankruptcy

13.3.1 The Importance of "Scheduling" a Debt Collection Claim

Under the Bankruptcy Code's broad definition of property of the estate, existing claims for violations of the FDCPA or state debt collection law become property of the bankruptcy estate upon the filing of a petition for relief.[118] This is true regardless of the chapter under which the debtor files.

*6 (Bankr. D.N.M. June 23, 2017) (awarding punitive damages where creditor's pursuit of state court action contrary to discharge order was reckless and willful); In re Diaz, 526 B.R. 685 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2015) (assignee of prepetition creditor liable for punitive damages where had notice of discharge order; sanctions ranging from $500 to $1500 for each of assignee's twenty-six violative communications); In re Fauser, 545 B.R. 907 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2016) (in awarding punitive damages against Green Tree for violations of discharge order court points to systemic nature of this creditor's infractions, including other court ruling for similar misconduct); In re Otero, 498 B.R. 313 (Bankr. D.N.M. 2013) (awarding $10,000 punitive damages in contempt proceeding for violation of discharge order; numerous harassing calls to debtor, friends, and relatives); In re Poindexter, 376 B.R. 732 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 2007) ($7235.19 punitive damages awarded where creditor showed "clear disregard and disrespect of the bankruptcy laws" in coercing reaffirmation of discharged debt); In re Mooney, 340 B.R. 351 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 2006) (assessing $40,000 punitive damages and $21,000 attorney fees against Green Tree after it harassed debtor and "plowed ahead" with state court action seeking to hold debtor personally liable for discharged debt); In re Perviz, 302 B.R. 357 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 2003) ($8000 punitive damages awarded against institutional creditor); In re Atkins, 279 B.R. 639 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 2002) ($30,000 compensatory damages for emotional harm; no expert medical evidence needed to establish emotional harm); In re Henry, 266 B.R. 457 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2001) ($65,700 punitive damages against creditor who contacted debtors repeatedly seeking reaffirmation agreement after bankruptcy filing); In re Poole, 242 B.R. 104 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1999) (damages for emotional harm and $7500 punitive damages arising from creditor's deliberate refusal to set aside void judgment); In re Watkins, 240 B.R. 668 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1999) ($15,000 attorney fees award appropriate as incurred to secure rights of discharged debtors). But see In re McLean, 794 F.3d 1313 (11th Cir. 2015) (because punitive damages are designed to compensate for reckless or callous disregard for rights of others, rather than to coerce change of behavior, court must consider creditor's specific mens rea regarding legal effect of its actions in violation of discharge order).

109 In re Mooney, 340 B.R. 351, 361 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 2006) (limiting sanctions for discharge order violation to compensatory damages would "send a clear and damaging signal" to creditors that they could make calculated decisions to continue unlawful collection actions and pay only nominal damages when challenged); In re Curtis, 322 B.R. 470 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2005) (creditor not only repeatedly violated stay and discharge order but engaged in frivolous litigation defending debtor's claims, justifying $30,000 punitive damages award against creditor).

110 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.5.1 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

111 See generally In re Jones, 389 B.R. 146 (Bankr. D. Mont. 2008) (finding creditor in contempt when it pursued legal action to enforce debtor's voluntary agreement to repay discharged debt despite lack of approved reaffirmation agreement).

112 See In re Latanowich, 207 B.R. 326, 336 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1997).

113 11 U.S.C. § 524(c). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 11.4.2, 15.5.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

114 First State Bank of Roscoe v. Stabler, 914 F.3d 1129, 1140 (8th Cir. 2019) (finding discharge violation where creditor exercised coercion in having debtors execute new note obligating repayment of discharged debt); In re Vazquez, 221 B.R. 222 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1998) (creditor and attorney for creditor sanctioned for collection actions on debt for which reaffirmation agreement never filed); In re Latanowich, 207 B.R. 326, 336 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1997).

115 In re Bagbag, 595 B.R. 164 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2018).

116 230 F.3d 439 (1st Cir. 2000). See also In re Alley, 2014 WL 2987656, at *3 (Bankr. D. Me. July 1, 2014) (summarizing recent decisions following Bessette).

117 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 14.6 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

118 See § 13.2.5, supra; In re Cheaves, 439 B.R. 220 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2010) (prepetition claims for alleged violations of the FDCPA and the FCCPA are property of the bankruptcy estate and subject to administration by the trustee).

Any potential claims must be listed as an asset on the debtor's schedule of personal property—Schedule B. On Line 21 of Schedule B, the debtor must list "Other contingent and unliquidated claims of every nature." Here, the debtor should describe the debt collection claim. For example, the debtor might list "unliquidated FDCPA claims against PayNow Collection Agency."

The value of the cause of action must also be listed on the schedule. Any value given should be discounted for the likelihood of success and the ultimate probability of collecting any judgment obtained. Alternatively, if the value of the claim is truly unknown, it is often best simply to state the value as "unknown," leaving it to the trustee and creditors to assess the value on their own. This treatment of a cause of action has the advantage of ensuring that the debtor will not be accused of undervaluing it, and has been deemed sufficient by the Supreme Court.[119]

While statutes and court rules do not define the degree of detail required, the description of an FDCPA claim in the debtor's schedules should give the trustee reasonable notice of the need for further investigation into the designated claim.[120]

A 2016 federal district court decision highlighted some of the contingencies that can affect whether a description of an FDCPA claim in bankruptcy schedules meets this standard. In Romeo v. FMA Alliance, Ltd.[121] the court considered standing challenges raised against two FDCPA plaintiffs who had filed chapter 7 bankruptcy cases in the past.[122] In both cases, the debtors' FDCPA claims pre-dated their bankruptcy filings, but they did not disclose the claims in their initial schedules. Both debtors filed their FDCPA lawsuits in U.S. district court after they filed for bankruptcy relief and before they received discharge orders. During the pendency of their bankruptcy cases, both debtors amended their schedules to list as an asset a "Possible Fair Debt Collection Claim" and assigned the claim a $1000 exemption.

In reviewing the adequacy of the two debtors' disclosures, the court reached different outcomes. The first debtor actually had two distinct FDCPA lawsuits pending when he amended his schedules to disclose a "Possible Fair Debt Collection Claim." According to the court, this disclosure was inadequate and misleading, because it effectively concealed one lawsuit. The court dismissed the first debtor's FDCPA action that was the subject of the debt collector's standing challenge. By contrast, the second debtor had only one FDCPA case pending when he amended his schedules to list a "Possible Fair Debt Collection Claim." Although this description failed to include any basic information about the pending FDCPA action, including the identities of the parties, the court found this description adequate to put the trustee on notice about the existence of the FDCPA case. In the second debtor's case the court considered the identity of the FDCPA defendant irrelevant because, the stated value of the claim, the $1000 statutory penalty, would not vary depending on the identity of the defendant.[123] In another recent decision, the district court held that the debtor's disclosure on bankruptcy schedules of "FDCPA Actions" valued at $2000 was sufficient to put the trustee on inquiry notice of more than one FDCPA claim.[124]

Because the courts have not formulated a clear minimal standard for the adequacy of a description of a legal claim in bankruptcy schedules, advocates should err on the side of more rather than less detail. This should include docket information

119 See Taylor v. Freeland & Kronz, 503 U.S. 638, 112 S. Ct. 1644, 118 L. Ed. 2d 280 (1992) (cause of action described, but valued as "unknown," was sufficient to put trustee on notice of exemption). See also Schwab v. Reilly, 560 U.S. 770, 789 n.16, 130 S. Ct. 2652, 177 L. Ed. 2d 234 (2010) (noting that listing law suit exemption amount as "unknown" or "to be determined" are "red flags" signaling that trustee must object in timely fashion or otherwise be precluded from challenging exemption); Cincinnati Life Ins. Co. v. Grottenhuis, 2011 WL 1107114, at *5 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 23, 2011) (rejecting judicial estoppel where debtor listed value of claim against identified parties as "unknown"); Pulice v. Botsford Gen. Hosp., 2012 WL 716286 (Mich. Ct. App. Mar. 6, 2012) (scheduling of prebankruptcy lawsuit as asset of unknown value, claiming exemption up to maximum allowed, and lack of objection to exemption preserved debtor's standing to pursue lawsuit).

120 Nardino v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 2019 WL 2053708, at *4 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 26, 2019) (summarizing rulings defining acceptable specificity for disclosures of FDCPA claims in bankruptcy schedules), adopted, 2019 WL 2056701 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 10, 2019); Chatman v. Weltman, 325 F. Supp. 3d 875, 881 (N.D. Ill. 2018) (FDCPA claim adequately scheduled where debtor listed claim as against original creditor rather than against debt collector); Stepp v. U.S. Bank, 2018 WL 6625081 (W.D. Va. Dec. 18, 2018) (rejecting standing challenge where debtor amended schedules during chapter 7 case to generally identify claim against mortgagee, and described nature of FDCPA claims in more detail in answer to mortgagee's motion for relief from stay; trustee was on notice and court found no evidence of misrepresentation or concealment); Bejarano v. Bravo! Facility Serv., Inc., 251 F. Supp. 3d 27 (D.D.C. 2017); Nicholas v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 173 F. Supp. 3d 250, 255 (D. Md. Mar. 25, 2016) ("debtors' schedules need not identify every potential cause of action, every possible defendant, or even any defendant at all, so long as a partially scheduled claim contains enough information that a reasonable investigation by the trustee would reveal the claim ultimately asserted"; finding standard not met where debtor listed wrong party defendant); Joo Lee v. Forster & Garbus, L.L.P., 926 F. Supp. 2d 482 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (rejecting challenges where debtor listed FDCPA claim in schedules, even though one potential defendant's name omitted from description); Nielsen v. Dickerson, 1999 WL 350649, at *5–6 (N.D. Ill. May 20, 1999) (description adequate where amended schedules identified law firm as defendant in FDCPA claim but omitted the creditor that was alleged to be falsely using law firm's name for its own debt collection). See generally Hermann v. Hartford Cas. Ins. Co., 675 Fed. Appx. 856 (10th Cir. 2017) (listing of "Potential Personal Injury Award" on schedules was insufficient to disclose claims for damages related to debtor's claim against insurer for unreasonable handling of insurance claim). But cf. Pohl v. U.S. Bank, 2016 WL 1178278 (D. Colo. May 28, 2016) (debtor's vague references to potential fraud claims against mortgage lender at trustee's meeting did not outweigh non-disclosure of TILA rescission claim in schedules, resulting in imposition of judicial estoppel).

121 2016 WL 3647868 (E.D.N.Y. June 30, 2016).

122 The court also considered the case of a chapter 13 debtor and applied judicial estoppel to dismiss the FDCPA claim. Judicial estoppel in the context of unscheduled bankruptcy claims is discussed in § 13.3.3, infra.

123 See also Taylor v. Fin. Recovery Serv., Inc., 252 F. Supp. 3d 344 (S.D.N.Y. 2017) ("Possible FDCPA Claims" with value of $1000 adequate for avoiding judicial estoppel and standing challenges).

124 Roth v. Solomon & Solomon, P.C., 2018 WL 718402 (E.D.N.Y Feb. 5, 2018) (rejecting standing challenge to FDCPA claims).

for a lawsuit that has been filed. For potential claims the description should include the identity of all potential parties, the approximate time frame covered, and a brief description of the nature of the claim, with a reference to the FDCPA.

After identifying the debt collection claims on the schedule of assets, the next step is to determine whether the debtor can exempt the claims, thereby removing them from the bankruptcy estate and precluding the trustee's administration of the claims.[125] In states that have not opted out of the federal bankruptcy exemption scheme, the debtor may use the federal "wild card" exemption, which can be used to exempt any property.[126] Some states also provide "wild card" exemptions.[127]

Exemptions are listed on Schedule C—Property Claimed as Exempt. The debtor should specifically identify the claim on Schedule C, as well as the federal or state law under which the debtor claims the exemption. The current value of the property should be listed. Again, for causes of action this value should be discounted for the likelihood of success and the ultimate probability of collecting any judgment obtained. If the value is truly unknown, then state the value as such.

Based on the Supreme Court's decision in Schwab v. Reilly,[128] it is recommended that the "value of the claimed exemption" for potential causes of action on Schedule C be listed as "100% fair market value" or "100% FMV."[129] If an actual dollar amount for the "value of claimed exemption" is listed, the debtor may be bound by the dollar value of that exemption.[130] If the receipt of damages is greater than the dollar value exempted, the trustee, on behalf of creditors, may have the right to receive the amount in excess of the exemption. By contrast, if the claim is exempted up to its full fair market value, then the debtor should be entitled to keep the full amount of any damage award. If no timely and successful objection to the debtor's exemptions is made, the exemptions listed by the debtor are automatically allowed and the cause of action belongs to the debtor.[131] If there has been no timely objection to the exemption claimed for the properly scheduled FDCPA claim, the debtor need not wait until the closing of the bankruptcy case to bring the FDCPA action.[132]

The bankruptcy schedules serve the important function of notifying the chapter 7 trustee of the existence of non-exempt assets of the bankruptcy estate. The trustee's role is to "administer" any non-exempt assets. Typically, this means selling these assets and distributing the proceeds to creditors in the priority order that the Code requires. In a chapter 7 case, the debtor's prepetition legal claims that were not fully exempted may be administered and liquidated by the trustee.[133] When administering prepetition causes of action the trustee may be substituted as the plaintiff in a pending action, may bring an action not yet filed, may settle the claim,[134] or may sell the claim. Trustees that are unfamiliar with debt collection law may retain debtor's counsel as special counsel to pursue the claim postpetition.[135] Any recovery by the trustee on the claim will first be distributed to the debtor to the extent of any exemption before any remaining funds are made available to creditors.

Alternatively, the cause of action listed on the schedules may be "abandoned" by the trustee in one of two ways: (1) if, on request by the trustee or party in interest and after notice and hearing, the court finds that the property is "burdensome" or of "inconsequential value and benefit to the estate"; or (2) by the closing[136] of the case.[137] Thus, the debtor may seek

125 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 10.3 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

126 See 11 U.S.C. § 522(d)(5).

127 A summary of state exemption law, including citations to state opt-out statutes, is contained in National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice Appx. J (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

128 560 U.S. 770, 130 S. Ct. 2652, 177 L. Ed 2d 234 (2010).

129 But see In re Massey, 465 B.R. 720 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 2012) (listed exemption for "100% of FMV" is facially invalid, sustaining objection to exemption claim); In re Gregory, 487 B.R. 444, 451 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 2013) (where statutory basis for exemption limits it to specific amount in certain property, value of claimed exemption must be identified as a monetary value). But cf. In re Hall, 453 B.R. 22 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2011) (when listing value of exemption as "unknown," reference to the specific statute authorizing the exemption limits the exempt amount to the maximum allowed under the statutory provision). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 10.3.1 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

130 See In re Heisler, 2019 WL 2476977 (E.D. Wis. June 12, 2019) (rejecting application of judicial estoppel where debtor's initial and amended schedules valued FDCPA claims for amount no greater than amount debtor later claimed in civil action).

131 See Wilborn v. Dun & Bradstreet Corp., 180 F.R.D. 347 (N.D. Ill. 1998) (because defendant did not object to plaintiff's exemption of his FDCPA claim from bankruptcy estate, this cause of action belonged to plaintiff, not bankruptcy trustee).

132 Meyer v. Timothy E. Baxter & Assoc., 2018 WL 1858182 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 18, 2018) (refusing to dismiss FDCPA claim on standing grounds where claim exempted and action filed before bankruptcy case closed).

133 11 U.S.C. § 704(a)(1). See In re Solt, 425 B.R. 263 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 2010) (only chapter 7 trustee, not the debtor, has standing to pursue FDCPA claim that is property of the bankruptcy estate). But see In re Bottcher, 441 B.R. 1 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2010) (debtor has standing to pursue state law truth in lending damages action against creditor up to amount claimed as exempt; trustee entitled to receive non-exempt portion of any recovery).

134 See, e.g., Jenkins v. CACH L.L.C., 2012 WL 2131903 (E.D.N.C. June 12, 2012) (applying Fed. R. Civ. P. 17, court allows chapter 7 trustee to substitute as real party in interest in place of originally named plaintiff in FDCPA action that was pending when bankruptcy petition filed).

135 Such an arrangement should yield some benefit for the debtor. Also due to the potential conflicts of interest in representing the bankruptcy estate and the debtor, the debtor must make a fully informed waiver of the conflict.

136 Note that the closing of the case is not synonymous with the date upon which the discharge order is granted. After the discharge enters, the bankruptcy clerk's office will close the case pursuant to section 350(a) and Fed. R. Bankr. P. 5009. Ideally this will be only a short time after the discharge has entered. However, in some cases it may take much longer.

137 11 U.S.C. § 554. See Barletta v. Tedeschi, 121 B.R. 669 (N.D.N.Y. 1990) (denying debt collector's motion to dismiss FDCPA claim based upon consumer's lack of standing when bankruptcy trustee acknowledged his intention to abandon the consumer's claim but never formally did formal abandonment of the scheduled debt collection claim by the trustee by filing a motion while the bankruptcy case is open. The trustee has discretion to exercise business judgment in deciding whether to abandon a potential estate asset.[138] Upon the court's entry of the order designating the legal claim as "abandoned," the debtor is free to pursue the claim as the real party in interest while the bankruptcy case is open and after the bankruptcy has been closed.[139]

The other approach is simply to wait until the case is closed to file any lawsuit that was listed as a claim, provided of course that waiting will not pose a statute of limitations problem. The closing of the bankruptcy after the trustee has administered the case returns any unliquidated legal claims described in the debtor's schedules to the debtor.[140] The debtor has standing to pursue the claims in the future as if no bankruptcy occurred. Exemption or abandonment are thus two ways in which the chapter 7 debtor can control what happens with a prepetition debt collection claim.

Keep in mind, however, that both options require that the debtor have scheduled the claim, giving the trustee notice of its existence, and allowing the trustee to make an informed decision about whether to administer the asset. As will be discussed in the next subsection, serious negative consequences can flow from failure to disclose a prepetition legal claim in the debtor's schedules.

Unlike chapter 7, in chapter 13, the debtor normally has the right to fully control any litigation, because the debtor remains in the possession of all property of the estate.[141] Therefore, most courts have held that a chapter 13 debtor has standing to pursue prepetition causes of action.[142] The debtor should also have the right to dictate the terms of any settlement of the debt collection claim, though the bankruptcy court must normally approve the settlement.[143] The debtor should advise the trustee of any recovery, which, depending upon the terms of the confirmed chapter 13 plan and allowed exemptions, may be distributed in full, or in part, to creditors.[144] In some cases, potential recovery on a debt collection claim may be used to partially fund the plan, and thereby reduce the amount of the debtor's installment plan payments.[145]

13.3.2 Unscheduled Debt Collection Claims—the Standing Problem

13.3.2.1 Generally

A consumer's failure to disclose a legal claim in bankruptcy schedules can create a significant problem in later litigation. When a prebankruptcy asset is unscheduled, it is never administered, exempted, or abandoned. Instead, it remains property of the bankruptcy estate. It is not considered property of the debtor, but continues to reside with the bankruptcy estate in a state of perpetual suspense.[146] As the representative of the bankruptcy estate, only the chapter 7 trustee, not the debtor, so). See also In re Ventura, 582 B.R. 755, 767 (Bankr. N.D. Iowa 2018) (under § 554(d) bankruptcy court has authority to order abandonment of unscheduled claim after closing of case where court determines abandonment would have occurred had the claim been scheduled).

138 In re Blasingame, 598 B.R. 864, 871 (B.A.P. 6th Cir. 2019) (party challenging trustee's abandonment decision has burden to show abuse of discretion).

139 See, e.g., Okoro v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 5870031, at *5 (D. Md. Oct. 6, 2016) (because bankruptcy court granted debtor's motion to abandon FDCPA claim, "the bankruptcy case has no effect" on district court's handling of FDCPA claims).

140 11 U.S.C. § 554(c); Lane v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3671467, at *5 n.7 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 2016) (where there is no dispute that plaintiff adequately scheduled FDCPA claim as personal property in past bankruptcy case, trustee's report of no distribution issued prior to closing of bankruptcy case established bankruptcy estate's abandonment of FDCPA claim).

141 11 U.S.C. §§ 1303, 1306(b); Wilson v. Dollar Gen. Corp., 717 F.3d 337 (4th Cir. 2013); Smith v. Rockett, 522 F.3d 1080 (10th Cir. 2008) (chapter 13 debtor can pursue prepetition FDCPA case in own name on behalf of estate); Crosby v. Monroe County, 394 F.3d 1328 (11th Cir. 2004); Cable v. Ivy Tech State Coll., 200 F.3d 467 (7th Cir. 1999) (after conversion to chapter 13, debtor became real party in interest with standing to prosecute lawsuit on behalf of the bankruptcy estate); Olick v. Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co., 145 F.3d 513 (2d Cir. 1998) (chapter 13 debtor has exclusive standing to pursue claims of estate); Momoh v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 8729939, at *4 (N.D. Cal. July 1, 2016) ("it does not matter whether the claims arose pre- or postpetition because claims held by the Chapter 13 bankruptcy estate may always be prosecuted by the plaintiff [the debtor] in her own name"); Foronda v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., Inc., 2014 WL 6706815, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 26, 2014) (summarizing decisions).

142 Barker v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 874 F. Supp. 2d 1062, 1065 (D. Kan. 2012) (debtor can pursue scheduled prepetition FDCPA action "in his capacity as a Chapter 13 bankruptcy debtor rather than in his individual capacity"); In re Turner, 436 B.R. 153, 157 (M.D. Ala. 2010) (upholding bankruptcy court's exercise of "related to" jurisdiction over chapter 13 debtor's FDCPA adversary proceeding raising prebankruptcy collection violations); In re Ramirez, 2012 WL 1072821 (Bankr. D. P.R. Mar. 28, 2012) (debtor may amend schedules in open chapter 13 case to add prepetition FDCPA claim inadvertently omitted from original schedules); In re Simmerman, 463 B.R. 47 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2011) (chapter 13 debtors have standing to bring various consumer claims, including FDCPA claims, on behalf of bankruptcy estate; but FDCPA claims time-barred). See also In re Lacey, 480 B.R. 13, 53 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2012) (denying mortgage servicer's motion for summary judgment on chapter 13 debtor's FDCPA claim alleging improper prebankruptcy collection demands).

143 See Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9019.

144 See 11 U.S.C. §§ 1306(a), 1325(c); In re Fisher, 203 B.R. 958 (N.D. Ill. 1997).

145 See In re Baxter, 374 B.R. 292 (Bankr. M.D. Ala. 2007); National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 13.4.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

146 11 U.S.C. § 554(d); Tyler v. DH Capital Mgmt., Inc., 736 F.3d 455, 465 (6th Cir. 2013) (unscheduled FDCPA claim could not be "abandoned" and trustee retained exclusive authority to pursue it); Parker v. Wendy's Int'l, Inc., 365 F.3d 1268, 1272 (11th Cir. 2004) (failure to list an interest in bankruptcy schedules leaves that interest in the estate); Pretscher-Johnson v Aurora Bank, 2017 WL 2779977 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. May 31, 2017) (unscheduled prebankruptcy wrongful foreclosure claim never exempted or abandoned and therefore remains property of bankruptcy estate); In re Riazuddin, 363 B.R. 177 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 2007); Romeo v. FMA All., Ltd., 2016 WL 3647868, at *6 (E.D.N.Y. June 30, 2016) (unscheduled legal claim can remain property of bankruptcy estate forever); In re Lehosit, 344 B.R. 782 (Bankr. N.D. W. Va. 2006) (unscheduled asset remains property of chapter 7 estate after case closing unless case is reopened to give trustee the opportunity has standing to pursue the unscheduled claim after the bankruptcy case is closed.[147] This standing rule has been applied to dismiss FDCPA claims that had accrued prior to a consumer's past bankruptcy filing, but were not mentioned in the bankruptcy schedules.[148]

It has become a common practice among defense attorneys to investigate whether a plaintiff filed a bankruptcy case in the past. If the plaintiff filed for bankruptcy relief, and if the events that were the basis for the current lawsuit occurred before the bankruptcy filing, defense counsel will check to see if the plaintiff included the legal claim in the bankruptcy schedules. If the claim existed at the time of the bankruptcy filing and the plaintiff did not disclose it, the defendant will move to dismiss the postbankruptcy civil action. Many state and federal courts will grant the dismissal on the theory that the cause of action belongs to the bankruptcy estate in the closed case and the individual plaintiff lacks standing to enforce the claim.

Many plaintiffs have had their consumer claims dismissed as a result of a bankruptcy "standing" problem. This outcome can seem particularly harsh at times. When individuals file bankruptcy cases, they are often unaware that they have certain consumer claims. They may be generally aware of the operative facts, such as receipt of a letter or the assessment of a charge at some point in the past. However, they may not have understood that those facts gave them a right to sue.[149] One court has held that even a change in the interpretation of the FDCPA after the termination of a bankruptcy case did not convert an FDCPA claim that accrued prebankruptcy to a postbankruptcy claim.[150] When strictly applied, the bankruptcy standing rule gives no weight to the absence of bad faith in the debtor's omission of a potential legal claim from the bankruptcy schedules.

For example, the Sixth Circuit applied the bankruptcy standing rule in a particularly strict way in in Tyler v. DH Capital Management, Inc.[151] In Tyler, a consumer filed a federal court class action alleging that a collection lawsuit filed by a debt collector violated the FDCPA and other state laws. The consumer had filed a bankruptcy case in the past. The creditor's collection complaint that violated the FDCPA had been filed in a court before the consumer filed the bankruptcy petition. The consumer had not listed an FDCPA claim in his bankruptcy schedules, because he had not yet been served with the collection complaint when he filled out the schedules. He was not aware that the violative complaint had been filed.

Nevertheless, according to the court of appeals the filing of the complaint was the actionable FDCPA violation. Because the FDCPA claim triggered by the complaint had existed when the debtor filed the bankruptcy petition, the claim became property of the bankruptcy estate. The claim was never abandoned by the estate because the consumer never listed it in his schedules. After the bankruptcy case closed, the claim remained property of the estate. For this reason, the consumer lacked standing to pursue the claim after the bankruptcy case closed.[152] In this case, amending the bankruptcy schedules to administer or abandon the asset); In re Darrah, 337 B.R. 313, 316 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 2005).

147 See, e.g., Biesek v. Soo Line R Co., 440 F.3d 410 (7th Cir. 2006) (trustee, not debtor, is real party in interest to prosecute unscheduled prepetition claim); In re Riazuddin, 363 B.R. 177 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 2007) (same); Canterbury v. J.P. Morgan Acquisition Corp., 958 F. Supp. 2d 637 (W.D. Va. 2013), aff'd, 561 Fed. Appx. 293 (4th Cir. 2014) (TILA rescission claim existed before bankruptcy filing, became property of bankruptcy estate, and remained estate property due to debtor's failure to schedule it).

148 Tyler v. DH Capital Mgmt., Inc., 736 F.3d 455 (6th Cir. 2013); Nardino v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 2019 WL 2053708 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 26, 2019) (dismissal for lack of standing where no reference to prepetition FDCPA claims in chapter 7 schedules and no amendment of schedules), adopted, 2019 WL 2056701 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 10, 2019); Thompson v. Ocwen Fin. Corp., 2018 WL 513720 (D. Conn. Jan. 23, 2018) (consumer had no standing to pursue FDCPA and other undisclosed prebankruptcy consumer law claims); Dalley v. Rubenstein & Assoc., 172 F. Supp. 3d 6 (D.D.C. 2016) (debtor knew of attempt to collect debt four months before she filed chapter 7 petition and was therefore required to schedule FDCPA claim even though she was not aware of all facts or legal basis for claim when filing her bankruptcy petition); Lewis v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2016 WL 8715675 (D. Md. Feb. 26, 2016) (debtor had no standing to bring unscheduled FDCPA claims related to prebankruptcy foreclosure); Thompson v. Ocwen Fin. Corp., 2013 WL 4522504 (D. Conn. Aug. 27, 2013) (mortgage assignment that was predicate act for FDCPA claim occurred before bankruptcy filing; failure to schedule claim in bankruptcy precluded consumer's standing to raise claim in later action); Gonyo v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2564711 (D. Md. June 29, 2012) (because he failed to schedule preexisting FDCPA claim in prior chapter 7 case, debtor lacked standing to file later action raising claim); Tworek v. Hudson & Keyse, L.L.C., 2009 WL 4946723 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 14, 2009) (consumer who failed to disclose her FDCPA claim in her bankruptcy schedules lacked standing to assert the claim later); Griffith v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, L.L.P., 358 B.R. 338 (S.D. Ohio 2007); In re Leslie, 2007 WL 80806 (Bankr. D. Conn. Jan. 5, 2007) (debtor lacked standing to assert claims which arose prior to the petition); In re Davis, 158 B.R. 1000 (Bankr. N.D. Ind. 1993); Miller v. Accelerated Bureau of Collections, Inc., 932 P.2d 824 (Colo. App. 1996) (FDCPA) (discharged debtors lacked standing to sue a collection agency; claim had not been properly exempted). But see Eun Joo Lee v. Forster & Garbus, L.L.P., 926 F. Supp. 2d 482 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (rejecting standing challenges where debtor disclosed FDCPA claim in bankruptcy schedules, even though one potential defendant's name omitted from description); Greenfield v. Kluever & Platt, L.L.C., 2010 WL 604830 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 16, 2010) (consumer who filed bankruptcy petition on same day as FDCPA action without disclosing FDCPA case nevertheless had standing since she voluntarily dismissed bankruptcy action six weeks later); In re Belile, 209 B.R. 658 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1997) (alleged failure of the consumer to list her fair debt claims on her bankruptcy schedules could not be considered where the schedules were not offered into evidence).

149 Nicholas v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 173 F. Supp. 3d 250 (D. Md. 2016) (in dismissing RESPA and FDCPA claims court finds "[t]he debtor lacks standing to bring an unscheduled, and thus never abandoned, prepetition claim even if the debtor was not aware of a legal basis for bringing that claim at the time the bankruptcy petition was filed"); Dalley v. Rubenstein & Assoc., 172 F. Supp. 3d 6 (D.D.C. 2016) (debtor knew of attempt to collect debt four months before filing chapter 7 petition, therefore was required to schedule FDCPA claim, even though not aware of all facts or legal basis for claim when filed bankruptcy petition).

150 In re Bushberger, 588 B.R. 44 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 2018).

151 736 F.3d 455 (6th Cir. 2013).

152 Id at 465. Cf. Stanfill v. Hawthorn Recovery Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 6197357 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 27, 2013) (FDCPA claims not property of promptly upon learning of the filing of the collection complaint would likely have preserved the consumer's rights. The Sixth Circuit's ruling does not discuss this option.

With proper scheduling of the claim, along with exemption or abandonment by the bankruptcy estate, there is no reason why a party cannot serve as a class representative for an FDCPA claim despite an earlier bankruptcy.[153] A 2013 consumer law class action case provided an example of the impact of failure to schedule claims in old bankruptcy cases on certain parties' ability to serve as class representatives.

In In re Community Bank of Northern Virginia Mortgage Lending Practices Litigation, forty-three named plaintiffs brought a class action against several banks and the FDIC.[154] The plaintiffs alleged violations of TILA, RESPA, and other consumer laws. Sixteen of the individual plaintiffs were ultimately dismissed from the case because they had filed bankruptcy cases in the past and not scheduled the claims against the banks and the FDIC. By contrast, one plaintiff with a prior bankruptcy filing had reopened her bankruptcy case and added the claims to her bankruptcy schedules. The trustee had abandoned any interest in the claims. According to the court, this plaintiff, along with the non-bankruptcy filers, had standing to pursue the consumer claims in the current litigation.

One lesson to be learned from decisions such as these is that counsel who are contemplating bringing a debt collection action need to check the PACER bankruptcy court records for each client. It is possible to reopen a closed bankruptcy case for the purpose of amending schedules to add an omitted claim.[155] Once the legal claim is disclosed in a reopened case, the trustee can decide whether to liquidate the claim for creditors or abandon the estate's interest in the claim to the debtor. If the claim is abandoned or exempted, the debtor is then free to pursue it.[156] If the trustee decides to take over the claim, the borrower may still be entitled to receive up to the exempted amounts in the claim, while the rest would go to bankruptcy creditors.[157] The debtor's right to the exempted amount of the claim should be routinely recognized.[158]

There are strong arguments in favor of allowing reopening to amend schedules. To the extent that the claims are a valuable asset, the trustee can provide a benefit for creditors. To the extent that the claim is exempt or has little value for creditors, the initial omission of the claim from bankruptcy schedules did not harm anyone.[159] From a policy perspective, reopening and amendment is preferable to use of the bankruptcy standing doctrine to create a windfall for defendants who engaged in unlawful conduct.

When a debtor initially omitted a legal claim from schedules, but reopens the closed bankruptcy case, adds the claim, and seeks to pursue the claim after abandonment or exemption, courts may still limit the debtor's rights over the claim. A court may review the evidence of the debtor's conduct in initially omitting the claim and deciding to add it later. In determining whether to give the debtor control over the claim after reopening, the courts may consider factors such as the timing of the reopening in relation to the defendant's standing objection, the length of time since the bankruptcy case was closed, and any evidence of deliberate misrepresentation.[160] The doctrine of judicial estoppel, discussed in the next subsections, often comes into play in these determinations.

13.3.2.2 Other Limits to Postbankruptcy Standing Challenges

The bankruptcy standing doctrine has other important limitations. Many bankruptcy cases, particularly under chapter 13, are dismissed without a discharge. Different Bankruptcy Code provisions govern what happens with property of a bankruptcy estate upon a dismissal, as opposed to when a bankruptcy case is closed after entry of a discharge.[161] bankruptcy estate where operative events occurred after date of filing chapter 7 petition for relief).

153 Nielsen v. Dickerson, 1999 WL 350649 (N.D. Ill. May 20, 1999) (rejecting challenge to class representative's typicality where proposed representative had amended schedules to give bankruptcy trustee reasonable notice of potential FDCPA claim).

154 954 F. Supp. 2d 360, 382 (W.D. Pa. 2013).

155 Schaefer v. First Source Advantage, L.L.C., 2013 WL 509001 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 12, 2013) (denying dismissal of FDCPA claim on standing grounds where, after debt collector raised standing issue, debtor reopened bankruptcy case, scheduled claim, and obtained order of abandonment); Christensen v. United Res. Sys., Inc., 2008 WL 2811749 (D. Colo. July 18, 2008) (granting motion to reconsider and vacating dismissal of FDCPA claim where debtor showed trustee had now abandoned claim). See generally Brown v. Allied Home Mortg. Capital Corp., 588 B.R. 271 (D.D.C. 2018) (motion to dismiss debtor's various prebankruptcy consumer claims for lack of standing denied where debtor amended schedules and trustee had not yet determined whether to take over claims or abandon them).

156 See, e.g., Best v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 2017 WL 6550671, at *3 (D. Md. Dec. 21, 2017) (rejecting standing challenge where pro se debtor reopened closed bankruptcy case to add an exempt FDCPA claim and other consumer claims valued at $340,000; concluding that "the claims were both exempt and properly abandoned, and the Court has subject matter jurisdiction to hear them now").

157 Paige v. Waukesha Health Sys., Inc., 2013 WL 3560944 (E.D. Wis. July 11, 2013) (debtor satisfied standing requirements to pursue FDCPA action where claimed $1000 exemption in the claim valued at total of $4000 in the bankruptcy schedules).

158 See, e.g., In re Bushberger, 588 B.R. 44, 49 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 2018) (summarizing Seventh Circuit decisions on amendment and exemption, allowing amendment of schedules to add FDCPA claim in reopened bankruptcy case), later decision, 2019 WL 2271043 (E.D. Wis. May 28, 2019) (although debtor did not become real party in interest until she amended bankruptcy schedules, district court properly had jurisdiction over FDCPA claims when they were filed in district court).

159 But see Nardino v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 2019 WL 2053708, at *5–6 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 26, 2019) (in dismissing FDCPA claims on standing grounds court disregards debtor's statement that local chapter 7 trustee had policy of not wanting "speculative" FDCPA claims listed in schedules), adopted, 2019 WL 2056701 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 10, 2019).

160 Macauley v. Estate of Nicholas, 7 F. Supp. 3d 468 (E.D. Pa. 2014) (dismissing of mortgagor's fraud claim on bankruptcy standing grounds, noting that could allow substitution but giving significant weight to fact that in several years after bankruptcy while aware of claim debtor did not try to open and amend).

161 Compare 11 U.S.C. § 349(b)(3), with 11 U.S.C. § 554(d). See Barnes v. Northwest Repossession, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4410109 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 4,

Upon dismissal, the estate property, whether scheduled or not, reverts back to the debtor. Thus, the perpetual limbo status for unscheduled debts should occur only after bankruptcy cases that were closed out after the bankruptcy court entered a discharge order.[162]

Most chapter 13 cases are dismissed without a discharge, typically because the debtors failed to keep up with plan payments. In certain instances, chapter 7 cases are also dismissed without entry of a discharge. This can occur when the debtor failed to file all documents necessary to proceed to a discharge. A standing problem cannot arise after these dismissals.

The bankruptcy standing problem does not exist if the FDCPA claim arose after the filing of the chapter 7 petition for relief. A legal claim acquired after the date of filing the chapter 7 petition does not belong to the bankruptcy estate.[163] Occasionally a continuing pattern of debt collection violations straddles the pre- and postpetition time periods.[164] In these instances it will be to the consumer's advantage to characterize the critical events as occurring postpetition. Similar timing issues appear in the judicial estoppel context, discussed below.

13.3.2.3 When Standing Problems Cannot Be Avoided

If the trustee does not abandon the debt collection claim, the court will likely find that the bankruptcy trustee, rather than the consumer plaintiff, has standing to pursue the claim. In this instance, dismissal of the lawsuit is the least appropriate option for the court to choose. The court should allow for substitution of the trustee as plaintiff.[165] The trustee then decides the appropriate actions to take.

One option is for the trustee to appoint the plaintiff's non-bankruptcy counsel to represent the bankruptcy estate in the debt collection lawsuit. The bankruptcy court must approve this representation. The process for approval of counsel to represent the estate focuses on disclosure and is not particularly burdensome.

The arrangement should provide that, from the proceeds of the action, the debtor receives amounts covered by exemptions and any sum left over after payments due creditors.[166] The only exception to this form of distribution should occur if a court finds that the debtor engaged in intentionally deceitful conduct in the initial omission of the claim from schedules. Under these circumstances the bankruptcy court may have authority to limit the debtor's personal recovery as part of the court's general authority to sanction inequitable conduct.[167]

The bankruptcy court should make this determination. However, non-bankruptcy courts hearing the postbankruptcy lawsuit sometimes impose these sanctions as well. The sanctions include the application of judicial estoppel, discussed in the next subsection.

13.3.3 Unscheduled Debt Collection Claims—the Judicial Estoppel Problem

13.3.3.1 Generally

Judicial estoppel is another doctrine that courts apply in situations where a plaintiff brings a consumer claim that existed at the time of a prior bankruptcy case, but did not disclose the claim in the schedules filed with the bankruptcy 2017) (consumer had standing to bring claims against repossession company despite two chapter 13 cases that were dismissed without discharge orders; however, judicial estoppel applied to bar claims).

162 Crawford v. Franklin Credit Mgmt. Corp., 758 F.3d 473 (2d Cir. 2014) (dismissal under § 349(b)(3) revests estate property in debtor, whether property scheduled or not; only closing case under § 554(d) distinguishes scheduled and unscheduled property and provides that unadministered property remains with estate); Mackall v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 356 P.3d 946, 950 (Colo. App. 2014) ("where a bankruptcy case is dismissed, the Bankruptcy Code seems to unequivocally grant a debtor standing to assert any claim that it possessed before it filed for bankruptcy, regardless of whether it disclosed the claim to the bankruptcy court during the bankruptcy proceedings").

163 See Yarid v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3631883 (E.D. Va. July 31, 2018) (certain FDCPA claims of plaintiff arose postpetition and did not present standing problems, while for other FDCPA claims plaintiff must amend complaint to specify when they arose); Engelby v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2018 WL 1514246 (D. Minn. Mar. 27, 2018) (discussing different concepts of bankruptcy estate in chapter 7 and chapter 13 in context of FDCPA claims accruing postpetition).

164 See, e.g., Hernandez v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 2015 WL 2094263 (M.D. Fla. May 5, 2015) (refusing to dismiss FDCPA claims on standing grounds; claims involved improper deficiency action where foreclosure sale occurred prepetition, but creditor filed deficiency lawsuit postpetition). See generally In re Porrett, 564 B.R. 57, 66–67 (D. Idaho 2016) (in context of consumer loan origination fraud claim, court discusses timing issues that determine inclusion of legal claim in property of bankruptcy estate).

165 See Kitchner v. Fiergola, 2018 WL 4473359 (E.D. Wis. Sept. 18, 2018) (rather than dismissal of debtor's FDCPA and FCRA claims on bankruptcy standing grounds, Rule 17 requires that court allow reasonable time for bankruptcy trustee to join in action or abandon claims); Didonato v. Imagine One Tech. & Mgt., Ltd., 2016 WL 6584911, at *3 (D.N.J. Nov. 7, 2016) (refusing to dismiss action on bankruptcy standing grounds, recognizing trustee as substituted plaintiff with debtor's counsel designated to represent bankruptcy estate); Nicholas v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 173 F. Supp. 3d 250 (D. Md. 2016) (before dismissing FDCPA claims court must first consider whether trustee has had reasonable time to ratify, join, or be substituted in the action pursuant to Rule 17).

166 Bargo v. Porter County Indiana, 2017 WL 3107161 (N.D. Ind. July 19, 2017) (to allow reasonable time for substitution of trustee as plaintiff is more appropriate than dismissal of action where former debtor lacks standing to maintain case); Jeziorowski v. Credit Prot. Assn., L.P., 2017 WL 1549965, at *2 (W.D.N.Y. May 1, 2017) (preferred way to address postbankruptcy standing problem in FDCPA action is to allow trustee to act as the real party in interest for the claim, with non-exempt proceeds of action going to debtor).

167 But see Metrou v. M.A. Mortenson Co., 781 F.3d 357, 360 (7th Cir. 2015) (debtor-plaintiff who amends schedules to list omitted claim presumptively remains eligible to receive non-exempt proceeds remaining after creditors are paid from lawsuit; reversing trial court that set cap on amount recoverable from lawsuit based on amount needed to pay creditors).

court. Judicial estoppel and lack of standing are related in that both can be consequences of an omitting a preexisting legal claim from bankruptcy schedules.

However, the concepts are distinct. For example, a plaintiff may amend schedules postbankruptcy, overcome standing objections, and be the proper party to pursue a claim, but still may be precluded from doing so by judicial estoppel. While standing goes to jurisdiction, and specifically to who is the real party in interest to bring the case, judicial estoppel is an affirmative defense.[168] The defense may bar a party who otherwise has standing from litigating the claim.[169] Courts sometimes apply both doctrines to dismiss a case.[170]

Judicial estoppel is an equitable doctrine intended to protect the integrity of the court by preventing a party from intentionally changing positions in litigation depending upon the "exigencies of the moment" to the detriment of an opposing party.[171] Under the doctrine, a party is precluded from asserting a claim in a legal proceeding inconsistent with a claim the same party made in a previous proceeding.

While there is no bright line test to determine when judicial estoppel may be invoked, the Supreme Court has focused on the following general considerations: (1) whether the party's later position was clearly inconsistent with its earlier position; (2) whether the party succeeded in persuading the court to accept the earlier position, so that later judicial acceptance would suggest that the first or second court was deliberately misled; and (3) whether the party seeking to assert an inconsistent position would derive an unfair advantage or impose an unfair detriment on the opposing party.[172] Courts have imposed judicial estoppel in numerous instances in which a party omitted a prebankruptcy legal claim from bankruptcy schedules, then attempted to assert the claim in a post-discharge lawsuit.[173] Courts have applied judicial estoppel in the context of both chapter 13 and chapter 7 cases.[174]

Judicial estoppel has its place in certain instances where a party made a calculated decision not to disclose a valuable claim to bankruptcy creditors. For example, an individual about to pursue a tort claim worth hundreds of thousands of dollars should not be able to omit the claim intentionally from bankruptcy schedules, obtain a discharge of debts, and later retain all of the proceeds from the lawsuit.

However, the circumstances surrounding consumer debt collection claims are usually very different. Bankruptcy debtors often do not know that they have the claims when they complete their schedules of assets in preparation for a bankruptcy filing. Because the debt collection claims can often be exempted or will be abandoned by the bankruptcy estate, debtors have little reason to engage in deliberate manipulation to conceal these claims. Nevertheless, courts have applied judicial estoppel to dismiss FDCPA claims that the plaintiff did not disclose in prior bankruptcy schedules.[175]

---

168 But see Davis v. District of Columbia, ___ F.3d ___, 2019 WL 2398007, at *11 (D.C. Cir. June 7, 2019) (in addition to considering judicial estoppel as affirmative defense, court may sua sponte raise judicial estoppel because doctrine protects integrity of judicial process).

169 Romeo v. FMA All., Ltd., 2016 WL 3647868 (E.D.N.Y. June 30, 2016).

170 See, e.g., Lapointe v. Target Corp., 2017 WL 1397311 (N.D.N.Y. Feb. 14, 2017) (dismissal of wage and hour action for bankruptcy standing and for judicial estoppel as alternative ground); Jimenez v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 4059161 (E.D. Va. July 26, 2016) (dismissing TILA rescission claim on both standing and judicial estoppel grounds); Johnson v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 2013 WL 3810715 (N.D. Tex. July 23, 2013) (challenge to foreclosure practices asserting various consumer claims, including FDCPA, dismissed for bankruptcy-related lack of standing and judicial estoppel). See also Weingard v. Unifund CCR, L.L.C., 2015 WL 2149482 (N.D. Ill. May 6, 2015) (court confuses standing and judicial estoppel, dismisses FDCPA claim).

171 New Hampshire v. Maine, 532 U.S. 742, 753, 121 S. Ct. 1808, 149 L. Ed. 2d 968 (2001).

172 New Hampshire v. Maine, 532 U.S. 742, 750–751, 121 S. Ct. 1808, 149 L. Ed. 2d 968 (2001) ("the circumstances under which judicial estoppel may appropriately be invoked are probably not reducible to any general formulation of principle"). See also Ajaka v. BrooksAmerica Mortg. Corp., 453 F.3d 1339 (11th Cir. 2006) (factors are whether allegedly inconsistent positions were taken under oath in a prior proceeding, whether they were calculated to make a mockery of judicial system, whether present position is clearly inconsistent with earlier position, whether a court accepted the earlier position, and whether party would derive unfair advantage if not estopped); 18 Moore's Federal Practice § 134.30, at 134–162 (3d ed. 2000) ("The doctrine of judicial estoppel prevents a party from asserting a claim in a legal proceeding that is inconsistent with a claim taken by that party in a previous proceeding."). Note that state courts may apply judicial estoppel standards that differ from the criteria that a federal court in the same jurisdiction would apply. See, e.g., Salazar-Abreu v. Walt Disney Parks & Resorts U.S., Inc., ___ So. 3d ___, 2018 WL 6816757 (Fla. Ct. Dist. App. Dec. 28, 2018) (reversing trial court for incorrectly applying stricter Eleventh Circuit judicial estoppel standard to dismiss action instead of Florida state law standard under which claims survive).

173 BPP Illinois, L.L.C. v. Royal Bank of Scotland Grp. P.L.C., 859 F.3d 188 (2d Cir. 2017); White v. Wyndham Vacation Ownership, Inc., 617 F.3d 472 (6th Cir. 2010); Moses v. Howard Univ. Hosp., 606 F.3d 789 (D.C. Cir. 2010); Eastman v. Union Pac. R. Co., 493 F.3d 1151 (10th Cir. 2007); Cannon-Stokes v. Potter, 453 F.3d 446 (7th Cir. 2006); Stallings v. Hussmann Corp., 447 F.3d 1041 (8th Cir. 2006); Jethroe v. Omnova Solutions, Inc., 412 F.3d 598 (5th Cir. 2005); Krystal Cadillac Oldsmobile GMC Truck, Inc. v. Gen. Motors Corp., 337 F.3d 314 (3d Cir. 2003); Hamilton v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 270 F.3d 778 (9th Cir. 2001); Payless Wholesale Distribs., Inc. v. Alberto Culver, Inc., 989 F.2d 570 (1st Cir. 1993).

174 See, e.g., Kimberline v. Dollar Gen. Corp., 520 Fed. Appx. 312 (6th Cir. 2013) (judicial estoppel applied where cause of action accrued during final weeks of five-year chapter 13 plan and debtor did not disclose claim before discharge); DeLeon v. Comcar Indus., Inc., 321 F.3d 1289 (11th Cir. 2003).

175 See Romeo v. FMA All., Ltd., 2016 WL 3647868, at *14–15 (E.D.N.Y. June 30, 2016) (applying judicial estoppel where chapter 13 debtor amended schedules to disclose only one "possible" FDCPA claim, when in fact she had four prepetition FDCPA claims and eventually filed four separate FDCPA lawsuits); McCauley v. Hunter, 2015 WL 2193805 (N.D. Ill. May 7, 2015) (dismissing FDCPA action because was property of bankruptcy estate, confusing judicial estoppel and standing); Weingard v. Unifund CCR, L.L.C., 2015 WL 2149482 (N.D. Ill. May 6, 2015) (rejecting debtor's argument that was not aware of FDCPA claim when filed bankruptcy petition, dismisses FDCPA claim); Barris v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2015 WL 519176 (D.N.J. Feb. 9, 2015) (plaintiff was aware of FDCPA violation three weeks before filed chapter 7 petition, never scheduled claim; dismissing plaintiff's postbankruptcy FDCPA action for lack of standing); Sinju v. Express Recovery Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 6621120 (D. Utah Dec. 16, 2013); Black v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2013 WL 5140181 (W.D.

Judicial estoppel rulings vary greatly from jurisdiction to jurisdiction, and even within a jurisdiction.[176] The decisions focus heavily on the facts of a given case.[177] Advocates should always emphasize the equitable nature of judicial estoppel.[178] Application of the doctrine is discretionary, even when all elements are present. In applying equitable principles, courts should give weight to the relatively low value of certain FDCPA claims and take into account that the amount of the claim can be easily exempted.[179]

The Eleventh Circuit's recent en banc ruling in Slater v. United States Steel Corp.[180] highlights a trend among the appellate courts to reject rigid formulae in applying judicial estoppel based on the prior omission of a claim from bankruptcy schedules.[181] Instead, where the debtor has gone ahead and corrected the schedules, the courts should apply judicial estoppel only where there is evidence that the debtor deliberately intended to "make a mockery of the judicial system."[182] The appropriate evaluation should include consideration of the debtor's level of sophistication, the explanation for the omission, actions to correct the omission, and the bankruptcy court's response to the correction.[183]

The purpose of judicial estoppel is to protect innocent parties from severe prejudice and uphold respect for the judicial process. The purpose is not to create a shield for offensive creditor practices. If a debtor's omission of a claim from bankruptcy schedules had no tangible negative impact on any party or the bankruptcy system, judicial estoppel serves no purpose. In jurisdictions that favor implying a presumption of deceit from the debtor's knowledge of facts and the timing of the bankruptcy filing, advocates need to highlight the evidence of the consumer's good faith. The courts should not apply an equitable doctrine without considering this evidence.

13.3.3.2 When Judicial Estoppel Should Not Apply

A court's adoption of a position asserted by the party in a prior proceeding is a required element of judicial estoppel. Many bankruptcy cases, particularly under chapter 13, are dismissed without a discharge. Debtors should argue that, in prior bankruptcy cases in which the court never entered a discharge order, the bankruptcy court did not "adopt" any position based on the omission of a claim from schedules.[184] There is no risk

Wash. Sept. 12, 2013) (receipt of debt collection letter before she filed for bankruptcy relief gave debtor enough information to know she should have listed FDCPA claim in her bankruptcy schedules); Otter v. Northland Croup. Inc., 2013 WL 2243874 (W.D. Wash. May 21, 2013) (debtor aware of collection letters and did not amend schedules during pendency of bankruptcy case and before discharge); Kee v. Evergreen Prof'l Recoveries, Inc., 2009 WL 2578982 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 19, 2009) (consumer judicially estopped from proceeding with FDCPA claim not listed in bankruptcy); Allers-Petrus v. Columbia Recovery Grp., L.L.C., 2009 WL 799676 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 24, 2009) (FDCPA claim based on judicial estoppel where debtor did not schedule known claim and did not seek to amend until after defendant filed summary judgment motion); Toma v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 2008 WL 302378 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 1, 2008) (plaintiff was judicially estopped from maintaining an FDCPA claim because the claim was not disclosed as an asset in her bankruptcy filing, thus creating the inconsistency to support judicial estoppel that no such claim existed); In re Barnes, 2010 WL 3895463 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. Sept. 29, 2010) (pro se consumers who failed to list the alleged FDCPA action on their bankruptcy schedules as property of the estate were estopped from pursuing it). See also Demarest v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 481 Fed. Appx. 352, 353 (9th Cir. 2012) (affirming dismissal of borrowers' TILA rescission claim on ground of judicial estoppel, finding debtor "responsible for the consequences of her [bankruptcy] attorney's alleged negligence"); Tyson v. Bank of Am., 2016 WL 4070134 (N.D. Cal. July 29, 2016) (applying judicial estoppel where borrowers gave TILA rescission notice before filing chapter 7 case and never disclosed potential claim in schedules).

176 See, e.g., Ashmore v. CGI Groups, Inc., 923 F.3d 260, 272 (2d Cir. 2019) Marshall v. Honeywell Tech. Sys., Inc., 828 F.3d 923, 932 (D.C. Cir. 2016) (reviewing recent court of appeals rulings on judicial estoppel and cautioning against use of standards that limit courts' flexibility to consider specific facts of cases).

177 See, e.g., Ashmore v. CGI Groups, Inc., 923 F.3d 260, 272 (2d Cir. 2019) (application of judicial estoppel depends heavily on specific factual contexts).

178 New Hampshire v. Maine, 532 U.S. 742, 750, 121 S. Ct. 1808, 149 L. Ed. 2d 968 (2001); Slater v. United States Steel Corp., 871 F.3d 1174, 1186 (11th Cir. 2017) (en banc) (rejecting mechanical approach to judicial estoppel in favor of flexible approach that requires consideration of all facts and circumstances to evaluate debtor's intent in omitting claim from bankruptcy schedules); Clark v. All Acquisition, L.L.C., 886 F.3d 261, 267 (2d Cir. 2018) (before applying judicial estoppel court must consider whether balance of equities favors application); Ah Quin v. Cty. of Kauai Dep't of Trans., 733 F.3d 267, 272 (9th Cir. 2013); Cannon-Stokes v. Potter, 453 F.3d 446 (7th Cir. 2006); Browning v. Levy, 283 F.3d 761, 776 (6th Cir. 2002); In re Riazuddin, 363 B.R. 177 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 2007); In re An-Tze Cheng, 308 B.R. 448, 459 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2004), aff'd, 160 Fed. Appx. 644 (9th Cir. 2005); Miller v. Conagra, 991 So. 2d 445, 453 (La. 2008) (courts must ultimately look to equitable principles, not fixed formula, to apply doctrine). See also Marshall v. Honeywell Tech. Sys., Inc., 828 F.3d 923, 933 (D.C. Cir. 2016) (Griffith, J. dissenting). See generally Hicks v. U.S. Bank, 2018 WL 1115367 (S.D. Ga. Feb. 27, 2018) (noting unlikelihood that debtor intended to make mockery of judicial system when bringing unscheduled consumer claim before same bankruptcy court that is presiding over main bankruptcy case).

179 See, e.g., Basconcello v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 2017 WL 1046969, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2017) (failure to amend schedules in a more timely fashion did not disadvantage creditors where damages under Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) claim likely nominal); Sovik v. Ducks Unlimited, Inc., 2011 WL 1397970, at *4 (M.D. Tenn. Apr. 13, 2011) (relatively small monetary value of debtor's Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) claim is a factor tending to negate finding of bad faith in omission of claim from schedules).

180 871 F.3d 1174, 1186 (11th Cir. 2017).

181 See also Clark v. All Acquisition, L.L.C., 886 F.3d 261, 267 (2d Cir. 2018); Spaine v. Cmty. Contacts, Inc., 756 F.3d 542 (7th Cir. 2014); Ah Quin v. Cty. of Kauai Dep't of Trans., 733 F.3d 267 (9th Cir. 2013).

182 Slater v. U.S. Steel Corp., 871 F.3d 1174, 1185 (11th Cir. 2017).

183 Id. at 1185–1189.

184 Crawford v. Franklin Credit Mgmt. Corp., 758 F.3d 473 (2d Cir. 2014); Stallings v. Hussmann Corp., 447 F.3d 1041 (8th Cir. 2006) (no judicial estoppel where party's prior chapter 13 case dismissed without discharge); Walker v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 784416 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 8, 2018) (FDCPA plaintiff never persuaded bankruptcy court to accept his position because court never confirmed a chapter 13 plan based on debtor's schedules); Gelinas v. U.S. Bank, 2017 WL 553277, at *6 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 10, 2017) (no benefit to former debtor from an inconsistent statement in bankruptcy schedules where of inconsistent adjudications in this situation. This is also true when the bankruptcy court did not confirm a chapter 13 plan.

However, some courts have found that plan confirmation, and even the temporary implementation of the automatic stay, sufficed to indicate that a bankruptcy court relied on the representations in a debtor's schedules.[185] The courts will be more inclined to impose judicial estoppel in non-discharge cases when the evidence shows a pattern of repeat bankruptcy filings intended to delay collection actions along with little effort to obtain a discharge.[186]

There are other instances where the bankruptcy court simply did not rely on the omissions in the debtor's schedules and statements to grant a discharge or other relief to the debtor. In these situations judicial estoppel should not apply.[187] For example, debtors may overcome the inference that they intended to mislead the bankruptcy court if they disclosed the claims in some way during the pendency of the bankruptcy case, even though they did not meet the technical requirements to schedule them.[188] The Second Circuit appropriately held that judicial estoppel should not apply where the party bankruptcy was dismissed without confirmation of plan or order of discharge); Ellis v. Phillips and Cohen Assoc., Ltd., 2015 WL 4396375 (N.D. Cal. July 17, 2015) (no judicial estoppel for prepetition FDCPA claim where debtor's two prior chapter 7 cases were dismissed without discharge; no evidence bankruptcy court or creditors relied on nondisclosure to determine any action); Royal v. R & L Carriers Shared Serv., L.L.C., 2013 WL 1736658 (E.D. Va. Apr. 22,2013) (must be discharge in chapter 13, not just plan confirmation, to show bankruptcy court accepted debtor's position and debtor received advantage); Village of Canon v. Bankers Trust Co., 1997 WL 47804 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 5, 1997) (no judicial estoppel where plan never confirmed in party's past chapter 11 case). See also Lewis v. McCabe, Weisberg & Conway, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3845833 (D. Md. Aug. 4, 2014) (dismissing state debt collection claims on other grounds but holding no judicial estoppel where borrower had not contested validity of note in stay relief proceeding, then later voluntarily dismissed chapter 13 case); Chancellor v. OneWest Bank, 2012 WL 1868750 (N.D. Cal. May 22, 2012) (borrower's wrongful foreclosure and RESPA claims not barred by judicial estoppel where chapter 13 plans not confirmed in prior bankruptcies); Sannah v. Wells Fargo Bank BA, 2012 WL 10423186, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 19, 2012) (no judicial estoppel where chapter 13 plan never filed before dismissal); Bates v. Dura Auto. Sys., Inc., 650 F. Supp. 2d 754 (M.D. Tenn. 2009) (no judicial estoppel for parties whose prior bankruptcy cases were dismissed without discharge), rev'd in part on other grounds, 625 F.3d 283 (6th Cir. 2010); Wilson v. City of Springfield, 2009 WL 1687934 (S.D. Ohio June 15, 2009) (no estoppel where prior chapter 7 case dismissed without discharge); In re DiVittorio, 430 B.R. 26 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2010) (judicial estoppel not applied to chapter 13 debtor's TILA rescission action which had not been scheduled prior to plan confirmation; court had not yet formally "accepted" debtor's schedules by granting discharge), aff'd on other grounds, 670 F.3d 273 (1st Cir. 2012); Ass'n Resources, Inc. v. Wall, 2 A.3d 873, 892 (Conn. 2010) (rejecting judicial estoppel where chapter 13 case dismissed after plan confirmation but before discharge). See also In re Oparaji, 698 F.3d 231, 238 (5th Cir. 2012) (refusing to apply judicial estoppel to creditor because confirmation of plan did not represent judicial acceptance of a position in a chapter 13 case dismissed without discharge).

185 Hamilton v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 270 F.3d 778 (9th Cir. 2001) (applying judicial estoppel although prior chapter 7 discharge had been revoked); Assasepa v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 2012 WL 88162, at *11 (S.D. Ohio Jan. 11, 2012) (mag.; applying judicial estoppel although debtor had not obtained discharge; chapter 13 debtor received benefit of automatic stay and court approved payment plan); Hamilton v. Greenwich Investors XXVI, L.L.C., 126 Cal. Rptr. 3d 174 (Cal. Ct. App. 2011) (judicial estoppel barred consumer's lender liability claims where claims not scheduled in debtor's pending chapter 13 case; plan had been confirmed, distinguishing cases in which plans not confirmed); Becker v. Wells Fargo, 2012 WL 5187792 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 18, 2012) (judicial estoppel applied where debtor failed to disclose legal claims related to improper foreclosure sale that occurred after bankruptcy petition was filed, but before chapter 13 plan confirmed). But see Basconcello v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 2017 WL 1046969 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2017) (plan confirmation did not satisfy bankruptcy court reliance element, because legal claim did not arise until after plan confirmation order); Mensah v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 2017 WL 1246892, at *10–11 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 5, 2017) (same); Jones v. Randle, 373 P.3d 1186, 1191 (Or. Ct. App. 2016) (applying state law, automatic stay in effect in plaintiff's two prior dismissed chapter 13 cases not a benefit derived from nondisclosure of property interest); Fricke v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Grp., L.L.C., 2015 WL 4778527 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 12, 2015) (temporary benefit from automatic stay alone not sufficient to trigger judicial estoppel); Zyla v. Am. Red Cross Blood Serv., 2014 WL 3868735 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 6, 2014) (where plan amended to add omitted claim and mistake averred, benefit debtor received from automatic stay not sufficient to impose judicial estoppel); Boatright v. Aurora Loan Serv., 2012 WL 2792415 (N.D. Cal. July 9, 2012) (mere imposition of automatic stay in prior chapter 13 case without confirmation of plan did not create requisite benefit to debtor to justify imposition of judicial estoppel); Campbell v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 3833669 (Cal. Ct. App. July 24, 2013) (unpublished) (implementation of stay in dismissed bankruptcy cases not sufficient to meet requirement for court adoption of position, borrower may pursue loan servicing claims); Gottlieb v. Kest, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 7 (Cal. Ct. App. 2006) (implementation of automatic stay not sufficient to trigger adoption of legal position prong of judicial estoppel test).

186 Nuno v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2017 WL 4083140 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 13, 2017) (although no plan confirmation or discharge in recent chapter 13 case, debtor filed three bankruptcy cases within a year and failed to schedule pending wrongful foreclosure case in most recent bankruptcy filing); Sharp v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2015 WL 106844 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 7, 2015) (judicial estoppel applied where debtor filed four consecutive bankruptcy cases that were dismissed without discharge, delaying foreclosures), aff'd, 2017 WL 2859105 (9th Cir. 2017); HPG Corp. v. Aurora Loan Serv., L.L.C., 436 B.R. 569 (E.D. Cal. 2010) (judicial estoppel applied against debtors who did not obtain discharges in prior bankruptcy cases, but who obtained benefits of automatic stay in multiple cases).

187 Meyer v. U.S Bank, 530 B.R. 767, 775 (W.D. Wash. 2015) (judicial estoppel not applied where bankruptcy court did not rely on absence of legal claim in schedules; unsettled issues of state foreclosure law were clarified after bankruptcy and debtors not aware had legal claim at time of bankruptcy); Pavelka v. Allstate Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co., 91 F. Supp. 3d 931 (E.D. Mich. 2015) (different valuation figures in debtor's schedules and in later insurance claim did not present direct contradiction, but reflected valuations for different purposes and applied different standards). See also Khair-Dorsey v. WellSpan Health, 2017 WL 770590 (M.D. Pa. Feb. 28, 2017) (even though plaintiff did not provide evidence to rebut a presumption of deceit, court will apply judicial estoppel only to bar claims for monetary relief, and not claims for injunctive relief).

188 Ashmore v. CGI Group, Inc., 923 F.3d 260 (2d Cir. 2019) (debtor did not list claim on Schedule B, but mentioned it in Statement of Financial Affairs and at other times during pendency of bankruptcy case); Spaine v. Community Contracts, Inc., 756 F.3d 542, 547 (7th Cir. 2014) (declining to enter summary judgment based on judicial estoppel where, although debtor did not schedule pertinent claim, she disclosed claim at creditor's meeting and trustee considered it).

seeking the benefit of the doctrine was not prejudiced by the non-disclosure.[189]

Judicial estoppel assumes that the legal claim at issue would have been property of the bankruptcy estate and available to pay creditors if it had been disclosed. As was true for the analysis of standing, the claim's inclusion in the bankruptcy estate depends on when the claim arose. Judicial estoppel cannot apply if the infractions occurred after the consumer filed a chapter 7 case.[190] Legal claims that the debtor acquires after filing the chapter 7 petition do not belong the bankruptcy estate and there is no duty to disclose them.[191] Since judicial estoppel is an affirmative defense, the defendant carries the burden of establishing that the cause of action accrued prebankruptcy.[192]

The application of judicial estoppel in chapter 13 cases has raised some particularly thorny issues. The Code and the federal bankruptcy court rules do not expressly mandate that debtors amend schedules to list legal claims that accrue during the pendency of a confirmed chapter 13 plan.[193] Chapter 13 plans typically fund payments to creditors through the debtor's regular earnings during the three- to five-year term of a plan. After plan confirmation, the appearance of a new unliquidated legal claim that may produce a one-time payment to the debtor should arguably not require amendment of schedules.[194] The claim may not produce the payment to the debtor until years after the plan has terminated.

However, several courts have rejected the view that debtors have no duty to amend their schedules to list claims that arise during a chapter 13 case. The courts applied judicial estoppel when chapter 13 debtors did not amend schedules to reflect legal claims that arose while they were in chapter 13 and later attempted to pursue the claims.[195]

The source of this obligation to amend is not clear, although the courts seem to focus on the definition of estate property for chapter 13 cases. The definition includes property acquired postpetition.[196] In addition, form chapter 13 plan confirmation orders and local rules may expressly require disclosure of post-confirmation legal claims.[197]

Finally, creditors argue that the Code provisions for amendment of plans during chapter 13 presume some obligation to disclose new property acquired, so that the trustee or court may consider whether modification of a plan is appropriate.[198] Therefore, in order to avoid judicial estoppel problems in the future, it may be appropriate to amend schedules to 189 Clark v. All Acquisition, L.L.C., 886 F.3d 261, 266–267 (2d Cir. 2018) (abuse of discretion to impose judicial estoppel where party seeking estoppel was in no way prejudiced by the omission from schedules).

190 Engelby v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2018 WL 1514246 (D. Minn. Mar. 27, 2018) (chapter 7 filing creates clean break with debtor's financial past; under FDCPA a discrete claim arises each time a debt collector makes a false representation after chapter 7 petition filed; it is irrelevant that underlying debt arose prebankruptcy); Knight v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 3221593 (D. Mont. June 8, 2016) (although borrowers were experiencing payment difficulties with servicer before filing for bankruptcy relief, nature and existence of legal claims did not become clear until after bankruptcy filed, precluding judicial estoppel for not listing claims in chapter 7 schedules); Moreno v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., 2014 WL 5934722 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 12, 2014) (denying judicial estoppel where debtor filed bankruptcy in reliance on servicer's promise to consider for loan modification, but after bankruptcy servicer refused to consider modification because debtor filed for bankruptcy: claim arose postpetition); Garcia v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2014 WL 5543885 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 3, 2014) (FDCPA claims arose after conversion of bankruptcy case to chapter 7 and therefore debtor had no duty to disclose and schedule claims; fact that underlying debt arose prebankruptcy not determinative); In re Rivera, 2014 WL 287517 (Bankr. E.D. Va. Jan. 27, 2014) (rejecting creditor's standing and judicial estoppel claims; while the creditor's promise to modify loan occurred prepetition, the foreclosure sale that was the subject of complaint occurred after chapter 7 filing; debt collection claims dismissed on other grounds). See also In re Rivera, 2014 WL 287517 (Bankr. E.D. Va. Jan. 27, 2014) (because debtor's major claims related to a foreclosure that occurred postpetition and not to origination issues, judicial estoppel not applicable); Famatiga v. Mortg. Elec. Registration Sys., Inc., 2011 WL 3320480 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 2, 2011) (no judicial estoppel where major part of borrower's claim related to a wrongful foreclosure that occurred after the bankruptcy filing); Doran v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2011 WL 2160643 (D. Haw. May 31, 2011) (judicial estoppel applied to one claim related to series of foreclosure actions lender took against borrower, but not to other claims related to misconduct that occurred postpetition). But cf. Clementson v. Countrywide Fin. Corp., 464 Fed. Appx. 706 (10th Cir. 2012) (unreported) (borrower's efforts to modify mortgage loan were rooted in lender's prebankruptcy pattern of conduct so that failure to schedule legal claims against lender triggered judicial estoppel).

191 Combs v. The Cordish Companies, Inc., 862 F.3d 671, 679–680 (8th Cir. 2017) (in chapter 7 case, debtor had no duty to disclose discrimination claim based on incidents that occurred after chapter 7 filing, reversing trail court's imposition of judicial estoppel); Carter v. Richland Holdings, Inc., 2018 WL 4566667 (D. Nev. Sept. 24, 2018) (FDCPA claims that are allowable under statute of limitations occurred after closing of bankruptcy case).

192 Gritters v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 6784352 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 6, 2015) (rejecting creditor's standing and judicial estoppel challenges because did not specify that debtor knew of injuries before filing bankruptcy petition).

193 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1007(h) requires amendment of schedules to list property acquired postpetition only in limited instances defined by Code § 541(a)(5) (property in the form of inheritance, divorce settlement, and insurance proceeds to which debtor becomes entitled within 180 days of filing petition).

194 In re Adair, 253 B.R. 85, 90 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2000); In re Haber, 547 B.R. 252, 260 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2016); In re Batten, 351 B.R. 256, 259 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 2006).

195 United States v. GSDMIDEA City, L.L.C., 798 F.3d 265 (5th Cir. 2016) (rejecting debtor's argument that law on duty to amend schedules for postpetition claims during chapter 13 was unclear, applying judicial estoppel to bar False Claims Act lawsuit); Jones v. Bob Evans Farms, Inc., 811 F.3d 1030 (8th Cir. 2016) (judicial estoppel applied to bar pursuit of employment discrimination claim that arose postpetition and despite debtor's amending schedules after defendant raised judicial estoppel); Allen v. C & H Distributors, L.L.C., 813 F.3d 566 (5th Cir. 2015) (judicial estoppel applied to bar personal injury action that accrued during chapter 13 case, even though debtor never obtained chapter 13 discharge); D'Antignac v. Deere & Co., 604 Fed Appx. 875 (11th Cir. Mar. 25, 2015) (dismissing employment discrimination action unscheduled in chapter 13 case); In re Flugence, 738 F.3d 126 (5th Cir. 2013) (imposing judicial estoppel to bar debtor from litigating undisclosed claim that arose during chapter 13 case after confirmation of plan).

196 11 U.S.C. § 1306(a)(1).

197 See Jones v. Bob Evans Farms, Inc., 811 F.3d 1030 (8th Cir. 2016).

198 11 U.S.C. § 1329; Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1009.

add postpetition legal claims before the chapter 13 case is closed out.[199]

13.3.3.3 Amending Bankruptcy Schedules to Avoid Judicial Estoppel

As with the standing problem, the plaintiff can seek to reopen a closed bankruptcy case, file an amended schedule listing the debt collection claim, and have the claim exempted, administered, or abandoned.[200] If the action is taken promptly and there is no evidence of bad faith, the court should decline to impose judicial estoppel.[201] Many courts will not imply the intent to deceive from an omission that was clearly inadvertent or based on lack of knowledge of the claim.[202] This is 199 See Fricke v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Grp., L.L.C., 2015 WL 4778527 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 12, 2015) (district refuses to apply judicial estoppel to FDCPA claim where chapter 13 debtor amended schedules four months after claim arose and after plan confirmation, but while bankruptcy case still subject to administration). See also Thomas v. Economy Premier Assur. Co., 196 So. 3d 7, 18, (La. Ct. App. 2016) (applying federal law, declining to apply judicial estoppel, recognizing that law regarding debtor's post-confirmation duty to amend schedules in chapter 13 was not clear).

200 Under the Supreme Court's Law v. Siegel decision, debtors should not face barriers to claiming an exemption based solely on the late amendment to their schedules. See Law v. Siegel, 571 U.S. 415, 134 S. Ct. 1188, 188 L. Ed. 2d 146 (2014); In re Padula, 542 B.R. 753, 759 (Bankr E.D. Va. 2015), aff'd, 651 Fed. Appx. 228 (4th Cir. 2016).

201 Slater v. U.S. Steel Corp., 871 F.3d 1174, 1186 (11th Cir. 2017) (en banc) (before imposing judicial estoppel, courts must consider wide range of factors, including whether debtor corrected non-disclosure); Spaine v. Cmty. Contacts, Inc., 756 F.3d 542 (7th Cir. 2014); Ah Quin v. Cty. of Kauai Dep't of Taxes, 733 F.3d 267, 275 276 (9th Cir. 2013) (presumption of intent to deceive by omission from schedules rebutted by later amendment and disclosure); Matthews v. Potter, 316 Fed. Appx. 518 (7th Cir. 2009) (rejecting estoppel against debtor who modified initial schedules and had previously informed trustee verbally of preexisting employment claim); Ajaka v. Brooksamerica Mortg. Corp., 2009 WL 453 F.3d 1339 (11th Cir. 2006) (amendment after chapter 13 plan confirmation to add TILA claim did not prejudice any parties); In re Lopez, 283 B.R. 22 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2002) (debtor should have been permitted to reopen and amend to schedule cause of action because, even if claim had been intentionally concealed, asset could be administered to benefit creditors); Bejarano v. Bravo! Facility Serv., Inc., 251 F. Supp. 3d 27 (D.D.C. 2017) (distinguishing cases where debtor amended schedules only after defendant raised judicial estoppel claim; rejecting estoppel where amendment and abandonment had occurred before the debtor filed the postbankruptcy lawsuit); Momoh v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 8729939, at *4 (N.D. Cal. July 1, 2017) (although considering it a "more nuanced" and close question, court declines to apply judicial estoppel where mortgagor amended chapter 13 schedules after mortgage servicer raised judicial estoppel; bankruptcy court never relied on incomplete schedules during period prior to amendment); Saji v. Residential Credit Solutions, 2017 WL 1407997 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 20, 2017) (no unfair advantage or misleading of bankruptcy court where debtor amended schedules to add wrongful foreclosure claim three-to-four months after events and three-to-four years after chapter 13 petition filed); Nettles v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 2011 WL 2462556 (M.D. Ga. June 17, 2011) (despite delay in amending schedules, debtors' prompt notification to trustee of fire casualty claim rebutted any inference of intent to conceal claim); Kurchack v. Life Ins. Co. of N. Am., 725 F. Supp. 2d 855 (D. Ariz. 2010) (allows debtor to amend schedules to claim exemption for lawsuit proceeds after discharge and after motion to dismiss filed); Roots v. Morehouse Sch. of Medicine, Inc., 2009 WL 4798217 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 8, 2009) (allows post-confirmation amendment to add FLSA claim; dismissal could harm creditors); Mellon v. Nat'l Dairy Holdings, L.P., 2009 WL 653024 (M.D. Ala. Mar. 10, 2009) (delay of eleven months after chapter 13 plan confirmation in amending schedules to include discrimination claim does not trigger judicial estoppel); Snowden v. Fred's Stores of Tennessee, 419 F. Supp. 2d 1367 (M.D. Ala. 2006) (debtor amended schedules after motion to dismiss filed; dismissal of potentially lucrative civil action would harm creditors); Moore v. Cycon Enters., Inc., 2006 WL 2375477 (W.D. Mich. Aug. 16, 2006) (debtor who informed court and trustee of potential claims and later amended her schedules not judicially estopped from bringing TILA and HOEPA claims); Wheeler v. Florida Dep't of Corrections, 2006 WL 2321114 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 9, 2006) (amending schedules after motion to dismiss filed does not preclude denial of estoppel); In re Baldwin, 307 B.R. 251 (M.D. Ala. 2004) (judicial estoppel did not apply because debtor was not aware of lender liability claim when bankruptcy filed, and later promptly amended schedules); In re Fields, 2013 WL 1136923, at *3 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. Mar. 19, 2013) (no judicial estoppel where debtor amended schedules during pending chapter 13 case to add TILA claim; amendment made after plan confirmation and in response to creditor's raising judicial estoppel); In re Rochester, 308 B.R. 596 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2004) (debtor allowed to reopen bankruptcy case to add products liability claim as debtor's failure to list claim in original schedules was not intentional or in bad faith); Miller v. Conagra, Inc., 991 So. 2d 445 (La. 2008) (cure of omission permitted; amendment may benefit creditors). See generally Just Film, Inc. v. Merchant Serv., Inc., 873 F. Supp. 2d 1171, 1178–1179 (N.D. Cal. 2012) (summarizing decisions on good faith exception to judicial estoppel); Cannata v. Wyndham Worldwide Corp., 798 F. Supp. 2d 1165 (D. Nev. 2011) (discussing various circuits' approaches to allowing amendment when omission from schedules was inadvertent).

202 Spaine v. Cmty. Contacts, Inc., 756 F.3d 542 (7th Cir. 2014) (no presumption of intent to deceive arises where debtor amended schedules and provides some evidence had no subjective intent to mislead); Javery v. Lucent Techs., Inc. Long Term Disability Plan for Mgmt. or LBA Employees, 741 F.3d 686, 698 (6th Cir. 2014) (failure to disclose claim in bankruptcy proceeding may be excused where it occurred by mistake or inadvertence, or where debtor lacked a motive to conceal claim (appropriate to give weight to exempt nature of claim)); Ah Quin v. Cty. of Kauai Dep't of Trans., 733 F.3d 267 (9th Cir. 2013) (where debtor amended schedules to include omitted claim, court must consider evidence as to whether initial omission was result of inadvertence or mistake); Ajaka v. Brooksamerica Mortg. Corp., 453 F.3d 1339 (11th Cir. 2006) (disputed facts regarding debtor's motivation and intent in omitting TILA claim from schedules precluded finding of judicial estoppel through summary judgment); Eubanks v. CBSK Fin. Grp., Inc., 385 F.3d 894 (6th Cir. 2004) (inadvertence and mistake are factors that must be considered in judicial estoppel analysis); Browning v. Levy, 283 F.3d 761, 775 (6th Cir. 2002); Ryan Operations G.P. v. Santiam-Midwest Lumber Co., 81 F.3d 355, 362 (3d Cir. 1996); In re Riazuddin, 363 B.R. 177, 189 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 2007) (the third element of the New Hampshire v. Maine test (unfair advantage/detriment to other party) requires an evaluation of the debtor's intent); Ware v. Harvey Auto Credit, L.L.C., WL 2404947, at *2 (N.D. Ill. June 2, 2017) (declining to dismiss TILA claim, court considers debtor's assertion of oversight, amendment of schedules, and claim's relatively low value ($2000)); Access Limousine Serv., Inc. v. Serv. Ins. Agency, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6126267 (D. Md. Oct. 19, 2016) (rejecting use of presumptions and declining to find judicial estoppel without clear evidence of intent to deceive); Balik v. Blitt & Gaines, P.C., 2015 WL 764013 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 21, 2015) (judicial estoppel not applicable to FDCPA claim where nature of distant forum violation substantially clarified by post-bankruptcy U.S. court of appeals decision, but case dismissed on other grounds); Murray v. Kindred Nursing Centers West L.L.C., 2014 WL

particularly true when the debtor amended schedules promptly upon learning of the omission.[203] Nevertheless, amendment may not always prevent application of judicial estoppel.[204] Under a commonly applied test, the omission of a cause of action from bankruptcy schedules is deemed deceitful if the debtor had knowledge of the factual basis for the undisclosed claim and had a motive to conceal it.[205] The motive is considered to be obtaining all the benefits of the discharge order while keeping the ability to pursue a valuable legal claim. The requisite "knowledge" is deemed to be the awareness of general facts associated with the potential claim. For some courts it does not matter that the debtor did not understand how certain facts gave rise to a legal claim.[206] However, other courts

4411044 (D. Me. Sept. 8, 2014) (when applying equitable doctrine of judicial estoppel, court should not consider dismissal without examination of evidence of debtor's intent; intent not presumed solely from debtor's knowledge of facts surrounding legal claim), aff'd on other grounds, 789 F.3d 20 (1st Cir. 2015); Bennett v. Flagstar Bank, 2011 WL 6152940 (S.D. Ga. Dec. 8, 2011) (refusing to infer intent merely from fact that debtors knew generally of facts surrounding claim when they omitted it from bankruptcy schedules); Famatiga v. Mortg. Elec. Registration Sys., Inc., 2011 WL 3320480 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 2, 2011) (lender failed to show borrower's bad faith in initial omission of TILA and other consumer claims from bankruptcy schedules); Sovok v. Ducks Unlimited, Inc., 2011 WL 1397970 (M.D. Tenn. Apr. 13, 2011) (debtor's knowledge of number of hours he worked and amount of pay he earned was not the equivalent of debtor's understanding that employer violated FLSA); Fite v. Comtide Nashville, L.L.C., 686 F. Supp. 2d 735, 748 (M.D. Tenn. 2010) (omission was inadvertent where debtor did not understand he had discrimination claim when filled out schedules); Wheeler v. Fla. Dep't of Corrections, 2006 WL 2321114 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 6, 2009) (unsophisticated debtor credibly showed he lacked knowledge of need to list a pending EEOC administrative claim in bankruptcy schedules); Mayes v. Walgreen Co., 2009 WL 1312957 (N.D. Ill. May 11, 2009) (no evidence debtor knew of FMLA claim before bankruptcy discharge); In re Baldwin, 307 B.R. 251 (M.D. Ala. 2004) (judicial estoppel did not apply because debtor was not aware of lender liability claim when bankruptcy filed, and later promptly amended schedules); In re Arana, 456 B.R. 161 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 2011) (Spanish-speaking pro se debtors who filed schedules with disreputable bankruptcy petition preparer did not exhibit bad faith in omission of medical malpractice claim from schedules); In re Stout, 2009 WL 2912501 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. Apr. 16, 2009) (denying judicial estoppel where evidence insufficient to show debtor knew of TILA rescission claim during bankruptcy case); Dawson v. J.G. Wentworth & Co., 946 F. Supp. 394 (E.D. Pa. 1996) (denying summary judgment because question of material fact existed as to whether debtor, who later amended schedules to include claim, acted in good or bad faith in omitting claims from original schedules); Ass'n Res., Inc. v. Wall, 2 A.3d 873, 892 (Conn. 2010) (corporate CEO made inadvertent mistake and relied on his attorney in omitting legal claim from his bankruptcy schedules). But see Geraldo v. Richland Holdings, Inc., 716 Fed. Appx. 728 (9th Cir. 2018) (affirming dismissal of FDCPA claims where debtor had not alleged any facts to show inadvertence or mistake to explain omission from schedules); Guay v. Burack (In re Guay), 677 F.3d 10, 20 (1st Cir. 2012) (noting that First Circuit has not adopted the exceptions to application of judicial estoppel for lack of knowledge or absence of motive to conceal); Krystal Cadillac Oldsmobile GMC Truck, Inc. v. Gen. Motors Corp., 337 F.3d 314, 321 (3d Cir. 2003) (rebuttable inference of bad faith arises when averments in pleadings demonstrate knowledge of a claim and a motive to conceal that claim in the face of an affirmative duty to disclose); In re Coastal Plains, Inc., 179 F.3d 197 (5th Cir. 1999) (debtor's knowledge of enough information to suggest that it may have a possible cause of action coupled with failure to schedule claim sufficient to support application of judicial estoppel doctrine); Dockery v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 2010 WL 2667376 (W.D. Ky. July 1, 2010) (burden of establishing absence of bad faith on debtor when defendant in subsequent action has shown debtor possessed knowledge of the factual basis of the claims in prior bankruptcy and had motive to conceal them from bankruptcy court).

203 See, e.g., Momoh v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 8729939, at *4 (N.D. Cal. July 1, 2016) (although considering it a "more nuanced" and close question, declining to apply judicial estoppel where mortgagor amended chapter 13 schedules only after mortgage servicer raised judicial estoppel; bankruptcy court never relied on incomplete schedule during period prior to amendment).

204 Orkies v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 796360 (W.D. Ky. Feb. 25, 2015) (judicial estoppel applied to dismiss FDCPA claims despite action to reopen case, amend schedules, and obtain trustee abandonment; court notes "complete absence" of evidence to support debtor's claims of inadvertence and mistake); Schaefer v. First Source Advantage, L.L.C., 2013 WL 509001 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 12, 2013) (judicial estoppel applied to dismiss FDCPA claims despite debtor's reactive amendment of bankruptcy schedules to add claims and satisfy standing requirements; no evidence of good faith error or inadvertence in original omission); Barker v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 874 F. Supp. 2d 1062 (D. Kan. 2012) (judicial estoppel barred chapter 13 debtor from pursuing prepetition FDCPA action despite amending his schedules to add claim in response to creditor's motion raising judicial estoppel). See also Anderson v. Seven Falls Co., 696 Fed. Appx. 341 (10th Cir. 2017) (declining to follow Ninth Circuit's Ah Quin standard, court does not require consideration of evidence of inadvertence after schedules amended); Moses v. Howard Univ. Hosp., 606 F.3d 789, 800 (D.C. Cir. 2010) (finding debtor's argument that he reopened bankruptcy case, amended schedules and invited trustee to intervene to be "wholly unpersuasive"); Eastman v. Union Pacific Rail Co., 493 F.3d 1151, 1160 (10th Cir. 2007) (reopening bankruptcy case, making creditors whole is "inconsequential"); Robinson v. District of Columbia, 10 F. Supp. 3d 181 (D.D.C. 2014) (because reopening bankruptcy case to schedule omitted debt will have no impact on court's decision to apply judicial estoppel, court may dismiss employment action without allowing reopening). But see Paul v. Hewlett Packard Enter. Co., 2017 WL 3668497 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 25, 2017) (rejecting judicial estoppel where debtor sought amendment only after defendant raised judicial estoppel, but debtor presented evidence he had informed bankruptcy counsel of legal claims earlier and bankruptcy counsel neglected to include them in schedules).

205 Marshall v. Honeywell Tech. Sys., Inc., 828 F.3d 923, 932 (D.C. Cir. 2016) (affirming lower court decision that imposed judicial estoppel without considering debtor's affidavit referencing inadvertence); Eastman v. Union Pacific R.R. Co., 493 F.3d 1151, 1157 (10th Cir. 2007); Krystal Cadillac Oldsmobile GMC Truck, Inc. v. Gen. Motors Corp., 337 F.3d 314, 321 (3d Cir. 2003); In re Coastal Plains, 179 F.3d 197 (5th Cir. 1999). Compare Guay v. Burack (In re Guay), 677 F.3d 10, 20 (1st Cir. 2012) (noting that First Circuit has not adopted the exceptions to application of judicial estoppel for lack of knowledge or absence of motive to conceal), with Alternative Sys. Concepts, Inc. v. Synopys, Inc., 374 F.3d 23, 35 (1st Cir. 2004) (noting that an exception to judicial estoppel "may be available if the responsible party shows that the new, inconsistent position is the product of information neither known nor readily available to it at the time the initial position was taken.").

206 Compare McCauley v. Hunter, 2015 WL 2193805 (N.D. Ill. May 7, 2015) (rejecting argument that postpetition court rulings clarified basis for FDCPA claim; whether borrower aware of claim before discharge not relevant because the operative events occurred prebankruptcy). with Meyer v. U.S. Bank, 530 B.R. 767 (W.D Wash. 2015) (change in interpretation of state foreclosure law after debtor filed for bankruptcy relief clarified legal claims that arose from prepetition facts, therefore not appropriate to treat claim as arising prepetition).

appropriately consider the debtor's genuine lack of insight into relevant facts at the time of a bankruptcy filing and find that the debtor's lack of knowledge of the nature of potential legal claims preclude judicial estoppel.[207]

Where the courts differ is in setting the standard for how the consumer can rebut a presumption of intent to deceive by showing mistake, inadvertence, and the absence of bad faith. The standards diverge on whether and when the consumer can present evidence of mistake or inadvertence and how strict the burden of production will be.

Defendants often attempt to raise judicial estoppel at the motion to dismiss stage. Application of judicial estoppel in early stages of a proceeding is inappropriate. If the plaintiff has reopened the bankruptcy case, amended the schedules, and the trustee has abandoned the claim (or the debtor appropriately exempted the claim), the party seeking judicial estoppel should bear the burden of producing evidence that the debtor intentionally misled the court in the initial omission.[208] Under these circumstances, there should be no presumption of an intent to deceive.[209]

Similarly, if the plaintiff has amended the schedules and has standing to pursue the claim, the defendant's burden in moving for summary judgment should be to show the absence of any material factual dispute as to the plaintiff's deceitful subjective intent in making out the initial set of bankruptcy schedules.[210] If the plaintiff's summary judgment record includes factual support for a finding of mistake or inadvertence, the defendant should not prevail in obtaining summary judgment on the basis of judicial estoppel.

Whenever possible, advocates should avoid having to reopen and amend old bankruptcy schedules after filing the postbankruptcy lawsuit and in reaction to the defendant's raising judicial estoppel in litigation.[211] The better practice is to correct the omission in the bankruptcy schedules first, then bring the FDCPA action.

13.3.3.4 Alternatives to Amending the Schedules

In response to an assertion of judicial estoppel debtor's counsel should emphasize that strict application of the doctrine provides an undeserved windfall to a defendant and does nothing to promote the interests of bankruptcy creditors.[212]

207 Wilson v. PrimeSource Health Care of Ohio, Inc., 2017 WL 2869341, at *4 (N.D. Ohio July 5, 2017) (no judicial estoppel where debtor did not schedule wage claim because defendant employer had misled her about validity of her claim); Patino v. Franklin Credit Mgmt. Corp., 2017 WL 1246853 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 5, 2017) (mag.; preliminarily declining to apply judicial estoppel to debtor's TILA rescission claim in view of debtor's mental impairment and absence of indicia of bad faith).

208 Williams v. NCB Mgmt. Services, Inc., 2018 WL 3244097 (N. D. Ill. July 3, 2018) (debt collector could not prevail in dismissing FDCPA claim on Rule 12(b)(6) motion relying on judicial estoppel); David v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 2014 WL 5510986 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 24, 2014) (refusing to apply judicial estoppel on Rule 12(b(6) motion); Jackson v. WellSpan Health, 2014 WL 414251, at *6–7 (M.D. Pa. Feb. 4, 2014) (courts should be reluctant to approve judicial estoppel at pleading stage; party to be judicially estopped must be given meaningful opportunity to explain its position); Schreiber v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6055425 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 17, 2011) (because judicial estoppel focuses on party's intent in earlier omission of consumer claims from bankruptcy schedules, court will not decide judicial estoppel issue on motion to dismiss), adopted, 2011 WL 6055417 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 6, 2011). But see Sanchez v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 7444915, at *4 (C.D. Cal. May 5, 2016) (suggesting that in responding to motion to dismiss raising judicial estoppel as affirmative defense, plaintiff may have to present some evidence of inadvertence/mistake).

209 Sullivan v. H & M Int'l Transp., Inc., 2015 WL 720988 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 13, 2015) (denying judicial estoppel on motion for judgment on pleadings because defendant failed to establish elements); Thomas v. Indiana Oxygen Co., 32 F. Supp. 3d 983 (S.D. Ind. 2014) (judicial estoppel not properly raised by Rule 12(b)(1) motion); Thompson v. Vill. of Monee, 2014 WL 4175915 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 22, 2014) (defendant must meet burden of showing intent to deceive if debtor reopened bankruptcy and amended schedules); In re Simmerman, 463 B.R. 47, 56 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2011) (denying motion to dismiss FDCPA claims based on judicial estoppel, "the court cannot determine, based solely on allegations in the complaint, whether any failure to disclose in the prior case was inadvertent or without motive"; but finds FDCPA claims time-barred). See also Rogers v. Ford Motor Co., 2015 WL 2097679 (N.D. Ill. May 4, 2015) (fact that debtor filled out her schedules with the assistance of counsel not determinative).

210 Baker v. Interfor U.S. Inc., 2017 WL 3184189 (D. Or. June 15, 2017) (denying judicial estoppel where debtor amended schedules and stated in affidavit that he did not subjectively understand he had a discrimination claim when he initially filled out his bankruptcy schedules); Elhindi v. Cal. Dep't of Corrections & Rehabilitation, 2017 WL 2633400 (E.D. Cal. June 19, 2017) (debtor amended schedules, asserted by affidavit that they did not understand they were required to provide information about legal claim to bankruptcy attorney).

211 White v. Vacation Ownership, Inc., 617 F.3d 472 (6th Cir. 2010) (bad faith where no attempt to amend chapter 13 debtor's schedules until after defendant in ongoing employment discrimination case filed motion to dismiss raising estoppel); Moses v. Howard Univ. Hosp., 606 F.3d 789 (D.C. Cir. 2010) (estoppel applied where employment discrimination case pending before bankruptcy filing and debtor did not reopen case and amend until after motion to dismiss filed); Dockery v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 2010 WL 2667376 (W.D. Ky. July 1, 2010) (estoppel applied to dismiss TILA and other consumer claims despite request to amend schedules after creditor filed motion to dismiss); Tyler v. Fed. Express Corp., 420 F. Supp. 2d 849 (W.D. Tenn. 2005), aff'd, 206 Fed. Appx. 500 (6th Cir. 2006) (rejecting amendment after motion to dismiss filed).

212 Slater v. U.S. Steel Corp., 871 F.3d 1174, 1186–1187 (11th Cir. 2017) (en banc); Ah Quin v. Cty. of Kauai Dep't of Taxes, 733 F.3d 267, 275–276 (9th Cir. 2013) (discussing harmful effect of judicial estoppel on administration of bankruptcy cases); Biesek v. Soo Line R. Co., 440 F.3d 410 (7th Cir. 2006) (noting harm to creditors from application of judicial estoppel; allowing trustee to go ahead with claim is more appropriate option); Parker v. Wendy's Int'l, Inc., 365 F.3d 1268, 1272 (11th Cir. 2004) (approving trustee's standing to reopen bankruptcy case to allow trustee to administer claim is more appropriate remedy than dismissal of action through judicial estoppel); In re An-Tze Cheng, 308 B.R. 448, 459 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2004), aff'd, 160 Fed. Appx. 644 (9th Cir. 2005) ("Commentators are beginning to perceive problems inherent in the nature of bankruptcy as a collective proceeding that may make the remedy [of judicial estoppel] worse than the disease."); Pavelka v. Allstate Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co., 91 F. Supp. 3d 931, 935 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 18, 2015) (judicial estoppel is a "powerful defense" and "should be applied with caution"); United Fire & Cas. Co. v. Thompson, 949 F. Supp. 2d 922 (E.D. Mo. 2013) (rejecting judicial estoppel, noting harm to creditors and windfall to defendants if doctrine applied); Williams v. Republic Recovery Serv., 2010 WL 2195519, at *2 (N.D. Ill. May 27,

A court has options for sanctioning debtors who deliberately misrepresent their financial affairs in bankruptcy schedules.

For example, instead of dismissing a lawsuit for judicial estoppel the court should allow time for the trustee to be substituted as the plaintiff.[213] Judicial estoppel does not apply to a bankruptcy trustee.[214] The trustee may hire the consumer's counsel to prosecute the claim on behalf of the bankruptcy estate.

In a case in which the court finds an intent to deceive, the court may limit the debtor's access to proceeds from a lawsuit. However, such a sanction should be issued only after a finding of intentional misconduct. The bankruptcy court, not the trial court hearing the debt collection case, should make this determination.[215]

In Law v. Siegel, the Supreme Court reiterated its admonition against the lower courts' use of equitable principles to deny exemption claims in bankruptcy cases.[216] Specific provisions of the Bankruptcy Code and state law address when a debtor can claim an exemption. Consistent with Law v. Siegel, courts must not employ the equitable doctrine of judicial estoppel to deny or limit debtors' exemptions claims.

The federal district court in Jeziorowski v. Credit Protection Association, L.P.,[217] formulated an appropriate response to a judicial estoppel claim in an FDCPA action in which the trustee retained an interest in the litigation. The court noted that the debtor had amended his schedules before any judicial estoppel defense had been raised, and found that the debtor's initial failure to schedule the FDCPA claim was inadvertent. After allowing the trustee to be substituted as plaintiff, the court ruled that the debtor was entitled to up to $6000 as his wild-card exemption in the proceeds from the lawsuit. As long as the bankruptcy court approves the arrangement between the trustee and the debtor regarding division of any potential award, the nonbankruptcy court determining the FDCPA claims has no basis to apply judicial estoppel.[218]

2010) (strictly enforced judicial estoppel rule would "needlessly punish those debtors who fail to disclose claims due to mistake, misunderstanding or ignorance of the law"); In re Phillips, 2012 WL 1232008 (Bankr. D.N.J. Apr. 12, 2012) (reopening bankruptcy case to allow amendment of schedules regardless of debtor's bad faith in initially failing to schedule claim, noting that amendment best protects interests of creditors); In re FV Steel & Wire Co., 349 B.R. 181, 185 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 2006) (in bankruptcy context judicial estoppel should not be used to work an injustice, particularly where prior position was product of mistake or inadvertence); Robert F. Dugas, Honing a Blunt Instrument: Refining the Use of Judicial Estoppel in Bankruptcy Nondisclosure Cases, 59 Vand. L. Rev. 205 (Jan. 2006).

213 United States v. Wygul, 2016 WL 4126583, at *4 (W.D. Tenn. Aug. 2, 2016) (refusing to dismiss fair housing claim on grounds of judicial estoppel where debtor reopened bankruptcy case and substituted trustee); Koku v. Bonewicz, 2015 WL 5965392 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 13, 2015) (as alternative to dismissal with prejudice of FDCPA claim for judicial estoppel, court sets status hearing for trustee to appear).

214 Stephenson v. Malloy, 700 F.3d 265 (6th Cir. 2012) (chapter 7 trustee can pursue prepetition legal claim despite debtor's inadvertent omission of claim from schedules); Reed v. City of Arlington, 650 F.3d 571 (5th Cir. 2011) (en banc) (application of judicial estoppel to bankruptcy trustee is inconsistent with purpose of bankruptcy law to preserve assets for distribution to estate's innocent creditors); Kane v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 535 F.3d 380 (5th Cir. 2008) (judicial estoppel not applicable to trustee; trustee substituted as party in interest to pursue unscheduled personal injury claim); Biesek v. Soo Line R.R. Co., 440 F.3d 410 (7th Cir. 2006) (trustee is proper party to pursue unlisted claims as representative of creditors); Parker v. Wendy's Int'l, Inc., 365 F.3d 1268, 1272 (11th Cir. 2004) (chapter 7 trustee has standing to control nondisclosed asset to exclusion of debtor; judicial estoppel might apply to debtor if funds left over after payment to creditors); In re Riazuddin, 363 B.R. 177 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 2007) (judicial estoppel not applicable to trustee); Gecker v. Menard, Inc., 2017 WL 603178 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 14, 2017) (mag.; inquiry into debtor's good faith in failing to disclose claim is irrelevant where trustee is appropriate party to pursue prepetition claim); Copelan v. Techtronics Indus. Co., 95 F. Supp. 3d 1230 (S.D. Cal. 2015) (judicial estoppel inapplicable to trustee who has been substituted as party plaintiff); Lupian v. Cent. Valley Builders, 2014 WL 465445 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 5, 2014) (showing of mistake/inadvertence not necessary for trustee to pursue claim); Thompson v. EarthLink Shared Serv., L.L.C., 956 F. Supp. 2d 1317 (N.D. Ala. 2013) (judicial estoppel not applicable to trustee); Goodman v. Takeda Pharms. N. Am., Inc., 2013 WL 1249756, at *4 (D. Nev. Mar. 26, 2013) (allowing substitution of chapter 7 trustee and rejecting defendant's judicial estoppel claim); In re Stiltner, 2013 WL 1176326 (E.D. Tenn. Mar. 20, 2013) (trustee innocent of misconduct, not subject to judicial estoppel); Kotbi v. Hilton Worldwide, Inc., 2012 WL 914951 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 19, 2012) (judicial estoppel not applicable when trustee asserts standing to pursue debtor's legal claim); Coble v. DeRosia, 823 F. Supp. 2d 1048 (E.D. Cal. 2011) (judicial estoppel not applicable to trustee); Killmeyer v. Oglebay Norton Co., 817 F. Supp. 2d 681 (W.D. Pa. 2011) (judicial estoppel not applicable to a trustee); Frese v. Empire Fin. Servicers, 725 F. Supp. 2d 130 (D.D.C. 2010) (chapter 7 trustee to pursue originally unscheduled prepetition TILA rescission and damages claims unless decides to abandon claims to debtor); In re Satterfield, 2010 WL 2928330 (Bankr. N.D. W. Va. July 26, 2010) (once court has substituted trustee as party in interest to pursue debtor's predatory lending claims, lender cannot assert debtor's inconsistent schedules as basis for estoppel against trustee); Hernandez v. Forest Preserve Dist. of Cook Cty., 2010 WL 1292499 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2010) (in chapter 13, judicial estoppel does not preclude debtor from pursuing claims on behalf of estate). See also Equal Employment Opportunity Comm'n v. CRST Van Expedited, Inc., 679 F.3d 657 (8th Cir. 2012) (despite application of judicial estoppel to bar debtor's claims because of prior bankruptcy, judicial estoppel cannot be applied to bar governmental agency from enforcement action over same conduct against same party).

215 See, e.g., Metrou v. M.A. Mortenson Co., 781 F.3d 357, 360 (7th Cir. 2015) (reversing trial court that had placed cap on plaintiff's recovery based on amount needed to pay off bankruptcy creditors: "a debtor who errs in good faith, and tries to set things right by surrendering the asset to the Trustee, remains entitled to any surplus after creditors have been paid, just as would have occurred had the claim been disclosed on the bankruptcy schedules"); Herrera-Nevarez v. Ethicon, Inc., 2017 WL 2591989, at *3–4 (N.D. Ill. June 15, 2017) (district court allows trustee to prosecute debtor's lawsuit, adding "[t]o the extent that [debtor's] intent is relevant to the division of any potential award, the bankruptcy judge overseeing the estate can address this issue"); Gecker v. Menard, Inc., 2017 WL 603178 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 14, 2017) (mag.; where trustee is pursuing prepetition claim in district court, bankruptcy court should address impact of any estoppel claims against debtor). But see In re Bushberger, 588 B.R. 44, 49 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 2018) (upon reopening case bankruptcy court determined FDCPA claim was property of estate and allowed debtor to amend schedules, but left question of judicial estoppel to district court where FDCPA action was pending).

216 Law v. Siegel, 571 U.S. 415, 134 S. Ct. 1188, 188 L. Ed. 2d 146 (2014).

217 2017 WL 1549965 (W.D.N.Y. May 1, 2017).

218 See Alward v. Johnston, 199 A.3d 1190 (N.H. 2018) (rejecting judicial estoppel where debtor reopened chapter 7 case, scheduled prepetition

13.3.3.5 Judicial Estoppel Other Than Where Claims Omitted from Schedules

Efforts to impose judicial estoppel based on a past bankruptcy filing appear most often when the consumer omitted a legal claim from the schedule of assets. However, other affirmative statements that the debtor filed of record in the course of a bankruptcy may also lead to judicial estoppel. These statements are readily available on PACER for review by opposing counsel. If the consumer listed a creditor in bankruptcy schedules and described the debt as "undisputed," this may later pose an obstacle to the consumer's claim that a debt collector violated the FDCPA by attempting to collect the same debt because it was allegedly unenforceable.[219]

Basic concepts of claim and issue preclusion apply in the bankruptcy context. Thus, the failure to object to a creditor's proof of claim could have claim preclusion consequences. The bankruptcy court's order confirming a chapter 13 plan is entitled to res judicata treatment like any federal court judgment. If the confirmed plan provided for treatment of a prepetition debt in a specific way, the debtor may face judicial estoppel and res judicata problems if the debtor later brings a debt collection action that poses a contrary legal theory about the status of the same prebankruptcy debt.[220] However, a plan confirmation order that does not specifically determine the merits of claims, but generally approves payments to classes of creditors, should not bar an FDCPA action.[221] Neither judicial estoppel nor claim preclusion doctrines apply to a bankruptcy court's approval of a creditor's motion for relief from the automatic stay. Relief from stay orders are not conclusive rulings on the merits of a creditor's claim under non-bankruptcy law.[222]

Judicial estoppel also arises in the context of class actions. Defendants opposing class certification motions have raised both standing and judicial estoppel arguments against proposed class representatives. The legal tests applied to a class representative are similar to those that determine whether an individual litigant defeats a judicial estoppel or standing challenge.[223] One district court denied certification of an FDCPA class where the proposed class representative would be subject to a potential judicial estoppel claim.[224] Ultimately, however, the class representative's past participation in a bankruptcy case need not preclude compliance with Rule 23.[225] With medical malpractice claim, and trustee and debtor had agreed, subject to bankruptcy court approval, to split any proceeds of action 50/50).

---

219 Ward v. ANS Servicing, L.L.C., 606 Fed. Appx. 506 (11th Cir. 2015) (debtor stipulated to amount of monthly mortgage payment in bankruptcy filing, judicial estoppel bars FDCPA action asserting creditor should be claiming different amount); Haddad v. Randall S. Miller Assoc. P.C., 587 Fed. Appx. 959 (6th Cir. 2014) (judicial estoppel applied to FDCPA claim asserting attempt to enforce invalid mortgage where in prior bankruptcy schedules debtor "admitted" validity of same mortgage); Perez v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 2018 WL 4853897 (N.D. Tex. Oct. 5, 2018) (judicial estoppel applied to FDCPA and other consumer claims where in bankruptcy case plaintiff had admitted to default and completed repayment plan, but in postbankruptcy FDCPA claim asserted that no default existed at time of bankruptcy); Jarret v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2016 WL 910189 (W.D. Ky. Mar. 9, 2016) (judicial estoppel barred FDCPA claim because debtor listed challenged debt as "undisputed" in bankruptcy schedules). But see Davenport v. Djourabchi, 316 F. Supp. 3d 58 (D. D.C. 2018) (debtor's challenge to proof of claim brought as "contested matter" in bankruptcy court rather than adversary proceeding did not preclude later action for monetary damages arising from the transaction); Hymas v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 2015 WL 273615 (D. Nev. Jan. 22, 2015) (although plaintiff did not challenge identity of deed of trust creditor in bankruptcy proceedings, this does not preclude a postbankruptcy challenge to authority to foreclose).

220 Covert v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 779 F.3d 242 (4th Cir. 2015) (res judicata applied to bar plaintiffs' FDCPA and state debt collection law claims asserting unlicensed debt buyer had attempted to collect debts it had no right to collect; plaintiffs had not objected to this creditor's claims in prior chapter 13 cases in which plans were confirmed); Danise v. Saxon Mortg. Services, Inc., 738 Fed. Appx. 47 (3d Cir. 2018) (judicial estoppel bars claims against mortgage servicer related to loan modifications where debtor not only failed to list claims in schedules, but complied with confirmed five-year chapter 13 repayment plan without disputing amounts due); Bullard v. Indymac Bank, 2012 WL 4134839, at *7 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 18, 2012), aff'd on other grounds, 539 Fed. Appx. 665 (6th Cir. 2013) (judicial estoppel bars borrower's postbankruptcy challenge to validity of mortgage; borrower aware of claim during pendency of bankruptcy, did not schedule legal claim as asset, and listed property as subject to valid mortgage, eliminating any equity in the property). But see Davenport v. Cavalry Investments, 2015 WL 8746384 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 14, 2015) (collateral estoppel did not apply to chapter 13 plan confirmation order where debtor brought FDCPA challenge to proof of claim while bankruptcy case remained open).

221 In re Chobra, 582 B.R. 380, 385–386 (Bankr. D. Md. 2018) (debt collection claim filed in bankruptcy court not precluded by general plan confirmation terms applicable to a class of proofs of claim).

222 Garner v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2015 WL 5634449 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 25, 2015) (FDCPA claim based on identity of foreclosing party not subject to collateral estoppel arising from bankruptcy court's decision on motion for relief from stay). See generally Grella v. Salem Five Cent Sav. Bank, 42 F.3d 26, 32–33 (1st Cir. 1994). But see Capistrano v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 2017 WL 1758052, at *4 (E.D. Tex. Apr. 3, 2017), adopted, 2017 WL 1739961 (E.D. Tex. May 3, 2017) (debtor's stipulation to validity of debt in consenting to stay relief is basis for judicial estoppel against debtor's later assertion that mortgage lien not enforceable).

223 See, e.g., Williams v. Saxon Mortg. Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 765055, at *9 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 26, 2014) (judicial estoppel precluded named plaintiffs from proceeding as class representatives against lender; bankruptcy trustee could be substituted); In re Cmty. Bank of N. Virginia Mortg. Lending, 954 F. Supp. 2d 360 (W.D. Pa. 2013) (dismissing claims of sixteen of forty-three class representatives who had not scheduled TILA claim in bankruptcy cases, declining to dismiss claim of one proposed class representative who had reopened her bankruptcy case and had trustee abandon claim to her); Rosenberg v. Renal Advantage, Inc., 2013 WL 3205426, at *11 (S.D. Cal. June 24, 2013) (party's failure to amend bankruptcy schedules to clarify who had authority to bring claim disqualifies the party as class representative under the adequacy of representation standard of Rule 23). See also Stocks v. Doall Co., 340 F. Supp. 3d 789 (E.D. Wis. 2018) (former chapter 13 debtor's receipt of class notice, signing it, and returning it one year before filing for bankruptcy relief did not give her sufficient knowledge to require that she schedule a claim in her bankruptcy case, denying judicial estoppel).

224 Heisler v. Convergent Healthcare Recoveries, Inc., 2018 WL 4635674 (E.D. Wis. Sept. 27, 2018) (mag.; mere existence of judicial estoppel dispute brought into question proposed class representative's ability to meet Rule 23 requirement to be adequate representative of class), reconsideration denied, 2108 WL 6326414 (E.D. Wis. Dec. 4, 2018).

225 In re Cmty. Bank of N. Va. Mortg. Lending, 954 F. Supp. 2d 360, 382 (W.D. Pa. 2013) (proposed class representative who reopened respect to absent class members, the mere potential that some of them may face bankruptcy standing or judicial estoppel barriers is not a basis to deny certification of an FDCPA class.[226] In a notice to members of an FDCPA class it may be appropriate to advise them of the potential requirement to disclose their claims in a bankruptcy case.[227]

13.4 Bankruptcy's Effect on Claims Arising During and After a Bankruptcy Case

13.4.1 Claims Arising During a Bankruptcy Case

Debt collection claims may arise after a bankruptcy case is filed, but before a discharge is entered in the case. In chapter 7 cases that time period is about four months and in chapter 13 cases it can be three to five years. For example, a creditor that initiates a lawsuit over a prepetition debt after the debtor has filed for bankruptcy, but before discharge, potentially violates both the automatic stay and the FDCPA. Where the debt collection claims are based on violations of the Bankruptcy Code, courts are divided over whether bankruptcy offers the exclusive remedy or whether FDCPA and state debt collection laws can also be raised.[228]

Assuming that a chapter 7 debtor has a debt collection abuse claim that has arisen during the bankruptcy case, the debtor is free to prosecute that claim. With limited exceptions that are not applicable to claims against debt collectors, the bankruptcy estate in a chapter 7 case is fixed at the time the petition for relief is filed.[229] Property (in this case, legal claims) that the debtor acquires after the filing of the petition belong to the debtor, not the bankruptcy estate.[230]

However, while the debtor has the ability to prosecute FDCPA claims that accrue after the filing of the chapter 7 petition, these claims have no effect on the bankruptcy estate. Therefore, the bankruptcy court may not have subject matter jurisdiction over them.[231] Depending on the nature of the claims, the debtor may have to litigate the claims in a non-bankruptcy court.[232]

Treatment of property of the estate during a chapter 13 case varies by jurisdiction. Under one view, all property and earnings acquired during the pendency of the chapter 13 case (unless the case is converted to another chapter) are property of the estate.[233] However, under certain courts' interpretation of the interplay between section 1306 and section 1327 of the Code, unless the bankruptcy plan provides otherwise, property of the bankruptcy estate vests in the debtor when the chapter 13 plan is confirmed. Under this latter view, an FDCPA claim based on events that occurred postpetition and before plan confirmation would cease to be property of the bankruptcy estate once the plan was confirmed. Consequently, the bankruptcy court may not have jurisdiction over such a pre-confirmation claim.[234]

As discussed in § 13.3.3.3, supra, several courts have held that chapter 13 debtors have an obligation to amend schedules to add legal claims that accrue after plan confirmation and before conclusion of the chapter 13 case. Particularly in the jurisdictions that take this view, the safest course is to disclose the post-confirmation legal claim and amend the schedules. Because the chapter 13 debtor normally has the right to fully control property of the estate, the debtor should bankruptcy case and had claim abandoned may proceed as class representative); Just Film, Inc. v. Merchant Serv., Inc. 873 F. Supp. 2d 1171 (N.D. Cal. 2012) (rejecting judicial estoppel and standing challenges where proposed class representative had informed his attorney and trustee of claim during his bankruptcy case and amended schedules after reopening bankruptcy case).

226 Rizzo v. Kohn Law Firm S.C., 2018 WL 3466935 (W.D. Wis. July 18, 2018) (existence of particular number of class members who failed to disclose claim in bankruptcy was purely speculative; presence of large number may be addressed by subclasses, but not issue to be addressed as requirement for class certification).

227 Id. at *4.

228 See § 13.7, infra.

229 See 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(6). But see Clementson v. Countrywide Fin. Corp., 2011 WL 1884715 (D. Colo. Jan. 27, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 1884627 (D. Colo. May 18, 2011), aff'd, 464 Fed. Appx. 706 (10th Cir. Feb. 7, 2012) (although mortgage servicer's pattern of misconduct continued after debtor filed bankruptcy petition, pattern was rooted in prepetition events and gave rise to unsecured prepetition claim for damages that trustee, not debtor, had standing to pursue).

230 11 U.S.C. § 541(a). National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 2.5 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

231 § 13.5, infra. See In re Rhinesmith, 450 B.R. 630 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 2011) (bankruptcy court lacked subject matter jurisdiction to consider chapter 7 trustee's FDCPA claims that were based solely on postpetition events involving reaffirmation agreement); In re King, 2010 WL 3851434 (Bankr. D. Colo. Sept. 24, 2010) (FDCPA claim based on postpetition actions taken by defendants arose after bankruptcy case was filed and was not property of chapter 7 estate therefore not encompassed by court's limited subject matter jurisdiction); Condor v. Weinstein, Treiger & Riley, P.S., 309 B.R. 124 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2004) (bankruptcy court has neither "core" nor "related to" jurisdiction over postpetition violations of FDCPA since chapter 7 bankruptcy estate is not affected); In re Goldstein, 201 B.R. 1 (Bankr. D. Me. 1996) (bankruptcy court lacked jurisdiction over chapter 7 debtor's FDCPA claims involving postpetition conduct); In re King, 2010 WL 3851434 (Bankr. D. Colo. Sept. 24, 2010) (debtor's FDCPA claim, which was based on postpetition actions taken by defendants, arose after bankruptcy case was filed and was not property of chapter 7 estate).

232 See § 13.5, infra (discussing bankruptcy court jurisdiction).

233 11 U.S.C. § 1306(a). See In re Waldron, 536 F.3d 1239 (11th Cir. 2008); Barbosa v. Soloman, 235 F.3d 31 (1st Cir. 2000).

234 In re Renner, 2017 WL 2773526 (Bankr. S.D. Ind. June 26, 2017) (property of estate vested in debtor upon plan confirmation; FDCPA claim accruing after confirmation would have no impact on estate, so no "related to" bankruptcy court jurisdiction); In re Schatz, 452 B.R. 544, 553 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. 2011) (no "related to" jurisdiction for bankruptcy court to hear FDCPA claim involving post-filing, pre-confirmation letter). But see In re Orchard, 2013 WL 6254037, at *3 (Bankr. D. Or. Dec. 4, 2013) (court had "related to" jurisdiction to consider debtor's FDCPA claims involving post-confirmation violations because award could potentially trigger debtor's duty to amend plan to allow for greater payment to creditors).

have standing to pursue a postpetition cause of action in chapter 13.[235]

13.4.2 Claims Arising After a Bankruptcy Case

Debt collection abuse claims that arise after entry of a discharge order in either a chapter 7 or chapter 13 case are not property of the bankruptcy estate.[236] A bankruptcy discharge order bars collection of discharged debts as personal liabilities of the debtor. Despite the occasional suggestion of creditors to the contrary, the discharge order does not have any broad claim preclusion effect on all potential disputes between the debtor and a creditor.

For example, a discharge order has no effect on an FDCPA claim asserting that a debt collector attempted to foreclose postbankruptcy when state law did not allow a foreclosure sale.[237] Where the abusive debt collection activity violates both the discharge order and federal or state debt collection law, courts are divided on whether bankruptcy offers the exclusive remedy or whether FDCPA and state debt collection laws can also be raised.[238] Even if the FDCPA and state debt collection claims can be raised, the bankruptcy court may not have jurisdiction to hear the claim.[239] The consumer may have to pursue these types of claims in a nonbankruptcy forum.

13.5 Litigating Claims in Bankruptcy Court

13.5.1 Overview

Lawsuits within a bankruptcy case are called "adversary proceedings."[240] Adversary proceedings are initiated by complaint and are governed by rules that closely parallel the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Depending on the specific circumstance of the case, the bankruptcy court may be a preferable forum for litigating claims related to abusive debt collection. Not only do bankruptcy judges regularly see the problem of debtors in trouble, but they are also generally more aware of the unfair creditor practices that often take place. In addition, many bankruptcy judges are far more knowledgeable in commercial law, and often consumer law, than the average state court or federal district court judge.

Generally, any case within the district court's bankruptcy jurisdiction that involves the debtor (that is, relating in any way to the bankruptcy or the debtor's property) may be filed in the bankruptcy court in which the bankruptcy case has been filed.[241] The debtor may file the complaint in the bankruptcy court regardless of whether the state or federal courts in that state would otherwise have had "long arm jurisdiction" over the defendant.[242] There is no "minimum contacts" requirement which must be met before an out-of-state defendant can be sued in the forum district's bankruptcy court.[243] Moreover, service of process generally can be made by first class mail.[244] Another benefit of the bankruptcy forum is that most courts hold that, at least as to certain core proceedings (cases arising within a bankruptcy case or under the Bankruptcy Code), a bankruptcy judge may refuse to enforce an arbitration agreement and may stay any pending arbitration proceedings.[245]

Bankruptcy courts are courts of limited jurisdiction. As a result, bankruptcy courts often decline to hear federal or state debt collection claims that do not have an effect on the estate (e.g., those arising after discharge) based on a lack of jurisdiction. Debt collection claims that arose before the bankruptcy filing typically involve a party who has become a creditor in the bankruptcy case. Debtors should be able to characterize claims against these defendants as counterclaims against creditors or challenges to proofs of claim.[246] These are core proceedings and within the bankruptcy court's core statutory jurisdiction.[247]

Debt collection claims that arise after the bankruptcy filing, but before the case is closed, may fall within the bankruptcy courts' "related to" jurisdiction. Because of the length of chapter 13 plans, these "related to" cases are more likely to arise during chapter 13 than chapter 7 cases.[248]

235 11 U.S.C. §§ 1303, 1306(b). See Smith v. Rockett, 522 F.3d 1080 (10th Cir. 2008) (chapter 13 filer had standing to bring FDCPA claim in her own name); Crosby v. Monroe County, 394 F.3d 1328 (11th Cir. 2004); Cable v. Ivy Tech State Coll., 200 F.3d 467 (7th Cir. 1999).

236 See § 13.2.5, supra.

237 Farber v. Brock & Scott, L.L.C., 2016 WL 5867042 (D. Md. Oct. 6, 2016).

238 See § 13.7, infra.

239 See § 13.5, infra.

240 For a more detail on litigating in the bankruptcy courts, see National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice Ch. 14 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

241 See, e.g., In re Humes, 496 B.R. 557, 566–567 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 2013) (in chapter 13 case, bankruptcy court has jurisdiction to hear adversary proceeding raising prepetition FDCPA and related state law claims against creditor as (1) a core proceeding arising "under" the Code (claim seeking to void lien) and (2) a claim arising "in" the bankruptcy case (i.e., a challenge to a proof of claim) and as part of court's "related to" jurisdiction (as potential source of funds to pay higher dividend to creditors)).

242 28 U.S.C. § 1409(c).

243 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 14.3.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

244 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7004(b). An exception to the general right to serve by first class mail applies to insured depository institutions in contested matters or adversary proceeding. Such a defendant must be served by certified mail to an officer of the institution unless certain requirements have been met.

245 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 14.3.2.5 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

246 Washington v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1245741 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 18, 2015) (FDCPA claim arose prepetition and as claim against party that filed proof of claim is core proceeding).

247 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C).

248 In re Trokie, 590 B.R. 663, 677 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. 2018) (bankruptcy courts have "related to" jurisdiction over FDCPA claims that arise postpetition and before chapter 13 case closes because an award of actual or statutory damages could augment the chapter 13 estate); In re Fuhrman, 596 B.R. 342, 350 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 2018) (retaining "related to" jurisdiction over debtor's FDCPA claims in chapter 13 case); In re Robinson, 554 B.R. 800, 806–807 (Bankr. W.D. La. 2016) (FDCPA cause of action raised in chapter 13 case could form basis for

FDCPA claims have the capability of increasing assets of the chapter 13 estate, so the bankruptcy court should exercise jurisdiction over claims arising postpetition and during a chapter 13 case, regardless of whether the defendant is a pre-bankruptcy creditor or engaged in misconduct that violated specific Bankruptcy Code provisions.[249]

FDCPA claims that arise after the filing of the chapter 7 petition, and particularly after the closing of the chapter 7 case, present a more tenuous claim to the bankruptcy court's "related to" jurisdiction.[250] These claims typically involve violations of the discharge order. So while some courts hold that an attempt to collect a debt in violation of the discharge order may give rise to both a contempt claim under the Bankruptcy Code and an FDCPA claim, the bankruptcy court may, nevertheless, refuse to hear the FDCPA claim.[251] This reasoning can lead to the curious result that the bankruptcy court has jurisdiction over contempt proceedings involving its own discharge order, but not over an FDCPA claim based on the same conduct that violated the discharge order.[252]

Finally, under circumstances defined by federal statute, U.S. district courts have the authority to take cases pending in bankruptcy courts and decide them in the district court.[253] This procedure involves a process known as the "withdrawal of the reference." In the federal judicial system, the U.S. districts courts have authority over bankruptcy matters. By statute, the district courts make a general "referral" of bankruptcy matters increased payments to creditors so that the bankruptcy court may exercise "non-core, but related to" jurisdiction over action); In re Lopez, 2015 WL 1207012 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Mar. 12, 2015) (bankruptcy court has "related to" jurisdiction over debtor's adversary proceeding filed in ongoing chapter 13 case and raising FDCPA claims involving incidents that occurred while bankruptcy pending); In re Peed, 2014 WL 2987637 (Bankr. S.D. Ala. July 1, 2014) (finding "related to" jurisdiction for FDCPA claim, distinguishing FDCPA claims raised after close of chapter 7 case from those brought during ongoing chapter 13 cases). See also In re Nee, 2015 WL 1727180 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. Apr. 13, 2015) (jurisdiction over FDCPA claims brought by debtor in active chapter 13 case based on 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(o): "other proceedings affecting . . . the adjustment of the debtor-creditor . . . relationship, other than personal injury or wrongful death claims").

249 In re Cawood, 577 B.R. 538 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 2017) (bankruptcy court had "related to" jurisdiction over debtor's FDCPA claims involving mortgage servicer's collection actions that occurred after cure in prior chapter 13 case; rejecting view that claim's impact on estate must meet specific substantiality threshold); In re Guenot, 2014 WL 67320 (Bankr. D.N.J. Jan. 2, 2014) ("related to" jurisdiction for FDCPA claim established because claim may augment chapter 13 estate).

250 See § 13.4.1, supra.

251 In re Stevenson, 475 B.R. 286 (D. Mass. 2012) (in chapter 7 case bankruptcy court appropriately did not take jurisdiction over FDCPA claims related to postpetition efforts to collect on student loan); Magee v. S. Financial Systems, Inc., 2019 WL 1503919, at *6 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. Apr. 4, 2019) (no "related to" jurisdiction over FDCPA claim based on postpetition service of writ of garnishment in violation of the automatic stay); In re Daniels, 591 B.R. 814, 827 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2018) (bankruptcy courts do not have "related to" jurisdiction over FDCPA claims accruing postpetition in chapter 7, but noting divided authority on whether bankruptcy courts may nevertheless exercise ancillary (or supplemental) jurisdiction over these claims); In re Marshall, 491 B.R. 217, 230 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2012) (Bankruptcy Code does not preclude FDCPA claims based on discharge order violations, but court finds no bankruptcy court jurisdiction over the post-discharge FDCPA claims; collecting cases on bankruptcy court jurisdiction over postpetition violations in chapter 7 cases); In re Smith, 2012 WL 1565454, at *4 (Bankr. S.D. Ind. May 2, 2012) (FDCPA claims in adversary proceeding, including claims of stay and discharge order violations, brought in re-opened chapter 13 case not "related to" bankruptcy case because estate no longer exists); In re Arzuaga, 2012 WL 1120673 (Bankr. D. P.R. Apr. 3, 2012) (FDCPA claim alleging post-chapter-13-discharge misconduct does not impact the bankruptcy estate in any way, precluding bankruptcy court jurisdiction); In re Smith, 2012 WL 566246 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. Feb. 12, 2012) (no bankruptcy court jurisdiction to hear FDCPA claims based on actions occurring after discharge; litigation would have no effect on a bankruptcy estate no longer in existence); In re Wilkinson, 2012 WL 112945 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. Jan. 12, 2012) (no bankruptcy court jurisdiction over debtor's claims asserting postpetition FDCPA violations); In re Frambes, 454 B.R. 437, 443 (Bankr. E.D. Ky. 2011) (FDCPA claims of violation of chapter 7 discharge order did not affect property of estate); In re Atwood, 452 B.R. 249 (Bankr. D.N.M. 2011) (bankruptcy court had jurisdiction to hear automatic stay violation but not FDCPA claim arising postpetition); In re Rhinesmith, 450 B.R. 630 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 2011) (FDCPA claims related solely to postpetition activities concerning reaffirmation agreement were not part of chapter 7 estate and court had no jurisdiction to hear them); In re Newcomer, 2011 WL 2560269 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. June 28, 2011) (FDCPA and state debt collection law claims based on postpetition actions were claims that vested in debtors under confirmation order, requiring dismissal of claims for lack of bankruptcy court jurisdiction); In re Lambert, 438 B.R. 523 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. 2010) (bankruptcy court had jurisdiction to adjudicate violations of automatic stay, but not FDCPA claims); In re Wynne, 422 B.R. 763, 770–771 Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2010) (collecting cases on lack of jurisdiction over postpetition claims); In re King, 2010 WL 3851434 (Bankr. D. Colo. Sept. 24, 2010) (FDCPA claim based on postpetition actions taken by defendants, arose after bankruptcy case was filed and was not property of chapter 7 estate and not encompassed by court's limited subject matter); In re Biege, 417 B.R. 697 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. 2009) (bankruptcy court may not have jurisdiction to hear FDCPA claim based on debt collector's post chapter 13 discharge activities); In re Vienneau, 410 B.R. 329 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2009). But see In re Burns, 2010 WL 642312, at *3 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Feb. 18, 2010) (FDCPA and state law claims alleging violations of chapter 7 discharge order were "related to" bankruptcy case). See also Caldwell v. Redstone Fed. Credit Union, 2016 WL 4702821 (N.D. Ala. Sept. 8, 2016) (district court withdrew reference to bankruptcy court so that it could decide both FDCPA claim and claim of violation of discharge order; district court could rule on motion for contempt of bankruptcy court order, because bankruptcy court was unit of district court).

252 Dunlap v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2017 WL 3433915 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 10, 2017) (district court retains FDCPA claim based on collection of mortgage debt after discharge, but non-FDCPA claim for violation of discharge order must be brought in bankruptcy court); Schuller v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2014 WL 722048 (S.D. Ala. Feb. 26, 2014) (FDCPA claims did not even meet bankruptcy courts' "related to" jurisdiction where case closed and outcome would have no effect on bankruptcy estate; bankruptcy court may decide related stay and discharge order violation claims while district court retains FDCPA claim); In re Garcia, 2013 WL 414177 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. Feb. 1, 2013) (assessing damages against debt collector for violation of chapter 7 discharge injunction, dismissing related FDCPA and state debt collection law claims for lack of "related to" bankruptcy court jurisdiction); In re Harlan, 402 B.R. 703 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 2009) (FDCPA claim arising from violation of chapter 7 discharge order would have no effect on bankruptcy estate and therefore could not be "related to" bankruptcy case; however, bankruptcy court has subject matter jurisdiction to address discharge order violation).

253 28 U.S.C. § 157(d).

to the specialized bankruptcy courts. In certain instances, this referral may be, and sometimes must be, "withdrawn" and the proceeding sent back to the district court. In these instances, the district court decides the matter itself. One situation that requires withdrawal of the reference is when an essential or material question of federal non-bankruptcy law is involved in the proceeding.[254] The FDCPA is one such federal law that may trigger withdrawal of the reference and require that the district court take over a proceeding initially filed in the bankruptcy court.[255]

13.5.2 The Supreme Court's Decision in Stern v. Marshall

In Stern v. Marshall[256] the Supreme Court issued another ruling in a series of decisions construing the bankruptcy courts' authority to adjudicate fully certain types of legal claims raised in the course of a bankruptcy proceeding. Bankruptcy court judges are not "Article III" judges with life tenure, and the Supreme Court has on occasion found that this status imposes a limit on the types of controversies in which they can render final judgments. In Stern, the Court held that Article III's requirements barred a bankruptcy court judge from entering a final judgment on a debtor's state law counterclaims when those counterclaims were not necessarily resolved in the bankruptcy claims review process.

At issue in Stern v. Marshall was the debtor's state law tort claim filed as a counterclaim against a creditor who had filed a proof of claim in the chapter 11 bankruptcy case.[257] To adjudicate the tort counterclaim it was necessary that the bankruptcy court rule on factual and legal issues that went beyond the enforceability of the creditor's proof of claim against the bankruptcy estate. The debtor's state law counterclaim sought not only to challenge the creditor's proof of claim, but also to augment the funds available to the bankruptcy estate.

A debtor's counterclaim against a creditor who has filed a proof of claim is designated as a "core proceeding" under federal statutes and clearly falls within the designated subject matter jurisdiction of the bankruptcy courts.[258] However, in view of the constitutional limitations on non-Article III judges, the Supreme Court in Stern held that the bankruptcy court's authority in the matter extended only to issuance of proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law. A district court judge must then review and approve the proposed findings and conclusions and enter a final judgment, much like the procedures involved in U.S. magistrate decisions. In a later decision the Supreme Court made it clear that as long as the proceedings in the bankruptcy court provide for district court review, the bankruptcy court can decide all aspects of a Stern case.[259] The parties may also consent to the bankruptcy court's final adjudication of all aspects of a Stern claim.[260]

In re Tolliver[261] was an early bankruptcy court decision construing the impact of Stern on an FDCPA claim raised by a bankruptcy debtor. The debtor in Tolliver brought an FDCPA claim along with a number of state law claims against a creditor in her chapter 13 case. The Tolliver court ruled that Stern did not affect its authority to enter a final judgment on the FDCPA claim.[262] The bankruptcy court noted that the Supreme Court had expressly stated that its Stern ruling should be narrowly interpreted. The Supreme Court did not refer to any limitations on counterclaims raising federal statutory causes of action, such as claims under the FDCPA.[263]

Most consumer claims related to debt collection practices seek relief beyond merely challenging the enforceability of the creditor's claim. In Tolliver, for example, the bankruptcy court ruled that under Stern it could not enter a final judgment on some of the debtor's state law statutory and common law claims, including a UDAP claim.[264] Certain contract counterclaims would necessarily be resolved as part of the claims objection process, and the bankruptcy court could still enter a final judgment on these counterclaims. Other claims, such as state UDAP claims seeking punitive damages or penalties, necessarily implicated legal and factual issues beyond those the court would address in evaluating an objection to a proof of claim.[265] For this latter type of claim the bankruptcy would enter proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law.[266]

Whether a debt collection claim fits within the scope of Stern v. Marshall depends very much on the nature of the claim. For

254 Id.

255 See, e.g., Cole v. MidFirst Bank, 2018 WL 6504433 (N.D. Ala. Dec. 11, 2018) (the need to resolve issues involving interaction of TILA mortgage servicing rules and FDCPA met standard for both mandatory and discretionary withdrawal of reference); Lagrou v. Monterey Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 4903259 (E.D. Va. Oct. 9, 2018) (FDCPA claim remaining as only issue in bankruptcy court proceeding was basis for withdrawal of reference).

256 564 U.S. 462, 131 S. Ct. 2594, 180 L. Ed. 2d 475 (2011). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 14.2.1 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

257 The creditor had filed a defamation claim against the debtor. The debtor brought a counterclaim against the creditor for tortious interference with an expected inheritance. All claims and counterclaims were based on state law.

258 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C). The "core proceedings" that bankruptcy judges have jurisdiction to hear and determine include "counterclaims by the estate against persons filing claims against the estate."

259 Executive Benefits Ins. Agency v. Arkison, 573 U.S. 25, 134 S. Ct. 2165, 189 L. Ed. 2d 83 (2014).

260 Wellness Int'l Network, LTD v. Sharif, ___ U.S. ___, 135 S. Ct. 1932, 191 L. Ed. 2d 911 (2015) (parties' consent to adjudication by bankruptcy court need not be express).

261 464 B.R. 720 (Bankr. E.D. Ky. 2012).

262 Id. 464 B.R. at 745.

263 But see In re Rinaldi, 2013 WL 655514 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. Feb. 22, 2013) (treating debtors' FDCPA and state law claims together as counterclaims to creditor's proof of claim similar to those in Stern v. Marshall and making proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law).

264 In re Tolliver, 464 B.R. 720 (Bankr. E.D. Ky. 2012).

265 In re Tolliver, 464 B.R. 720, 740 (Bankr. E.D. Ky. 2012). See also In re Edwards, 2013 WL 5718565 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. Oct. 21, 2013) (debtor's claims under North Carolina debt collection statute were essentially counterclaims against a creditor who filed a proof of claim; as in Stern, these claims could not be resolved through claims resolution process).

266 See, e.g., In re Fuhrman, 596 B.R. 342, 350 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 2018) (bankruptcy court retains jurisdiction to enter proposed findings and conclusions for FDCPA claims).

example, an FDCPA or state debt collection claim raised in bankruptcy court may be treated as a counterclaim filed against a creditor who filed a proof of claim. Under Stern v. Marshall, the issue becomes whether this core proceeding requires that the bankruptcy court decide issues beyond the extent and validity of the creditor's proof of claim. In other words, will the process of determining the extent and validity of the creditor's proof of claim "necessarily resolve" the debt collection claims?[267]

Certain debt collection claims satisfy this standard, while others may not. Generally, the greater the overlap between the issues to be resolved in the debt collection action and the issues to be determined in resolving a claim objection, the more likely the bankruptcy court has full authority to enter judgment in all aspects of the debt collection claim.

If the bankruptcy debtor's debt collection claim alleges that the creditor or its debt collector falsely represented "the character, amount, or legal status of any debt,"[268] there could be significant overlap between this debt collection action and an objection to a proof of claim. This overlap is apparent if the debt collection claim asserts that the debt is unenforceable because the underlying transaction is void under state or federal law.[269] In these cases, the bankruptcy court exercises a core bankruptcy function in deciding whether the proof of claim is enforceable. The non-bankruptcy statutory debt collection violation based on attempting to collect an unenforceable debt inevitably requires the same determination as the challenge to the validity of the proof of claim. Stern v. Marshall should not limit the bankruptcy court's authority to rule on all aspects of such a proceeding.[270]

At the other end of the spectrum would be a debt collection claim that focused on a debt collector or creditor's harassing conduct. Creditors and debt collectors engage in abusive conduct when the underlying debt is perfectly valid and enforceable. In this latter situation, the bankruptcy court may lack the constitutional authority to enter a final judgment on the harassment issues, even when it has full authority to determine the validity of the same creditor's proof of claim.

The impact of the Stern decision may prove to be very limited in the long run. The ruling did not set any new limits on the bankruptcy courts' subject matter jurisdiction to make determinations relevant to consumers' claims. As the Supreme Court made clear in Executive Benefits Insurance Agency v. Arkinson,[271] the limitation only affects the bankruptcy court's ability to enter a final judgment, as opposed to proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law, in certain proceedings.[272]

Consistently with Stern, the bankruptcy courts have extensive authority to rule on proceedings that fall short of entry of the final judgment. These include rulings on discovery matters and on non-dispositive motions.[273] When the Stern v. Marshall limitation applies, the parties may consent to the bankruptcy court's authority to enter a final judgment.[274] As an alternative, the proceeding may be referred directly to the U.S. district court for full adjudication. Courts continue to note that the Supreme Court directed that its ruling be construed narrowly.[275]

13.5.3 Enforcement of Arbitration Clauses in Bankruptcy

Defendants may seek to take debt collection lawsuits away from courts and have them resolved in arbitration. General issues related to the enforcement of contractual arbitration terms are discussed above, at § 11.3, supra. Filing a debt collection lawsuit in bankruptcy court does not mean that the defendant will not try to short-circuit the proceeding by demanding arbitration. Many of the same arguments used to limit arbitration outside of bankruptcy apply in bankruptcy as

267 Stern v. Marshall, 564 U.S. 462, 131 S. Ct. 2594, 1617, 180 L. Ed. 2d 475 (2011).

268 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(2)(A).

269 See, e.g., Buchanan v. Northland Grp., Inc., 776 F.3d 393, 399 (6th Cir. 2015) ("A misrepresentation about the limitations period amounts to a 'straightforward' violation of § 1692e(2)(A)."); Phillips v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 736 F.3d 1076 (7th Cir. 2013) (filing time-barred civil debt collection lawsuit violates FDCPA); Cruz v. Int'l Collection Corp., 673 F.3d 991, 997 (9th Cir. 2012); Conner v. Howe, 344 F. Supp. 2d 1164, 1172 (S.D. Ind. 2004) (finance charge exceeded amount allowed under Indiana Unfair Consumer Credit statute, making loan agreement void). See also In re Kiskaden, 571 B.R. 226 (E.D. Ky. 2017) (finding that bankruptcy court may render final judgment in disputes involving validity of proof of claim for high-cost loan, but lacks authority to enter final judgment on state and federal debt collection claims arising from same loan).

270 But see In re Taylor, 594 B.R. 643, 651 n. 16 (E.D. Va. 2018) (action under state law challenging validity of creditor's claim based on high-cost loan credit agreement would be constitutionally core claim, while state law action that focused on collection activities involving loan would be "statutorily core but constitutionally non-core 'Stern claim'").

271 573 U.S. 25, 134 S. Ct. 2165, 189 L. Ed. 2d 83 (2014).

272 See In re Peed, 2014 WL 2987637 (Bankr. S.D. Ala. July 1, 2014) (applying Arkinson and Stern, bankruptcy court will hear FDCPA and related state debt collection law claims and make proposed findings and conclusions of law). See also Walch v. Columbia Collection Serv., Inc., 2012 WL 40993826, at *8 (D. Or. June 19, 2012) (magistrate refers debt collection claims to bankruptcy court; bankruptcy court to rule on claims of discharge order violation and submit to district court its findings and recommendations on any state law debt collection claims for which bankruptcy court cannot enter judgment under Stern v. Marshall). See generally In re Agriprocessors, Inc., 479 B.R. 835 (Bankr. N.D. Iowa 2012) (in adversary proceeding seeking to avoid preferential or fraudulent transfers involving creditor that did not file proof of claim, bankruptcy court not required to refer matter to district court, but can prepare own proposed findings and conclusions).

273 In re Trevino, 564 B.R. 890, 910 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2017) (regardless of its constitutional authority to enter final judgment over debt collection claims, bankruptcy court can rule on procedural motions, including motion to compel discovery); In re Murff, 2015 WL 3690994, at *1–2 (Bankr N.D. Ill. June 15, 2015) (in FDCPA proceeding falling within scope of Stern bankruptcy court may grant motion to dismiss that does not preclude amendment); In re Lopez, 2015 WL 7572097, at *8 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Nov. 24, 2015) (bankruptcy court can impose discovery sanctions in FDCPA action covered by Stern).

274 Wellness Int'l Net., LTD v. Sharif, ___ U.S. ___, 135 S. Ct. 1932, 191 L. Ed. 2d 911 (2015); In re Robinson, 554 B.R. 800, 807 (Bankr W.D. La. 2016) (bankruptcy court can enter final judgment on FDCPA claim where plaintiff consented; here court treated defendant's filing of motion to dismiss as implied consent by defendant to bankruptcy court's full authority to decide action).

275 See, e.g., In re Quigley Co., 676 F.3d 45, 52 (2d Cir. 2012).

well.[276] However, bankruptcy raises special concerns that give added weight to the opposition to arbitration.

The bankruptcy courts consider a specific set of policies when they must decide whether to withhold a proceeding from arbitration. These standards are not the same as those that make up the core/non-core distinction or are applied under the Stern v. Marshall rule. As discussed above, many debt collection adversary proceedings filed in bankruptcy courts fall under one of the "core proceeding" definitions.[277] Stern v. Marshall addresses whether the bankruptcy court may enter a final judgment in such a proceeding, as opposed to issuing proposed findings and conclusions.

However, a defendant's request to take some aspect of a bankruptcy proceeding away from the bankruptcy court and send it to arbitration raises a different issue. The relevant test here is whether referring the matter to arbitration will present an "inherent conflict" with the purposes of the Bankruptcy Code.[278] If a bankruptcy court finds that such a conflict exists, it may exercise discretion to refuse to compel arbitration.[279]

The courts have looked to a common set of concerns in evaluating whether arbitration conflicts with the Code's underlying purposes. These include protection of reorganizing debtors from piecemeal litigation and inconsistent decisions, the centralization of disputes over the debtor's legal obligations, and the efficiency of bankruptcy proceedings.[280] Determining the validity of proofs of claim filed in bankruptcy cases is an essential function of the bankruptcy courts.[281] The bankruptcy system cannot function as a unified structure for resolving the claims against a debtor if proof of claim disputes are farmed out to a myriad of arbitrators. Such a practice would risk inconsistent decisions on multiple issues.[282]

Like determining the validity of proofs of claim, the enforcement of discharge orders goes to the heart of the bankruptcy court's authority. A bankruptcy court can properly refuse to send discharge order violation claims to arbitration.[283] In an action seeking to enforce a state deceptive practices statute against a debt relief business, a bankruptcy court found that referral to arbitration would undermine the bankruptcy court's ability to administer the bankruptcy estate.[284] Similarly, the bankruptcy court should retain jurisdiction to decide questions about the dischargeability of a debt.[285] In In re Moses,[286] the district court appropriately addressed the conflict between the bankruptcy courts' role in determining the validity of creditors' proofs of claims and the referral of essential aspects of claims disputes to arbitration. The district court upheld the 277 Statutory "core proceedings" include proceedings involving the "allowance or disallowance of claims against the estate" and "counterclaims by the estate against persons filing claims against the estate." 28 U.S.C. §§ 157(b)(2)(B), 157(b)(2)(C).

276 See § 11.3, supra.

278 Shearson/Am. Express v. McMahon, 482 U.S. 220, 227, 107 S. Ct. 2332, 96 L. Ed. 2d 185 (1987); National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 4.3.3 (7th ed. 2015), updated at www.nclc.org/library (discussing enforceability of arbitration agreements in bankruptcy).

279 In re Thorpe Insulation Co., 671 F.3d 1011, 1021–1022 (9th Cir. 2012); In re White Mountain Mining Co, 403 F.3d 164, 169–170 (4th Cir. 2005).

280 In re Thorpe Insulation Co., 671 F.3d 1011, 1022 (9th Cir. 2012); In re White Mountain Mining Co., 403 F.3d 164, 170 (4th Cir. 2005); In re Gandy, 299 F.3d 489, 500 (5th Cir. 2002).

281 May v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 591 B.R. 712, 721 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 2018) (refusing to send to arbitration class action under FDCPA challenging improper inclusion of interest charges in proofs of claim, noting that Rule 3001 disclosures and proof of claim process are "unique to bankruptcy"), later decision 595 B.R. 894 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 2019) (enforcing class action waiver contained in arbitration clause as consistent with Federal Arbitration Act and applicable state law). See also Ellswick v. Quantum3 Group, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3582586 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. June 24, 2016) (challenge to proof of claim could not have been brought outside of bankruptcy; referring dispute to arbitration would conflict with Bankruptcy Code's purpose of creating central forum to determine claims); In re Thomas, 592 B.R. 99, 112 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 2018) (refusing to send class claims of violations of FDCPA and Rule 3001 to arbitration: "[I]t is nonsensical for the Court to order parties to submit to an arbitrator the task of applying and enforcing a procedural apparatus applicable only before this Court. The question of whether an alleged violation of Rule 3001 occurred, and if so whether any relief is appropriate, is not a question of fact or law for arbitration."), aff'd sub nom. Midland Funding LLC v. Thomas, 606 B.R. 687 (W.D. Va. 2019).

282 In re Thorpe Insulation Co., 671 F.3d 1011, 1023 (9th Cir. 2012) ("Arbitration of a creditor's claim against a debtor, even if conducted expeditiously, prevents the coordinated resolution of debtor-creditor rights and can delay the confirmation of a plan of reorganization."); In re White Mountain Mining Co., 403 F.3d 164, 169–170 (4th Cir. 2005) ("Arbitration is inconsistent with centralized decision-making because permitting an arbitrator to decide a core issue would make debtor-creditor rights 'contingent upon an arbitrator's ruling' rather than the ruling of the bankruptcy judge assigned to hear the debtor's case"); In re Gandy, 299 F.3d 489, 499 (5th Cir. 2002) (affirming denial of motion to compel arbitration; court finds that a creditor's filing a proof of claim invokes the "peculiar powers of the bankruptcy court" and a claim dispute "is a core proceeding because it could arise only in the context of bankruptcy"), In re United States Lines, 197 F.3d 631, 637 (2d Cir. 1999) (upholding denial of request to refer to arbitration, noting that claim allowance proceeding is one that is "unique to or uniquely affected by the bankruptcy proceedings"); In re National Gypsum Co., 118 F.3d 1056, 1067 n.18 (5th Cir. 1997) (enforcement of arbitration in proof of claim disputes would mean "effectively contracting out of a bankruptcy court's power to adjust claims among different classes of creditors"). See also In re Jorge, 568 B.R. 25 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 2017) (refusing to enforce arbitration clause in wireless services contract and allowing debtor to pursue claims in bankruptcy court for violations of automatic stay and discharge order).

283 In re Anderson, 884 F.3d 382, 386 (2d Cir. 2018) (enforcement of discharge order "strikes at the heart of the bankruptcy court's unique powers to enforce its own orders"); In re Bateman, 585 B.R. 618 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2018) (referring discharge violation claim to arbitration would conflict with underlying purpose of Bankruptcy Code). But see In re Trevino, 599 B.R. 526, 549 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2019) (sending to arbitration claims of violation of discharge order in chapter 13 case, including FDCPA claims).

284 In re Erwin, 2018 WL 1614160 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. Mar. 30, 2018) (refusing to send to arbitration both state law deceptive practices claim (non-core proceeding) and related fraudulent transfer claim under Bankruptcy Code (core proceeding) brought to recover funds paid to debt relief agency).

285 In re Roth, 594 B.R. 672 (Bankr. S.D. Ind. 2018) (question of dischargeability of student loan goes to core bankruptcy functions of ensuring fresh start and presiding over centralized resolution of claims).

286 2013 WL 53873 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. Jan. 3, 2013).

bankruptcy court's decision to refuse to refer to arbitration a chapter 13 debtor's state law debt collection proceeding.

The debtor's adversary proceeding in Moses contained two claims. In the first claim the debtor sought a declaratory judgment that the creditor's proof of claim, based on a high-cost tribal loan, was void and unenforceable as originated in violation of North Carolina interest rate limits. The second count sought damages under the North Carolina's debt collection statute. The state statute authorized a claim against a creditor that attempted to collect an unenforceable debt.

The district court agreed that both claims were inextricably intertwined. Both claims depended entirely upon the invalidity of the underlying debt. Referring either of the claims to arbitration would conflict with the bankruptcy court's key role in deciding upon the validity of claims filed in the bankruptcy court.

In vacating the district court order in Moses in part, the Fourth Circuit mistook the facts of record, which clearly showed that both of the debtor's claims focused on the identical issue—the validity of the underlying debt.[287] While agreeing that the bankruptcy court, and not the arbitrator, should decide whether the proof of claim violated North Carolina's usury laws, the court of appeals deemed it appropriate for an arbitrator to decide whether attempting to collect the invalid debt violated the North Carolina Debt Collection Act. In allowing for potentially inconsistent decisions from a bankruptcy and non-bankruptcy forum, the Fourth Circuit failed to recognize the identity of issues raised in both claims.[288] One concurring/dissenting opinion from the panel reflected an accurate understanding of the debtor's claims, holding that neither claim belonged in arbitration.[289]

13.6 FDCPA Attorney Fees and Bankruptcy

In general, attorney fees that are paid either by the bankruptcy estate or by the bankruptcy debtor must be approved by the court. Specifically, Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2016 requires an application for compensation whenever an attorney seeks to be compensated or reimbursed from the bankruptcy estate.[290] In addition, Rule 2016 requires disclosure of compensation paid or promised to an attorney for the debtor.[291] Counsel should be prepared to provide contemporaneous time records to support any fee applications. Bankruptcy courts may differ in their procedure for approving fee applications, therefore, counsel are advised to become familiar with any related local rules or customary practice.

In some cases, the trustee, who has not abandoned a prepetition debt collection claim, may retain the debtor's attorney to prosecute the claim. The trustee should file an application to hire debtor's counsel in these circumstances.[292] Compensation for postpetition services will be awarded only to professionals whose employment has been authorized by the bankruptcy court in advance of the work performed. Nunc pro tunc applications are generally not approved.[293]

In a chapter 13 case, the debtor's counsel may continue to pursue a prepetition claim without any special application because the debtor retains control over estate property. The court may award reasonable compensation for actual and necessary services rendered by debtor's counsel, as well as reimbursement for expenses.[294] The court is also authorized to award compensation that is less than the amount of compensation requested.[295] Bankruptcy Code section 330(a)(3) sets forth a list of factors to be considered by the court in awarding fees.

Even though debtor's counsel may have entered into a contingency fee arrangement with the debtor prepetition, if the compensation sought exceeds the reasonable value of the services, the bankruptcy court may ignore the agreement and reduce the amount requested. As for prepetition services, where state law affords an attorney a lien on any settlement proceeds or recovery resulting from the representation, bankruptcy courts generally hold that such attorney's liens relate back to the filing of the action and may not be avoided by the trustee.[296]

The existence of an attorney's lien, however, does not preclude court scrutiny of the amount of the fee. Bankruptcy courts retain the authority to review the reasonableness of prepetition fees, though courts differ as to the relevance of prepetition retainer agreements.[297]

Where an FDCPA case filed prepetition in state court or federal district court is not removed to the bankruptcy court, it is not clear whether a fee application pursuant to 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(3) should be decided by the trial court. Particularly 287 Moses v. CashCall, Inc., 781 F.3d 63 (4th Cir. 2015) (per curiam).

288 See also In re Taylor, 594 B.R. 643 (E.D. Va. 2018) (bankruptcy court must determine validity of payday loan credit agreement under Virginia law in order to resolve objections to proof of claim, a core bankruptcy court function that could not be referred to arbitration; not ruling on FDCPA claim that debtor withdrew); In re Kiskaden, 571 B.R. 226 (E.D. Ky. 2017) (following Moses analysis; sending federal and state debt collection claims related to high-cost loan to arbitration while excluding from arbitration challenges to allowance of proof of claim for the high-cost loan).

289 Id. 781 F.3d at 73, (Niemeyer, J., concurring and dissenting in part). See also Hayes v. Delbert Serv. Corp., 811 F.3d 666 (4th Cir. 2016) (finding unenforceable Moses arbitration agreement that purported to preclude application of federal law to borrowers' claims).

290 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2016(a).

291 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2016(b).

292 See 11 U.S.C. § 327(a); Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2014(a).

293 Such applications may be approved where delay in seeking court approval results from extraordinary circumstances. See, e.g., In re Jarvis, 53 F.3d 416 (1st Cir. 1995).

294 11 U.S.C. § 330(a).

295 11 U.S.C. § 330(a)(2).

296 In re Albert, 206 B.R. 636 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1997); In re Tarricone, Inc., 76 B.R. 53 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1987).

297 In re Albert, 206 B.R. 636 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1997) (amount of attorney lien not determined by contingency fee agreement; attorney required to submit contemporaneous time records to establish reasonable value of prepetition services); In re 9 Stevens Cafe, Inc., 161 B.R. 96 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1993) (25% of settlement based on contingency arrangement was reasonable compensation); In re Robert E. Derecktor, Inc., 152 B.R. 14 (Bankr. D.R.I. 1993) (though reasonableness of fee application must be determined by bankruptcy court, existence of valid prepetition contingency agreement and substantial risks incurred therewith by attorney relevant to court's determination).

where all compensation to the attorney is being sought against the defendant as a result of a fee-shifting statute, a bankruptcy court may defer to a trial court's determination of a reasonable fee, but ultimately the bankruptcy court retains jurisdiction to review any fee award.

Where a trustee does not file an application to hire an attorney and elects to pursue the case rather than abandon it, the consumer's attorney is effectively discharged.[298] If the attorney had been retained on a contingency basis, bankruptcy courts may look to state law in limiting the amount of the attorney's lien for prebankruptcy services based on quantum meruit compensation.[299]

In the common situation where the trustee has abandoned the claim and debtor's counsel is free to pursue a prepetition debt collection claim, subsequent fee determinations are generally not subject to bankruptcy court review. The issue may arise, however, as to whether the debtor's obligation to pay for prebankruptcy services has been discharged in bankruptcy. Where the retainer with the debtor provides that the attorney will seek compensation only pursuant to a fee-shifting statute or out of funds paid by the defendant distinct from any damages awarded to the client, there is no obligation of the debtor which is subject to discharge. However, if there is a contingency fee arrangement in which compensation is based on a percentage of the recovery, or which includes the payment of costs or an hourly fee in the event of certain contingencies, the portion of the liability for prebankruptcy services may be discharged unless the attorney can establish the existence of an attorney's lien under state law.[300]

13.7 Federal and State Fair Debt Collection Claims Relating to a Bankruptcy

13.7.1 Overview

Sometimes after a debtor has filed for bankruptcy, debt collectors' actions violate both a provision of the Bankruptcy Code and federal or state debt collection laws. For example, a debt collector's attempt to collect a discharged debt violates the discharge order and may also constitute harassing, oppressive, or abusive conduct under the FDCPA. A debt collector may file a debt collection lawsuit against the debtor after they have filed for bankruptcy, giving rise to both an automatic stay violation and an FDCPA claim.

Alternatively, debt collectors may engage in conduct within a bankruptcy case that does not violate the Bankruptcy Code, but does violate federal or state debt collection laws. For example, the debt collector may contact a bankruptcy debtor who is known to be represented by counsel thereby violating a state law. Or, the debt collector may falsely state the amount or character of its claim when filing a proof of claim.

Courts considering the relationship between bankruptcy and federal and state debt collection law are divided as to whether the Bankruptcy Code provides an exclusive remedy for conduct that violates both the Code and nonbankruptcy debt collection laws. As discussed at § 13.7.3.4, infra, a 2017 Supreme Court decision could have, but did not, resolve the split. Courts are also split over whether the Bankruptcy Code preempts state law debt collection claims.

Section 13.7.2, infra, discusses the two lines of cases dealing with the relationship between the FDCPA and the Bankruptcy Code when a debt collector's conduct violates provisions of both.[301] The Seventh Circuit in Randolph v. IMBS, Inc.,[302] presented persuasive arguments in favor of the viability of actions under the FDCPA and similar statutes against debt collectors that have violated the automatic stay and discharge injunction provided by the Bankruptcy Code. The Second and Third Circuits have adopted similar approaches in rejecting a preclusive role for the Bankruptcy Code over the FDCPA in certain broad areas.[303] In contrast, the Ninth Circuit, in Walls v. Wells Fargo Bank,[304] held that the Bankruptcy Code bars a debtor from bringing other causes of action based on the same facts that give rise to a violation of the discharge injunction.

An important source of claims against debt collectors relates to the proof of claims that they submit in the consumer's bankruptcy case. Section 13.7.3, infra, considers this topic, particularly in light of a 2017 Supreme Court decision. Finally, § 13.7.4, infra, examines the divide among the courts as to whether the Bankruptcy Code preempts state debt collection laws.

13.7.2 Does the FDCPA Apply to Claims Arising Out of a Consumer's Bankruptcy?

13.7.2.1 The Seventh Circuit Decision in Randolph

Debt collectors have routinely argued that FDCPA claims are "preempted" by the Bankruptcy Code. According to the debt collectors, a debtor is precluded from pursuing claims under the federal FDCPA for conduct related to bankruptcy, including violations of the automatic stay and discharge injunction.

The Seventh Circuit in Randolph v. IMBS, Inc.,[305] correctly rejected the "preemption" characterization when two federal statutes come into play. The Randolph court noted that "[o]ne federal statute does not preempt another," and that the proper 298 In re Pac. Far East Line, Inc., 654 F.2d 664 (9th Cir. 1981).

299 In re Albert, 206 B.R. 636, 641 n.6 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1997).

300 In re Hessinger & Assoc., 192 B.R. 211 (N.D. Cal. 1996); In re Martin, 197 B.R. 120 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1996) (debtor's obligation based on prepetition retainer agreement with bankruptcy attorney for prepetition services was dischargeable debt).

301 See § 13.7.2, infra.

302 368 F.3d 726 (7th Cir. 2004).

303 Garfield v. OCWEN Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 811 F.3d 86 (2d Cir. 2016); Simon v. FIA Card Serv., 732 F.3d 259 (3d Cir. 2013).

304 276 F.3d 502 (9th Cir. 2002).

305 368 F.3d 726 (7th Cir. 2004).

question is whether one of the statutes has been expressly or implicitly repealed:

> When two federal statutes address the same subject in different ways, the right question is whether one implicitly repeals the other—and repeal by implication is a rare bird indeed. (citations omitted). It takes either irreconcilable conflict between the statutes or a clearly expressed legislative decision that one replaces the other.[306]

Applying this analysis, the Randolph court found that although there may be some "operational differences" between the FDCPA and the Bankruptcy Code, there is no "irreconcilable conflict" between the two statutes.[307] To demonstrate its point, the Seventh Circuit created a useful chart comparing the Bankruptcy Code's automatic stay provision with the FDCPA.

	Bankruptcy	FDCPA
Who	Anyone	Debt collector only
Scienter	Willfulness	Strict liability (§ 1692e(2)(A))
Defense	None	Bona fide error plus due care (§ 1692k(c)), or reliance on FTC opinion (§ 1692k(e))
Statutory damages	None	$1000 maximum (§ 1692k(a)(2)(A))
Compensatory damages	Yes	Yes (§ 1692k(a)(1))
Punitive damages	Yes	No
Cap on class recovery	No	Yes (§ 1692k(a)(2)(B)(ii))
Maximum recovery	No	Yes, $500,000 or 1% of net worth, whichever is less (§ 1692k(a)(2)(B)(ii))
Attorney fees to debtor	No	Yes (§ 1692k(a)(3))
Attorney fees to creditor	No	Yes (§ 1692k(a)(3))
Statute of limitations	None (laches defense only)	One year (§ 1692k(d))

By comparing the two statutes, the Seventh Circuit found that they can work together harmoniously. For example, working together the statutes permit a debtor to obtain the more significant remedy of punitive damages when a willful collection action violates both the FDCPA and the bankruptcy automatic stay.[308] Similarly, the FDCPA's preponderance of evidence and strict liability standards, as opposed to the clear and convincing evidence standard for a willful violation of the discharge order, may make the FDCPA the more attractive enforcement option.[309] Significantly, the Randolph court concluded that both statutes can be easily enforced and that debt collectors "can comply with both simultaneously."[310]

The Seventh Circuit's Randolph decision is consistent with Supreme Court jurisprudence that holds that when two statutes are capable of coexistence both should be regarded as effective.

> The courts are not at liberty to pick and choose among congressional enactments, and when two statutes are capable of coexistence, it is the duty of the courts, absent clearly expressed congressional intention to the contrary, to regards each as effective. Morton v. Mancari, 417 U.S. 535, 551 (1974).[311]

In view of the different standards of proof and remedies available under the FDCPA and the Bankruptcy Code, advocates should plead, when possible, violations of both statutes. In a recent case,[312] a bankruptcy debtor brought claims against a debt collector who made collection calls in violation of a bankruptcy discharge order. The bankruptcy court found that the debt collector willfully violated the discharge order and awarded the debtor damages for emotional distress, punitive damages, and attorney fees under the Bankruptcy Code. However, the court denied relief on the debtor's FDCPA's claim arising from the same conduct. According to the court, the number and frequency of calls did not reach the level of severity other courts had found sufficient to violate section 1692d of the FDCPA. The court's assessment of the FDCPA claim is certainly open to question.[313] However, the outcome

306 Id. at 730.

307 See also Simon v. FIA Card Serv., 732 F.3d 259, 279 (3d Cir. 2013) (no conflict between remedies available for subpoena abuses under bankruptcy rules and remedies for same misconduct available under FDCPA); Arruda v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 310 F.3d 13 (1st Cir. 2002) (although dismissing FDCPA claim, noting that FDCPA claim could be brought where collector makes false allegations that debtor is obligated to pay debt discharged in bankruptcy); Bessette v. Avco Fin. Serv., Inc. 230 F.3d 439 (1st Cir. 2000) (implicitly finding that civil RICO claim based on discharge violation not in conflict with Bankruptcy Code, but dismissing RICO claim on other grounds).

308 See In re Nee, 2015 WL 1727180 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. Apr. 13, 2015) (also comparing complementary forms of relief available under FDCPA and Bankruptcy Code, finding no preemption).

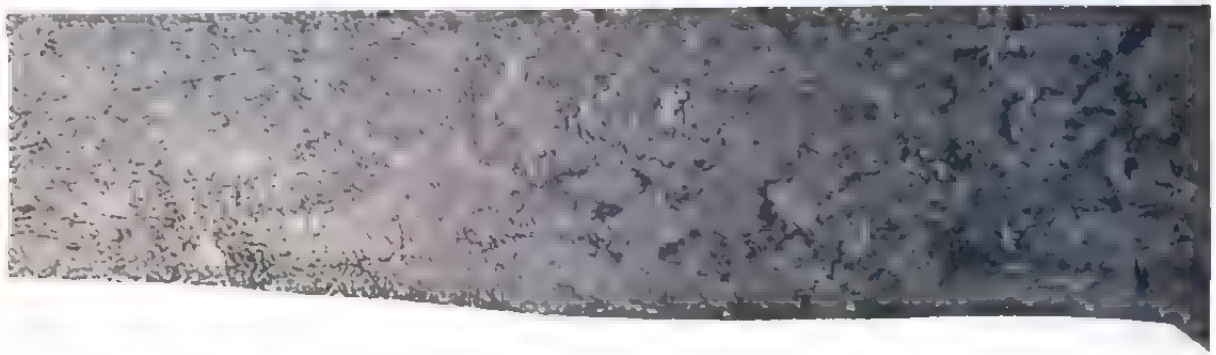
309 Levine v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 926 N.W.2d 49, 54 (Minn. Ct. App. 2019) (lower court's improper dismissal of debtor's bankruptcy-based FDCPA claim "deprived [debtor] of her selected forum and of the availability of the strict-liability provision of the FDCPA").

310 368 F.3d 726, 730 (7th Cir. 2004). See also Dougherty v. Wells Fargo Home Loans, Inc., 425 F. Supp. 2d 599 (E.D. Pa. 2006); In re Gunter, 334 B.R. 900 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2005).

311 Traynor v. Turnage, 485 U.S. 535, 108 S. Ct. 1372, 99 L. Ed. 2d 618 (1988). See also Hays & Co. v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 885 F.2d 1149 (3d Cir. 1989) (overruling prior decision and requiring arbitration of claim in bankruptcy to give effect to Federal Arbitration Act); Peeples v. Blatt, 2001 WL 921731 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 14, 2001).

312 In re Evans, 2019 WL 1212358 (Bankr. S.D. Ala. Mar. 12, 2019).

313 It is not clear whether the debtor brought a claim under section 1692e for misrepresenting the legal status of the debt.



pleading claims under both the FDCPA.

Circuit Decision in Simon

tion of the Bankruptcy Code and the ve debt collection claims related to ıtic stay, the discharge order, and the
. The Third Circuit addressed a more e Bankruptcy Code and the FDCPA vices.[314] Here, the chapter 7 debtors ılated bankruptcy procedural rules in ɔena to appear for a deposition.[315] The ıted Federal Rule of Civil Procedure ena on the debtors' attorney instead ıbpoena also omitted certain content ieral Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 5 into bankruptcy proceedings. Thus, of servicer of the subpoena violated in Simon successfully quashed a sub-ıpliance with Bankruptcy Rule 9016.

ıt an adversary proceeding against the ıkruptcy court, asserting violations of to the debtors, the improper subpoena ke legal action that the attorneys could the subpoena falsely represented that ss.[317] The bankruptcy court, and later hat the Bankruptcy Code and its rules source of regulation of communica-and creditors during the pendency of he lower courts dismissed the FDCPA ecisions the Third Circuit endorsed the

However, applying the same conflict standard, the court held that enforcement of the FDCPA's initial written communication disclosure requirement under section 1692e(11) did create a direct conflict with the Bankruptcy Code's automatic stay.[320] The court affirmed dismissal of the FDCPA claim asserting this violation.[321]

Most courts that find a dissonance between the Bankruptcy Code and the FDCPA focus upon a perceived redundancy between certain remedies for creditor misconduct available under the Bankruptcy Code and the remedies available under the FDCPA. The Ninth Circuit Bankruptcy Appellate Panel in In re Chaussee[322] and the Second Circuit in Simmons v. Roundup Funding, L.L.C.[323] pointed to the remedies and sanctions available under Rule 9011 and Bankruptcy Code section 105(a) for debtors who sought relief from abusive proof of claim filings. In the view of these courts, the existence of remedies under bankruptcy laws precluded all nonbankruptcy relief involving the same creditor conduct.

The Third Circuit in Simon faced a similar situation. The bankruptcy rules provided specific remedies and procedures for a debtor to challenge abuses in issuance of Rule 2004 subpoenas.[324] The debtor in Simon had, in fact, used these procedures and quashed the debt collector's subpoena at issue. However, the Third Circuit found that the availability of remedies under the bankruptcy rules did not preclude the debtor's recourse to further remedies under the FDCPA against the same debt collector conduct. Both the Bankruptcy Code and FDCPA remedies could be applied consistently and without conflict. In articulating its analysis, the court specifically noted its disagreement with the expansive view of bankruptcy preemption adopted by the court in Simmons.[325]

13.7.2.3 The Second Circuit Decision in Garfield

proofs of claim during a bankruptcy arising during bankruptcy, the court lied repeal or irreconcilable conflict · Code and FDCPA claims based on that violated the discharge injunction.
:ss Code remedy for discharge order o the Code's remedial provision for :ic stay, weighed in favor of allowing ıe FDCPA action asserting a stay vioankruptcy case has closed, the action
Garfield.[329]

ı Circuit Decision in Walls

ıth Circuit in Walls v. Wells Fargo a contempt action in the bankruptcy remedy for violation of the discharge court based its decision, with respect the view that a debtor should not be ivate right of action for a violation of ıunction, when none exists under the ing another federal statute. According o permit a simultaneous claim under w through the back door what [the lish through the front door—a pri-Prior to Walls, several circuit courts
d the issue of a private right of action
:harge injunction, however, nowhere ate that the Bankruptcy Code bars a ıer causes of action based on the same
: discharge injunction.[333]

Walls to FDCPA claims arising from absent in the context of the automatic stay.[334] Additionally, under Walls, debtors may still be able to assert FDCPA claims for conduct that also violates the discharge injunction, but where the claim is not based on the debt collector's legal authority to collect the debt or the legal status of the debt.[335]

Even under the Walls analysis, claims independent of the bankruptcy discharge and not turning on the discharged nature of the debt do not interfere with the Bankruptcy Code's remedial scheme. Thus, claims based on harassment, threats, intimidation, and false representations (other than the status of the discharged debt) should not be precluded by Walls.[336]

The discharge order in a chapter 13 case in which the debtor cured a home mortgage default does not discharge the mortgage debt.[337] Debtors who brought their mortgages current in chapter 13 often emerge from bankruptcy with ongoing payment disputes due to servicers' faulty bankruptcy accounting 334 See 11 U.S.C. § 362(k); In re Tobener, 2009 WL 5215404 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 2009) (stating Walls is easily distinguishable in cases involving the automatic stay because of private right of action). But see In re Roman Perez, 527 B.R. 844 (Bankr. D. P.R. 2015) (Bankruptcy Code provides exclusive remedies for stay violations and borrower cannot assert FDCPA claims unless has no other remedy); Wan v. Discover Fin. Serv., 324 B.R. 124 (N.D. Cal. 2005) (applying Walls principles to automatic stay with little analysis); In re Stoiber, 2008 WL 2473657 (Bankr. D. Or. June 18, 2008) (summarily holding that Bankruptcy Code provides exclusive remedy for violation of both automatic stay and discharge injunction).

335 See In re Orchard, 2013 WL 6254037, at *5–6 (Bankr. D. Or. Dec. 4, 2013) (FDCPA claims based on postbankruptcy letter sent directly to represented debtor and that misrepresented charges owed did not involve "bankruptcy-laden" determinations and these claims not precluded by Walls); Church v. Onewest Bank, 2011 WL 2444719 (D. Or. Jan. 18, 2011) (FDCPA claims alleging harassment of bank-practices. The borrower who asserts an FDCPA claim because a mortgage servicer's postbankruptcy collection actions misrepresented the amounts owed can make such a claim without relying on a discharge order.[338] The FDCPA claim is grounded upon the servicer's actions in violation of the contract terms, not a violation of the discharge order.

13.7.2.5 The Second Circuit Decision in Easterling

An example of a bankruptcy-related FDCPA claim that did not involve a violation of the discharge order or automatic stay appeared in Easterling v. Collecto, Inc.[339] Here, the Second Circuit held that a debt collector violated the FDCPA by sending a debtor, who had completed a chapter 7 case without discharging her student loan debt, a notice stating flatly that the debt was "ineligible for bankruptcy discharge." In fact, the debtor retained the right to seek a hardship discharge of her student loan debt, either through reopening her closed chapter 7 case or by filing a new bankruptcy case and seeking a hardship discharge in the new case. The misrepresentation in the debt collector's communication went to a future effort to discharge the debt, rather than an attempt to collect a discharged debt.

13.7.2.6 Randolph Represents the Prevailing View

Outside the Ninth Circuit, lower courts apply the direct conflict analysis articulated by the Randolph, Simon, and Garfield courts and allow consumers to seek remedies under the FDCPA for debt collectors' bankruptcy-related misconduct.[340] This is particularly true with respect to FDCPA claims based on collection activities that violate the discharge order entered in a bankruptcy case.[341] Violations of the automatic 338 See Scally v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 2018 WL 2059506 (S.D. Cal. May 3, 2018) (rejecting claim that Walls precluded former bankruptcy debtor's state and federal debt collection claims arising in the wake of a chapter 13 case), later decision 2018 WL 2059506 (S.D. Cal. May 3, 2018) (refusing to dismiss debtor's third amended FDCPA complaint, because claims not tied explicitly to bankruptcy orders).

339 692 F.3d 229 (2d Cir. 2012).

340 Davis v. Weinstein & Riley, 2013 WL 5428740, at *4 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 26, 2013) ("since the Randolph decision, almost all courts outside the [Ninth] circuit to examine the issue have rejected Walls favoring Randolph"); Gamble v. Fradkin & Weber, P.A., 846 F. Supp. 2d 377 (D. Md. 2012) (rejecting Walls' broad preclusion of bankruptcy-related FDCPA claims as an "outlier" decision); Bacelli v. MFP, Inc., 729 F. Supp. 2d 1328 (M.D. Fla. 2010) (following Randolph); Vick v. NCO Fin. Sys. Inc., 2010 WL 1330637 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 15, 2010) (Bankruptcy Code does not preclude relief under the FDCPA), adopted, 2010 WL 1328830 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 30, 2010); Kline v. Mortg. Elec. Sys., 659 F. Supp. 2d 940 (S.D. Ohio 2009) (Bankruptcy Code did not impliedly repeal the FDCPA; debt collector's seeking illegal late fees and the like outside of bankruptcy violated the FDCPA); Bagwell v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2009 WL 1708227 (E.D. Ark. June 5, 2009) ("Plaintiff is not attempting to hold Defendants in contempt for a violation of the bankruptcy discharge order but, rather, Plaintiff is attempting to establish FDCPA liability based on Defendants' pursuit of a debt which Plaintiff claims is not owed."); Evans v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 574 F. Supp. 2d 808 (S.D. Ohio 2008) (followed Randolph); In re Atwood, 452 B.R. 249 (Bankr. N.M. 2011) (adopting Randolph position); In re Jones, 2011 WL 5025329, at *1 (Bankr. E.D. Va. Oct. 21, 2011) (FCRA case, noting, "[t]he majority of Courts have held that the Bankruptcy Code and the FCRA or the FDCPA are not so irreconcilably in conflict that one displaces the other").

341 Saccameno v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 372 F. Supp. 3d 609 (N. D. Ill 2019) (sustaining jury award of $500,000 compensatory damages against loan servicer for FDCPA, RESPA, and breach of contract claims based on servicer's collection actions following borrowers' chapter 13 discharge and cure of mortgage default); Micks v. Gurstel Law Firm, P.C., 365 F. Supp. 3d 961 (D. Minn. 2019) (summary judgment against law firm on FDCPA claims that firm sought to enforce judgment on student loan debt that had been discharged in bankruptcy); Folkerts v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 1227790 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 15, 2019) (denying servicer debt collector's motion for summary judgment on FDCPA claims of discharge order violations); Holloway v. JTM Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 2019 WL 1040851 (N.D. Ohio Mar. 5, 2019) (allowing FDCPA claims against debt collector for accessing debtor's credit reporting information for purposes of debt collection after debt discharged in bankruptcy); Murphy v. Stupar, Schuster & Bartell, SC 337 F. Supp. 3d 837 (W.D. Wis. 2018) (attorney's legal mistake in believing improperly filed reaffirmation agreement was valid did not preclude liability under § 1692e(2) for filing complaint to collect on discharged debt); Caldwell v. Redstone Federal Credit Union, 2018 WL 3518466 * 17 (N.D. Ala. July 20, 2018) (distinguishing cases where failure to vacate judgment after bankruptcy discharge with no further actions did not state FDCPA claim, here demand for payment of discharged debt violates FDCPA); Johnson v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 5262049* 4 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 19, 2018) (plaintiff stated FDCPA claims based on discharge order violations against foreclosure law firm and mortgage servicer); Dunlap v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2017 WL 3433915 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 10, 2017) (allowing FDCPA claim based on collection of mortgage debt after discharge); Barnhill v. FirstPoint, Inc., 2017 WL 2178439 (M.D.N.C. May 17, 2017) (noting Fourth Circuit has not addressed implied repeal issue, follows Randolph and Garfield to allow FDCPA claim based on violation of discharge order); Gagnon v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 563 B.R. 835, 844–846 (N.D. Ill 2017) (potential FDCPA violation where mortgage servicer's post-discharge collection letters did not clearly preclude demand for payment of debt as personal liability); McCamis v. Servis One, Inc., 2016 WL 4063403, at *4 (M.D. Fla. July 29, 2016) (collection of discharged debt); Caldwell v. Redstone Fed. Credit Union, 2016 WL 4702821 (N.D. Ala. Sept. 8, 2016) (rejecting Walls, no bankruptcy preclusion for action filed in district court asserting both FDCPA and discharge order violations arising out of attempts to collect discharged credit card debt); Roth v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2016 WL 3570991 (M.D. Fla. July 1, 2016) (implied repeal doctrine did not bar FDCPA claim asserting debt collector attempted to collect on deficiency debt discharged in bankruptcy); Grubermann v. Seas & Assoc., 2016 WL 4378975 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 17, 2016) (violation of § 1692e(2)(A) to send collection letter demanding payment of discharged debt); Freeman v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 2016 WL 3476681 (N.D. Ill. June 27, 2016) (refusing to dismiss FDCPA claims based on mortgage servicer's violation of discharge order); Leahy v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 159 F. Supp. 3d 1294 (M.D. Fla. 2016) (FDCPA claim based on post-discharge debt collection communications by mortgage servicer); Buckley v. Afni, Inc., 133 F. Supp. 3d 1140 (S.D. Ind. Jan. 6, 2016) (post-discharge direct communication to debtor seeking to collect on discharged debt); Hernandez v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 2015 WL 2094263 (M.D. Fla. May 5, 2015) (pursuit of mortgage debt deficiency after discharge is potential FDCPA violation); Donnelly-Tovar v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 945 F. Supp. 2d 1037 (D. Neb. 2013) (debt collector's postbankruptcy demand for payment of debt on mortgage note could constitute FDCPA violation); In re Marshall, 491 B.R. 217 stay also give rise to FDCPA claims.[342] Certain continuing debt collector misconduct violates both the automatic stay and the discharge order, giving rise to FDCPA claims.[343] With the exception of the limitations outlined by the Supreme Court in Johnson v. Midland Funding, L.L.C.[344] and discussed in § 13.7.3.3, infra, false and deceptive representations made in proofs of claims filed in bankruptcy cases may trigger FDCPA violations.[345] Considerable litigation has focused on the consequences of a debt collector's failure to adjust credit reports to reflect a bankruptcy discharge. A number of courts have held that a debt collector's failure to adjust credit reports to accurately reflect bankruptcy discharges furthers debt collection and violates the FDCPA as an effort to collect a debt that has been discharged in bankruptcy.[346]

13.7.2.7 Claims Against Debt Buyers

FDCPA claims may also lie against debt collectors for purchases of discharged bankruptcy debts. In these cases, it is unclear whether the discharge injunction applies to the debt collector or the debt buyer, particularly where the debt buyer was not a party to the bankruptcy discharge order and had no knowledge of the order.[347]

Courts have held that the selling creditor may be held in contempt for selling discharged bankruptcy claims without advising the purchaser that the debt had been discharged in bankruptcy.[348] If the debt collector for the debt buyer is not subject to the discharge injunction, then, regardless of its knowledge of the bankruptcy,[349] it should be strictly liable under the FDCPA for attempting to collect the discharged (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2012) (claim of violation of discharge order and FDCPA claim based on same set of facts do not present irreconcilable conflict, following Randolph); Rios v. Bakalar & Assoc., 795 F. Supp. 2d 1368 (S.D. Fla. 2011) (debtor stated valid claim that debt collector violated § 1682e(2) by making false or misleading representations in attempt to collect discharged debt); In re Contreras, 2007 WL 273128 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Jan. 26, 2007) (debt collector's continued collection efforts knowing of the consumers' bankruptcy and discharge violated FDCPA); In re Gunter, 334 B.R. 900 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2005) (debtor sufficiently stated claim for relief under FDCPA where debt collector repeatedly took steps to collect discharged debt). See In re Jackson, 545 B.R. 62, 71 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2016) (not expressly discussing implied repeal but holding debt collector's attempts to enforce personal liability for mortgage debt discharged in chapter 7 violated FDCPA). See also Ross v. RJM Acquisitions Funding L.L.C., 480 F.3d 493 (7th Cir. 2007) (collecting debt that has been discharged in bankruptcy violated 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(2)(A)'s prohibition against a debt collector making a false representation of character, amount, or legal status of debt).

342 Plank v. St. Anthony's Medical Ctr., 2019 WL 354871 (E.D. Mo. Jan. 29, 2019) (mag.; noting Eighth Circuit has not yet addressed bankruptcy implied repeal issue, following Randolph to allow FDCPA claim asserting stay violation); Vazquez v. USCB Corp., 2018 WL 3352662, at *4 (N.D. Ill. July 9, 2018) (violations of §§ 1692e(2) and 1692e(10) occur because "[a] demand for immediate payment while a debtor is in bankruptcy is 'false' in the sense that it asserts that money is due, although because of an automatic stay in bankruptcy cases, it is not."); In re Mogg, 2016 WL 1029396 (S.D. Ill. Mar. 15, 2016) (debtor can bring FDCPA action arising from refusal to dismiss collection action brought in violation of stay); In re Nee, 2015 WL 1727180 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. Apr. 13, 2015) (debtor can assert FDCPA claims for stay violations); Davis v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2014 WL 4954705 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 2, 2014) (following Randolph and Simon, allowing FDCPA claim for actions that also violate stay); In re Peed, 2012 WL 1999485 (Bankr. S.D. Ala. June 4, 2012) (agreeing with Randolph that debtor may bring FDCPA claim for stay violation, but dismissing FDCPA claim based only on allegation that servicer's attorney misrepresented facts about debt in motion for relief from stay); In re Coleman, 2011 WL 5025499 (Bankr. D.S.C. Oct. 20, 2011) (payday lender violated FDCPA through collection harassment carried out in violation of bankruptcy stay); See also Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2017 WL 4387351 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 3, 2017) (collection attorneys violated § 1692e(5) when they moved for default judgment and signed garnishment request while automatic stay was in effect). But see Toepper v. Law Offices of Richard Snyder, 2018 WL 3059676 (D. Minn. June 20, 2018) (collection attorney's letters to debtor's attorney offering to settle creditor's non-dischargeability challenge did not violate § 1692e or automatic stay).

343 Lamprey v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., 2017 WL 3470570, at *4 (D. Me. Aug. 11, 2017) (Bankruptcy Code does not preclude debtor's FDCPA claims involving violation of automatic stay and discharge order); Clark v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 731 F. Supp. 2d 915 (D. Neb. 2010) (rejecting Walls and following Randolph; Bankruptcy Code does not bar FDCPA claim in district court "for a violation allegedly arising from collection efforts initiated after the bankruptcy court entered the automatic stay and discharge injunction").

344 ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1407, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2017).

345 In re Robinson, 554 B.R. 800, 810–811 (Bankr. W.D. La. 2016) (Bankruptcy Code would not preclude FDCPA action on time-barred bankruptcy proof of claim, but finding claim for violation not stated in this case); In re Trevino, 535 B.R. 110 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2015) (no preemption of FDCPA claims based on inflated proof of claim and violation of terms of confirmed chapter 13 plan).

346 See, e.g., Folkerts v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 1227790 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 15, 2019) (denying servicer's motion for summary judgment on borrowers claim that servicer falsely reported mortgage debt as not discharged following bankruptcy); Bradshaw v. Collection Bureau of the Hudson Valley, 2010 WL 11565277, at *8 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 29, 2010) (allowing FDCPA claim over failing to adjust credit report to reflect discharge; noting Randolph court failed to cite any irreconcilable conflict between Bankruptcy Code and Fair Credit Reporting Act). But see McGee v. Rockford Mercantile Agency, Inc., 2018 WL 1920130 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 24, 2018) (reporting debt "in collection" with past due balance while debtor still under chapter 13 plan and before discharge entered was not inaccurate or misleading under the FDCPA) See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 15.5.1.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. (discussing credit reporting consequences of discharge order).

347 See, e.g., In re Cultrera, 360 B.R. 28 (Bankr. D. Conn. 2007) (attorney working for collection agency working for creditor did not violate discharge injunction despite attempts to collect discharge debt because he had no knowledge of the injunction); In re Franks, 363 B.R. 839 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 2006) (third party debt buyer with no knowledge of discharge order could not be held in contempt).

348 See In re Laboy, 2010 WL 427780 (Bankr. D. P.R. Feb. 2, 2010); In re Nassoko, 405 B.R. 515 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2009); In re Lafferty, 229 B.R. 707 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1998).

349 See Turner v. J.D.V.B. & Assoc., Inc., 330 F.3d 991 (7th Cir. 2003) (debt collector's lack of knowledge of bankruptcy not determinate; court must ask "how consumer would perceive the demand letter"); Keisler v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2008 WL 1774173 (S.D. Apr. 17, 2008) (measure of whether statement is false is objective standard that turns not on what debt collector knew, but on how consumer would perceive communication). But see Buffington v. Schuman & Schuman, P.C., 2001 WL 34082273 (N.D.N.Y. Feb. 21, 2001) (debt collector who lacked knowledge of bankruptcy discharge did not violate FDCPA).

debt.[350] This should be true even where courts are bound by the Walls decision.[351]

Of course, the debt collector also may assert a bona fide error defense to the FDCPA claim. For example, courts have held that held the bona fide error defense applicable where the debt collector searched the public records for bankruptcies.[352]

Unfortunately, other courts, such as the Seventh Circuit in Hyman v. Tate,[353] have not required debt collectors to independently verify that the debtor had not filed a bankruptcy.[354] In Hyman, the Seventh Circuit found that the debt collector established a bona fide error defense when its procedures designed to avoid contacting debtors who had filed bankruptcy consisted of: (1) reasonably relying upon the creditor not to refer debtors who had filed bankruptcy and (2) immediately ceasing collection activity upon learning of the bankruptcy filing.

13.7.2.8 Common Debt Collector Defenses to FDCPA Claims Based on Discharge Order Violations

Putting aside the spurious statutory conflict reasoning adopted by a few courts, primarily in the Ninth Circuit,[355] a debt collector's attempt to collect a debt that was subject to a bankruptcy court's discharge order is a clear FDCPA violation.[356] However, when consumers raise these discharge violation claims, debt collectors regularly raise certain defenses. These defenses will be addressed briefly here. Debt collectors often include in their notices and letters demanding payment a statement to the effect that, if the debtor has obtained a bankruptcy discharge, the statement is not intended to be for debt collection purposes. When challenged, the debt collector will insist that it sent the notice merely for "informational" purposes. The self-serving boilerplate becomes ambiguous and confusing when viewed with outright demands for payment contained in the same documents or in other communications from the debt collector. The debt collector's spin as to its intent is obviously irrelevant. The proper issue is whether the communication, considered in its full context, could lead the unsophisticated consumer to believe that the debt collector is demanding payment of the debt as a personal liability of the debtor. When viewed in this context, courts routinely find that the boilerplate disclaimers did not insulate the debt collector from FDCPA liability for seeking to collect on a discharged debt.[357] The relevant context encouraging payment might include demands for payment contained in monthly account statements sent to mortgagors after they discharged personal liability on a mortgage debt in chapter 7.[358]

350 See Gamble v. Fradkin & Weber, P.A., 846 F. Supp. 2d 377 (D. Md. 2012) (strict liability applies to purchaser of debt discharged in bankruptcy); Wagner v. Ocwen Fed. Bank., 2000 WL 1382222 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 28, 2000) (declining to dismiss claim against debt collector that purchased mortgage after bankruptcy discharge entered).

351 See Foresberg v. Fid. Nat'l Credit Serv., Ltd., 2004 WL 3510771 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 26, 2004) (distinguishing Walls where debtor brought action against original creditor as opposed to debt purchaser).

352 See DeMars v. Plaza Assoc., 2005 WL 1847226 (W.D. Wis. Aug. 3, 2005) (defendant established bona fide error defense where it had checked public records for bankruptcy in the case, but consumer used different middle name/initial in bankruptcy filing; defendant stopped collection once told of bankruptcy).

353 362 F.3d 965 (7th Cir. 2004).

354 Yu v. Kevin B. Wilson Law Offices, 919 F. Supp. 2d 661 (D. Md. 2013) (agreeing with Hyman v. Tate, accepting bona fide error defense based on "understanding" among various debt collectors that they would not transfer to each other debts discharged in bankruptcy). See also Bynum v. Cavalry Portfolio Serv., L.L.C., 2005 WL 2789199 (N.D. Okla. Sept. 29, 2005) (FDCPA does not require collectors to verify independently that debt was not discharged in bankruptcy order to qualify for bona fide error defense).

355 Walls v. Wells Fargo Bank, 276 F.3d 502 (9th Cir. 2002). See § 13.7.2.4, supra.

356 See § 13.7.2.6, supra.

357 See Williams v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Serv., L.L.C., 2018 WL 1582515, at *10 (D. Conn. Mar. 31, 2018); Lilly v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4410040 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 4, 2017) (from perspective of least sophisticated consumer debt collection was animating purpose of servicer's statements; the post-discharge statements listed amount due and demanded payment); Gagnon v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 563 B.R. 835, 846 (N.D. Ill. 2017); Lamprey v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., 2017 WL 3470570, at *4 (D. Me. Aug. 11, 2017) (same letter conveyed messages at odds with the bankruptcy disclaimers); McWhorter v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3315375 (N.D. Ala. Aug. 3, 2017); Whalen v. Specialized Loan Serv., L.L.C., 155 F. Supp. 3d 905 (W.D. Wis. 2016) (evaluating two notices from mortgage servicer containing bankruptcy disclaimers, finding disclaimer in one notice negated debt collection purpose while disclaimer in other notice failed to negate content indicating a collection purpose); Roth v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2016 WL 3570991 (M.D. Fla. July 1, 2016); Donnelly-Tovar v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 945 F. Supp. 2d 1037, 1048 (D. Neb. 2013). But see Tyler v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 2019 WL 1002591 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 3, 2019) (no FDCPA violation where law firm's validation letter contained bankruptcy disclaimer, did not explicitly ask for payment, and did not include a due date, payment coupons, or mailing instructions); Brand v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2018 WL 4898572 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 9, 2018) (bankruptcy disclaimer in servicer's letter negated content indicating it was attempt to collect a debt, implausibly finding that statements in letter referring to pursuit of deficiency action and credit reporting were not false or misleading in view of bankruptcy discharge).

358 Miller v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 2871141 (D. Mass. July 3, 2019) (overall content of monthly statements, including provision of payment coupons with due dates, overrode any effect from bankruptcy disclaimer statement); Folkerts v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 1227790 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 15, 2019) (rejecting servicer's arguments relying on bankruptcy disclaimers in post-discharge statements; statements included content asking for payment); Johnson v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 5262078, at *13 (N.D. Ga. July 2, 2018) (mag; summarizing decisions holding that debt collection content of creditor's postbankruptcy notice may override bankruptcy disclaimer content elsewhere in the same document); Sellers v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Serv., L.L.C., 2017 WL 1683613, at *6–7 (M.D. Fla. May 3, 2017); Prindle v. Carrington Mortg. Serv., L.L.C., 2016 WL 4369424, at *15 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 16, 2016); Goodin v. Bank of Am., 114 F. Supp. 3d 1197, 1206 (M.D. Fla. 2015). But see Thompson v. Ocwen Fin. Corp., 2018 WL 513720 (D. Conn. Jan. 23, 2018) (no debt collection violation where monthly statements pertained to a mortgage for which personal liability had been discharged in bankruptcy; accepting debt collector's "only for informational purposes" argument); Finley v. Nationstar Mortg., 2018 WL 6445691 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 10, 2018) (monthly statements with bankruptcy disclaimer included only information borrower would need to prevent in rem enforcement of security

Debt collectors occasionally raise another argument in response to claims that they sought payment on a secured debt after a bankruptcy discharge. After a homeowner obtains a discharge of personal liability on a mortgage note, the debt collector may try to argue that it did not engage in debt collection when it demanded payment on the mortgage debt after the bankruptcy discharge. The debt collector may claim that there was no "debt" left after the discharge and that it was merely threatening to enforce its security interest in the property—an interest that typically survives a bankruptcy. Although some courts have accepted this argument,[359] it ignores the impact of such a notice on the debtor. The unsophisticated consumer does not understand distinctions between "in rem" enforcement and enforcement as a personal liability.[360] The debt collectors are attempting to have it both ways—they typically want to encourage payment and at the same time set in motion the procedures to recover the property through foreclosure.

The bona fide error defense faces a substantial obstacle in the case of a collection activity that violated a bankruptcy discharge order. Many courts have construed the Bankruptcy Code to obligate debt collectors to put in place systems that screen out debts in bankruptcy and discharged debts from their collection efforts.[361] Collectors may not rely on a "the computer did it" defense when they violate key bankruptcy provisions.[362] When faced with a claim that it violated the bankruptcy discharge order or the automatic stay, the debt collector bears the burden to produce the evidence to establish the bona fide error defense.[363] The facts presented to support the bona fide error defense must be viewed in the context of the Bankruptcy Code's own demanding requirements. The standard for a good-faith objectively reasonable error is therefore particularly high when a debt collector violated the automatic stay or the discharge order.[364] instrument); Cardona v. FCI Lender Serv., Inc., 2017 WL 3531492 3 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 16, 2017) (servicer's postbankruptcy letter contained clear bankruptcy disclaimer and "only reasonable interpretation of the letter, even to an unsophisticated consumer, is that it was intended for informational purposes only, and not an attempt to collect a debt"). See also § 4.7.5.2.3, supra (discussing interaction between FDCPA and TILA monthly account statements). See generally In re Kirby, 599 B.R. 427, 445 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 2019) (discussing decisions involving postbankruptcy communications containing bankruptcy disclaimers, noting that disclaimers do not insulate debt collector from liability for discharge order violations, and courts must consider "[t]otality of the circumstances presented in the record surrounding the post-discharge communications").

Recently, in Taggart v. Lorenzen,[365] the Supreme Court articulated a standard for determining when a party may be sanctioned for contempt of the discharge order entered in a bankruptcy case.[366] After Taggart, it may be more difficult to obtain relief under the Bankruptcy Code for a creditor's willful violation of the discharge order in situations where the creditor claims it made a legal mistake. However, because a mistake of law is not a defense to an FDCPA claim, the consumer's FDCPA claim may still be viable when a contempt proceeding under the Bankruptcy Code would be subject to a defense of legal mistake.[367] In bankruptcy discharge cases, the FDCPA' strict liability standard should remain controlling for two reasons. First, Congress made the FDCPA applicable to a defined set of entities, debt collectors, and not to all creditors. Debt collectors are on notice that they must meet the FDCPA's stricter standards of conduct. Second, bankruptcy law places a heightened duty of diligence on institutional creditors to comply with the automatic stay and discharge orders.[368] Therefore, a debt collector's legal mistakes should not shield it from liability for FDCPA claims arising from its violations of the discharge order.

359 See, e.g., Lovegrove v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2017 WL 216698 (E.D. Va. Jan. 17, 2017), aff'd, 698 Fed. Appx. 159 (4th Cir. 2017) (foreclosure trustee not collecting debt when it sent foreclosure letter to borrower who had discharged personal liability on mortgage debt).

360 See, e.g., Ellison v. Fullett Rosenlund Anderson P.C., 347 F. Supp. 3d 370, 378–379 (N.D. Ill. 2018) (unsophisticated consumers do not necessarily understand Latin phrase "In Rem").

361 See § 13.2.4, supra; National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.6.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

362 In re Rijos, 263 B.R. 382, 392 (1st Cir. 2001).

363 § 12.2.9, supra. See, e.g., Peterson v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 2019 WL 2289595 (N.D. Ohio May 29, 2019) (debt collector's mere averment of lack of knowledge of bankruptcy filing insufficient to counter strict liability triggered by demand for payment made while automatic stay in effect).

364 Micks v. Gurstel Law Firm, P.C., 365 F. Supp. 3d 961 (D. Minn. 2019) (rejecting law firm's bona fide error defense, firm did not act under objectively reasonable standard when it enforced judgment entered in violation of discharge order); Folkerts v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 1227790 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 15, 2019) (rejecting servicer's affidavit purporting to support bona fide error defense to discharge order violation where submission did not include documents showing how it applied it purported review procedures to debtor's loan); Vazquez v. USCB Corp., 2018 WL 3352662 (N.D. Ill. July 9, 2018) (neither facts surrounding alleged failure to receive notice of bankruptcy filing, nor nature of debt collector's general procedures for detecting bankruptcy filings could be resolved in favor of debt collector's bona fide error defense in summary judgment context); Eide v. Colltech, Inc., 987 F. Supp. 2d 951 (D. Minn. 2013) (debt collector has burden of producing detailed evidence of effectiveness of its own screening for bankruptcy cases and cannot rely solely on creditor's procedures); Bacelli v. MFP, Inc., 729 F. Supp. 2d 1328 (M.D. Fla. 2010) (conclusory averments of good faith reliance on creditor and absence of specifics about screening process for bankruptcy cases precluded bona fide error defense). But see Ross v. RJM Acquisitions Funding L.L.C., 480 F.3d 493 (7th Cir. 2007) (data established accuracy and reliability of creditor's system to prevent referral of bankruptcy cases to debt collector); Hyman v. Tate, 362 F.3d 965, 968 (7th Cir. 2004) (reliance on referring creditor's procedures and prompt correction when bankruptcy cases discovered were reasonable under bona fide error standard); Lawson v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2019 WL 2501916 (N.D. Ala. June 17, 2019) (debt collector's use of "a third party service like Lexis-Nexis" to verify bankruptcy status of debts referred to it satisfied "bona fide error" standard).

365 ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1795, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2019), discussed in § 13.2.6, supra.

366 See § 13.2.6, supra.

367 The bona fide error defense under the FDCPA applies to a debt collector's factual mistakes and not to the debt collector's legal errors. Murphy v. Stupar, Schuster & Bartell, 337 F. Supp. 3d 837 (W.D. Wis. 2018) (rejecting bona fide error defense that creditor's attorney mistakenly believed that improperly filed reaffirmation agreement was valid).

368 See § 13.2.4, supra.

Chapter 13 cases can present particular problems after debtors successfully complete a long-term payment plan to cure a prebankruptcy mortgage default. Mortgage servicers' accounting systems often fail to credit payments accurately during chapter 13 cases, leaving debtors facing inflated arrearage claims after the chapter 13 case closes. A Code provision and the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure have created enforceable rights for borrowers when they face these unexpected arrearage claims after completing their chapter 13 plans.[369] Moreover, a bankruptcy court order confirming a chapter 13 plan is a federal court order enforceable through contempt sanctions.[370] Servicers, foreclosure attorneys, and other debt collections that attempt to collect amounts inconsistent with the sums required to cure the mortgage default under the chapter 13 plan are claiming amounts not lawfully due, and thus violate the FDCPA.[371]

13.7.3 FDCPA and Proof of Claim Abuses

13.7.3.1 Overview of the Bankruptcy Claims Process

The claims process is incorporated into every bankruptcy case to determine how much the debtor owes to each creditor. Proofs of claim are bankruptcy's alternative mechanism to a separate lawsuit by each creditor to collect a debt. In chapter 13 cases and in chapter 7 cases where there will be a distribution of proceeds to creditors, creditors generally must file proofs of claim within ninety days of the first date set for the meeting of creditors under Bankruptcy Code section 341.[372] The expiration of the ninety-day period is referred to as the "bar date" for proofs of claim. However, Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3002(a) does not require secured creditors, including mortgage creditors, to file proofs of claim; only "[a]n unsecured creditor or an equity security holder must file a proof of claim."[373]

Unless an objection is filed, a proof of claim in proper form is deemed allowed.[374] An allowed claim generally establishes the amount owed to the creditor and the status of the debt (e.g., general unsecured, priority unsecured, secured).[375] The claim determines how much the creditor will be paid from the bankruptcy estate, either from liquidation of the debtor's nonexempt assets in chapter 7 or from the debtor's income in a chapter 13 case.

13.7.3.2 FDCPA Liability for Creditors' Abuse of the Claims Process

Problems with proofs of claim arise because creditors frequently abuse the process. They may file claims that falsely inflate the amount due. Other creditors may file proofs of claim when no debt is owed or when collection of the debt is barred by the statute of limitations.

Unfortunately, some courts have held that the FDCPA does not provide a remedy for inflated and otherwise improperly filed proofs of claim. For example, in Simmons v. Roundup Funding, L.L.C.,[376] the Second Circuit held that the remedy for fraudulent or otherwise defective proofs of claim is available only through the Bankruptcy Code.[377] Of particular concern

369 11 U.S.C. § 524(i) and Fed. R. Bank. P. 3002.1(i).

370 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 12.11 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

371 In re Clark, 2018 WL 6266179 (Bankr. N.D. Okla. Nov. 26, 2018) (granting summary judgment for debtors on claims that servicer violated Bankruptcy Code and Rule 3002.1, not reaching debtors' related FDCPA claims that focused on same conduct.

372 See Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3002(c). The meeting of creditors is the statutory forum where the debtor must appear and answer questions under oath. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 341, 343. In a chapter 13 case, the first date for the meeting of creditors is between twenty and fifty days after the filing of a bankruptcy petition. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2003(a).

373 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3002(a).

374 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 6004.

375 Despite the binding effect of a confirmed plan, see 11 U.S.C. § 1327, it may not be sufficient to invalidate a properly filed proof of claim by a creditor. Some courts hold that the only method contemplated for challenging a filed proof of claim is the process of objecting to the claim. Other courts have allowed the provisions of a confirmed plan to govern over an inconsistent claim. See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 12.11 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

376 622 F.3d 93 (2d Cir. 2010).

377 See also In re Chaussee, 399 B.R. 237 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2008); Rhodes v. Diamond, 433 Fed. Appx. 78 (3d Cir. 2011) (foreclosure law firm's filing of allegedly inflated proofs of claim cannot give rise to FDCPA causes of action); Walker v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 784416, at *7 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 8, 2018) (Bankruptcy Code precludes FDCPA claims based on stale and inflated proof of claim); Torres v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 530 B.R. 268 (E.D. Pa. 2015) (filing time-barred proof of claim in bankruptcy case cannot be basis for FDCPA claim); Torres v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 96 F. Supp. 3d 541 (E.D. Pa. 2015) (follows Simmons: because Bankruptcy Code provides protections for debtors, they do not need FDCPA remedies); In re Ganas, 513 B.R. 394 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2014) (applying Chaussee preemption analysis to bar debtor's claim under state debt collection statute challenging validity of proof of claim); In re Mallard, 2014 WL 988779, at *6 (Bankr. E.D. Ky. Mar. 12, 2014) (rejecting FDCPA challenge to proof of claim, opining that the bankruptcy claims allowance process is "uniquely structured to ensure a fair distribution of estate assets" and "filing a proof of claim is not a form of debt-collection activity"); B-Real, L.L.C. v. Rogers, 405 B.R. 428 (M.D. La. 2009); Middlebrooks v. Interstate Credit Control, Inc., 391 B.R. 434 (D. Minn. 2008); Kibler v. WFS Fin., Inc., 2000 WL 1470655 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 13, 2000); Gray-Mapp v. Sherman, 100 F. Supp. 2d 810 (N.D. Ill. 1999); Baldwin v. McCalla, Raymer, Padrick, Cobb, Nichols, Clark, L.L.C., 1999 WL 284788 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 26, 1999); Humes v. LVNV Funding, 496 B.R. 557, 581 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 2013); In re Claudio, 463 B.R. 190, 193 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2012) (filing of bankruptcy proof of claim, "even one that is somehow invalid," could not be basis for FDCPA claim); In re Jenkins, 456 B.R. 236 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 2011) (applying state statute barring actions to enforce stale claims, holding that filing proof of claim in bankruptcy case not an action covered by state statute and cannot support FDCPA claim); In re Poteet, 2011 WL 3626696 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. Aug. 17, 2011) (filing proof of claim in bankruptcy case cannot be basis for FDCPA claim), In re McMillen, 2010 WL 5589096 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Nov. 15, 2010); In re Angulo, 2010 WL 1727999 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. Apr. 26, 2010); In re Keeler, 440 B.R. 354 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2009); In re Jacques, 146 B.R. 63 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 2009); In re Pariseau, 395 B.R. 492 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2008); In re Williams, 392 B.R. 882 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2008); In re Simpson, 2008 WL 4216317 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. Aug. 29, 2008); In re Rice-Etherly, 336 B.R. 308 (Bankr. E.D. Mich.

to the Simmons court was the fact that the debtor had failed to object to the claim in the bankruptcy case. The Second Circuit noted that: "Nothing in either the Bankruptcy Code or the FDCPA suggests that a debtor should be permitted to bypass the procedural safeguards in the Code in favor of asserting potentially more lucrative claims under the FDCPA."[378] With the same result but a different approach, the court Adair v. Sherman granted the creditor's motion to dismiss the consumer's FDCPA action on the basis of res judicata where the creditor had filed a proof of claim in consumer's chapter 13 bankruptcy and bankruptcy was confirmed without consumer's objection to the claim.[379]

13.7.3.3 Filing a Stale Proof of Claim As an FDCPA Violation—the Supreme Court's Midland Funding Decision

Through a "stale" proof of claim filed in a bankruptcy case, a creditor seeks payment from the bankruptcy estate for a debt that can no longer be enforced by a judicial action filed in a non-bankruptcy court due to expiration of a statute of limitations. With the growth of the debt buying industry, abuse of the bankruptcy claim process by filing stale claims has become widespread.

Debt buyers operate on a mass scale. One debt buyer can file proofs of claim in thousands of chapter 13 cases nationwide with ease. If the debtors or trustees file formal objections, the bankruptcy courts routinely strike these stale claims. However, a debt buyer banks on a sufficient number of cases in which no one objects. In these cases the proofs of claim are deemed valid and the debt buyer can receive a stream of income from the debtor's earnings for up to five years.

Not surprisingly, this practice has attracted challenges raising several sections of the FDCPA. Section 1692e of the FDCPA prohibits debt collectors from using false, deceptive, or misleading representations to collect a debt, including false representations about the amount or legal status of a debt.[380] Section 1692f prohibits the use of unfair or unconscionable means to collect or attempt to collect a debt.[381] Prior to the Supreme Court's Midland Funding[382] decision, many lower courts allowed FDCPA claims based on debt collectors' filing stale proofs of claim in bankruptcy cases.[383]

In Phillips v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C.,[384] the Seventh Circuit addressed the practice of routinely filing lawsuits in state courts after the expiration of applicable statutes of limitations. Although acknowledging that consumers could raise the statute of limitations as an affirmative defense in each case, the court held that the practice of filing the lawsuits in the first place violated the FDCPA.

The Eleventh Circuit in Crawford v. LVNV Funding[385] applied the Phillips analysis to bankruptcy proofs of claim and held that filing a stale proof of claim violated the FDCPA. The Crawford court noted that proofs of claim served essentially the same function as affirmative collection lawsuits filed in state courts. If neither the debtor nor the trustee objected to a time-barred claim filed in the bankruptcy case, the debt buyer or debt collector would be paid from the debtor's income over several years. The debtor in Crawford had not objected to the stale proof of claim and had in fact paid the creditor under the plan for four years. The court did not address the issue of the Bankruptcy Code's implied repeal of the FDCPA in certain bankruptcy-related areas, such as proof of claim disputes.

Although the parties to Crawford v. LVNV Funding did not raise the question of whether the Bankruptcy Code precluded FDCPA claims based on filing a stale proof of claim, the Eleventh Circuit in Johnson v. Midland Funding, L.L.C. did address the issue.[386] The Eleventh Circuit in Midland Funding saw no conflict between the Bankruptcy Code and the FDCPA. The court acknowledged the creditors' contention that the Code gave them the right to file proofs of claim in bankruptcy cases. The FDCPA did not take this right away. Instead, the FDCPA made a certain class of creditors who file proofs of claim, namely debt collectors, subject to potential sanctions if they filed inappropriate claims.

The options facing debt collectors in bankruptcy were not unlike those litigants face generally. Litigants have the right to file lawsuits. However, they may incur sanctions if the lawsuits they file are frivolous.[387] According to the Eleventh Circuit in Midland Funding, the FDCPA defined standards to which debt collectors must adhere when they pursue claims inside or outside of bankruptcy.

2006); In re Abramson, 313 B.R. 195 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 2004) (debtor's remedy to attack an allegedly inflated proof of claim is limited to that provided for in the Bankruptcy Code).

378 622 F.3d 93, 97 (2d Cir. 2010) (quoting Gray-Mapp v. Sherman, 100 F. Supp. 2d 810 (N.D. Ill. 1999)).

379 199 WL 117754 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 1, 1999), aff'd, 230 F.3d 890 (7th Cir. 2000). But see In re Chobra, 582 B.R. 380, 385–386 (Bankr. D. Md. 2018) (general terms of confirmed plan applicable to class of proofs of claim did not preclude debt collection claim filed in bankruptcy court involving one specific claim).

380 15 U.S.C. § 1692e.

381 15 U.S.C. § 1692f.

382 Johnson v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1407, 197 L. Ed. 2d 790 (2017).

383 Taylor v. Galaxy Asset Purchasing, L.L.C., 108 F. Supp. 3d 628 (N.D. Ill. 2015); In re Warnetta, 2015 WL 8746384 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 14, 2015); In re Edwards, 539 B.R. 360 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2015); In re Feggins, 535 B.R. 862 (Bankr. M.D. Ala. 2015); Avalos v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C. (In re Avalos), 531 B.R. 748 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2015); In re Brimmage, 523 B.R. 134 (N.D. Ill. 2015); Reed v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 181 F. Supp. 3d 523 (N.D. Ill. 2015); Patrick v. Worldwide Asset Purchasing II, L.L.C., 2015 WL 627376 (S.D. Ind. Fed. 13, 2015), adopted, 2015 WL 1144795 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 12, 2015); Elliot v. Cavalry Investments, L.L.C., 2015 WL 133745 (S.D. Ind. Jan. 9, 2015); Patrick v. Poyd, 39 F. Supp. 3d 1032 (S.D. Ind. 2014); Smith v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 510 B.R. 225 (S.D. Ind. 2013). See also Taylor v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 94 F. Supp. 3d 941 (N.D. Ill. 2015) (denying debt collector motion to dismiss); Washington v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1245741 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 18, 2015) (bankruptcy court has jurisdiction over debtor's FDCPA claim asserting creditor filed stale proof of claim).

384 736 F.3d 1076 (7th Cir. 2013).

385 758 F.3d 1254, 1259 (11th Cir. 2014).

386 Johnson v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 823 F.3d 1334 (11th Cir. May 24, 2016).

387 Id. at 1341.

The Supreme Court reversed the Eleventh Circuit's ruling in Midland Funding.[388] In doing so, the Supreme Court did not address the question of whether the Bankruptcy Code precluded FDCPA claims generally when they involved proof of claim abuses. Instead, the court ruled narrowly that the filing of a proof of claim that accurately disclosed the facts related to enforceability of the claim did not violate any provisions of the FDCPA.

The facts of Midland Funding are important for understanding the scope of the Supreme Court's ruling. Midland Funding was a debt buyer. In 2014, it filed a proof of claim in Ms. Johnson's chapter 13 case, asserting that it was owed $1879.71 on a credit card debt. The documents that Midland filed with its claim indicated that the last time any charge appeared on Ms. Johnson's account had been in 2003. The relevant Alabama statute of limitations for enforcement of the debt was six years. Ms. Johnson's bankruptcy counsel objected to Midland's proof of claim as stale. The bankruptcy court agreed and disallowed the claim. Ms. Johnson later brought an action in U.S. district court asserting that Midland's action in filing the stale proof of claim had been "false," "deceptive," "misleading," "unconscionable," and "unfair."

In a 5-to-3 decision, the Supreme Court reversed the Eleventh Circuit's ruling that filing the stale claim violated the FDCPA. In rejecting Ms. Johnson's arguments the Supreme Court focused first on the nature of Alabama's statute of limitations.[389] Unlike the statute of limitations law of other states, Alabama law did not extinguish a debt upon expiration of the limitation period for judicial enforcement. In the court's view, this meant that, despite the expiration of the statute of limitations, the debt remained a "claim" under the Bankruptcy Code's broad definition of that term.[390] Since the debt fell within this statutory definition, Midland had the right under the Bankruptcy Code to file the proof of claim.[391]

In holding that knowingly filing a time-barred claim was not misleading, the court placed great weight on its view that "[t]he audience in Chapter 13 bankruptcy cases includes a trustee."[392] In effect, the court went on to assume that the only entity impacted by the proof of claim was the trustee. The court noted that the trustee had the sophistication to object to clearly improper claims. The court assumed that the trustees had the resources to object to such claims whenever it would be appropriate.[393]

The Supreme Court went on to determine that filing the patently unenforceable claim was not "unfair" or "unconscionable" under the FDCPA. Here, the court concluded that the bankruptcy claims context differed significantly from that of a civil lawsuit. The court saw the consumer defendant in a civil suit as more vulnerable to a time-barred action than the chapter 13 debtor.[394] Here again, the court pointed out that a "knowledgeable trustee is available" in chapter 13 and suggested that the claims objection process was easier for consumers to navigate than answering a civil lawsuit.[395]

Rather than seeing any unfairness to debtors in forcing them to expend resources to investigate and object to a claim that the debt collector knew would be stricken if objected to, the court considered it unfair to require debt collectors to investigate the statute of limitations applicable to their claims before they filed them.[396] In the court's view, the status of the statute of limitations as an affirmative defense in civil litigation meant that the debtor should bear the burden of investigating and prosecuting this defense to payment of the proof of claim.[397]

The dissent in Midland Funding found that filing the stale proof of claim was "unfair" and "unconscionable" under FDCPA § 1692f.[398] The dissent rejected the majority's reliance on trustees to police unfair and deceptive collection practices in the bankruptcy courts. The trustees themselves had filed an amicus brief emphasizing that they lacked the resources to fulfill such a function.[399]

Because claims filed in a bankruptcy case are presumptively valid and enforced in chapter 13, the bankruptcy context makes the debtors more, rather than less, vulnerable to this abusive practice than defendants in civil actions. This is particularly true given the massive scale with which debt collectors can file stale claims and receive payment with impunity in bankruptcy. The dissent also noted the serious problem that occurs in many chapter 13 cases, when the bankruptcy cases are dismissed without a discharge. This happens often, because the debtors cannot make scheduled plan payments over three to five years. In these cases the temporary reinstatement of a payment stream under a chapter 13 plan may revive an expired statute of limitations. When a discharge order is not entered, the consumer is in a worse position than if the bankruptcy case had never been filed.[400]

13.7.3.4 Midland Funding Does Not Affect FDCPA Enforcement of Stale Claims Outside of Bankruptcy

Potential FDCPA claims involving efforts to collect on claims barred by a statute of limitations often arise when debt collectors file civil actions in non-bankruptcy courts. The

388 ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1407, 197 L. Ed. 2d 790 (2017).

389 Since its ruling in Midland Funding, the Supreme Court refused to grant certiorari on appeals from three other rulings that had rejected debtors' arguments that filing stale claims in chapter 13 cases violated the FDCPA. Dubois et al. v. Atlas Acquisitions (In re Dubois), 834 F.3d 522 (4th Cir. 2016), cert. denied ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 2158, 198 L. Ed. 2d 231 (2017); Owens v. LVNV Funding, 832 F.3d 726 (7th Cir. 2016), cert. denied ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 2158, 198 L. Ed. 2d 231 (2017); Nelson v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 828 F.3d 749 (8th Cir. 2016), cert. denied ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 2158, 198 L. Ed. 2d 231 (2017).

390 11 U.S.C. § 101(5).

391 ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1407, 1412, 197 L. Ed. 2d 790 (2017).

392 Id. at 1413.

393 Id.

394 Id.

395 Id.

396 Id. at 1415.

397 Id.

398 Id. at 1418.

399 Id. at 1420.

400 Id. at 1421.

Midland Funding court acknowledged the decisions holding that the filing of a time-barred collection action in a court was "unfair" under the FDCPA.[401] For purposes of its bankruptcy analysis the court assumed that these FDCPA decisions involving stale civil lawsuits were correct, but noted that this was "a matter this Court itself has not decided and does not now decide."[402]

Thus, outside the context of a bankruptcy proof of claim filed with an accurate disclosure of its unenforceability, the Midland Funding decision does not affect other FDCPA claims related to attempted enforcement of time-barred debts. This includes situations where debt collectors misrepresent or conceal facts about the time-barred nature of enforcement in a civil lawsuit. The actionable misrepresentation or concealment may also occur through payment demands not tied to a lawsuit.[403]

13.7.3.5 Midland Funding Does Not Address the Bankruptcy Code's Implied Repeal of the FDCPA

Prior to Midland Funding, two distinct issues divided the lower courts with respect to the FDCPA and bankruptcy proof of claim abuses. The first was whether filing a stale proof of claim in a chapter 13 case violated the FDCPA, i.e., was this specific conduct "false," "deceptive," "misleading," "unconscionable," or "unfair"?[404] The second issue was, assuming this conduct did violate the FDCPA, did the Bankruptcy Code impliedly repeal application of the FDCPA to bankruptcy proof of claim disputes? This latter Bankruptcy Code preclusion issue is highlighted in the dispute between the Seventh Circuit in Randolph v. IMBS, Inc.[405] and the Ninth Circuit in Walls v. Wells Fargo Bank,[406] discussed in § 13.7.2, supra. Had it reached this issue, the Midland Funding court could have decided whether the Bankruptcy Code implicitly repealed application of the FDCPA to proof of claim abuses and potentially to other bankruptcy-related issues.

The Midland Funding court decided only the first of these two issues: on the facts presented, the debt collector did not violate the FDCPA. The court did not address the second issue, the existence of any broader limits on the FDCPA's role in bankruptcy-related matters. Thus, the ruling does not preclude all consumer claims asserting that a debt collector violated the FDCPA in its handling of a bankruptcy proof of claim. The decision leaves undisturbed the existing divided case on law the viability of FDCPA actions asserting violations of the automatic stay or the discharge order.[407]

This existing case law leans overwhelmingly toward the view that there is no general conflict between the Bankruptcy Code and the FDCPA.[408] Prior to Midland Funding, many lower courts had held that the practice of filing stale claims did not violate the FDCPA.[409] However, a number of courts reaching this conclusion recognized at the same time that the Bankruptcy Code did not generally preclude FDCPA actions related to proof of claim abuses.[410]

401 Id. at 1413 (citing, inter alia, Phillips v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 736 F.3d 1076, 1079 (7th Cir. 2013). See § 7.4.9.3, supra.

402 ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1407, 1413, 197 L. Ed. 2d 790 (2017).

403 See, e.g., Holzman v. Malcolm S. Gerald & Assoc., Inc., 920 F.3d 1264 (11th Cir. 2019) (collection letter seeking settlement of time-barred debt may violate § 1692e without express threat of lawsuit); Tatis v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 882 F.3d 422 (3d Cir. 2018) (letter with settlement offer regarding time-barred debt can violate FDCPA); Pantoja v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 852 F.3d 679 (7th Cir. 2017) (dunning letter seeking to collect on time-barred debt was misleading and deceptive). See § 7.4.9.3, supra (discussing FDCPA claims involving time-barred lawsuits and settlement offers).

404 Johnson v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1407, 1411, 197 L. Ed. 2d 790 (2017).

405 368 F.3d 726 (7th Cir. 2004) (no implied repeal or conflict between Bankruptcy Code and FDCPA). See §§ 13.7.2, 13.7.3.2, supra.

406 276 F.3d 502 (9th Cir. 2002) (Bankruptcy Code precludes FDCPA claim based on discharge order violation); In re Chaussee, 399 B.R. 237 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2008) (implied repeal of FDCPA as to proof of claim dispute). See §§ 13.7.2, 13.7.3.2, supra.

407 See § 13.7.1, supra.

408 See § 13.7.2, supra.

409 Gatewood v. CP Medical L.L.C., 533 B.R. 905 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2015) (filing "accurate" but stale proof of claim not per se a false, misleading, deceptive, unfair, or unconscionable debt collection practice); In re Glenn, 542 B.R. 833 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2016) (filing stale proof of claim not per se FDCPA violation); In re Perkins, 533 B.R. 242 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 2015) fundamental differences between context of proof of claim filing and commencement of civil lawsuit); In re Dunaway, 531 B.R. 267 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 2015) (filing proof of claim is act to collect a debt, but no threat to collect improperly from proof of claim with accurate disclosures); LaGrone v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 525 B.R. 419 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2015) (emphasizing debtor attorney's and trustee's roles, less burdensome payment requirements, and ease with which objection to claim can be made), later decision 2015 WL 2330314 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. May 14, 2015); Donaldson v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 97 F. Supp. 3d 1033 (S.D. Ind. 2015) (suggesting that because most bankruptcy debtors are represented, a "competent lawyer" standard rather than an unsophisticated consumer standard should apply to evaluate propensity of the conduct to mislead); Carranza v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5008462 (E.D. Mo. Aug. 20, 2015) (FDCPA claim over proofs of claim not prohibited generally, but filing stale proof of claim not FDCPA violation); Birtchman v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1825970, at *6 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 22, 2015), aff'd sub nom. Owens v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 832 F.3d 726 (7th Cir. 2016); Robinson v. eCast Settlement Corp., 2015 WL 494626 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 3, 2015) (time-barred proof of claim not "automatically" improper if it discloses relevant activity dates in accordance with Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3001(c)(3). See generally In re Broadrick, 532 B.R. 60, 75 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 2015) (appeal pending) (FDCPA not violated when a creditor merely (a) files an accurate proof of claim in a bankruptcy case, (b) when the proof of claim includes all the required information including the timing of the debt, (c) the applicable statute of limitations is one that does not extinguish the right to collect the debt but merely limits the remedies, and (d) no legal impediment to collection or factual circumstances exist that would invoke the FDCPA other than merely the applicability of a statute of limitations). See also Townsend v. Quantum3Group, L.L.C., 535 B.R. 415 (M.D. Fla. 2015) (a proof of claim is like a formal first pleading and does not trigger validation notice requirement); In re Brimmage, 523 B.R. 134, 141–142 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2015) (filing a proof of claim is specifically exempt by FDCPA § 1692g(d) from validation letter requirement).

410 In re Glenn, 542 B.R. 833 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2016); In re Martel, 539 B.R. 192, 197–198 (Bankr. D. Maine 2015); In re Perkins, 533 B.R. 242 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 2015); In re Broadrick, 532 B.R. 60 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 2015) (appeal pending); Carranza v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., ınd Funding Should Be Limited to :culiar Facts

e Court summarized the facts in Midland collector filed a proof of claim with docu- and accurately stated the relevant dates claim was no longer enforceable. The rul- s what happens when the debt collector files e misleading, deceptive, or false with respect mitations.[411]

Funding decision also did not consider :rs can bring claims related to a bankruptcy ıen those claims do not focus exclusively on itations. For example, the ruling does not pre- om asserting a claim that the debt collector CPA when it falsified or misrepresented the a proof of claim[412] or listed as the creditor standing to enforce the claim. There are a presentations and false statements that are not ıe face of a proof of claim form.[413] For example, uantum3 Group, L.L.C.,[414] the court allowed an that was based on a mischaracterization con- kruptcy proof of claim for a payday loan. The indicated that the debt was for an open-ended on when, in fact, it was for a closed-end payday ansaction under state law. The improper disclo- ıtially deceptive to a trustee, who would not be alerted to object to the claim as void. The court distinguished this type of deceptive proof of claim from the stale claim involved in Midland Funding. The expired statute of limitations accurately disclosed in the Midland Funding proof of claim involved an affirmative defense to the claim under state law, while the payday loan transaction concealed by the false proof of claim statement in Ellswick was void under state law. There are false and deceptive statements that even the most sophisticated trustees with ample time on their hands cannot detect. The Midland Funding court's focus on the straightforward pleading burden for the affirmative defense of the statute of limitations has very limited application.

13.7.3.7 Despite Midland Funding, Proof of Claim Abuses May Be Subject to Challenge Under State Law

State law may limit the application of Midland Funding as well. This could occur in at least two ways. First, the Midland Funding court gave substantial weight to how the expiration of the statute of limitations affected a debt under state law. Under Alabama law the debt continued to exist as an obligation of the debtor after the statute of limitations expired.[415] This enabled the court to assert that the debt remained a "claim" consistent with the Bankruptcy Code's broad definition of the term.[416] However, not all state laws mirror Alabama's in this respect. State law may provide that the expiration of the statute of limitations to file legal actions also extinguishes the underlying debt.[417]

The second area where state law may affect the analysis is in the way a state debt collection law defines violations. Most case law finds that the Bankruptcy Code generally does not preempt state debt collection laws.[418] In the context of bankruptcy proofs of claim, state debt collection laws may define violations in a way that does not lead to any conflict between 008462 (E.D. Mo. Aug. 20, 2015); In re LaGrone, 525 B.R. . N.D. Ill. 2015).

---

n re Robinson, 554 B.R. 800, 814 (Bankr. W.D. La. 2016) ankruptcy court used same reasoning later adopted by the Court in Midland Funding to dismiss FDCPA claims, alleg- ng of a stale but accurate proof of claim, court went on to s Court can envision multiple situations in bankruptcy cases filing of a false, fraudulent or factually inaccurate time-

3.8 Practical Tips in Challenging Proofs of Claim As FDCPA Violations

ıce a stale claim is filed, it is good practice to amend the r's schedules to reflect the debt as "disputed." Scheduling :bt as "undisputed" can leave the debtor open to a poten- stoppel claim.[420] milarly, the debtor should formally object to the stale of claim. Failing to object to the claim and allowing the .er 13 plan to be confirmed should not preclude an FDCPA n based on the stale claim.[421] However, the decisions on oint are not uniform nationally, and it is best to avoid tion over claim preclusion issues whenever possible.

ankruptcy courts have jurisdiction to hear FDCPA claims .ving stale proofs of claim.[422] However, as discussed in .5.2, supra, the Supreme Court's Stern v. Marshall deci- may bar bankruptcy courts from entering final judgments ese actions. Absent an agreement by the parties, the bank- cy court may be limited to issuing proposed findings of and conclusions of law, subject to review by the district t.[423] inally, advocates should keep in mind that Federal Rule of kruptcy Procedure 3001(c) sets out requirements for doc- ntation that a creditor must file with its proof of claim.[424] -compliance with this rule may support a claim that the t collector's tactics are deceptive, misleading, or unfair. For example, the bankruptcy court in In re Thomas[425] considered a debt collector's practice of filing proofs of claim that falsely stated that interest and fees were not included in the claimed principal amount. Upon the filing of objections, the debt collector would amend the proofs of claim to correct the false statements, but still refuse to provide documentation to back up the claims. The bankruptcy court held that the alleged practices stated claims for relief under both FDCPA § 1692f and Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3001.

The Midland Funding court alluded to the potential for sanctions under the bankruptcy equivalent of Rule 11, Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9011, when a debt collector intentionally files a stale proof of claim.[426] Violation of Rule 9011 may thus provide some form of relief from the practice.[427]

13.7.4 Preemption of State Debt Collection Laws

The preemption doctrine has its roots in the Supremacy Clause of the U.S. Constitution and is implicated when state law interferes with or is contrary to federal law.[428] The issue of Bankruptcy Code preemption of state fair debt collection claims arises in a group of cases that also focus on whether the Bankruptcy Code itself creates a private right of action to enforce the discharge injunction. The Sixth Circuit first considered the issue in Pertuso v. Ford Motor Credit Co.[429] In that case, the court held that the exclusively federal nature of bankruptcy and the pervasive nature of Congress's bankruptcy regulation meant that Congress preempted the field when it comes to redressing wrongs under the Bankruptcy Code.[430]

The Sixth Circuit rejected the debtors' arguments that their unjust enrichment claim and claim for accounting were not inconsistent with the Code and should, therefore, not be preempted. Similarly, the First Circuit and Seventh Circuit dismissed debtors' claims for unjust enrichment finding that 390 (Bankr. D. Md. 2018) (state debt collector licensing law cannot bar creditor from filing proof of claim subject to debtor's right to challenge claim's enforceability).

---

See, e.g., In re Perkins, 533 B.R. 242 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 2015) (court considers debtor's listing debt as undisputed and debt collector's accurate disclosure of age of claim as precluding FDCPA liability).

Crawford v. LVNV Funding, 758 F.3d 1254, 1259 (11th Cir. 2014) (debtor may assert FDCPA claim over stale proof of claim although brought action four years after plan confirmation order, had not objected to the claim before confirmation, and paid on the claim for four years); Davenport v. Cavalry Investments, L.L.C., 2015 WL

the remedies for violations with respect to reaffirmations were preempted.[431]

Conversely, in Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. O'Brien,[432] the Eighth Circuit held that Congress did not intend to "exclusively" regulate the bankruptcy area so that there could be no field preemption, and that the state law requirements did not conflict with the Bankruptcy Code. There, the debtor alleged that a creditor violated a state "mini-FDCPA" statute, which prohibits creditor contact with a debtor who is represented by counsel, by sending a copy of a letter soliciting a reaffirmation agreement directly to the debtor.

Other courts have rejected the Bankruptcy Code preemption arguments and held that consumers may assert claims under state debt collection statutes, even when the violations involve conduct toward bankruptcy debtors and involve Bankruptcy Code provisions.[433] For example, in Barnhill v. FirstPoint, Inc.[434] the federal district court rejected a debt collector's argument that the Bankruptcy Code preempted a consumer's claim under the North Carolina Collection Agency Act (NCAA).[435] The consumer asserted that the debt collector had attempted to collect on a debt discharged in her chapter 7 bankruptcy.

The court began its analysis by noting that there were two types of possible preemption claims: field preemption and conflict preemption. The debt collector could not specify any express basis for field preemption. The court observed that other courts had consistently recognized that the area of consumer protection was traditionally left to the states to regulate.[436] Therefore, field preemption did not apply. The question of conflict preemption turned on whether the debt collector in this instance could have complied with the state debt collection law and the Bankruptcy Code at the same time. Here, the court noted, "The mere fact that the debt was extinguished by virtue of a bankruptcy does not make compliance with the Bankruptcy's injunction provision and the NCAA impossible."[437]

By refraining from collecting on a debt it had no right to enforce, the debt collector could have complied with the Bankruptcy Code and state law. The bankruptcy proceedings had terminated and enforcement of the state law presented no risk of disruption of the bankruptcy process. There was thus no actual conflict in enforcement of the two laws.

As with FDCPA claims, state debt collection claims that are independent of the Bankruptcy Code violations should remain actionable, even under Petruso and similar decisions.[438] Thus, claims based on harassment, threats, intimidation, and false representations (other than the status of the discharged debt) may still be viable.[439] Similarly, debt buyers purchasing discharged debt may also still be liable for state debt collection claims.[440]

---

431 Cox v. Zale Delaware, Inc., 239 F.3d 910 (7th Cir. 2001); Bessette v. Avco Fin. Serv., Inc., 230 F.3d 439 (1st Cir. 2000). See also In re Chaussee, 399 B.R. 225 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2008) (consumer's state law protection claim preempted); Miller v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 2871141 (D. Me. July 3, 2019) (following First Circuit's Bessette decision, holding Bankruptcy Code field preemption barred claims under Maine fair debt collection practices statute challenging collection actions as contrary to discharge order); Pereira v. First N. Am. Nat'l Bank, 223 B.R. 28 (N.D. Ga. 1998); In re Sharpe, Inc., 135 B.R. 707 (D. Me. 1992) (finding claim under Massachusetts Consumer Protection Act preempted).

432 178 F.3d 962 (8th Cir. 1999).

433 Roth v. Nationstar Mtge., L.L.C., 2016 WL 3570991, at *6 (M.D. Fla. July 1, 2016) (Bankruptcy Code does not preempt debtor's Florida state law debt collection claim asserting that debt collector sought to collect on mortgage deficiency after discharge in bankruptcy; debt collector could comply with both laws); McCamis v. Servis One, Inc., 2016 WL 4063403, at *4 (M.D. Fla. July 29, 2016) (collection of discharged debt violated both FDCPA and Florida debt collection statute); Freeman v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, Inc., 2016 WL 3476681 (N.D. Ill. June 27, 2016) (availability of contempt remedy for violation of bankruptcy discharge order does not preclude borrower's claim under Illinois debt collection statute for mortgagee's collection demands made contrary to discharge order); Hernandez v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 2015 WL 2094263 (M.D. Fla. May 5, 2015) (applying Randolph analysis, Bankruptcy Code does not preempt Florida debt collection statute in action asserting filing of deficiency action in violation of bankruptcy stay). See also Greenwood Trust Co. v. Smith, 212 B.R. 599 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 1997) (violations of state statute prohibiting direct communication with debtor represented by counsel); Sturm v. Providian Nat'l Bank, 242 B.R. 599 (S.D. W. Va. 1999); In re Johnston, 2007 WL 1166017 (Bankr. N.D. W. Va. Apr. 12, 2007) (Bankruptcy Code did not preempt state law claims for creditor's unlawful communication with a debtor represented by an attorney). But see In re Trevino, 535 B.R. 110 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2015) (claims under Texas debt collection statute regarding inflated proof of claim were preempted, but related FDCPA claims not preempted); In re Ganas, 513 B.R. 394 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2014) (applying preemption analysis to bar debtor's action under state debt collection statute brought as challenge to validity of bankruptcy proof of claim).

434 2017 WL 2178439 (M.D.N.C. May 17, 2017).

435 N.C. Gen. Stat. § 58-70-90.

436 2017 WL 2178439, at *4 (M.D.N.C. May 17, 2017).

437 Id.

438 Cox v. Zale Del., Inc., 239 F.3d 910 (7th Cir. 2001); Pertuso v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 233 F.3d 417 (6th Cir. 2000).

439 See, e.g., In re Bate, 454 B.R. 869 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2011) (Florida Consumer Collection Practices Act complements FDCPA in providing relief for bankruptcy debtor); In re Baie, 2011 WL 1257148 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. Mar. 30, 2011) (in addition to FDCPA damages, bankruptcy court can award relief under state unfair debt collection statute where state statute provides more expansive civil penalties).

440 See § 13.7.2, supra.

Chapter 14 Other Federal Claims

14.1 Fraudulent or Defamatory Use of Mails

Debt collection misconduct may violate a number of federal postal laws. The use of the mails for the purpose of executing a scheme or artifice to defraud is mail fraud, a federal crime.[1] The postal laws also prohibit certain deceptive tactics in solicitations sent through the mail,[2] and prohibit the mailing of unordered merchandise[3] and simulated bills.[4] Mail containing false representations made to obtain money or property is made "non-mailable" by the postal laws, which means that it is not to be carried or delivered and is to be disposed of as the United States Postal Service ("Postal Service") directs.[5]

Violations of postal laws are investigated by postal inspectors. Violations may be prosecuted administratively by the Postal Service or civilly or criminally by the Justice Department. In 1983, the Postal Service was given the authority in mail fraud cases to issue cease and desist orders, obtain civil penalties for violation of those orders, and make test purchases from mail order retailers.[6] These two agencies tend to concentrate on issues such as scams and pornography.[7]

The mail fraud statute[8] may apply when a collector uses a fraudulent scheme to collect a debt. This statute has been broadly interpreted to prohibit deceitful statements, half-truths, and the concealment of material facts.[9] It arguably prohibits letters threatening to seize, sell, or garnish the debtor's property, when no such action has or will be taken.

While the federal postal laws do not include their own private cause of action,[10] the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act makes the threat of illegal conduct and criminal debt collection conduct actionable,[11] and some state debt collection statutes specifically incorporate prohibitions established in the federal postal laws.[12] The standards provided in postal laws and regulations also may be persuasive in other contexts, such as tort law and unfair trade practice statutes and regulations, in which standards for collection conduct look to public policy and other laws.[13] Violation of the mail fraud statute is also a predicate offense for a civil RICO claim.[14] In addition, states are free to forbid mailings, which, although they conform to federal requirements, are nonetheless deceptive.[15]

1 18 U.S.C. § 1341.

2 39 U.S.C. §§ 3001(h), 3001(r).

3 39 U.S.C. § 3009. See § 14.2, infra.

4 39 U.S.C. § 3001(d).

5 39 U.S.C. §§ 3001, 3005.

6 Mail Order Consumer Protection Amendments of 1983, Pub. L. No. 98-186, 97 Stat. 1315 (Nov. 30, 1993) (codified in scattered sections of 39 U.S.C. §§ 3001 to 3013).

7 Reports of the activities of the postal inspectors may be found on the Postal Service's website, http://postalinspectors.uspis.gov.

8 18 U.S.C. § 1341.

9 Lustiger v. United States, 386 F.2d 132 (9th Cir. 1967); United States v. Fed. Record Serv. Corp., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7719 (S.D.N.Y. May 21, 1999) (creation of false impression of governmental affiliation by means of paper, print styles, format, and language is mail fraud despite printed disclaimer; failure to disclose material fact that defendant's service was available free from Social Security Administration was also violation). See also Dynaquest Corp. v. United States Postal Serv., 12 F.3d 1144 (D.C. Cir. 1994) (standard for determining whether representation was false is effect on "ordinary minds"; postal service allowed to "draw on its expert understanding of ordinary consumers"); Delgado v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 2014 WL 4773991 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 24, 2014). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 7.3.2 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (elements of mail fraud).

10 Wisdom v. First Midwest Bank, 167 F.3d 402 (8th Cir. 1999) (no private right of action under mail fraud statute); Byrd v. Sand Canyon Corp., 2010 WL 3942830 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 7, 2010) (no private right of action under § 3005); Miller v. Countrywide Home Loans, 747 F. Supp. 2d 947 (S.D. Ohio 2010) (no private right of action under mail fraud statute); Duncan v. Citibank, 2006 WL 4063021 (D.N.M. June 30, 2006), 2006 WL 4063022 (D.N.M. June 30, 2006) (no private right of action under mail fraud statute); Neild v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 453 F. Supp. 2d 918 (E.D. Va. 2006) (no private right of action under mail fraud statute; declining to decide whether §§ 3001 and 3005 create private right of action, as consumers' allegations of violations insufficient); Gibbs v. SLM Corp., 336 F. Supp. 2d 1 (D. Mass. 2004) (no private right of action under mail fraud statute), aff'd, 2005 WL 5493113 (1st Cir. Aug. 23, 2005); Howe v. Reader's Digest Ass'n, Inc., 686 F. Supp. 461 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (no private right of action under 39 U.S.C. §§ 3001 to 3017 when consumer failed to demonstrate damages or continuing violations).

11 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692d(1), 1692e(5).

12 State debt collection laws are summarized at Appx. D, infra.

13 Commonwealth ex rel. Corbett v. People's Benefit Services, Inc., 895 A.2d 683 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 2006) (violation of postal law, here § 3001(h), misrepresenting connection with government, stated Pennsylvania UDAP claim; not preempted by postal law). See also F.T.C. v. Your Yellow Book, Inc., 2014 WL 4187012 (W.D. Okla. Aug. 21, 2014) (finding likelihood of success on FTC's claim that company violated FTC Act's prohibition of unfair and deceptive acts and practices by mailing invoices that did not include disclaimer that postal service had required as part of an earlier settlement of an investigation of violation of postal laws; noting similarity between requirements of postal statutes and section 5 of F.T.C. Act).

14 See § 14.5.2, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law Ch. 7 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (full discussion of RICO).

15 See, e.g., Syndicated Publications, Inc. v. Montgomery County, 921 F. Supp. 1442 (D. Md. 1996) (federal mail fraud statute did not preempt county ordinance forbidding unfair and deceptive trade practices; county could enforce its ordinance when solicitation so closely resembled a bill that several consumers paid it by mistake, despite the inclusion of disclaimers required by federal law and postal regulations).

14.2 Collecting for Unordered Merchandise May Be Illegal

A section of the Postal Reorganization Act (PRA)[16] prohibits billing or dunning for unordered, mailed merchandise (unless mailed by a charitable organization soliciting contributions). It provides that the recipient of unordered, mailed merchandise has a right to treat it as a gift.

The intent of this protection was to supersede the law of some states that held a contract to be created by the consumer's acceptance and non-return of unordered, mailed merchandise. Even in states where such schemes did not create binding contracts, consumers were often coerced into paying for unordered merchandise by collection harassment.

The Ninth Circuit has interpreted "merchandise" as "movable articles of value; things that are bought and sold."[17] It therefore held that the statute did not cover a membership in a discount buying program. The membership kits included with the program also did not fall within the definition, as they were incidental to the program, not articles of trade. Courts have also held that an insurance policy or an offer of insurance[18] and an unsolicited offer to extend credit[19] were not "merchandise."

No sanctions, other than the provision that unordered merchandise can be treated as a gift, are explicitly provided by this section to remedy any prohibited billing or dunning for unordered, mailed merchandise. However, in Kipperman v. Academy Life Insurance Company,[20] the Ninth Circuit, applying the tests spelled out in Cort v. Ash,[21] found an implied right of action to enforce the statute. It held that private parties could seek declaratory relief and restitution, but that allowing private parties to seek injunctive relief would interfere too much with the FTC's enforcement of the statute.

Later Supreme Court decisions have called into question whether Cort v. Ash still provides the proper framework for determining whether to imply a private cause of action.[22] In Wisniewski v. Rodale, Inc.,[23] the Third Circuit held that, in light of the intervening Supreme Court decisions, there was no implied private right of action under the unordered merchandise statute. One judge dissented, setting forth a detailed analysis and concluding that there is a private right of action even under the most recent Supreme Court decisions.

If there is a private right of action, federal courts will have jurisdiction over it under 28 U.S.C. § 1337, since the unordered merchandise statute regulates interstate commerce.[24] Even if there is no direct private right of action, it is important to note that the Act[25] declares the mailing of, billing for, or dunning for unordered merchandise to be a violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act.[26] Thus, such activity will be actionable under many state unfair and deceptive trade practices statutes.[27]

14.3 Telephone and Email Harassment

14.3.1 Criminal Statutes

The federal Communications Decency Act[28] prohibits the following actions in interstate or foreign communications:

- Making a telephone call or using a telecommunications device, without disclosing the caller's identity and with intent to abuse, threaten, or harass any specific person.[29] This prohibition applies to communications such as e-mail that are transmitted in whole or in part through the Internet.[30]
- Causing the telephone of another to ring repeatedly, with intent to harass any person at the number called.[31]
- Making repeated calls or repeatedly initiating communication with a telecommunications device in which the ensuing conversation or communication serves only to harass any person at the called number or who receives the communication.[32]
- Knowingly permitting any telecommunications facility under the offender's control to be used for any of the above purposes with the intent that it be used for such activity.[33]

The caller or the sender of the telecommunication can be fined in accordance with Title 18 and be imprisoned for up to two

16 39 U.S.C. § 3009. See generally Annotation, Validity, Construction and Application of 39 U.S.C. § 3009, Making It an Unfair Trade Practice to Mail Unordered Merchandise, 39 A.L.R. Fed. 674 (1979).

17 Sanford v. Memberworks, Inc., 625 F.3d 550 (9th Cir. 2010).

18 Kipperman v. Academy Life Ins. Co., 554 F.2d 377 (9th Cir. 1977).

19 Kashelkar v. Rubin & Rothman, 97 F. Supp. 2d 383 (S.D.N.Y. 2000), aff'd, 2001 WL 11047 (2d Cir. Jan. 2, 2001).

20 554 F.2d 377 (9th Cir. 1977). See also Lindner v. Readers' Digest Ass'n, 231 Fed. Appx. 663 (9th Cir. 2007) (listing private right of action among remedies available for unordered merchandise violation). Cf. UMB Recordings, Inc. v. Augusto, 558 F. Supp. 2d 1055, 1064 (C.D. Cal. 2008) (discussing Kipperman). But cf. Sanford v. Memberworks, Inc., 625 F.3d 550, 559 n.6 (9th Cir. 2010) (open question whether Kipperman still good law; not reached because membership kit for phony buyers' club not merchandise).

21 422 U.S. 66, 9 S. Ct. 2080, 45 L. Ed. 2d 26 (1975).

22 Alexander v. Sandoval, 532 U.S. 275, 121 S. Ct. 1511, 149 L. Ed. 2d 517 (2001).

23 510 F.3d 294 (3d Cir. 2007). Accord McNair v. Synapse Group, 2008 WL 799863 (D.N.J. Mar. 20, 2008) (no private right of action for unwanted magazine subscription renewals).

24 Kipperman v. Academy Life Ins. Co., 554 F.2d 377 (9th Cir. 1977).

25 39 U.S.C. § 3009(a).

26 15 U.S.C. § 45. See, e.g., F.T.C. v. Instant Response Sys., 2015 WL 1650914 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 14, 2015) (violation of unordered merchandise statute is per se violation of FTC Act).

27 See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

28 47 U.S.C. §§ 223(a)(1)(C) to 223(a)(1)(E), 223(a)(2), as amended by Pub. L. No. 113-4 (Mar. 7, 2013) (replacing "harass any person at the number called or who receives the communications" with "harass any specific person" and deleting "annoy" following "with intent to").

29 47 U.S.C. § 223(a)(1)(C).

30 47 U.S.C. § 223(h)(1)(C).

31 47 U.S.C. § 223(a)(1)(C).

32 47 U.S.C. § 223(a)(1)(E). But cf. Macy v. Bell, 531 S.W.2d 58 (Mo. Ct. App. 1975) (upholding jury's rejection of consumer's state tort counterclaim based on violation of federal standards in light of doubt as to whether calls were "repeated" and when calls had legitimate debt collection purpose so were not made "solely" to harass defendant).

33 47 U.S.C. § 223(a)(2).

years.[34] Statutes duplicating or expanding these criminal prohibitions can be found in nearly every state.

While consumers may not have a private cause of action under these criminal statutes against collectors and creditors,[35] actions that violate these criminal statutes can constitute torts and violations of the FDCPA, TCPA, and state UDAP and debt collection laws.[36]

14.3.2 Protections Under the Telephone Consumer Protection Act

14.3.2.1 Potential Applications to Debt Collection

The Telephone Consumer Protection Act of 1991 (TCPA)[37] amended the Federal Communications Act of 1934. It added a section to protect consumers from invasions of privacy such as automated and prerecorded telephone calls, junk faxes, and telemarketing calls.[38] Since the TCPA has attractive remedies,[39] it can be of significant benefit to debtors to the extent it applies to debt collection.

The first TCPA provision that is relevant to debt collection is a ban on the use of any automatic telephone dialing system or an artificial or prerecorded voice message to make a call without the called party's prior express consent to (1) "any telephone number assigned to a paging service, cellular telephone service, specialized mobile radio service, or other radio common carrier service," or (2) "any service for which the called party is charged for the call."[40] This prohibition is discussed in §§ 14.3.2.2 to 14.3.2.5, infra.

A second TCPA provision prohibits any person from calling any residential telephone line using an artificial or prerecorded voice without the prior express consent of the called party.[41] An FCC rule makes this prohibition inapplicable to any call that is made for a commercial purpose as long as the call does not include or introduce an advertisement or constitute telemarketing.[42] The FCC considers debt collection calls to fall within this exception.[43] However, FCC rules announced in late 2020, not yet in effect, put limits on the number of calls that debt collectors can make pursuant to this exception. This numerical restriction, which will be useful to debtors harassed by prerecorded debt collection calls, is discussed in § 14.3.2.6, infra.

Other TCPA prohibitions are unlikely to be relevant to debt collection. The TCPA bans the use of automatic telephone dialing systems or artificial or prerecorded voice calls to any emergency line or any guest or patient room of a health care facility,[44] but this prohibition is rarely applicable to debt collection calls. The TCPA places restrictions on transmitting unsolicited advertisements by fax,[45] but the FCC considers debt collection not to be an unsolicited advertisement,[46] and faxes are rarely used in debt collection in any event. The TCPA also provides the basis for the FCC's nationwide do-not-call list rule,[47] but that rule applies only to calls made for the purpose of encouraging the purchase or rental of, or investment in, property, goods, or services,[48] so is likewise inapplicable to the typical debt collection call.[49]

Even when the TCPA does not apply, the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act gives the consumer the right to direct a debt collector (as defined in the FDCPA) in writing to cease communication.[50] There is no reason why the exercise of this right would not apply to robocalls. Repeated autodialed or prerecorded calls may also amount to harassment or abuse that is actionable under the FDCPA[51] or state law.[52]

Subsections 14.3.2.2 to 14.3.2.5, infra, provide an overview of the TCPA's restrictions on robocalls to cell phones, and § 14.3.2.6, infra, examines the statute's restrictions on artificial or prerecorded voice calls. Subsections 14.3.2.7 to 14.3.2.9, infra, then survey selected litigation issues: the burden of proof, TCPA remedies, who may sue, jurisdiction and class actions, whether federal courts have supplemental jurisdiction

34 47 U.S.C. § 223(a).

35 See Doe v. Egea, 2015 WL 3917112 (S.D. Fla. June 25, 2015) (no private cause of action to enforce § 223(a)); Ashland Hosp. Corp. v. Int'l Bhd. Of Elec. Workers Local 575, 807 F. Supp. 2d 633 (E.D. Ky. 2011) (same); Viola v. A&E Television Networks, 433 F. Supp. 2d 613 (W.D. Pa. 2006) (same); Moore v. Principal Credit Corp., 1998 WL 378387 (N.D. Miss. Mar. 31, 1998) (no private cause of action available for telephone harassment under either state or federal criminal laws).

36 See Moore v. Principal Credit Corp., 1998 WL 378387 (N.D. Miss. Mar. 31, 1998) (no private cause of action available for telephone harassment under either state or federal criminal laws, but debtors stated claims under FDCPA and for intentional infliction of emotional distress). Cf. 47 U.S.C. § 207 (making violations of 47 U.S.C. § 201 actionable, but only if committed by a common carrier).

37 47 U.S.C. § 227; 47 C.F.R. §§ 64.1200 to 64.1201 (FCC regulations under TCPA).

38 See Pub. L. No. 102-243 (1991); S. Rep. 102-178 (1991); 47 U.S.C. § 227(b).

39 See § 14.3.2.8, infra.

40 47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(1)(A)(iii).

41 47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(1)(B).

42 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(a)(3)(iii).

43 In re Rules and Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 23 F.C.C. Rcd. 559, at ¶ 11 (F.C.C. 2008). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.4.2 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (detailed analysis of this provision).

44 47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(1).

45 47 U.S.C. § 227(d)(1). See also In re Rules and Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 12 F.C.C. Rcd. 4609 (F.C.C. 1997). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.8 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (detailed analysis of junk fax restrictions).

46 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 21 F.C.C. Rcd. 3787, n.70 (F.C.C. 2006) ("fax regarding collection of a debt that does not contain an advertisement will not be subject to the facsimile advertising rules").

47 47 U.S.C. § 227(c). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.5 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (full discussion of FTC and FCC do-not-call rules).

48 47 C.F.R. §§ 64.1200(c)(2), 64.1200(f)(12) (definition of "telephone solicitation").

49 See In re Rules and Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 23 F.C.C. Rcd. 559, at ¶ 11 (F.C.C. 2008).

50 15 U.S.C. § 1692c. See § 5.10, supra.

51 See Ch. 6, supra.

52 See Chs. 15, 16, infra.

over a collector's counterclaim for the debt, Article III standing, vicarious liability, and other litigation issues.

This section is intended to serve as an introduction to the TCPA for debt collection practitioners, and to facilitate the identification of possible TCPA claims in debt collection cases. The voluminous TCPA decisions and FCC rulings are discussed in depth in in NCLC's Federal Deception Law.[53] That volume also discusses many issues that are not addressed here.

14.3.2.2 Scope of the Prohibition on Autodialed or Prerecorded Calls to Cell Phones

As noted above, the TCPA prohibits the use of any automatic telephone dialing system or artificial or prerecorded voice message in a call to a cell phone, pager, or the like, or when the called party is charged for the call, unless the called party has consented to be called.[54] The phrases "cellular telephone service" and "any service for which the called party is charged for the call" are alternative; it is not necessary that the cellular consumer be charged for the call.[55]

This prohibition is not limited to telemarketing calls; debt collection calls are covered.[56] Indeed, the FCC has noted that robocalls to collect debts "pose a unique concern for consumers":

> Record evidence shows that when consumers complain about debt collection calls, a third of the time they complain that there is no debt to be collected, including that they never owed the debt. More than one of every five complaints is about communications tactics, including frequent or repeated calls; obscene, profane, or other abusive language; and calls made after written requests to stop. And the record contains evidence, also unrebutted by Petitioners, that such calls sometimes lack a means for consumers to ask that they stop, and can even instruct the consumer to hang up if they are not the debtor, or that callers may have a policy to not speak to anyone other than the debtor.[57]

A declaratory ruling issued in 2015 by the FCC permits financial institutions to make three "free to end user" calls to cell phones about fraud, security breaches, and the like, using an autodialer or a prerecorded voice, without consent, subject to certain very specific conditions.[58] Debt collection calls are specifically excluded from these allowed calls.[59]

The prohibition against robocalls to cell phones applies to text messages as well as voice messages.[60] It is the placing of the call that is prohibited, even if the called party does not actually receive the call.[61]

53 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law Ch. 6 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

54 47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(1)(A)(iii); 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(a)(1)(iii). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.1 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

55 See, e.g., Breda v. Cellco P'ship, 934 F.3d 1, 4–5 (1st Cir. 2019); Susinno v. Work Out World, Inc., 862 F.3d 346, 349 (3d Cir. 2017); Osorio v. State Farm Bank, 746 F.3d 1242 (11th Cir. 2014); Satterfield v. Simon & Schuster, Inc., 569 F.3d 946 (9th Cir. 2009). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.1 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

56 Romero v. Dep't Stores Nat'l Bank, 725 Fed. Appx. 537, 539 (9th Cir. 2018) (TCPA "is not limited to telemarketing calls": applies to debt collection calls); Gager v. Dell Fin. Services, L.L.C., 727 F.3d 265 (3d Cir. 2013); Soppet v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 679 F.3d 637, 643 (7th Cir. 2012) (noting FCC's decision not to exempt debt collection industry and applying statute to debt collector); Adams v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 6488062 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 29, 2018); Cartrette v. Time Warner Cable, Inc., 157 F. Supp. 3d 448, 458–459 (E.D.N.C. 2016); Galbreath v. Time Warner Cable, Inc., 2015 WL 9450593 (E.D.N.C. Dec. 22, 2015); Vandiver v. Global Credit & Collection Corp., 2015 WL 11108884 (E.D. Ark. Mar. 30, 2015); Olney v. Progressive Cas. Ins. Co., 993 F. Supp. 2d 1220 (S.D. Cal. 2014); Morse v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 65 F. Supp. 3d 407, 409 (M.D. Pa. 2014); Cabrera v. Gov't Employees Ins. Co., 2014 WL 11881002 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 26, 2014); Brown v. Hosto & Buchan, P.L.L.C., 748 F. Supp. 2d 847 (W.D. Tenn. 2010); Brown v. Enter. Recovery Sys., Inc., 2013 WL 4506582, at *5 (Tex. App. Aug. 22, 2013); In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 23 F.C.C. Rcd. 559 (F.C.C. 2008). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.3.1 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

57 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶ 79 (F.C.C. 2015), available at www.fcc.gov, appeal resolved, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (setting aside portions of FCC's 2015 order dealing with ATDS definition and treatment of reassigned cell phone numbers, but otherwise leaving it undisturbed).

58 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶¶ 129–134 (F.C.C. 2015), available at www.fcc.gov, appeal resolved, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (setting aside portions of FCC's 2015 order dealing with ATDS definition and treatment of reassigned cell phone numbers, but otherwise leaving it undisturbed). See also In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 2020 WL 7873750 (F.C.C. Dec. 30, 2020) (codifying this exemption and its limit of three calls per event over a three-day period at 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(a)(9)(iii), with effective date to be determined). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.2.2 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

59 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶ 138 (F.C.C. 2015), available at www.fcc.gov, appeal resolved, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (setting aside portions of FCC's 2015 order dealing with ATDS definition and treatment of reassigned cell phone numbers, but otherwise leaving it undisturbed).

60 Barr v. Am. Ass'n of Political Consultants, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 140 S. Ct. 2335, 2344 n.1, 207 L. Ed. 2d 784 (2020) (the robocall restriction "bars both automated voice calls and automated text messages"); Campbell-Ewald Co. v. Gomez, 577 U.S. 153, 136 S. Ct. 663, 193 L. Ed. 2d 571 (2016), aff'g 768 F.3d 871 (9th Cir. 2014); In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 18 F.C.C. Rcd. 14014, 14115 (F.C.C. 2003); In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶ 107 (F.C.C. 2015), available at www.fcc.gov, appeal resolved, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (setting aside portions of FCC's 2015 order dealing with ATDS definition and treatment of reassigned cell phone numbers, but otherwise leaving it undisturbed). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.7 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (more detailed discussion of TCPA's restrictions on text messages).

61 Soppet v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 679 F.3d 637, 638 (7th Cir. 2012) (TCPA "curtails the use of automated dialers and prerecorded messages to cell phones . . . and routing a call to voicemail counts

Manually dialed real-voice calls to cell phones are not prohibited,[62] but advocates should carefully investigate any claim that a call was manually dialed. In addition, even if the cell phone number was manually dialed, the call violates the TCPA if it uses an artificial or prerecorded voice for any part of the call.[63]

14.3.2.3 What Is an Autodialer?

The TCPA prohibits the use of an "automated telephone dialing system" to call a cell phone without prior express consent.[64] It defines this term as "equipment that has the capacity—(A) to store or produce telephone numbers to be called, using a random or sequential number generator, and (B) to dial such numbers."[65]

In 2021, in Facebook, Inc. v. Duguid,[66] the Supreme Court interpreted this definition. The case involved a security feature that automatically sent a text message to a Facebook account holder's cell phone number each time someone attempted to log in to that account. The plaintiff, who had never even had a Facebook account, received a series of misdirected text messages and was unable to get them to stop, so brought suit under the TCPA.

The consumer did not argue before the Supreme Court that Facebook's system for sending these text messages used a random or sequential number generator. Instead, he argued that the clause "using a random or sequential number generator" modified only the word "produce" in the statutory definition, not the word "store." As a result, he argued that equipment that had the capacity "to store . . . telephone numbers to be called, . . . and (B) to dial such numbers," was an ATDS.

The Supreme Court rejected this argument. The opinion holds that the phrase "using a random or sequential number generator" modifies both verbs that precede it, i.e. both "store" and "produce." It rejects the argument that a device that simply stores numbers, without the use of a random or sequential number generator, and then automatically dials them, is an ATDS. The Court concluded that the system Facebook was using did not meet the statutory definition.

Significantly, in Facebook, the plaintiff had made no allegation that Facebook's system of selecting, storing, or dialing the telephone number to which to send the unwanted text messages used any random or sequential number generation process. The plaintiff's case and argument relied on the analysis in a Ninth Circuit decision, Marks v. Crunch San Diego,[67] which held that the phrase "using a random or sequential number generator" did not apply to the word "store," so a system that simply stored and dialed telephone numbers without using a random or sequential number generator was an ATDS.

Since Facebook deals only with the application of the ATDS definition to Facebook's specific system, the opinion does not preclude a determination that the ATDS definition applies to other types of dialers. In particular, it does not address whether predictive dialers—the devices commonly used today for most automated calls—are ATDSs.

Facebook does, however, provide some important guidance in applying the ATDS decision to predictive dialers. In particular, it makes it clear in footnote 7 that a system that generates random or sequential numbers as part of the process of selecting or storing telephone numbers to be dialed is an ATDS. For example, the Court stated that a system that randomly selected numbers, and then used those numbers to select telephone numbers from a list for storage and dialing, was an ATDS.

The Supreme Court's decision leaves at least three avenues to show that a dialer is an ATDS. First, many courts have held that "capacity" encompasses at least the device's current functionalities, whether or not those functionalities were used to make a particular call.[68] It is often possible for an expert as answering a call"); M.A. v. NRA Grp., L.L.C., 2019 WL 2357767 (E.D.N.Y. June 4, 2019) (unnecessary to show that consumer answered the call or even knew about it); Ammons v. Ally Fin., Inc., 326 F. Supp. 3d 578 (M.D. Tenn. 2018); Bratcher v. Navient Solutions, L.L.C., 2017 WL 9935188, at *3 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 9, 2017); King v. Time Warner Cable, 113 F. Supp. 3d 718, 725–726 (S.D.N.Y. 2015), vacated and remanded on other grounds, 894 F.3d 473 (2d Cir. 2018) (addressing definition of autodialer); Warnick v. Dish Network, L.L.C., 2014 WL 12537066, at *15 (D. Colo. Sept. 30, 2014); Castro v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 959 F. Supp. 2d 698, 720 (S.D.N.Y. 2013) ("[F]or purposes of Plaintiffs' TCPA claim, it is immaterial whether the Plaintiffs picked up all of Defendants' calls or whether several of the calls went unanswered."); Fillichio v. M.R.S. Assoc., 2010 WL 4261442, at *3 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 19, 2010) (The TCPA "does not include [ ] a requirement . . . that the recipient of a call must answer the phone or somehow be aware of the call in order for there to be a violation"). See also Satterfield v. Simon & Schuster, Inc., 569 F.3d 946, 953–954 (9th Cir. 2009) (holding that "to call" in the TCPA means "to communicate with or try to get in communication with a person by telephone"); In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 31 F.C.C. Rcd. 9074, at ¶ 28 (F.C.C. Aug. 11, 2016) (a call is any initiated call; the call need not be completed and need not result in a conversation or voicemail). See also First Nat'l Collection Bur., Inc. v. Walker, 348 S.W.3d 329 (Tex. App. 2011) (it is the placing of the call that is prohibited, even if the called party does not actually receive the call). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.3.1 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

62 Boyd v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 5 F. Supp. 3d 940 (M.D. Tenn. 2013).

63 See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.1 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

64 47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(1)(A)(iii). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.2 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

65 47 U.S.C. § 227(a)(1). See also 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(f)(2) (similar definition).

66 ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 1163, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

67 Marks v. Crunch San Diego, L.L.C., 904 F.3d 1041 (9th Cir. 2018).

68 See, e.g., Glasser v. Hilton Grand Vacations Co., L.L.C., 948 F.3d 1301, 1312 (11th Cir. 2020) (interpreting the statute to "appl[y] to devices that have the 'capacity' to identify randomly generated numbers" and stating that "it does not require that capacity to be used in every covered call," but finding device not to be an ATDS for other reasons); King v. Time Warner Cable, Inc., 894 F.3d 473, 480–481 (2d Cir. 2018) ("[T]he TCPA applies to calls from a device that can perform the functions of an autodialer, regardless of whether it has actually done so in a particular case . . . [T]he term "capacity" in the TCPA's definition of a qualifying autodialer should be interpreted to refer to a device's current functions, absent any modifications to the device's hardware or software."); Meyer v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 707 F.3d 1036, 1043 witness to show that dialers of the types commonly in use today have the capacity, without additional programming or downloading additional software, to generate random or sequential telephone numbers and dial them or store them for later dialing.

Second, the Supreme Court's description in footnote 7 of an ATDS that used a random or sequential number generator to store numbers to be called shows that the numbers that are randomly or sequentially generated need not be the telephone numbers themselves. Instead, the definition is satisfied if the device generates random or sequential numbers as part of the process of storing or producing the telephone numbers to be dialed. An expert witness with knowledge of dialers and databases is likely to be able to show that dialers in use today use a sequential number generator to store telephone numbers to be called, and to pull them up for dialing.

Third, the term "sequential" in the term "sequential number generator" does not necessarily mean consecutive numerical order or even numerical order. A common definition of "sequence" is any arrangement of a set of numbers in a particular order determined by some rule. With a broad definition along these lines, dialers that use an algorithm to select numbers for dialing will likely meet the ATDS definition.

The definition of ATDS is very technical and is only sketched out here. It is addressed more fully in NCLC's Federal Deception Law § 6.3.2.[69]

It is important to keep in mind that, if a call to a cell phone used an artificial or prerecorded voice, the TCPA's restrictions apply whether or not it was autodialed. In such a case, it is unnecessary to deal with the question whether the call also used an autodialer. The meaning of "artificial or prerecorded voice" is discussed in the next subsection.

14.3.2.4 What is a Prerecorded or Artificial Voice Call?

The TCPA prohibits calls to cell phones and other sensitive numbers without the called party's consent if the call uses an artificial or prerecorded voice.[70] In most cases, the meaning of "artificial or prerecorded voice" should be clear. The statute does not require the entire message to be prerecorded, only that the call use a prerecorded voice.[71] Many debt collection calls begin with a prerecorded message and so violate this provision if they are made to cell phones without consent.[72]

Some callers have begun using "ringless voicemail," a technology that inserts a message into the called party's voicemail without causing the phone to ring. In 2017, a provider petitioned the FCC for a ruling that the robocall restrictions did not apply to ringless voicemail,[73] but it withdrew the petition after consumers and public officials flooded the FCC with negative comments.[74] The technology for delivering ringless voicemail messages to consumers' cell phones is not materially different from that used to send SMS-based text messages to cellular subscribers en masse,[75] which the FCC and many courts have held are "calls" to which the TCPA's restrictions on autodialed calls apply.[76] In addition, courts have consistently held that calls resulting in voicemail messages are subject to the TCPA.[77] Accordingly, courts have had no difficulty applying the TCPA's restrictions on prerecorded or artificial voice calls to ringless voicemail.[78]

Some callers are also now using calling systems that allow a live person to play prerecorded audio clips to the called (9th Cir. 2012); Satterfield v. Simon & Shuster, 569 F.3d 946, 951 (9th Cir. 2009) (reversing grant of summary judgment to advertiser; fact question whether system had capacity to generate random or sequential numbers).

69 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.2 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

70 47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(1)(A).

71 47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(1)(A) ("it shall be unlawful for any person . . . (A) to make any call . . . using . . . an artificial or prerecorded voice").

72 Lardner v. Diversified Consultants Inc., 17 F. Supp. 3d 1215 (S.D. Fla. 2014).

73 Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, Public Notice, DA-17-368, Consumer & Governmental Affairs Bureau Seeks Comment on All About the Message, L.L.C. Petition for Declaratory Ruling Under the Telephone Consumer Protection Act of 1991 (Apr. 18, 2017), available at https://transition.fcc.gov.

74 See Kellie Mitchell Bubeck & Ross B. Hofherr, Now Entering the Ring . . . Are "Ringless Voicemail" Calls Exempt from the TCPA?, 60 DRI for the Def. 70, No. 2 (Feb. 2018) (discussing the history of the petition and suggesting that it was part of a tactic to settle a case that the ringless voicemail provider feared might produce a decision unfavorable to it).

75 See In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶¶113, 114 (F.C.C. July 10, 2015) (describing text messaging technology and explaining why TCPA applies to text messaging), appeal resolved, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (setting aside portions of FCC's 2015 order dealing with ATDS definition and treatment of reassigned cell phone numbers but leaving this portion of the order undisturbed).

76 See § 14.3.2.2, supra.

77 See, e.g., Soppet v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 679 F.3d 637, 638 (7th Cir. 2012) (TCPA "curtails the use of automated dialers and prerecorded messages to cell phones . . . and routing a call to voicemail counts as answering a call"); Johnson v. Comodo Grp., Inc., 2020 WL 525898 (D.N.J. Jan. 31, 2020); Wakefield v. ViSalus, Inc., 2019 WL 3945243 (D. Or. Aug. 21, 2019) (caller is liable if prerecorded message is left on voicemail, regardless of whether anyone listens to it); Castro v. Green Tree Servicing L.L.C., 959 F. Supp. 2d 698, 720 (S.D.N.Y. 2013) (for purposes of TCPA liability, it is irrelevant whether call was answered or it went to voicemail).

78 Gurzi v. Penn Credit Corp., 449 F. Supp. 3d 1294 (M.D. Fla. 2020); Caplan v. Budget Van Lines, Inc., 2020 WL 4430966 (D. Nev. July 31, 2020); Schaevitz v. Braman Hyundai, Inc., 437 F. Supp. 3d 1237 (S.D. Fla. 2019); Picton v. Greenway Chrysler-Jeep-Dodge, Inc., 2019 WL 2567971 (M.D. Fla. June 21, 2019) (rejecting argument that ringless voicemails are not subject to the TCPA); Saunders v. Dyck O'Neal, Inc., 319 F. Supp. 3d 907 (W.D. Mich. 2018); Somogyi v. Freedom Mortg. Corp., 2018 WL 3656158 (D.N.J. Aug. 2, 2018) (applying TCPA's restrictions on autodialed and prerecorded calls to ringless voicemail without identifying any issues that would complicate the application of the TCPA to it). See also Silbaugh v. Censtar Energy Corp., 2018 WL 4558409 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 21, 2018) (denying motion to dismiss ringless voicemail case for lack of standing; receipt of ringless voicemail is a concrete injury regardless of whether it causes the consumer's phone to ring, as the messages take up space in the consumer's voicemail box, may result in the consumer having to pay a charge, and deplete the phone's battery).

party, choosing snippets that respond to whatever the called party says. Typically, this "robot call" or "soundboard" system allows the live caller to break in to speak with the consumer at any time. Callers have claimed that, since the system allows calls to be interactive—and there is human involvement in selecting the snippets to be played—these calls escape the prohibition.[79] However, it is obvious that these calls use a prerecorded voice and that is the statutory test. Many courts[80] and the FCC[81] have held that these calls are subject to the statutory restrictions. This issue is discussed in greater length in NCLC's Federal Deception Law § 6.3.1b.[82]

14.3.2.5 Exceptions to the Prohibition on Autodialed or Prerecorded Calls to Cell Phones

14.3.2.5.1 Exceptions in the statute and regulation; calls to collect government debts

The statute includes two exceptions to the prohibition against autodialed or artificial/prerecorded voice calls to cell phones: calls made for emergency purposes and calls made with the prior express consent of the called party.[83] A former exception for calls to collect government debt was struck down by the Supreme Court in 2020 as an unconstitutional content-based restriction on speech.[84]

In addition, the statute authorizes the FCC to exempt calls to a cell phone that are not charged to the called party—"free to end user calls"—from the prohibition against autodialed or artificial voice calls, subject to such conditions as the FCC prescribes to protected privacy rights.[85] The FCC has created several exceptions, but none relate to debt collection.[86]

14.3.2.5.2 Prior express consent

The prohibition of autodialed or prerecorded voice calls to cell phones does not apply where the called party has provided "prior express consent."[87]

In a 2008 declaratory ruling, the FCC held that a consumer provides "express consent" to receive debt collection calls on a cell phone by providing the cell phone number to the creditor in connection with the transaction that resulted in the debt.[88] The FCC stated: "Because we find that autodialed and prerecorded message calls to wireless numbers provided by the called party in connection with an existing debt are made with the 'prior express consent' of the called party, we clarify that such calls are permissible. We conclude that the provision of a cell phone number to a creditor, e.g., as part of a credit application, reasonably evidences prior express consent by the cell phone subscriber to be contacted at that number regarding the debt."[89] This interpretation allows the consumer's consent for the creditor to make calls to transfer over to the debt collector for the credit. This interpretation is questionable, as it treats what at most might be implied consent as the "express consent" required by the statute. However, it has not been successfully challenged, and many courts have followed it.[90]

79 See Braver v. Northstar Alarm Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3208651 (W.D. Okla. July 16, 2019) (rejecting argument that human intervention in playing audio clips meant that the caller did not use a prerecorded voice), reconsideration denied, 2019 WL 5722207 (W.D. Okla. Nov. 5, 2019).

80 See Johnson v. Comodo Grp., Inc., 2020 WL 525898, at *8 (D.N.J. Jan. 31, 2020) (prerecorded message violates this prohibition even if it is played by human caller, as long as it is played without called party's prior express consent); Braver v. Northstar Alarm Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3208651 (W.D. Okla. July 16, 2019), reconsideration denied, 2019 WL 5722207 (W.D. Okla. Nov. 5, 2019); Margulis v. Eagle Health Advisors, L.L.C., 2016 WL 1258640, at *3 (E.D. Mo. Mar. 31, 2016) (refusing to dismiss claim that robot call, starting with prerecorded snippets and then transferring call to a live agent, violated TCPA's restriction on prerecorded calls).

81 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, Northstar Alarm Services L.L.C.'s Petition for Expedited Declaratory, 2020 WL 7586053 (F.C.C. Dec. 18, 2020).

82 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

83 47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(1)(A); 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(a)(1).

84 Barr v. Am. Ass'n of Political Consultants, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 140 S. Ct. 2335, 207 L. Ed. 2d 784 (2020). See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.2.4.3 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (further discussion of this decision and its ramifications).

85 47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(2)(C).

86 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(a)(2) (loosening restrictions on certain health care messages); In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶¶ 129–138, 140–147 (F.C.C. 2015), available at www.fcc.gov (creating a narrow exception for certain calls by financial institutions regarding fraud, identity theft, security breaches, and related matters; creating similar exception for health care providers), appeal resolved, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (rejecting health care provider's claim that exception was too narrow; setting aside two other portions of FCC's order, and otherwise leaving it undisturbed). See also In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 2020 WL 7873750 (F.C.C. Dec. 30, 2020) (codifying these exemption and placing limits on the number of calls that they allow, with effective date to be determined).

87 47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(1)(A); 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(a)(1). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.4.2 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

88 In re Rules and Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 23 F.C.C. Rcd. 559, 2008 WL 65485, at ¶¶ 9–10 (F.C.C. 2008).

89 Id. ¶ 9.

90 See, e.g., Williams v. Capital One Bank, 682 Fed. Appx. 467 (7th Cir. 2017) (giving cell phone number orally when applying for credit card is consent to receive debt collection calls); Baisden v. Credit Adjustments, 813 F.3d 338, 343–344 (6th Cir. 2016) (patient's provision of cell phone number to hospital, which provided it to anesthesiologist, who then provided it to collection agency, was consent to receive autodialed and prerecorded collection calls, even though consent form only allowed hospital to share "health information"); Chyba v. First Fin. Asset Mgmt., Inc., 671 Fed. Appx. 989 (9th Cir. 2016) (reciting FCC's ruling and affirming summary judgment against consumer); Hill v. Homeward Residential, Inc., 799 F.3d 544 (6th Cir. 2015) (providing cell phone number to creditor, whether at the outset of transaction or later, is consent to receive collection robocalls); Mais v. Gulf Coast Collection Bur., 768 F.3d 1110 (11th Cir. 2014) (finding FCC's ruling incontestable under the Hobbs Act and holding that it applies to collection of medical debt, not just consumer credit; wife's provision of patient's cell phone number to hospital is sufficient consent); Rodriguez v. Premier Bankcard, L.L.C., 2018 WL 4184742, at *5 (N.D. Ohio Aug. 31, 2018) (debtor's provision of phone numbers both at the outset and later is consent to receive collection calls); Stauffer v. Navient Solutions, L.L.C., 241 F. Supp. 3d 517 (M.D. Pa. 2017) (provision of new cell phone number when applying for second student loan is consent to be called to collect earlier loan, when both promissory notes gave permission

Even if providing a cell phone number can be construed as consent to receive certain robocalls, it should not be construed as consent to receive them on any and all topics. Thus, a second question should be whether the consumer consented to the subject matter of the autodialed calls.[91] The FCC has held:

> By "within the scope of consent given, and absent instructions to the contrary," we mean that the call must be closely related to the purpose for which the telephone number was originally provided. For example, if a patient provided his phone number upon admission to a hospital for scheduled surgery, then calls pertaining to that surgery or follow-up procedures for that surgery would be closely related to the purpose for which the telephone number was originally provided.[92]

In a Second Circuit case, Nigro v. Mercantile Adjustment Bureau, L.L.C.,[93] a utility company told a man that it needed his cell phone number in order to comply with his request that it disconnect his mother-in-law's utility service after she died. It then made seventy-two robocalls to his number to collect a $68 bill she owed. The court held that the man had not provided his number during the transaction that resulted in the debt owed. Instead, he provided the number long after the debt was incurred, and he was not in any way responsible for the debt. The court reversed the district court's holding that the man had consented to receive the calls by providing his cell phone number.

Consent may also be given by an express provision in a contract.[94] On the other hand, debt collectors and creditors that "capture" incoming numbers[95] or obtain them through to contact debtor at any future number she supplied); Harrington v. Roundpoint Mortg. Servicing Corp., 290 F. Supp. 3d 1306 (M.D. Fla. 2017) (debtor gave consent by giving copy of construction contract, which listed his cell phone number, to lender that was financing the construction); Ginwright v. Exeter Fin. Corp., 280 F. Supp. 3d 674 (D. Md. 2017); Garrett v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, L.P., 2017 WL 3193759 (M.D. Fla. July 27, 2017) (provision of cell phone number on work order when cable service performed service at consumer's home is consent to be called regarding debt); Ebling v. Clearspring Loan Services, Inc., 106 F. Supp. 3d 1002 (D. Minn. 2015) (providing cell phone number is enough; need not specifically consent to receive automated calls); Ranwick v. Texas Gila, L.L.C., 37 F. Supp. 3d 1053 (D. Minn. 2014); Hart v. Vital Recovery Services, Inc., 2013 WL 12116580, at *3 (N.D. Fla. Dec. 18, 2013); Johnson v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, 2012 WL 5875605 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 20, 2012) (providing cell phone number to creditor at outset of transaction is prior express consent); Conover v. Byl Collections Services, L.L.C., 2012 WL 4363740, at *6 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 21, 2012) (providing cell phone number on credit application constitutes prior consent to be contacted at the number regarding the debt). See also Selby v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6677928 (S.D. Cal. June 22, 2016) (consent given to original creditor can be transferred to buyer of debt and then to collector hired by debt buyer); Stein v. Monterey Fin. Services, Inc., 2015 WL 13654024 (N.D. Ala. Feb. 26, 2015) (noting that provision of telephone number to creditor is consent to be called at that number regarding debt, but suggesting that providing it to debt collector may not be). Cf. Daubert v. NRA Grp., L.L.C., 189 F. Supp. 3d 442 (M.D. Pa. 2016) (providing telephone number at time of service is consent to receive calls, but not shown here when defendant collector merely claimed that plaintiff "must have" given his cell phone number to medical provider), aff'd in relevant part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 861 F.3d 382 (3d Cir. 2017) (affirming summary judgment for consumer on TCPA claim when collector presented no evidence of consent; reversing summary judgment for defendant collection agency on FDCPA claim). But cf. Coniglio v. iQual Corp., No. 8:16:cv-44-T-23TBM (M.D. Fla. Mar. 7, 2017) (denying caller's motion for summary judgment; consumer's agreement that service can disclose cell phone number in connection with application for loan modification is not consent to receive autodialed calls from credit counseling program; since these are not calls regarding debt, FCC's ruling is inapplicable), available at www.nclc.org/unreported.

91 See, e.g., Van Patten v. Vertical Fitness Grp., 847 F.3d 1037 (9th Cir. 2017) (providing telephone number is consent to transaction-related contact, not consent to "any and all contact"); Baisden v. Credit Adjustments, Inc., 813 F.3d 338, 343–344 (6th Cir. 2016) (stating that the context in which a debtor provides consent matters, but holding that patient's provision of cell phone number to hospital, which provided it to anesthesiologist, who then provided it to collection agency, was consent to receive autodialed and prerecorded collection calls, even though consent form only allowed hospital to share "health information"); Hill v. Homeward Residential, Inc., 799 F.3d 544, 551 (6th Cir. 2015) (provision of cell phone number to initial creditor is consent to receive collection calls regarding that debt, "not on any topic whatsoever"); Nigro v. Mercantile Adjustment Bureau, L.L.C., 769 F.3d 804 (2d Cir. 2014) (man's provision of his cell phone number to utility company so that it could disconnect his deceased mother-in-law's service was not consent to receive calls about her unpaid bill, because he did not provide phone number in connection with transaction that created the debt). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.4.2.3 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

92 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶ 47, n.474 (F.C.C. 2015), available at www.fcc.gov, appeal resolved, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (setting aside two parts of 2015 declaratory ruling, but leaving this portion undisturbed). See also Report and Order, In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 27 F.C.C. Rcd. 1830, 1840, at ¶ 25 (Feb. 15, 2012) ("[One commenter]t argues that its customers may orally provide their wireless phone number as a point of contact and therefore those customers expect marketing and service calls. We disagree. Consumers who provide a wireless phone number for a limited purpose—for service calls only—do not necessarily expect to receive telemarketing calls that go beyond the limited purpose for which oral consent regarding service calls may have been granted").

93 769 F.3d 804 (2d Cir. 2014). See also Letter from FCC General Counsel to Clerk, Second Circuit Court of Appeals, Nigro v. Mercantile Adjustment Bur., 2014 WL 2959062 (F.C.C. June 30, 2014) ("Although Nigro presumably consented to receive calls regarding the termination of service to the Thomas residence by providing his cell phone number to National Grid in connection with his request to terminate that service, under the ACA Order that consent did not extend to debt collection calls with respect to debts that did not arise 'during the transaction' in which Nigro provided his number.").

94 See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law §§ 6.3.4.2.2, 6.3.4.4 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also § 14.3.2.4.6, infra (revocation of contractual consent).

95 Phillips v. Mozes, Inc., 2015 WL 12806594 (N.D. Ala. Jan. 26, 2015) (lack of consent sufficiently alleged when defendant captured plaintiff's cell phone number from text message plaintiff sent and te message itself did not state number); Castro v. Green Tree Servicin 959 F. Supp. 2d 698 (S.D.N.Y. 2013) (placing call from cell phone creditor is not consent); Request of ACA International for Clarificati and Declaratory Ruling, In re Rules & Regulations Implementi the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 23 F.C.C. Rcd. 559, n.34 (F.C 2008) ("The Commission also noted, however, that if a caller's nu ber is 'captured' by a Caller ID or an ANI device without notice skip-tracing[96] do not thereby obtain consent allowing them to use automated equipment to call such numbers. Nor does the fact that a creditor has an existing business relationship with a debtor create an exception to the prohibition if the debtor has not given prior express consent to receive calls.[97]

The FCC's separate prohibition on autodialed or artificial voice telemarketing calls to cell phones is stricter and requires not just prior express consent but prior express written consent.[98] Express consent must be in writing, and must include the consumer's signature and a designated telephone number for receiving such calls and messages.[99] However, the FCC has made it clear that these requirements apply only to telemarketing calls.[100] It structured the regulation to provide that either written or oral consent is sufficient for autodialed or prerecorded debt collection calls to cell phones.[101]

In the debt collection context, courts have construed the FCC's 2008 ruling not to make provision of a cell phone number to the original creditor the exclusive means by which a debtor can give prior express consent.[102] Debtors can also provide consent directly to the collector.

14.3.2.5.3 Who may give consent; reassigned numbers

The TCPA provides for substantial recoveries in cases in which a debt collector harasses a "wrong party" with automated calls to a cell phone. Such a non-debtor has standing to bring a TCPA claim.[103] As a result, it is important to determine exactly who provided consent for the calls.

Consent must be given by the person who presently subscribes to or uses the cell phone.[104] However, the FCC has stated that consent may be given by a customary user who is included in a family or business calling plan, even if that person is not the subscriber.[105] In addition, a court held that a person who is not a subscriber or customary user can provide consent if they have authority from the subscriber.[106]

The FCC has also stated that consent can be given by an intermediary.[107] However, an intermediary can only convey the residential telephone subscriber, the caller cannot be considered to have given an invitation or permission to receive autodialer or prerecorded voice message calls.").

96 Meyer v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 707 F.3d 1036, 1040 (9th Cir. 2012) (affirming preliminary injunction against autodialing cell phone numbers obtained through skip-tracing); Lardner v. Diversified Consultants Inc., 17 F. Supp. 3d 1215, 1224 (S.D. Fla. 2014).

97 Osorio v. State Farm Bank, 746 F.3d 1242 (11th Cir. 2014); Gager v. Dell Fin. Services, L.L.C., 727 F.3d 265, 273 (3d Cir. 2013) (exemptions in 47 C.F.R. §§ 64.1200(a)(2)(iii), 64.1200(a)(2)(iv) to calls "made to any person with whom the caller has an established business relationship" and calls "made for a commercial purpose [that do] not include or introduce an unsolicited advertisement or constitute a telephone solicitation" apply only to autodialed calls made to land-lines); Zehala v. Am. Express, 2011 WL 4484297 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 26, 2011) (established business relationship exception inapplicable to calls to cell phones); Bentley v. Bank of Am., 773 F. Supp. 2d 1367, 1374 (S.D. Fla. 2011) (established business relationship insufficient). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.4.5 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

98 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(a)(2). See also 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(f)(8) (defining express written consent). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.4.1 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

99 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(f)(8), as amended by, In re Rules and Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 27 F.C.C. Rcd. 1830, n.68 (F.C.C. Feb. 15, 2012), later op. at 27 F.C.C. Rcd. 13031 (F.C.C. Oct. 16, 2012).

100 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 27 F.C.C. Rcd. 1830, at ¶ 28 (F.C.C. Feb. 15, 2012).

101 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(a)(2) (requiring express written consent for prerecorded or autodialed advertising and telemarketing calls to cell phones, effective Oct. 16, 2012). See Williams v. Capital One Bank, 682 Fed. Appx. 467 (7th Cir. 2017) (consent to receive non-telemarketing calls may be oral, so no signature is necessary).

102 Hill v. Homeward Residential, Inc., 799 F.3d 544, 551 (6th Cir. 2015); Brown v. DirecTV, L.L.C., 330 F.R.D. 260, 269 (C.D. Cal. 2019); Lawrence v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 152 F. Supp. 3d 1376 (S.D. Fla. 2016) (letter sent to loan servicer, listing cell phone number, was consent to receive calls about the debt); Selby v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6677928 (S.D. Cal. June 22, 2016); Haysbert v. Navient Solutions, Inc., 2016 WL 890297, at *8 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 8, 2016); Ebling v. ClearSpring Loan Services, Inc., 106 F. Supp. 3d 1002, 1005 n.3 (D. Minn. 2015). But cf. Stein v. Monterey Fin. Services, Inc., 2015 WL 13654024 (N.D. Ala. Feb. 26, 2015) (noting that provision of telephone number to creditor is consent to be called at that number regarding the debt, but suggesting that providing it to debt collector may not be).

103 Osorio v. State Farm Bank, 746 F.3d 1242 (11th Cir. 2014); Soppet v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 679 F.3d 637, 640 (7th Cir. 2012); Swope v. Credit Mgmt., L.P., 2013 WL 607830 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 19, 2013); Swope v. Credit Mgmt., L.P., 2013 WL 607830 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 19, 2013). See generally § 14.3.2.8, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.4.3 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

104 See, e.g., N.L. v. Credit One Bank, 960 F.3d 1164 (9th Cir. 2020); Breslow v. Wells Fargo Bank, 755 F.3d 1265 (11th Cir. 2014); Osorio v. State Farm Bank, 746 F.3d 1242 (11th Cir. 2014) (only subscriber can give consent; whether someone other than subscriber has authority to consent on behalf of subscriber depends on whether there is agency relationship under common law); Soppet v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 679 F.3d 637 (7th Cir. 2012). See also In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶ 72 (F.C.C. 2015), available at www.fcc.gov, appeal resolved, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (setting aside two parts of 2015 declaratory ruling, but leaving this portion undisturbed). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.4.3 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

105 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶ 75 (F.C.C. 2015), available at www.fcc.gov, appeal resolved, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (setting aside two parts of 2015 declaratory ruling, but leaving this portion undisturbed).

106 McCaskill v. Navient Solutions, Inc., 178 F. Supp. 3d 1281 (M.D. Fla. 2016) (applying agency principles; finding no evidence that daughter had authority to consent to collection calls to mother's cell phone). See also Osorio v. State Farm Bank, 746 F.3d 1242 (11th Cir. 2014) (whether someone other than the subscriber has authority to consent on behalf of the subscriber depends on whether there is an agency relationship under common law).

107 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶¶ 30, 49 (F.C.C. 2015), available at www.fcc.gov, appeal resolved, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (setting aside two parts of 2015 declaratory ruling, but leaving this portion undisturbed). See Fober v. Mgmt. & Tech. Consultants, L.L.C., 886 F.3d 789 (9th Cir. 2018) (consent may be obtained through an intermediary; patient's consent that medical provider could disclose her information for purposes of quality consent that the called party actually granted.[108] Consent to make calls to a landline number that is later ported to a cell phone may satisfy the consent requirement.[109]

Many courts have held that, if the debt collector places automated calls to a cell number that has been reassigned to someone other than the debtor, consent given by the debtor is not effective.[110] In 2015, the FCC confirmed this position in a declaratory ruling, holding that the "called party" is the actual current subscriber or customary user, regardless of whether the caller intended to reach that person.[111] Accordingly, the FCC held that calls to reassigned cell phone numbers without the actual recipient's consent violate the TCPA.[112]

Industry players appealed this declaratory ruling, and in 2018 the D.C. Circuit set aside the portion of the ruling that addressed reassigned numbers. The court agreed that the FCC "could permissibly interpret 'called party' in that provision to refer to the current subscriber,"[113] but held that a portion of the FCC's order that created a one-call safe harbor was arbitrary.[114] As the court could not be sure that, without the safe harbor, the FCC would have adopted the position that "called party" means the person who was reached, the court set aside the FCC's reassigned number ruling and returned the matter to the FCC for further review.[115]

In 2018, the FCC issued an order to establish a comprehensive database to identify reassigned numbers.[116] Its order provides that, once the database is created, a caller will not be liable for violating the prohibition of autodialed or prerecorded calls to cell phones without consent if it proves that 1) the number it called has been reassigned, 2) it had prior express consent from the previous subscriber to that number, and 3) it checked the most recent update to the database, but was given erroneous information that the number had not been reassigned.[117] The creation of the database obviates the need to establish any other sort of safe harbor, so resolves the concern identified by the D.C. Circuit. The database was scheduled to enter beta trials on July 1, 2021.[118]

14.3.2.5.4 Revocation of consent

Many courts have held that consent may be revoked at any time, in any reasonable way.[119] A 2015 FCC ruling reiterates this point specifically:

> [C]onsumers may revoke consent in any manner that clearly expresses a desire not to receive further messages, and . . . callers may not infringe on that ability by designating an exclusive means to revoke.
>
> Consumers have a right to revoke consent, using any reasonable method including orally or in writing. We conclude that callers may not abridge a consumer's right to revoke consent using any reasonable method.[120]

The D.C. Circuit upheld this ruling, including the FCC's conclusion that callers cannot limit how consent can be revoked.[121] The court also held that the FCC was not required to establish standardized revocation procedures.[122] improvement was consent to receive patient satisfaction survey calls from third-party contractor); Baisden v. Credit Adjustments, Inc., 813 F.3d 338, 343–346 (6th Cir. 2016) (consent obtained through an intermediary is valid).

---

108 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶¶ 30, 49 (F.C.C. 2015), available at www.fcc.gov ("an intermediary can only convey consent that has actually been obtained, and cannot provide consent on behalf of another party"), appeal resolved, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (setting aside two parts of 2015 declaratory ruling, but leaving this portion undisturbed).

109 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶¶ 30, 54 (F.C.C. 2015), available at www.fcc.gov, appeal resolved, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (setting aside two parts of 2015 declaratory ruling, but leaving this portion undisturbed).

110 See, e.g., N.L. v. Credit One Bank, 960 F.3d 1164 (9th Cir. 2020); Breslow v. Wells Fargo Bank, 755 F.3d 1265 (11th Cir. 2014); Osorio v. State Farm Bank, 746 F.3d 1242 (11th Cir. 2014); Soppet v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 679 F.3d 637 (7th Cir. 2012). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.4.3 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

111 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991 ¶ 73, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961 (F.C.C. July 10, 2015) ("We find that the 'called party' is the subscriber, i.e., the consumer assigned the telephone number dialed and billed for the call, or the non-subscriber customary user of a telephone number included in a family or business calling plan. Both such individuals can give prior express consent to be called at that number. Thus, with the limited exception discussed below, calls to reassigned wireless numbers violate the TCPA when a previous subscriber, not the current subscriber or customary user, provided the prior express consent on which the call is based."), set aside, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018).

112 Id.

113 ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687, 706 (D.C. Cir. 2018).

114 Id. at 708 (citations omitted).

115 Id. at 708.

116 In re Advanced Methods to Target and Eliminate Unlawful Robocalls, 2018 WL 6590244 (F.C.C. Dec. 13, 2018) (adding new subsections (l) and (m) to 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200).

117 Id. ¶¶ 53–58 (describing this safe harbor, which will be codified as 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(m)).

118 The Reassigned Numbers Database, https://www.reassigned.us.

119 See, e.g., Van Patten v. Vertical Fitness Grp., 847 F.3d 1037, 1047–1049 (9th Cir. 2017); Schweitzer v. Comenity Bank, 866 F.3d 1273 (11th Cir. 2017) (reiterating that consent can be revoked orally, and holding that it can be partially revoked); Osorio v. State Farm Bank, 746 F.3d 1242 (11th Cir. 2014); Gager v. Dell Fin. Services, L.L.C., 727 F.3d 265 (3d Cir. 2013). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.4.4 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

120 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶¶ 63, 64 (F.C.C. July 10, 2015), ruling upheld, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018).

121 ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018).

122 Id. at 709.

14.3.2.5.5 What methods of revoking consent are reasonable?

The FCC's 2015 declaratory ruling, upheld by the D.C. Circuit,[123] makes clear that any statement in which "the called party clearly express[es] his or her desire not to receive further calls" is sufficient to show revocation.[124] To assess whether any particular means of revocation used by a consumer is reasonable, the FCC stated that it would:

> [L]ook to the totality of the facts and circumstances surrounding that specific situation, including, for example, whether the consumer had a reasonable expectation that he or she could effectively communicate his or her request for revocation to the caller in that circumstance, and whether the caller could have implemented mechanisms to effectuate a requested revocation without incurring undue burdens. We caution that callers may not deliberately design systems or operations in ways that make it difficult or impossible to effectuate revocations.[125]

The ruling also gives several examples of methods of revoking consent that are reasonable: "Consumers generally may revoke, for example, by way of a consumer-initiated call, directly in response to a call initiated or made by a caller, or at an in-store bill payment location, among other possibilities."[126]

The FCC's ruling also clarifies that revocation may be oral,[127] and many courts have agreed.[128] Earlier decisions that required the consumer to give written notice in accordance with the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act[129] to revoke consent to receive debt collection calls[130] are no longer good law in light of these developments. Of course, written notice by means providing proof of receipt is preferable from the standpoint of proof.

When debt collection calls are involved, notice to the caller that the consumer has filed a bankruptcy petition is revocation of consent to make collection calls.[131] Revocation of consent is also accomplished when a law firm sends a creditor a letter stating that it represents an alleged debtor and that all calls regarding the debt should be directed to it.[132] A series of interactions may amount to revocation of consent.[133] However, a court held that texting a long, wordy revocation request—rather than following the opt-out procedure the seller had created, which involved texting one of a list of short instructions such as "STOP"—was not a reasonable method of revoking consent.[134]

Where a company has a variety of subsidiaries and affiliates, it is important to make sure that the revocation request is communicated to the corporate entity that was making the 123 ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018). See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.4.4.1 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

124 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶ 67 (F.C.C. July 10, 2015), ruling upheld, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (upholding this portion of 2015 declaratory ruling). See Mattson v. Quicken Loans, Inc., 2020 WL 6365506, at *4–5 (D. Or. Sept. 2, 2020) (fact question whether consumer who was on nationwide do-not-call list revoked consent to receive telemarketing calls by saying that he was not interested and hanging up); Singer v. Las Vegas Athletic Clubs, 376 F. Supp. 3d 1062, 1072 (D. Nev. 2019) (fact question whether call in which consumer told collector to stop calling, but then appeared to acquiesce to merely a temporary suspension of the calls, amounted to revocation); Brown v. Credit Mgmt., L.P., 131 F. Supp. 3d 1332 (N.D. Ga. 2015) (fact question whether debtor revoked consent by telling collector she felt harassed and hanging up); Reardon v. Uber Technologies, Inc., 115 F. Supp. 3d 1090, 1102 (N.D. Cal. 2015) (applying FCC declaratory ruling; consent can be revoked in any reasonable manner); Morris v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5072011 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 24, 2015) (allowing consumer to proceed to trial on question whether revocation of consent set forth in a qualified written request sent to mortgage servicer, and repeated in a telephone call, was effective). But cf. Cesaire v. Med. Services, Inc., 2016 WL 6910257 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 23, 2016) ("if you can't give me the information [about the alleged balance], don't call my phone" is not revocation of consent because it is conditional); Goodson v. Designed Receivable Solutions, Inc., 2016 WL 5799321 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 21, 2016) (refusing to construe debtor's statements to collector that she had already paid debt as revocation of consent).

125 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶ 233 (F.C.C. July 10, 2015), ruling upheld, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (upholding this portion of 2015 declaratory ruling).

126 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶¶ 63, 64 (F.C.C. July 10, 2015), ruling upheld, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018).

127 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶¶ 64, 70 (F.C.C. July 10, 2015), ruling upheld, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (upholding this portion of 2015 declaratory ruling).

128 See, e.g., Moriient v. Northwest Collectors, Inc., 666 Fed. Appx. 531 (7th Cir. 2016) (reversing summary judgment against consumer; fact issue whether he orally revoked consent); Osorio v. State Farm Bank, 746 F.3d 1242, 1255 (11th Cir. 2014) ("allowing consent to be revoked orally is consistent with 'the government interest articulated in the legislative history of the Act [that] enable[es] the recipient to contact the caller to stop future calls'"). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.4.4.2 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

129 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(c).

130 Moore v. Firstsource Advantage, L.L.C., 2011 WL 4345703, at *30–31 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 15, 2011); Moltz v. Firstsource Advantage, L.L.C., 2011 WL 3360010, at *5 (W.D.N.Y. Aug. 3, 2011); Cunningham v. Credit Mgmt., L.P., 2010 WL 3791104, at *5 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 30, 2010), adopted, 2010 WL 3791049 (N.D. Tex. Sept. 27, 2010); Starkey v. Firstsource Advantage, L.L.C., 2010 WL 2541756, at *6 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 11, 2010), adopted, 2010 WL 2541731 (W.D.N.Y. June 21, 2010).

131 In re Hammond, 2014 WL 2761260 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. June 18, 2014).

132 Miceli v. Orange Lake Country Club, Inc., 2015 WL 5081621 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 5, 2015).

133 See, e.g., Baldwin v. Monterey Fin. Services, Inc., 2016 WL 5723734 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 30, 2016) (cancellation of contract, refusal to pay, request that caller "destroy any documents containing our personal . . . information," and "talk to my attorney about this" may amount to revocation). But cf. Van Patten v. Vertical Fitness Grp., 847 F.3d 1037 (9th Cir. 2017) (merely cancelling gym membership, without clearly expressing a desire not to be called or texted, is not revocation of consent).

134 Viggiano v. Kohl's Dep't Stores, Inc., 2017 WL 5668000 (D.N.J. Nov. 27, 2017). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.4.4.2 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

unwanted calls.[135] One court held that revocation of consent for a debt collector to call about a debt owed to one creditor is not revocation of consent to receive calls from that collector about debts to other creditors that it begins to collect at a later date.[136] Similarly, a court held that revocation of consent when a debt collector called a certain number regarding one person's account did not revoke consent to call regarding the account of a different person who used that same number.[137] A court held that sending a revocation letter to a corporate address that the defendant had never communicated to the plaintiff—and at which it rarely received mail—was not a reasonable method of revoking consent in the absence of proof that the defendant received it.[138]

Several decisions hold that consumers who revoke their consent to text messaging may be sent a final "confirmatory text message" confirming receipt of a recipient's unsubscribe request.[139] The FCC has also adopted this interpretation.[140]

14.3.2.5.6 Revocation of consent that was provided as a term in a contract

Recently, creditors have begun inserting provisions in form agreements purporting to authorize the use of automated equipment to contact consumers at any number furnished by the consumer or otherwise obtained by the creditor. The Third Circuit has held that this consent can be revoked, because "the ability to use an autodialing system to contact a debtor is plainly not an essential term to a credit agreement."[141] By entering into a contractual relationship with a seller, a consumer does not waive the right to revoke consent to receive autodialed or prerecorded cell phone calls.[142] As one court put it:

> [The defendant] has not pointed to any legal authority giving parties permission to contract around the TCPA. If they could, one imagines that every company in the nation—from Dell Financial and State Farm Bank, to every student loan provider, to every catalog sales company—would amend their contracts to require customers to waive every right their customers currently have. The lack of authority suggests that no such race to the bottom is permitted.[143]

However, a 2017 Second Circuit decision, a 2020 Eleventh Circuit decision agreeing with the Second Circuit,[144] and a number of district court decisions[145] erroneously hold that the consumer's consent is irrevocable when it is part of a binding contract.[146] These decisions fail to give appropriate weight to

135 Martinez v. TD Bank USA, 2017 WL 2829601 (D.N.J. June 30, 2017).

136 Michel v. Credit Prot. Ass'n L.P., 2017 WL 3620809 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 23, 2017). Accord Perez Alvarez v. Medicredit, Inc., 2018 WL 6430830 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 2, 2018).

137 Brooks v. USAA Sav. Bank, 2019 WL 7188576 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 10, 2019).

138 Wright v. USAA Sav. Bank, 2020 WL 2615441 (E.D. Cal. May 22, 2020).

139 Ibey v. Taco Bell Corp., 2012 WL 2401972 (S.D. Cal. June 18, 2012) (when consumer sent a text message in response to defendant's invitation to complete a survey, then sent "STOP" message requesting that defendant cease sending him text messages, defendant's "single, confirmatory text message did not constitute unsolicited telemarketing" and therefore was not "an invasion of privacy contemplated by Congress in enacting the TCPA"). Accord Ryabyshchuk v. Citibank, 2012 WL 5379143 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 30, 2012).

140 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, SoundBite Comme'ns, Inc., Petition for Expedited Declaratory Ruling, FCC 12-143, 27 FCC Rcd 15391 (Nov. 29, 2012) (allowing organizations that send text messages to consumers from whom they have obtained prior express consent to continue practice of sending a final, one-time text to confirm receipt of a consumer's opt-out request).

141 Gager v. Dell Fin. Services, L.L.C., 727 F.3d 265, 273–274 (3d Cir. 2013).

142 Id. at 274. Accord, Singer v. Las Vegas Athletic Clubs, 376 F. Supp. 3d 1062, 1072 (D. Nev. 2019); Few v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2018 WL 5923765 (N.D. Ala. Nov. 13, 2018) (contractual consent can be revoked, though contract can restrict the means of revocation; probably overruled by Medley v. Dish Network, L.L.C., 958 F.3d 1063 (11th Cir. 2020)); Ammons v. Ally Fin., Inc., 326 F. Supp. 3d 578, 592–595 (M.D. Tenn. 2018) (detailed analysis); Tillman v. Hertz Corp., 2018 WL 4144674 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 29, 2018); Jara v. GC Services L.P., 2018 WL 2276635, at *3 (C.D. Cal. May 17, 2018) (consumers who consented to receive autodialed calls when they signed credit agreements have right to revoke that consent); Ginwright v. Exeter Fin. Corp., 280 F. Supp. 3d 674, 683 (D. Md. 2017) (rejecting argument that a prohibition on later revocation of consent can arise from a "boilerplate consent provision" in a contract); Cartrette v. Time Warner Cable, Inc., 157 F. Supp. 3d 448 (E.D.N.C. 2016); Skinner v. Bluestem Brands, Inc., 2015 WL 4135269 (S.D. Miss. July 8, 2015) (rejecting argument that consumer who consented in the credit agreement to receive autodialed calls to her cell phone has no right to revoke that consent); Berg v. Verizon Wireless, 2013 WL 8446598 (W.D. Wis. June 21, 2013) (rejecting argument that consumer cannot revoke consent because her consent to receive autodialed calls was part of the consideration for the original transaction; "Nothing in this broad language suggests that consumers who consent initially in the context of a contractual relationship should be treated differently under the statute."). See also Self Forbes v. Advanced Call Ctr. Techs., L.L.C., 754 Fed. Appx. 520 (9th Cir. 2018) (consumer who had consented to receive calls when she opened her credit card account had the right to revoke consent); Patterson v. Ally Fin., Inc., 2018 WL 647438 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 31, 2018) (creditor cannot by contract limit consumer to written revocation of consent; probably overruled by Medley v. Dish Network, L.L.C., 958 F.3d 1063 (11th Cir. 2020)).

143 Skinner v. Bluestem Brands, Inc., 2015 WL 4135269, at *3 (S.D. Miss. July 8, 2015).

144 Medley v. Dish Network, L.L.C., 958 F.3d 1063 (11th Cir. 2020).

145 Lucoff v. Navient Solutions, L.L.C., 393 F. Supp. 3d 1119 (S.D. Fla. 2019) (interpreting class action settlement—which provided that, if class member did not fully and accurately complete a revocation form, "the request for a revocation will be invalid"—to bar consumer who did not complete a revocation form from ever revoking consent), aff'd on other grounds, 981 F.3d 1299 (11th Cir. 2020) (holding that consumer re-consented); Few v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., 2018 WL 3772863 (N.D. Ala. Aug. 9, 2018); Harris v. Navient Solutions, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3748155 (D. Conn. Aug. 7, 2018) (following Reyes, which is binding circuit precedent for this court); Barton v. Credit One Fin., 2018 WL 2012876 (N.D. Ohio Apr. 30, 2018) (following Reyes). See also Rodriguez v. Student Assistance Corp., 2017 WL 11050423 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 6, 2017) (by accepting compensation as part of class action settlement instead of submitting a revocation request that, according to settlement, would have revoked caller's ability to robocall plaintiff's cell phone, consumer became contractually bound to receive robocalls and cannot unilaterally revoke that consent).

146 Reyes v. Lincoln Auto. Fin. Services, 861 F.3d 51 (2d Cir. 2017).

the FCC's broad 2015 ruling that, "[w]here the consumer gives prior express consent, the consumer may also revoke that consent."[147] The D.C. Circuit's 2018 decision upholding this ruling strengthens the conclusion that consent obtained as a contract term can be revoked. The decision states: "It is undisputed that consumers who have consented to receiving calls otherwise forbidden by the TCPA are entitled to revoke their consent."[148] Like the FCC's 2015 order, this statement is unambiguous and without qualifications or conditions, so it is further support for the view that a consumer has the right to revoke consent even if consent was provided as part of a contract. Several district courts have explicitly declined to follow the Second Circuit's decision, noting its inconsistency with the FCC's ruling.[149]

If there is a clause that purports to limit the consumer's right to revoke consent, it should be construed against the drafter.[150] A district court decision held that a clause in a credit card agreement by which the consumer agreed to accept autodialed and prerecorded calls, but that was silent about the right to revoke this consent, could not be construed as a waiver of the right to revoke.[151] Where the parties' contract contains an integration clause, a consent provision that was in an earlier credit application will not be part of the consumer's contract with the creditor.[152]

14.3.2.5.7 Partial revocation of consent

A 2017 Eleventh Circuit decision holds that, just as a consumer can provide limited consent to receive robocalls, a consumer can also revoke consent partially.[153] In the case before it, the consumer had attempted to revoke consent to receive debt collection calls during her working hours. The court held that she had the right to do so and remanded for a jury determination of whether her instructions to the creditor were clear enough. The court noted that the creditor had indicated it was technologically feasible (although perhaps more expensive) to program its software to place calls to a consumer only at certain times, and that the creditor was always free to decide just to stop calling if this made more practical and business sense.

147 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Telephone Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, No. 02-278, Report & Order, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶ 62 (F.C.C. July 10, 2015). See Ginwright v. Exeter Fin. Corp., 280 F. Supp. 3d 674, 683 (D. Md. 2017) (declining to follow Reyes; noting its inconsistency with FCC's ruling).

148 ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687, 708 (D.C. Cir. 2018).

149 Thompson-Harbach v. USAA Fed. Sav. Bank, 2019 WL 148711 (N.D. Iowa Jan. 9, 2019) (disagreeing with Reyes; parties cannot preclude revocation of consent by contract, although they can specify a reasonable means of doing so); Ammons v. Ally Fin., Inc., 326 F. Supp. 3d 578, 592–593 (M.D. Tenn. 2018) (detailed analysis); Ginwright v. Exeter Fin. Corp., 280 F. Supp. 3d 674, 683 (D. Md. 2017).

150 See Thompson-Harbach v. USAA Fed. Sav. Bank, 2019 WL 148711 (N.D. Iowa Jan. 9, 2019) (construing contractual provision about the manner of revoking consent against the drafter).

151 Rodriguez v. Premier Bankcard, L.L.C., 2018 WL 4184742, at *7–10 (N.D. Ohio Aug. 31, 2018).

152 See Ginwright v. Exeter Fin. Co., 280 F. Supp. 3d 674, 683–684 (D. Md. 2017).

153 Schweitzer v. Comenity Bank, 866 F.3d 1273 (11th Cir. 2017).

14.3.2.6 Numerical Restrictions on Prerecorded Debt Collection Calls to Residential Lines

The TCPA prohibits placing a call that uses an artificial or prerecorded voice to a residential telephone line.[154] What constitutes a prerecorded or artificial voice call is discussed in § 14.3.2.4, supra.

Because of a series of exceptions, this prohibition applies primarily to telemarketing calls,[155] and does not apply to debt collection calls to residential lines.[156] One case has held that prerecorded debt collection calls erroneously directed to a non-debtor's landline violated the TCPA,[157] but the prevailing view is that all debt collection calls to a landline are exempt.[158]

However, the 2019 TRACED Act[159] requires the FCC to place limits on the number of calls that can be made pursuant 154 47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(1)(B); 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(a)(3). See Zarder v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2014 WL 12594194 (W.D. Tex. Jan. 7, 2014) (fact question whether internet phone plan, which allowed access anywhere that subscriber had access to internet, is a "residential line").

155 See § 6.4.2, infra.

156 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(a)(3)(iii), (f)(12). See Shupe v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 671 Fed. Appx. 419 (9th Cir. 2016); Larsen v. AR Res., Inc., 2020 WL 1893850 (E.D. Va. Jan. 13, 2020) (recommending summary judgment for defendant), granting of summary judgment noted by 453 F. Supp. 3d 849, 851 (E.D. Va. 2020); Schlattmann v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2017 WL 9883338 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 17, 2017); Vandiver v. Glob. Credit & Collection Corp., 2015 WL 11108884 (E.D. Ark. Mar. 30, 2015); Rantz-Kennedy v. Discover Fin. Services, 2013 WL 3167912 (D. Md. June 20, 2013), aff'd, 544 Fed. Appx. 183 (4th Cir. 2013); Zehala v. Am. Express, 2011 WL 4484297 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 26, 2011) (prohibition against artificial voice calls to residential lines is inapplicable to debt collection calls); Bentley v. Bank of Am., 773 F. Supp. 2d 1367 (S.D. Fla. 2011) (established business relationship exception allows artificial voice debt collection calls to residential lines). See also In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 23 F.C.C. Rcd. 559 (F.C.C. Jan. 4, 2008).

157 Watson v. NCO Group, Inc., 462 F Supp. 2d 641 (E.D. Pa. 2006) (holding that debt collection calls to non-debtors do not fall within now-repealed exception for calls to party with whom caller has preexisting business relationship, but also noting that FCC's authority to adopt any exceptions to prohibition, including those that still exist, is limited to calls that will not adversely affect privacy rights, and that collection calls to non-debtor are invasion of privacy, so cannot be exempted pursuant to this authority).

158 Meadows v. Franklin Collection Serv., 414 Fed. Appx. 230 (11th Cir. 2011); Herrera v. AllianceOne Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 170 F. Supp. 3d 1282 (S.D. Cal. 2016); Hoover v. Monarch Recovery Mgmt., Inc., 888 F. Supp. 2d 589 (E.D. Pa. 2012) (prerecorded voice calls to land line are exempt if for debt collection purposes, even if called party is non-debtor, except possibly when invasion of privacy is extreme); Franasiak v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 822 F. Supp. 2d 320 (W.D.N.Y. 2011) (artificial voice calls to non-debtor's residential telephone line did not violate TCPA because purpose was debt collection); Spencer v. Ariz. Premium Fin. Co., 2011 WL 4473178 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 26, 2011) (artificial voice collection call to non-debtor falls within exception for calls for commercial purposes that do not include unsolicited advertisements or amount to telephone solicitations); Anderson v. AFNI, No. 2011 WL 1808779 (E.D. Pa. May 11, 2011) (artificial voice calls to non-debtor's land line are exempt if for debt collection purposes); Santino v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2011 WL 754874 (W.D.N.Y. Feb. 24, 2011).

159 Pallone-Thune Telephone Robocall Abuse Criminal Enforcement and Deterrence (TRACED) Act, Pub. L. No. 116-105, § 10(a), 133 Stat. 3274 (Dec. 30, 2019).

to these exemptions. At the end of 2020, the FCC announced a final rule that will limit these calls to three per month.[160] In addition, the caller must provide an automated, interactive voice- and/or key press-activated opt-out mechanism for the called person to make a do-not-call request,[161] and honor any such request.[162] As of mid-2021, this rule had not yet gone into effect, but was awaiting approval by the Office of Management and Budget.[163] In addition, a petition to amend the rule was pending before the FCC.[164]

Once the new rule goes into effect, TCPA remedies will be available for prerecorded or artificial voice debt collection calls that exceed three per month, and for any that are made after a do-not-call request. While the FDCPA also allows consumers to require debt collectors to cease contacting them,[165] most courts have ruled that statutory damages are capped at $1000 per lawsuit, no matter how many wrongful calls the collector made.[166] By contrast, the TCPA allows a separate statutory damage award for each violation.[167] In addition, the FDCPA itself does not provide a numerical cap on the number of calls that a collector can make, and rules published by the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau in 2020 would create a presumption that seven attempted calls per week or one telephone conversation every seven days is not an FDCPA violation.[168] The FCC's rule is an important limitation, in that it means that only three calls per month can be prerecorded or leave prerecorded messages.

14.3.2.7 Burden of Proof Regarding Exceptions

The general rule under the TCPA is that the person making the call has the burden of demonstrating that it falls within an exception to one of the TCPA's prohibitions.[169] Accordingly, the caller has the burden of establishing that it had the prior express consent of the called party to make an autodialed or an artificial or prerecorded call to a cell phone.[170] This is consistent with the general rule that the party claiming the benefit of an exception in a federal statute has the burden of coming forward with at least some evidence of the applicability of the exception.[171]

14.3.2.8 TCPA Remedies

14.3.2.8.1 Private cause of action; relief

The TCPA offers an express private cause of action for actual monetary loss or $500 damages for each violation, whichever is greater.[172] The statutory damage award can be trebled if the court finds that the defendant willfully or knowingly violated the statute or regulations.[173] Since debt collectors who make illegal calls to a debtor's cell phone usually make a series of such calls, the TCPA offers the possibility of a significant award even if actual damages are minimal. The TCPA does not provide for attorney fees, however.[174]

14.3.2.8.2 Who may sue

Generally, courts permit both the subscriber to sue, as well as the person who carries and regularly uses a cell phone, even though that person is not the subscriber.[175] Thus, the person who carries and regularly uses a cell phone may sue, even if someone else is the subscriber.[176] The owner of a cell phone also has standing to sue for calls made while the phone was in the possession of an investigator hired by the owner's attorney.[177] A non-debtor who receives an autodialed or 160 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 2020 WL 7873750 (F.C.C. Dec. 30, 2020) (creating 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(a)(3)(iii)).

161 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(b)(3).

162 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(a)(3)(iii).

163 See In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 2020 WL 7873750, ¶ 42 (F.C.C. Dec. 30, 2020) (providing that rule will go into effect six months after OMB approval is published in the Federal Register).

164 Federal Communications Commission, Petition for Reconsideration of Action in Proceedings, 85 Fed. Reg. 18,934 (Apr. 12, 2021).

165 See § 5.10, supra.

166 See § 11.9.8.3, supra.

167 See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.12.2 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

168 CFPB, Final rule, 85 Fed. Reg. 76734 (Nov. 30, 2020) (publishing 12 C.F.R. § 1006.14(a)(2).

169 See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.11.5 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

170 In re Rules & Regulations Implementing the TCPA of 1991, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 7961, at ¶¶ 13, 47, 58, 70, 85 (F.C.C. 2015), appeal resolved, ACA Int'l v. Fed. Commc'ns Comm'n, 885 F.3d 687 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (setting aside two parts of 2015 declaratory ruling, but leaving this portion undisturbed); In re Rules and Regulations Implementing the Tel. Consumer Prot. Act of 1991, 27 F.C.C. Rcd. 1830, n.68 (F.C.C. 2012) (in dispute, telemarketer has burden to prove that consumer gave written consent for call); Breda v. Cellco P'ship, 934 F.3d 1, 5 n.4 (1st Cir. 2019); Daubert v. NRA Grp., L.L.C., 861 F.3d 382, 390 (3d Cir. 2017); Van Patten v. Vertical Fitness Grp., 847 F.3d 1037 (9th Cir. 2017); Murphy v. DCI Biologicals Orlando, L.L.C., 797 F.3d 1302, 1304–1305 (11th Cir. 2015).

171 Meacham v. Knolls Atomic Power Lab., 554 U.S. 84, 128 S. Ct. 2395, 2400, 171 L. Ed. 2d 283 (2008) ("The burden of proving justification or exemption under a special exception to the prohibitions of a statute generally rests on one who claims its benefits."); FTC v. Morton Salt Co., 334 U.S. 37, 44–45, 68 S. Ct. 822, 92 L. Ed. 1196 (1948).

172 47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(3). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.9 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

173 47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(3). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.12.3 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (interpretation of requirement of willfulness or knowledge).

174 See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.12.4 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

175 Osorio v. State Farm Bank, 746 F.3d 1242 (11th Cir. 2014); Soppet v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 679 F.3d 637, 640 (7th Cir. 2012). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.3.6 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

176 Fini v. Dish Network, L.L.C., 955 F. Supp. 2d 1288 (M.D. Fla. 2013); Swope v. Credit Mgmt., L.P., 2013 WL 607830 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 19, 2013); Page v. Regions Bank, 917 F. Supp. 2d 1214 (N.D. Ala. 2012); Cellco P'ship v. Wilcrest Health Care Mgmt., 2012 WL 1638056 (D.N.J. May 8, 2012); D.G. v. William W. Siegel & Assoc., 791 F. Supp. 2d 622 (N.D. Ill. 2011).

177 Moore v. Dish Network L.L.C., 57 F. Supp. 3d 639, 648–650 (N.D. W. Va. 2014).

prerecorded cell phone call also has standing to bring a TCPA claim.[178] Someone who casually picks up the phone of another is probably not entitled to sue, however.[179]

14.3.2.9 Litigation Issues

14.3.2.9.1 Jurisdiction and class actions

State and federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction over TCPA suits.[180] Many courts have generally declined to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over defendants' counterclaims against TCPA plaintiffs to collect on the underlying debt.[181] One of the reasons that courts often cite is that exercising jurisdiction over these counterclaims would contradict federal policy concerns against automated telephone calls.[182] However, this view is not universal, and a number of courts have accepted jurisdiction over the defendant's counterclaim on the debt.[183]

TCPA cases are often appropriate for class certification.[184] The Second Circuit has held that a state law prohibiting class actions for statutory damages cannot be applied to a TCPA case in federal court.[185]

178 See, e.g., Osorio v. State Farm Bank, 746 F.3d 1242 (11th Cir. 2014); Soppet v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 679 F.3d 637, 640 (7th Cir. 2012). See generally § 14.3.2.5, supra.

179 Leyse v. Bank of Am., 2010 WL 2382400 (S.D.N.Y. June 14, 2010) (roommate who picked up phone of telephone subscriber to whom call was placed does not have right to sue). See Kopff v. World Research Group L.L.C., 568 F. Supp. 2d 39 (D.D.C. 2008) (administrative assistant who picks up fax addressed to business does not have claim; business has claim).

180 Mims v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., ___ U.S. ___, 132 S. Ct. 740, 745, 181 L. Ed. 2d 881 (2012). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.11.1 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (more detailed discussion of jurisdiction).

181 Slaughter v. Reg'l Acceptance Corp., 2020 WL 7342898 (S.D. Ohio Dec. 14, 2020) (concluding that claims are sufficiently related, but declining supplemental jurisdiction because evidence for two claims will be different, and there will not be significant gains in economy or efficiency); Castillo v. J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, 2020 WL 496072 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 30, 2020); Ensz v. Chase Bank, 2019 WL 136982 (N.D. Iowa Jan. 7, 2019); Ammons v. Ally Fin., Inc., 305 F. Supp. 3d 818 (M.D. Tenn. 2018); Haire v. Tampa Truck Driving Sch., Inc., 2018 WL 2763305 (M.D. Fla. June 8, 2018); Tilley v. Ally Fin., Inc., 2018 WL 1535413 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 29, 2018); Watkins v. Synchrony Bank, 2015 WL 5178134 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 4, 2015); Ayres v. Nat'l Mgmt. Corp., 1991 WL 66845 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 25, 1991). See also France v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 2018 WL 1695405 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 6, 2018) (TCPA claim regarding collection calls for mortgage debt does not arise out of same operative facts as foreclosure, so was not compulsory counterclaim in creditor's prior state court foreclosure case). See generally Brief in Support of Plaintiff's Motion to Dismiss Counterclaim (sample brief), available online as companion material to this treatise; National Consumer Law Center, Fair Debt Collection § 12.7 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library (similar issue in FDCPA litigation).

182 See, e.g., Ensz v. Chase Bank, 2019 WL 136982 (N.D. Iowa Jan. 7, 2019).

183 See, e.g., Nalan v. Access Fin., Inc., 2020 WL 6270945 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 23, 2020); Walker v. Westlake Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 3268523 (N.D. Ill. June 17, 2020) (accepting jurisdiction over counterclaim where debt arose from contract about which defendant made collection calls, and the contract contains a clause consenting to collection robocalls); Dotson v. Ally Fin. Inc., 2019 WL 5847848 (W.D. Tenn. Nov. 7, 2019) (allowing counterclaim for underlying debt where contract included a clause agreeing to robocalls); Neria v. Dish Network, L.L.C., 2019 WL 8331600 (W.D. Tex. Oct. 28, 2019); Trupp v. Ally Fin., Inc., 2018 WL 2462777 (E.D. Pa. May 31, 2018) (finding counterclaim for debt to relate to underlying transaction that it is compulsory; accepting supplemental jurisdiction); Miller v. 3G Collect, L.L.C., 302 F.R.D. 333 (E.D. Pa. 2014) (counterclaim was compulsory); Horton v. Calvary Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 301 F.R.D. 547 (S.D. Cal. 2014) (counterclaim for breach of contract was compulsory).

184 See, e.g., Meyer v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 707 F.3d 1036 (9th Cir. 2012) (allowing provisional class certification and noting that respondent to TCPA suit failed to show that express consent was given prior to any of the calls being placed); Knapper v. Cox Commc'ns, Inc., 329 F. Supp. 3d 238 (D. Ariz. Feb. 6, 2019) (certifying class; plaintiffs' proposed methods of identifying consumers who received wrong number debt collection calls is sufficient); West v. Cal. Services Bur., Inc., 323 F.R.D 295 (N.D. Cal. 2017) (calls to wrong numbers can be identified on class-wide basis by using reverse number look-up service); Caldera v. Am. Med. Collection Agency, 320 F.R.D. 513 (C.D. Cal. 2017) (certifying class; person who is not intended recipient of call can represent class that includes intended recipients when claim is that defendant robocalled numbers based on skip-tracing rather than consent); McMillion v. Rash Curtis & Assoc., 2017 WL 3895764 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 6, 2017) (certifying class of persons whose telephone numbers were obtained by skip-tracing); Johnson v. Ally Fin., Inc., 2017 WL 3433689 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 10, 2017) (refusing to strike class action allegations; class consisting of all persons who received an autodialed call from defendant when defendant does not have business record of prior express consent is ascertainable and not a fail-safe class); Allard v. SCI Direct, Inc., 2017 WL 3236448 (M.D. Tenn. July 31, 2017); Johnson v. Navient Solutions, Inc., 315 F.R.D. 501 (S.D. Ind. 2016) (certifying class); Manno v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Group, L.L.C., 289 F.R.D. 674 (S.D. Fla. 2013); Lo v. Oxnard European Motors, L.L.C., 2012 WL 1932283 (S.D. Cal. May 29, 2012); Mitchem v. Illinois Collection Serv., 271 F.R.D. 617 (N.D. Ill. 2011); Balbarin v. N. Star Capital Acquisition, L.L.C., 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 686 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 5, 2011), later op. at 2011 WL 211013 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 21, 2011), later op. at 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 58761 (N.D. Ill. June 1, 2011). But cf. Lanteri v. Credit Prot. Ass'n L.P., 2018 WL 4625657 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 26, 2018) (certifying class of persons who continued to receive text messages after texting "STOP," but denying certification of class of debtors in bankruptcy who received debt collection text messages while automatic stay was in effect because of difficulty in identifying them); Selby v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6677928 (S.D. Cal. June 22, 2016) (individual fact questions regarding whether debtors gave prior express consent to receive collection calls preclude class certification); Balthazor v. Cent. Credit Services, 2012 WL 6725872, at *3–4 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 27, 2012) (question whether called parties had given prior express consent is individual issue that prevents class certification); Hicks v. Client Services, 2008 WL 5479111 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 11, 2008) (denying class certification of TCPA claim because of individual fact questions regarding express consumer consent to receive autodialed calls, but certifying class on FDCPA claim), later op. at 257 F.R.D. 699 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (denying motion to decertify FDCPA class and finding that class action is superior method of adjudicating FDCPA claims when individual claims would result in de minimis recoveries). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.12.5 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (more detailed discussion of TCPA class actions).

185 Bank v. Independence Energy Group L.L.C., 736 F.3d 660 (2d Cir. 2013). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.12.5 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

14.3.2.9.2 Article III standing

Any attorney bringing a TCPA case in federal court must be prepared to rebut a claim that the court lacks Article III standing over the claim. This section briefly discusses these issues, which are developed in detail in NCLC's Federal Deception Law.[186]

Article III, section 2, of the United States Constitution limits the judicial power of federal courts to cases and controversies. To qualify as a case or controversy, a plaintiff in federal court must have (1) suffered an injury in fact, (2) that is fairly traceable to the challenged conduct of the defendant, and (3) that is likely to be redressed by a favorable judicial decision.[187] To establish an injury in fact, a plaintiff must have suffered an invasion of a legally protected interest that is "concrete and particularized" and "actual or imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical."[188]

When the injury is intangible, the Supreme Court's 2016 decision in Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins[189] summarizes two approaches to meet the requirement of concreteness. First, courts should consider "whether an alleged intangible harm has a close relationship to a harm that has traditionally been regarded as providing a basis for a lawsuit in English or American courts."[190] As the Court noted, "the law has long permitted recovery by certain tort victims even if their harms may be difficult to prove or measure. See, e.g., Restatement (First) of Torts §§ 569 (libel), 570 (slander per se) (1938)."[191] Many decisions since Spokeo have applied this approach to hold that TCPA plaintiffs have Article III standing because the invasion of privacy caused by unwanted calls is closely related to the harm made actionable by the common law tort of invasion of privacy.[192] In 2021, the Supreme Court gave strong support to this conclusion in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, which specifically cites intrusion upon seclusion as a type of intangible harm that is concrete.[193] This decision provides strong support for the many lower court decisions holding that, because of the analogy to common law invasion of privacy claims, federal courts have Article III jurisdiction to hear claims that unwanted calls violate the TCPA.

Second, Spokeo holds that Congress may "elevat[e] to the status of legally cognizable injuries concrete, de facto injuries that were previously inadequate in law."[194] It "has the power to define injuries and articulate chains of causation that will give rise to a case or controversy where none existed before."[195] The Supreme Court's 2021 Ramirez decision throws into some confusion the question of how much weight courts should give to the judgment of Congress.[196] However, at a minimum it is clear that, where the harm is an invasion of privacy that is actionable at common law, the clear and unequivocal judgment of Congress that private suits should be allowed is strong additional support for the view that courts have Article III jurisdiction to hear such claims.

Unwanted calls also intrude upon and occupy the user's cell phone, which is closely analogous to the common law tort of trespass to chattels, and which Congress also identified as one of the harms the TCPA was intended to address.[197] They also cause nuisance, inconvenience, distraction, and waste of time, which Congress also identified as one of the reasons for the TCPA.[198]

The overwhelming majority of decisions since Spokeo have held that unwanted robocalls cause particularized and concrete harm, so a plaintiff asserting a TCPA claim has Article III standing.[199] However, the application of Spokeo and Ramirez is still being developed by the courts, and advocates should be prepared to plead and prove the concrete harms caused by any robocalls, and to brief the issue carefully.

14.3.2.9.3 Liability of creditors for debt collectors' violations; corporate officers and individuals

Creditors are liable for improper autodialed or prerecorded calls to cell phones by their debt collectors.[200] In a 2008

186 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.10 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

187 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

188 Id. 136 S. Ct. at 1540.

189 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

190 Id.

191 Id.

192 See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law §§ 6.10.3.2.1, 6.10.3.5 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

193 ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 210 L. Ed. 2d 568 (2021).

194 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016) (quoting Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 578, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992)).

195 Id. (quoting Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 580, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992) (J. Kennedy, concurring)).

196 See National Consumer Law Center, Practice Implications of June 25 Supreme Court Ramirez Decision (June 30, 2021), available at https://library.nclc.org.

197 See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.10.3.3 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

198 See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.10.3.4 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

199 See, e.g., Glasser v. Hilton Grand Vacations Co., L.L.C., 948 F.3d 1301, 1305–1306 (11th Cir. 2020) (receipt of more than one telemarketing call); Cordoba v. DirecTV, L.L.C., 942 F.3d 1259 (11th Cir. 2019) (receipt of more than one unwanted telemarketing call in violation of TCPA—here, the internal do-not-call list requirement—is concrete injury); Golan v. FreeEasts.com, 930 F.3d 950 (8th Cir. 2019) (plaintiffs who received two answering machine messages from telemarketer have standing); Krakauer v. Dish Network, L.L.C., 925 F.3d 643 (4th Cir. 2019); Melito v. Experian Mktg. Solutions, Inc., 923 F.3d 85, 93–94 (2d Cir. 2019) (receipt of unwanted text messages is concrete harm and no additional harm need be shown); Romero v. Dep't Stores Nat'l Bank, 725 Fed. Appx. 537 (9th Cir. 2018); Manuel v. NRA Grp. L.L.C., 722 Fed. Appx. 141 (3d Cir. 2018); Susinno v. Work Out World, Inc., 862 F.3d 346 (3d Cir. 2017); Van Patten v. Vertical Fitness Grp., 847 F.3d 1037 (9th Cir. 2017). But see Grigorian v. FCA US L.L.C., 838 Fed. Appx. 390 (11th Cir. 2020) (finding receipt of single ringless voicemail not to be concrete injury where it wasted plaintiff's time, but did not render her device unusable for any period of time; stating in note 27 that analysis might be different if she had received multiple voicemails); Salcedo v. Hanna, 936 F.3d 1162 (11th Cir. 2019) (concluding that consumer who received just single text message lacked standing; discussed in more detail in text of this subsection). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.10.3.5 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (additional decisions from lower courts).

200 See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.9.2 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

ruling, the FCC determined that: "[A] creditor on whose behalf an autodialed or prerecorded message call is made to a wireless number bears the responsibility for any violation of the Commission's rules. Calls placed by a third party collector on behalf of that creditor are treated as if the creditor itself placed the call."[201]

Even if the FCC had not issued this ruling, as a general rule creditors would still be liable based on common law agency principles for the TCPA violations of the debt collectors they hire.[202] A 2013 Declaratory Ruling by the FCC, while dealing only with telemarketers' TCPA violations, recognizes that it is appropriate to apply common law agency principles to hold parties vicariously liable under federal statutes, including the TCPA.[203] In a 2016 decision, the Supreme Court specifically approved of the FCC's position.[204]

The FCC did not address joint venture liability in its 2013 ruling. However, joint venture liability is entirely consistent with the common law agency principles it articulated in that ruling.[205] A parent company may be liable for the acts of its subsidiary if the parent company is so dominant that the subsidiary's corporate form is little more than a legal fiction.[206] Vicarious liability can also extend to subcontractors who hire entities that violate the TCPA.[207] On the other hand, some courts have concluded that aiding and abetting liability is not available as a general rule under federal statutes, including the TCPA.[208]

Many courts have also applied the general rule that corporate officers or other individuals can be liable if they personally participate in wrongful conduct.[209]

14.3.2.9.4 Statute of limitations and other defenses

Most courts have held that TCPA claims are governed by the general four-year statute of limitations for claims under federal statutes.[210] Since the statute of limitations for a TCPA claim is set by statute, laches is not a defense.[211]

201 In the Matter of Rules and Regulations Implementing the Telephone Consumer Protection Act of 1991, Request of ACA International for Clarification and Declaratory Ruling, CG Docket No. 02-278, FCC Release 07-232, 2008 WL 65485, at ¶ 10 (Jan. 4, 2008). See Beammert v. Credit One Bank, 271 F. Supp. 3d 1043 (W.D. Wis. 2017) (creditor is liable for debt collector's call even if consumer does not plead agency relationship); Harrington v. RoundPoint Mortg. Servicing Corp., 163 F. Supp. 3d 1240 (M.D. Fla. 2016) (deferring to FCC's ruling); Hartley-Culp v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 52 F. Supp. 3d 700 (M.D. Pa. 2014); Martin v. Cellco P'ship, 2012 WL 5048854 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 18, 2012) (rejecting Verizon's claim that "it cannot be held liable for automated dunning calls placed by Vantage and Chase to Plaintiff's cell phone," relying on the FCC ruling); In re The Joint Petition Filed by DISH Network, L.L.C., the United States of America, and the States of California, Illinois, North Carolina, and Ohio for Declaratory Ruling Concerning the Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA) Rules, F.C.C. 13-54, CG Docket No. 11-50, at ¶ 38 (F.C.C. May 9, 2013) (reiterating 2008 conclusion that creditors are liable for autodialed or prerecorded calls made on their behalf by collectors to wireless numbers). But see Petri v. Mercy Health, 2016 WL 7048893 (E.D. Mo. Dec. 5, 2016) (holding creditor not liable for debt collector's violations because collector was independent contractor; court appears to be unaware of FCC's 2008 ruling); Strauss v. CBE Grp., Inc., 173 F. Supp. 3d 1302 (S.D. Fla. 2016) (applying agency law to determine whether creditor is vicariously liable for collector's calls; court appears to be unaware of FCC's 2008 ruling).

202 See, e.g., Eldridge v. Cabela's Inc., 2017 WL 4364205 (W.D. Ky. Sept. 29, 2017) (applying agency principles to debt collection robocalls; finding allegations sufficient that retailer gave actual implied agency to bank that was wholly-owned subsidiary and that issued and collected on store credit cards; ratification also sufficiently alleged); Lawrence v. Am. Med. Collection Agency, 2015 WL 12762024 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 16, 2015) (applying common law agency principles to debt collection robocalls; fact question whether call center was debt collector's agent).

203 In the Matter of The Joint Petition Filed by DISH Network, L.L.C., the United States of America, and the States of California, Illinois, North Carolina, and Ohio for Declaratory Ruling Concerning the Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA) Rules, 2013 WL 1934349 (F.C.C. May 9, 2013).

204 Campbell-Ewald Co. v. Gomez, ___ U.S. ___, 136 S. Ct. 663, 193 L. Ed. 2d 571 (2016) ("[T]he Federal Communications Commission has ruled that, under federal common-law principles of agency, there is vicarious liability for TCPA violations." (citing In re Joint Petition Filed by Dish Network, L.L.C., 28 F.C.C. Rcd. 6574 (F.C.C. 2013)) "The Ninth Circuit deferred to that ruling, 768 F.3d, at 878, and we have no cause to question it.").

205 See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.9.2.7 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

206 See Zarichny v. Complete Payment Recovery Services, Inc., 80 F. Supp. 3d 610 (E.D. Pa. 2015) (articulating this test, but finding allegations insufficient; company not liable for autodialed prerecorded debt collection calls made by its debt collection subsidiary on behalf of a third party creditor).

207 See, e.g., Gomez v. Campbell-Ewald Co., 768 F.3d 871 (9th Cir. 2014) (third-party marketing consultant, here a government contractor, can be liable on agency principles if an entity to which it outsources the work violates the TCPA), aff'd, ___U.S. ___, 136 S. Ct. 663, 193 L. Ed. 2d 571 (2016).

208 Clark v. Avatar Technologies, 2014 WL 309079 (S.D. Tex. Jan. 28, 2014); Baltimore-Washington Tel. Co. v. Hot Leads Co., 584 F. Supp. 2d 736, 738 (D. Md. 2008). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.9.2.7 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

209 Jackson Five Star Catering, Inc. v. Beason, 2013 WL 5966340 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 8, 2013); Brennan v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 2012 WL 3888218 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 7, 2012); Baltimore-Washington Tel. Co. v. Hot Leads Co., 584 F. Supp. 2d 736 (D. Md. 2008) (dismissing civil conspiracy claim, but noting that individual officers could still be liable jointly and severally for violating TCPA's prohibition of "war dialing"); Texas v. Am. Blast Fax, Inc., 164 F. Supp. 2d 892 (W.D. Tex. 2001); Weber v. U.S. Sterling Sec., Inc., 924 A.2d 816 (Conn. 2007) (while principals of limited liability company cannot be held liable for junk faxes solely because of their position with the company, they can be held liable for their own wrongful acts); Covington & Burling v. Int'l Mktg. & Research, Inc., 2003 WL 21384825 (D.C. Super. Ct. Apr. 17, 2003), as amended on reconsideration by 2003 D.C. Super. LEXIS 28 (D.C. Super. Ct. May 17, 2003). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.9.2.7 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

210 28 U.S.C. § 1658(a). See, e.g., Bank v. Independence Energy Grp., L.L.C., 736 F.3d 660 (2d Cir. 2013). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.11.6 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

211 Suzanne Degnan, D.M.D., P.C. v. Dentis USA Corp., 2017 WL 2021085 (E.D. Mo. May 12, 2017).

Neither good faith, nor the maintenance of reasonable procedures to avoid violations, is a defense to a claim involving the TCPA's restrictions on robocalls.[212]

14.3.2.9.5 Other litigation issues

NCLC's Federal Deception Law[213] includes detailed discussion of other TCPA litigation issues, including:

- Pleading;[214]
- Investigation and discovery;[215]
- Arbitration clauses;[216]
- Evidence and trial issues;[217]
- Liability of federal contractors;[218]
- Recovery from the defendant's insurance policy;[219]
- Government enforcement;[220] and
- Parallel claims under state statutes.[221]

14.3.3 Caller ID and Debt Collection

14.3.3.1 Generally

Caller ID is a service that allows a subscriber to view the telephone numbers, including unlisted numbers, that are associated with incoming telephone calls.[222] Caller ID issues related to debt collection can arise in at least two different ways.

First, debt collectors when calling consumers or third parties may "spoof" or falsify caller ID information to encourage those called to answer the phone. Spoofing is widespread, and only specifically illegal under certain circumstances.

Second, debt collectors may use Caller ID to capture a consumer's phone number when the consumer initiates the call to the collector, even though the consumer does not want to disclose the calling number to the collector. The collector then turns around and contacts that consumer on that number.

This section addresses both of these situations. It examines FDCPA and Truth in Caller ID Act claims for a debt collector's spoofing. It also provides advice for consumers about the risks of debt collectors using Caller ID to capture the consumer's phone number when the consumer calls the collector, even when the consumer uses call blocking.

14.3.3.2 Spoofing and The Truth in Caller ID Act

The Truth in Caller ID Act of 2009[223] amended the Telephone Consumer Protection Act to make it unlawful for any person to transmit misleading or inaccurate caller ID information with the intent to defraud, cause harm, or wrongfully obtain anything of value. The FCC has adopted Truth in Caller ID Act regulations,[224] which closely follow the requirements of the Act itself.

The Truth in Caller ID Act is an attempt to prevent spoofing (that is, the falsification of caller ID information), address fraudulent phone calls, credit card fraud, and identity theft, and protect legitimate use of caller ID.[225] Violations center upon whether the person or entity transmitting or displaying the incorrect caller identification information had ill intent or meant to cause harm.[226] Harm is to be broadly construed to include financial, physical, and emotional harm, and harassment.[227]

The Act's prohibitions apply to "any person within the United States,"[228] so there can be no question that the Act applies to third-party debt collectors, debt buyers, creditors, and any other individual who may manipulate caller ID information. Exemptions are limited to authorized actions of law enforcement agencies, including protective and intelligence activities, and court orders.[229]

The Act provides that violators are subject to civil forfeiture penalties, fines, and imprisonment.[230] States can bring actions as parens patriae for their residents to enforce the statute.[231] The Act does not provide for a private cause of action against the party that manipulates caller ID information,[232] and cases

212 Berman v. Freedom Fin. Network, 400 F. Supp. 3d 964, 979 (N.D. Cal. 2019) (good faith is not defense); Denova v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1832901, at *5–6 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 25, 2018) (these are not defenses to claim of violation of § 227(b)); O'Shea v. Am. Solar Sol., Inc., 2016 WL 11620998 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 7, 2016).

213 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.11.3 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

214 Id.

215 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.11.5 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

216 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.11.2 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

217 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.11.5a (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

218 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.9.2.8 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

219 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.11.7 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

220 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.13 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

221 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.12.6 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

222 Nat'l Ass'n of Consumer Agency Administrators, Caller ID: Whose Privacy Needs Protection?, 43 NACAA News 1 (Mar. 1990).

223 47 U.S.C. § 227(e).

224 47 C.F.R. § 64.1604, added by 76 Fed. Reg. 43,196 (July 20, 2011).

225 See 156 Cong. Rec. H8376, H378 (Dec. 15, 2010). See also Teltech Sys., Inc. v. Bryant, 702 F.3d 232 (5th Cir. 2012) (holding that Truth in Caller ID Act pre-empts Mississippi's similar but more protective state statute, which would outlaw "nonharmful" spoofing, because Congress intended to protect legitimate spoofing practices that could be beneficial, not harmful).

226 Implementation of the Truth in Caller ID Act, 76 Fed. Reg. 43,196, at ¶ 5 (July 20, 2011).

227 76 Fed. Reg. 43,196 at ¶ 10 (July 20, 2011).

228 47 U.S.C. § 227(e)(1).

229 76 Fed. Reg. 43,196 at ¶¶ 11–12 (July 20, 2011).

230 47 U.S.C.§ 227(e)(5).

231 47 U.S.C. § 227(e)(6)(A).

232 See Dobronski v. Selectquote Ins. Services, 462 F. Supp. 3d 784 (E.D. Mich. 2020) (no private cause of action for caller ID spoofing); McDermet v. John C. Heath, Attorney at Law, P.L.L.C., 2018 WL 627371 (D. Mass. Jan. 30, 2018) (no private cause of action for caller ID spoofing in violation of Truth in Caller ID Act); Meyer v. Capital All. Grp., 2017 WL 5138316 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 6, 2017) (finding no private claiming violations under the FDCPA for misleading caller-ID information have been mixed.[233]

One weakness in the Truth in Caller ID Act protections is that debt collectors—and many other industry callers—typically purchase the right to display thousands of telephone numbers in their caller-ID. This practice allows a caller to place a call from a call center in one state, but manipulate the caller-ID that appears on the consumer's telephone as a local number, thus making it appear that the number is from someone in the consumer's neighborhood.[234] As the caller actually owns the telephone number which appears on the consumer's caller-ID, the callers are generally successful when they argue that there is no deception involved.[235]

14.3.3.3 FDCPA and Other Claims for Falsifying Caller ID Information

Section 1692d(6) of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA) prohibits "the placement of telephone calls without meaningful disclosure of the caller's identity." Meaningful disclosure has been defined as including the caller's name, the collection company's name, and the nature of the caller's business.[236] A federal court found a FDCPA § 1692d(6) violation where the debt collector transmitted the name "Jennifer Smith" to the recipient's caller ID device to lure the recipient to answer the phone, where no Jennifer Smith worked for the debt collector.[237] Other courts have also found that the deliberate display of an incorrect name on the caller-ID violates this section.[238]

On the other hand, several courts have found no violation where the collector merely blocked any information from displaying on the consumer's caller ID device.[239] These courts require for a violation that the caller ID information be false instead of just blank, as long as the collector later properly identifies itself once the consumer answers the phone. The converse may not be true: a debt collector cannot avoid identifying itself when the consumer answers the phone even if the caller ID information identified the collector.[240] Federal courts have also found no FDCPA violation where the collector caused local numbers to be displayed on the consumer's caller-ID, even though the collector was not calling from a local place.[241] However, at least one court has held that an allegation that a caller deliberately making phone calls that circumvent call-blocking devices and transmit misleading or inaccurate caller information to make it appear that the call originates locally states a claim under the state UDAP statute.[242] The case involved a company that was using UDAP statutes may also provide an avenue to hold a company liable for selling a Caller ID spoofing program to a caller who uses it to make abusive calls, although the First Circuit has rejected such a claim.[243]

14.3.3.4 Consumers' Ability to Keep Their Phone Numbers Private Caller ID technology is particularly troublesome for consumers who wish to preserve the privacy of their telephone numbers and locations. Consumers may wish to keep their phone numbers private from creditors and collection agencies cause of action to enforce § 64.1601(e)); Free Conferencing Corp. v. Comcast Corp., 2016 WL 7637664 (C.D. Cal. May 31, 2016) (finding no private cause of action to enforce Truth in Caller ID Act); Clark v. Avatar Techs. Phl, Inc., 2014 WL 1342033, at *3 (S.D. Tex. Apr. 3, 2014) (finding no private right of action to enforce TCIA; only United States can exact forfeiture penalty). See also National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.6.5 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

233 See § 14.3.3.3, infra.

234 How Caller ID Works: Common Questions and Answers, https://www.onsip.com; What Is Caller ID And How Does It Work?, https://calleridreputation.com.

235 Bien v. Stellar Recovery, Inc., 2015 WL 5554670, at *2–3 (D.R.I. Sept. 21, 2015) (dismissing claim against collector after its calls used Rhode Island area code to be displayed on consumer's caller-ID when call was not actually initiated within Rhode Island); Scheffler v. Integrity Fin. Partners, Inc., 2013 WL 9768539, at *4 (D. Minn. Oct. 28, 2013), Elliott v. GC Services, L.P., 2011 WL 5975671, at *3 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 28, 2011) (granting summary judgment motion for defendant on § 1692e(10) claim because there was no FDCPA violation when debt collector allowed its own "800" phone number to appear on consumer's caller-ID, even though that was not number from which collector placed call); Carman v. CBE Grp., Inc., 782 F. Supp. 2d 1223, 1233–1234 (D. Kan. 2011) ("Although plaintiff complains that her caller ID did not reveal CBE's identity or name, there is no evidence that CBE blocked this information or made any attempt to deceive her. In this case, the only information conveyed on plaintiff's caller ID display was CBE's phone numbers, which were entirely accurate.").

236 Wood v. GC Services, L.P., 2012 WL 987761 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 26, 2012), adopted in relevant part, rejected in part on other grounds by 2012 WL 995207 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 23, 2012).

237 Knoll v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 502 F. Supp. 2d 943 (D. Minn. 2007).

238 Sohns v. Bramacint, L.L.C., 2010 WL 3926264, at *3 (D. Minn. Oct. 1, 2010) (debt collector liable for violations of §§ 1692d through 1692f for displaying name of consumer's mother-in-law on caller-ID).

239 See Genaw v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2013 WL 1876792, at *2 (N.D. Tex. May 6, 2013); Glover v. Client Services, Inc., 2007 WL 2902209, at *3 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 2, 2007) (granting motion to dismiss; debt collector did not violate FDCPA by blocking Caller ID, so that consumer's phone display stated that caller's identity was "not available"). Cf. Udell v. Kansas Counselors, Inc., 313 F. Supp. 2d 1135, 1143 (D. Kan. 2004) (if the debt collector used some form of caller identification blocking device, there might be violation of FDCPA).

240 See Tedeschi v. Kasen Credit Corp., 2014 WL 1491173, at *5 (D. Conn. Apr. 15, 2014) (debtor's testimony that collector refused to identify herself, although he saw KCC's telephone number on his telephone caller ID, will establish violation of § 1692d(6) if believed by jury).

241 Bermudez v. Diversified Consultants Inc., 2019 WL 415569 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 1, 2019) (dismissing consumer's case because § 1692e manifests intent of Congress to protect consumers from being misled about nature of who debt collector on phone is, not merely where that debt collector is calling from); Mendoza v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 2019 WL 2524117, at *5 (E.D. Pa. June 18, 2019) (defendant was not providing false information in violation of FDCPA when it used telephone numbers with plaintiff's area code to contact plaintiff).

242 Spiegel v. Carlson, 2016 WL 5477529, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 29, 2016) (denying defendant's motion for judgment on pleadings).

243 Walsh v. TelTech Sys., Inc., 821 F.3d 155, 157 (1st Cir. 2016) (no claim is available under Massachusetts UDAP against supplier of prepaid minutes-based calling service, named SpoofCard, that allows customers to disguise phone number from which they place calls).

to avoid repeated or harassing phone calls. Such consumers may unwittingly give debt collectors their telephone numbers by simply calling the collector from a phone without a caller ID block.

FCC regulations require interstate carriers to give calling parties a free, uniform method of blocking caller ID.[244] With "per-call blocking," a caller who wishes to conceal their number dials *67 before dialing the recipient's phone number. FCC rules require interstate carriers to advise customers of this option and to honor the request for privacy.[245]

Under the per-call blocking option, *67 must be dialed before each call to activate the blocking of the caller's name or number. Telephone companies may also offer "per-line blocking," which prevents the caller's number from appearing on caller ID devices for every call made from a particular phone line.[246] If a caller with per-line blocking wishes to share their calling number or name with a call recipient, *82 should be dialed before each such call.

Consumers should contact their local telephone company or state utility commission[247] for current information regarding caller ID and line blocking. While wireless phone service rates generally cannot be regulated by state commissions, aspects of per-call blocking and per-line blocking not addressed by the FCC may be considered "services" left to regulation by the states.[248]

Call blocking is not foolproof; there are ways in which the debt collector can "unmask" the number from which a consumer has called, even if the consumer opts to block caller ID. The FCC has noted its concern with the practice of unmasking caller ID numbers which have been blocked, but has declined to rule on this issue due to lack of support in the record.[249]

Consumers also should be aware of another major loophole regarding their ability to mask their phone numbers. Unlisted numbers, line blocking, or *67 will not protect the privacy of callers who dial an 800, 888, 887, 866, or 855 number.[250] These three-digit codes indicate that the number is toll-free to the caller: the called party pays for the call. Carriers may provide the telephone number of the caller to the toll-free number subscriber for billing purposes, a service known as automatic number identification (ANI).[251]

FCC rules require carriers offering ANI to restrict, by contract or tariff, their ANI customers' re-use or sale of the numbers, but the scope of the restriction is not clear.[252] Callers' phone numbers may be used by ANI customers (the call recipients) to perform "services that are the subject of the originating telephone subscribers' call" or "transactions" or to make an offer of a product or service "directly related to" the products or services which the calling-party has previously obtained from the called-party.[253]

A service that Western Union set up by which collection agencies and creditors could capitalize on this privacy loophole has been held to amount to debt collection, subjecting Western Union to the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act.[254] Under its scheme, Western Union sent a message asking the consumer to call it. Then, Western Union used caller ID technology to obtain the consumer's unlisted telephone number for its client, the collection agency or creditor. The Ninth Circuit agreed with FTC staff that the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act applied to this activity, which amounted to an indirect attempt to collect a debt.[255] The court also noted Western Union's probable violation of the Federal Communications Commission regulations governing automatic number identification.[256]

Consumers who wish to preserve the privacy of their personal phone numbers should use a phone other than their personal phone for calls to creditors' toll-free numbers. If a consumer's call to a creditor or collector's toll-free number is followed by dunning phone calls to the consumer's unpublished number, the consumer's attorney should consider whether the 246 See, e.g., 66 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 2906(b) (no charge permitted for per-call blocking and charge may be approved for per-line blocking in certain conditions by state utility commission); 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 26.123(b) (free per-call blocking and free line-blocking in certain circumstances).

244 47 C.F.R. §§ 64.1600 to 64.1603.

245 47 C.F.R. §§ 64.1601, 64.1603.

247 The website for the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners has a link to the state utility commissions' websites at www.naruc.org.

248 47 U.S.C. § 332(c)(3) (generally prohibiting states from regulating wireless rates, but without prohibiting regulation of other terms and conditions of service); 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 26.123 (Texas caller ID regulations apply to wireless, except for requirement of free blocking service).

249 76 Fed. Reg. 43,196 at ¶ 32 (July 20, 2011) (leaving issue of caller ID unmasking open for possible future rulemaking).

250 See 47 C.F.R. § 64.1602(a)(1), 64.1602(a)(2) (person subscribing to ANI services can use the interstate call's telephone number in a number of ways).

251 47 C.F.R. § 64.1600 (defining ANI as "refer[ring] to the delivery of the calling party's billing number by a local exchange carrier to any interconnecting carrier for billing or routing purposes, and to the subsequent delivery of such number to end users").

252 47 C.F.R. § 64.1602.

253 47 C.F.R. §§ 64.1602(a)(1), 64.1602(b)(2).

254 Romine v. Diversified Collection Services, Inc., 155 F.3d 1142 (9th Cir. 1998). Accord Udis v. Universal Communications Co., 56 P.3d 1177 (Colo. Ct. App. 2002) (business that sent telegram-like messages to individuals so that it could capture phone numbers, without consumers' knowledge or consent, when special number was dialed to retrieve a message, was collection agency under state fair debt collection law). But see Lockemy v. Comprehensive Collection Services, Inc., 1998 WL 832655 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 20, 1998) (distinguishing Romine; defendant not debt collector when it did not request debtors receiving its "Priority Gram" to contact it and did not obtain information from debtors).

255 LeVine, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 20, 1998) ("Telewire Electronic Message" sent to consumer-debtors serves collection function); Stanley, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Sept. 13, 1996) ("Telegram Notification" sent to consumer-debtors serves collection function). See also Bergstrom, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 17, 1995) (to extent that letter which proposes to obtain alleged debtors' telephone numbers to pass on to collection agencies serves collection function, albeit indirectly, company sending letter would be covered by FDCPA); §§ 1.5, 4.7.3, supra.

256 Romine v. Diversified Collection Services, Inc., 155 F.3d 1142, 1148–1149 (9th Cir. 1998).

creditor, collector, or telephone company has violated the FCC rules governing automatic number identification.[257]

14.3.4 Protection from Electronic Messaging Harassment

The Controlling the Assault of Non-Solicited Pornography and Marketing Act (CAN-SPAM Act)[258] prohibits materially false or materially misleading headers in certain email messages."[259] It requires the sender of an unsolicited commercial email message to provide consumers a way to opt out of future messages.[260] CAN-SPAM also authorizes the FCC to adopt rules to protect consumers from unwanted "mobile service commercial messages,"[261] and an FCC CAN-SPAM rule restricts messages sent to wireless devices without express prior authorization.[262]

These provisions, though, have little relevance to debt collectors. The CAN-SPAM Act provides a private right of action for Internet service providers, but not for consumers, for violation of these provisions.[263]

Just as significant, CAN-SPAM applies only to "commercial electronic mail messages." The FTC has indicated[264] that emails from third-party debt collectors are likely to be "transactional or relationship messages," which are specifically excluded from the definition of commercial electronic mail.[265] When it adopted its CAN-SPAM rule, the FCC also indicated that "messages from a person or entity with whom the recipient has previously agreed to enter into a transaction and that concern a debt owed for that transaction" would fall into the exemption for "transactional or relationship messages."[266] While this FCC ruling exempts creditors' emails, the FCC did not explicitly exempt emails from creditors' third-party collectors. It is thus unclear whether the FCC agrees with the FTC that emails from third-party collectors are exempt from CAN-SPAM.

In late 2020[267] and early 2021,[268] the CFPB issued new FDCPA rules pursuant to the authority granted it by the Dodd-Frank Act.[269] These rules will be effective on November 30, 2021, and will allow debt collectors to send validation notices[270] and debt collection messages[271] by electronic methods.

The rules are problematic in many respects. For example, they allow electronic communications, but establish only weak protections against phishing, misdirected messages, and messages sent to work email addresses that employers can see. The electronic communication provisions of the rules are addressed in detail in earlier chapters of this book, primarily Chapters 5 and 9, supra.

14.4 Truth in Lending Act Disclosures

14.4.1 Are TILA Disclosures Required When Collector Enters Into a Repayment Agreement with the Debtor?

The Truth in Lending Act (TILA) may require a debt collector to give the consumer a new TILA disclosure statement if the two agree on a new debt payment schedule (known as a "workout agreement") and the amount financed or the finance charges are increased. Under TILA regulations, a TILA disclosure statement must be provided to the consumer before consummation of a written, pre-litigation[272] workout agreement that allows the consumer to pay the obligation, if the new agreement satisfies and replaces the old obligation and if additional credit is advanced or the APR is increased.[273] Additional credit does not include amounts already accrued plus insurance premiums.[274] Nor does additional credit include capitalization of earned, unpaid interest as part of a workout or loan modification, even though this raises the modified loan amount.[275] If a debt collector fails to provide a required TILA disclosure statement, the debt collector is subject to TILA civil liability of twice the finance charge and attorney fees.[276]

TILA disclosures are required only if the workout agreement meets the general TILA definition of a consumer credit transaction.[277] First, the transaction must involve credit, defined as the right granted by a creditor to defer payment

257 See 47 C.F.R. §§ 64.1600 to 64.1604.

258 Pub. L. No. 108-187 (2003); 15 U.S.C. §§ 7701 to 7713; 18 U.S.C. § 1037. See also Rules & Regulations Implementing the Controlling the Assault of Non-Solicited Pornography and Marketing Act of 2003; Rules and Regulations Implementing the Telephone Consumer Protection Act of 1991, 69 Fed. Reg. 55,765 (Sept. 16, 2004) (final rule); Rules & Regulations Implementing the Controlling the Assault of Non-Solicited Pornography and Marketing Act of 2003, 69 Fed. Reg. 16,873 (Mar. 31, 2004) (proposed rule).

259 15 U.S.C. § 7704(a)(1).

260 15 U.S.C. § 7704(a)(3)

261 15 U.S.C. § 7712.

262 47 C.F.R. § 64.3100.

263 15 U.S.C. § 7706(g)(1). See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.14.2.2 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

264 73 Fed. Reg. 29,654, 29,663 (May 21, 2008).

265 15 U.S.C. §§ 7702(2)(B), 7702(17).

266 69 Fed. Reg. 55,765, 55,774 (Sept. 16, 2004).

267 CFPB, Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), Final Rule; Official Interpretation, 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 (Nov. 30, 2020).

268 CFPB, Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), Final Rule; Official Interpretation, 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 (Jan. 19, 2021).

269 15 U.S.C. 1692*l*(d).

270 12 C.F.R. § 1006.42.

271 12 C.F.R. §§ 1006.6(e), 1006.22(f), (g).

272 See 12 C.F.R. § 1026.20(a)(3) (excluding agreements involving court proceedings); Official Comments § 1026.20(a)(3)-1 (noting that this exclusion applies to "settlement agreements" and "post-judgment agreements").

273 The new amount financed may include earned finance charges and charges for continuation of credit insurance without triggering the new disclosure requirement. 12 C.F.R. § 1026.20(a)(4) [§ 226.20(a)(4)]. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 5.15.7 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

274 12 C.F.R. § 1026.20(a)(4); Official Interpretations § 1026.20(a)(4)-1.

275 National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 5.15.7 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

276 See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending Ch. 11 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

277 12 C.F.R. §§ 1026.2(a)(17) [§ 226.2(a)(17)] (definition of "creditor"), 1026.2(a)(14) (definition of "credit"). See National Consumer Law of debt or to incur debt and defer its payment.[278] Where the consumer has the right to pay over time, a transaction can be a credit transaction even though no charge is imposed for the right to defer payments.[279] Second, the credit must be extended by a creditor, defined as one who regularly extends consumer credit that is subject to a finance charge or payable by written agreement in more than four installments.[280] This means that the debt collector must meet these creditor standards if the workout agreement is in the name of the debt collector, and not the original creditor or an assignee that owned the loan prior to its acquisition by the debt collector. If the debt collector does not own the loan and is merely collecting on behalf of a creditor or assignee, the workout agreement should be in the name of that entity.[281]

No disclosures are required if the installment payment agreement is informal, for example, over the telephone, even if confirmed by letter from one of the parties, or evidenced only by a letter and coupon payment forms.[282] Nor are disclosures required if the workout agreement does not involve additional credit or an increased APR.[283]

Where the original transaction was a cash transaction, if the consumer later enters into a payment agreement that gives the consumer the right to defer payment of the debt[284] and involves either a finance charge or a written agreement for more than four installments, TILA applies and disclosures are required.[285] If the debt is still structured as an account receivable that is due in full, however, the imposition of late charges does not make it a credit transaction subject to TILA, as long as the late charges are for actual unanticipated late payments.[286] Even the fact that the seller imposes interest on the outstanding balance does not make the transaction qualify as credit if the consumer does not have the right to defer payment.[287]

14.4.2 Collector's Liability for Originator's TILA Violation

Even if the collector does not enter into a new repayment agreement with the debtor that requires TILA disclosures, it may have liability under TILA if the original creditor violated the Act. If ownership of the obligation is transferred to the collector, it will be liable for damages as an assignee for TILA violations that are apparent on the face of the contract and other documents assigned.[288] If the loan is secured by the consumer's principal dwelling, the debt collector as assignee can be liable for rescission regardless of whether the TILA violations are apparent on the face of the contract and other documents assigned.[289] The Truth in Lending Act also protects credit card and open-end credit consumers from collections during a dispute over the amount owed on their accounts.[290] These issues are discussed at length in NCLC's Truth in Lending.[291]

14.5 Extortionate Collection Methods and Other RICO Violations

14.5.1 Advantages and Disadvantages of RICO Claims

Unlawful debt collection may violate the federal Racketeering Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO).[292] RICO does not prohibit unlawful debt collection Center, Truth in Lending § 2.2.4.1 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

278 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f); Reg. Z § 1026.2(a)(14) [§ 226.2(a)(14)].

279 Pollice v. Nat'l Tax Funding, 225 F.3d 379, 409 (3d Cir. 2000).

280 15 U.S.C. § 1602(g); 12 C.F.R. § 1026.2(a)(17)(i), (iv) [§ 226.2(a)(17)(i), (iv)].

281 Creditor and assignee liability for their own TILA violations are discussed in National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending §§ 11.3, 11.6.10, 12.3 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also § 14.4.2, infra.

282 12 C.F.R. § 1026.2(a)(17)(i)(A) [§ 226.2(a)(17)(i)(A)]; Official Interpretations of Reg. Z § 1026.2(a)(17)(i)-1(i)(A) [§ 226.2(a)(17)(i)-1(i)(A)].

283 Official Interpretations of Reg. Z § 1026.20(a)(4)-1 [§ 226.20(a)(4)-1]; National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 5.15.7 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library (compiling cases on this point).

284 See Reg. Z, 12 C.F.R. § 1026.2(a)(14) [§ 226.2(a)(14)] (definition of "credit"). See also National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 9 (4th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (discussion of similar issue in context of medical bill payment plans); National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Credit Regulation § 7.5.2.3 (2d ed. 2015), updated at www.nclc.org/library (discussion of distinction between forbearance and detention in usury context).

285 Pollice v. Nat'l Tax Funding, 225 F.3d 379, 409 (3d Cir. 2000) (consumer credit transactions arose when consumers entered into payment plans for existing obligations).

286 Reg. Z, 12 C.F.R. § 1026.4(c)(2) [§ 226.4(c)(2)]; Official Interpretations of Reg. Z § 1026.4(c)(2)-1 [§ 226.4(c)(2)-1].

287 Riethman v. Berry, 287 F.3d 274 (3d Cir. 2002); Bright v. Ball Mem'l Hosp., 616 F.2d 328 (7th Cir. 1980); Ysasi v. Nucentrix Broadband Networks, 205 F. Supp. 2d 683 (S.D. Tex. 2002) (imposition of late charge on delinquent lease payments does not create extension of credit); Finnegan v. Univ. of Rochester Med. Ctr., 21 F. Supp. 2d 223 (W.D.N.Y. 1998); Finnegan v. Univ. of Rochester Med. Ctr., 21 F. Supp. 2d 223 (W.D.N.Y. 1998); Iowa Supreme Court Bd. of Prof'l Ethics v. McKittrick, 683 N.W.2d 554 (Iowa 2004) (attorney who imposed finance charge of 1.5% per month did not extend credit under TILA); Rogers Mortuary, Inc. v. White, 594 P.2d 351 (N.M. Ct. App. 1979); Porter v. Hill, 838 P.2d 45 (Or. 1992) (late payment charge of 1.5% per month on unpaid bill not finance charge and TILA disclosures not required when amount was due in full upon billing). See also Pollice v. Nat'l Tax Funding, 225 F.3d 379 (3d Cir. 2000) (discussion of distinction between detention and forbearance in usury context); National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Credit Regulation § 7.5.2.3 (2d ed. 2015), updated at www.nclc.org/library (discussion of distinction between detention and forbearance in usury law).

288 National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 12.3.2 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

289 National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 12.3.3 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

290 National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 7.9.6.4 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

291 National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

292 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961 to 1968. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law Ch. 7 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

itself, but rather targets those who use such debt collection or other specified criminal acts to relate to an "enterprise"[293] in a forbidden manner.

The power of RICO arises from its civil remedies provision, which allows victims to recover treble damages, attorney fees, and costs from the violator.[294] However, RICO is complex and drafting a RICO complaint is challenging. This discussion should be viewed as an introduction to the application of the federal RICO statute to debt collection, and advocates should refer to the much more thorough discussion of a RICO claim in NCLC's Federal Deception Law.[295]

14.5.2 Qualifying Conduct—Collection of an Unlawful Debt or Pattern of Racketeering Activity

14.5.2.1 Generally

RICO prohibits persons from using either of two different kinds of qualifying conduct to relate to an enterprise in a prohibited manner. These two kinds of preliminary conduct are "collection of an unlawful debt" and a "pattern of racketeering activity."[296] The next two subsections discuss these preliminary requirements for any RICO claim. The other main elements of a RICO claim are outlined in § 14.5.3, infra.

14.5.2.2 Collection of an Unlawful Debt

RICO defines "unlawful debt" to include debts from unlawful gambling and debts that arise from a loan that is both unenforceable under a usury law and bears a rate at twice the enforceable rate.[297] A defendant need only collect one unlawful debt to meet this initial element of RICO.[298] Although a plaintiff must show that a usurious debt was incurred "in connection with . . . the business of lending money," an entity that lends money only incidentally to its core business can qualify.[299] A number of borrowers have successfully alleged that their loans were unlawful debts for purposes of a RICO claim against an overreaching lender.[300] However, a plaintiff

293 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c).

294 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c).

295 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law Ch. 7 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

296 18 U.S.C. §§ 1962(a), 1962(b), 1962(c). In addition, RICO prohibits the conspiracy to violate any of these subsections. 18 U.S.C. § 1962(d).

297 The full definition of "unlawful debt" is as follows:

> "[U]nlawful debt" means a debt (A) incurred or contracted in gambling activity which was in violation of the law of the United States, a State or political subdivision thereof, or which is unenforceable under State or Federal law in whole or in part as to principal or interest because of the laws relating to usury, and (B) which was incurred in connection with the business of gambling in violation of the law of the United States, a State or political subdivision thereof, or the business of lending money or a thing of value at a rate usurious under State or Federal law, where the usurious rate is at least twice the enforceable rate.

18 U.S.C. § 1961(6).

298 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 7.3.4 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

299 See Dibello v. Alpha Centurion Sec., Inc., 2015 WL 1344642, at *1 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 23, 2015) (denying defendant's motion for summary judgment on RICO claim that alleged that employer, a security guard company, authorized "advances" to employees that required 20% premium in addition to repayment). See also Parm v. Nat'l Bank of Cal., 2015 WL 11605748, at *25 (N.D. Ga. May 20, 2015) (processing of ACH Network transaction qualifies as "collect[ing]" a debt, but RICO claim fails on other grounds), aff'd on other grounds, 835 F.3d 1331 (11th Cir. 2016).

300 See, e.g., Goldenstein v. Repossessors Inc., 815 F.3d 142, 149 (3d Cir. 2016) (concluding that RICO's prohibition on "collection of unlawful debt" encompassed repossession company's repossession of collateral for usurious loan); MacDonald v. CashCall, Inc., 2017 WL 1536427, at *1–2 (D.N.J. Apr. 28, 2017) (refusing to dismiss complaint where plaintiff alleged that payday lender charged APR of 116.73%, which was more than twice the New Jersey state law limit of 16%; declining to enforce loan agreement's choice-of-law provision in favor of New Jersey law), aff'd, 883 F.3d 220 (3d Cir. 2018); Bynon v. Mansfield, 2016 WL 4089169, at *5 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 1, 2016) (debt bearing interest rate of 182.02% supported RICO claim against both individual lenders and those who repossessed plaintiff's truck to satisfy debt, applying Pennsylvania's rate law); Parm v. Nat'l Bank of Cal., 2015 WL 11605748, at *25 (N.D. Ga. May 20, 2015) (allegations of payday loan of $1000 bearing annual interest rate of 233.71% sufficiently pleaded collection of unlawful debt), aff'd on other grounds, 835 F.3d 1331 (11th Cir. 2016), dismissed on other grounds on remand, 242 F. Supp. 3d 1321 (N.D. Ga. 2017); Gingras v. Rosette, 2016 WL 2932163, at *36 (D. Vt. May 18, 2016) (debts bearing interest rates ranging from 198% to 376% supported RICO claim as rates exceeded twice Vermont's enforceable rate); Gregoria v. Total Asset Recovery, Inc., 2015 WL 115501, at *4–5 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 7, 2015) (interest rate of 126%, which would be unenforceable under state's usury laws, supported RICO claim); Dillon v. BMO Harris Bank, 16 F. Supp. 3d 605, 618 (M.D.N.C. 2014) (refusing to dismiss RICO claim against banks that allegedly facilitated through Automated Clearing House Network collection of Internet banks' usurious payday loans); Brock v. Thomas, 782 F. Supp. 2d 133, 142 (E.D. Pa. 2011) (denying defendants' motion to dismiss RICO claim that alleged that they misrepresented sale as home improvement loan, and then stripped plaintiff's equity from property); Proctor v. Metro. Money Store Corp., 645 F. Supp. 2d 464, 481–482 (D. Md. 2009) (allowing homeowners' class action RICO claim for collection of unlawful debt to proceed; construing foreclosure rescue arrangement as creating equitable mortgage and characterizing rent as interest that exceeded twice Maryland's usury limit); Dowling v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2006 WL 571895, at *4–5 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 7, 2006) (refusing to dismiss RICO conspiracy claim against two attorneys who sought to collect fraudulent debts on behalf of mortgage servicer); Cook v. Easy Money of Ky., Inc., 196 F. Supp. 2d 508, 514–515 (W.D. Ky. 2001) (consumers sufficiently alleged that owners of check cashing service had collected unlawful debt); Hamilton v. York, 987 F. Supp. 953, 957–958 (E.D. Ky. 1997) (refusing to dismiss RICO claim based on check cashing service's charges); Starks v. Rent-A-Ctr., 1994 WL 577974, at *6–8 (D. Minn. May 16, 1990) (rent-to-own transaction), aff'd on other grounds, 58 F.3d 358 (8th Cir. 1995); In re Eyler, 2008 WL 4833096, at *4–5 (Bankr. D. Md. Oct. 28, 2008) (amended proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law) (concluding that foreclosure rescue transaction imposed an interest rate usurious under Maryland law; recommending treble damages of more than $253,000). See also Ralston v. Zats, 2000 WL 1781590, at *6–7 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 9, 2000) (approving settlement of class action that asserted FDCPA and RICO claims, among others, against defendants alleged to have falsely induced plaintiffs to agree to confession of judgment provisions); cannot base a RICO claim on violation of a law that prescribes the method of collecting interest or the kind of property that can be received for a loan, as opposed to the rate itself.[301] In addition, one court held that charging twice the amount of permitted "points" on a loan did not qualify as collection of an unlawful debt, as long as the overall interest rate did not exceed twice the legal rate.[302]

14.5.2.3 Pattern of Racketeering Activity

The second, alternative type of qualifying activity is a "pattern of racketeering activity." "Racketeering activity," the core requirement of this type of qualifying conduct, comprises any of nine state criminal offenses or any of a longer list of specified federal offenses.[303] Of these, mail fraud and wire fraud are the two most commonly invoked predicate offenses.[304]

Violating the federal loansharking statute[305] is another predicate act that might appear in a creditor-borrower relationship. Where a creditor, as part of extending or collecting a debt, threatens to use overreaching means to collect on the debt, it may violate the federal loansharking statute, which is a RICO predicate act.[306] That statute prohibits extortionate extensions of credit, defined as those made with the understanding that failure to repay "could result in the use of violence or other criminal means to cause harm to the person, reputation, or property of any person."[307] It further prohibits collecting a debt with the implicit or explicit threat to use violence or other criminal means to cause such harm.[308]

One court liberally read collection letters sent to a plaintiff to find that they could suggest the threat of criminal means to collect the debt, and that the plaintiff thereby stated a class action RICO claim based on loansharking against a consumer lender.[309] Another court sustained a RICO claim by a plaintiff who claimed that a bank threatened to jail his wife and call in the FBI unless he mortgaged his farm to secure an overdrawn account of his wife's employer.[310] Wrongfully debiting a consumer's bank account by electronic means may amount to wire fraud and, if part of a pattern, satisfy this element of a RICO claim.[311]

In contrast to collection of an unlawful debt, when one event alone can satisfy the element, a plaintiff must show that a defendant committed not just one act of racketeering activity, but a "pattern of racketeering activity" to qualify through that alternative.[312] The meaning of "pattern," which RICO defines to mean "at least two acts of racketeering activity" conducted no more than ten years apart,[313] has given rise to its own complicated body of jurisprudence.[314] Borrowers have successfully alleged patterns of mail and wire fraud against overreaching debt collectors.[315]

Henry v. Cash Today, Inc., 199 F.R.D. 566, 573 (S.D. Tex. 2000) (certifying class of plaintiffs who brought RICO and other claims against payday lenders that allegedly used prohibited debt collection methods, fraud, and threats of criminal prosecution in seeking repayment of usurious loans). But see Nolen v. Nucentrix Broadband Networks Inc., 293 F.3d 926, 929 (5th Cir. 2002) (cable provider's late fees were not interest under state law and therefore state usury laws did not apply and debt was not unlawful under RICO); Kwon v. Santander Consumer U.S.A., 2016 WL 6518578, at *5 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 6, 2016) (dismissing claim alleging that plaintiff had been charged usurious rate of 25%, as this was less than twice New York's legal rate of 16%); Betts v. Advance Am., 213 F.R.D. 466, 482–483 (M.D. Fla. 2003) (dismissing RICO claim; check cashing service was not subject to state usury laws, so plaintiff's debt was not unlawful); Rivera v. AT&T Corp., 141 F. Supp. 2d 719, 724–725 (S.D. Tex. 2001) (cable provider's late fees are not interest under state usury law, so cannot give rise to RICO violation based on collection of unlawful debt); In re MasterCard Int'l Inc., Internet Gambling Litig., 132 F. Supp. 2d 468, 483 (E.D. La. 2001) (dismissing gamblers' suit against credit card companies and issuing banks based on charges incurred on Internet gambling sites on grounds that they did not allege usury and defendants' activities did not violate state or federal law), aff'd, 313 F.3d 257 (5th Cir. 2002).

301 Sundance Land Corp. v. Cmty. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 840 F.2d 653, 667 (9th Cir. 1988).

302 Reidy v. Meritor Sav., 1989 WL 132673, at *1 (D.C. Cir. Nov. 3, 1989). See also Johnson v. Fleet Fin., Inc., 785 F. Supp. 1003, 1010–1011 (S.D Ga. 1992) (dismissing federal and state RICO claims by mortgagors against lenders because, although first month's interest rate exceeded permitted percentage, interest calculated over life of loan did not).

303 18 U.S.C. § 1961(1).

304 18 U.S.C. §§ 1341, 1343.

305 18 U.S.C. §§ 891 to 894.

306 18 U.S.C. § 1961(1).

307 18 U.S.C. §§ 891(6), 892.

308 18 U.S.C. §§ 891(7), 894.

309 Brown v. C.I.L., Inc., 1996 WL 164294 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 28, 1996) (statements examined by court included: "We can be reached at . . . any time should you wish to repay your debt in full without any damge [sic] to you or your credit"; "My 'ass' is being hung out to dry by you and I would like you to be man enough to tell me why? After you begged for us to loan you money, not once! but twice! My good Friends are interested to [sic]!"; and "Your attitude about this money you begged for is almost unbelievable. Our people in Mr. Carpenter's Office are watching with great interest. Stop being a coward, Big Man!"), adopted, 1996 WL 164294 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 1, 1996).

310 Ford v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 700 F. Supp. 1121 (N.D. Ga. 1988) (allegations of blackmail sufficed to meet statute's requirement of "the use, or an express or implicit threat of use, of violence or other criminal means to cause harm to the person, reputation, or property of any person").

311 See, e.g., Aghaeepour v. N. Leasing Systems, Inc., 2015 WL 7758894 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 1, 2015). See also United States v. Cusino, 694 F.2d 185 (9th Cir. 1982) (affirming mail fraud conviction of defendant who received wire transfers from persons he persuaded to invest in fraudulent invention); United States v. Butler, 704 F. Supp. 1338, 1343 (E.D. Va. 1989) (upholding mail fraud conviction against defendant who instructed potential investors to use wire transfers to make their investments).

312 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961, 1962(a), 1962(b), 1962(c).

313 18 U.S.C. § 1961(5).

314 See, e.g., H.J. Inc. v. Northwestern Bell Tel. Co., 492 U.S. 229, 109 S. Ct. 2893, 106 L. Ed. 2d 195 (1989). See also Edwards v. First Nat'l Bank, Bartlesville, Okla., 872 F.2d 347, 352 (10th Cir. 1989) (borrowers failed to show pattern of racketeering based on two banks' alleged threats to send them to jail on three separate occasions if they did not repay loans). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 7.3.3 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

315 See, e.g., Calabrese v. CSC Holdings, Inc., 283 F. Supp. 2d 797, 811 (E.D.N.Y. 2003) (denying motion to dismiss RICO claims by consumers against cable company and law firm that demanded payment based on alleged use of pirated cable equipment).

14.5.3 RICO's Substantive Prohibitions

Once a plaintiff has shown that a defendant has either collected an unlawful debt or committed a pattern of racketeering activity, the plaintiff must show that the defendant used that conduct to relate to an "enterprise"[316] in a manner that violates one of RICO's three substantive provisions.[317] The provision most commonly employed by civil RICO suits prohibits a person who is employed by or associated with an enterprise from using either the collection of an unlawful debt or a pattern of racketeering activity to conduct the affairs of an enterprise.[318] A drawback of this provision is that it requires a plaintiff to allege an "enterprise" that is distinct from the defendant "person."[319]

RICO also prohibits two other combinations of unlawful debt collection or pattern of racketeering activity in relation to an enterprise. A person who receives income from such conduct may not use or invest that income to acquire an interest in, establish, or operate an enterprise.[320] Nor may a person use such conduct to acquire or maintain an interest in or control of an enterprise.[321] RICO also provides a claim against any person who conspires to violate any of the three substantive provisions.[322]

14.5.4 RICO and Debt Collection

RICO has been applied to a variety of forms of illegal debt collection. For instance, one suit against a group of debt collectors alleged that they falsely induced the plaintiffs to sign confessions of judgment, executed those confessions without notice or hearing, gathered data from the plaintiffs through pretext phone calls that they then used to pursue the confessions, and padded the debt accounts with unlawful charges.[323] The plaintiffs filed claims under RICO, the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, and a state deceptive trade practices act, among others. The court approved a class-wide settlement and attorney fees. Another court upheld a RICO complaint that alleged similar tactics by a debt collection lawsuit mill.[324] A debt collector can also run afoul of RICO by seeking to obtain collection costs not permitted by the debtor's contract.[325]

Another court refused to dismiss RICO claims alleging that a debt buying company and related entities conspired to fraudulently secure default judgments against the plaintiffs.[326] Other successful claims have targeted disguised payday loans,[327] attempts to collect discharged debts,[328] deceptive letters issued to collect dishonored checks,[329] and threats by debt collectors.[330]

---

316 See 18 U.S.C. § 1961(4) (defining enterprise to include "any individual, partnership, corporation, association, or other legal entity, and any union or group of individuals associated in fact although not a legal entity"). See also National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 7.5 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

317 18 U.S.C. §§ 1962(a), 1962(b), 1962(c). In addition, 18 U.S.C. § 1962(d) prohibits conspiring to violate one of the three substantive sections.

318 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c) ("It shall be unlawful for any person employed by or associated with any enterprise engaged in, or the activities of which affect, interstate or foreign commerce, to conduct or participate, directly or indirectly, in the conduct of such enterprise's affairs through a pattern of racketeering activity or collection of unlawful debt.").

319 Cedric Kushner Promotions, Ltd. v. King, 533 U.S. 158, 161, 121 S. Ct. 2087, 150 L. Ed. 2d 198 (2001). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 7.4.4 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

320 The complete provision reads as follows:

> It shall be unlawful for any person who has received any income derived, directly or indirectly, from a pattern of racketeering activity or through collection of an unlawful debt in which such person has participated as a principal within the meaning of section 2, title 18, United States Code, to use or invest, directly or indirectly, any part of such income, or the proceeds of such income, in acquisition of any interest in, or the establishment or operation of, any enterprise which is engaged in, or the activities of which affect, interstate or foreign commerce. A purchase of securities on the open market for purposes of investment, and without the intention of controlling or participating in the control of the issuer, or of assisting another to do so, shall not be unlawful under this subsection if the securities of the issuer held by the purchaser, the members of his immediate family, and his or their accomplices in any pattern or racketeering activity or the collection of an unlawful debt after such purchase do not amount in the aggregate to one percent of the outstanding securities of any one class, and do not confer, either in law or in fact, the power to elect one or more directors of the issuer.

18 U.S.C. § 1962(a).

321 The complete provision reads as follows:

> It shall be unlawful for any person through a pattern of racketeering activity or through collection of an unlawful debt to acquire or maintain, directly or indirectly, any interest in or control of any enterprise which is engaged in, or the activities of which affect, interstate or foreign commerce.

18 U.S.C. § 1962(b).

322 18 U.S.C. §§ 1962(d), 1964(c). See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 7.5.5 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

323 Ralston v. Zats, 2000 WL 1781590, at *6–7 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 9, 2000).

324 Mayfield v. Asta Funding, Inc., 2015 WL 1501100, at *7–10 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2015).

325 See Bible v. United Student Aid Funds, 799 F.3d 633, 656–660 (7th Cir. 2015) (reversing dismissal of RICO claim brought by student loan borrower against guaranty agency that she alleged assessed collection costs not permitted by terms of her rehabilitation agreement).

326 See Sykes v. Mel Harris & Assoc., 757 F. Supp. 2d 413, 427 (S.D.N.Y. 2010), aff'd, 780 F.3d 70 (7th Cir. 2015).

327 Henry v. Cash Today, Inc., 199 F.R.D. 566, 573 (S.D. Tex. 2000) (certifying class of plaintiffs on RICO and other claims against payday lenders that allegedly used prohibited debt collection methods, fraud, and threats of criminal prosecution in seeking repayment of usurious loans). See also Cook v. Easy Money of Ky., Inc., 196 F. Supp. 2d 508, 514–515 (W.D. Ky. 2001) (refusing to dismiss § 1962(a) and (c) claims against check cashing service that made short-term "roll over" loans).

328 Dowling v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2006 WL 571895, at *4–5 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 7, 2006) (refusing to dismiss RICO conspiracy claim against attorneys who sought to collect debt that had been discharged in bankruptcy); Kim v. Fayazi, 1998 WL 729753, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 14, 1998) (denying motions to dismiss RICO claims arising from alleged scheme to trick plaintiff into repaying previously discharged credit card debts).

329 Smith v. Levine Leichtman Capital Partners, Inc., 723 F. Supp. 2d 1205, 1215–1216 (N.D. Cal. 2010) (finding plaintiffs alleged pattern of racketeering based on acts of mail fraud).

330 Brown v. C.I.L., Inc., 1996 WL 164294, at *5 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 1996) (denying motion to dismiss RICO claim against company that made

However, RICO claims require proof of a number of elements, including injury caused by the specific substantive violation.[331] If the plaintiff frames the claim around qualifying conduct other than collection of an unlawful debt, the plaintiff must present evidence that the creditor or debt collector committed not just one predicate offense, but engaged in a pattern of such offenses.[332]

14.5.5 State Racketeering and Civil Theft Statutes

A number of states have civil RICO statutes that, like federal RICO, offer multiple damages and attorney fees. Many state civil RICO statutes require a simpler set of elements than federal RICO, and some include specific consumer protection crimes as predicate offenses.[333] Civil theft laws in some states have been applied to wrongful seizure of an alleged debtor's property and might be applicable to wrongful seizures of wages or bank account funds as well.[334] State RICO and civil theft statutes are analyzed in another NCLC treatise.[335]

14.6 The Fair Credit Reporting Act

14.6.1 Overview

Reporting a debt to a credit bureau—known as a "consumer reporting agency" or CRA under the Fair Credit Reporting Act[336]—is a "powerful tool designed, in part, to wrench compliance with payment terms."[337] The collection industry has acknowledged this sentiment,[338] and the CFPB noted that "furnishing information to the [nationwide CRAs] can provide an incentive for borrowers or debtors to meet their repayment obligations."[339] Even Congress mandated that defaults on student loans be reported to CRAs as a means of encouraging debt repayment.[340]

In some instances, a collector will only report a debt to a nationwide CRA and engage in no other collection activity, a practice known as passive collection or "parking the debt." Here the collector furnishes negative information to the CRAs without ever attempting to contact the consumer about the debt, waiting until the consumer discovers the negative information.[341]

The CFPB noted that passive collection is more likely with small debts, such as medical or telecommunications debt, where mail or telephone collection is not cost effective.[342] In fact, the final FDCPA rule that the CFPB issued in January 2021, which takes effect on November 30, 2021, requires debt loans at 231% to 283% APRs and used threats of criminal prosecution and veiled threats of bodily harm in attempting to collect).

331 See, e.g., Zimmerman v. HBO Affiliate Group, 834 F.2d 1163, 1169–1170 (3d Cir. 1987) (consumer failed to state extortion claim under RICO by failing to allege injury to his business or property); Howe v. Reader's Digest Ass'n, Inc., 686 F. Supp. 461, 465–466 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (dismissing RICO claim for failure to allege injury to consumer's business or property).

332 See § 14.5.2.3, supra.

333 See Watson v. State, 509 S.E.2d 87, 90–92 (Ga. Ct. App. 1998) (affirming state RICO conviction of payday lender who used bad check prosecutions to collect; predicate offenses were perjuries, swearing that checks had been written for "merchandise"); Dorr v. Sacred Heart Hosp., 597 N.W.2d 462, 476–477 (Wis. Ct. App. 1999) (reversing summary judgment in favor of hospital on claim that it violated state RICO statute by filing lien against patient's personal injury settlement for bill that patient did not owe).

334 See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 8.8 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

335 See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law Ch. 8 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

336 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681 to 1681x.

337 Rivera v. Bank One, 145 F.R.D. 614 (D. P.R. 1993). Accord Edeh v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 748 F. Supp. 2d 1030, 1035 (D. Minn. 2010) ("threatening to report and reporting debts to CRAs is one of the most commonly-used arrows in the debt collector's quiver"), aff'd on other grounds, 413 Fed. Appx. 925 (8th Cir. Mar. 17, 2011); Blanks v. Ford Motor Credit, 2005 WL 43981, at *3 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 7, 2005) (communicating information to credit reporting agency is communication in connection with collection of the debt); Akalwadi v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 336 F. Supp. 2d 492, 503 n.4 (D. Md. 2004) (reporting debt is "in connection with" debt collection); Sullivan v. Equifax, 2002 WL 799856, at *15 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 19, 2002) (reporting debt is powerful collection tool); Ditty v. CheckRite, Ltd., 973 F. Supp. 1320, 1331 (D. Utah 1997) (reporting bad check information to others is designed to give collector additional leverage over debtor); In re Sommersdorf, 139 B.R. 700, 701 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1991) ("[P]lacing of a notation on an obligor's credit report . . . most certainly must be done in an effort to effect collection of the account. . . . Such a notation on a credit report is, in fact, just the type of creditor shenanigans intended to be prohibited by the automatic stay."). See also Cass, FTC Informal Staff Letter, 1997 WL 33791232, at *1 (Dec. 23, 1997) (reporting to credit bureau is "collection activity" that must cease until § 1692g(b) verification is provided: "the reality is that debt collectors use the reporting mechanism as a tool to persuade consumers to pay, just like dunning letters and telephone calls"). Compare McIvor v. Credit Control Services, Inc., 773 F.3d 909 (8th Cir. 2014) (requiring under some circumstances specific allegation and proof that credit reporting by debt collector is debt collection: "Certainly, communication between a debt collector and a consumer reporting agency may at times be in connection with debt collection. . . . McIvor makes a much broader argument, however. She contends that any communication about a debt from a debt collector to a consumer reporting agency is always intended to facilitate collection. We decline to draw such a sweeping conclusion.").

338 See Jones, Are You Properly Reporting Bankruptcies to Credit Bureaus? (July 29, 2015), available at www.insidearm.com (stating that "collection agencies . . . report collection items to the bureaus . . . [as an] aid in your collection efforts"). See also Rozanne M. Anderson, Ontario Systems, 5 Tips to End the Credit Reporting Nightmare—and Reduce All Those Costly Disputes 6, 15 (2013) ("reporting data to a CRA regarding a consumer's account is considered a collection activity," and "[c]redit reporting remains an extremely valuable collections tool"), available at www.insidearm.com.

339 CFPB, Consumer Credit Reports: A Study of Medical and Non-Medical Collections 35 (Dec. 2014), available at www.consumerfinance.gov.

340 20 U.S.C. § 1080a. See Seamans v. Temple Univ., 744 F.3d 853, 863 (3d Cir. 2014) (Congress permitted unpaid student loans to be reported to CRAs beyond usual FCRA obsolescence period based on its determination that "'reporting of defaulted education loans to credit bureaus is an effective tool' . . . providing great motivation for a borrower to repay even very old education loans").

341 See § 1.4.2, supra.

342 CFPB, Consumer Credit Reports: A Study of Medical and Non-Medical Collections 36 (Dec. 2014), available at www.consumerfinance.gov.

collectors to disclose the existence of the debt to consumers before reporting it to a CRA.[343]

Given the frequent use of credit reporting as a tool in debt collection, the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA)[344] is an important resource for attorneys representing debtors. Asserting claims under the FCRA should be considered whenever a CRA publishes a credit report that contains inaccurate or incomplete information which itself was furnished by a debt collector or creditor.

Congress recognized the central role that credit reporting plays in the debt collection process by including in the FDCPA four separate provisions directly linking credit reporting to, and facilitating and regulating credit reporting as, debt collection. First, by excluding contacts with "a consumer reporting agency if otherwise permitted by law" from its general prohibition against third-party communications, the FDCPA authorizes debt collectors to report consumer debts to CRAs.[345] Second, the FDCPA prohibits a debt collector from publishing so-called "shame lists" or otherwise publicizing consumers' debts unless done in compliance with the FCRA.[346] Third, the FDCPA makes it a per se violation for a debt collector to report to any person, including a CRA, "credit information which is known or should be known to be false, including the failure to communicate that a disputed debt is disputed."[347] A claim under this provision typically should be pleaded in conjunction with most debt collector FCRA violations. And fourth is the FDCPA prohibition against using any "false representation or implication that a debt collector operates or is employed by a consumer reporting agency as defined by [the FCRA]".[348] These FDCPA provisions are all discussed in detail in Chapters 5 through 10, supra.

Because credit reporting can be such an effective collection device, collectors frequently misuse it.[349] Not surprisingly, debt collectors and debt buyers generate an enormously disproportionate number of the disputes received by the nationwide CRAs, accounting for nearly 40% of all credit reporting disputes, even though they only supply 13% of the tradelines.[350] Of consumers who participated in an FTC study, 26% found material inaccuracies in their credit reports.[351] Additionally, the CFPB issued a bulletin warning debt buyers and third-party debt collectors against making material misrepresentations to persuade consumers to pay debts in collection.[352] Some of these misrepresentations include statements about how payment will improve credit scores or improve creditworthiness.[353]

Part of any comprehensive case preparation therefore entails reviewing the consumer's credit reports. Consumers have the right under the FCRA to know the contents of the files maintained on them by a credit bureau.[354] Various options are available to consumers to exercise that right, including receiving a free credit report disclosure annually.[355]

There are four primary ways in which the FCRA potentially applies in the debt collection context. First and principally, a debt collector or creditor who has furnished information to a credit bureau must conduct a "reasonable investigation" of its accuracy and completeness after the consumer initiates the FCRA's formal dispute process with the credit bureau.[356] Second, debt collectors and creditors, like everyone else, face FCRA liability if they access a credit report without a permissible purpose or under false pretenses.[357] Third, the FCRA imposes special duties on collectors and those who furnish information to consumer reporting agencies in cases of debts arising from fraud or identity theft.[358] And fourth, debt collectors may occasionally meet the FCRA's definition of a

343 CFPB, Final Rule, Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 86 Fed. Reg. 5766, 5783–5785 (Jan. 19, 2021). See generally § 8.12, supra.

344 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681 to 1681x.

345 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(b). See § 5.7, supra.

346 15 U.S.C. § 1692d(3). See § 6.5, supra.

347 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(8). See §§ 7.2.9, supra, 14.6.6.2, infra.

348 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(16). See § 7.2.16, supra.

349 See, e.g., Abdelfattah v. Carrington Mortg. Serv. L.L.C., 2013 WL 495358 (N.D. Ca. Feb. 7, 2013) (sustaining claim for punitive damages when furnisher allegedly refused to correct false credit reporting information concerning debt unless consumer paid additional money that was not owing); Greene v. Capital One Bank, 2008 WL 1858882, at *4 (D. Utah Apr. 23, 2008) ("[i]t is certainly not beyond belief that a furnisher of information might use the false tradeline as a club in negotiating down a judgment, as may have happened in this case").

350 CFPB, Key Dimensions and Processes in the U.S. Credit Reporting System: A Review of How the Nation's Largest Credit Bureaus Manage Consumer Data 14, 29 (2012), available at www.consumerfinance.gov.

351 Fed. Trade Comm'n, Report to Congress Under Section 319 of the Fair and Accurate Credit Transactions Act of 2003 (2012), available at www.ftc.gov. See also Mary Spector, Where the FCRA Meets the FDCPA: The Impact of Unfair Collection Practices on the Credit Report, 20 Geo. J. on Poverty L. & Pol'y 485, 486 (2013), available at www.ssrn.com.

352 CFPB, Representations Regarding Effect of Debt Payments on Credit Reports and Scores, CFPB Bulletin 2013-08 (July 10, 2013), available at www.consumerfinance.gov. See also National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 5.2.3.4a.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

353 Id. But see Johnson v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 961 F.3d 975 (7th Cir. 2020) (consumer failed to produce evidence that dunning letter violated § 1692e by stating that account that had already been reported to credit bureaus "may be reported" and that payment of offered settlement amount would stop collection, arguing that this implied future reporting and that there would be no credit reporting if consumer paid by deadline specified for settlement); Larkin v. Fin. Sys. of Green Bay, Inc., 982 F.3d 1060 (7th Cir. 2020) (case dismissed for lack of standing, since neither risk of harm or alleged harm was pleaded when consumers claimed that collection letters stating that the creditor was "interested in preserving a good credit rating" and urging them "to be worthy of the faith put in you by your creditor" violated §§ 1692e and 1692f).

354 15 U.S.C. § 1681g.

355 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 3.3.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

The three nationwide consumer reporting agencies have established a "centralized source," required by the FCRA, where consumers can obtain their free annual credit report online: www.annualcreditreport.com. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 3.4.2.1 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

356 See § 14.6.2.3.2, infra.

357 See § 14.6.3, infra.

358 See § 14.6.4, infra.

"consumer reporting agency" and will be liable if they fail to comply with the host of special rules then applicable to them.[359]

This section presents only an outline of these four uses of the FCRA, a topic that is covered in depth in another treatise in this series.[360] After discussing these four uses of the FCRA, this section discusses the application of the FDCPA and other debt collection laws to credit reporting issues and concludes with recommendations for resolving credit reporting issues when settling a debt case.

14.6.2 Accuracy of Credit Reports; Furnisher's Duty of Investigation

14.6.2.1 Generally

Providing accurate information is the hallmark of the FCRA.[361] The accuracy standard in the FCRA is stringent, requiring more than just technical accuracy and measured instead by the FCRA's own sui generis benchmark of "maximum possible accuracy."[362]

The FCRA imposes on creditors, collectors, and others who furnish information to consumer reporting agencies (referred to as "furnishers" in FCRA case law) the obligation to report only accurate information.[363] Direct enforcement of this obligation is limited to designated public officials.[364] However, the FCRA's primary mechanism that ensures the accuracy of credit reports and that is privately enforceable against furnishers is the formal reinvestigation process that must be initiated by the consumer with the consumer reporting agencies. Furnishers must investigate the information that they have previously reported if a consumer disputes that information with the CRA by challenging its accuracy or completeness.[365] A furnisher who fails to fulfill its obligations in that reinvestigation process can be liable to the consumer under the FCRA.[366]

This FCRA obligation to report only accurate information is also privately enforceable under the FDCPA when the furnisher is a debt collector, even without a prior dispute by the debtor. Debt collectors are subject to the prohibitions in FDCPA § 1692e(8) against reporting to a CRA information that is known or should be known to be false or failing to communicate that a disputed debt is disputed.[367] Combining FDCPA damages for this section 1692e(8) violation with the available FCRA remedies can provide substantial redress for consumers aggrieved by unlawful debt collector credit reporting.

14.6.2.2 Common Types of Inaccuracy by Debt Collectors

Information reported by debt collectors can be uniquely unreliable, particularly tradelines reported by debt buyers, who purchase portfolios of defaulted debt and have neither first-hand knowledge of the accuracy of the information they provide, nor the documentation to support it.[368]

While there is no limit on the types of inaccuracy disputes that arise in the context of debt collection and credit reporting, two categories of inaccuracies are particularly common. First, debt collectors or creditors often report an incorrect history or inaccurate current status of the debt. One example is misidentifying the legal obligor to force certain individuals (spouses or authorized users, for example) to pay debts that they do not legally owe.[369] Another common abuse occurs when collectors ignore the special rules designed to make certain that debts are tracked and identified as a single obligation as they are transferred from holder to holder.[370]

Second, debt collectors often engage in the abusive tactic of "re-aging" a debt by failing to report the initial date of delinquency or charge-off of the debt, as expressly required by the FCRA.[371] As a result of this omission, the credit bureau is left with the false assumption that the initial date of delinquency or charge-off is the recent date when the account was assigned to the collector, rather than the applicable date that typically occurred months or years earlier when the debt was in the hands of the original creditor. Misreporting in this manner means that the debt will be included in credit reports long after it has become legally obsolete and therefore no longer reportable (seven-and-a-half years after delinquency for most information, ten years for bankruptcy).[372] A re-aged debt may also skew the consumer's credit score since most

359 See § 14.6.5, infra.

360 National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

361 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting Ch. 4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

362 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 4.2.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

363 15 U.S.C. § 1681s-2(a)(1).

364 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681s-2(c), 1681s-2(d). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 6.1.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

365 15 U.S.C. § 1681*i*. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 4.5 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

366 See § 14.6.2.3, infra. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681s-2(b), 1681n (generally creating cause of action for willful noncompliance), 1681o (generally creating cause of action for negligent noncompliance). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 6.10 and Ch. 11 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

367 See § 7.2.8, supra.

368 CFPB, Supplementary Information to Final Rule, Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 86 Fed. Reg. 5766, 5783–5785 (Jan. 19, 2021). The CFPB has proposed extending the effective date of this rule to January 29, 2022. 86 Fed. Reg. 20,334 (Apr. 19, 2021). See § 1.3.4, supra.

369 See, e.g., Johnson v. MBNA Am. Bank, 357 F.3d 426 (4th Cir. 2004) (affirming jury verdict for consumer against credit card company that failed to comply with FCRA's reasonable investigation standard when consumer showed that company continued to reject her claim that she was only authorized user, and not obligor as company was reporting, on her bankrupt ex-husband's credit card account).

370 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting §§ 6.3.3.5, 6.3.3.9 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

371 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 5.2.3.4a (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

372 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681c(a)(4), 1681c(c). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 5.2.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

credit scoring systems assign a higher negative weight the more recent the adverse item of information.[373] This purposeful misrepresentation of the date of charge-off to fall within the seven-year obsolescence period resurrects long dormant and nearly worthless debts with the simple act of false credit reporting.

In response to this re-aging problem, Congress amended the FCRA in 2003 to provide explicit rules regarding the date of an account's delinquency for reporting purposes. The FCRA now specifies how debt collectors should designate the date to ensure that the date of delinquency precedes the date the creditor placed the account for collection.[374] If no date can be determined by these procedures, then the furnisher must establish and follow reasonable procedures to ensure that the date reported precedes the date on which the account is placed for collection, charged to profit or loss, or subjected to any similar action.[375]

Unfortunately, these rules have not ended the unlawful re-aging of debts. The abuse may be continuing because this new date designation requirement is one of the several FCRA reporting duties that do not provide for private enforcement.[376] Nevertheless, the resulting inaccuracy, as any other inaccuracy, may be challenged through the formal FCRA dispute process and may also be an FDCPA violation.

14.6.2.3 Creditors' and Collectors' Liability for Making Inaccurate Reports to Credit Bureau

14.6.2.3.1 Notice of the dispute

To initiate the FCRA's formal reinvestigation process, the consumer must send a notice of dispute to the consumer reporting agency informing the agency that an item of information is inaccurate or incomplete.[377] Taking this step can be an effective method to force a debt collector or creditor to correct its errors. It is also the essential first step for a claim against the furnisher under the FCRA.[378]

The dispute should be detailed and specific and should include supporting documentation when available. A dispute that provides only conclusory or vague allegations will rarely be effective either to resolve the issue or to establish the grounds for successful litigation. Practical advice to enhance a consumer's dispute is set forth in another treatise in this series, which practitioners are advised to consult and follow.[379]

Because information about a consumer often is included in the files of multiple consumer reporting agencies, resolving an error in the files of just one CRA may not be sufficient.[380] Once the information appears on the credit report with one CRA, consumers should order their report from all other nationwide consumer reporting agencies (that is, Equifax, Experian, and TransUnion), and send the same written dispute letter to all agencies that report the disputed information.

While not required by the FCRA, it is prudent for the consumer to send the furnisher a courtesy copy of the dispute letter that the consumer sent to the CRA. Notifying the creditor or collector directly increases the likelihood of clearing up the record. It also strengthens the consumer's case under the FCRA against the furnisher who ignores both the CRA's request that it investigate the debt and the consumer's dispute letter.[381]

Where that furnisher is also a debt collector, sending a courtesy copy of the dispute letter is also an opportunity for the consumer to invoke the FDCPA's formal cease communication mechanism.[382] The consumer should include a cover letter that states that the consumer refuses to pay the disputed debt. This statement will mean that the collector must discontinue virtually all further collection communications with the consumer.[383] Sending the collector a copy of the dispute letter will also require the collector to inform the credit bureau under section 1692e(8) that the debt is disputed, as required by the FDCPA.[384] This requirement, together with the cessation of collection communications and the furnisher's obligation to participate in the FCRA formal dispute reinvestigation process, can be an effective solution for many consumers.[385]

14.6.2.3.2 Furnisher's duty to conduct a reasonable investigation

After a consumer reporting agency notifies a furnisher that an item of information the furnisher provided is disputed, the furnisher must conduct its own investigation into the accuracy

373 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 16.5.2.1 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

374 15 U.S.C. § 1681s-2(a)(5). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 5.2.3.4.6 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

375 15 U.S.C. § 1681s-2(a)(5). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting §§ 5.2.3.4.6, 6.7 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

376 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681s-2(a), 1681s-2(c)(1).

377 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 4.5 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

378 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 4.5 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

379 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 4.5.2.4 (discussing practical tips in making a dispute), § 11.3 (discussing case selection) (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

380 This predicament unfortunately exists even though the FCRA is designed so that a furnisher must report any correction made by one CRA to the other credit bureaus to whom the same information has been furnished. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 6.10.6.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

381 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 6.10.4.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

382 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(c).

383 See § 5.10, supra.

384 See § 7.2.8, supra.

385 The 2003 amendments to the FCRA also contain a provision that allows a consumer to lodge a direct dispute with the furnisher of the information that is being disputed. 15 U.S.C. § 1681s-2(a)(8). However, there is no private enforcement allowed when the furnisher breaches these duties. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 6.5.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

and completeness of that information and must promptly report back to the CRA.[386] The FCRA does not specify the standard for the investigation, but the federal courts uniformly have held that the furnisher must conduct a "reasonable investigation."[387] The investigation's adequacy is a question of fact for jury determination.[388] A furnisher's failure to conduct an investigation or inadequate investigation is actionable under the general standards that allow private enforcement for negligent or willful noncompliance with the FCRA.[389]

The furnisher's investigation must be a good faith effort to provide accurate information, not simply a pro forma exercise. The investigation's exact nature depends on how the dispute is framed and what information is available to the furnisher. At a minimum, the furnisher must consider information sent by the CRA and evaluate any inconsistencies with its own initial report. In addition, information received directly from the consumer must be checked against the creditor's or collector's internal records.[390] Sometimes a creditor's own records will be inconsistent and require reevaluation.

Many debt collectors, particularly buyers of bad debt portfolios, have neither first-hand knowledge of the accuracy of the information they furnish, nor the documentation to support it, and therefore do not have the capability to access that type of information.[391] Instead, these furnishers frequently engage in the circular and now-discredited "data conformity" charade wherein the debt buyer simply confirms that the disputed information in the CRA computer accurately reflects the information in the furnisher's computer that generated the disputed report in the first place.[392]

Since debt buyers rely on the representations made by the original creditor who sold the portfolio to determine the amount owed and the identity of the alleged debtor, the debt buyer may need to obtain more information from the original creditor when investigating a dispute by a consumer.[393] For example, the Eleventh Circuit indicated "when a furnisher does not already possess evidence establishing that an item of disputed information is true, [15 U.S.C.] § 1681s-2(b) requires the furnisher to seek out and obtain such evidence before reporting the information as 'verified'."[394] Even then, merely asking the creditor to confirm the information may not be sufficient.[395] In a consent order, the FTC confirmed that a debt collector must refer to relevant original account records when necessary to investigate the merits of a formal FCRA dispute.[396] Thus, a collection agency, assignee, or purchaser of an obligation cannot, for example, merely rely on the balance due as transmitted to it by the original creditor when the truth of that information is the subject of the dispute, but must verify the debt with the original account records in its or the original creditor's possession. If no original records exist, the information must be deleted.[397]

14.6.2.3.3 Reinvestigation time limits

The CRA's reinvestigation must be completed within thirty days of receipt of the consumer's formal dispute, with one fifteen-day extension allowed if, during the original thirty days, the consumer forwards additional relevant information. Furnishers thus have to act quickly enough to permit the CRA to meet its deadline, normally having to reinvestigate and respond to the CRA within fifteen to twenty days of their receipt of the notice of the dispute.[398]

At the end of the reinvestigation period, disputed information must be deleted if it cannot be verified, or corrected or modified in light of the reinvestigation. The agency may not extend the period to accommodate its procedures or because it has not received a response from the furnisher of the information. If the reinvestigation is not completed in time, the disputed information must be deleted.[399]

386 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681s-2(b)(2), 1681i(a)(1).

387 See, e.g., Gorman v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 584 F.3d 1147 (9th Cir. 2009); Johnson v. MBNA Am. Bank, 357 F.3d 426, 431 (4th Cir. 2004). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 6.10 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

388 National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 6.10.4.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

389 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681n, 1681o. See Johnson v. MBNA Am. Bank, 357 F.3d 426, 431 (4th Cir. 2004); Nelson v. Chase Manhattan Mortgage Corp., 282 F.3d 1057 (9th Cir. 2002). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 6.10.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

390 Johnson v. MBNA Am. Bank, 357 F.3d 426, 431 (4th Cir. 2004); Alabran v. Capital One Bank, 2005 WL 3338663 (E.D. Va. 2005); Bruce v. First U.S.A. Bank, 103 F. Supp. 2d 1135 (E.D. Mo. 2000). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 6.10 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

391 See § 1.3.4, supra.

392 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting §§ 6.10.3 to 6.10.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

393 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 6.13.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

394 Hinkle v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 827 F.3d 1295 (11th Cir. 2016) (reversing summary judgment for furnisher/buyer of "junk debts" and reinstating both negligence and willfulness claims where furnisher's investigation of consumer's dispute that she was mistakenly identified as debtor with similar name was limited to simply confirming the very information in its records that was being challenged).

395 See Carlisle v. Nat'l Commercial Services, Inc., 2015 WL 4092817 (N.D. Ga. July 7, 2015) (furnisher/debt collector's investigation, comprised of simply confirming with original creditor that amount claimed to be owed was accurately stated, was insufficient where consumer's dispute showed that creditor had provided conflicting amounts; reasonable investigation would require furnisher to, "at a minimum, obtain an explanation for the differing amounts [the creditor] reported to the consumer or some other information showing that [the creditor] researched the actual dispute presented").

396 Consent Decree, United States v. Performance Capital Mgmt. (Bankr. C.D. Cal. Aug. 24, 2000), available at www.ftc.gov.

397 Id. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 6.10.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

398 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 6.10.6.5 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

399 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 4.5.5 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

14.6.2.3.4 Prohibition against re-reporting inaccurate information

One persistent problem that has plagued the credit reporting system for decades is the reinsertion in a consumer's file of information that has previously been deleted.[400] Congress has responded to this phenomenon by placing separate prophylactic duties on both the furnishers of such information and the CRAs.

As part of their reinvestigation duties, furnishers must modify, delete, or block inaccurate, incomplete, or unverifiable information and must "permanently" prevent that information from being re-reported.[401] This provision is part of 15 U.S.C. § 1681s-2(b), which consumers may enforce through a private cause of action.

If information that is deleted by the consumer reporting agency is later reinserted into the consumer's file, the CRA must notify the consumer of the reinsertion.[402] Furthermore, the CRA may not reinsert any previously deleted information unless the furnisher certifies that it is accurate and complete.[403]

14.6.3 Improperly Acquiring Credit Reports

Sometimes a question arises whether a debt collector or creditor has improperly acquired a credit report from a consumer reporting agency. The FCRA enumerates specific purposes for which a consumer report may be acquired; obtaining a credit report for any purpose other than those specified is prohibited.[404] A user of a credit report may be liable for failing to certify its purpose for obtaining the report, for obtaining a report without a permissible purpose, or for obtaining a report under false pretenses.[405]

A consumer report generally may be used in collecting a credit account or judgment or reviewing an existing account.[406] Thus, the use of a consumer report for "skip tracing," in which information is sought and used to locate a debtor to facilitate the collection of an existing consumer debt, is permitted.[407] Similarly, debt collectors have a permissible purpose for receiving a consumer report for use in a lawsuit to enforce an existing consumer debt.[408]

However, a collector is limited to accessing or using a consumer report for debt collection—whether skip tracing, direct collection, or otherwise—only when the debt arises from a credit transaction or, if not a credit-based obligation, has already been reduced to judgment. An attempt to collect or establish a non-credit-based debt, such as an inchoate claim that a consumer simply owes money, is not a lawful basis to access the consumer's credit report.[409]

Of course, a collector goes beyond these permissible purposes by obtaining a credit report on any person who is not obligated to pay the debt, for example, a relative of the debtor who is not liable on the account.[410]

The FCRA private remedies are available whenever a user violates any of these provisions.[411]

14.6.4 Special Duties Where Debt Arises from Fraud or Identity Theft

The FCRA gives consumers the right to require consumer reporting agencies to block information that resulted from fraud, including identity theft.[412] Once properly notified by the consumer of the fraud, the CRA must also promptly notify the furnishers of the information, including debt collectors.[413] That debt collector or other person then may not sell or transfer the debt, except as a repurchase to a prior assignor, and may not place it for further collection.[414] This ban does not apply to securitizations of loan portfolios, however.[415]

Whether these furnisher duties are privately enforceable under the FCRA is currently an unresolved question that has split the federal courts.[416] However, a debt collector who violates this provision of the FCRA, even if not subject to enforcement under that law, may still be liable under the FDCPA for taking any action that is otherwise prohibited by law.[417]

The FCRA preempts states from regulating the conduct required by these provisions.[418] On the other hand, when the FCRA provides an exception from the applicability of these

400 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 4.7 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

401 15 U.S.C. § 1681s-2(b)(1)(E)(iii). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 6.10.5 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

402 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting §§ 4.7.2.4, 8.10.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

403 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 4.7.2.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

404 15 U.S.C. § 1681b. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting Ch. 7 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

405 See 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681b(f), 1681q; National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting Ch. 7 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

406 15 U.S.C. § 1681b(a)(3)(A). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 7.2.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

407 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 7.2.3.4.1 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

408 Id. However, a party has no permissible purpose to access or use a consumer report in connection with civil litigation generally. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 7.4.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

409 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 7.2.3.4.1, 7.2.3.4.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

410 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting §§ 7.2.3.4.1, 7.2.3.4.3, and 7.4.6 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

411 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 7.7 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

412 15 U.S.C. § 1681c-2(a). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 9.2.4.1 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

413 15 U.S.C. § 1681c-2(b).

414 15 U.S.C. § 1681m(f). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 9.2.4.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

415 15 U.S.C. § 1681m(f)(3)(B).

416 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 8.2.6.5 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

417 See § 7.2.5, supra.

418 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681t(b)(5)(C), 1681t(b)(5)(F).

duties, the preemption rule is necessarily also exempted. Accordingly, because the ban on sale, transfer, or further collection does not apply to securitizing loan portfolios, the FCRA does not preempt available state laws to remedy any resulting misconduct, such as a potential UDAP violation for securitizing a known identity theft debt.

The FCRA also imposes notification responsibilities on debt collectors once a consumer provides notice that a debt may be fraudulent or may have resulted from identity theft.[419] Once so notified, the debt collector must then notify the creditor of that allegation and must provide the consumer with all information about the debt to which the consumer would be entitled if the consumer were in fact the liable party.[420] This provision requires the collector to provide verification to the fraud victim who allegedly owes the debt and to comply with the FDCPA's other debt validation provisions.[421]

14.6.5 Creditors and Collectors As Consumer Reporting Agencies

A collection agency or creditor will meet the definition of consumer reporting agency if it regularly furnishes information, beyond its own transactions or experiences with consumers, to third parties for use in connection with consumers' transactions.[422] But merely reporting its own experience with the consumer will not make it a consumer reporting agency.[423]

The business model of the typical debt collector or creditor usually does not include reporting beyond its own experiences with consumers, and thus it would not be considered a consumer reporting agency. However, certain check guarantee companies that both collect dishonored checks and provide merchants with instant check pre-approval are an example of an FDCPA "debt collector"[424] that is also an FCRA "consumer reporting agency."[425] If a collection agency or creditor meets this definition, it will have to comply with all the requirements that the FCRA imposes on consumer reporting agencies, including:

- Exclusion of obsolete information from credit reports;[426]
- Maintenance of reasonable procedures to ensure maximum possible accuracy of the information it reports[427] and to ensure that credit reports are provided only for permissible purposes;[428]
- Disclosure of the credit report to the consumer upon request, along with a written summary of the consumer's rights;[429] and
- Reinvestigation of disputed items.[430]

Creditors or collectors who do not consider themselves to be consumer reporting agencies are unlikely to have in place the necessary systems to comply with these many duties.

14.6.6 FDCPA and Other Prohibitions Relating to Credit Reports

14.6.6.1 Publicizing Indebtedness; Deceptive Implication That a Collector Is a Credit Bureau

The FDCPA prohibits a debt collector from publicizing consumers' indebtedness unless done in compliance with the FCRA.[431] Also, a debt collector may not use a name that deceptively implies that the collector is a consumer reporting agency, for example, a name with the words "credit bureau."[432] More broadly, it prohibits the use of any "false representation or implication that a debt collector operates or is employed by a consumer reporting agency as defined by [the FCRA]".[433]

14.6.6.2 Disputed Debts and the Verification Process

A debt collector who receives a written dispute during the thirty-day verification period after its initial communication with the consumer must cease all collection activity until it provides the required verification.[434] Since reporting the debt to a CRA is collection activity, it may be that the debt cannot be reported to a credit bureau until after the requested verification is provided.[435] Even after verification is provided, the debt remains known to the collector to be disputed. Therefore, the collector must disclose in all subsequent communications to the credit bureau that the debt is disputed in accordance with FDCPA's specific credit reporting provision, section 1692e(8).[436]

419 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 9.2.3.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

420 15 U.S.C. § 1681m(g).

421 15 U.S.C. § 1692g. See § 9.8, supra.

422 FTC Staff Summary of the FCRA, § 603(f), item 4I, available at www.fca.gov, reproduced in National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting Appx. D (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 2.5 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library. Cf. Cotto v. Jenny, 721 F. Supp. 5 (D. Mass. 1989) (landlord reporting service that prepared reports relative to tenant's tardiness in rental payments is "consumer reporting agency" and thus subject to Act).

423 National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 2.4.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

424 See § 4.7, supra.

425 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 2.3.6.3.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

426 15 U.S.C. § 1681c.

427 15 U.S.C. § 1681e(b).

428 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681b, 1681e(a).

429 15 U.S.C. § 1681g.

430 15 U.S.C. § 1681*i*.

431 15 U.S.C. § 1692d(3). See §§ 5.7, 6.5, supra.

432 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(16). See § 7.2.16, supra.

433 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(16). See § 7.2.16, supra.

434 See § 9.11.3, supra.

435 See Cass, FTC Informal Staff Letter, 1997 WL 33791232, at *1 (Dec. 23, 1997) (reporting to a credit bureau is "collection activity" that must cease until § 1692g(b) verification is provided). Although FTC informal staff opinion letters are not authoritative, courts might look to them for guidance. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 1.3.3.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library. Additionally, the FTC still engages in enforcement actions against unfair debt collection activity under the FDCPA. See, e.g., FTC Letter to CFPB (Feb. 19, 2021), available at https://www.ftc.gov.

436 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(8). See § 7.2.8, supra.

14.6.6.3 Threatening to Report Debt

False threats to report the consumer to a CRA are, like all false threats, prohibited by the FDCPA[437] and sometimes by state debt collection statutes[438] or consumer protection acts.[439] A lawyer who reports a client's nonpayment of a fee to a CRA may be in violation of the confidentiality requirements of the rules of professional conduct.[440]

It is a simple matter for a consumer to determine whether a collector has followed through on a threat to report a delinquency. The FCRA gives a consumer the right to be informed of most of the contents of their file at a consumer reporting agency, and the right to know who sent and received the information.[441] The three nationwide CRAs have established a "centralized source," required by the FCRA, where consumers can obtain their free annual credit report online.[442] Using this disclosure right, a consumer can verify whether the collector has made a report to a credit bureau as threatened as well as determine which debt collectors or creditors have reported information that needs to be disputed.

14.6.7 Negotiating a Debt Settlement Covering Credit Reporting

Consumers resolving their debt obligations need to consider the impact on their credit reports. In some situations, such as a settlement of collection litigation through a stipulated agreement entered in the collection court or other formal action entered into the court record, subsequent credit reporting must accurately track the official record.[443] Other situations, such as a settlement that is not part of a formal record or that acknowledges that previous reporting of the debt was inaccurate or incomplete, will require special attention.

To clear a previously negative report and make it nonderogatory or positive, the furnisher can submit to the CRAs a UDF (Universal Data Form) to correct the reporting and remove all derogatory data. Generally, the furnisher should report:

- Account Status as Paid and Closed, which is Account Status Code 13;
- Payment Rating should be 0, reflecting a current account;
- Payment History should not reflect any Past Due payment history if none otherwise exists;
- No Date of First Delinquency if one otherwise does not exist; and
- Current Balance should be $0.

Another option that may be available to consumers when negotiating a settlement with debt collectors or debt buyers is to simply delete the entire account or "tradeline."[444] This requires the debt collector or debt buyer who is furnishing information about a debt to request the removal of any mention of the account from a consumer's credit report from the consumer reporting agencies.[445]

Unfortunately, simply trying to say in plain English that, for example, the furnisher will report the debt as paid or agrees to delete the tradeline is typically not sufficient. A thorough discussion of this topic, including reproduction of sample settlement language necessary to effectuate an enforceable tradeline deletion, is provided in NCLC's Fair Credit Reporting.[446]

14.7 Payments to Debt Collectors

14.7.1 Overview

Consumers sometimes run into problems in connection with payments to debt collectors. The collector may have initiated a payment that the consumer did not authorize or expect. The collector may be repeatedly submitting a bounced payment, triggering nonsufficient funds fees. Or the consumer may wish to stop recurring payments. In addition to the specific FDCPA rules governing post-dated checks,[447] other laws give consumers rights.

The consumer protection laws governing payments vary depending on the type of payment and type of account the payment is taken from. Payments law is covered in detail in NCLC's Consumer Banking and Payments Law.[448] Credit card payments are covered in NCLC's Truth in Lending,[449] but credit card networks may prohibit debt collectors from accepting credit card payments.[450]

Most payments (other than credit card payments) fall into two categories: checks or electronic fund transfers. Checks (including remotely created checks, also known as telechecks)

437 See §§ 7.2.4, 7.2.5, supra.

438 See § 16.2, infra.

439 See § 16.3, infra. See also Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly No. 24-003-00 (opinion of Mass. Bar Assoc. Comm. on Prof'l Ethics that it is unethical for attorney to report to credit reporting agency that client has failed to pay fee).

440 Mass. Bar Assoc. Comm. on Prof'l Ethics, Op-3 (2000), available at www.massbar.org.

441 15 U.S.C. § 1681g. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting Ch. 3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

442 www.annualcreditreport.com. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 3.3.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

443 See, e.g., Dennis v. BEH-1, L.L.C., 520 F.3d 1066, 1070–1071 (9th Cir. 2008) (CRA is liable for failing to correct its report of judgment against consumer, when court records showed that case had been dismissed).

444 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 14.6.4.2.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

445 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting §§ 6.4.2.7, 14.6.4.2.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

446 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 14.6.4, Appx. K (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

447 See § 8.4, infra.

448 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

449 National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 7.9 (protections against credit card errors), § 7.10 (protections against unauthorized charges), § 7.11 (right to assert claims and defenses) (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

450 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law §§ 5.3.1.3.4, 5.3.9 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

are covered by the Uniform Commercial Code,[451] which also covers checks re-presented through the Automated Clearing House (ACH) system. Electronic fund transfers (EFTs) are covered by the Electronic Fund Transfer Act.[452] EFTs include a growing list of electronic payment methods, including ACH payments, debit and prepaid cards, and person-to-person (p2p) transfers such as Zelle or Venmo.[453]

14.7.2 Checks and Electronic Fund Transfers; the Role of NACHA Rules

Check payments to debt collectors are most likely to pose problems for consumers when collectors obtain the consumer's bank account and routing number and use that information to create a remotely created check. The UCC defines an authorized "signature" quite broadly to include a mark by a person authorized by the drawer.[454] That authorization may come in a written agreement or may be oral (i.e., on a telephone call with the debt collector).[455] If the consumer did not authorize the creation of a remotely created check, the consumer's right to contest it is the same as for other forged signatures.[456]

Electronic fund transfers of all types must be authorized; if not, the consumer has the right to contest it as unauthorized.[457] The EFTA requires disclosures (which should include payment authorizations) to be clear and readily understandable;[458] authorizations that are buried in fine print or that result in payments the consumer does not expect may not meet that standard. The EFTA does not otherwise have detailed authorization requirements[459] except for recurring preauthorized transfers.[460] The EFTA also requires advance notice when a preauthorized transfer will vary in amount from the previous transfer or the authorized amount.[461]

The rules of the National Automated Clearinghouse Association (NACHA) have more detailed authorization requirements for ACH payments, whether one-time or recurring, including clear and readily understandable information about the amount and timing of the debits. Authorization requirements vary depending on how the authorization is obtained (i.e., on the internet or by telephone).[462]

The EFTA protects consumers against unauthorized transfers and errors and sets out timing requirements for consumers and duties for financial institutions to resolve errors and limit consumer liability.[463] NACHA has similar rules.

The UCC gives consumers the right to stop payment on a check.[464] The EFTA does not provide a stop payment right for one-time EFTs, but it does give consumers the right to order the bank to stop recurring preauthorized transfers.[465] The EFTA also implies, but does not explicitly detail, the right to revoke the payee's (i.e., the debt collector's) authorization for recurring transfers.[466]

NACHA rules provide a right to stop one-time ACH payments scheduled in advance, ACH transactions based on checks, and recurring transfers.[467] NACHA rules also explicitly give consumers the right to revoke a payee's authorization for both recurring and single-entry debits scheduled to occur in advance, except for check conversions.[468] The right to revoke authorization and how to exercise it must be set forth in the authorization itself, and an authorization that lacks that information is unauthorized.[469]

If a check bounces, the UCC does not have rules concerning the number of times a bounced check may re-submitted, though general rules regarding check processing and final payment deadlines should apply.[470] But bounced checks are usually re-represented electronically through the ACH system.[471] These electronically re-presented checks (called RCK entries in NACHA terminology) are not considered to be EFTs, and instead are governed by the UCC[472] and by NACHA rules.[473]

451 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law Ch. 3 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

452 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law Ch. 5 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

453 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.1.5.3 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

454 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 3.13.2 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

455 Unlike debt collectors, debt relief services are prohibited by the FTC's Telemarketing Sales Rule from obtaining authorization for a remotely created check in telephone transactions. See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 3.13.2.2 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

456 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 3.7.2.2 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

457 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.5 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

458 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.3.1.1 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

459 Instead, the EFTA defines "unauthorized transfers" and gives consumers protection against them. See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.5.2 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

460 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.9.2 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

461 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.9.3 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

462 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.3 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

463 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law §§ 5.5, 5.6 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

464 See id.

465 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.9.4 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

466 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.9.4.2 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

467 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.3.7.2 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

468 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.3.7.2.3 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

469 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.3.1.2 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

470 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 3.8.5 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

471 See id.

472 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.1.5.3.3.3 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

473 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law §§ 5.3.5, 5.13 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

NACHA rules allow RCKs, as well as bounced ACH payments, to be re-presented only twice more after the original presentment.[474] NACHA rules also prohibit dividing the check or original ACH payment into smaller amounts for reprocessing.[475]

If a check or EFT bounces, debt collectors may attempt to collect a returned item fee. If a remotely created check is used to collect the fee, then the UCC rules governing authorized signatures apply. If, more typically, the ACH system is used, then EFTA and NACHA rules and authorization requirements regarding returned item fees apply.[476]

All of these rules are addressed in detail in NCLC's Consumer Banking and Payments Law.[477]

14.8 Discriminatory Collection Tactics Based on Race, Other Prohibited Categories

Collection tactics may involve invidious discrimination. Such tactics could include the use of derogatory race or gender epithets in a collection call, or differential policies regarding renegotiation of credit terms. Generally speaking, the party attempting to collect a debt will either be the creditor or a third-party debt collector. The Equal Credit Opportunity Act (ECOA)[478] forbids discrimination by creditors, while the FDCPA covers debt collectors. Although the FDCPA does not contain any provisions specifically forbidding discrimination, discrimination should be actionable as "abuse"[479] or an "unfair or unconscionable"[480] means of collecting a debt. Some provisions of the Civil Rights Act may also apply, and if the debtor's home is at risk, the Fair Housing Act may be applicable.[481]

The ECOA provides that it "shall be unlawful for any creditor to discriminate against any applicant, with respect to any aspect of a credit transaction" on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, sex, marital status, age, receipt of public assistance, or exercise of rights under the Consumer Credit Protection Act.[482] Although the primary focus of the ECOA is discriminatory treatment during the application and credit extension stages of a credit transaction, this broad language also prohibits discriminatory collection tactics by a creditor.[483] Regulations promulgated under the ECOA provide that the term "credit transaction" means "every aspect of an applicant's dealing with a creditor regarding an application for credit or an existing extension of credit (including, but not limited to . . . collection procedures)."[484] This language means that the consumer is protected by the ECOA "throughout the life of the credit account, from the initial request to the final payment or a collection action."[485]

The terms "creditor" and "applicant" are similarly broad, although not without limits. According to the regulations, an applicant is "any person who requests or who has received an extension of credit from a creditor," including "any person who is or may become contractually liable regarding an extension of credit."[486] To qualify as a creditor under the ECOA, a party must be involved in some way in the decision to extend credit or in setting the terms of the credit.[487] Therefore, an assignee of the original creditor may not be covered, unless it was involved in the initial extension of credit or its activities constitute the extension of new credit. An offer to modify the terms of an existing debt qualifies as an extension of credit.[488]

Defendants engaged in collecting debts may argue that they are somehow protected by the FRB's definition of "adverse action," which excludes "any action or forbearance relating to an account taken in connection with inactivity, default, or delinquency as to that account."[489] This definition applies, however, only to the question of whether the creditor must give the consumer a notice of adverse action,[490] a duty that is separate from the general duty not to discriminate with respect to any aspect of a credit transaction.[491]

474 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.13.2 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

475 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.13.3 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

476 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law §§ 5.1.5.3.3.3, 5.3.6 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

477 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

478 15 U.S.C. § 1691.

479 15 U.S.C. § 1692d, discussed at § 6.2, supra.

480 15 U.S.C. § 1692f, discussed at § 8.3.6, supra.

481 42 U.S.C. § 3604(a) (making it illegal to "make unavailable or deny" housing on the basis of a discriminatory factor), § 3605 (forbidding discrimination in the terms of a "residential real estate-related transaction"). See Harper v. Union Sav. Ass'n, 429 F. Supp. 1254 (N.D. Ohio 1977) (FHA covers foreclosure activity); Lindsey v. Modern Am. Mortg. Corp., 383 F. Supp. 293 (N.D. Tex. 1974) (same). But see Estate of Davis v. Wells Fargo Bank, 633 F.3d 529 (7th Cir. 2011) (unsubstantiated claim of racial discrimination insufficient to support FHA claim); Moore v. Fed. Deposit Ins. Corp., 2009 WL 4405538 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 30, 2009) (allegations involving "post-default action," such as repeatedly ignoring requests for information, workout and documentation, do not state § 3605 claim because plaintiffs were "not attempting to engage in a residential real estate transaction as the term is defined in the FHA").

482 15 U.S.C. § 1691a (emphasis added).

483 Sharp v. Chartwell Fin. Services Ltd., 2000 WL 283095 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 6, 2000) (collector's use of racial and gender-based epithets during collection phone calls held actionable). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 9.2.4 (6th ed. 2013), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

484 Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 1002.2(m).

485 Fed. Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Allen, 1988 WL 361044 (W.D. Okla. Nov. 3, 1988).

486 Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 1002.2(e) [§ 202.2(e)]. See Estate of Davis v. Wells Fargo Bank, 633 F.3d 529 (7th Cir. 2011) (reversing dismissal of ECOA claim which held that plaintiff was not "applicant," but finding harmless error due to insufficient proof on merits).

487 15 U.S.C. § 1691a(e) ("The term 'creditor' means any person who regularly extends, renews, or continues credit; any person who regularly arranges for the extension, renewal, or continuation of credit; or any assignee of an original creditor who participates in the decision to extend, renew, or continue credit.").

488 See Estate of Davis v. Wells Fargo Bank, 639 F.3d 529 (7th Cir. 2011).

489 Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 1002.2(c)(2)(ii).

490 See 15 U.S.C. § 1691(d); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 1002.9.

491 See 15 U.S.C. § 1691(a). But see Lewis v. ACB Bus. Services, 135 F.3d 389 (6th Cir. 1998) (confusing definition of "adverse action" with general prohibition against discrimination and ruling that creditor was not

Because the ECOA includes marital status and sex as protected classes, there may also be ECOA liability when a creditor or collector attempts to collect a debt from a spouse whose alleged liability is based solely on a family expense statute by which one spouse is automatically responsible for certain expenses such as medical bills incurred by the other. One court[492] has suggested that such liability would be contrary to the ECOA's rule that a person has the right to obtain credit separately from their spouse.[493] Attempting to collect a debt against a spouse without any explicit assumption of joint liability may also violate the FDCPA[494] and may be deceptive.[495]

Actions may be brought under the ECOA for both disparate treatment (differential treatment because of membership in a protected group) and disparate impact (the use of some facially neutral factor or policy that results in a discriminatory effect on a protected group).[496] Discrimination in the debt collection context is related to the developing body of law on reverse redlining, where the issue is not exclusion from access to credit, but rather targeting certain populations for negative credit treatment.[497]

The ECOA provides a private action for actual and punitive damages, attorney fees to a successful plaintiff, and federal court jurisdiction.[498] The statute of limitations for ECOA claims is five years.[499]

The sections of the Civil Rights Acts that apply to nongovernmental actions may also provide remedies if discriminatory collection tactics have been used.[500] By virtue of the 1991 amendments, 42 U.S.C. § 1981 applies to all aspects of the contractual relationship, including "performance, modification, and termination of contracts." The amendments also make it clear that section 1981 bars both public and private discrimination.[501] The Civil Rights Act can apply regardless of whether the defendant meets the statutory definitions of "debt collector" or "creditor" under the statutes discussed above. However, unlike the ECOA, disparate impact theories are not available under the Civil Rights Act, so it will be necessary to show disparate treatment.[502]

14.9 Federal Credit Repair Organizations Act

14.9.1 Overview

The federal Credit Repair Organizations Act (CROA)[503] is discussed in detail in NCLC's Fair Credit Reporting.[504] It may apply to debt buyers or debt collectors in two circumstances. First, as discussed in the next section, some courts have held that a debt collector may meet CROA's definition of "credit repair organization" if it states, in a collection letter or otherwise, that payment of a debt will improve the consumer's credit rating. An entity that meets the definition of "credit repair organization" is subject to disclosure requirements, specific restrictions on its contracts, and a prohibition against accepting payment from a consumer until the promised credit repair services are fully performed.[505] liable under ECOA for filing collection suit allegedly in retaliation for consumer's FDCPA suit; in alternate holding, consumer failed to show causal connection between FDCPA suit and collection suit).

492 Edwards v. McCormick, 136 F. Supp. 2d 795 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 30, 2001).

493 15 U.S.C. § 1691(a)(1); 12 C.F.R. § 1002.7(d)(1) [§ 202.7(d)(1)]. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 9.3 (7th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

494 Edwards v. McCormick, 136 F. Supp. 2d 795 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 30, 2001) (finding it unnecessary to decide issue, but commenting favorably that ECOA would preempt any state liability theory holding spouse responsible for debt where spouse had not signed as financially responsible party). See also CMRE Fin. Services, Inc. v. Parton, 109 Cal. Rptr. 3d 139 (Cal. Ct. App. 2010) (remanding for consideration of good faith defense under FDCPA when creditor continued collection actions after non-debtor spouse notified creditor of separation and pending divorce from debtor). But cf. Lester E. Cox Med. Ctrs. v. Huntsman, 2003 WL 22004998 (W.D. Mo. Aug. 5, 2003) (husband liable for wife's medical bill under necessaries doctrine; not Fair Debt Collection Practices Act violation to dun him for bill), aff'd 408 F.3d 989 (8th Cir. 2005).

495 See Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (finding deception under state UDAP law where collector brought action against debtor's spouse where spouse had no legal obligation to pay debt).

496 See S. Rep. No. 94-589, at 4 (1976), reprinted in 1976 U.S.C.C.A.N. 403, 406. See also Official Staff Commentary to Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 1002.6(a)-2; Golden v. City of Columbus, 404 F.3d 950, 963 (6th Cir. 2005); Miller v. Am. Exp. Co., 688 F.2d 1235 (9th Cir. 1982). See also Palmer v. Homecomings Fin., L.L.C., 677 F. Supp. 2d 233 (D.D.C. 2010); Rodriguez v. SLM Corp., 2009 WL 598252, at *3 (D. Conn. Mar. 6, 2009) (refusing to dismiss disparate impact claim under ECOA when lender allegedly charged minority borrowers higher interest rates and fees than similarly situated Caucasians on private student loans). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination Ch. 4 (7th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

497 See generally National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination Ch. 8 (7th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library (discussion of reverse redlining).

498 15 U.S.C. § 1691e. See National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 11.8 (7th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

499 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(f), as amended by the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act, Pub. L. No. 111-203, tit. X, §§ 1085(7), 1100H (2010). See also 75 Fed. Reg. 57,252 (Sept. 20, 2010) (setting effective date of the amendment (the "designated transfer date")). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 11.8.1 (7th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

500 See, e.g., 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1982, 1985.

Some debt collection tactics that utilize the courts or public officials constitute state action, potentially giving rise to a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 as well. See § 14.11, Infra.

501 42 U.S.C. § 1981(c).

502 See, e.g., Gen. Bldg. Contractors Ass'n v. Pennsylvania, 458 U.S. 375, 102 S. Ct. 3141, 73 L. Ed. 2d 835 (1982); Roy v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 607 F. Supp. 2d 1297, 1308–1309 (N.D. Fla. 2009). But see NAACP v. Ameriquest Mortg. Co., 635 F. Supp. 2d 1096, 1104 (C.D. Cal. 2009) (refusing to dismiss disparate impact claim under section 1982 in reverse redlining case; relying on Phiffer v. Proud Parrot Motor Hotel, Inc., 648 F.2d 548, 551 (9th Cir. 1980), which was not disparate impact case). See National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 4.3 (7th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

503 15 U.S.C. §§ 1679 to 1679j.

504 National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting Ch. 17 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

505 15 U.S.C. §§ 1679b(a), 1679b(b).

Second, as discussed in § 14.9.4, infra, the Act prohibits anyone—regardless of whether that person meets the definition of "credit repair organization"—from engaging in certain deceptive practices. A debt collector might violate these prohibitions if it made deceptive statements about how a credit repair organization could help the debtor, or encouraged the debtor to make misstatements to another creditor as a way of obtaining funds to pay off the debt. Where it applies, CROA offers distinct advantages over the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act as a basis for suit against debt collectors. It allows punitive damages without a cap in either an individual action or a class action.[506] It also allows minimum damages in the amount of all payments made to the defendant, without regard to actual damages.[507] Significantly, an entity that is excluded from the FDCPA because it acquired the debt before it went into default can still meet the CROA definition of "credit repair organization."

Creditors who use deceptive tactics in collecting their own debts can be sued under UDAP statutes or special debt collection laws in most states,[508] but the CROA offers certain advantages that these statutes may not have. There is no explicit exception for attorneys, and courts have held that attorneys are credit repair organizations if they meet the elements of the definition.[509]

14.9.2 Whether Creditors and Collectors Are "Credit Repair Organizations"

The statute defines "credit repair organization" as any person who uses any instrumentality of interstate commerce or the mails to perform or offer to perform any service, for a fee or other valuable consideration, for the express or implied purpose of—

> (i) improving any consumer's credit record, credit history, or credit rating; or > (ii) providing advice and assistance to any consumer with regard to any activity or service described in clause (i).[510]

Simply advertising or claiming to provide credit repair services is sufficient, even if the organization does not actually perform the services.[511] Whether the organization actually performs any services is irrelevant.[512] The definition of credit repair organization has three exceptions:

- It does not include any depository institution or credit union, or their subsidiaries or affiliates.[513]
- The definition does not include non-profit organizations that are exempt from taxation under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code.[514] To qualify for this exception, an organization must both have tax-exempt status and be operating in fact as a non-profit organization.[515] Courts have rejected attempts by sham non-profits to claim this exemption.[516]
- The definition does not include an originating creditor's restructuring of a consumer's debt to it.[517]

This last exception, however, applies only to entities that meet the Truth in Lending Act's definition of "creditor":

> [A] person who both (1) regularly extends, whether in connection with loans, sales of property or services, or otherwise, consumer credit which is payable by agreement in 506 The FDCPA has a statutory damages cap of $1000 in individual actions and $500,000 or 1% of net worth in class actions. 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(2). See §§ 11.9, 11.11.3, supra.

507 15 U.S.C. § 1679g. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2.8 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

508 See Ch. 16, infra.

509 See Rannis v. Fair Credit Lawyers, Inc., 380 Fed. Appx. 646 (9th Cir. 2010) (attorney who advertised "Improve Your Credit Score Now!" is credit repair organization; no exemption for non-litigation activities performed within attorney-client relationship); Iosello v. Lexington Law Firm, 2003 WL 21920237 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 7, 2003); In re Disciplinary Action Against McCray, 755 N.W.2d 835 (N.D. 2008) (law firm that acted as front for credit repair operation is credit repair organization). See also Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Gill, 265 F.3d 944 (9th Cir. 2001) (applying CROA to attorney who allowed credit repair operative to work out of his office). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2.2.5 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

510 15 U.S.C. § 1679a(3)(A).

511 Zimmerman v. Cambridge Credit Counseling Corp., 529 F. Supp. 2d 254, 275 n.20 (D. Mass. 2008); Hillis v. Equifax Consumer Services, Inc., 237 F.R.D. 491, 509 (N.D. Ga. 2006) (defendant's representation that "Score Power" was "service" is sufficient, but CROA does not cover services that offer only prospective credit advice to consumers); Asmar v. Benchmark Literacy Group, Inc., 2005 WL 2562965 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 11, 2005) (for-profit entity that sells credit repair services is credit repair organization even if actual services are performed by non-profit affiliate, and even if it shares fee with that affiliate); Browning v. Yahoo!, Inc., 2004 WL 2496183 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 4, 2004) (denial of motion to dismiss) (company that represented that it could provide credit services can be credit repair organization, even though another entity actually provided services); Parker v. 1-800 Bar None, 2002 WL 215530 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 12, 2002) (company that provided no credit repair services itself, but just referred consumer to another organization, is covered); Sannes v. Jeff Wyler Chevrolet, Inc., 1999 WL 33313134 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 31, 1999); In re Nat'l Credit Mgmt. Group, L.L.C., 21 F. Supp. 2d 424 (D.N.J. 1998). See Parker v. 1-800 Bar None, 2002 WL 215530 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 12, 1002).

512 Zimmerman v. Cambridge Credit Counseling Corp., 529 F. Supp. 2d 254 (D. Mass. 2008); Asmar v. Benchmark Literacy Group, Inc., 2005 WL 2562965 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 11, 2005) (for-profit entity that sells credit repair services is credit repair organization, even if actual services are performed by non-profit affiliate, and even if it shares fee with that affiliate).

513 15 U.S.C. § 1679a(3)(B)(iii).

514 15 U.S.C. § 1679a(3)(B)(i).

515 Zimmerman v. Cambridge Credit Counseling Corp., 409 F.3d 473 (1st Cir. 2005) (IRS determination is not dispositive); Baker v. Family Credit Counseling Corp., 440 F. Supp. 2d 392 (E.D. Pa. 2006) (allowing CROA claims to proceed against § 501(c)(3) organizations that allegedly funneled money to related for-profit corporations); Polacsek v. Debticated Consumer Counseling, Inc., 413 F. Supp. 2d 539, 550 (D. Md. 2005).

516 See, e.g., Polacsek v. Debticated Consumer Counseling, Inc., 413 F. Supp. 2d 539, 550 (D. Md. 2005).

517 15 U.S.C. § 1679a(3)(B)(ii). See Spencer v. Arizona Premium Fin. Co., 2011 WL 4473178 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 26, 2011) (creditor collecting debt it originated falls within this exemption).

> more than four installments or for which the payment of a finance charge is or may be required, and (2) is the person to whom the debt arising from the consumer credit transaction is initially payable on the face of the evidence of indebtedness or, if there is no such evidence of indebtedness, by agreement.[518]

A company that purchases or is assigned a debt from the entity to which it was originally owed will not fall into this exception, even if it is restructuring the debt. Thus, if a debt buyer represents to the consumer that it will improve the consumer's credit rating if the consumer pays the debt, it may be a credit repair organization.[519] Even an originating creditor may be a credit repair organization if it falls outside the Truth in Lending definition of "creditor", because it does not extend credit "regularly" or because the debt is not payable in more than four installments or subject to a finance charge.

Several courts have held that debt collectors may be credit repair organizations if they promise improvement of the debtor's credit record in return for payment of the debt. In Bigalke v. Creditrust Corp.,[520] a company that had purchased a delinquent debt sent the debtor a letter falsely representing that, if the debtor settled the debt, the company would "completely remove the entire outstanding balance from your credit report." The court held that this letter constituted the use of an instrumentality of interstate commerce to offer to provide the debtor a service which purported to improve the consumer's credit record.

As for the requirement that the service be offered "in return for the payment of money or other valuable consideration,"[521] the court considered this criterion satisfied by the demand for payment of the debt.[522] The court noted that whether or not the original creditor might fall within the exception for workouts, this exception was not available to an entity that had purchased the debt.[523]

However, several courts have held that any benefit to the debtor from paying the debt is incidental and does not make the collection agency a credit repair organization.[524] Ultimately, whether a collection agency meets the definition of credit repair organization should depend on the details of the defendant's offer to the consumer.

A debt collector that has not purchased a debt should also be considered a credit repair organization as defined by the Act when offering improvement of the debtor's credit rating in return for a payment on the debt.[525] Debt collectors may try to take advantage of the exception for creditors who arrange workouts by arguing that the debt collector is merely acting as an agent of the original creditor to try to restructure the debt, and thus falls within the exception set forth at 15 U.S.C. § 1679(a)(3)(B)(ii). Discovery of the agreement between the creditor and the debt collector may determine if the debt collector really is given the authority of an agent to restructure the debt on behalf of the creditor. Most debt collectors merely seek repayment, rather than restructuring the debt. Also check whether the current holder of the debt is itself an assignee of 519 See Bigalke v. Creditrust Corp., 162 F. Supp. 2d 996 (N.D. Ill. 2001).

---

518 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f).

520 162 F. Supp. 2d 996 (N.D. Ill. 2001). See also Kennedy v. CompuCredit Holdings Corp., 9 F. Supp. 3d 1314 (M.D. Fla. 2014) (refusing to dismiss claim that debt collector which offered to give debtor fresh start by issuing her new credit card if she made payments on debt was credit repair organization). But see Kielty v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 400584 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 28, 2015) (encouraging repayment of debt by stating that repayment will improve credit score does not make debt collector a credit repair organization), aff'd, 690 Fed. Appx. 941 (9th Cir. 2017); White v. Fin. Credit Corp., 2001 WL 1665386 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 27, 2001) (debt collector's reference to improving consumer report did not make it credit repair organization). But cf. Dauval v. Preferred Collection and Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 2012 WL 5928622 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 26, 2012) (finding that "Act today by contacting our office to resolve this outstanding debt and restore your credit by having us inform the credit reporting agencies of your positive action" is representation that collector could provide services for express or implied purpose of improving debtor's credit rating, but dismissing CROA claim because payment of debt was not compensation for credit repair services); Spencer v. Ariz. Premium Fin. Co., 2011 WL 4473178 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 26, 2011) (creditor collecting its own debt is not credit repair organization, despite stating that payment of debt would repair consumer's credit).

521 15 U.S.C. § 1679a(3)(A).

522 Bigalke v. Creditrust Corp., 162 F. Supp. 2d 996, 998 (N.D. Ill. 2001). Accord Kennedy v. CompuCredit Holdings Corp., 9 F. Supp. 3d 1314, 1320 (M.D. Fla. 2014) (refusing to dismiss claim that debt collector which offered to give debtor a fresh start by issuing her a new credit card if she made payments on an otherwise uncollectible debt was a credit repair organization, and that debtor's payments on the debt met the requirement of payment of money or other valuable consideration). But see Kielty v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 400584 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 28, 2015) (must be additional fee for credit repair services, not just repayment of debt), aff'd, 690 Fed. Appx. 941 (9th Cir. 2017); Dauval v. Preferred Collection and Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 2012 WL 5928622 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 26, 2012) (offering to improve consumer's credit rating for no compensation other than payment of the debt owed is insufficient); Oslan v. Collection Bureau, 2001 WL 34355648 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 13, 2001) (debt collector is covered only if receives or solicits payment beyond repayment of debt).

523 15 U.S.C. § 1679a(3)(B)(ii). See generally § 17.2.2.3.3, supra.

524 See Walston v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2019 WL 4139002, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 30, 2019) (collection agency that offered credit card application if consumer paid debt was not credit repair organization; defendant was providing service to creditor, potential incidental effect on consumers' credit history did not make defendant a credit repair organization); Kielty v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 400584, at *4 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 28, 2015) (debt collector not credit repair organization, because improvement of debtor's credit score was only "indirect, collateral effect" of paying debt), aff'd, 690 Fed. Appx. 941 (9th Cir. 2017); Holmes v. TRS Recovery Services, Inc., 2007 WL 9783242, at *10 (M.D. Tenn. Nov. 14, 2007) ("Although it may well be that the defendants represented that the payment of the debt and the fee would have the collateral effect of positively impacting the plaintiff's future ability to write checks to merchants who are customers of the defendants, courts have held that ancillary credit effects do not render an entity a credit repair organization."). See also Plattner v. Edge Solutions, Inc., 422 F. Supp. 2d 969, 975 (N.D. Ill. 2006) (debt settlement company not a credit repair organization; actions that "have the effect of improving credit scores" do not "necessarily transform[] an entity into a credit repair organization subject to the requirements and prohibitions of the CROA").

525 See Nielsen v. United Creditors Alliance Corp., 1999 WL 674740 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 23, 1999) (denying motion to dismiss claim that debt collector was covered by CROA).

the original creditor; since an assignee of the original credit does not fall within the exemption, its agent will not be able to claim the exemption either.[526]

14.9.3 Substantive Restrictions on Credit Repair Organizations

A collector or creditor that meets the CROA's definition of "credit repair organization" must make certain disclosures and include certain terms, such as a right to cancel any contract the consumer enters into with the organization.[527] It may not charge or receive any payment for its services from the consumer until the service is fully performed.[528]

14.9.4 Substantive Prohibitions Applicable to Any "Person"

The Act also includes four prohibitions of various deceptive tactics.[529] These prohibitions are applicable to "any person," whether or not the person meets the definition of "credit repair organization."[530]

First, no person may make or advise a consumer to make an untrue or misleading statement about the consumer's creditworthiness, credit standing, or credit capacity to any credit reporting agency or any existing or potential creditor.[531] A collection agency or creditor might violate this prohibition if it urged a consumer to make misstatements in order to obtain credit to pay off the debt.

Second, no person may help or advise a consumer to conceal or alter the consumer's identity as a way of hiding the consumer's credit record from a credit reporting agency or an actual or potential creditor.[532] This prohibition might also apply to a collection agency or creditor that handled a consumer's application for credit from a third party in order to pay off the debt.

Third, no person may make any untrue or misleading statement about the services of a credit repair agency.[533] This prohibition is not confined to deception regarding the organization's credit repair services. Deception about any aspect of the organization's services appears to be a violation. An untrue or misleading representation about the organization's services is a violation whether or not it is made for the purpose of inducing consumers to buy the services.[534] A debt collector that qualifies as a credit repair organization might violate this prohibition if it makes false statements about its ability to improve the consumer's credit record if the consumer pays the debt.[535]

Fourth, no person may engage in fraud or deception in connection with the offer or sale of the services of a credit repair agency.[536] This prohibition will apply to a debt collector that qualifies as a credit repair organization and makes representations about its own services, or to one that makes false representations while referring a consumer to a credit repair organization.

14.9.5 Private Remedies

If a creditor or collector is covered by the CROA, it is liable for violations with respect to any person in the sum of:

- The greater of actual damages or the amount paid to the organization;
- Such additional punitive damages as the court may allow; and
- Costs and reasonable attorney fees.[537]

In addition, although of less relevance in the collections context, a contract with a credit repair agency that does not comply with the CROA is void.[538] Consumers may not waive any protection provided by the Act.[539]

Liability is not confined to credit repair organizations, but applies to "any person" who fails to comply with the Act. Thus, other entities that are directly or indirectly involved in deception may also be liable.[540]

526 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2.2.3.3 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

527 15 U.S.C. § 1679b(b). National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting §§ 17.2.3, 17.2.4, 17.2.5 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

528 15 U.S.C. § 1679(b). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2.6 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

529 15 U.S.C. § 1679b(a).

530 15 U.S.C. § 1679b(a). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2.7.1 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (full discussion of applicability of these prohibitions to any person and the conflicting judicial decisions on the question).

531 15 U.S.C. § 1679b(a)(1). See Ware v. Indymac Bank, 534 F. Supp. 2d 835 (N.D. Ill. 2008) (refusing to dismiss claim that mortgage broker violated CROA by falsifying borrower's income and assets on credit application); Martinez v. Freedom Mortgage Team, Inc., 527 F. Supp. 2d 827 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (same as Ware). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2.7.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

532 15 U.S.C. § 1679b(a)(2). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2.7.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

533 15 U.S.C. § 1679b(a)(3). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2.7.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

534 Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Gill, 265 F.3d 944 (9th Cir. 2001).

535 Nielsen v. United Creditors Alliance Corp., 1999 WL 674740 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 23, 1999) (denying motion to dismiss). See also Bigalke v. Creditrust Corp., 162 F. Supp. 2d 996 (N.D. Ill. 2001) (denial of motion to dismiss) (debt collector that sent similar letter was credit repair organization), later op. at 2001 WL 1098047 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 11, 2001) (certifying class). But cf. White v. Fin. Credit Corp., 2001 WL 1665386 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 27, 2001) (statement that payment would improve debtor's credit report was not untrue or misleading).

536 15 U.S.C. § 1679b(a)(4). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2.7.5 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

537 15 U.S.C. § 1679g(a). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2.8 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

538 15 U.S.C. § 1679f(c).

539 15 U.S.C. § 1679f(a). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2.9 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

540 Zimmerman v. Puccio, 613 F.3d 60 (1st Cir. 2010); Vance v. Nat'l Benefit Ass'n, 1999 WL 731764 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 26, 1999). See also Fed.

Any person may sue a credit repair organization, as long as the credit repair organization has violated a requirement relating to the person suing.[541] A district court held that consumers who had received a misleading letter from a debt collector that met the definition of a credit repair organization could recover without showing actual damages or that they were actually misled.[542] But, in light of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez,[543] practitioners should plead the details of any concrete injury.

The CROA explicitly contemplates class actions.[544] The ease of establishing liability for damages makes class actions particularly attractive under this statute.

In awarding punitive damages, CROA requires courts to consider the frequency, persistence, and nature of the noncompliance, the extent to which the violation was intentional, and, in a class action, the number of consumers adversely affected.[545] In class actions, the punitive damages may be the aggregate of the amount which the court may allow for each named plaintiff, plus an aggregate amount for other class members without regard to any minimum individual recovery.[546]

Unlike the private enforcement provisions of other titles of the Consumer Credit Protection Act,[547] the Credit Repair Organization Act does not contain a specific grant of jurisdiction in the federal district courts. To date, courts have not viewed this with concern, but have exercised federal question jurisdiction over CROA claims.[548]

The Supreme Court has rejected the view that the Act's unusually strong prohibition of waivers means that the right to sue in court cannot be waived and that arbitration clauses are void.[549] However, a number of other grounds may exist to challenge an arbitration clause.[550]

The statute of limitations for an action under the Credit Repair Organizations Act is five years from the occurrence of the violation.[551] Where the violation relates to the organization's material and willful failure to disclose, the five-year period begins to run when the consumer discovers the misrepresentation.[552]

14.10 Collection of Taxes by Private Debt Collection Agencies

14.10.1 Requirement that IRS Engage Private Collectors

14.10.1.1 Scope of requirement

The Internal Revenue Service is required by section 6306 of the Internal Revenue Code (IRC) to outsource the collection of certain federal tax debts to private collection agencies (PCAs). The IRS must enter into one or more "qualified tax collection contracts" with PCAs for the collection of "inactive tax receivables."[553] The IRS is required to contract with at least one of the PCAs on a list of companies designated by the Treasury Department for the collection of federal debts.[554]

Inactive tax receivables are any tax debts in the IRS' "potentially collectible inventory" that meet at least one of these criteria:[555]

- The tax debt has been removed from active inventory by the IRS for lack of resources or inability to locate the taxpayer;
- More than one-third of the applicable statute of limitations has lapsed and the tax debt has not been assigned to an IRS employee for collection; or
- Of tax debts assigned to an IRS employee for collection, more than one year has passed without an interaction with the taxpayer or a third party for purposes of collection.

14.10.1.2 Exemptions

Certain taxpayers are statutorily exempt from the program. Exemptions include:

- Taxpayers who are deceased;
- Minors;
- Victims of tax-related identity theft;
- Individuals whose income substantially consists wholly of disability or Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits;
- Individuals with adjusted gross income which does not exceed 200 percent of the poverty level or those in a designated combat zone; and
- Debts that are already in certain types of administrative proceedings, including a pending or active offer-in-compromise or installment agreement; classified as an innocent spouse

Trade Comm'n v. Gill, 265 F.3d 944 (9th Cir. 2001) (affirming $1.3 million restitution award against attorney who allowed credit repair operator to work out of his offices and under his supervision). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2.8.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

541 15 U.S.C. § 1679g(a) (violation must be "with respect to" plaintiff). But cf. Hillis v. Equifax Consumer Services, Inc., 237 F.R.D. 491, 498–499 (N.D. Ga. 2006) (questioning standing when consumer may not have seen misrepresentations).

542 Bigalke v. Creditrust Corp., 2001 WL 1098047 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 11, 2001).

543 ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). See § 11.15, supra.

544 15 U.S.C. § 1679g(a)(2)(B).

545 15 U.S.C. § 1679g(b).

546 15 U.S.C. § 1679g(2)(B).

547 Title I, Truth in Lending Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1601 to 1667e; Title IV, Fair Credit Reporting Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681 to 1681t; Title VII, Equal Credit Opportunity Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1691 to 1691f; Title VIII, Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692 to 1692p; Title IX, Electronic Fund Transfer Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1693 to 1693r.

548 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2.8.8 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

549 CompuCredit Corp. v. Greenwood, 565 U.S. 95, 132 S. Ct. 665, 181 L. Ed. 2d 586 (2012).

550 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2.8.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

551 15 U.S.C. § 1679*i*.

552 Id.

553 26 U.S.C. § 6306(c).

554 26 U.S.C. § 6306(h) (cross-referencing 31 U.S.C. § 3711(g)).

555 26 U.S.C. § 6306(c)(2).

case; or under examination, litigation, criminal investigation, levy or appeal.[556]

In 2019, the Taxpayer First Act[557] added the exemptions for low-income taxpayers and taxpayers with disability and SSI benefits from the PCA program. Previously, an IRS analysis had found that 79% of cases that were likely to be referred to PCAs involved taxpayers with incomes below 250% of the federal poverty level.[558]

The IRS had also previously agreed in principle not to assign to private collection agencies the accounts of taxpayers who receive Social Security Disability Insurance and SSI, but had failed to follow through on that promise,[559] necessitating the passage of the Taxpayer First Act. Despite passage of the Act, the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA) expressed concern in a recent report that, even after IRS altered its methodology to identify low-income taxpayers, some low-income taxpayers will still be assigned to PCAs.[560]

The statute also permits the IRS to establish procedures for taxpayers in federally declared disaster zones to seek exemption from the program.[561] The limited procedures established have not protected disaster survivors from collection efforts.[562]

14.10.1.3 Scope of collection activities

Section 6306 defines a "qualified tax collection contract" as a contract under which PCAs perform a very limited set of activities:

- Locating and contacting taxpayers;
- Requesting full payment;
- If full payment is not forthcoming, offering installment agreements not to exceed five years; and
- Obtaining specific financial information about the taxpayer if so directed by the IRS.[563]

Despite this limited set of authorized collection activities, the IRS entered contracts that permit PCAs to set up installment agreements lasting up to seven years, and also to request one voluntary payment from taxpayers before returning their case to IRS if the taxpayer does not fully pay or enter into an installment agreement.[564] In fiscal year 2019, the IRS began allowing PCAs to seek unstructured payments and take commissions that were not explicitly authorized by the statute or the collection contract.[565] Query whether allowing PCAs to offer payment plans or so-called voluntary payments violates section 6306 and thus is actionable. Between August 2019 and May 2020, 7704 taxpayers were placed into these supposedly voluntary payment plans. Of these taxpayers, 54% had made no payments at all and 20% had made only one payment, which means about 75% of these taxpayers did not end up paying according to their agreements. TIGTA noted in a recent report that "[c]ontinuing to allow PCAs to accept unstructured payments without a review of a taxpayer's financial situation increases the likelihood that these taxpayers will be put into a financial hardship situation and will eventually default."[566]

14.10.2 History of IRS Private Debt Collection Program

The IRS had previously conducted two pilot programs that placed federal tax debts with PCAs, in 1996–1997 and in 2006–2009. The 1996–1997 pilot resulted in a $17 million net loss to the government,[567] while the 2006–2009 program resulted in a net loss of almost $4.5 million.[568] The 2006–2009 program led to a number of complaints and concerns about PCAs using abusive tactics, failing to safeguard the confidentiality of taxpayer information, and lacking sufficient background in tax remedies and options for taxpayers.[569]

556 26 U.S.C. § 6306(d).

557 See H.R.3151, Sec. 1205, the Taxpayer First Act, available at https://www.congress.gov.

558 Letter from Nina Olson, National Taxpayer Advocate, to Senate Committee on Finance and House Ways & Means Committee 8 (May 13, 2014), available at http://taxpayeradvocate.irs.gov (regarding use of private collection agencies (PCAs) to collect delinquent federal tax debts).

559 National Taxpayer Advocate, FY 2019 Objectives Report to Congress, vol. 1, 62 (June 27, 2018).

560 Fiscal Year 2021 Biannual Independent Assessment of Private Collection Agency Performance 19, available at https://www.treasury.gov.

561 26 U.S.C. § 6306(i).

562 See Letter from Senators Elizabeth Warren, Richard Blumenthal, Bernard Sanders, and Bill Nelson to Acting IRS Commissioner David Kautter (Mar. 22, 2018), available at https://www.warren.senate.gov (requesting information regarding IRS implementation of private debt collection program provision meant to protect taxpayers impacted by federally declared disasters); Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration, Private Debt Collection Was Implemented Despite Resource Challenges; However, Internal Support and Taxpayer Protections Are Limited, Reference No. 2018-30-052, at 18 (Sept. 5, 2018).

563 26 U.S.C. § 6306(b)(1).

564 National Taxpayer Advocate, 2017 Annual Report to Congress, vol. 1, 19 (Dec. 27, 2017).

565 Fiscal Year 2021 Independent Assessment of Private Collection Agency Performance 16, available at https://www.treasury.gov.

566 Id. at 15.

567 Gov't Accountability Office, Internal Revenue Service: Issues Affecting IRS' Private Debt Collection Pilot, GAO/GGD-97-129R, at 1 (July 1997), available at http://www.gao.gov.

568 Letter from Nina Olson, National Taxpayer Advocate, to Senate Committee on Finance and House Ways & Means Committee 15 (May 13, 2014), available at http://taxpayeradvocate.irs.gov (regarding the use of private collection agencies (PCAs) to collect delinquent federal tax debts).

569 See, e.g., Press Release, Internal Revenue Serv., IR-2009-019, IRS Conducts Extensive Review, Decides Not to Renew Private Debt Collection Contracts (Mar. 5, 2009), available at www.irs.gov; Internal Revenue Service's Use of Private Debt Collection Companies to Collect Federal Income Taxes: Hearing Before the House Comm. on Ways and Means, 110th Cong. (2007) (testimony of Kevin Brown, acting Commissioner of Internal Revenue; testimony of Nina Olson, National Taxpayer Advocate); National Treasury Employees Union, Ways and Means Committee Hearing Highlights Deep Flaws in IRS Private Tax Collection Program (May 29, 2007); National Taxpayer Advocate, FY 2006 Annual Report to Congress (Dec. 31, 2006).

In 2009, the IRS terminated the program by not renewing the contracts for private debt collection.[570] However, legislation mandating the IRS re-institute the private debt collection program was passed in December 2015.[571]

The IRS began placing tax debts with PCAs in April 2017.[572] The IRS selected four companies to collect federal tax debts,[573] one of which (Pioneer Credit Recovery) had its contract to collect student loans terminated in 2015 by the U.S. Department of Education because it provided inaccurate information to student loan borrowers.[574] Pioneer was also sued by the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau for deceiving student loan borrowers with false statements about the credit reporting consequences of loan rehabilitation and forgiveness of collection fees.[575]

The IRS appears to have ramped up the PDC program in 2020. Since 2017, the IRS has assigned 3.28 million taxpayer accounts to PCAs, with a value of $30.1 billion. As of May 2020, PCAs had collected $498.4 million in commissionable payments—with 45% of that amount collected in the first two-thirds of 2020.[576]

14.10.3 Protection for Taxpayer Rights

Any contract between the IRS and a PCA must prohibit the PCA from committing any act or omission that IRS employees are prohibited from committing in the performance of similar duties.[577] These prohibitions include communicating at inconvenient times and places; contacting represented debtors (with certain exceptions); calling the debtor at work if the PCA knows the debtor's employer prohibits such calls; and various other types of harassment and abuse.[578]

In addition, section 6306 provides that "[t]he provisions of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act shall apply to any qualified tax collection contract."[579] While the law says that the FDCPA shall apply to the contract, the legislative history shows that Congress meant by this language that provisions of the FDCPA "apply to the private debt collection company."[580] Thus, the FDCPA applies to PCA of federal tax debts, despite the fact that the FDCPA normally does not apply to such debts.[581]

The FDCPA also does not normally apply to business debts.[582] However, the IRS will be assigning business tax accounts to PCAs under section 6306. Thus, section 6306 arguably applies the FDCPA to the collection of business tax debts assigned to PCAs under qualified tax collection contracts.[583]

There is an exception to the extent that the FDCPA is superseded by the following: (1) section 6304 of the IRC, which establishes the prohibitions discussed above that are very similar to the FDCPA; (2) section 7602(c) of the IRC, governing required notice to taxpayers when the IRS contacts third parties; and (3) "any other provision" of the IRC.[584]

Taxpayers are effectively prohibited from complaining directly to the IRS about PCA behavior in collecting federal tax debts.[585] Instead, they must contact either the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration's Office of Investigations or the PCA itself to lodge a complaint.[586]

However, taxpayers are not obligated to talk to a PCA. Taxpayers have the right to demand in writing that their tax debt account be recalled from the PCA and returned to the IRS immediately.[587]

The IRS is permitted to pay PCAs up to twenty-five percent of the amount of tax debt collected and retain up to an additional twenty-five percent to fund internal collection efforts.[588] However, another protection is that the full amount collected from a taxpayer must be credited toward the taxpayer's tax debt; in other words, collection fees will not be deducted from the amount paid by the taxpayer.[589]

14.10.4 Remedies for Violations by Private Collectors

The Internal Revenue Code (IRC) includes a civil remedy against a debt collector who recklessly, intentionally, or negligently disregards any provision of the tax code or any regulation under it.[590] The taxpayer has the right to bring suit in federal court for "actual, direct economic damages," with a cap of $1,000,000 ($100,000 in the case of negligence), plus 570 Press Release, Internal Revenue Serv., IR-2009-019, IRS Conducts Extensive Review, Decides Not to Renew Private Debt Collection Contracts (Mar. 5, 2009), available at www.irs.gov.

571 Pub. L. No. 114-94, § 32102,129 Stat. 1312, 1733–1736 (2015).

572 Internal Revenue Service, Private Debt Collection (Sept. 26, 2016), available at https://www.irs.gov.

573 Press Release, IRS, Private Collection of Some Overdue Federal Taxes Starts in April; Those Affected Will Hear First From IRS; IRS Will Still Handle Most Tax Debts (Apr. 4, 2017), available at https://www.irs.gov.

574 Press Release, U.S. Department of Education to End Contracts with Several Private Collection Agencies (Feb. 27, 2015), available at http://www.ed.gov. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Student Loan Law §§ 8.2.2.1, 8.4.1 (6th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

75 Complaint, CFPB v. Navient Corp., Navient Solutions, Inc., and Pioneer Credit Recovery, Inc., Case 3:17-cv-00101 (M.D. Pa. Jan. 18, 2017), available at www.consumerfinance.gov.

6 Fiscal Year 2021 Biannual Independent Assessment of Private Collection Agency Performance 2, available at https://www.treasury.gov.

7 26 U.S.C. § 6306(b)(2).

: 26 U.S.C. § 6304. See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 10.2.14.11 (4th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

26 U.S.C. § 6306(g).

580 Conference Rep. No. 108-755 (2004).

581 See § 4.6.1, supra.

582 See § 4.6.1, supra (consumer, not commercial debts, covered by FDCPA).

583 26 U.S.C. § 6306(g).

584 26 U.S.C. § 6306(g), cross-referencing 26 U.S.C. §§ 6304, 7602(c).

585 Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration, Private Debt Collection Was Implemented Despite Resource Challenges; However, Internal Support and Taxpayer Protections Are Limited, Reference No. 2018-30-052, at 23–24. (Sept. 5, 2018).

586 Id.

587 Internal Revenue Service, Private Collection Agency (PCA) Policy and Procedures Guide, § 12.14 (Apr. 4, 2017), available at https://epic.org.

588 26 U.S.C. § 6306(e).

589 26 U.S.C. § 6306(e).

590 26 U.S.C. §§ 7433A, 7433(a).

costs.[591] Unlike suits when the misdeeds are committed by IRS employees, the plaintiff need not exhaust administrative remedies. However, the law insulates the IRS from liability for any misconduct by the PCA, permitting suit to be brought against the PCA only, not against the United States.[592]

The private remedies of the FDCPA also apply to PCAs when collecting tax debts. Section 6306 makes the FDCPA applicable to the private debt collection program.[593] There is an exception to the extent that the FDCPA is superseded by, inter alia, "any other provision" of the IRC,[594] which would include the civil remedy discussed above. Although section 7433 provides that "such civil action shall be the exclusive remedy for recovering damages resulting from such actions,"[595] the private collection statute specifically refers to section 7433A of the IRC to establish a civil remedy.[596] Section 7433A is clear that "[s]uch civil action shall not be an exclusive remedy with respect to such person."[597] Thus, a taxpayer harmed by the unlawful debt collection activities of PCAs may seek remedies not only under the IRC, but also under the FDCPA. This is important because the IRC civil remedy provision does not provide for strict liability, statutory damages, or attorney fees.[598] PCAs should also be liable for common law torts committed in the course of collecting tax debts.

14.11 Constitutional Torts

14.11.1 Overview

Occasionally state or local officials are involved in debt collection abuse. This can occur either because the state itself is the creditor or because a private creditor manages to enlist an official's aid in collecting the debt. Where officials are involved, they and the private parties with whom they act may be subject to liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

A section 1983 claim requires a showing that the plaintiff was denied a federally secured right by a defendant acting under color of state law.[599] Pleading a section 1983 claim will enable the litigant to file suit in federal court, but it will also entitle the defendant to remove a state court case to federal court.

If there are pending or completed state court proceedings, a suit in federal court may be complicated by the Rooker-Feldman doctrine, the Younger abstention doctrine, or the Anti-Injunction Act. These issues are discussed other treatises in this series.[600] Constitutional challenges to state judgment execution procedures are discussed in NCLC's Collection Actions.[601]

14.11.2 State Action

14.11.2.1 Government Officials As State Actors

The first question is whether there is sufficient state action to make section 1983 applicable. State officials are state actors when they are exercising power possessed by virtue of state law and made possible by their state authority.[602] Abuse of authority by a state official is state action, even if it is illegal under state law.[603]

Accordingly, courts apply section 1983 to creditors' remedies that are accomplished through the court system.[604] By 591 26 U.S.C. § 7433, incorporated by reference in 26 U.S.C. § 7433A(a).

592 26 U.S.C. §§ 7433A(b)(1), 7433A(b)(4). See also 26 U.S.C. § 6306(f) (no federal liability for acts or omissions of private tax collectors).

593 26 U.S.C. § 6306(g). See § 14.10.3, supra.

594 26 U.S.C. § 6306(g), cross-referencing 26 U.S.C. §§ 6304, 7602(c).

595 26 U.S.C. § 7433(a).

596 26 U.S.C. § 6306(k)(1).

597 26 U.S.C. § 7433A(b)(3).

598 26 U.S.C. § 7433(b).

599 See § 14.11.2, infra.

600 National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 11.4.2 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Foreclosures and Mortgage Servicing § 10.6 (5th ed. 2014), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

601 National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 13.5 (4th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

602 Abbott v. Latshaw, 164 F.3d 141, 146 (3d Cir. 1998); Rankin v. Smithburger, 2013 WL 3550894 (W.D Pa. July 11, 2013) (constable, who identified self as constable while removing and destroying property and prematurely evicting tenant from property owned by his wife, was state actor); Rodriguez v. Due Process of Michigan, Inc., 2008 WL 4449651 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 30, 2008) (status as state actor is determined by function within system, not terms of employment; private process servers who contracted with court were state actors where judge had power to supervise them and Michigan law allows only deputies or court officers to serve process). See also Sanchez v. Crump, 184 F. Supp. 2d 649 (E.D. Mich. 2002) (state officials who use their authority to further their own interests are state actors, but not shown here as to off-duty police officer's request that different police department issue an arrest warrant). But cf. Kochan v. Kowalski, 2020 WL 4700984 (W.D.N.Y. 2019) (county employees' use of their work e-mail to demand that website host remove their names from site was not act under color of state law, as they were not exercising any power conferred on them under state law); George W. v. United States Dep't of Educ., 149 F. Supp. 2d 1195 (E.D. Cal. 2000) (student loan guarantee agency not state actor; it did not perform public function and nexus to federal government was not close enough).

603 Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co., 457 U.S. 922, 929, 102 S. Ct. 2744, 73 L. Ed. 2d 482 (1982); Collins v. Womancare, 878 F.2d 1145 (9th Cir. 1989); McDonough v. Toles, 2020 WL 4481961 (D. Minn. Aug. 4, 2020) (off-duty police officer "explicitly invoked his authority as a police officer" when he announced he was police while beating and dragging bar patron); Doe v. County of San Diego, 445 F. Supp. 3d 957 (S.D. Cal. 2020) (corrections officer, who was being prosecuted for off-duty sexual conduct with a minor, used county database to access victim's personal information; action was under color of state law because officer had access to database only because of his employment); Rankin v. Smithburger, 2013 WL 3550894 (W.D. Pa. July 11, 2013) (constable, who identified himself as constable while removing and destroying property, and prematurely evicting tenant from property owned by his wife, was state actor).

604 Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co., 457 U.S. 922, 933, 102 S. Ct. 2744, 73 L. Ed. 2d 482 (1982); In re Foust, 310 F.3d 849 (5th Cir. 2002) (ex parte writ of replevin was denial of due process, where no showing that pre-seizure hearing was infeasible); Jordan v. Fox, Rothschild, O'Brien & Frankel, 20 F.3d 1250 (3d Cir. 1994); New v. Gemini Capital Group, 859 F. Supp. 2d 990 (S.D. Iowa May 2, 2012) (judgment creditor's use of state bank account garnishment procedure is state action). See also Owens v. Swan, 962 F. Supp. 1436 (D. Utah 1997) (judgment creditor's attorneys' entry into debtor's residence pursuant to judicially-issued contrast, creditors' remedies that are created by state statute, but are carried out without court supervision, are generally held not to be state action.[605] Examples are non-judicial mortgage foreclosure[606] and self-help repossession that is accomplished without involvement of law enforcement officials.[607] Whether enforcement of statutory liens involves state action is discussed in another NCLC publication.[608]

14.11.2.2 Private Parties

With respect to private parties, the existence of state action depends on whether the conduct causing the deprivation of the federal right is "fairly attributable" to the state.[609] Willful participation in joint activity with the state or its agents is sufficient to make a private party a state actor.[610]

The circumstances in which a private party can be a state actor include: a symbiotic relationship with the state,[611] performance of a public function,[612] compulsion by the state, a close nexus between the state and the challenged conduct, and joint participation or conspiracy with state officials. The courts usually boil these circumstances down into three[613] or four[614] categories. However, they vary in which of the circumstances they assign to which category.

A private party who invokes a state collection procedure that is challenged as unconstitutional is a state actor.[615] But, in the absence of allegations that the state procedure is unconstitutional, merely invoking the procedure does not make a party a state actor.[616] Further, a private party who misuses a writ of assistance and with the aid of county sheriffs satisfies state action requirement). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 13.5 (4th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (discussion of constitutional issues in judgment execution).

605 Flagg Bros., Inc. v. Brooks, 436 U.S. 149, 98 S. Ct. 1729, 56 L. Ed. 2d 185 (1979). See also Rapid Circuits, Inc. v. Sun Nat'l Bank, 2011 WL 1666919, at *22–23 (E.D. Pa. May 3, 2011) (use of U.C.C. self-help procedure for seizure of accounts receivable in which creditor had security interest did not make creditor state actor).

606 See generally National Consumer Law Center, Foreclosures and Mortgage Servicing § 8.7 (5th ed. 2014), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

607 See National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 6.3.6.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

608 National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 15.13.1 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

609 Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co., 457 U.S. 922, 937, 102 S. Ct. 2744, 73 L. Ed. 2d 482 (1982).

610 Id., 457 U.S. at 941. See also Cahoo v. SAS Inst., Inc., 322 F. Supp. 3d 772 (E.D. Mich. 2018) (software company and consultant were state actors when they designed and administered severely flawed fraud detection system for state unemployment insurance program; high rate of false positives and robo-adjudications that failed to provide constitutionally adequate notice and hearing), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 912 F.3d 877 (6th Cir. 2019) (affirming holding that individual state employees did not have qualified immunity for due process violations, but reversing denial of qualified immunity on Fourth Amendment claim).

611 See, e.g., Barnett v. Hall, Estill, Hardwick, Gable, Golden & Nelson, P.C., 956 F.3d 1228 (10th Cir. 2020) (for symbiotic relationship, must show "substantial, intimate, long-term relationship" and mutual dependency; not shown by single false report with no evidence of prior relationship); Flennory v. Lichte, 2006 WL 3063489 (D. Or. Oct. 25, 2006) ("profitable symbiotic relationship" sufficiently alleged where police ordered tow on questionable grounds, tow service demanded $500 in cash and refused to let owner access cash inside car, and notices failed to comply with state statute). But cf. Garcia v. Dykstra, 260 Fed. Appx. 887 (6th Cir. 2008) (peripheral involvement of police insufficient to show symbiotic relationship where private individuals who removed tools from storage locker acted on their independent initiative).

612 See, e.g., Fuller v. Carilion Clinic, 382 F. Supp. 3d 475 (W.D. Va. 2019) (private security guards who had, pursuant to state law and their memorandum of understanding with local police, the same powers of arrest as sworn officers, were acting under color of state law; distinguishing security guards who may make only citizens' arrests); Brown v. Transurban USA, Inc., 144 F. Supp. 3d 809 (E.D. Va. 2015) (private operator of high-occupancy toll lanes was state actor because prosecuting traffic infractions and enforcing traffic laws is a function traditionally reserved to the state); Cahoo v. SAS Inst., Inc., 322 F. Supp. 3d 772 (E.D. Mich. 2018) (administering the unemployment insurance program is a traditional function of the state; private software firm that designed and administered fraud detection system is state actor), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, ___ F.3d ___, 2019 WL 92221 (6th Cir. Jan. 3, 2019) (affirming holding that individual state employees did not have qualified immunity for due process violations, but reversing denial of qualified immunity on Fourth Amendment claim); Smith v. Detroit Entertainment L.L.C., 338 F. Supp. 2d 775 (E.D. Mich. 2004) (private security guards who detain consumer may meet public function test, depending on how closely their regulation and powers match those traditionally vested in police departments). But cf. Benzeman v. Citibank, 622 Fed. Appx. 16 (2d Cir. 2015) (sending out restraining notices to freeze bank accounts is not function generally reserved to state).

613 Revis v. Meldrum, 489 F.3d 273, 289 (6th Cir. 2007) (identifying three tests for state action, public function test, state compulsion test, and symbiotic relationship or nexus test). See also McGugan v. Aldana-Bernier, 2012 WL 1514777 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 30, 2012) (three categories are state compulsion, public function, close nexus; holding that private hospital and physicians not state actors when involuntarily committing patient pursuant to N.Y. Mental Health law).

614 Rodriguez v. Plymouth Ambulance Serv., 577 F.3d 816, 823–824 (7th Cir. 2009) (identifying four tests, symbiotic relationship text, state command and encouragement test, joint participation doctrine, and public function test); Anderson v. Suiters, 499 F.3d 1228 (10th Cir. 2007) (listing four tests, but only three match Seventh Circuit's list).

615 Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co., 457 U.S. 922, 933, 941–942, 102 S. Ct. 2744, 73 L. Ed. 2d 482 (1982) ("private use of the challenged state procedures with the help of state officials constitutes state action"); Jordan v. Fox, Rothschild, O'Brien & Frankel, 20 F.3d 1250 (3d Cir. 1994) (obtaining entry of confessed judgment did not involve state enough, but obtaining execution upon it made private parties state actors); New v. Gemini Capital Group, 859 F. Supp. 2d 990 (S.D. Iowa May 2, 2012) (creditor who used Iowa's unconstitutional bank garnishment procedure was state actor; following state procedure does not shield creditor from § 1983 damages where procedure is unconstitutional); Van Buren v. Cave, 2008 WL 4664227 (M.D. La. Oct. 21, 2008); McCarthy v. Wachovia Bank, 2008 WL 5145602 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 4, 2008) (bank might be state actor if it implemented unconstitutional garnishment procedure); Doyle v. Schultz, 97 F. Supp. 2d 763 (W.D. La. 2000) (private party and her attorney who invoked unconstitutional execution procedure through clerk of court were state actors).

616 Davis v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 737 Fed. Appx. 379 (10th Cir. 2018) (invoking state foreclosure procedure, not shown to be unconstitutional, did not make bank state actor); Moore v. Weber, 2011 WL 3607037 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 16, 2011) (law firm not state actor when it obtained writ to seize judgment debtor's property, and caused writ to be served by state-actor process servers who used improper methods); DiPietro v. N.J. Family Support Payment Ctr., 2009 WL 1635568 (D.N.J. June 10, 2009) (filing lawsuit does not turn private citizen into constitutional state procedure—for example, by making misstatements when seeking a judicial remedy—is not a state actor,[617] although such a party may be liable for malicious prosecution or abuse of process.[618] Some courts have applied these principles to hold that a garnishee that violates a garnishment order by freezing or turning over more than the order requires is not acting under of state law, because the wrongful conduct cannot be attributed to any governmental decision or policy.[619]

Since a garnishee is typically compelled under penalty of contempt to comply with the garnishment order, it should be considered a state actor under the "state compulsion" test.[620] However, several courts have held, generally without much analysis, that a garnishee does not become a state actor by obeying a garnishment order.[621]

A private party's joint participation with state officials to seize disputed property is sufficient to make the private party a state actor.[622] A conspiracy between a private party and a state actor; court does not mention any allegation that state procedures were unconstitutional), aff'd, 375 Fed. Appx. 202 (3d Cir. 2010); Hurd v. Maine, 2005 WL 217038 (D. Me. 2005) (private attorney representing debt collector in court not acting under color of state law); Zeppieri v. New Haven Provision Co., 163 F. Supp. 2d 126 (D. Conn. 2001) (creditor, collection agency, and counsel seeking to collect judgment debt by constitutional bank execution procedure were not state actors).

617 Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co., 457 U.S. 922, 941, 102 S. Ct. 2744, 73 L. Ed. 2d 482 (1982) ("private misuse of a state statute does not describe conduct that can be attributed to the State"); Barnett v. Hall, Estill, Hardwick, Gable, Golden & Nelson, P.C., 956 F.3d 1228 (10th Cir. 2020) (law firm falsely informed Attorney General that opposing party had made a threat; no showing of either shared unconstitutional purpose or symbiotic relationship); Partin v. Davis, 675 Fed. Appx. 575 (6th Cir. 2017) (use of valid procedure, even in bad faith, here obtaining writ of execution with knowledge that pending motion for reconsideration made this improper, not action under color of state law); Wilson v. Warren County Illinois, 830 F.3d 44 (7th Cir. 2016) (no state action if private party deceives state official; here, handing sheriff pile of papers and falsely stating that it included court order authorizing seizure of property); Benzeman v. Citibank, 622 Fed. Appx. 16 (2d Cir. 2015) (misuse of state procedure for restraining bank accounts is not state action, attorneys who did so are not state actors); Mbaku v. Bank of Am., 2015 WL 1651596 (10th Cir. June 15, 2015) (mortgage lender that uses Colorado's public trustee foreclosure process is not state actor); Revis v. Meldrum, 489 F.3d 273 (6th Cir. 2007) (private party's malicious application for writ of execution, for example by overstating amount owed, is not state action in absence of challenge to constitutionality of state procedure); Seattle Fishing Services, L.L.C. v. Bergen Indus. & Fishing Co., 242 Fed. Appx. 436 (9th Cir. 2007) (private misuse of valid state statute, here garnishment procedure, not action under color of state law); Yanaki v. Iomed, Inc., 415 F.3d 1204 (10th Cir. 2005) (private parties' search of home with police pursuant to ex parte writ that state court granted in violation of state law is not state action in absence of allegation of conspiracy or unconstitutionality of state law); Hill v. Langer, 86 Fed. Appx. 163 (6th Cir. 2004) (private party's improper use of procedure for executing on eviction judgment does not make it a state actor); Grey-Ziegelbauer v. Eighth St. Auto, 2020 WL 374482 (D. Wis. Jan. 23, 2020) (no shared unconstitutional goal; sheriff who was deceived by false theft report did not agree to unconstitutional deprivation of property); Anderson v. J.R.'s Auto Sales of Union City, 2018 WL 2976436 (W.D. Tenn. June 13, 2018) (not state action for private parties to report falsely that car was stolen, leading to plaintiff's arrest); Johnson v. DiPaolo, 2016 WL 6568067 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 24, 2016) (foreclosure purchaser not state actor; used lawful eviction procedure, but mistakenly named wrong occupant); McCarthy v. Wachovia Bank, 2008 WL 5145602 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 4, 2008) (bank is not state actor if it violated state law by freezing bank account in response to garnishment order); Christensen v. Arizona Cent. Credit Union, 2008 WL 4853414 (D. Ariz. Nov. 10, 2008) (creditor's attorneys who filed garnishment against account containing only exempt Social Security funds merely misused state procedure so were not acting under color of state law); Fleming-Dudley v. Legal Investigations, Inc., 2007 WL 952026 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 22, 2007) (private actor's felonious impersonation of police officer not action under color of state law); Webb v. Webb, 415 F. Supp. 2d 678 (S.D. Miss. 2006) (party's forgery of signature on court papers is not state action in absence of conspiracy with state officials); Bilal v. Chase Manhattan Mortgage Co., 2006 WL 1650008 (N.D. Ill. June 13, 2006) (mortgage company that illegally removed property and excluded homeowner following judicial sale not acting under color of state law); Buzzanco v. Lord Corp., 173 F. Supp. 2d 376, 381–383 (W.D. Pa. 2001) (private party's misuse of state procedure by exceeding scope of authorized seizure is not state action); Pourny v. Maui Police Dep't, 127 F. Supp. 2d 1129 (D. Haw. 2000) (judgment creditor who misuses state procedure by taking property not allowed by writ of execution is not state actor).

618 See, e.g., Rapid Circuits, Inc. v. Sun Nat'l Bank, 2011 WL 1666919 (E.D. Pa. May 3, 2011) (debtor stated various tort claims, but no § 1983 claim, arising from creditor's misuse of state procedure allowing seizure of accounts receivable); Obi v. Chase Home Fin., L.L.C., 2010 WL 4810609 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 19 2010) (tenant, who failed to state § 1983 claim against landlord's lender and property service who wrongfully removed his personal property, stated state claims for trespass, conversion, trespass to chattels and intentional infliction of emotional distress). See generally § 15.6, infra.

619 London v. RBS Citizens, 600 F.3d 742 (7th Cir. 2010) (bank that froze exempt funds in response to state court order directing freeze of only non-exempt funds was not acting under color of state law); Soltan v. Accor N. Am., Inc., 2010 WL 187477 (D. Minn. Jan. 11, 2010) (no action under color of state law; consumer alleged that payroll company failed to comply with valid state garnishment statute). See also Matthews v. Homecoming Fin. Network, 2005 WL 2387688 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2005) (mortgage holder not "acting in concert" with state when it locked out consumer and removed property in violation of state court order setting later date to take possession).

620 Mayers v. New York Cmty. Bancorp, 2005 WL 2105810 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 31, 2005). See also Chatman v. Arrowhead Credit Union, 2016 WL 896683 (Cal. App. Mar. 9 2016) (unpublished) (if credit union froze or turned over exempt Social Security funds in response to order of state taxing authorities, it is state actor and will be liable if state procedures violated federal law; state law shielding entities that comply with tax levies cannot authorize violations of federal law).

621 Sykes v. Bank of Am., 723 F.3d 399 (2d Cir. 2013) (bank that froze exempt SSI funds in compliance with restraining notice issued by state agency was not acting under color of state law); Keenan v. First California Bank, 488 Fed. Appx. 190 (9th Cir. 2012) (bank not acting under color of state law when it responded to state tax authorities' garnishment by turning over exempt Social Security funds); Moore v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 2010 WL 4962909 (W.D. Ky. Dec. 1, 2010) (bank that froze and disbursed funds in compliance with court order was not state actor); Walton v. U.S. Bank, 2010 WL 3928507 (D. Utah Oct. 4, 2010) (bank that complied with state court writ of garnishment not acting under color of state law); Christensen v. Arizona Cent. Credit Union, 2008 WL 4853414 (D. Ariz. Nov. 10, 2008) (credit union that complied with state garnishment order by freezing exempt funds did not act under color of state law even if its actions were compelled by state law).

622 Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co., 457 U.S. 922, 941–942, 102 S. Ct. 2744, 73 L. Ed. 2d 482 (1982). See also Reed v. Sell, 2017 WL 4584191 (N.D. W. Va. Oct. 13, 2017) (allegation that foreclosure purchaser, who state official is sufficient joint participation, and makes the private party a state actor, even if the procedure itself is not unconstitutional.[623] In evaluating allegations of a conspiracy, the Sixth Circuit has applied the elements of the tort of civil conspiracy: 1) a single plan existed; 2) the conspirators shared a conspiratorial objective to deprive the plaintiffs of their constitutional rights; and 3) an overt act was committed.[624] Specific factual allegations may be necessary to make an allegation of conspiracy or concerted action plausible.[625]

Even without a conspiracy, joint action with state officials can make a private party a state actor.[626] However, merely furnishing information to law enforcement officials, even if the information is false, is generally held not to make a private party a state actor.[627] had not obtained eviction order, called in police officer who unlawfully threatened to arrest former homeowner, sufficiently alleges state action). But cf. Rowell v. King, 234 Fed. Appx. 821 (10th Cir. 2007) (finding allegations of joint action and conspiracy insufficient even though private process server arrived with police to execute on judgment, and then called in judgment creditor to assist in removal of property in violation of state law).

623 Revis v. Meldrum, 489 F.3d 273, 290 (6th Cir. 2007); Ballard v. Wall, 413 F.3d 510, 519 (5th Cir. 2005) (conspiracy or at least joint participation sufficiently alleged where judge, at request of judgment creditor, jailed judgment debtor for failure to comply with information subpoena and refused to release him unless he paid judgment); Rankin v. Smithburger, 2013 WL 3550894 (W.D Pa. July 11, 2013) (conspiracy sufficiently alleged where "landlord wife and constable husband conspired to use the latter's state power" to remove and destroy property and prematurely evicted tenant from property owned by wife); Niemeyer v. Williams, 2008 WL 906051 (C.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2008) (refusing to dismiss claim that creditors conspired with police to obtain possession of impounded cars without giving debtor car owners notice or opportunity for hearing); Buchanan v. Williams, 434 F. Supp. 2d 521 (M.D. Tenn. 2006) (conspiracy sufficiently alleged where judgment creditor, a former deputy sheriff, conspired with sheriff's department in execution on property of judgment debtor, who was his former girlfriend); Owens v. Swan, 962 F. Supp. 1436 (D. Utah 1997) (judgment creditors' attorneys' entry into judgment debtor's residence pursuant to judicially issued writ of assistance and with the aid of county sheriffs satisfies state action requirement); Greenberg v. Pryszlak, 46 A.3d 591 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2012) (creditor, after consumer stopped payment on check during dispute over defective service, contacted state trooper, who arrested consumer without warrant; fact issue as to conspiracy where creditor had used police to collect other disputed debts). But cf. Conklin v. Anthou, 495 Fed. Appx. 257 (3d Cir. 2012) ("usual attorney-client relationship" cannot give rise to conspiracy claim); Christman v. Walsh, 416 Fed. Appx. 841 (11th Cir. 2011) (judgment debtors arrested, without the hearing required by Florida law, after failure to immediately pay debt; ex parte discussions by creditor's lawyer with judge not sufficient to show joint action or agreement; unsupported allegation that creditor's lawyer used his influence as city council member to cause immediate arrest not sufficient to show that he "invoked his state authority"); Bowers v. Great W. Bank of S. Dakota, 2013 WL 3199733 (D. Ariz. June 24, 2013) (conspiracy not sufficiently alleged where judgment creditor used valid state procedure, and sheriff served facially valid writ); Moore v. Weber, 2011 WL 3607037 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 16, 2011) (no joint participation; agreement not shown; at most, law firm was aware of complaints about improper conduct by state-actor process server it employed to seize judgment debtor's property); Rafter v. Bank of Am., 2009 WL 691929 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 12, 2009) (bank that made erroneous reports to police and prosecuted customer not state actor in absence of evidence of agreement with city detective to violate customer's rights); Downeast Ventures v. Washington County, 2005 WL 3409483 (D. Me. Dec. 12, 2005) (magistrate's recommendation) (refusing to dismiss § 1983 claim where debtor alleged that creditors paid court-appointed receiver to favor them and conspired with sheriff to enter private property and seize property not pledged as collateral), adopted, 2006 WL 377976 (D. Me. Feb. 16, 2006), later op. at 2007 WL 1745633 (D. Me. June 13, 2007) (finding no conspiracy on the facts between creditors and receiver, where creditors did not tell receiver what items to seize, and receiver used independent judgment), adopted, 2007 WL 2386319 (D. Me. Aug. 17, 2007).

624 Revis v. Meldrum, 489 F.3d 273, 290 (6th Cir. 2007). See also Abbott v. Latshaw, 164 F.3d 141, 148 (3d Cir. 1998) (allegations that constable seized van at request of private party, and that they acted jointly in recovering it, are sufficient); Meyer v. Degan, 2009 WL 3157386 (D. Neb. Sept. 25, 2009) (fact issues as to conspiracy where off-duty deputy participated in repossession as "personal favor" to supervisor who was friend of creditor); Gerhart v. Commonwealth, 2009 WL 2581715 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 13, 2009) (meeting of minds sufficiently alleged between landowner and state troopers to remove plaintiff's manufactured home without court order or warrant).

625 Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007).

626 See, e.g., Collins v. Womancare, 878 F.2d 1145, 1154 (9th Cir. 1989); Pourny v. Maui Police Dep't, 127 F. Supp. 2d 1129, 1150–1151 (D. Haw. 2000) (joint action can be shown even if private party did not call police, if there was substantial degree of cooperation once they arrived on scene). See also Boles v. County of Montgomery, 2014 WL 582259 (N.D.N.Y. Feb. 13, 2014) (fact issue whether officers actively assisted); OPW Fueling Components v. Works, 2007 WL 1406956 (S.D. Ohio May 9, 2007) (refusing to dismiss claim that private parties became state actors by conducting investigation, presenting information to police, attending during execution of search warrant, and testifying at hearings). But cf. Livnjak v. Right Residential II-Fund2, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4734404 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 12, 2016) (landlord's mishandling of evicted tenant's property not action under color of state law; after eviction order issued, deputies accompanied landlord to premises, ascertained that no one was home and left; no agreement as to handling of personal property); Mitchell v. Cannon, 2009 WL 824202 (D.S.C. Mar. 26, 2009) (seemingly requiring evidence of conspiracy in order to establish joint action; proof that officer lied and ordered car moved to assist repossession insufficient where repossessor had already left scene), aff'd per curiam, 367 Fed. Appx. 390 (4th Cir. 2010).

627 Wilson v. Warren County Illinois, 830 F.3d 44 (7th Cir. 2016) (no joint action if private party deceives state official; here, handing sheriff pile of papers and falsely stating that it included court order authorizing seizure of property); Gibson v. Regions Fin. Corp., 557 F.3d 842 (8th Cir. 2009) (joint action not shown; floor plan lender complained that car dealer had sold vehicles out of trust; officer made independent decision to get search warrant for dealer's home); Collins v. Womancare, 878 F.2d 1145, 1155 (9th Cir. 1989); Fleeger v. Bell, 95 F. Supp. 2d 1126 (D. Nev. 2000) (mere reporting of nonpayment of casino markers to prosecutor is not joint action), aff'd, 23 Fed. Appx. 741 (9th Cir. 2001); Wallace v. Noel, 2009 WL 5174175 (Ohio Ct. App. Dec. 31, 2009) (joint action not shown; manufactured home community manager made arguably false complaint, police officer made minimal investigation and used own judgment). See also Ginsberg v. Healey Car & Truck Leasing, 189 F.3d 268 (2d Cir. 1999) (calling officer to scene to prevent disturbance did not make private party state actor where officer exercised independent judgment about how to respond to call); Johnson v. DiPaolo, 2016 WL 6568067 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 24, 2016) (joint action not shown; foreclosure purchaser used lawful eviction procedure, but mistakenly named wrong occupant).

14.11.2.3 The State As Creditor

When the state is the creditor, its seizure of the debtor's property, through intercept or other means, without adequate notice and an opportunity to be heard may deprive the debtor of due process.[628] The same is true as to imprisonment of a consumer for failure to pay a fine without an opportunity to show the inability to pay.[629]

Thus, many decisions apply due process protections to tax sales,[630] towing or impoundment of vehicles to collect parking tickets,[631] and the state's withdrawal of funds from an inmate's account to pay the costs of prosecution or other debts owed to the state.[632] Municipalities that sell utility service are subject to due process and equal protection requirements when collecting debts or denying or terminating service.[633] The Eighth Circuit has held that whether the state's status as creditor satisfies the state action requirement may depend on whether it is acting in a commercial (traditionally private) capacity or a sovereign (governmental) capacity.[634]

14.11.3 What Protections Due Process Requires

If there is state action, the Fourteenth Amendment prohibits the deprivation of liberty or property without due process of law. Even a mere possessory interest in property invokes procedural due process protections.[635] However, there must be an actual deprivation of liberty or property before due process rights attach.[636]

The essential elements of due process are notice and a reasonable opportunity to be heard.[637] Providing notice of an alleged debt only after penalties for nonpayment have been imposed may deny the debtor due process.[638] An officer who 628 Jones v. Flowers, 547 U.S. 220, 126 S. Ct. 1708, 164 L. Ed. 2d 415 (2006) (if notice is returned undeliverable, due process requires additional efforts before state or municipal tax seizure of real property); Williams v. Conner, 522 F. Supp. 2d 92 (D.D.C. 2007) (fact issue—whether government followed own procedures to notify farmer of deficiency after foreclosure—precludes summary judgment on farmer's due process claim); Tackett v. Vill. of Carey, Ohio, 2007 WL 1500892 (N.D. Ohio May 18, 2007) (ordinance allowing liens for nuisance abatement denied due process; notice was adequate but opportunity for hearing was not); Special Assets L.L.C. v. Chase Home Fin., L.L.C., 991 So. 2d 668 (Ala. 2007) (due process requires notice to readily identifiable mortgagee before foreclosure of liens for fire service assessments); Crownover v. Keel, 357 P.3d 470 (Okla. 2015) (notice of tax sale sent to address provided when owner purchased property, but was returned undeliverable; due process required reasonable efforts to locate owner, such as sending notice to address on check for most recent payment). See also Flowers v. Flowers, 799 N.E.2d 1183 (Ind. Ct. App. 2003) (wage assignment procedure denied due process where prosecutor who was enforcing child support order failed to comply with facially valid statute; notice was inadequate, and "administrative review" without presence of child support obligor not an adequate hearing); Coleman v. Victoria Cnty., 385 S.W.3d 608 (Tex. App. 2012) (county failed to provide former landowners with constitutionally adequate notice that excess proceeds of tax sales were about to escheat to state).

629 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 11.2.2 (4th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

630 See National Consumer Law Center, Foreclosures and Mortgage Servicing § 14.3.4 (5th ed. 2014), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

631 See National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 15.13.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

632 See, e.g., Bell v. Beightler, 2003 WL 116146 (Ohio Ct. App. Jan. 14, 2003) (upholding procedures for garnishment of prison inmate's account to pay debt owed to state; administrative hearing on exemptions is sufficient); Harrel v. State, 286 S.W.3d 315 (Tex. 2009) (prisoner has property interest in inmate trust account; due process requires notice and opportunity to be heard, but may occur after funds are withdrawn); In re Braswell, 310 S.W.3d 165 (Tex. App. 2010) (procedure for withdrawing funds from prisoner's account for court costs and court-appointed attorney fees was sufficient; prisoner received notice, and there is no evidence he was denied opportunity to contest the amount). But see Albritton v. Snead, 2015 WL 5793708 (E.D. Va. Oct. 2, 2015) (Virginia provides adequate post-deprivation remedy for improper garnishment of inmate account for child support); Sayers v. Powell, 2015 WL 3766205 (W.D. Va. June 16, 2015) (no violation of due process to freeze inmate account, containing exempt veterans' benefits, pending court decision on family support; benefits may be reached for this purpose); Sprouse v. Sanford, 2008 WL 203022 (D.S.C. Jan. 22, 2008) (no protected property interest in inmate trust accounts; even if there were, prison grievance process is adequate due process). But cf. Clark v. Wilson, 625 F.3d 686 (10th Cir. 2010) (questioning whether prisoner has protected property interest in funds in prison account; issue is whether freezing funds in response to state court garnishment order imposes "atypical and significant hardship" compared to usual hardships of prison life); Gist v. Anderson, 2013 WL 6909470 (W.D. Okla. Dec. 30, 2013) (denying as-applied challenge to Oklahoma statute placing a six-month hold on prisoners' recoveries in tort or contract, and providing that funds should be seized for fines, court costs, restitution, etc.).

633 See generally National Consumer Law Center, Access to Utility Service § 3.5 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

634 See Arcoren v. Peters, 829 F.2d 671 (8th Cir. 1987) (FmHA foreclosure involves federal government acting in commercial rather than sovereign capacity). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 10.2.14 (4th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (discussion of suits against federal defendants).

635 Fuentes v. Shevin, 407 U.S. 67, 87, 92 S. Ct. 1983, 32 L. Ed. 2d 556 (1972). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 6.3.6 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

636 Hurdleston v. New Century Fin. Services, Inc., 629 F. Supp. 2d 434 (D.N.J. 2009) (deprivation of federally protected right not shown; even if notice of postjudgment execution was constitutionally infirm, no assets were actually seized or frozen; sheriff inspected debtor's apartment and checked his bank balance, but concluded assets were not worth executing upon). Cf. Gary v. Badger Process Services, Inc., 2017 WL 5356487 (E.D. Wis. Nov. 13, 2017) (due process claim fails because consumer, who found papers on doorstep, and appeared in court, can show no harm resulting from alleged bad service).

637 Matthews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 348, 96 S. Ct. 893, 47 L. Ed. 2d 18 (1976). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions §§ 5.4.1.1 to 5.4.1.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (special requirements for prejudgment seizure or garnishment); National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 13.5 (4th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (due process requirements when creditor seeks garnishment or attachment).

638 See Brown v. Transurban USA, Inc., 144 F. Supp. 3d 809 (E.D. Va. 2015) (allowing due process claim to go forward; notice to drivers whose EZ-Pass payments were declined was long delayed, causing drivers to accumulate huge balances due to penalties for nonpayment). See also Brite Fin. Services, L.L.C. v. Bobby's Towing Serv., L.L.C., 461 F. Supp. 3d 549 (E.D. Mich. 2020) (statutory procedure that resulted in 7-day delay in notifying owners or lienholders of hearing procedure, during which storage charges accrued, denied due process); assists in the seizure of property without an independent judicial determination of the parties' rights deprives the debtor of due process.[639] Creditors' remedies that are accomplished through the court system may also provide inadequate due process protections, subjecting both the officials and the private actors to potential section 1983 liability.[640] However, a violation of a state law protection that does not affect notice, and an opportunity to be heard does not deprive a debtor of due process.[641]

One issue that occasionally arises is whether post-deprivation remedies, such as the right to bring a tort suit, satisfy due process requirements. As pre-deprivation remedies are not feasible for random, unpredictable, unauthorized conduct by state officials, several U.S. Supreme Court cases hold that due process only requires the state to provide post-deprivation remedies in such situations.[642]

The Fourteenth Amendment protects liberty as well as property, so seizure of the person in connection with debt collection can be addressed through section 1983 if state action is involved. For example, a section 1983 claim was held to exist against a police officer and bank official in Lessman v. McCormick,[643] where a policeman arrested the consumer, using a void arrest warrant for a parking ticket. The consumer paid the fine, but was required to remain at the police station until the bank officer arrived. The bank officer told the consumer that the parking violation arrest had resulted from the consumer's failure to respond to the bank's Cahoo v. SAS Inst., Inc., ___ F.3d ___, 2019 WL 92221 (6th Cir. Jan. 3, 2019) (plaintiffs adequately pleaded due process violations by allegation state officials' use of severely flawed computerized fraud detection program that terminated unemployment benefits, garnished wages, and intercepted tax refunds without pre-deprivation notice; many claimants received notice of right to appeal only after appeal period passed). But cf. Augustin v. City of Philadelphia, 897 F.3d 142 (3d Cir. 2018) (municipal gas company's procedure for holding landlords liable for tenants' unpaid bills provided due process, even though long delays permitted tenants to run up large balances without landlords' knowledge).

639 See National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 6.3.6 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

640 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 13.5 (4th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

641 See, e.g., DKCLM Ltd. v. County of Milwaukee, 794 F.3d 713 (7th Cir. 2015) (violation of state law requirement that sheriff complete eviction within ten days after receiving writ did not deny due process or make seizure unreasonable); Levy v. San Joaquin County Dep't of Child Support Services, 2013 WL 1891402 (N.D. Cal. May 6, 2013) (obtaining court order in wrong county not due process violation where obligor not deprived of notice or opportunity for hearing); Pabnke v. Anderson Moving & Storage, 393 F. Supp. 2d 892 (D. Minn. 2005) (failure to abide by twenty-four-hour waiting period required by state eviction procedure not federal due process violation where tenant received notice and hearing); Bonecutter v. Discover Bank, 953 N.E.2d 1165 (Ind. Ct. App. 2011) (failure to attach required itemized statement to small claims claim on account did not deny due process, where information was provided during discovery and consumer had full opportunity to present his defenses). See also Lee v. City of Norfolk, 706 S.E.2d 330 (Va. 2011) (notice was constitutionally adequate where building owner actually received it, and was informed that his property was a nuisance, even though notice cited wrong building code section, and misstated appeals period). Cf. Hicks v. Cadle Co., 809 F. Supp. 2d 742 (N.D. Ohio 2011) (failure to provide notice of right to hearing and to identify exempt property, in writ of execution served on judgment debtor, did not deny due process where no funds were seized, and debtor had actual notice through electronic filing system and full opportunity to challenge writs).

642 Zinermon v. Burch, 494 U.S. 113, 110 S. Ct. 975, 108 L. Ed. 2d 100 (1990); Hudson v. Palmer, 468 U.S. 517, 104 S. Ct. 1094, 82 L. Ed. 2d 393 (1984); Parratt v. Taylor, 451 U.S. 527, 101 S. Ct. 1908, 68 L. Ed. 2d 393 (1981). See also J.P. Silverton Indus., L.P. v. Sohm, 243 Fed. Appx. 82 (6th Cir. 2007) (state provided adequate post-deprivation remedy for allegedly improper sale of real estate; post-sale hearing available); Partin v. Davis, 675 Fed. Appx. 575 (6th Cir. 2017) (availability state tort claims and a motion to dissolve the writ are adequate post-deprivation remedies for judgment creditor's misuse of state postjudgment execution procedure); Reed v. Sell, 2017 WL 4584191 (N.D. W. Va. Oct. 13, 2017) (post-deprivation remedy sufficient for random and unauthorized action; police officer assisted foreclosure purchaser by threatening unlawful arrest of former homeowner); Greenberg v. Caesar's Entertainment Corp., 2016 WL 1106885 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 21, 2016) (state tort claim was adequate post-deprivation remedy where state police used threat of arrest to coerce repayment of disputed debt to casino), aff'd, 694 Fed. Appx. 877 (3d Cir. 2017); Johnson v. Marcum, 2014 WL 6474478 (W.D. Ky. Nov. 19, 2014) (post-deprivation remedies adequate where police assisted manufactured home park landlord's removal of home); Tift v. Snohomish County, 764 F. Supp. 2d 1247 (W.D. Wash. Jan. 24, 2011) (opportunity to present list of exempt property to sheriff after seizure is sufficient remedy for failure to comply with statute giving debtor opportunity to identify exempt property at time of seizure); Niemeyer v. Williams, 2008 WL 906051 (C.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2008) (fact issue whether practice of turning seized vehicles over to lien holders before owners had opportunity to offer defense to seizure was random and unauthorized or was an unwritten policy); Wilson v. Hunter, 2008 WL 294964 (S.D. Ind. Jan. 31, 2008) (state breach of contract action adequate remedy for allegedly improper garnishment to recover overpayment of salary by school district); Buchanan v. Williams, 434 F. Supp. 2d 521 (M.D. Tenn. 2006) (allowing Fourth Amendment claim but not due process claim to proceed, as state provided adequate remedies if deputy sheriff's execution upon debtor's personal property exceeded his state law authority); Sheppard v. Welch, 2006 WL 3134869 (S.D. Ind. Oct. 31, 2006) (child support garnishment of wages and bank account without the notice required by state statute not § 1983 violation; deprivation was random and unauthorized, and state provided adequate post-deprivation remedy); Jones v. City of St. Louis, 285 F. Supp. 2d 1212 (E.D. Mo. 2003) (state replevin action was adequate remedy when municipality dismissed tickets, but private towing company refused to release car or valuable tools therein; no showing of custom or practice by municipality); Nicholson v. Moates, 135 F. Supp. 2d 1185 (M.D. Ala. 2001) (deputies and ex-husband allegedly altered court order allowing husband to retrieve personal property, ransacked house, and intimidated occupants; no § 1983 claim where available state procedures, here, a suit for wrongful attachment and for writ of mandamus, were sufficient to provide due process, even if they offered less relief than § 1983). But cf. D.C.F.S. U.S.A. v. Dist. of Columbia, 803 F. Supp. 2d 29 (D.D.C. 2011) (post-deprivation remedy not adequate where impounded motor vehicle was sold without notice to secured creditor whose name and address were easily ascertainable; post-deprivation remedies not adequate if pre-deprivation notice is practicable); Cox v. Yellowstone County, 795 F. Supp. 2d 1128 (D. Mont. 2011) (post-deprivation declaratory judgment action not sufficient where lien statute provided notice but no hearing; prejudgment remedy must provide pre-deprivation hearing unless this is impractical).

643 591 F.2d 605 (10th Cir. 1979).

collection letters regarding a debt to the bank. Under these facts, the court held that there were sufficient allegations to support an inference that the arrest was an abuse of power, violating section 1983.[644]

14.11.4 Fourth Amendment Claims

The Fourth Amendment right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures applies in the civil as well as the criminal context and can be the basis of a section 1983 complaint where the state actors have either seized property or intruded upon private property.[645] If a consumer abandons personal property, or turns it over to a creditor, in response to an officer's threat of unlawful arrest, this is a seizure.[646] If state officials enter a home or its immediate surroundings to search for and seize goods, the Fourth Amendment and analogous state provisions require a warrant, issued by a neutral magistrate upon a showing of probable cause to believe that nonexempt goods will be found on the premises, identifying the place to be searched and the things to be seized.[647] The 644 See also Ballard v. Wall, 413 F.3d 510 (5th Cir. 2005) (judgment debtor stated due process claim against collection attorneys who procured bench warrant for his arrest for being late to judgment debtor hearing and then informed him that he would be released only by paying $10,000 judgment in cash).

645 Soldal v. Cook County, Illinois, 506 U.S. 56, 113 S. Ct. 538, 121 L. Ed. 2d 450 (1992); Revis v. Meldrum, 489 F.3d 273 (6th Cir. 2007) (state's exercise of physical control over residence, resulting in eviction, may violate Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments; here, writ of execution for judgment debt did not authorize eviction without use of state's eviction procedure); In re Foust, 310 F.3d 849 (5th Cir. 2002) (closure of store and seizure of contents; premises locked up for longer than reasonable period to inventory contents and seize collateral); Davis v. Bayless, 70 F.3d 367 (5th Cir. 1995) (warrantless entry onto judgment debtor's girlfriend's property to search for assets of judgment debtor states Fourth Amendment claim; existence of post-deprivation state law remedies irrelevant); Loveless v. McCorkle, 2018 WL 4509608 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 20, 2018) (opening closed garage door to access inner door is sufficient to support Fourth Amendment claim); Cahoo v. SAS Inst., Inc., 322 F. Supp. 3d 772 (E.D. Mich. 2018) (denying motion to dismiss claim that termination of unemployment benefits, garnishment of wages, and interception of tax refunds, based on severely flawed automated fraud detection system, was unreasonable seizure of property in violation of Fourth Amendment), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, ___ F.3d ___, 2019 WL 92221 (6th Cir. Jan. 3, 2019) (affirming holding that individual state employees did not have qualified immunity for due process violations, but reversing denial of qualified immunity on Fourth Amendment claim on ground that it was not clearly established that amendment applies to a seizure that does not violate privacy interests); Middaugh v. City of Three Rivers, 2015 WL 505793 (W.D. Mich. Feb. 6, 2015) (active assistance and unreasonable seizure shown where, during family dispute over ownership of car, police drove one claimant to where car was located and stood by while claimant drove car away); Foster v. City of Philadelphia, 2014 WL 5821278 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 10, 2014) (landlord and police misused abandoned vehicle statute to remove customers' cars from working garage); Baker v. Ghidotti, 2014 WL 1289566 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 28, 2014) (entry of homeowner's home and detention of homeowner's children at gunpoint while trying to persuade homeowner to disclose location of debtor's car); Rankin v. Smithburger, 2013 WL 3550894 (W.D. Pa. July 11, 2013) (tenants stated Fourth Amendment claim for loss and destruction of property during illegal eviction); McCarthy v. Wachovia Bank, 2008 WL 5145602 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 4, 2008) (fact issues whether use of New York procedure to freeze bank account was unreasonable seizure in violation of Fourth Amendment); Buchanan v. Williams, 434 F. Supp. 2d 521 (M.D. Tenn. 2006) (deputy sheriff may have violated Fourth Amendment if his execution upon debtor's personal property exceeded his state law authority); Pruitt v. Pernell, 360 F. Supp. 2d 738 (E.D.N.C. 2005) (business owner stated claim against police chief who decided, without benefit of court order, who had better claim to disputed property and sent officers to enforce private party's seizure), aff'd, 173 Fed. Appx. 298 (4th Cir. 2006); Greenberg v. Pryszlak, 46 A.3d 591 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2012) (after consumer stopped payment on check during dispute over defective service, creditor persuaded state trooper to make warrantless arrest). See also Downeast Ventures v. McShane Group, Inc., 2007 WL 1745633 (D. Me. June 13, 2007) (Fourth Amendment applies to civil seizures, but search by court-appointed receiver was reasonable), adopted, 2007 WL 2386319 (D. Me. Aug. 17, 2007); In re Draper, 2007 WL 564035 (D. Ariz. Feb. 20, 2007) (bankruptcy trustee sought court order permitting high bidder at sale to make "walk-through" inspection of debtor's house; Fourth Amendment applicable, but search is reasonable); In re Bursztyn, 366 B.R. 353 (Bankr. D.N.J. 2007) (Fourth Amendment applies to search by bankruptcy trustee, but search reasonable where trustee presented evidence that debtor was concealing assets). Cf. Tift v. Snohomish County, 764 F. Supp. 2d 1247 (W.D. Wash. Jan. 24, 2011) (in civil matter, Fourth Amendment standards of reasonableness less stringent than in criminal; raid on debtor's home to execute judgment not unreasonable even though it occurred before dawn and deputy sheriffs were accompanied by judgment creditor's lawyer). But cf. Niemeyer v. Williams, 2008 WL 906051 (C.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2008) (Fourth Amendment claim is available only for illegal seizure of property, not for illegal retention of property that was legally seized); Greenberg v. Caesar's Entertainment Corp., 2016 WL 1106885 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 21, 2016) (threat of arrest was seizure, but not unreasonable where officers had arguable probable cause to believe that casino patron was guilty of larceny of property paid by mistake, here a disputed overpayment), aff'd, 694 Fed. Appx. 877 (3d Cir. 2017); Foreign Car Ctr., Inc. v. Essex Process Serv., Inc., 821 N.E.2d 483 (Mass. App. Ct. 2005) (no civil rights violation where police prevented judgment debtor from interfering with seizure pursuant to valid writ).

646 Pierce v. Clayton County Ga., 7217 Fed. Appx. 866 (11th Cir. 2017) (turning car over to police in response to wrongful threat is seizure); McDuffie v. Loney, 2017 WL 6039949 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 6, 2017) (parting with property in response to threat of arrest is seizure; here, unreasonable because two hours was clearly insufficient to allow removal of equipment from foreclosed house); Reed v. Sell, 2017 WL 4584191 (N.D. W. Va. Oct. 13, 2017) (unreasonable seizure shown if former homeowner abandoned valuable personal property in response to unlawful threat of arrest).

647 Dorwart v. Caraway, 966 P.2d 1121 (Mont. 1998) (postjudgment warrant of execution procedure violated Fourth Amendment and analogous state constitutional provision because no neutral magistrate found probable cause that the execution was unsatisfied and that nonexempt goods could be found on the premises and warrant failed to describe place to be searched and things to be seized). See also Harvey v. Plains Township Police Dep't, 421 F.3d 185 (3d Cir. 2005) (tenant stated Fourth Amendment claim where police ordered landlord to unlock door for tenant's former boyfriend, who had neither tenant's consent to entry nor court order allowing him to retrieve property), appeal after remand, 635 F.3d 606 (3d Cir. 2011) (instruction that jury could find for plaintiff tenant only if police "ordered" landlord to open door was plain error; state action issue requires consideration of totality of circumstances; here landlord testified she would not have opened door without "okay" from police); Gerhart v.

requirements for a reasonable search become less strict as the distance from the house increases.[648] A Fourth Amendment seizure of property occurs when there is some meaningful interference with an individual's possessory interest in property.[649] Even if the initial seizure is lawful, for example because of an emergency, some courts hold that the state may violate the Fourth Amendment if it retains the property past that point.[650]

The Fourth Amendment is also implicated if a debtor is detained[651] or officers use excessive force[652] in connection with debt collection. Even if a court order is valid, the method of enforcing it may be unreasonable within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment if, for example, the officer uses excessive force or conducts an unreasonably broad search.[653]

Commonwealth, 2009 WL 2581715 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 13, 2009) (allegation that police seized plaintiff's manufactured home at behest of landowner, but without warrant or court order, states Fourth Amendment claim); Bernstein v. Roberts, 405 F. Supp. 2d 34 (D.D.C. 2005) (judgment debtor stated claim for Fourth Amendment violation against officers who entered her home on expired warrant to execute upon personal property); McDonald v. Keahey, 301 So. 3d 823 (Ala. App. 2019) (fact issue whether driveway bounded on one side by back wall of house is within the curtilage of dwelling; if it is, removal of "inoperable"—here, drivable but with expired registration—vehicles requires either a warrant or a pre-seizure administrative hearing; seizure was unreasonable because consumer had no pre-seizure opportunity to contest code officer's unilateral decision). But cf. Owens v. Swan, 962 F. Supp. 1436 (D. Utah 1997) (entry into judgment debtors' home to inventory their property not Fourth Amendment violation where conducted pursuant to writ). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions §§ 5.4.1.3, 13.7 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

648 Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 133 S. Ct. 1409, 185 L. Ed.2d 495 (2013) (criminal case; "when it comes to the Fourth Amendment, the home is first among equals . . . we . . . regard the area 'immediately surrounding and associated with the home'—what our cases call the curtilage—as 'part of the home itself' for Fourth Amendment purposes"); Oliver v. United States, 466 U.S. 170, 104 S. Ct. 1735, 80 L. Ed. 2d 214 (1984) (warrant not required to search open fields, even if privately owned); McDonald v. Keahey, 301 So. 3d 823 (Ala. Ct. App. 2019) (fact issue whether rear driveway, bounded by wall of house, was within curtilage).

649 Soldal v. Cook County, Illinois, 506 U.S. 56, 113 S. Ct. 538, 121 L. Ed. 2d 450 (1992) (seizure of manufactured home); Revis v. Meldrum, 489 F.3d 273 (6th Cir. 2007) (homeowner's possession of residential premises is possessory interest protected by Fourteenth Amendment; state's exercise of physical control over residence in connection with execution upon judgment debt, resulting in eviction, may violate Fourth and Fourteenth amendments); Dixon v. Lowery, 302 F.3d 857 (8th Cir. 2001) (possessory interest is protected even if disputed); Hollandsworth v. City and County of Honolulu, 2020 WL 5753197 (D. Haw. Sept. 25, 2020) (dispute over ownership of horse; stand-by police officer's unilateral determination of ownership, and assertion of authority to allow defendant to repossess horse, was unreasonable seizure); Hyman v. Morris, 320 F. Supp. 3d 707 (W.D. Pa. 2018) (consumer who was delinquent on car loan had possessory interest sufficient to support Fourth Amendment claim).

650 See, e.g., Ordonez v. Stanley, 2020 WL 7380461 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 16, 2020) (right to seize or hold property without warrant ends when exigency that required seizure ends; when car was seized because driver was unlicensed, seizure became unreasonable when police refused to allow driver to call licensed family member to retrieve it, but instead impounded it for 30 days with no right to retrieve it). But see Brite Fin. Services, L.L.C. v. Bobby's Towing Serv., L.L.C., 461 F. Supp. 3d 549 (E.D. Mich. 2020) (continued possession of properly seized property does not violate Fourth Amendment).

651 See, e.g., Brees v. Courtesy Ford, 2002 WL 2017065 (9th Cir. Aug. 28, 2002) (consumer stated claim for Fourth Amendment violation where deputies compelled him to stand outside in the rain, in his nightclothes, during unlawful self-help repossession); Boles v. County of Montgomery, 2014 WL 582259 (N.D.N.Y. Feb. 13, 2014) (fact issues as to Fourth Amendment false arrest and malicious prosecution claims); Fuciarelli v. Good, 2016 WL 4529822 (D. Ariz. Aug. 30, 2016) (arrest without probable cause shown; police had no right to forcibly detain landlord while they tried to determine whether his action in denying evicted tenant's wife access to the premises was unlawful); Meyer v. Degan, 2009 WL 3157386 (D. Neb. Sept. 25, 2009) (allowing debtor to proceed to trial on Fourth Amendment claim based on her arrest when she called police to complain of break-in by creditor ex-boyfriend and off-duty deputy); McFarland v. Bob Saks Toyota, 466 F. Supp. 2d 855 (E.D. Mich. 2006) (denying summary judgment on Fourth Amendment claim because of disputed facts where car buyer alleged that when he returned to dealership to hand over title to trade-in, police took him into office, told him he was not free to leave, interrogated him about discrepancies in paperwork, and finally ordered him to transfer his belongings to trade-in and leave new car with dealer); Goard v. Crown Auto, Inc., 170 F. Supp. 3d 915 (W.D. Va. 2016) (threat of arrest, which caused consumer to turn over keys, when repossessors' paperwork did not include court order, was unreasonable seizure). See also Kimball v. Town of Provincetown, 158 F. Supp. 3d 7 (D. Mass. 2016) (unreasonable seizure of person sufficiently alleged; while evicted commercial tenants were packing up their belongings, police demanded immediate return of specified file folder, causing tenants to stop what they were doing and spend hours searching already packed boxes; show of authority to which tenants submitted was a seizure). But cf. Carlyle v. Roth, 2018 WL 1640481 (S.D. Ill. Apr. 5, 2018) (dismissing claim by consumer who was arrested after county treasurer neglected to inform court that debt was no longer owed to county; claim alleged, at worst, only simple negligence); Anderson v. City of Oak Park, 2014 WL 4415956 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 8, 2014) (officers had probable cause to arrest car owner who was subject of misdemeanor warrants; repossession went forward after car owner's arrest). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 6.3.6.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

652 See, e.g., Frobel v. County of Broome, 419 F. Supp. 2d 212 (N.D.N.Y. 2005) (excessive force when attempting to collect judgment debt).

653 See, e.g., Cochram v. Gilliam, 656 F.3d 300 (6th Cir. 2011) (sheriff assisted with seizure of tenant's personal property, but court order authorized only eviction); Revis v. Meldrum, 489 F.3d 273, 290 (6th Cir. 2007) (seizure of judgment debtor's residence violated Fourth Amendment where writ authorized officers only to give notice that property was subject to sale); Falk v. Perez, 973 F. Supp. 2d 850 (N.D. Ill. 2013) (denying quasi-judicial immunity to deputy who acted beyond scope of court order; order specified eviction of former owner, but deputy evicted lawful tenant and prevented her from reclaiming personal property); Rankin v. Smithburger, 2013 WL 3550894 (W.D. Pa. July 11, 2013) (even if court order gave right to immediate possession of real property, destruction of tenant's personal property was unreasonable); Tift v. Snohomish County, 764 F. Supp. 2d 1247 (W.D. Wash. Jan. 24, 2011) (excessive force sufficiently alleged; pre-dawn raid on home to execute on judgment, debtor alleged that deputies slammed his face into door); Siwka v. Smart Recovery Serv., L.L.C., 2010 WL 4791370 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 28, 2010) (excessive force sufficiently alleged; officers physically restrained consumers and threatened them with taser; offense, if any was petty, no danger to public

14.11.5 Immunity; Municipal Liability

State officials can claim immunity from liability under section 1983 if their conduct did not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known.[654] In addition, some actors such as judicial was shown, and officers had contributed to situation that gave rise to confrontation), adopted, 2010 WL 4788495 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 17, 2010); Buchanan v. Williams, 434 F. Supp. 2d 521 (M.D. Tenn. 2006) (seizure of vehicle from location not authorized by writ was unreasonable; if officer knew car was in wrong county, Fourth Amendment violation shown); Thomas v. Sheahan, 370 F. Supp. 2d 704 (N.D. Ill. 2005) (during an eviction sheriff approached house with battering ram, ordered tenant's children out of house at gunpoint, told them to sit in their van, threatened arrest if they moved, and conducted extensive search of house, despite lack of probable cause for protective sweep; tenants stated Fourth Amendment claim for both arrest and unreasonable search); Frobel v. County of Broome, 419 F. Supp. 2d 212 (N.D.N.Y. 2005) (consumer stated Fourth Amendment claim against sheriff collecting valid judgment debt where she alleged he physically attacked and injured her).

654 Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818, 102 S. Ct. 2727, 73 L. Ed. 2d 396 (1982).

Immune: Clark v. Wilson, 625 F.3d 686 (10th Cir. 2010) (law not well established as to garnishment of prisoner's account); Allin v. City of Springfield, 845 F.3d 858 (7th Cir. 2017) (officer acted reasonably in allowing claimant to take disputed motorcycle; was shown title certificate and carried out title search to confirm its validity); Revis v. Meldrum, 489 F.3d 273 (6th Cir. 2007) (qualified immunity for sheriff who evicted judgment debtor; language of writ was unclear, and sheriff consulted county attorney who gave incorrect advice); Miarka v. City of Gulf Shores, 2017 WL 3612867 (S.D. Ala. July 31, 2017) (granting immunity to officers who allowed plaintiff's ex-wife to ransack his business; officers relied on facially valid state court order that violated bankruptcy stay), adopted, 2017 WL 3612863 (S.D. Ala. Aug. 22, 2017); McBride v. City of Westbrook, 2015 WL 5178068 (D. Me. Sept. 4, 2015) (police assisted at eviction of tenant and co-tenant; landlord had paperwork for tenant but not co-tenant); Flah v. City of Maple Grove, 2015 WL 7303546 (D. Minn. Nov. 19, 2015) (qualified immunity for officers who pointed gun at debtor after repossessor had falsely informed them that debtor said she had gun); Chaney v. Stewart, 2015 WL 1538021 (D. Vt. Apr. 7, 2015) ("gray area" as to whether removal of terminated inn employee from room he had been permitted to occupy was eviction within meaning of state landlord-tenant law); Burns v. Buckner, 2010 WL 1994927 (M.D. Ala. May 18, 2010) (law not clearly established; issue whether repeated contempt petitions seeking to collect child support arrears from exempt SSI were "other legal process" forbidden by Social Security Act); Verdi v. Kirby, 2009 WL 112713 (M.D. Ga. Jan. 16, 2009) (sheriff who serves writ has same absolute judicial immunity as judge who issued writ; qualified immunity as to method of service, where no showing that established right violated); Downeast Ventures, Ltd. v. Washington County, 2007 WL 1745630 (D. Me. June 13, 2007) (qualified immunity for deputies who assisted receiver who searched pursuant to court order, where their actions were "objectively reasonable"), adopted, 2007 WL 2386318 (D. Me. Aug. 17, 2007); Tomassi v. Sheehan, 2016 WL 4768826 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 23, 2016) (qualified immunity for officers who carried out eviction that had been stayed by last-minute bankruptcy filing; officers checked with bankruptcy court and did not learn of stay), adopted, 2016 WL 4767539 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 13, 2016); Zeppieri v. New Haven Provision Co., 163 F. Supp. 2d 126 (D. Conn. 2001) (qualified immunity for sheriff's deputy serving bank execution that reached judgment debtor's exempt Social Security benefits, where conduct was objectively reasonable and there was no deprivation of clearly established right).

Not immune: Carter v. Butts County Georgia, 821 F.3d 1310 (11th Cir. 2016) (deputy arrested property service employees for burglary at his foreclosed former home; deputy could not reasonably believe that their presence was unauthorized, because he had failed to use various legitimate means of challenging the eviction or reclaiming personal property); Pierce v. Clayton County Georgia, 7217 Fed. Appx. 866 (11th Cir. 2017) (police had actual knowledge of clerical error that caused car to be listed as stolen); Zoretic v. Darge, 832 F.3d 639 (7th Cir. 2016) (eviction based on order that reasonable officer would know was invalid); Cochram v. Gilliam, 656 F.3d 300 (6th Cir. 2011) (discussing when right is clearly established; sufficiently alleged here, where sheriff assisted with seizure of tenant's personal property, but court order authorized only eviction); Garcia v. Dykstra, 260 Fed. Appx. 887 (6th Cir. 2008) (not reasonable for police officer who opened storage locker to believe that man who purported to give consent had authority to do so); Dixon v. Lowery, 302 F.3d 857 (8th Cir. 2001) (genuine issue of fact regarding qualified immunity where police who helped buyer of real property evict seller knew that they should not evict without court order); Audio Odyssey, Ltd. v. Brenton First Nat'l Bank, 245 F.3d 721 (8th Cir. 2001), reaff'd upon reh'g en banc, 286 F.3d 498 (8th Cir. 2002) (sheriff's deputies knew or should have known that replevin writ specifying certain inventory and fixtures did not authorize seizure of real property); Abbott v. Latshaw, 164 F.3d 141 (3d Cir. 1998) (constable and police officer who helped ex-wife take van from husband not immune); Hollandsworth v. City and County of Honolulu, 2020 WL 5753197 (D. Haw. Sept. 25, 2020) (at scene of dispute over horse, stand-by police officer decided which claimant owned it and exerted his authority to allow her to take it; law was well-established that officer's unilateral determination of disputants' rights did not comport with due process); Ordonez v. Stanley, 2020 WL 7380461 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 16, 2020) (law governing warrantless seizures was well established; denying immunity to officers who refused to release car, stopped because driver was unlicensed, to licensed family member or owner); Wilson v. Brown Chrysler Dodge Jeep Ram, L.L.C., 2018 WL 700828 (W.D. La. Feb. 1, 2018) (deliberate concealment of exculpatory evidence, here evidence of valid sale of allegedly stolen car, violated well-established law); Cahoo v. SAS Inst., Inc., 322 F. Supp. 3d 772 (E.D. Mich. 2018) (denying qualified immunity to state employees who implemented fraud detection program known to have high error rate, and constitutionally inadequate notice and hearing procedure); Middaugh v. City of Three Rivers, 2015 WL 505793 (W.D. Mich. Feb. 6, 2015) (police who actively assisted at taking of car during family dispute should have known that matter was civil and ownership unclear); Boyer v. Mark Peterson and Bryan Campbell, 221 F. Supp. 3d 94 (W.D. Mich. 2016) (officer was clearly wrong to rely on estranged wife's consent to enter former marital home; officer knew that couple was in process of divorcing, husband occupied the home, and wife required an appointment to enter); Clopton v. City of Plymouth, 2017 WL 29660 (D. Minn. Jan. 3, 2017) (denying immunity where officers' actions went well beyond standby, and made repossession possible); Hyman v. Morris, 320 F. Supp. 3d 707 (W.D. Pa. 2018) (law is well-established that assisting at private repossession is state action); Foster v. City of Philadelphia, 2014 WL 5821278 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 10, 2014) (towing large numbers of customers' cars from working garage during landlord-tenant dispute was "unprecedented" use of abandoned vehicle statute); Anderson v. City of Oak Park, 2014 WL 4415956 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 8, 2014) (active assistance at repossession; repossessor showed only letter from dealer, not court order); Callon v. Cox, 2012 WL 314880 (S.D. Ind. Jan. 25, 2012) (qualified immunity not available to town officials who failed to recall body attachment after being shown proof that court costs and been paid). See also In re Foust, 310 F.3d 849 (5th Cir. 2002) (absolute immunity for serving facially valid writ, qualified immunity for method of enforcement, and qualified immunity for deputies where law not clearly established).

officials have absolute immunity.[655] Private parties cannot claim qualified good faith immunity,[656] but some courts have allowed them to raise good faith as an affirmative defense.[657]

Municipalities and other local governmental bodies enjoy the immunity from suit that a state enjoys, but th will not be liable on a respondeat superior basis for the of law enforcement and other local officials.[658] These l local government will be liable only if their "official was to allow the acts or practices on which the constit claim is based.[659]

14.12 Other Federal Restrictions on Debt Collection

Antitrust laws may also limit collection practices. Tl agreement by members of an association of wholesale p distributors to refuse to extend credit to each other's quent merchants violated federal antitrust laws.[660]

655 Conklin v. Anthou, 495 Fed. Appx. 257 (3d Cir. 2012) (quasi-judicial immunity for sheriff who carried out facially valid court order for foreclosure sale); Wilcox v. Magill, 468 Fed. Appx. 849 (10th Cir. 2012) (quasi-judicial immunity for officers serving facially valid writ, but lost if officers exceed scope of writ, here by shipping seized property to out-of-state creditor); Moss v. Kopp, 559 F.3d 1155 (10th Cir. 2009) (officials executing facially valid court order have quasi-judicial immunity as long as they act within scope of their jurisdiction and as prescribed by order, and judge issuing it had judicial immunity); J.P. Silverton Indus., L.P. v. Sohm, 243 Fed. Appx. 82 (6th Cir. 2007) (absolute quasi-judicial immunity for master commissioner who auctioned property pursuant to court order); Ballard v. Wall, 413 F.3d 510, 519 (5th Cir. 2005) (jailing of judgment debtor who failed to appear for debtor's examination was judicial in nature, so judge is immune); In re Foust, 310 F.3d 849 (5th Cir. 2002) (absolute immunity for serving facially valid writ). But see Caliste v. Cantrell, 2017 WL 6344152 (E.D. La. Dec. 12, 2017) (absolute immunity only for judge acting in adjudicatory capacity; denying immunity on § 1983 claim seeking injunction against judge who, in addition to setting bail in individual cases, was administrator of the bail program).

656 Wyatt v. Cole, 504 U.S. 158, 112 S. Ct. 1827, 118 L. Ed. 2d 504 (1992).

657 See Diamond v. Pennsylvania State Education Ass'n., 972 F.3d 262 (3d Cir. 2020) (allowing defense to unions that collected fair share fees, "private defendants should not be held liable under § 1983 absent a showing of malice and evidence that they either knew or should have known of the statute's constitutional infirmity"; note that this defense turns on subjective state of mind, not the more demanding objective standard of reasonable belief that governs qualified immunity); Janus v. Am. Fed'n of State, County and Municipal Employees, 942 F.3d 352 (7th Cir. 2019) (allowing good faith defense, but not qualified immunity, to union that followed existing law and Supreme Court precedent in deducting "fair share fees" from non-members' wages); Jordan v. Fox, Rothschild, O'Brien & Frankel, 20 F.3d 1250 (3d Cir. 1994); Tarantino v. Syputo, 2006 WL 1530030 (N.D. Cal. June 2, 2006) (no qualified immunity for private tow company, but good faith defense made out where company was called by, and acted only at direction of, municipal officials), aff'd, 270 Fed. Appx. 675 (9th Cir. 2008); Todman v. Mayor and City Council of Baltimore, 2020 WL 5653256 (D. Md. Sept. 23, 2020) (defense is available only to party who acts reasonably and in good faith; not shown where landlord orally agreed that tenants could move out on specified date, then used unconstitutional pr to lock them out and seize their property two days before that 658 Monell v. Dep't of Social Services, 436 U.S. 658, 691–695, 9 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1978).

659 Monell v. Dep't of Social Services, 436 U.S. 658, 691–695, 9 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1978). See also, In re Foust, 310 F.3d Cir. 2002) (remanding to determine whether county had adopte of locking up premises in replevin cases in "deliberate indiff to occupants' constitutional rights); Johnson v. City of Evanst F.3d 560 (7th Cir. 2001). See generally National Consumer Law Repossessions § 13.7.3.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.n library (more extensive discussion of this issue).

660 United States v. Philadelphia Produce Credit & Collection Antitrust & Trade Reg. Rep. (BNA) 16 (E.D. Pa. 1983). See ge National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 11.1 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (application of state a eral antitrust laws to consumer issues).

Chapter 15 Tort Remedies

15.1 Introduction

15.1.1 Overview

The oldest legal approach to debt collection abuse is an action in tort. There are distinct advantages and disadvantages to a tort approach to remedying abusive debt collection conduct. One major advantage in most states is the availability of punitive or exemplary damages for tortious conduct that is malicious or reckless.[1] Another major advantage is that tort claims are available against creditors and their agents who may not be subject to the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA) or some states' consumer protection statutes.

The major disadvantage of tort claims is that many states require the debt collector's conduct to be considerably more offensive than is required under consumer protection statutes. Class actions for collection torts are also rare, although it is sometimes possible to obtain certification of a class action where the challenged conduct involves a uniform practice.[2]

The main tort theories that may be available to a harassed debtor are:

- Intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress (or mental anguish) (§ 15.2, infra);
- Invasion of privacy (§ 15.3, infra);
- Intentional interference with employment or other contractual relationships (§ 15.4, infra);
- Defamation (§ 15.5, infra);
- Malicious prosecution (§ 15.6.2, infra); and
- Abuse of process (§ 15.6.3, infra).

Intentional infliction of emotional distress and invasion-of-privacy claims are well-suited to challenge debt collection harassment, but may be unavailable or poorly developed in some jurisdictions. Defamation and malicious prosecution claims are appropriate for a somewhat narrower subset of debt collection abuses, but may be overburdened with technical requirements. Abuse of process and interference with employment or other contractual relationships are viable claims in certain particular debt collection contexts.

Because of the number of local variations in the acceptance, development, and definition of various torts, this chapter is restricted to cataloging only the most significant distinctions in the tort law of the various jurisdictions in the context of debt collection. This chapter attempts to identify the most widely accepted elements of each tort, to delineate the major variations, and to present cases illustrating the application of the tort to abusive collection of consumer debts. After examining each of the main debt collection torts in some detail, the 1 See, e.g., Williams v. Rodenberg, L.L.P., 2018 WL 5801889 (D. Minn. Nov. 6, 2018) (plaintiff seeking to add claim for punitive damages sufficiently alleged deliberate disregard of his rights by collector's attorney; repeated garnishment of non-debtor's wages, continuing after attorneys had actual knowledge that he was not the judgment debtor); Davis v. Creditors Interchange Receivable Mgmt., L.L.C., 585 F. Supp. 2d 968 (N.D. Ohio 2008) (false threats of arrest and garnishment, workplace and family contacts, repeated calls to consumers known to be represented sufficient to state claim for punitive damages); Miele v. Sid Bailey, Inc., 192 B.R. 611 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) (punitive damages of $60,000 (about five times actual damages, FDCPA statutory damages, and attorney fees) permissible where collector hounded plaintiff for discharged debt and reported it to credit reporting agency); Ariguzo v. Kmart Corp., 1999 WL 775777 (Ohio Ct. App. Sept. 30, 1999) (upholding $58,000 compensatory and $350,000 punitive damages for intentional infliction of emotional distress and defamation where, after being shown receipt for goods consumer was seeking to exchange, store personnel forced her into office, dumped out her purse, and sent theft report to collection agency, which sent her harassing letters); Household Credit Serv. v. Driscol, 989 S.W.2d 72 (Tex. App. 1998) ($250,000 exemplary damages for repeated abusive calls regarding credit card debt); Ellis County State Bank v. Keever, 936 S.W.2d 683 (Tex. App. 1996) (upholding punitive damages of $1 million (nine times actual damages) where bank had debtor arrested on charges of concealing collateral in effort to collect debt that had been discharged in bankruptcy, and bank officers gave false grand jury testimony). See also May v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 852 Fed. 3d 806 (8th Cir. 2018) (Mo. law; affirming award of $400,000 punitive damages, an 8-to-1 ratio to compensatory damages of $50,000, against lender that was aware of its error in calculating amount due after mortgage paid down in ch. 13 plan, yet stonewalled consumer's attempts to correct error, engaged in harsh collection attempts, and wrongfully attempted to foreclose); Hayfield v. Home Depot, 168 F. Supp. 2d 436 (E.D. Pa. 2001) (consumer alleged sufficient facts to support punitive damages award where retailer vigorously prosecuted criminal bad check charges despite lack of probable cause); Harold McLaughlin Reliable Truck Brokers v. Cox, 922 S.W.2d 327 (Ark. 1996) (punitive damages appropriate in malicious prosecution case); Rahaman v. Weber, 2005 WL 89413 (Minn. Ct. App. Jan. 19, 2005) (consumer should have been allowed to add claim for punitive damages where lawyers levied on bank account after being notified that the funds were exempt, and seized larger sum than authorized); Cooper v. Cooper, 783 A.2d 430 (Vt. 2001) (evidence of malice supported punitive damages where ex-husband's parents sought to foreclose mortgage on wife's property during acrimonious divorce). See generally § 2.6.2.1, supra; National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 13.6.11 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (punitive damages for conversion and other repossession torts); National Consumer Law Center, Automobile Fraud § 8.11 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library (punitive damages for fraud; constitutional and statutory limits on punitive damages).

2 See, e.g., Barquis v. Merchants Collection Ass'n, 496 P.2d 817 (Cal. 1972) (class action challenging practice of filing suit in improper venues); Charlie Thomas Courtesy Leasing Co. v. Taylor, 44 S.W.3d 684 (Tex. App. 2001) (class action proper against defendant who swore out complaints for theft of services under $20, the threshold level below which district attorney did not screen complaints, then used threat of arrest to coerce payment of much larger sums by consumers who disputed bills). But cf. Fuhrman v. California Satellite Sys., 231 Cal. Rptr. 113 (Cal. Ct. App. 1986) (class action for intentional infliction of mental distress particularly inappropriate because of individual questions of damages).

chapter concludes with a discussion of other debt collection torts, negligence claims against collection attorneys, and the tort liability of principals and officers.[3]

15.1.2 Preemption

15.1.2.1 FDCPA and State Debt Collection Statutes Do Not Preempt Tort Claims

The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act contains broad non-preemption language, stating that the Act does not "annul, alter, or affect, or exempt any person subject to the provisions of this subchapter from complying with the laws of any state with respect to debt collection, except to the extent that those laws are inconsistent with any provision of this subchapter, and then only to the extent of the inconsistency."[4] This language makes it clear that the FDCPA is intended only to set minimum standards; states are free to provide greater protection to the consumer. The non-preemption language protects common law causes of action[5] as well as statutory claims.[6] State debt collection statutes also do not preempt common law claims.[7]

15.1.2.2 Preemption by Federal Banking Laws, Higher Education Act, and the Bankruptcy Code

Federal banking laws—the National Bank Act (NBA) and the Home Owners Loan Act (HOLA)—may preempt state tort claims that challenge loan terms as unfair or violative of state law.[8] However, the federal preemption regulations explicitly preserve state tort law as long as it is not inconsistent with the powers granted to banks,[9] and a tort claim that alleges collection harassment or deception is likely to escape preemption.[10] The Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act, passed in 2010, significantly narrowed the preemptive scope of federal banking laws, making preemption of state debt collection tort claims even less likely than before.[11] Preemption of state law by federal banking laws and regulations is discussed in detail in NCLC's Mortgage Lending.[12]

The Higher Education Act does not preempt state tort claims alleging misconduct by private collectors of student loans, as the Act and its regulations do not mandate workplace harassment or other extreme behavior.[13]

Preemption problems may arise if the debt collection conduct relates to a bankruptcy case. This issue is discussed in Chapter 13, supra.

3 See §§ 15.7 to 15.9, infra.

4 15 U.S.C. § 1692n. See § 11.16.1, supra.

5 Desmond v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., Ltd., 724 F. Supp. 2d 562 (W.D. Pa. 2010); Heidelberger v. Am. Express Travel-Related Serv., 2007 WL 4404027 (E.D. Ark. Dec. 13, 2007) (state negligence and outrage claims not preempted); Albright v. Allied Int'l Credit Corp., 2003 WL 22350928 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 25, 2003) (FDCPA does not preempt state tort law claims and is not inconsistent with them); Joseph v. J.J. MacIntyre Cos., L.L.C., 238 F. Supp. 2d 1158, 1169–1170 (N.D. Cal. 2002) (FDCPA does not preempt invasion-of-privacy claim); Virgil v. Reorganized M.W. Co., 156 F. Supp. 2d 624 (S.D. Miss. 2001), repudiating Thrasher v. Cardholder Serv., 74 F. Supp. 2d 691 (S.D. Miss. 1999) (earlier decision by same judge); Binion v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 147 F. Supp. 2d 519 (S.D. Miss. 2001); Williams v. Northcut & Edwards, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12980 (S.D. Ohio July 7, 1999) (Ohio common law action for invasion of privacy not preempted by FDCPA).

6 Hage v. Gen. Serv. Bureau, 2002 WL 1796575 (D. Neb. Aug. 5, 2002) (consumer protection statute not preempted by FDCPA).

7 Bailey v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 2011 WL 2517253 (S.D. W. Va. June 23, 2011) (West Virginia consumer act expands, and does not replace, common law liability; consumer may bring statutory and common law claims arising from same set of facts). See also Pemberton v. U.S. Bank, 2012 WL 37113 (S.D. W. Va. Jan. 5, 2012) (common law claims can be asserted as long as they could exist separate from the statute and can be based on the same facts as the statutory claims); Daniels v. JP Morgan Chase & Co., 2011 WL 2489938 (S.D. W. Va. June 21, 2011) (common law claims must be actionable apart from statutory claim).

8 See, e.g., Ayala v. World Sav. Bank, 616 F. Supp. 2d 1007 (C.D. Cal. 2009) (state law claims of negligence and negligent infliction of emotional distress, arising from allegedly predatory loan, were preempted by Home Owners Loan Act because they challenged the terms of the credit). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Mortgage Lending Ch. 5 (3d ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

9 12 C.F.R. §§ 7.4007(c)(2), 7.4008(e)(2), 34.4(b)(2).

10 Sovereign Bank v. Sturgis, 863 F. Supp. 2d 75 (D. Mass. 2012) (claims of intentional infliction of emotional distress and tortious interference with contract are not preempted where they do not seek to enforce substantive lending regulations that would themselves be preempted); Tuck v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., 2012 WL 2906738 (N.D. Cal. July 13, 2012) (state tort claims of intentional infliction of emotional distress, fraud, and elder abuse, arising from mishandling of older homeowner's loan modification, were not preempted by Home Owners Loan Act); Ahmed v. Wells Fargo Bank & Co., 2011 WL 1751415 (N.D. Cal. May 9, 2011) (tort claims not barred by Home Owners Loan Act; alleged false statement that foreclosure sale had been cancelled violated general duty not to misrepresent facts, not some duty specific to loan procedure, such as duty to disclose rates or fees); Poskin v. T.D. Banknorth, 687 F. Supp. 2d 530 (W.D. Pa. 2009) (wrongful use of civil proceedings claim, alleging that bank brought foreclosure and quiet title actions despite knowledge that loan was invalid, not preempted by National Bank Act); Ayala v. World Sav. Bank, 616 F. Supp. 2d 1007 (C.D. Cal. 2009) (Home Owners Loan Act does not preempt slander of title claim alleging that lender caused groundless notice of default to be recorded against the property).

11 See National Consumer Law Center, Mortgage Lending Ch. 5 (3d ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Credit Regulation Ch. 3 (2d ed. 2015), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

12 National Consumer Law Center, Mortgage Lending Ch. 5 (3d ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

13 Murungi v. Texas Guaranteed Sallie Mae, 646 F. Supp. 2d 804 (E.D. La. 2009). Cf. Snuffer v. Great Lakes Educational Loan Serv., Inc., 2015 WL 1275455 (S.D. W. Va. Mar. 19, 2015) (HEA preempts sections of state act forbidding contact with represented debtor, but not those forbidding threatening or fraudulent debt collection conduct). But cf. Hunt v. Sallie Mae, Inc., 2011 WL 2847428 (E.D. Mich. July 19, 2011) (state statutory and tort claims alleging telephone harassment expressly preempted by HEA provision requiring diligent collection efforts). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Student Loan Law § 14.2.4 (6th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library (Higher Education Act preemption of state debt collection law claims).

15.1.3 Privilege

15.1.3.1 Privilege for Statements Made in Judicial Proceedings

Issues of privilege arise in many collection tort suits. According to the Restatement (Second) of Torts,[14] statements made in the course of a judicial proceeding are absolutely privileged in cases alleging defamation,[15] slander of title or trade libel,[16] and invasion of privacy.[17] Some courts have declined to extend this privilege beyond these torts.[18] However, other courts have extended it to the other torts discussed in this chapter, except malicious prosecution.[19] In California, the litigation

14 Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 587 to 588 (1977).

15 See, e.g., MSK EyEs, Ltd. v. Wells Fargo Bank, 546 F.3d 533, 542 (8th Cir. 2008) (Minn. law); Gargiulo v. Forster & Garbus, Esqs., 651 F. Supp. 2d 188 (S.D.N.Y. 2009); Bernegger v. Washington Mut., 2008 WL 597811 (E.D. Wis. Mar. 3, 2008) (absolute privilege for witnesses' relevant statements in pleadings, affidavits, or testimony, here in foreclosure and bankruptcy proceedings); Connor v. Instant Cash Advance, 2003 WL 446378 (S.D. Ind. Feb. 20, 2003) (Indiana's litigation privilege is absolute and bars lender's libel counterclaim based on complaint in consumer's suit); Srein v. Nat'l Legal Research Group, 2002 WL 31819638 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 16, 2002) (privilege protects statements in legal research materials); Henry v. Cisco Sys., 2001 WL 1104651 (E.D. La. Sept. 19, 2001) (Del. law; statements made in bankruptcy memorandum are privileged), aff'd, 106 Fed. Appx. 235 (5th Cir. 2004); Havilah Real Prop. Services v. VLK, L.L.C., 108 A.3d 334 (D.C. 2015) (noting that privilege is absolute in defamation actions); Prather v. Providian Nat'l Bank, 2006 WL 1868335 (Ky. Ct. App. July 6, 2006) (litigation privilege bars defamation claim arising from statements made in collection action); Rogers v. Ash Grove Cement Co., 799 So. 2d 841 (La. Ct. App. 2001) (litigation privilege protects statements made by creditor's lawyers with probable cause and without malice); Norman v. Borison, 17 A.3d 697 (Md. 2011) (Maryland judicial proceedings privilege broad enough to protect giving copy of complaint to media before filing, publicizing filed complaint on Internet, and discussing case with reporter); Havens-Tobias v. Eagle, 2003 WL 1601461 (Ohio Ct. App. Mar. 28, 2003) (litigation privilege bars defamation action based on statements made in pleadings and in negotiations with consumer's attorney); Montemayor v. Ortiz, 208 S.W.3d 627 (Tex. App. 2006) (litigation privilege bars defamation claims based on statements made in obtaining a receivership). See also Willis & Linnen Co. v. Linnen, 837 N.E.2d 1263 (Ohio Ct. App. 2005) (lawyer has absolute immunity against defamation claim based on statements reasonably related to judicial proceeding). But see Lentini v. Northwest La. Legal Serv., Inc., 841 So. 2d 1017 (La. Ct. App. 2003) (allowing defamation action to go forward alleging statements made in FDCPA and RICO class action complaint; attorney's allegations in pleadings are privileged only if material, made with probable cause, and without malice).

16 Restatement (Second) of Torts § 635 (1977) (the Restatement classifies these torts as "injurious falsehood"). See, e.g., Nemo Dev., Inc. v. Cmty. Nat'l Bank, 2006 WL 839449 (D. Kan. Jan. 4, 2006) (absolute privilege bars slander of title action arising from allegedly false statements in pleadings in foreclosure action).

17 Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652F (1977). See White v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5084232 (N.D. Ala. Aug. 27, 2015) (privilege bars invasion-of-privacy claim alleging that debt buyer knowingly filed meritless lawsuit); Ferrell v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 2450615 (N.D. Ala. May 22, 2015) (Alabama litigation privilege bars invasion-of-privacy claim against debt buyer that knowingly filed meritless lawsuit); Hagberg v. California Fed. Bank, 81 P.3d 244 (Cal. 2004) (applying statutory privilege to invasion-of-privacy claim; report to police absolutely privileged unless malicious prosecution shown); Webb v. Louw, 2003 WL 22017840 (Cal. Ct. App. Aug. 27, 2003) (litigation privilege bars claim for common law invasion of privacy, but not for violation of electronic privacy statute); McGrew v. Heinold Commodities, Inc., 497 N.E.2d 424 (Ill. App. Ct. 1986) (applying absolute privilege for legal proceedings in invasion-of-privacy (false-light) case). See also Smith v. A.B. Bonded Locksmith, 757 N.E.2d 1242 (Ohio Ct. App. 2001) (public officials had statutory immunity from claims of negligent invasion-of-privacy claim for breaking into plaintiff's home pursuant to court order; finding it unnecessary to decide whether they also had absolute judicial or quasi-judicial immunity). But see Franklin Collection Agency v. Kyle, 955 So. 2d 284, 292 (Miss. 2007) (declining to extend litigation privilege to invasion of privacy; filing papers in court that include confidential medical information, without first seeking protection from the court, may be actionable).

18 See, e.g., Todd v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., L.P.A., 434 F.3d 432 (6th Cir. 2006) (in most states, defendant is not entitled to absolute immunity from claims of malicious prosecution, abuse of process, or wrongful garnishment, but has defenses of probable cause and lack of malice); Osinubepi-Alao v. Plainview Fin. Serv., Ltd., 44 F. Supp. 3d 84 (D.D.C. 2014) (litigation privilege applies only to defamation); Sykes v. Mel Harris & Assoc., 757 F. Supp. 2d 413 (S.D.N.Y. 2010) (privilege "wholly inapplicable" to claims other than defamation); Havilah Real Prop. Services v. VLK, L.L.C., 108 A.3d 334 (D.C. 2015) (no absolute privilege, but only conditional privilege, for tortious interference claim); Morrison v. Morrison, 663 S.E.2d 714 (Ga. 2008) (statutory privilege, Ga. Code Ann. § 51-5-8, for certain statements made in judicial proceedings, is explicitly limited to defamation); Cumberland Contractors v. State Bank and Trust Co., 755 S.E.2d 511 (Ga. Ct. App. 2014) (invasion-of-privacy claim not barred by privilege); Renton v. Watson, 739 S.E.2d 19 (Ga. Ct. App. 2013) (intentional infliction of emotional distress claim not barred by privilege). See also Blevins v. Hudson & Keyse, Inc., 395 F. Supp. 2d 662 (S.D. Ohio 2004) (litigation privilege does not bar UDAP claim alleging false statements by creditor in affidavit filed in collection action); Deuell v. Texas Right to Life Committee, 508 S.W. 3d 679 (Tex. App. 2016) (litigation privilege, which extends to statements made preliminary to and in contemplation of legal proceedings, applies to any claim seeking reputational damages; rejecting claim of privilege where plaintiff candidate sought pecuniary damages for tortious interference with contract after his opponent's threat to sue caused radio station to withdraw advertising for which candidate had paid).

19 ALABAMA: Knowles v. Am. Home Mort. Servicing, Inc., 2012 WL 2357752 (N.D. Ala. June 18, 2012) (applies broadly to all torts). See also D.A.R. v. R.E.L., 2018 WL 4266697 (Ala. Sept. 7, 2018) (complaints to bar discipline authorities are absolutely privileged, even in action for malicious prosecution or abuse of process).

CONNECTICUT: Simms v. Seaman, 69 A.3d 880, 884 (Conn. 2013) (litigation privilege applies to fraud and intentional infliction of emotional distress but not to abuse of process, malicious prosecution, or vexation); Rioux v. Barry, 927 A.2d 304 (Conn. 2007) (litigation privilege applies to tortious interference with contract but not to tort of vexatious litigation); Petyan v. Ellis, 510 A.2d 1337, 1342–1343 (Conn. 1986) (absolute privilege for judicial proceedings bars intentional infliction of emotional distress claim based on statements employer made on form used in unemployment hearing). See also Heim v. California Fed. Bank, 828 A.2d 129 (Conn. App. Ct. 2003) (immunity bars intentional infliction of emotional distress claim if based on statements made in judicial proceedings, otherwise not). But cf. Mozzochi v. Beck, 529 A.2d 171 (Conn. 1987) (denying absolute immunity for abuse of process claim against attorney).

FLORIDA: Kodsi v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 2018 WL 830117 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 12, 2018) (garnishment of non-debtor wife's bank account for husband's individual debt; Florida litigation privilege does not bar claims of malicious prosecution and wrongful garnishment but does bar abuse of process); Levin, Middlebrooks, Mabie, Thomas, Mayes & Mitchell v. U.S. Fire Ins. Co., 639 So. 2d 606 (Fla. 1994) (absolute immunity applies to any act occurring during a judicial proceeding, even if defamatory or otherwise tortious, so long as the act has some relation to the proceeding).

IDAHO: Taylor v. McNichols, 243 P.3d 642, 658 (Idaho 2010) (litigation privilege is absolute and generally protects attorney from liability to opposing party for acts or communication when the attorney is acting as a representative and not for his or her own interests; here, privilege bars claims for civil conspiracy and tortious interference with contract).

ILLINOIS: Rosales v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., 2017 WL 1436957 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 24, 2017) (privilege bars every state cause of action for wrongful filing of a lawsuit except malicious prosecution or abuse of process; here, dismissing UDAP claim).

KENTUCKY: Heavrin v. Nelson, 384 F.3d 199 (6th Cir. 2004) (Ky. law) (absolute privilege for legal proceedings bars claims of fraud and outrage based on false proofs of claim in bankruptcy case and false testimony in criminal trial).

MAINE: Hoffman v. Connecticut, 2009 WL 2366001 (D. Me. July 29, 2009) (Maine's absolute privilege for witnesses' statements applies broadly to all torts), modified on other grounds and adopted by 671 F. Supp. 2d 166 (D. Me. 2009).

MARYLAND: State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Slade Healthcare, Inc., 381 F. Supp. 3d 536 (D. Md. 2019) ("Absolute privilege is a broad defense to tort claims;" here, tortious interference with contract).

MASSACHUSETTS: Corellas v. Viveiros, 572 N.E.2d 7 (Mass. 1991) (intentional infliction of emotional distress claim must fail because statements made to police during investigation were absolutely privileged); Sullivan v. Birmingham, 416 N.E.2d 528 (Mass. App. Ct. 1981) (absolute privilege bars liability for intentional infliction of emotional distress based on allegations in complaints).

MICHIGAN: Celley v. Stevens, 2004 WL 134000 (Mich. Ct. App. Jan. 27, 2004) (litigation privilege bars defamation and intentional infliction of emotional distress claims alleging false report to police; would not bar malicious prosecution claim).

NEW JERSEY: Giles v. Phelan, Hallinan & Schmieg, L.L.P., 901 F. Supp. 2d 509 (D.N.J. 2012) (negligent or intentional infliction of emotional distress, fraud, negligent misrepresentation, malicious interference with economic advantage, negligence, abuse of process, invasion of privacy, and civil conspiracy); Rickenbach v. Wells Fargo Bank, 635 F. Supp. 2d 389 (D.N.J. 2009) (applies to defamation, negligence, breach of confidentiality, abuse of process, intentional infliction of emotional distress, negligent infliction of emotional distress, invasion of privacy, civil conspiracy, interference with contractual or advantageous business relations, and fraud; protects statements made during settlement negotiations, witness interviews, and pre-trial demand letters).

OHIO: Willis & Linnen Co. v. Linnen, 837 N.E.2d 1263 (Ohio Ct. App. 2005) (lawyers' absolute immunity may bar malicious prosecution or abuse of process if specific statement on which claim was based was reasonably related to judicial proceeding).

OKLAHOMA: Kirchstein v. Haynes, 788 P.2d 941 (Okla. 1990) (when claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress is based on same factual underpinnings as defamation claim to which the privilege applies, it is also barred). See also Stricklen v. O.I.P.M., L.L.C., 394 P.3d 290 (Okla. Civ. App. 2016) (perjury in affidavit of service is protected by litigation privilege).

OREGON: Mantia v. Hansen, 79 P.3d 404 (Or. Ct. App. 2003) (judicial action privilege bars tortious interference with contract action alleging the filing of baseless lawsuit unless plaintiff can show all elements of malicious prosecution); Franson v. Radich, 735 P.2d 632 (Or. Ct. App. 1987) (litigation privilege bars action for intentional infliction of mental distress).

PENNSYLVANIA: Pelagatti v. Cohen, 536 A.2d 1337 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1987) (absolute privilege prevents intentional interference with contractual relations claim, but may be exceeded by disseminating statement to the press).

TENNESSEE: Vanderbilt Univ. ex rel. Vanderbilt Univ. Health Benefit Plan v. Pesak, 2011 WL 4001115, at *13 (M.D. Tenn. Sept. 8, 2012) (intentional infliction of emotional distress claim will not lie for adverse party's litigation activities).

WASHINGTON: Jeckle v. Crotty, 85 P.3d 931 (Wash. Ct. App. 2004) (judicial action privilege bars intentional infliction of emotional distress, civil conspiracy, and tortious interference claims against adverse party's lawyer for recruiting clients and preparing and trying case).

WISCONSIN: Bernegger v. Washington Mut., 2008 WL 597811 (E.D. Wis. Mar. 3, 2008) (deliberate and negligent misrepresentation claims fail; absolute privilege for witnesses' relevant statements in pleadings, affidavits, and testimony).

privilege is codified[20] and extends to all torts except malicious prosecution.[21] However, it specifies a number of exceptions, 20 Cal. Civ. Code § 47 (West). See also Cal. Civ. Code § 2924(d) (defining certain non-judicial foreclosure notices and procedures as privileged communications).

21 Rusheen v. Cohen, 128 P.3d 713, 718 (Cal. 2006); Hagberg v. California Fed. Bank, 81 P.3d 244 (Cal. 2004) (absolute privilege for reports to police; note that as of 2021 Cal. Civil Code § 47(d) denies the privilege for knowingly or recklessly false reports); Silberg v. Anderson, 786 P.2d 365 (Cal. 1990). See also Huy Thanh Vo v. Nelson & Kennard, 931 F. Supp. 2d 1080 (E.D. Cal. 2013) (privilege bars negligence and libel claims against law firm that took default judgment against debtor's non-debtor brother and resisted efforts to correct problem after learning of the mistake); Yates v. Allied Int'l Credit Corp., 578 F. Supp. 2d 1251 (S.D. Cal. 2008) (litigation privilege protects reports to police, even if false and malicious; malicious prosecution exception applies only if prosecution reaches arraignment stage; legislatively overruled effective Jan. 1, 2021); Guillory v. WFS Fin., 2007 WL 879017 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 21, 2007) (litigation privilege bars intentional infliction of emotional distress claim based on suit for deficiency following wrongful repossession); Flores v. Emmerich & Fike, 416 F. Supp. 2d 885 (E.D. Cal. 2006); Howard v. County of Los Angeles, 2019 WL 313478 (Cal. Ct. App. Jan. 24, 2019) (broad privilege protected collection agency, seeking to collect red light camera ticket from identity theft victim, even though agency threatened to take legal actions, here wage and bank account garnishment, that were not authorized by collector's contract with department of motor vehicles); Trapp v. Naiman, 159 Cal. Rptr. 3d 462 (Cal. Ct. App. 2013) (privilege bars negligence and abuse-of-process claims arising from repeated filing of eviction actions with knowledge that foreclosure was invalid, regardless of bad motive); G.R v. Intelligator, 110 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559 (Cal. Ct. App. 2010) (privilege not lost by violation of court rule—here, introduction of unredacted credit report); Eskenazi v. Devitt, 2010 WL 2848567 (Cal. Ct. App. July 21, 2010) (privilege shielded attorney who caused private investigator to hack into adverse party's bank computers to obtain confidential information); Farrar v. RDK Collection Serv., 2008 WL 4741077 (Cal. Ct. App. Oct. 30, 2008) (litigation privilege protected entire collection procedure, from letter warning that collector would advise creditor to pursue its legal rights through default judgment obtained by falsified proof of service); Smith v. Levine, 2006 WL 3704622 (Cal. Ct. App. Dec. 18, 2006) (litigation privilege bars abuse-of-process and conversion claims arising from levy on bank account containing separate property of non-debtor and refusal to return the funds). But see Rouse v. Law Offices of Rory Clark, 465 F. Supp. 2d 1031 (S.D. Cal. 2006) (litigation privilege did not protect law firm that vigorously pursued collection activity against debtor's similarly named non-debtor son, because son was stranger to debt collection litigation and law firm never had grounds to invoke legal process against him or his property). But cf. Herrera v. AllianceOne Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 3796123 (S.D. Cal. June 18, 2015) (privilege lost when collection efforts continued after court order holding current plaintiff—whose including one effective January 1, 2021, for knowingly or recklessly false reports to law enforcement regarding suspected criminal activity.[22] Some jurisdictions also recognize a privilege to publish matters of public record, such as court proceedings, provided the publication is a "fair and substantially accurate account of the public record or proceeding."[23]

In deciding whether a cause of action is barred by privilege, the Connecticut Supreme Court asks whether the cause of action has "built-in safeguards against the use of litigation as a weapon to chill the vigorous advocacy expected in an adversarial system of justice."[24] Applying this test, the court held that there is no litigation privilege for the torts of abuse of process, malicious prosecution, and vexation because the elements of those claims require balancing of the need to protect the justice system with the need to protect the injured party. On the other hand, the court held that the litigation privilege applies to fraud and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

The privilege for statements made in a judicial proceeding may protect not only pleadings and testimony, but also statements made to a bankruptcy trustee, in a proof of claim, or at a meeting of unsecured creditors in a bankruptcy proceeding,[25] in discovery responses,[26] during settlement negotiations,[27] in an application for a prejudgment remedy,[28] in a legal advertisement of a foreclosure,[29] or while investigating a potential claim or interviewing prospective witnesses or parties.[30] However, the Maine Supreme Court has held that an affidavit that states falsely that the affiant personally appeared before the notary is not privileged as testimony because it cannot be considered by the trial court.[31] "Judicial proceedings" may include quasi-judicial or administrative proceedings.[32] name was similar to debtor's—not liable; continuing to pursue innocent party does not further goals of litigation, and allowing privilege here would encourage contemptuous conduct); Johnson v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 536 F. Supp. 2d 1207 (E.D. Cal. 2008) (debt buyer carried on with lawsuit and garnishment after being informed by original creditor that debt arose from "fraudulent transaction"; privilege barred litigation-related intentional infliction of emotional distress and defamation claims but not defamation claims that arose from statements in "non-litigation context"—that is, the buying and selling of debt). See generally § 16.1.3, infra (effect of litigation privilege on statutory claims).

22 2020 Cal. Legis. Serv. Ch. 327, § 2 (A.B. 1775), effective Jan. 1, 2021.

23 Vaile v. Willick, 2008 WL 2754975 (W.D. Va. July 14, 2008) (jury question whether letter stating that ex-husband had been found guilty of kidnapping and felony non-support, and enclosing copy of actual decision, had so substantially departed from the record as to lose privilege, where he had only been held civilly liable in case arising from removal of children from ex-wife's custody); Curto v. New York Law Journal, 40 N.Y.S.3d 841 (N.Y. App. Div. 2016) (absolute privilege for newspaper article which, viewed as a whole, was a substantially accurate report of federal court's decision denying collector's summary judgment motion; consumer claimed that referring to her as debtor was defamatory because she did not owe the debt); McNamara v. Koehler, 429 P.3d 6 (Wash. Ct. App. 2018) (Washington's fair report privilege protects websites, web pages, and blogs, as well as traditional news media; here applying to law firm's website touting its work in various pending cases).

24 Simms v. Seaman, 69 A.3d 880, 884 (Conn. 2013).

25 See Heavrin v. Nelson, 384 F.3d 199 (6th Cir. 2004) (Ky. law; absolute privilege for legal proceedings bars claims of fraud and outrage based on false proofs of claim in bankruptcy case); Quality Botanical Ingredients, Inc. v. Triarco Indus., Inc., 249 B.R. 619 (Bankr. D.N.J. 2000) (meeting convened by trustee to form an official committee of unsecured creditors); Edelman, Combs & Latturner v. Hinshaw & Culbertson, 788 N.E.2d 740 (Ill. App. Ct. 2003) (publication to bankruptcy trustee in effort to reopen case); Oakley v. Nolan, 2007 WL 1650045 (Ohio Ct. App. May 25, 2007) (absolute litigation privilege bars defamation and invasion-of-privacy claims based on creditor's letter to bankruptcy trustee alleging business dealings by debtor that could affect the estate). See also Eckerle v. Katz & Korin, P.C., 81 N.E.3d 272 (Ind. Ct. App. 2017) (statements in document filed in bankruptcy cases were relevant to the case, so privilege applies).

26 See Bodram v. Coombs, 2016 WL 3248518 (W.D. Ky. June 10, 2016) (deposition testimony is privileged, even if perjured); Bartsch v. Regents of the Univ., 2006 WL 302554 (Cal. Ct. App. Feb. 8, 2006) (response to interrogatories privileged).

27 Ogbin v. Fein, Such, Kahn & Shephard, P.C., 414 Fed. Appx. 456 (3d Cir. 2011) (payoff letters sent during negotiations in course of foreclosure proceeding); Sengchanthalangsy v. Accelerated Recovery Specialists, Inc., 473 F. Supp. 2d 1083 (S.D. Cal. 2007) (litigation privilege bars fraud, negligence and UDAP claims based on perjured affidavit given to consumer's lawyer in response to demand for debt verification during settlement negotiations); Havens-Tobias v. Eagle, 2003 WL 1601461 (Ohio Ct. App. Mar. 28, 2003) (litigation privilege bars defamation action based on statements made in pleadings and in negotiations with consumer's attorney).

28 Hoffman v. Connecticut, 2009 WL 2366001 (D. Me. July 29, 2009) (affidavit in support of ex parte real estate attachment), modified on other grounds and adopted by 671 F. Supp. 2d 166 (D. Me. Sept. 18, 2009).

29 See Hayes v. Self-Help Credit Union, 2014 WL 4198412, at *7 (M.D.N.C. Aug. 22, 2014) (absolute privilege for statements made during non-judicial foreclosure); Natividad v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2013 WL 2299601 (N.D. Cal. May 24, 2013) (California's statutory litigation privilege applies to notices used in non-judicial foreclosure); Frascogna v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2009 WL 2843284 (S.D. Miss. Aug. 31, 2009) (publication and posting of notice of foreclosure sale); Larkins v. The Bank, 2005 WL 1278877 (N.D. Fla. May 10, 2005); Cal. Civ. Code § 2924(d) (West) (defining certain non-judicial foreclosure notices and procedures as privileged communications, protected by statutory privilege). See generally § 15.1.3.2, infra (whether common interest privilege protects statements made in non-judicial foreclosure).

30 Hawkins v. Kiely, 2008 WL 4104486 (D. Me. Aug. 31, 2008) (defendant, an individual who gave an affidavit—later filed in bankruptcy court—to his employer about alleged wrongdoing by plaintiffs, is a witness entitled to absolute judicial privilege); Jones v. Palmquist, 2006 WL 1756827 (Cal. Ct. App. June 28, 2006) (email circulated among realtors, seeking information about unethical behavior by certain realtor for "group complaint" to state real estate board, is privileged); Kirchstein v. Haynes, 788 P.2d 941 (Okla. 1990) (obtaining affidavits to support application for delayed birth certificate); Jeckle v. Crotty, 85 P.3d 931 (Wash. Ct. App. 2004) (locating potential plaintiffs). But see Arko Plumbing Corp. v. Rudd, 230 So. 3d 520 (Fla. Ct. App. 2017) (absolute litigation privilege does not apply outside courtroom or formal discovery process; qualified privilege for "informal investigation;" remanding to resolve issue of malice where attorney hacked into company computer containing confidential business information).

31 Bradbury v. GMAC Mortg., L.L.C., 58 A.3d 1054 (Me. 2012).

32 See D.A.R. v. R.E.L., 2018 WL 4266697 (Ala. Sept. 7, 2018) (complaint to bar discipline authorities are absolutely privileged, even in action fo malicious prosecution or abuse of process); Jones v. Palmquist, 200 WL 1756827 (Cal. Ct. App. June 28, 2006) (complaint to state re estate board alleging misconduct by regulated person is privileged Rioux v. Barry, 927 A.2d 304 (Conn. 2007) (state police internal affai investigation). See also Truman v. Browne, 788 A.2d 168 (Me. 200

Some courts hold that pre-litigation demands are absolutely privileged,[33] but others grant a privilege only if the demand is made "with a good faith belief in a legally viable claim, and in serious contemplation of litigation,"[34] and others deny it altogether.[35] Reports of suspected criminal behavior, made to the proper authorities, may also be protected by a qualified[36] or absolute[37] privilege. In California the privilege extends to non-communicative acts, like a post-judgment levy, if the gravamen of the act is communicative,[38]

(limited "public interest" privilege for complaints to administrative agency). But see Patriot Group, L.L.C. v. Edmands, 136 N.E.3d 386 (Mass. App. Ct. 2019) (burden is on party claiming privilege to show that administrative proceeding is sufficiently "quasi-judicial" to support application of the privilege, i.e., whether it provides sufficient procedural safeguards to prevent abuse; defendant here failed to show that IRS or SEC proceedings in response to whistleblower complaints do so).

33 See, e.g., Lakeside Lumber Products, Inc. v. Meyers, 2017 WL 1174316 (Ariz. Ct. App. Mar. 30, 2016) (absolute litigation privilege protected letter written to debtor's customer by creditor's attorney, six days before filing suit, advising customer to withhold payments to debtor in anticipation of garnishment and attachment proceedings in the near future); Farrar v. RDK Collection Serv., 2008 WL 4741077 (Cal. Ct. App. Oct. 30, 2008) (litigation privilege protected entire collection procedure, from letter warning that collector would advise creditor to pursue its legal rights through default judgment obtained by falsified proof of service); Jonas v. Delallo, 2012 WL 6846396 (Conn. Super. Ct. 2012) (protects communications before or during action that have "some relation" to the proceeding; here, condo association's communication with owner's mortgage lender, causing it to pay debt hotly disputed by owner);. Burton v. NCNB Nat'l Bank, 355 S.E.2d 800 (N.C. Ct. App. 1987) (allegedly defamatory letter from creditor's lawyer to debtor's lawyer, threatening debtor with criminal prosecution, is absolutely privileged as part of civil litigation process);.

34 See Davis v. Hollins Law, 942 F. Supp. 2d 1004 (E.D. Cal. 2013) (dunning voicemail not protected; fact that collection action might ensue after calls or letters failed does not show that litigation was under serious consideration); Bohannon-Hingston v. Brachfield Law Group, 2011 WL 6211756 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 2011) (barrage of workplace calls, starting six months before filing of successful collection action, was not "in the course of any official proceeding"); Action Apartment Ass'n, Inc. v. City of Santa Monica, 163 P.3d 89, 102 (Cal. 2007) (municipal ordinance forbidding eviction notices that lack a basis in fact is not fully preempted by litigation privilege; fact question whether action is actually contemplated in good faith; if it is not, privilege does not apply); Olivares v. Pineda, 253 Cal. Rptr. 3d 213 (Cal. Ct. App. 2019) ("pre-litigation" demand, here an eviction notice, not privileged if it is "merely a negotiating tactic and not a serious proposal made in good faith contemplation of going to court . . . no public policy supports extending a privilege to persons who attempt to profit from hollow threats of litigation;" whether litigation is contemplated in good faith is fact question); Malin v. Singer, 159 Cal. Rptr. 3d 292 (Cal. Ct. App. 2013) (demand letters, which warned that going to trial would disclose sexual misconduct by company officers, were protected by California's statutory litigation privilege, which applies if demand relates to litigation that is contemplated in good faith and under serious consideration; accusations were related to contemplated conversion action because they alleged that defendant misused company money and property). See also A.F. Brown Elec. Contractor, Inc. v. Rhino Elec. Supply, Inc., 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 (Cal. Ct. App. 2006) (privilege protects "preparatory communications" only if litigation is "under serious consideration," but one threat to "pursue all legal remedies" is insufficient).

35 See Westgate Resorts, Ltd. v. Sussman, 387 F. Supp. 3d 1318 (M.D. Fla. 2019) (declining to extend Florida privilege to pre-suit communications not required by law); Ellis v. Kay-Kibbery, 581 F. Supp. 2d 861 (W.D. Mich. 2008) (Michigan's absolute quasi-judicial privilege does not protect statements made before proceeding initiated, even if made in contemplation of litigation; here, telling potential plaintiff about potential defendant's misconduct). See also North Star Capital Acquisitions v. Krig, L.L.C., 611 F. Supp. 2d 1324 (M.D. Fla. 2009) (privilege did not bar abuse-of-process and statutory debt collection claims arising from inclusion of misleading "settlement offer" with complaint, as this is more akin to debt collection rather than a settlement negotiation).

36 See, e.g., Hall v. District of Columbia, 867 F.3d 138 (D.D.C. 2017) (qualified privilege can be lost by bad faith; here restaurant workers who caused customer's arrest should have known that customer who temporarily exited building after paying undisputed amount of bill, leaving behind her credit card, various belongings, and the other members of her party, did not intend to walk out on bill; also knew that amount left after payment was well below the threshold for felony theft); In re BFW Liquidation, L.L.C., 471 B.R. 652 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 2012) (conditional privilege, lost by malice; fact issue here where store swore out bad check complaint against identity theft victim); Carney v. Patino, 2018 WL 5629638 (Ind. Ct. App. Oct. 30, 2018) (qualified privilege for good faith reports to law enforcement lost by malice; complaining witness, who had shown hostility to current plaintiff, lied to police); Ali v. Home Health Care, L.L.C., 53 N.E.3d 420 (Ind. Ct. App. 2016) (qualified public interest privilege protects employer who shared results of internal investigation with police investigating complaint that employee stole from client); Truman v. Browne, 788 A.2d 168 (Me. 2001) (qualified "public interest" privilege for complaints to law enforcement or regulatory agency); Michaels v. MVP Health Care, Inc., 91 N.Y.S.3d 567 (N.Y. App. Div. 2018) (privilege for reports to the Division of Financial Services or to law enforcement is lost by bad faith or fraud; sufficiently alleged here where health plan allegedly gave wrong advice to insurance broker about eligibility for certain plans, then made complaint resulting in criminal prosecution when he followed that advice); Robert B. James, DDS, Inc. v. Elkins, 553 S.W.3d 596 (Tex. App. 2018) (qualified privilege lost by malice; inadequate investigation is not sufficient but reckless disregard for truth shown here); Funk v. Lincoln-Lancaster County Crime Stoppers, 885 N.W.2d 1 (Neb. 2016) (qualified privilege lost where officer failed to investigate obvious problems with bank's complaint; reasonably prudent officer would have done so); San Antonio Credit Union v. O'Connor, 115 S.W.3d 82 (Tex. App. 2003) (qualified privilege applies to statements made in seeking criminal complaint, lost by malice). See also Corellas v. Viveiros, 572 N.E.2d 7 (Mass. 1991) (spontaneous initial report to police conditionally privileged; reports to police during ongoing investigation, here the interrogation of a suspect, are absolutely privileged; intentional infliction of emotional distress and defamation claims barred).

37 See Stoutt v. Baco Popular, 320 F.3d 26 (1st Cir. 2003) (federal anti-money-laundering act provides absolute immunity to financial institution that reports possible criminal activity to law enforcement, even if report is knowingly false and malicious); Yates v. Allied Int'l Credit Corp., 578 F. Supp. 2d 1251 (S.D. Cal. 2008) (absolute privilege; exception for malicious prosecution claim applies only if prosecution reached arraignment stage); Hagberg v. California Fed. Bank, 81 P.3d 244 (Cal. 2004) (statutory privilege protects statements made outside courtroom, here a report to police); Celley v. Stevens, 2004 WL 134000 (Mich. Ct. App. Jan. 27, 2004) (litigation privilege bars defamation and intentional infliction of emotional distress claims alleging false report to police; would not bar malicious prosecution claim, but it fails on other grounds). See also Sherner v. Nat'l Loss Control Serv. Group, 124 P.3d 150 (Mont. 2005) (insurance investigator's report of suspected insurance fraud is privileged).

38 Rusheen v. Cohen, 128 P.3d 713 (Cal. 2006) (absolute immunity applies to postjudgment levy if gravamen of action is communicative)

but in other states the privilege may not extend to non-communicative acts.[39]

The privilege applies only to matters that have some relation to a current or proposed judicial proceeding.[40] It will be exceeded, for example, by distributing copies of pleadings containing false information to persons having no relationship to the litigation.[41] It may not apply to acts taken after the conclusion of the judicial proceedings.[42] The privilege, whether statutory or common law, may be overridden by a more specific statute regarding, for example, debt collection[43] or the Tucker v. Heritage Custom Estates Ass'n, 2017 WL 6460154 (Cal. Ct. App. Dec. 19, 2017) (California's litigation privilege bars abuse of process claim arising from judgment creditor's seizure of property grossly exceeding amount owed on judgment; directing sheriff to serve writ and seize property is communicative); Trapp v. Naiman, 159 Cal. Rptr. 3d 462 (Cal. Ct. App. 2013) (filing repeated eviction actions following invalid foreclosure was communicative act, protected regardless of bad motive). See also Bosnich v. Chase Bank, 2011 WL 1790106 (C.D. Cal. May 9, 2011) (absolute litigation privilege protects all common law tort claims arising from attempts to collect a judgment); Smith v. Fireside Thrift Co., 2007 WL 2729329 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 18, 2007) (falsifying proof of service, obtaining default judgment, and garnishing wages protected by litigation privilege; dismissing abuse-of-process claim); Chiu v. Creditors Trade Ass'n, 2007 WL 1509328 (Cal. Ct. App. May 24, 2007) (litigation privilege bars claims based on conspiracy to obtain default judgments by filing false affidavits of service); Sood v. C.M. Int'l Trading Corp., 2006 WL 711231 (Cal. Ct. App. Mar. 22, 2006) (litigation privilege bars abuse-of-process claim arising from levy on judgment debtor's bank account at time when judgment automatically stayed by pending appeal); Chung v. Bank of Am., 2004 WL 1938272 (Cal. Ct. App. Aug. 26, 2004) (bank's levy on direct-deposited Social Security funds protected by litigation privilege). But cf. Guiccone v. J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, 2015 WL 1968114 (N.D. Cal. May 1, 2015) (privilege applies only if statements are "the actual source of the harm" and not simply "part of the course of conduct leading to the injury"); Olivares v. Pineda, 253 Cal. Rptr. 3d 213 (Cal. Ct. App. 2019) (misapplication of security deposit is not communicative); Chen v. Berenjian, 245 Cal. Rptr. 3d 378 (Cal. Ct. App. 2019) (distinguishing Rusheen; fraudulent transfer by use of sham lawsuit was not communicative).

39 Bethea v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2011 WL 2650580 (D. Kan. July 6, 2011) (although contents of notice of sheriff's sale are privileged, its filing for improper purpose is not; here to gain leverage over homeowners who were in compliance with forbearance agreement); Tilley v. Anixter, Inc., 2004 WL 1146687 (D. Conn. May 4, 2004) (privilege would bar intentional infliction of emotional distress claim based on statements made in divorce proceeding, but husband's employer's falsification of pay records to reduce child support award may be unprotected non-verbal conduct); Heim v. California Fed. Bank, 828 A.2d 129 (Conn. App. Ct. 2003) (litigation privilege only protects statements, not actions). See also Phillips v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2008 WL 5050127 (D. Minn. Nov. 20, 2008) (does not shield wrongful levy on funds of non-party, non-debtor spouse).

40 State Farm Mut. Automobile Ins. Co. v. Slade Healthcare, Inc., 381 F. Supp. 3d 536 (D. Md. 2019) (privilege extends to statements "connected contextually to a pending or ongoing proceeding," here claim denial letters informing claimants that insurer was suing their providers for allegedly fraudulent billing); Dickinson Frozen Foods, Inc. v. J.R. Simplot Co., 434 P.3d 1275 (Idaho 2019) (construing "reasonably related" standard; here extending privilege to defamatory statements about non-party company that was owned by a party); Eckerle v. Katz and Korin, P.C., 81 N.E.3d 272 (Ind. Ct. App. 2017) (statements in document filed in bankruptcy cases were relevant to the case, so privilege applies).

41 See Prowley v. Hemar Ins. Co. of Am., 2010 WL 1848222 (S.D.N.Y. May 7, 2010) (privilege lost if statement is "so obviously not pertinent [to the litigation] and so needlessly defamatory as to warrant the inference of express malice"); Hoffman v. Connecticut, 2009 WL 2366001 (D. Me. July 29, 2009) (statements in application for real estate attachment were privileged, but not communications to construction lender, business associates, and community at large), modified on other grounds and adopted by 671 F. Supp. 2d 166 (D. Me. 2009); Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., 2002 WL 31618443 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 6, 2002) (litigation privilege did not protect statements to consumer's employer, who was stranger to debt-collection litigation; qualified privilege for reporting of legal proceedings lost when collector embellished the facts by calling consumer a thief); Assoc. Fin. Serv. Co. v. Bowman, Heintz, Boscia & Vician, P.C., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7874 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 25, 2001); Field v. U-Haul Co. of E. Bay, 2004 WL 2005739 (Cal. Ct. App. Sept. 8, 2004) (privilege would protect complaint to police, but not remarks at scene addressed to plaintiff and overheard by bystanders having no interest in case); Edelman, Combs & Latturner v. Hinshaw & Culbertson, 788 N.E.2d 740 (Ill. App. Ct. 2003) (litigation privilege protects accusation of improper litigation practices published to bankruptcy trustee in effort to reopen case, but not publication to attorneys and unknown third party unconnected to case); First Nat'l Bank of Mo. v. Ricon, Inc., 311 S.W.3d 857 (Mo. Ct. App. 2010) (filing of lis pendens absolutely privileged if reasonably related to the action filed; not shown here where filing not authorized by law); Reszka v. Collins, 25 N.Y.S.3d 457 (N.Y. App. Div. 2016) (litigation privilege does not shield statements made at press conference called by defendant after filing meritless action); Mantia v. Hansen, 79 P.3d 404 (Or. Ct. App. 2003); Bochetto v. Gibson, 860 A.2d 67 (Pa. 2004) (no privilege for distributing copies of pleading to reporter). But see Pincus v. Pincus, 127 N.E.3d 393 (Ohio App. Ct. 2018) (privilege protected attorney who provided copies of complaint, alleged to contain defamatory material, to the media; complaint is a public record); Norman v. Borison, 17 A.3d 697 (Md. 2011) (Maryland judicial proceedings privilege broad enough to cover giving copy of complaint to media before filing, publicizing filed complaint on Internet, and discussing case with reporter; statements were relevant because they might alert potential class members to the existence of the action); Landry's, Inc. v. Animal Legal Defense Fund, 2018 WL 5075116 (Tex. App. Oct. 18, 2018) (judicial proceedings privilege extended to press release and public statements publicizing the litigation). But cf. Dickinson Frozen Foods, Inc. v. J.R. Simplot Co., 434 P.3d 1275 (Idaho 2019) (sending copy of complaint to entity that was creditor of company that plaintiff co-owned with defendant is protected by litigation privilege).

42 Hammer v. Residential Credit Solutions, 2015 WL 7776807 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 3, 2015) (no privilege for actions that "are inconsistent with, fail to recognize, or contravene, a final court order," here collection attempts that continued after foreclosure was dismissed because borrower was in compliance with valid loan modification); Monroe v. Citimortgage, Inc., 2007 WL 2071284 (M.D. Fla. July 19, 2007) (litigation privilege does not apply to "payoff letters," sent after final foreclosure judgment and not required for prosecution, defense, or appeal of foreclosure action).

43 See, e.g., Barany-Snyder v. Weiner, 2007 WL 210411, at *9 (N.D. Ohio Jan. 24, 2007) (litigation immunity is inconsistent with FDCPA's coverage of lawyers' conduct in litigation), aff'd, 539 F.3d 327 (6th Cir. 2008). But see Heavrin v. Nelson, 384 F.3d 199, 203 (6th Cir. 2004) (Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 446.070 (West), which provides a private right of action to anyone injured by violation of a criminal statute, does not abrogate the litigation privilege; no private right of action for perjury in a legal proceeding). See generally § 16.1.3, infra.

handling of confidential information in litigation.[44] Since the privilege is absolute, there is some authority that it must be narrowly applied.[45]

Additional impediments to negligence and other claims against the opposing party's attorney for litigation misconduct are discussed in § 15.8, infra.

15.1.3.2 Common Interest Privilege

Another privilege, the common interest privilege, shields statements made to someone who has a legitimate interest in the information,[46] such as a credit reporting agency[47] or a spouse.[48] A creditor's provision of information about the debt to a collector may be protected by this privilege.[49] The Restatement applies this privilege only to defamation and invasion of privacy.[50]

One court has defined the elements of the privilege as: (1) good faith; (2) an interest in the subject by the speaker or a subject in which the speaker has a duty to speak; (3) a corresponding interest or duty in the listener or reader; (4) a proper occasion; and (5) publication in a proper manner.[51] Good faith means with a good motive and not for the purpose of harming the subject. If the other four elements are present, some courts will presume good faith.[52] The duty mentioned as the second element need not be a legal requirement, but it may be moral, social, or political.[53]

44 See, e.g., In re Ortiz, 430 B.R. 523 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 2010) (Wisconsin health care privacy statute, which specifically regulates handling of confidential medical information in legal proceedings, overrides more general judicial proceedings privilege); Doe v. Williams McCarthy, L.L.P., 92 N.E.3d 607 (Ill. App. Ct. 2017) (absolute litigation privilege bars claims of invasion of privacy and intentional infliction of emotional distress arising from disclosure of mental health information, but not claims of violation of HIPAA and state mental health privacy statute; concluding that legislature intended statute to apply in litigation); Renzi v. Morrison, 618 N.E.2d 794 (Ill. App. Ct. 1993) (statute's creation of damages remedy for revealing confidential mental health information overrides witness's absolute immunity at common law); Wynn v. Earin, 181 P.3d 806 (Wash. 2008) (witness immunity does not apply to information disclosed in violation of state statute).

45 See, e.g., Stein v. Krislov, 999 N.E.2d 345 (Ill. App. 2013) (because the privilege provides complete immunity, its scope is narrow; does not apply under circumstances for which there are no safeguards against abuse of the privilege, i.e., where the authorities do not have the ability to discipline the attorney and strike from the record any statements exceeding the bounds of permissible conduct; denying privilege to attorney who was not representing any client in a class action, who wrote letter to judge accusing class counsel of exaggerating and falsifying its qualifications); Edelman, Combs & Latturner v. Hinshaw & Culbertson, 788 N.E.2d 740 (Ill. App. Ct. 2003) (because litigation privilege is absolute, it is narrowly applied; privilege protected accusation of improper litigation practices published to bankruptcy trustee in effort to reopen case, but not publication to attorneys and unknown third party unconnected with case).

46 See, e.g., Wilson v. Am. Gen. Fin. Co., 2013 WL 967161 (W.D. Pa. Mar. 12, 2013) (company's response to complaint to Better Business Bureau is privileged; BBB required its members to respond to complaints); Shields v. U.S. Bank, 2006 WL 3791320 (D. Kan. Dec. 22, 2006) (bank's reports of delinquency in response to queries by potential lenders are protected); Cohen v. Beachside Two—I Homeowners' Ass'n, 2006 WL 1795140 (D. Minn. June 29, 2006) (extending privilege to statements in minutes circulated by board of condominium association about owner's delinquent assessments), aff'd as modified, 272 Fed. Appx. 534 (8th Cir. 2008); Hulse v. Ocwen Fed. Bank, 195 F. Supp. 2d 1188 (D. Or. 2002) (lender's statements during non-judicial foreclosure proceeding were privileged when made in good faith to protect its interests and without reason to know of falsity); Addington v. Wal-Mart Stores, 105 S.W.3d 369 (Ark. Ct. App. 2003) (statements made to fellow employees and law enforcement during theft investigation are privileged); Saye v. Deloitte & Touche, L.L.P., 670 S.E.2d 818 (Ga. Ct. App. 2008) (statements by independent auditor to client); Ali v. Home Health Care, L.L.C., 53 N.E.3d 420 (Ind. Ct. App. 2016) (common interest privilege protected employer's sharing of results of internal investigation with insurance company investigating claim that employee stole from client); Lindenmuth v. McCreer, 165 A.3d 544 (Md. Spec. Ct. App. 2017) (qualified privilege protected supervisor's communication to management of employee A's concern about plaintiff employee B, who appeared stressed and carried a gun; once common interest is shown, burden is on plaintiff to show malice; evidence of "contentious" relationship between supervisor and employee B was not sufficient to defeat privilege). See also Selby v. O'Dea, 90 N.E.3d 1144 (Ill. App. Ct. 2017) (common interest privilege protects communications among parties and counsel on the same side of a lawsuit; note that attorney client privilege was waived when information was shared with third party).

47 See, e.g., Woods v. Asset Res., 2006 WL 3782704 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 21, 2006) (creditor's report to credit reporting agency covered by qualified common interest privilege; defeated by showing of malice); County Vanlines, Inc. v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 317 F. Supp. 2d 383 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) (qualified privilege to report to credit reporting agency), aff'd, 2005 WL 3117211 (2d Cir. Nov. 22, 2005). See generally § 15.1.4, infra (immunity under FCRA).

48 See, e.g., Doe v. TCF Bank Ill., 707 N.E.2d 220 (Ill. App. Ct. 1999) (disclosure of debt to consumer's spouse was privileged because she had a "proper interest," as debt would affect her rights in case of divorce or separation and she could be liable under family expense statute).

49 Witherwax v. Transcare, 801 N.Y.S.2d 782 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2005) (creditor's communication to collector protected by common interest privilege). But cf. Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Serv., Inc., 2009 WL 6527758 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 23, 2009) (right to reveal information in order to collect a debt is narrow privilege that presupposes existence of debt; no protection for creditor who sold debt to debt buyer after it was fully paid).

50 Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 594 to 596, 598, 652G (1977).

51 Falic v. Legg, Mason, Wood, Walker, Inc., 347 F. Supp. 2d 1260 (S.D. Fla. 2004). See also Wilson v. Am. Gen. Fin. Co., 2013 WL 967161 (W.D. Pa. Mar. 12, 2013) (predicting that Pa. Supreme Court will adopt Restatement definition of privilege); Prof'l Recovery Serv., Inc. v. Gen. Elec. Capital Corp., 642 F. Supp. 2d 391 (D.N.J. 2009) ("(1) appropriateness of the occasion, (2) legitimacy of the interest protected or promoted and (3) pertinence of the information to the recipient"; shown where collector's ex-employee informed collector's client that collector's employees were stealing and selling confidential consumer information and violating debt collection statutes); Blair v. Supportkids, Inc., 222 F. Supp. 2d 1038, 1043 (N.D. Ill. 2002).

52 Falic v. Legg, Mason, Wood, Walker, Inc., 347 F. Supp. 2d 1260, 1264 (S.D. Fla. 2004).

53 Falic v. Legg, Mason, Wood, Walker, Inc., 347 F. Supp. 2d 1260 (S.D. Fla. 2004). See also Blair v. Supportkids, Inc., 222 F. Supp. 2d 1038, 1043 (N.D. Ill. 2002).

This qualified privilege can be lost if it is exceeded[54] or abused.[55]

15.1.3.3 Anti-SLAPP Statutes

A closely related problem is "anti-SLAPP" statutes.[56] These are intended to curb Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation (SLAPP suits), such as a meritless, but vigorously pursued lawsuit filed by a big developer to cripple a neighborhood group's environmental or zoning challenge. Anti-SLAPP statutes typically apply to "petitioning activity" or to communication on matters of public interest, and require plaintiffs to make a strong showing of a prima facie case at an early stage.[57]

The highest court in Massachusetts held that the filing of a lawsuit is petitioning activity, so the state anti-SLAPP law applies to an abuse of process claim.[58] California courts have likewise construed "petitioning activity" to cover any lawsuit and any report of allegedly criminal activity, so every malicious prosecution or abuse-of-process claim is subject to a "special motion to strike" under the statute.[59] However, in 2003, the state legislature, concluding that there had been a "disturbing abuse" of the anti-SLAPP law,[60] adopted an amendment making it inapplicable to certain consumer fraud and public interest cases.[61] The Washington Supreme Court struck down its anti-SLAPP statute on the ground that its authorization of summary dismissal of non-frivolous claims violated the right to trial by jury guaranteed by the state constitution.[62]

15.1.4 Immunity Under the Fair Credit Reporting Act

The Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) provides limited immunity from claims "in the nature of defamation, invasion of privacy, or negligence" for furnishing and reporting credit information.[63] If the defendant furnished false information with malice or willful intent to injure the consumer, however, 54 Warren v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 932 F.3d 378 (5th Cir. 2019) (Tex. law) (qualified privilege may be lost by malice or over-distribution; not shown here where errors in investigative report were at worst negligent, and no showing of improper distribution); Goldsmith v. HSW Fin. Recovery, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 2d 95 (D.N.H. 2010) (privilege and FCRA preemption defenses fail, where false information communicated to others besides CRAs, here household members during collection calls); Edelman, Combs & Latturner v. Hinshaw & Culbertson, 788 N.E.2d 740 (Ill. App. Ct. 2003) (qualified common interest privilege did not protect accusations of litigation misconduct published to lawyers unconnected with case); Biddle v. Warren Gen. Hosp., 715 N.E.2d 518 (Ohio 1999) (hospital exceeded privilege when it forwarded all its patient registration forms to its law firm, to screen for those potentially eligible for public benefits, whom law firm would then offer to represent); Swinton Creek Nursery v. Edisto Farm Credit, 514 S.E.2d 126 (S.C. 1999) (fact question whether lender exceeded privilege by revealing borrower's problems to prospective buyer of borrower's property in explaining why buyer's loan application was unrealistic; question whether lender could have explained problem without revealing specific information). See also Bikkina v. Mahadevan, 193 Cal. Rptr. 3d 499 (Cal. Ct. App. 2015) (scholarly communication among scientists may be protected by common interest privilege, but malice shown and privilege lost when accuser continued a campaign of harassment after university's investigations repeatedly showed accusations to be meritless).

55 See Perez v. Wells Fargo Bank, 929 F. Supp. 2d 988 (N.D. Cal. 2013) (Mag. decision) (qualified common interest privilege for trustee of deed of trust can be lost by malice;" fact issue here as to knowing falsity); Belsito Communications, Inc. v. Dell, Inc., 2013 WL 4860585 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 12, 2013) (qualified privilege lost by knowing falsehood; after being informed that bill had been sent to obsolete address, and conceding its mistake, creditor charged off and reported debt, seriously damaging small business); Mireles v. Wells Fargo Bank, 845 F. Supp. 2d 1034 C.D. Cal. 2012) (deed of trust trustee, in non-judicial foreclosure, is protected only by qualified common interest privilege, which can be lost by malice); Prof'l Recovery Serv., Inc. v. Gen. Elec. Capital Corp., 642 F. Supp. 2d 391 (D.N.J. 2009) (burden on plaintiff to show that privilege abused); Shields v. U.S. Bank, 2006 WL 3791320 (D. Kan. Dec. 22, 2006) (privilege protected bank's reports of delinquency in response to queries by potential lenders where plaintiff alleged bank error, but not knowing falsehood or reckless disregard); Wal-Mart Stores v. Lee, 74 S.W.3d 634 (Ark. 2002) (excessive publication, malice, and lack of reasonable grounds for belief); Saye v. Deloitte & Touche, L.L.P., 670 S.E.2d 818 (Ga. Ct. App. 2008) (all privileges except judicial are conditional under Ga. Code Ann. § 51-5-9); Watson v. Telecheck Serv., Inc., 2010 WL 3450349 (Tex. App. Sept. 3, 2010) (burden is on party claiming privilege to show lack of malice, defined as knowing falsehood or reckless disregard for truth; fact issue whether check guarantee service knew of consumer's reason for stopping payment on check); San Antonio Credit Union v. O'Connor, 115 S.W.3d 82 (Tex. App. 2003) (common interest privilege does not protect homeowners who accused contractor of felony misappropriation of funds but should have known of non-criminal reasons for contractor's inability to pay subcontractors).

56 See, e.g., Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 425.16 (West); Ga. Code Ann. § 9-11-11.1; 7 Guam Code Ann. §§ 17101 to 17109; Haw. Rev. Stat. §§ 634F-1 to 634F-4; Ind. Code §§ 34-7-7-1 to 34-7-7-10; La. Code Civ. Proc. Ann. art. 971; Me. Stat. tit. 14, § 556; Md. Code Ann., Cts. & Jud. Proc. § 5-807 (West); Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 231, § 59H; Minn. Stat §§ 554.01 to 554.06; Neb. Rev. Stat. §§ 25-21,241 to 25-21,246; N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3211(g) (McKinney); N.Y. Civ. Rights Law §§ 70-a, 76-a (McKinney); Tenn. Code Ann. §§ 4-21-1001 to 4-21-1004; Utah Code Ann. §§ 78B-6-1401 to 78B-6-1405 (West).

57 See generally National Consumer Law Center, The Practice of Consumer Law § 23.8 (2d ed. 2006).

58 477 Harrison Ave., L.L.C. v. JACE Boston, L.L.C., 134 N.E.3d 91, 99 (Mass. 2019).

59 Jarrow Formulas, Inc. v. LaMarche, 74 P.3d 737 (Cal. 2003). See also Graham-Sult v. Clainos, 756 F.3d 724 (9th Cir. 2014) (granting anti-SLAPP motion to dismiss breach of fiduciary duty claim arising from executor's knowingly false statements to court and heirs); Mello v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 526 F. Supp. 2d 1024 (C.D. Cal. 2007) (lawsuit was petitioning activity but at least minimal merit shown: litigation privilege did not protect activity forbidden by debt collection act, here lawsuit on time-barred debt); Drum v. Bleau, Fox & Assoc., 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003) (assuming without deciding that garnishment is petitioning activity to which SLAPP law applies), disapproved of on other grounds, Rusheen v. Cohen, 128 P.3d 713 (Cal. 2006). But cf. Rouse v. Law Offices of Rory Clark, 465 F. Supp. 2d 1031 (S.D. Cal. 2006) (denying anti-SLAPP motion where law firm vigorously pursued collection actions against debtor's similarly named non-debtor son, despite proof that son was not debtor; private controversy not a matter of public interest, and litigation privilege inapplicable where son was stranger to debt collection litigation).

60 Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 425.17(a) (West).

61 Cal. Civ. Proc. Code §§ 425.17(b), 425.17(c) (West).

62 Davis v. Cox, 351 P.3d 862 (Wash. 2015).

63 15 U.S.C. § 1681h(e).

this immunity does not apply.[64] Moreover, this immunity applies only if the consumer's case is based on information that was disclosed to the consumer pursuant to one of three FCRA disclosure requirements,[65] or disclosed by certain users of the consumer's report. The scope of this immunity and its interplay with a provision of the FCRA that preempts certain state laws have been the subject of conflicting judicial interpretations that are discussed in detail in another treatise in this series.[66]

15.1.5 Identity Theft

Victims of identity theft, an increasingly common crime, are often vigorously dunned for debts they do not owe, despite their efforts to clear their records.[67] Their credit is often ruined by false reports to credit reporting agencies, and they may even be subject to criminal prosecution. These consumers may have several tort causes of action available to them.

Given the frequency of this crime, a key question is what investigation a reasonable creditor should make before dunning a consumer, referring a claim to a collector, reporting a debt to a credit reporting agency, or instituting a criminal prosecution.[68] Failure to conduct a reasonable investigation will be probative on the issues of malice, recklessness, lack of probable cause, and reckless disregard for truth—elements of several of the causes of action discussed in this chapter.

A consumer may also have a cause of action against the creditor for having allowed the thief to get away with the deception,[69] or against the entity that failed to safeguard the personal information the thief used.[70] Suits against credit reporting agencies for making negative credit reports because of identity theft raise issues of immunity under the FCRA that are discussed in another treatise in this series.[71]

---

64 Id. See § 15.5, infra.

65 15 U.S.C. § 1681h(e) (referring to 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681g, 1681h, 1681m).

66 National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting §§ 6.11, 10.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

67 See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting Ch. 9 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (full analysis of claims and remedies regarding identity theft).

68 See Reid v. LVNV Funding, 2016 WL 247571 (D. Utah Jan. 20, 2016) (thief opened credit card account using plaintiff's Social Security number; collection firm garnished plaintiff's wages, told employer she was using an alias, refused to investigate even when presented with extensive documentation; granting summary judgment against debt buyer and collection firm on claims for negligence, intrusion on seclusion, and FDCPA violations); Edmonds v. Beneficial Miss., Inc., 2005 WL 2361913 (S.D. Miss. Sept. 13, 2005) (identity theft victim stated claim for negligence, but not malicious prosecution, against lender that sent "live check" which was intercepted and cashed by thief; when consumer stated he never cashed check, lender investigated and substantiated theft, but failed to inform collection lawyers, who obtained default judgment and garnished theft victim's wages), aff'd, 212 Fed. Appx. 334 (5th Cir. 2007); Whitesides v. Equifax Credit Info. Serv., 125 F. Supp. 2d 807 (W.D. La. 2000) (allowing defamation, negligence, and FCRA claims to go forward against card issuer that continued to report negative information and failed to delete misinformation after being informed of identity theft); Arcaro v. Silva and Silva Enters. Corp., 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 433 (Cal. Ct. App. 1999) (affirming malicious prosecution judgment where creditor proceeded with collection suit in the face of evidence that consumer's signature was forged); Nicholl v. Great Atl. & Pac. Tea Co., 517 S.E.2d 561 (Ga. Ct. App. 1999) (malice and lack of probable cause shown where store's investigation inadequate and it did not follow its own standard procedure before criminally prosecuting identity theft victim). See also Dornbecker v. Ameritech Corp., 99 F. Supp. 2d 918 (N.D. Ill. 2000) (defamation); Gill v. Kostroff, 82 F. Supp. 2d 1354 (M.D. Fla. 2000) (malicious prosecution claim; fact question whether suit was brought without probable cause where it was unclear what information creditor had when it sued identity theft victim). But cf. Farren v. RJM Acquisition Funding, 2005 WL 1799413 (E.D. Pa. July 26, 2005) (denying identity theft victim's tort claims because malice not sufficiently alleged, where procedures used by purchaser of debt were reasonable and problem resulted from "isolated human error").

69 See, e.g., Wolfe v. MBNA Am. Bank, 485 F. Supp. 2d 874 (W.D. Tenn. 2007) (identity theft is foreseeable, and card issuers have duty to take reasonable and cost-effective measures to verify application information; issuing card without verification and pursuing victim after being informed of theft were unfair within meaning of UDAP statute). But see Crawford v. Time Warner Cable, Inc., 2013 WL 4604032 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 29, 2013) (creditor owed no duty to non-customer whose personal information was used by thief to open an account); Watson v. Trans Union Credit Bureau, 2005 WL 995687 (D. Me. Apr. 28, 2005) (FCRA preemption bars negligence claim against creditor that allowed thief to open account in consumer's name and persistently re-reported deleted information, despite notice of theft); Stevens v. First Interstate Bank, 999 P.2d 551 (Or. Ct. App. 2000) (bank-depositor relationship did not create duty that would give rise to liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress where bank negligently hired thief who stole depositors' identity); Huggins v. Citibank, 585 S.E.2d 275 (S.C. 2003) (no cause of action for negligent enablement of imposter fraud because card issuer owes no duty to potential victims). But cf. Yelder v. Credit Bureau of Montgomery, 131 F. Supp. 2d 1275 (M.D. Ala. 2001) (denying negligence claim where consumer failed to show violation of the standard of care for issuers of preapproved credit cards; wantonness claims fail on facts). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 9.5.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

70 Jones v. Commerce Bancorp, 2006 WL 1409492 (S.D.N.Y. May 23, 2006) (identity theft victim stated claim for negligence and breach of fiduciary duty against bank that failed to observe privacy policy), later decision at 2006 WL 2642153 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 15, 2006) (granting summary judgment for bank; recognizing fiduciary duty to safeguard personal information, but consumer failed to show connection between theft of her identity and security breach by bank); Daly v. Metro. Life Ins. Co., 782 N.Y.S.2d 530 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2004) (insurance company had fiduciary duty to safeguard policyholder's personal information, which was stolen by identity thief). See also Kuhn v. Capital One Fin. Corp., 855 N.E.2d 790 (Mass. App. Ct. 2006) (allowing cardholder to proceed with discovery to establish that card issuer was responsible for security breach that led to identity theft). But see Farley v. Williams, 2005 WL 3579060 (W.D.N.Y. Dec. 30, 2005) (consumer sued bank whose dishonest employee stole her identity; no private right of action for breach of Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act's privacy requirements); Jones v. Dep't of Motor Vehicles, 2002 WL 538893 (Cal. Ct. App. Apr. 11, 2002) (Department of Motor Vehicles has no duty to protect against identity theft caused by issuance of duplicate license to identity thief; denying claims of negligence and invasion of privacy). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting Ch. 9, § 18.5 (9th ed. 2017) (identity theft; common law protection of financial information), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

71 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting §§ 6.1.2, 10.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

15.2 Intentional or Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

15.2.1 Elements of Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

The tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress is particularly applicable to cases involving harassing collection practices.[72] The tort recognizes a right to tranquility and protects against invasions of that right. To be actionable, the creditor's conduct generally must be:

- Intentional[73] or reckless;[74]
- Outrageous or unreasonable;[75]
- Undertaken without a legal privilege;[76] and
- The proximate cause of severe mental distress.[77]

Some jurisdictions recognize essentially the same cause of action under a different name, such as "outrage."[78]

Some states expand or vary the elements of this tort[79] or decline to recognize it.[80] In addition, some courts regard intentional infliction of emotional distress as a "gap filler" tort, which will not be available if any other statutory or common law cause of action is available.[81]

72 See generally Joel E. Smith, Annotation, Recovery by Debtor, Under Tort of Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress, for Damages Resulting from Debt Collection Methods, 87 A.L.R.3d 201 (1978).

73 See, e.g., Woltring v. Specialized Loan Serv., L.L.C., 56 F. Supp. 3d 947 (E.D. Wis. 2014) (must show that conduct was intended to cause severe distress; sufficiently alleged where servicer, who had been stonewalling attempts to pay off mortgage, sent representative to home during preparations for son's wedding, who loudly informed homeowner about the foreclosure, in the presence of the whole wedding party); In re Eastman, 419 B.R. 711, 732 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 2009) (must show that defendant intended to cause severe emotional distress or that it was the primary risk of defendant's action); Supervalu, Inc. v. Johnson, 666 S.E.2d 335 (Va. 2008) (plaintiff must show that conduct was "directed intentionally towards the affected individual"; intent to cause economic damage to plaintiff's one-man business insufficient).

74 See, e.g., Prephan v. NCO Fin. Sys., 2011 WL 2579817 (N.D. Ohio June 29, 2011) (allegation that collector "knew or should have known" that conduct would cause severe distress is sufficient); Alves v. Verizon, 2010 WL 2989988 (D.N.J. July 27, 2010) (recklessness shown where local telephone company failed for months to fix equipment problem that caused long distance carrier to bill and harass customer for calls made by another customer); Zito v. Leasecomm Corp., 2004 WL 2211650 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2004) (recklessness sufficient; scammers should have known that severe emotional distress might result); Lewis v. First Nat'l Bank, 645 F. Supp. 1499 (W.D. Va. 1986), aff'd, 818 F.2d 861 (4th Cir. 1987); DeGolyer v. Greentree Servicing, L.L.C., 662 S.E.2d 141 (Ga. Ct. App. 2008) (foreclosing on wrong tract, after being informed of mistake; intentional or reckless conduct sufficiently alleged); Bowman v. Heller, 651 N.E.2d 369 (Mass. 1995) (non-debt collection case recognizing claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress); McGanty v. Staudenraus, 901 P.2d 841 (Or. 1995) (employment-related case; defendant need not have intended to inflict emotional distress if he or she intended outrageous conduct and knew or should have known that severe emotional distress would result). But cf. Smith-Tyler v. Bank of Am., 992 F. Supp. 2d 1277 (N.D. Ga. 2014) ("sloppy" business practices, here resulting in foreclosure action on debt which had been fully paid, not sufficient without actual knowledge); Ahmed v. Wells Fargo Bank & Co., 2011 WL 1751415 (N.D. Cal. May 9, 2011) (statement that lender "should have known" its misconduct would cause severe distress insufficient to allege recklessness).

75 See § 15.2.3, infra.

76 See § 15.1.3, supra.

77 See § 15.2.2, infra.

78 Wilson v. Univ. of Ala. Healthcare Found., P.C., ___ So. 3d ___, 2017 WL 6397654 (Ala. Dec. 15, 2017) (tort of outrage not limited to three situations recognized in previous decisions); Cordes v. Outdoor Living Ctr., Inc., 781 S.W.2d 31 (Ark. 1989) (debt collection; tort of outrage composed of same elements as intentional infliction of emotional distress, not easily established); Deason v. Farmers & Merchants Bank, 771 S.W.2d 749 (Ark. 1989) (reciting elements for tort of outrage); Cadle Co. v. Hobbs, 673 So. 2d 1363 (La. Ct. App. 1996) ("unreasonable coercion" to collect debt, whether or not justly due is actionable as tort of outrage; offensive telephone calls to debtor's workplace, negatively affecting debtor's job performance and mental and physical wellbeing, stated claim); Geran v. Xerox Education Serv., Inc., 2015 WL 2392375 (Mo. Ct. App. May 19, 2015) (claim fails because borrower failed to allege that servicer's sole motive for mishandling repayment plan was to cause emotional distress). See also Yelder v. Credit Bureau of Montgomery, 131 F. Supp. 2d 1275 (M.D. Ala. 2001) (Alabama recognizes tort of wantonness, conduct carried on with reckless or conscious disregard of rights or safety of others). See generally Annotation, Modern Status of Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress as Independent Tort; Outrage, 38 A.L.R.4th 998 (1985).

79 See Cent. Mo. Elec. Coop. v. Balke, 119 S.W.3d 627 (Mo. Ct. App. 2003) (adding to intent element that infliction of emotional distress is tortious only if "defendant's sole intent in acting was to cause mental distress"; not shown where defendant's purpose was to collect debt).

80 Rodriguez v. Due Process of Mich., Inc., 2008 WL 4449651 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 30, 2008) (Michigan does not recognize cause of action for infliction of emotional distress). Cf. Costine v. BAC Home Loans, 946 F. Supp. 2d 1224, 1236 (N.D. Ala. 2013) (stating that this tort is a very limited cause of action that is available only in the most egregious circumstances; misapplication of payments or mishandling of loan modification not outrageous).

81 See Chau v. Donovan, 357 F. Supp. 3d 276 (S.D.N.Y. 2019) (intentional infliction of emotional distress claim will not lie for behavior "subsumed within" some other tort, but claim goes forward because plaintiff alleged outrageous conduct in addition to sexual battery); Warr v. Liberatore, 270 F. Supp. 3d 637 (W.D.N.Y. 2017) (intentional infliction of emotional distress claim will not lie for conduct that "falls within the ambit of traditional tort recovery"); Shaw v. Handy, 588 S.W.3d 459 (Ky. 2019) (intentional infliction of emotional distress claim may not be based on actions that constitute a "traditional tort," here assault and battery); State ex rel. Halsey v. Phillips, 576 S.W.3d 177 (Mo. 2019) (intentional infliction of emotional distress or negligent infliction of emotional distress claim will not lie for actions that support claim for assault and battery, but here allowing claim to go forward because defendant's behavior was outrageous even without considering the unwanted touching); Thaxton v. Beneficial Mortg. Co., 145 P.3d 124 (Okla. Civ. App. 2006) (barring intentional infliction of emotional distress claim based on failure to release mortgage where Oklahoma statute prescribed penalty for this failure); Warner Bros. Entertainment, Inc. v. Jones, 538 S.W.3d 781 (Tex. App. 2017) (dismissing intentional infliction of emotional distress claim based on same facts as defamation); Galindo v. Snoddy, 415 S.W.3d 905 (Tex. App. 2013). See also Haguewood v. Gannett River States Publ'g Corp., 2007 WL 1728700 (S.D. Miss. June 13, 2007) (intentional infliction of emotional distress claim cannot be used to circumvent requirements of defamation law; claim fails where based on same facts that failed to state claim for defamation or false light); Lund v. Merrick, 2012 WL 3635327 (Cal. Ct. App. Aug. 24, 2012) (intentional infliction of emotional distress claim may not be used as end run around requirements of other tort; claim based on false statements must fail where defamation claim is barred by common interest privilege). But cf. Shkreli v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2015 WL 1408840 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 27, 2015) (although

Because severe emotional distress, one element of the cause of action, may occur at a later point in time than the outrageous conduct, some decisions hold that the statute of limitations begins to run when the injury occurs.[82]

15.2.2 What Constitutes Severe Mental Distress

To be actionable under the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress, the plaintiff's distress must be so severe that no reasonable person could be expected to endure it.[83] Severe emotional distress is shown when it interferes with the plaintiff's ability to attend to daily matters, such as working.[84] Seeking professional treatment and a manifestation of physical symptoms can weigh in the plaintiff's favor but are not required in every jurisdiction.[85] Courts also consider the outrageousness of the defendant's conduct[86] and the duration of the plaintiff's suffering.[87] Fear of financial problems may not be sufficient,[88] but financial distress that leads to other forms of distress can be actionable.[89]

A plaintiff's suffering is compensable only if it is reasonable and justified under the circumstances,[90] but a defendant is responsible for exacerbating a preexisting condition of which it has knowledge.[91] Even if the debtor's emotional distress meets the jurisdiction's standard of severity, it is compensable intentional infliction of emotional distress is a disfavored gap-filler tort in New York, no "hard and fast rule" bars such a claim when facts will also support other claim, here false imprisonment).

82 Johnson v. ADT Sec. Sys., Inc., 1999 WL 1940046 (W.D.N.C. Mar. 10, 1999) (cause of action accrues on date of injury, not date of diagnosis); Ruff v. Reeves Bros., 468 S.E.2d 592 (N.C. Ct. App. 1996) (where plaintiff was subjected to long course of harassment, cause of action accrued and statute of limitations began to run on day she collapsed and required medical treatment).

83 Blue v. Johnson & Migliaccio, 2010 WL 4641666 (D. Or. Nov. 4, 2010) (fear that calls to terminally ill non-debtor father would hasten father's death); CitiFinancial Mortg. Co. v. Frasure, 2008 WL 2199496 (N.D. Okla. May 23, 2008), aff'd on other grounds, 327 Fed. Appx. 49 (10th Cir. 2009); Campbell v. Triad Fin. Corp., 2007 WL 2973598 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 9, 2007); Matthews v. Homecoming Fin. Network, 2005 WL 2387688 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2005); Harris v. Americredit Fin. Serv., Inc., 2005 WL 2180477 (W.D. Va. Sept. 9, 2005); Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Serv., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1249 (D. Kan. 2003); Chen v. Mayflower Transit, Inc., 2002 WL 1632412 (N.D. Ill. July 22, 2002); In re Payano de la Rosa, 2010 WL 1711131 (Bankr. D. Md. Apr. 26, 2010); Zulaswski v. Stancil, 2006 WL 2089470 (Conn. Super. Ct. July 14, 2006); Ratcliff v. Boydell, 674 So. 2d 272 (La. Ct. App. 1996). But cf. Smith v. AFS Acceptance, L.L.C., 77 U.C.C. Rep. Serv. 2d 794 (N.D. Ill. 2012) (allegation of "stress, anxiety and emotional distress" resulting from violent repossession sufficient to state claim at motion to dismiss stage).

84 See, e.g., CitiFinancial Mortg. Co. v. Frasure, 2008 WL 2199496 (N.D. Okla. May 23, 2008) (severe distress shown where plaintiff stayed up all night worrying and had to miss church), aff'd on other grounds, 327 Fed. Appx. 49 (10th Cir. 2009); Hicks v. Cadle Co., 2008 WL 2900934 (D. Colo. July 23, 2008) (upholding arbitrator's finding of severe emotional distress where plaintiff suffered significant loss of sleep and delayed starting family); Perk v. Worden, 475 F. Supp. 2d 565 (E.D. Va. 2007) (nervousness, loss of sleep, withdrawal from activities and inability to concentrate at work are sufficient); Chen v. Mayflower Transit, Inc., 2002 WL 1632412 (N.D. Ill. July 22, 2002) (headaches, upset stomach, and emotional symptoms, documented by doctor's report, sufficient to raise issue of severe distress); Cady v. Marcella, 729 N.E.2d 1125 (Mass. App. Ct. 2000) (hysterical crying, inability to concentrate on work, and humiliation were sufficient), Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002) ($5 million for panic attacks, high blood pressure, severe shingles, insomnia, and mental anguish in frail, older, non-English-speaking consumer subjected to false threat of immediate jail and civil trial for debt on which her name was forged), vacated on other grounds, 2003 Tex. LEXIS 50 (Tex. Apr. 24, 2003) (vacating decision pursuant to parties' settlement). See also Rogers v. Louisville Land Co., 367 S.W.3d 196 (Tenn. 2012) ("serious mental injury" requires showing of "significant impairment in . . . daily life, resulting from defendant's extreme and outrageous conduct"). But cf. Moore v. Beneficial Nat'l Bank, 876 F. Supp. 1247 (M.D. Ala. 1995) (plaintiff's humiliation at being denied store credit card and compelled to return the clothes she had intended to purchase to rack insufficient); In re Payano de la Rosa, 2010 WL 1711131 (Bankr. D. Md. Apr. 26, 2010) (consumers were terrified when repossession man broke into garage and yelled and threatened them, but severe distress not shown; no allegation that consumer was "unable, even temporarily, to carry on to some degree with the daily routine of her life"); Hamilton v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 502 A.2d 1057 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1986) (embarrassment, upset, and difficulty sleeping insufficient where plaintiff was not unable to attend to necessary matters); Buckley v. Trenton Sav. Fund Soc'y, 544 A.2d 857 (N.J. 1988) (embarrassment, lost sleep, headaches, nervous tension, loss of friendship and embarrassment with children not severe where bank wrongfully dishonored two support checks); Haefka v. W.W. Extended Care, 2001 WL 1509200 (Ohio Ct. App. Nov. 28, 2001) (severe distress not shown where plaintiff was "upset" but neither missed work nor sought medical treatment); Shockley v. Crosby, 2004 WL 2113052 (Tenn. Ct. App. Sept. 21, 2004) (feeling weak-kneed when defendant pointed gun at plaintiff not sufficient to allege severe distress); Blanche v. First Nationwide Mortg. Co., 74 S.W.3d 444 (Tex. App. 2002) (humiliation and embarrassment over false information in credit report not severe distress).

85 See § 15.2.3, supra.

86 See § 15.2.4, supra.

87 CitiFinancial Mortg. Co. v. Frasure, 2008 WL 2199496 (N.D. Okla. May 23, 2008), aff'd on other grounds, 327 Fed. Appx. 49 (10th Cir. 2009); Chen v. Mayflower Transit, Inc., 2002 WL 1632412 (N.D. Ill. July 22, 2002); Shockley v. Crosby, 2004 WL 2113052 (Tenn. Ct. App. Sept. 21, 2004).

88 Whitley v. Taylor Bean & Whitaker Mortg. Group, 607 F. Supp. 2d 885 (N.D. Ill. 2009) (allegations of "fear of losing their home, fear of financial insecurity in retirement and fear of the future" insufficient).

89 Lacey v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2014 WL 2885471 (D. Kan. June 25, 2014) (servicer's demand for $3300 inspection fee, which was not owed, was large enough to support claim for extreme and outrageous conduct, where borrower suffered "heart attack-like" symptoms and was hospitalized); Matthews v. Homecoming Fin. Network, 2005 WL 2387688 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2005) (severe distress shown where consumer was wrongfully locked out by foreclosing creditor, was homeless for several months, and was forced to live apart from wife and children for additional period).

90 McCauley v. Ocwen Fed. Bank, 2010 WL 760438 (D. Minn. Feb. 26, 2010) (no liability for distress "exaggerated in comparison to that which a reasonable man would experience under the circumstances, unless the exaggerated distress results from a particular susceptibility to such distress of which the defendant had knowledge"; knowledge not shown here).

91 Id.; Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Serv., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1249 (D. Kan. 2003) (false threats of arrest and property seizure directed to consumer known to be disabled veteran who suffered from post-traumatic stress disorder).

only if the debtor can show that it was proximately caused by the defendant's actions.[92]

15.2.3 Whether Physical Injury or Other Non-Emotional Injury Is Required

The novelty of the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress is its allowance, in most jurisdictions, of recovery for emotional distress unaccompanied by physical impact or injury.[93] Fearing trivial or feigned claims, however, courts in a minority of jurisdictions have refused to grant relief for the intentional infliction of purely emotional injury. In these states the mental distress must be accompanied by a physical impact or physical injury to the debtor.[94] Physical symptoms of stress may serve this purpose, however.[95] Other states allow recovery without physical impact, but require medical evidence of the mental distress,[96] or require the plaintiff to have sought medical treatment for the mental distress.[97] Even where it is not an element of the claim, seeking medical treatment may be an important factor in establishing that the plaintiff's mental distress was severe.[98]

15.2.4 What Constitutes Actionable Conduct

In nearly all jurisdictions, outrageousness and emotional distress are required elements of a claim of intentional infliction

92 Messer v. First Fin. Fed. Credit Union of Maryland, 2012 WL 3104604 (E.D. Pa. July 30, 2012) (causation is insufficiently proximate where long chain of events led to debtor's development of stress-related illness two months after wrongful repossession); Campbell v. Triad Fin. Corp., 2007 WL 2973598 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 9, 2007) (severe distress not shown; one plaintiff alleged depression and the other three-day hospitalization, but plaintiffs had other problems and needed expert evidence to establish causation).

93 See, e.g., Shugart v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 747 F. Supp. 2d 938 (S.D. Ohio 2010) ("severe humiliation, distress and anxiety" sufficiently alleges severe distress, at least at the motion to dismiss stage); North Shore Pharmacy Serv., Inc. v. Breslin Assoc. Consulting, L.L.C., 491 F. Supp. 2d 111 (D. Mass. 2007) (proof of physical injury required for negligent, but not for intentional, infliction of emotional distress); Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Serv., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1249, 1267 (D. Kan. 2003) (finding psychological deterioration sufficient to support claim; denying collector's motion for summary judgment); Rogers v. Louisville Land Co., 367 S.W.3d 196 (Tenn. 2012) ("serious mental injury" is sufficient for intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress).

94 See, e.g., Di Loreto v. Costigian, 600 F. Supp. 2d 671 (E.D. Pa. 2009) (intentional infliction claim fails because Pennsylvania requires showing of some physical harm), aff'd on other grounds, 351 Fed. Appx. 747 (3d Cir. 2009); Seibel v. Soc'y Lease Inc., 969 F. Supp. 713 (M.D. Fla. 1997) (physical impact necessary element of intentional infliction of emotional distress claim, but exception where physical injury results); First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Stone, 467 N.E.2d 1226 (Ind. Ct. App. 1984) (no recovery of damages for mental or emotional suffering absent physical injury). See also McDonald v. Bennett, 674 F.2d 1080 (5th Cir. 1982) (Texas law does not allow mental anguish damages for common law claim of unreasonable collection efforts without proof of physical injury).

95 See Chen v. Mayflower Transit, Inc., 2002 WL 1632412 (N.D. Ill. July 22, 2002) (headache, upset stomach, emotional symptoms documented by doctor's report sufficient to raise question of severe distress); Sullivan v. Boston Gas Co., 605 N.E.2d 805 (Mass. 1993) (headaches, diarrhea, and similar symptoms meet physical harm requirement); Cady v. Marcella, 729 N.E.2d 1125 (Mass. App. Ct. 2000) (hysterical crying and inability to concentrate on work); Crews v. Provident Fin. Co., 157 S.E.2d 381 (N.C. 1967) (worsening of heart condition satisfies physical injury requirement); Okocha v. Fehrenbacher, 655 N.E.2d 744 (Ohio Ct. App. 1995) (emotional distress manifested by depression, back pain, and chemical dependency sufficient); Bennett v. City Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 549 P.2d 393 (Okla. Civ. App. 1975) (nervousness, shock, and sleeplessness caused by abusive debt collection calls are sufficient physical injury); Duty v. Gen. Fin. Co., 273 S.W.2d 64 (Tex. 1954) (mental anguish alone is insufficient, but allowing case to proceed where plaintiffs alleged headaches, loss of sleep, nervousness, instability, upset stomach, diminished capacity to do housework, and loss of work, credit rating, and employment).

96 Hucker v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 5678341 (E.D.N.C. Sept. 30, 2016) (must show severe and disabling emotional or mental condition which may be generally recognized and diagnosed by trained professionals); Douyon v. N.Y. Med. Health Care, P.C., 894 F. Supp. 2d 245, 266–267 (E.D.N.Y. 2012) (for intentional infliction of emotional distress, severe distress must be shown by medical evidence); Lynk v. Chase Home Fin., L.L.C., 644 F. Supp. 2d 868 (E.D. Mich. 2009) (severe distress not sufficiently alleged; no "health effects or medical treatment"); Estevez v. City of Philadelphia, 2007 WL 707358 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 7, 2007) (medical evidence required); Barbee v. Wal-Mart Stores, 2004 WL 239763 (Tenn. Ct. App. Nov. 18, 2003) (some medical evidence required for intentional or negligent infliction claim). See also Brown v. Bosniak, 2003 WL 21209460 (N.D. Tex. May 19, 2003) (weight gain and loss of effectiveness of blood pressure medication not sufficient to show severe distress where consumer never consulted health professional). But see Honaker v. Smith, 256 F.3d 477 (7th Cir. 2001) (Ill. law; where conduct is extremely outrageous, here burning down house to drive away unpopular resident, severe distress will be presumed and no medical evidence required).

97 Lowe v. Surpas Res. Corp., 253 F. Supp. 2d 1209, 1245 (D. Kan. 2003) (sick older woman's distress not severe enough where she did not consult physician or experience physical symptoms beyond crying, shaking, and loss of sleep); Carlson v. SCI Iowa Funeral Serv., Inc., 674 N.W.2d 682 (Iowa Ct. App. 2003) (table) (consumers who sought medical treatment for sleeplessness and depression stated claim; those who did not seek treatment did not state claim). But see Hicks v. Cadle Co., 2008 WL 2900934 (D. Colo. July 23, 2008), rev'd in part on other grounds, 355 Fed. Appx. 186 (10th Cir. 2009); Cady v. Marcella, 729 N.E.2d 1125 (Mass. App. Ct. 2000) (medical testimony not needed to prove severe distress); Bennett v. City Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 549 P.2d 393 (Okla. Civ. App. 1975).

98 See, e.g., McGinnis v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing, Inc., 817 F.3d 1241 (11th Cir. 2016) (Ga. Law; giving weight to testimony of clinical psychologist, in decision awarding substantial actual and punitive damages for intentional infliction of emotional distress by mortgage servicer); Woltring v. Specialized Loan Serv., L.L.C., 56 F. Supp. 3d 947 (E.D. Wis. 2014) (plaintiff hospitalized for stress-induced high blood pressure and Bell's palsy); Alves v. Verizon, 2010 WL 2989988 (D.N.J. July 27, 2010) (severe distress shown; evidence of medical treatment for anxiety-related problems at time when consumer was trying to correct errors that caused her to be abusively dunned for calls made by another customer); Herman v. Nat'l Enter. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 1874202 (W.D.N.Y. June 29, 2009) (testimony of family and treating physicians sufficient to show severe distress); Brown v. Bosniak, 2003 WL 21209460 (N.D. Tex. May 19, 2003) (credible death threat was outrageous conduct, but severe distress not shown where plaintiff failed to consult health professional); Ryan v. Ford Motor Co., 939 N.E.2d 891 (Ohio Ct. App. 2010) (severe distress not shown where no medical or lay testimony presented as to effects of stress resulting from confrontation with repossessor).

of emotional distress,[99] although some courts describe the standard for proscribed conduct as "unreasonable."[100] Some courts hold that as the outrageousness of the conduct increases, the need for additional evidence of severe distress decreases; if the conduct is highly outrageous, this may suffice to prove severe distress.[101]

When determining what conduct is actionable, courts often look to the Restatement of Torts for guidance. Courts denying consumer claims often cite the Restatement's standard that the conduct must be "so outrageous in character, and so extreme in degree, as to go beyond all bounds of decency, and to be regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community."[102] On the other hand, courts permitting recovery find support in the language of the Restatement as well: liability attaches if the claim is not "fictitious or trivial," and if the conduct exceeded "mere insults, indignities, threats, annoyances, petty oppressions, or other trivialities."[103] Courts permitting recovery also look to abuse of position by collectors[104] and the peculiar susceptibility of the consumer,[105]

99 But see Maloney v. Home & Inv. Ctr., Inc., 994 P.2d 1124 (Mont. 2000) (outrageousness not required); Sacco v. High Country Press, 896 P.2d 411 (Mont. 1995) (outrageousness not required).

100 See, e.g., Black v. Aegis Consumer Funding Group, Inc., 2001 WL 228062 (S.D. Ala. Feb. 8, 2001); Chedester v. Stecker, 643 P.2d 532 (Haw. 1982) ("unreasonable" conduct must be equated with "outrageous" conduct); Hairford v. Centurytel, Inc., 2003 WL 22244793 (La. Ct. App. Oct. 1, 2003) ("improper and unreasonable so as to be intentionally coercive"). But see Dick v. Mercantile-Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 492 A.2d 674 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1985) ("unreasonable" conduct not sufficient; actionable conduct must be complete denial of debtor's dignity as a person). See generally Michael M. Greenfield, Coercive Collection Tactics, 1972 Wash. U. L.Q. 1, 24 n.60.

101 Honaker v. Smith, 256 F.3d 477 (7th Cir. 2001) (Ill. law; burning down house to drive away unwanted resident is so outrageous that severe distress will be presumed); Weinstein v. Prudential Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co., 233 P.3d 1221 (Idaho 2010) (outrageousness of conduct is probative of severity of distress; need not show physical injury, psychological disorder, or interference with daily activities; here, insurer's three-year refusal to pay injured child's undisputed medical bills resulted in harassment, humiliation, and liens on house). See also Rogers v. Louisville Land Co., 367 S.W.3d 196 (Tenn. 2012) (outrageousness of conduct may be probative of severe distress).

102 Restatement (Second) of Torts § 46 cmt. d (1965). See, e.g., Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., 2002 WL 31618443 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 6, 2002) (collector's conduct "odious" but not outrageous; made scene at consumer's workplace and told employer consumer was a thief); Gable v. Curtis, 673 N.E.2d 805 (Ind. Ct. App. 1996) (seven phone calls in one hour, one of which arguably threatened physical force, were not sufficiently outrageous); Champlin v. Washington Trust Co., 478 A.2d 985 (R.I. 1984) (bank acted reasonably in making telephone call to debtor shortly after debtor's father's death, suggesting assignment to the bank of debtor's interest in father's estate to pay debt; call was neither abusive nor threatening); Citibank v. Hauff, 668 N.W.2d 528 (S.D. 2003) (series of harassing but not obscene phone calls, in effort to collect debt not owed were mere indignities, etc. within Restatement definition); S.S. by and through Shaffer v. IHC Health Services, Inc., 417 P.3d 603 (Utah 2018) (filing lien on child accident victim's tort recovery instead of billing Medicaid not sufficiently outrageous). But see Turman v. Cent. Billing Bureau Inc., 568 P.2d 1382 (Or. 1977) (legal standard requiring conduct "utterly intolerable in a civilized community" would exclude too much conduct that should be actionable).

103 Restatement (Second) of Torts § 46 (1965).

104 Id. at cmt. e, illus. e.8; Severson v. Chase Manhattan Mortg. Co., 2013 WL 1688026 (D. Or. Mar. 8, 2013) (giving weight to lenders' position of power; lenders dunned and brought foreclosure action, with knowledge that alleged default resulted from their accounting errors), adopted, 2013 WL 1702163 (D. Or. Apr.18, 2013); Reed v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.L.C., 2012 WL 1579340 (W.D. Mich. May 4, 2012) (egregious mishandling of loan modification application; noting that holder of defaulted mortgage is in position of power); Chaconas v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 713 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (S.D. Cal. May 10, 2010) (phone harassment of older, represented consumers; giving weight to collector's abuse of position of power); CitiFinancial Mortg. Co. v. Frasure, 2008 WL 2199496 (N.D. Okla. May 23, 2008) (persistent attempts to foreclose on home in which creditor had no security interest was "extreme abuse" of creditor's position of power; conduct was outrageous), aff'd on other grounds, 327 Fed. Appx. 49 (10th Cir. 2009); Matthews v. Homecoming Fin. Network, 2005 WL 2387688 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2005) (abuse of position significant to finding of outrageousness; foreclosing creditor locked family out of their home before date set by foreclosure order); Chen v. Mayflower Transit, Inc., 2002 WL 1632412 (N.D. Ill. July 22, 2002) (mover had control over consumer's essential household goods and time-sensitive bar review materials); Bundren v. Superior Court, 193 Cal. Rptr. 671 (Cal. Ct. App. 1983) (creditor was hospital; debtor was in-patient recovering from surgery); Hairford v. Centurytel, Inc., 856 So. 2d 139 (La. Ct. App. 2003) (phone company threatened to cut off older man's phone service for debt not owed); Margita v. Diamond Mortg. Corp., 406 N.W.2d 268 (Mich. Ct. App. 1987) (creditor was mortgage lender with great power to affect borrowers' credit ratings). See also Wilson v. Houston Funeral Home, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 169 (Cal. Ct. App. 1996) (creditor was funeral director; debtor was widow of deceased); Symonds v. Mercury Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 275 Cal. Rptr. 871 (Cal. Ct. App. 1990) (creditor was bank holding all of debtor's funds); Mauri v. Smith, 901 P.2d 247 (Or. Ct. App. 1995) (police abused special position), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 929 P.2d 307 (Or. 1996).

105 See MacDermid v. Discover Fin. Serv., 488 F.3d 721 (6th Cir. 2007) (Tenn. Law; creditor knew of consumer's severe bipolar disorder); Adanna Jiagbogu v. Bank of Am., 2016 WL 7626429 (C.D. Cal. 2016) (outrageous if bank froze account in error, then refused to release limited amount of funds for medical expenses of consumer known to be seriously ill); Sharp v. Ally Fin., Inc., 328 F. Supp. 3d 81 (W.D.N.Y. 2018) (denying summary judgment to creditor on intentional infliction of emotional distress claim alleging that it made hundreds of calls to debtor who was dying of cancer, threatening to repossess car he needed to get to chemotherapy appointments); Hamlett v. Santander Consumer, USA, Inc., 931 F. Supp. 2d 451 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (numerous calls, with threats of criminal prosecution, to cell phone of debtor's non-debtor family member, who was known to suffer from mental disabilities); Severson v. Chase Manhattan Mortg. Co., 2013 WL 1688026 (D. Or. Mar. 8, 2013) (lenders vigorously dunned for alleged debt that they knew resulted from their accounting errors, with knowledge that one borrower was seriously ill), adopted, 2013 WL 1702163 (D. Or. Apr.18, 2013); Client Funding Solutions, Inc. v. Crim, 2012 WL 3017984 (N.D. Ill. July 23, 2012) (withholding settlement proceeds needed for medical bills and everyday living, to coerce accident victim to settle with litigation lender); Strom v. Nat'l Enter. Sys., 2011 WL 1233118 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 30, 2011) (fact question whether threat to freeze disabled debtor's SSDI funds, after being told debtor suffered from brain cancer and could not work, was sufficiently outrageous); Chaconas v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 713 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (S.D. Cal. May 10, 2010) (phone harassment; giving weight to creditor's knowledge of consumers' advanced age and frail health); Kincaid v. Sturdevant, 437 F. Supp. 2d 1219 (D. Kan. 2006) (landlord's knowledge of tenant's fragility highly significant on issues of outrageous conduct and severe distress); Matthews v. Homecoming Fin. Network, 2005 WL 2387688 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2005) (consumer vulnerability significant to finding of outrageousness; foreclosing creditor locked family out of their home before factors mentioned in the Restatement as relevant to the issue of the outrageousness of the collector's conduct.

Courts also follow the Restatement in holding that it is not outrageous to demand one's legal rights in a permissible way, even if this is certain to result in emotional distress.[106] Thus, a collector is entitled to take reasonable steps necessary to collect a debt.[107] The collector can legally notify the debtor of the status date set by foreclosure order); Evans v. Chase Manhattan Mortg. Co., 2005 WL 555411 (D.D.C. Mar. 9, 2005) (creditor's lawyers unreasonably delayed handing over surplus from foreclosure sale, even though they knew dying borrower was being hounded by purchasers to vacate house, and needed the money to obtain new home); Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Serv., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1249 (D. Kan. 2003) (false threats of arrest and property seizure directed to consumer known to be disabled veteran; otherwise reasonable conduct becomes outrageous if collector knows of consumer's disability); Black v. Aegis Consumer Funding Group, Inc., 2001 WL 228062 (S.D. Ala. Feb. 8, 2001) (vicious harassment continued after consumer hospitalized for depression and anxiety); Symonds v. Mercury Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 275 Cal. Rptr. 871 (Cal. Ct. App. 1990) (bank knew of consumer's advanced age, ill health, and precarious financial situation); Bundren v. Superior Court, 193 Cal. Rptr. 671 (Cal. Ct. App. 1983) (hospital aware of susceptibility of patient recovering from surgery after machete attack); Dawson v. Assoc. Fin. Serv. Co., 529 P.2d 104 (Kan. 1974) (whether collection efforts were tortious is jury question in light of debtor's multiple sclerosis and known susceptibility to mental distress); Wilkins v. Ondrovich, 691 N.E.2d 1122 (Ohio Ct. App. 1997) (realtors were selling house for newly divorced woman, whom they knew to "have a tender emotional threshold"); Turman v. Cent. Billing Bureau Inc. 568 P.2d 1382 (Or. 1977) (affirming verdict against collection agency that repeatedly made abusive and threatening calls to blind consumer); Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002) (older, non-English speaking woman with a history of anxiety disorders), vacated on other grounds, 2003 Tex. LEXIS 50 (Tex. Apr. 24, 2003) (vacating decision pursuant to parties' settlement). But see Combs v. NCO Fin. Sys., 2011 WL 1288686 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 5, 2011) (multiple daily calls to debtors' home, continuing after wife informed collector debtor was dying; calls to widow continued after collector notified of death, including calls on day of funeral, not sufficiently outrageous), order entered by 2011 WL 1288699 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 5, 2011). But cf. Cervantes v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 656 F.3d 1034 (9th Cir. 2011) (Ariz. law; allegation that subprime lenders and servicer targeted vulnerable consumers for unaffordable loans, and misrepresented terms and conditions of the loans, not sufficiently outrageous to support intentional infliction of emotional distress claim).

106 See Mehta v. Wells Fargo Bank, 737 F. Supp. 2d 1185 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (where verbal promise to refrain from foreclosure during loan modification negotiations was unenforceable, lender was exercising its legal rights when it foreclosed; outrageous conduct not shown); Ramirez v. Barclays Capital Mortg., 2010 WL 2605696 (E.D. Cal. June 26, 2010) (debt collection by its nature causes distress; refusal to enter into loan modification not actionable absent conduct "outside that generally accepted in debt collection and/or the foreclosure process"); United States v. Bloom, 925 F. Supp. 426 (E.D. La. 1996) (enforcement of medical school loan, after bureaucratic misunderstandings had interfered with debtor's fulfillment of commitment to serve in medically under-served area, was permissible), aff'd, 112 F.3d 200 (5th Cir. 1997); Janossy v. Washington Mut. Bank, 2002 WL 31031636 (Cal. Ct. App. Sept. 12, 2002) (qualified privilege to cause some distress); Yu v. Signet Bank, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304 (Cal. Ct. App. 1999) (filing actions in distant forum in violation of California law, obtaining default judgments, and garnishing debtors' wages is assertion of legal rights in pursuit of one's own economic interests and not outrageous); Heim v. California Fed. Bank, 828 A.2d 129 (Conn. App. Ct. 2003) (filing lawsuit, even for wrong reason, not outrageous); Beasley v. Agricredit Acceptance Corp., 480 S.E.2d 257 (Ga. Ct. App. 1997) (creditor had legal right under contract to refuse to release insurance proceeds and ultimately to foreclose, even though without the money debtor could not repair machinery and make payments); Knysak v. Shelter Life Ins. Co., 652 N.E.2d 832 (Ill. App. Ct. 1995) (not outrageous for health insurer to refuse payment for plaintiff's wife's last illness where it reasonably believed preexisting condition exclusion applied); Sec. Nat'l Bank v. Wald, 536 N.W.2d 924 (N.D. 1995) (bank was merely exercising its legal rights by refusing to release insurance proceeds so that debtor could harvest crops after combine, in which bank had security interest, was destroyed by fire); Ed Schory & Sons v. Francis, 662 N.E.2d 1074 (Ohio 1996) (no liability for strictly enforcing contract); Cent. Mo. Elec. Coop. v. Balke, 119 S.W.3d 627 (Mo. Ct. App. 2003) (intentional infliction requires showing that "defendant's sole intent in acting was to cause mental distress"; not shown where defendant's purpose was to collect debt); Giacchino v. Estate of Stalkup, 908 P.2d 983 (Wyo. 1995) (claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must fail if repossession was lawful).

107 See, e.g., Swartz v. City Mortg., Inc., 911 F. Supp. 2d 916 (D. Haw. 2012) (foreclosure, threats of foreclosure or denial of loan modification not outrageous); Gibbons v. Bank of Am. Corp., 2012 WL 94569 (D. Md. Jan. 11, 2012) (bank attempting to recover funds stolen by husband simply insisted on its legal rights in a legal way when it froze bank accounts and attempted to take house); Quinteros v. Aurora Loan Serv., 740 F. Supp. 2d 1163 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 30, 2010) (foreclosing on a home, even after promise to hold off during negotiations, not outrageous); Wilson v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2010 WL 2574032 (E.D. Cal. June 25, 2010) (consumer who alleged only "normal debt collection practices" failed to state claim for infliction of emotional distress); Archundia v. Chase Home Fin., L.L.C., 2009 WL 1796295 (S.D. Cal. June 23, 2009) (action against assignee of predatory mortgage; "assertion of an economic interest pursued in good faith, such as debt collection pursued through reasonable means, is privileged, even if it causes emotional distress"); Jones v. Alltell Ohio L.P., 2007 WL 1731321 (N.D. Ohio June 14, 2007) (attempts to collect from identity theft victim not outrageous; creditor who did not know of theft had right to use reasonable means to collect); Garner v. Academy Collection Serv., Inc., 2005 WL 643680 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 11, 2005) (even though collector was dunning for debt not owed, "standard collection techniques" not outrageous); Lewis v. First Nat'l Bank, 645 F. Supp. 1499 (W.D. Va. 1986) (institution of criminal proceedings with probable cause not outrageous as a matter of law), aff'd, 818 F.2d 861 (4th Cir. 1987); Wade v. Ford Motor Credit Corp., 455 F. Supp. 147 (E.D. Mo. 1978) (no impropriety in monthly calls regarding late payments); Myles v. Screentech, Inc., 98 So. 3d 563 (Ala. Civ. App. 2012) (creditor who initiated criminal prosecution after inadequate, but good-faith, investigation simply insisted upon its legal rights in a legal way); Janossy v. Washington Mut. Bank, 2002 WL 31031636 (Cal. Ct. App. Sept. 12, 2002) (not "beyond the bounds of decency" to apply mortgage funds to taxes even though homeowners were eligible for tax deferment or to make phone calls and send form letters); Tomash v. John Deere Indus. Equip. Co., 399 N.W.2d 387 (Iowa 1987) (criminal theft charges for selling collateral not outrageous); Derouen v. Malahmeh, 61 So. 3d 693 (La. Ct. App. 2011) (vendor/mortgagee's statement that "I guess we'll just have to kick your ass out" was an "accurate, albeit colorful" description of mortgagee's rights upon default; not outrageous); Leonard v. Pioneer Fin. Co., 568 S.W.2d 937 (Mo. Ct. App. 1978) (creditor entitled to inflict some worry and concern when collecting legitimate debts); Sears & Roebuck Co. v. Swaykus, 2002 WL 31859516 (Ohio Ct. App. Dec. 11, 2002) (not outrageous to file lawsuit); Steinbock v. Ferry County Pub. Util. Dist. No. 1, 269 P.3d 275 (Wash. Ct. App. 2011) (sudden termination of utility service that was permitted by contract was within provider's rights and could not be outrageous); Jackson v. Peoples Fed. Credit Union, 604 P.2d 1025 (Wash. Ct. App. 1979) (blocking consumer's car in a parking lot was not unreasonable; car was collateral for debt). See also Mathis v. Omnium Worldwide, 2006 WL 1582301 (D. Or. June 4, of the debt, remind the debtor to pay, and warn the debtor of the legal consequences of default, including a poor credit rating, if the threat is moderate in tone. A few of these cases have held contacts with the debtor's employer not unlawful,[108] but this conclusion is questionable in light of the restrictions in the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act and state debt collection statutes.

The Restatement's definition of actionable conduct in this area is a very conservative one, which takes no position on how the legal standards should develop.[109] At least one court[110] has criticized the Restatement's handling of the subject. The evolving standards of impermissible debt collection conduct expressed in the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, Federal Trade Commission decisions, state statutes, and case law should be helpful in defining what conduct is so unreasonable or outrageous as to be tortious.[111]

The reasonableness of the creditor's contacts depends upon their number, their tone or manner (polite, abusive, threatening, deceptive), the extent of their injurious impact upon the consumer, and the impact the creditor intended them to cause. A single contact may be unreasonable if it is deceptive,[112] untimely, abusive, obscene, or unduly prolonged, or if the creditor knows that the debtor is represented by counsel, disputes the bill, is particularly susceptible to stress, or has requested that the contacts be stopped.[113] A series of otherwise reasonable contacts may become unreasonable if a great number are made within too short a period of time or continue over an extended period of time, injuring or oppressing the consumer.[114] Attempts to collect debts that are either disputed or not owed[115] and 2006) (attempt to collect deceased consumer's credit card debt not outrageous; one letter and six or eight phone calls over fourteen months, to consumer's former residence, occupied by consumer's widow and daughter); In re Jacques, 416 B.R. 63 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 2009) (filing proof of claim for allegedly uncollectible debt); Stockett v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 269 So. 2d 735 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1972) (no cause of action against lender for making threatening telephone calls and sending letter concerning debt to accommodation maker's employer); Prather v. Providian Nat'l Bank, 2006 WL 1868335 (Ky. Ct. App. July 6, 2006) (instituting collection action, even in bad faith, not sufficient to show outrageous conduct); Lachenmaier v. First Bank Sys., Inc., 803 P.2d 614 (Mont. 1990) (not "beyond all possible bounds of decency" to exercise legal right to foreclose); Citibank v. Hauff, 668 N.W.2d 528 (S.D. 2003) (creditor had arguable, though unsuccessful, claim where debt resulted from ex-husband's unauthorized use of credit card; harassing phone calls not actionable). But see Smith v. AFS Acceptance, L.L.C., 77 U.C.C. Rep. Serv. 2d 794 (N.D. Ill. 2012) (legitimate objective does not give defendant "carte blanche to pursue that objective by outrageous means"; here repo men towed car with debtor inside).

108 Stockett v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 269 So. 2d 735 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1972) (no cause of action against lender for sending letter concerning debt to accommodation maker's employer); Leonard v. Pioneer Fin. Co., 568 S.W.2d 937 (Mo. Ct. App. 1978) (calls and visits to debtor's employer and former employer in attempt to reach debtors not oppressive).

109 Restatement (Second) of Torts § 46 cmt. c (1965).

110 Turman v. Cent. Billing Bureau, Inc., 568 P.2d 1382, 1384 (Or. 1977) (characterizing the Restatement as "composed of inconsistent generalities"; rejecting its "utterly intolerable in a civilized community" standard as "exclud[ing] much conduct that to us should be classified as actionable").

111 Richards v. United Collections Bureau, 46 Conn. L. Rptr. 161 (Super. Ct. 2008) (giving weight to FDCPA violation in finding conduct outrageous; collector told consumer it would take her house and she could save it only by going to specified loan broker; consumer did and received unaffordable subprime loan). But cf. Hamilton v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 502 A.2d 1057 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1986) (no tort claim proven although creditor liable under state debt collection statute).

112 See, e.g., McHugh v. Check Investors Inc., 2003 WL 21283288 (W.D. Va. May 21, 2003) (threat of arrest for bad check debt not owed caused panic in consumer with young child); Carney v. Rotkin, Schmerin & McIntyre, 254 Cal. Rptr. 478 (Cal. Ct. App. 1988) (law firm's false representation in single letter and call to seventy-four-year-old debtor that court had issued a bench warrant for her arrest sufficiently outrageous).

113 See, e.g., Mitchell v. Surety Acceptance Corp., 838 F. Supp. 497 (D. Colo. 1993) (cause of action based on single telephone call stated where collector laughed at consumer's request to investigate forgery after consumer stated she was under much stress, suffered from multiple sclerosis, and was feeling like life was not worth living after continued misidentification); Fox v. Haskell, 2014 WL 1564299 (Conn. Super. Ct. Mar. 7, 2014) (single message demanding payment of debt not owed, left with workplace receptionist, was outrageous). But see Walker v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2839807 (D.N.J. July 10, 2012) (one "insulting and profane" voicemail message sufficient to allege violation of FDCPA, but not outrageous conduct).

114 Sharp v. Ally Fin., Inc., 328 F. Supp. 3d 81 (W.D.N.Y. 2018) (denying summary judgment to creditor on intentional infliction of emotional distress claim where its collection efforts may have amounted to planned campaign of harassment of consumer known to be dying of cancer); Ratcliff v. Boydell, 674 So. 2d 272 (La. Ct. App. 1996) (frivolous lawsuits over six years, sending process server to plaintiff's home and workplace even though she was represented by counsel, defendant's knowledge of plaintiff's sensitivity, and his intention to cause distress constituted extreme and outrageous conduct); Margita v. Diamond Mortg. Corp., 406 N.W.2d 268 (Mich. Ct. App. 1987) (cause of action stated by repeated abusive phone calls, letters, and threats of foreclosure even though borrowers repeatedly showed creditor they were current); Long v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 330 N.Y.S.2d 664 (N.Y. App. Div. 1972) (cause of action stated where collector regularly contacted consumer at her job, phoned her landlord, relatives, and neighbors, and visited her home, causing mental distress, heart attack, and job loss); Southwestern Bell Tel. Co. v. Wilson, 768 S.W.2d 755 (Tex. App. 1988) (upholding $2,457,789.24 award for threats by two attorneys, a constable, and a deputy to visit debtor's workplace, which induced angina, plus 500 phone calls). But see Kornea v. J.S.D. Mgmt., Inc., 366 F. Supp. 3d 660 (E.D. Pa. 2019) (offensive, undesirable, or annoying phone calls and letters, without more, are not so extreme as to support intentional infliction of emotional distress claim). But cf. Harris v. Am. Gen. Fin., Inc., 2005 WL 1593673 (D. Kan. July 6, 2005) (allegation of seventeen calls within one week insufficient; must describe content of calls); Lincoln First Bank v. Baker (In re Baker), 18 B.R. 243 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 1982) (100 phone calls, letters, intimidating visits at work, threats to call police, and suit not outrageous over two-year period where instability and diarrhea could have resulted from other troubles).

115 See, e.g., McGinnis v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing, Inc., 817 F.3d 1241 (11th Cir. 2016) (Ga. law; upholding $6000 in compensatory damages and $500,000 in emotional distress damages against servicer that "belligerently" pursued foreclosure for "relatively small sum," despite actual knowledge that it was not owed); Pleznac v. Equity Residential Mgmt., L.L.C., 320 F. Supp. 3d 99 (D.D.C. 2018) (refusing to dismiss intentional infliction of emotional distress claim alleging that landlord retaliated against tenant for disputing debts by denying services and repairs, demanding sums not owed, and otherwise harassing her); Kerfoot v. FNF Servicing, Inc., 2013 WL 5797662 (M.D. Ga. Oct. 25, 2013) (attempt to collect loan known to be fraudulent; servicer threatened foreclosure even though it knew that lender had purported to refinance a loan but never paid it off); Severson v. Chase Manhattan Mortg. Co., 2013 WL 1688026 (D. Or. Mar. 8, 2013) (allowing plaintiffs harassment of parties other than the debtor[116] are treated with less tolerance by most courts.

The following examples of misconduct and resulting injury are illustrative of the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress as it applies to debt collection harassment:

- Harsh words, vulgarity, threats, racial epithets, or other grossly offensive language;[117] to go to trial on intentional infliction claim alleging vigorous dunning for alleged debt that resulted from lender's accounting errors), adopted, 2013 WL 1702163 (D. Or. Apr. 18, 2013); Baldin v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2013 WL 794086 (D. Or. Feb. 12, 2013) (refusing to dismiss intentional infliction claim alleging harassing calls and inaccurate credit reporting of delinquency created by mishandling of escrow and refusal of timely payments), adopted, 2013 WL 796712 (D. Or. Mar. 4, 2013); Alves v. Verizon, 2010 WL 2989988 (D.N.J. July 27, 2010) (defendant local phone company's persistent failure to fix equipment problem resulted in defendant long-distance company's prolonged and abusive dunning of consumer for another customer's debt); Llewellyn v. Shearson Fin. Network, Inc., 622 F. Supp. 2d 1062 (D. Colo. 2009) (refusing to dismiss claim of outrageous conduct for credit reports and initiation of foreclosure based on debt that was not owed); CitiFinancial Mortg. Co. v. Frasure, 2008 WL 2199496 (N.D. Okla. May 23, 2008) (giving weight to absence of valid debt on questions of outrageousness and severe distress), aff'd on other grounds, 327 Fed. Appx. 49 (10th Cir. 2009); Rivera v. Corporate Receivables, Inc., 2006 WL 2992738 (D. Conn. Oct. 20, 2006) (multiple calls, threats of jail, to co-signer on disputed debt); Holtman v. Citifinancial Mortg. Co., 2006 WL 1699589 (D. Conn. June 19, 2006) (claim stated by allegation of debt collection harassment at time when mortgage payments were current); Zito v. Leasecomm Corp., 2004 WL 2211650 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2004) ("non-cancelable" leases for worthless commercial products); Mitchell v. Surety Acceptance Corp., 838 F. Supp. 497 (D. Colo. 1993) (plaintiff, not liable on debt incurred by identity thief, alleged defendant failed to correct libelous statements made about her, harassed, ridiculed and tormented her, and refused to verify her story with police); Bowden v. Spiegel, Inc., 216 P.2d 571 (Cal. Ct. App. 1950) (allegations of abusive collection tactics where debt not owed); Hairford v. Centurytel, Inc., 856 So. 2d 139 (La. Ct. App. 2003) (harassment of older consumer for debt not owed); Cady v. Marcella, 729 N.E.2d 1125 (Mass. App. Ct. 2000) (seizing half a modular home in January to coerce payment of a debt owed not by consumers but by contractor who was installing home); Margita v. Diamond Mortg. Corp., 406 N.W.2d 268 (Mich. Ct. App. 1987) (harassing and threatening efforts to collect mortgage payments not due); Moorhead v. J.C. Penney Co., 555 S.W.2d 713 (Tenn. 1977) (repeated attempts to collect debt not owed); Reeves v. Melton, 518 P.2d 57 (Okla. Civ. App. 1973) (creditor threatened to kill dogs of alleged debtor who had in fact paid in full); Searle v. Harrah's Entertainment, Inc., 2010 WL 3928632 (Tenn. Ct. App. Oct. 6, 2010) (creditor lied and threatened arrest to compel debtor to pay same debt twice). See also Bur. of Credit Control v. Scott, 345 N.E.2d 37 (Ill. App. Ct. 1976) (claim stated by allegation of abusive calls to consumer who had informed collection agency that she was on public assistance and could not pay a $220 hospital bill, and calls to her parents and her workplace). But see Kansas City Laser, Inc. v. MCI Telecomms. Corp., 252 Fed. Appx. 100 (8th Cir. 2007) (Mo. law; threatened loss of phone service to small business to coerce payment of debt not owed, causing physical illness to sole stockholder, not outrageous under Missouri's strict standards); Dawkins v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 109 F.3d 241 (5th Cir. 1997) (Miss. law; not outrageous to continue to report debt as delinquent after learning that debt resulted from unauthorized use of credit card); Anthony v. G.E. Capital Retail Bank, 2015 WL 10846141 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2015) (not outrageous; after identity theft victim caused unauthorized card to be cancelled and debts removed from his credit report, card issuer, without authorization, issued new card in his name, transferred balance from fraudulent card, dunned, and reported the debts); Golden v. FNF Servicing, 2015 WL 5302703 (M.D. Ga. Sept. 10, 2015) (persistent collection attempts after being informed that loan was fraudulent not sufficiently outrageous); Smith v. Wachovia, 2009 WL 1948829 (N.D. Cal. July 6, 2009) (wrongful initiation of non-judicial foreclosure not outrageous); Jones v. Alltell Ohio L.P., 2007 WL 1731321 (N.D. Ohio June 14, 2007) (attempts to collect from identity theft victim not outrageous; creditor who did not know of theft had right to use reasonable means to collect); Garner v. Academy Collection Serv., Inc., 2005 WL 643680 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 11, 2005) (even though collector was dunning for debt not owed, "standard collection techniques" not outrageous); Moore v. Beneficial Nat'l Bank USA, 876 F. Supp. 1247, 1261–1262 (M.D. Ala. 1995) (false report to credit agency not sufficiently outrageous); Peasley v. Telecheck, Inc., 637 P.2d 437 (Kan. Ct. App. 1981) (maintaining debtor's name on bad check list long after it knew no bad checks written and threatening to keep name there to force payment of disputed bill was not "extreme and outrageous"); Beecy v. Pucciarelli, 441 N.E.2d 1035 (Mass. 1982) (not actionable to file collection suit after consumer informed law firm that she was not the debtor, nor to fail to dismiss suit immediately after being told a second time). Cf. Harper Cos. v. Scott, Royce, Harris, Bryan, Barra & Jorgenson, P.A., 656 So. 2d 627 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1995) (judgment creditor told sheriff to levy on property, the stock of a consignment shop, that creditor knew did not belong to judgment debtor; not sufficiently outrageous); Taylor v. Gelfand, 505 S.E.2d 222 (Ga. Ct. App. 1998) (freezing of bank account because of creditor's lawyer's apparently good-faith belief that debtor owed $1200 rather than $80).

116 See, e.g., Amelina v. Manufacturers & Traders Trust Co., 2016 WL 3982483 (S.D. Cal. July 21, 2016) (denying motion to dismiss intentional infliction of emotional distress claim against property service that attempted to force entry and made threats which terrified debtor's children, who were home in care of older sibling); Gordon v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon Corp., 964 F. Supp. 2d 937 (N.D. Ind. 2013) (refusing to dismiss intentional infliction claim against lender that caused property service to break into wrong person's home, steal personal property, and leave the house open to vandals); Hamlett v. Santander Consumer, USA, Inc., 931 F. Supp. 2d 451 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (refusing to dismiss intentional infliction claim alleging numerous calls, with threats of criminal prosecution, to cell phone of debtor's non-debtor family member, who was known to suffer from mental disabilities); Valero v. Bryant, LaFayette & Assoc., 2011 WL 1438436 (E.D. Cal. Apr. 14, 2011) (calls to family members; collector "yelled at" debtor's seriously ill non-debtor father); Blue v. Johnson & Migliaccio, 2010 WL 4641666 (D. Or. Nov. 4, 2010) (call to terminally ill non-debtor father); Herman v. Nat'l Enter. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 1874202 (W.D.N.Y. June 29, 2009) (five months of abusive phone calls to debtor-soldier's non-debtor mother while debtor was fighting in Iraq; false threats of criminal prosecution); Hicks v. Cadle Co., 2008 WL 2900934 (D. Colo. July 23, 2008) (confirming arbitrator's award of damages for harassment, lawsuit, and false accusations of crime directed at person not liable on debt), rev'd in part on other grounds, 355 Fed. Appx. 186 (10th Cir. 2009); Pulver v. Avco Fin. Serv., 227 Cal. Rptr. 491 (Cal. Ct. App. 1986) (creditor harassed and threatened sister of debtor, knowing sister not liable for debt); George v. Jordan Marsh Co., 268 N.E.2d 915 (Mass. 1971) (harassment of debtor's mother is actionable); Bennet v. City Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 549 P.2d 393 (Okla. Civ. App. 1975) (creditor threatened to ruin debtor's mother's credit). But see Bast v. Ford Motor Credit Corp., 631 F.2d 508 (7th Cir. 1980) (Ill. law; creditor did not act outrageously by insulting debtor's non-debtor parents and calling hospitalized seriously ill parent); Guest v. Provident Funding Ass'n, 2013 WL 1003524 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 13, 2013) (very persistent attempts, including lawsuits and credit reporting, to collect from non-debtor not outrageous). See generally Allan E. Korpela, Annotation, Recovery for Emotional Distress or its Physical Consequences Caused by Attempts to Collect Debt Owed by Third Party, 46 A.L.R.3d 772 (1972).

117 Moore v. Greene, 431 F.2d 584 (9th Cir. 1970) (Cal. law; barrage of offensive and insulting remarks); Symonds v. Mercury Sav. & Loan

- Impersonation[118] and other deception;[119]
- Abusive contacts with third parties that humiliate the debtor;[120]

Ass'n, 275 Cal. Rptr. 871 (Cal. Ct. App. 1990) (daily threatening calls to older, financially precarious consumer to collect overdrafts that may have resulted from bank's negligence); Chedester v. Stecker, 643 P.2d 532 (Haw. 1982) (jury question where homeowners' association called resident a freeloader, threatened to cut off his water supply, and falsely claimed he had never paid a membership fee); Barnett v. Collection Serv. Co., 242 N.W. 25 (Iowa 1932) (upholding jury verdict based on coarse, disparaging letters threatening suit over a $28.75 fuel bill and threat to consumer's employment); Venes v. Prof'l Serv. Bureau, Inc., 353 N.W.2d 671 (Minn. Ct. App. 1984) (collection agency's abusive calls, warning to debtor to "stay out of Minnesota if you know what's good for you and your family," and attempting to collect interest not owed, satisfied elements of intentional infliction of emotional distress); Callarama v. Assoc. Discount Corp., 329 N.Y.S.2d 711 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1972) (threatening, harassing, and obscene statements that caused heart attack and severe mental distress were actionable); Crews v. Provident Fin. Co., 157 S.E.2d 381 (N.C. 1967) (jury question where collector visited older consumer's home and used harsh words, vulgarity, and threats even though she had brought her account current); Turman v. Cent. Billing Bureau, 568 P.2d 1382 (Or. 1977) (upholding verdict against collector that threatened blind debtor with loss of job and home due to $46 debt, swore at her, and called her "scum" and "deadbeat"; plaintiff hospitalized for anxiety and stress); Mauri v. Smith, 901 P.2d 247 (Or. Ct. App. 1995) (upholding verdict against process server who intruded into home and flung racist insults at debtor and debtor's parents, and against police officers who allowed him to enter and stood by during his abuse), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 929 P.2d 307 (Or. 1996). See also Cadle Co. v. Hobbs, 673 So. 2d 1363 (La. Ct. App. 1996) (grossly offensive calls to plaintiff's workplace, including threats and racial epithets, is actionable as tort of "unreasonable tactics" in debt collection, which includes elements of invasion of privacy and infliction of emotional distress). But see Walker v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2839807 (D.N.J. July 10, 2012) (one "insulting and profane" voicemail message sufficient to allege violation of FDCPA, but not outrageous conduct); Woods v. Seeger, Ross & Aguirre, L.L.C., 2012 WL 1811628 (S.D.N.Y. May 18, 2012) (calls with false threat and third-party contacts sufficient to support FDCPA violation but not outrageous conduct); Murungi v. Texas Guaranteed, 693 F. Supp. 2d 597 (E.D. La. 2010) ("obnoxious" calls to workplace not outrageous), aff'd, 2010 WL 3736227 (5th Cir. Sept. 16, 2010); Book v. Mortg. Elec. Registration Sys., 608 F. Supp. 2d 277 (D. Conn. 2009) ("distressing or hurtful" and arguably threatening communications by purchaser at foreclosure sale to former owner did not exceed "all bounds tolerated by decent society"); Costa v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., 634 F. Supp. 2d 1069 (E.D. Cal. 2007) (denying claim where collector was gratuitously rude, but consumer, who was trying to find out how to contact collector's boss to complain, initiated some of the calls); Jolly v. Academy Collection Serv., 400 F. Supp. 2d 851, 866–867 (M.D.N.C. 2005) (several calls to debtor at work, including cursing and belittling language, not outrageous); Green Tree Acceptance, Inc. v. Standridge, 565 So. 2d 38 (Ala. 1990) (threatening, abusive, and insulting language and wrongful threat to repossess manufactured home insufficiently outrageous); Midas Muffler Shop v. Ellison, 650 P.2d 496 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1982) (calling consumers who had fully paid their debt "lying thieves or sponges," threatening to "sue your asses," and sending six letters in three months not outrageous); Cook v. Covington Credit of Ga., Inc., 660 S.E.2d 855 (Ga. Ct. App. 2008) (threatening language and racial epithet during workplace confrontation with debtor who could not be reached by phone insufficient); Smith v. Standard Oil, 567 S.W.2d 412 (Mo. Ct. App. 1978) (collection calls and inoffensive collection letters not outrageous, even though one call contained two "hells" and a "damn"); Breeden v. League Serv. Corp., 575 P.2d 1375 (Okla. 1978) (collection efforts that included cursing at debtor and calling her liar and deadbeat not outrageous).

118 See, e.g., Hartung v. J.D. Byrider, Inc., 2009 WL 1876690 (E.D. Cal. June 26, 2009) (creditor misrepresented self as debtor's father to gain access to debtor's T-Mobile account, obtained personal information, and transmitted abusive phone calls and text messages to debtor); Harrington v. CACV of Colo., L.L.C., 508 F. Supp. 2d 128 (D. Mass. 2007) (knowingly lying to court to obtain default judgment would be outrageous); Fleming-Dudley v. Legal Investigations, Inc., 2007 WL 952026 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 22, 2007) (impersonating a law enforcement officer is outrageous); Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Sheehan, 373 So. 2d 956 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1979) (allegations that collector, posing as nurse, called consumer's mother, falsely stated that consumer's children had been in a serious accident, and requested consumer's current addresses stated claim); Mauri v. Smith, 901 P.2d 247 (Or. Ct. App. 1995) (citing process server's misrepresentation of himself as police officer as factor in upholding verdict), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 929 P.2d 307 (Or. 1996). But see Hutchens v. West Asset Mgmt., Inc., 2013 WL 1337178 (S.D. W. Va. Mar. 29, 2013) (falsely claiming to be sheriff's officer, and false threats of arrest, in effort to collect debt that had already been settled, not outrageous). But cf. Colton v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 1986 WL 8538 (Ohio Ct. App. July 30, 1986) (creditor who impersonated doctor and told consumer that consumer's son was admitted seriously injured to a hospital was not liable as the ruse to locate car did not cause serious emotional distress).

119 Valero v. Bryant, LaFayette & Assoc., 2011 WL 1438436 (E.D. Cal. Apr. 14, 2011) (collector claimed to have file of debtor's personal information, which it would sell at auction in twenty-four hours); Perk v. Worden, 475 F. Supp. 2d 565 (E.D. Va. 2007) (counsel allegedly lied to consumers about change of court date, then appeared on scheduled date and got default judgment); Miniscalco v. Gordon, 916 F. Supp. 478 (E.D. Pa. 1996) (allegations that constable altered court document in order to seize personal rather than corporate property).

120 Woltring v. Specialized Loan Serv., L.L.C., 56 F. Supp. 3d 947 (E.D. Wis. 2014) (loudly disclosing impending foreclosure in presence of homeowners' son's wedding party); Herman v. Nat'l Enter. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 1874202 (W.D.N.Y. June 29, 2009) (five months of abusive phone calls to debtor-soldier's non-debtor mother while debtor was fighting in Iraq; false threats of criminal prosecution; unauthorized debits from checking account); North Shore Pharmacy Serv., Inc. v. Breslin Assoc. Consulting, L.L.C., 491 F. Supp. 2d 111 (D. Mass. 2007) (pattern of conduct toward third parties intended to drive victim out of business is outrageous conduct); Zito v. Leasecomm Corp., 2004 WL 2211650 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2004) (false threats of jail, contact with parents and spouses, infiltration of websites with misleading messages and personal attacks); Black v. Aegis Consumer Funding Group, Inc., 2001 WL 228062 (S.D. Ala. Feb. 8, 2001) (campaign of harassment that included telling six-year-old his mommy was going to jail, scaring teenage babysitter with threat to break into garage, and calling consumer's parents and threatening to put lien on their home); Bowden v. Spiegel, Inc., 216 P.2d 571 (Cal. Ct. App. 1950) (threatening phone call at 11:00 p.m. about disputed debt to debtor's neighbor, causing debtor to be called to that house and humiliated before others, resulting in extended illness); Duty v. Gen. Fin. Co., 273 S.W.2d 64 (Tex. 1954); United Fin. & Thrift Corp. v. Bain, 393 S.W.2d 429 (Tex. App. 1965) (calls to neighbors and other abuses). But see Rolle v. Law Office of Samuel Streeter, 2010 WL 729022 (D. Ariz. Mar. 2, 2010) (denying claim against collector who contacted debtor's commanding officer, resulting in loss of security clearance and permanent damage to military career); Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., 2002 WL 31618443 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 6, 2002) (collector's conduct "odious" but not outrageous; made scene at consumer's workplace and told employer consumer was a thief). But cf. Meyer v. Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. Co., 957 F. Supp. 1492 (D. Wyo. 1997) (commenting truthfully, during call audible

- Unjustified criminal prosecution, or false threats of criminal prosecution;[121]
- Threats to unlawfully freeze, seize, or garnish essential funds;[122]
- Excessively repeated collection calls;[123] to others, that person owed a debt perhaps "boorish" but not outrageous), aff'd, 162 F.3d 1264 (10th Cir. 1998).

121 Hamlett v. Santander Consumer, USA, Inc., 931 F. Supp. 2d 451 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 19, 2013) (numerous calls, with threats of criminal prosecution); Hicks v. Cadle Co., 2008 WL 2900934 (D. Colo. July 23, 2008) (harassment, lawsuit, and false accusations of crime directed at person not liable on debt), rev'd in part on other grounds, 355 Fed. Appx. 186 (10th Cir. 2009); Robertson v. Horton Bros. Recovery, Inc., 2007 WL 2009703 (D. Del. July 3, 2007) (early morning confrontation at consumer's home, false threats of arrest, numerous rude phone calls, harassment of consumer and co-workers at work); Rivera v. Corporate Receivables, Inc., 2006 WL 2992738 (D. Conn. Oct. 20, 2006) (multiple calls, threats of jail, to co-signer on disputed debt); Zito v. Leasecomm Corp., 2004 WL 2211650 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2004) (false threats of jail and other abuses); Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Serv., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1249 (D. Kan. 2003) (false threats of arrest and property seizure directed to consumer known to be disabled veteran); McHugh v. Check Investors Inc., 2003 WL 21283288 (W.D. Va. May 21, 2003) (threat of arrest for bad check debt not owed caused panic in consumer with young child); Black v. Aegis Consumer Funding Group, Inc., 2001 WL 228062 (S.D. Ala. Feb. 8, 2001) (campaign of harassment that included telling a six-year-old his mommy was going to jail); Fleming v. U-Haul, Inc., 541 S.E.2d 75 (Ga. Ct. App. 2000) (reversing summary judgment for defendant truck rental company that prosecuted consumer for theft where consumer made repeated calls for road service after rented truck broke down, and abandoned it only after waiting nearly two hours); Ariguzo v. K-mart Corp., 1999 WL 775777 (Ohio Ct. App. Sept. 30, 1999) (affirming compensatory and punitive damage awards on intentional infliction and other tort claims; after being shown receipt for goods consumer intended to exchange, store personnel forced her into office, dumped out her purse, and sent theft report to collection agency which sent her harassing letters); Searle v. Harrah's Entertainment, Inc., 2010 WL 3928632 (Tenn. Ct. App. Oct. 6, 2010) (affirming judgment where creditor threatened bad check prosecution on check that had already cleared); Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002) (affirming $5 million actual damage award for suing older, non-English speaking identity theft victim and telling her that she would be sent to jail), vacated on other grounds, 2003 Tex. LEXIS 50 (Tex. Apr. 24, 2003) (vacating decision pursuant to parties' settlement). But see MacDermid v. Discover Fin. Serv., 342 Fed. Appx. 138 (6th Cir. 2009) (Tenn. law; threats of criminal prosecution not outrageous where consumer's conduct fit description of a crime); Gibson v. Rosenthal, Stein & Assoc., 2013 WL 3367255 (N.D. Ga. July 3, 2013) (threats of jail, in effort to collect debt not owed, not outrageous); Hutchens v. West Asset Mgmt., Inc., 2013 WL 1337178 (S.D. W. Va. Mar. 29, 2013) (falsely claiming to be sheriff's officer, and false threats of arrest, in effort to collect debt that had already been settled, not outrageous); Latimore v. Gateway Retrieval, L.L.C., 2013 WL 791258 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 1, 2013) (false threats of arrest in calls seeking to collect payday loan were not sufficiently outrageous), adopted, 2013 WL 791308 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 4, 2013); Daviscourt v. Columbia State Bank, 2008 WL 113899 (D. Colo. Jan. 9, 2008) (obtaining bench warrant for failure to appear at debtor's examination when consumers about to file bankruptcy not outrageous under strict Colorado standard); Leavitt v. Bank of Cairo & Moberly, 2006 WL 1479502 (E.D. Mo. May 23, 2006) (bank officers called on consumer at home and demanded that she replace funds so that law enforcement would not become involved; not outrageous where they did not know of her unusual vulnerability and their conduct was not intended solely to cause emotional distress); Harrison v. McMahon, 2004 WL 1171391 (D. Conn. May 24, 2004) (having debtor arrested on unfounded bad check charge insufficient); Silver v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 2000 WL 33682675 (E.D.N.C. July 31, 2000) (creditor's failure to inform court that insufficient funds check had been paid, resulting in arrest and night in jail, was insufficient); Ross v. Creel Printing & Publ'g Co., 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787 (Cal. Ct. App. 2002) (threat of criminal prosecution over insufficient funds check; violation of attorney disciplinary rule not sufficient to show outrageous conduct); Cornelius v. Auto Analyst, Inc., 476 S.E.2d 9 (Ga. Ct. App. 1996) (one letter in which collector threatened arrest of debtor not outrageous); Am. Credit Card Processing Co. v. Fairchild, 810 N.Y.S.2d 874 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2006) (false threats of arrest and "rash, crude, callous, unprofessional and improper" language in attempt to collect commercial debt not outrageous); Burton v. NCNB Nat'l Bank, 355 S.E.2d 800 (N.C. Ct. App. 1987) (lawyer's letter considering criminal prosecution for false financial statement not outrageous). But cf. Lewis v. First Nat'l Bank, 645 F. Supp. 1499 (W.D. Va. 1986) (institution of criminal proceedings with probable cause not outrageous as a matter of law), aff'd, 818 F.2d 861 (4th Cir. 1987).

122 Strom v. Nat'l Enter. Sys., 2011 WL 1233118 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 30, 2011) (threat to freeze exempt SSDI funds, debtor's only source of income, after being told debtor suffered from brain cancer and could not work). See also Jiagbogu v. Bank of Am., 2016 WL 7626429 (C.D. Cal. 2016) (erroneously freezing account, then refusing to release limited sum for medical expenses of consumer known to be seriously ill; finding allegations of wrongful conduct sufficient, but requiring more specific allegations of extreme emotional distress).

123 Hamlett v. Santander Consumer, USA, Inc., 931 F. Supp. 2d 451 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (numerous calls, with threats of criminal prosecution, to debtor and to cell phone of debtor's non-debtor family member, who was known to suffer from mental disabilities); Elkins v. Diversified Collection Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 3754830 (S.D. W. Va. July 15, 2013) (telephone harassment of represented consumer, and filing of false 1099 resulting in government debt collection attempts, were outrageous); Bohannon-Hingston v. Brachfield Law Group, 2011 WL 6211756 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 2011) (allowing intentional infliction of emotional distress claim based on repeated collection calls to workplace, including call to manager in which creditor disclosed debtor's personal information, to go to trial); Prephan v. NCO Fin. Sys., 2011 WL 2579817 (N.D. Ohio June 29, 2011) (daily phone calls; collector refused requests to verify disputed debt or cease contact); Chaconas v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 713 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (300 calls to older consumers, after receipt of cease contact demand and contact information for lawyer, plus third-party contacts); Herman v. Nat'l Enter. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 1874202 (W.D.N.Y. June 29, 2009) (five months of abusive phone calls to debtor-soldier's non-debtor mother while debtor was fighting in Iraq; false threats of criminal prosecution; unauthorized debits from checking account); Black v. Aegis Consumer Funding Group, Inc., 2001 WL 228062 (S.D. Ala. Feb. 8, 2001) (campaign of harassment that included threatening calls at all hours, continuing after consumer was hospitalized for depression and anxiety); Meads v. Citicorp Credit Serv., Inc., 686 F. Supp. 330 (S.D. Ga. 1988) (phone calls more than once a week over four-month period, even after debtor informed collector of medical problems); Rugg v. McCarty, 476 P.2d 753 (Colo. 1970) (claim stated; repeated calls and letters about $45 debt and letter to employer about garnishment despite lack of judgment); Hairford v. Centurytel, Inc., 856 So. 2d 139 (La. Ct. App. 2003) (persistent dunning of older consumer for debt not owed, refusal to cooperate in efforts to correct situation, threat to cut off phone service, and attempt to draft bank account); Duty v. Gen. Fin. Co., 273 S.W.2d 64 (Tex. 1954) (collector's threats of job loss and credit blacklisting, harassment by phone at home and at work, phone calls to consumer's friends, relatives, and employers, late night telegrams, letters, and insults); United Fin. & Thrift Corp. v. Bain, 393 S.W.2d 429 (Tex. App. 1965) (daily phone calls and visits, some at early or late hours, trespass, harsh language, threats of repossession, and calls to neighbors). But see Ferrell v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 859 F. Supp. 2d 812 (S.D. W. Va. 2012) (large number of calls not

- Stalking, physical threats, and other acts likely to put the debtor or others in fear of physical injury or property damage;[124] and
- Accessing or disclosing confidential information.[125]

Non-verbal actions[126] such as breaking into a home[127] or wrongful repossession[128] can also be the basis for a claim.

---

sufficient, must show calls at inappropriate hours, or inappropriate language); Blackburn v. Consumer Portfolio Serv., Inc., 2012 WL 2089514 (S.D. W. Va. June 8, 2012) (high volume of calls, sufficient to support state debt collection act claim, not sufficient for intentional infliction of emotional distress; must allege calls at inappropriate hours, or abusive or threatening language); Combs v. NCO Fin. Sys., 2011 WL 1288686 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 5, 2011) (multiple daily calls after debtor's wife informed collector debtor was terminally ill, continuing after widow informed collector of his death, not "ultra-extreme" enough to meet predicted Pennsylvania standard), order entered by 2011 WL 1288699 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 5, 2011); Lyon v. Chase Bank USA, 2009 WL 2170518 (D. Or. Apr. 27, 2009) (collection calls in violation of state statute, false credit report, stonewalling of consumer's efforts to resolve billing dispute not outrageous), later decision reversed on other grounds, 656 F.3d 877 (9th Cir. 2011) (reversing denial of claim under state debt collection statute and refusal to award actual damages and other relief on FCBA claim); Reno v. Supportkids, Inc., 2004 WL 828150 (D. Minn. Apr. 13, 2004) (private child support collector's numerous dunning calls, including threat of arrest, and placement of lien for grossly exaggerated sum on home of ex-husband and his current wife insufficient); Basnight v. Diamond Developers, 146 F. Supp. 2d 754 (M.D.N.C. 2001) (phone calls in unfriendly tone on Sunday, after being informed consumer observed the Sabbath, insufficient); Pub. Fin. Corp. v. Davis, 360 N.E.2d 765 (Ill. 1976) (repeated phone calls and visits to consumer who informed creditor she was on public assistance, unable to pay, and in vulnerable health, inducing her to write check on promise it would not be processed and then telling acquaintance she wrote bad check, and phoning her at hospital where she was visiting her sick daughter not outrageous); Hamilton v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 502 A.2d 1057 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1986) (persistent calls threatening debtor with lawsuit, bad credit record, and attachment of property offensive but not outrageous); Citibank v. Hauff, 668 N.W.2d 528 (S.D. 2003) (series of harassing but not obscene phone calls in effort to collect debt not owed were mere indignities). But see Kornea v. J.S.D. Mgmt., Inc., 366 F. Supp. 3d 660 (E.D. Pa. 2019) (offensive, undesirable, or annoying phone calls and letters, without more, are not so extreme as to support intentional infliction of emotional distress claim). But cf. Weiss v. Collection Ctr., Inc., 667 N.W.2d 567 (N.D. 2003) (one call and four letters, one of which contained implied threat to seize car for $255 medical bill, not outrageous).

124 Amelina v. Manufacturers & Traders Trust Co., 2016 WL 3982483 (S.D. Cal. July 21, 2016) (property service attempted to force entry and made threats which terrified debtor's children, who were home in care of older sibling); Brown v. Bosniak, 2003 WL 21209460 (N.D. Tex. May 19, 2003) (threat of death or grievous injury—"I have people that can take care of you, and they will"—is outrageous conduct, but severe distress not shown); Bates v. Big State Indus. Supply, 1999 WL 1009206 (D. Or. Oct. 14, 1999), later op. at 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17246 (D. Or. Nov. 2, 1999) (sixty phone calls, obscene language, and threats to harm debtor's baby); Reeves v. Melton, 518 P.2d 57 (Okla. Civ. App. 1973) (creditor threatened to kill dogs of alleged debtor who had in fact paid in full); Lawrence v. Stanford, 655 S.W.2d 927 (Tenn. 1983) (alleged threat to kill children's dog unless mother paid veterinarian's bill). But see Bob Blake Builders, Inc. v. Gramling, 18 P.3d 859 (Colo. App. 2001) (in telephone dispute over contract for installation of modular home, builder made momentary and quickly retracted threat to rip down house). But cf. McGinity v. Tracphone Wireless, Inc., 5 F. Supp. 3d 1337 (M.D. Fla. 2014) (demand for money, backed up by death threats, not sufficient where person making threats appeared to be outside the country).

125 Gaylor v. Hobdy, 2003 WL 23024802 (Cal. Ct. App. Dec. 30, 2003) (reversing dismissal of intentional infliction claims against attorney who disclosed privileged information in course of lawsuit over fees). Cf. Wiggins v. Waltz, 1999 WL 777859 (Ohio Ct. App. Sept. 30, 1999) (psychiatrist falsely told former patient that he had lost his notes at a copy shop near the school where she worked, knowing patient was very concerned about confidentiality; conduct was outrageous, but severe distress not shown). But see Conboy v. AT&T Corp., 241 F.3d 242 (2d Cir. 2001) (N.Y. law; phone company provided confidential customer information to credit card issuer that handled former AT&T credit cards, which used this information to harass non-debtor consumers in effort to locate their adult daughter-in-law; not outrageous); Jones v. Commerce Bancorp, 2006 WL 1409492 (S.D.N.Y. May 23, 2006), later decision at 2006 WL 2642153 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 15, 2006) (bank's alleged failure to safeguard personal identifying information not outrageous); Franklin Collection Agency v. Kyle, 955 So. 2d 284 (Miss. 2007) (disclosure of private medical information, beyond what was necessary to support open account claim, not outrageous).

126 See, e.g., Wilkinson v. United States, 2007 WL 3544062 (D.N.D. Nov. 9, 2007) (Bureau of Indian Affairs leased out Indian farmers' land, in egregious violation of law, after farmers defaulted on Farm Service loan), rev'd in part on other grounds, 564 F.3d 927 (8th Cir. 2009). See also Fredette v. Allied Van Lines, 66 F.3d 369 (1st Cir. 1995) (delays in transporting manufactured home and installing it on site, and withholding of personal property due to dispute about storage charges, supported intentional infliction claim, although just barely; severe distress shown where plaintiff lost job due to depression).

127 Day v. Wilmington Savs. Fund Soc., 2018 WL 4469326 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 18, 2018) (refusing to dismiss intentional infliction of emotional distress claim against mortgage servicer's property preservation company that broke into plaintiff's home, locked her out, and damaged her personal property); Amelina v. Manufacturers & Traders Trust Co., 2016 WL 3982483 (S.D. Cal. July 21, 2016) (property service attempted to force entry and made threats which terrified debtor's children, who were home in care of older sibling); Gordon v. Bank of New York Mellon Corp., 964 F. Supp. 2d 937 (N.D. Ind. 2013) (refusing to dismiss intentional infliction claim against lender that caused property service to break into wrong home, steal personal property, and leave the house open to vandals); Flippin v. Aurora Bank, 2012 WL 3260449 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 8, 2012) (refusing to dismiss intentional infliction claim against lender's property service that entered obviously-occupied property, changed locks, turned off water, and removed valuable property at a time when no order of possession had been entered); Obi v. Chase Home Fin., 2010 WL 4810609 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 19 2010) (denying motion to dismiss intentional infliction claim against lender that caused property service to break into condo, seize tenant's property, and lock out tenant); Johnson v. Rent-a-Center East, Inc., 2007 WL 2493101 (W.D. Okla. Aug. 29, 2007) (breaking into home to repossess refrigerator). See also Rheuport v. Ferguson, 819 F.2d 1459 (8th Cir. 1987) (Iowa law; manufactured home park and constable's removal of tenant's belongings to an unsafe place, cutting telephone wires, shouting insults was outrageous); Matthews v. Homecoming Fin. Network, 2005 WL 2387688 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2005) (foreclosing creditor locked out consumers before date set by foreclosure order and refused to allow them to retrieve personal property). But see Steed v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Co., 689 S.E.2d 843 (Ga. Ct. App. 2009) (after foreclosure, but while eviction action was on appeal, someone entered house, "snooped around" and changed locks; consumers were able to reenter same day; not outrageous); Fusaro v. First Family Mortg. Corp., 897 P.2d 123 (Kan. 1995) (mortgage holder sent contractor to winterize house it was foreclosing on; contractor threw out bags containing cherished personal possessions, allegedly thinking they were trash, resulting in a worsening of a preexisting mental condition; not outrageous).

128 See National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 13.6.6 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

Many tort claims have been asserted in cases arising from the mishandling and foreclosure of subprime home mortgages. Courts have allowed intentional infliction of emotional distress claims to proceed where the facts were particularly outrageous.[129] However, many courts have dismissed intentional infliction of emotional distress claims at an early stage,[130] and 129 See, e.g., McGinnis v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing, Inc., 817 F.3d 1241 (11th Cir. 2016) (Ga. law; upholding intentional infliction of emotional distress verdict against servicer that "belligerently" pursued foreclosure for "relatively small sum," despite actual knowledge that debt was not owed); Ryan-Beedy v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 263 F. Supp. 3d 1101 (E.D. Cal. 2018) (wrongful foreclosure will support a claim; shown here if consumer was persuaded to dismiss Chapter 13 bankruptcy by false promises of loan modification); Edgerton v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2018 WL 7680610 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 31, 2018) (denying motion to dismiss intentional infliction of emotional distress claim; finding servicer's mishandling of loan modification attempt sufficiently severe), adopted, 2019 WL 1011108 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 4, 2019); Galima v. Ass'n of Apartment Owners of Palm Court, 2018 WL 6841818 (D. Haw. Dec. 31, 2018) (egregious mishandling of condo association lien foreclosure, while owner, an active duty servicemember, was known to be deployed on a ship); Amelina v. Manufacturers & Traders Trust Co., 2016 WL 3982483 (S.D. Cal. July 21, 2016) (property service attempted to force entry and made threats which terrified debtor's children, who were home in care of older sibling); Buttermore v. Loans, 2016 WL 308875 (W.D. Pa. Jan. 25, 2016) (repeated foreclosures when consumer known not to be in default are outrageous); Woltring v. Specialized Loan Serv., L.L.C., 56 F. Supp. 3d 947 (E.D. Wis. 2014) (stonewalling attempts to pay off mortgage, then loudly announcing foreclosure in presence of homeowners' son's wedding party); Howard v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2014 WL 6802550 (S.D. Miss. Dec. 14, 2014) (must show "intentional bad faith conduct"; egregious mishandling of mortgage servicing, continuing after servicer knew of errors, was sufficient to state intentional infliction of emotional distress claim); Lucero v. Cenlar, 2014 WL 4925489 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 30, 2014) (servicer, apparently in retaliation for a lawsuit, "turned a routine mortgage case into a vendetta," by demanding wildly varying payments, sometimes three times the usual payment; reasonable jury could find this to be beyond the bounds of decency), as amended by 2014 WL 1202660 (W.D. Wash. Oct. 3, 2014), later decision, 2015 WL 5014047 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 25, 2015) (denying defendant's motion for summary judgment on claims of intentional infliction of emotional distress and breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing); Reed v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.L.C., 2012 WL 1579340 (W.D. Mich. May 4, 2012) (intentional infliction of emotional distress will rarely lie in a mortgage situation, but this egregious mishandling of loan modification attempt could be outrageous enough); Rey v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 2012 WL 253137 (D. Haw. Jan. 26, 2012) (foreclosure or denial of loan modification resulting in foreclosure is usually not outrageous, but claim stated by allegations of failure to credit timely payments, refusal to provide information needed to seek workout, false statement that lender would not foreclose, wrongful foreclosure); Smith v. J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, 2011 WL 5373969 (D. Nev. Nov. 4 2011) (refusing to dismiss wrongful death and intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress claims; debtor-husband committed suicide while lender was egregiously mishandling loan modification, harassing borrowers, and bringing arguably wrongful foreclosure); Bonilla v. America's Servicing Co., 2011 WL 3882280 (S.D. Tex. Sept. 2, 2011) (real estate broker ordered family to leave home by certain date and told children the family would have to pack up and move, at time when foreclosure sale had been cancelled because a TRO was in effect); Stone v. Washington Mut. Bank, 2011 WL 3678838 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 19, 2011) (allegation that defendant filed fraudulent foreclosure actions sufficient to allege outrageous conduct); Matthews v. Homecomings Fin. Network, 2005 WL 2387688 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2005) (family locked out of home before date set by foreclosure order); Ragland v. U.S. Bank, 147 Cal. Rptr. 3d 41 (Cal. Ct. App. 2012) (wrongful foreclosure would support intentional infliction of emotional distress claim); Reynolds v. CB & T, 805 S.E.2d 472 (Ga. Ct. App. 2017) (intentional wrongful foreclosure will support claim; shown here if bank's false promises to convert construction loan to long-term mortgage induced consumer to spend own money to complete construction, enabling bank to foreclose on finished home instead of construction site); Mbigi v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., 785 S.E.2d 8 (Ga. Ct. App. 2016) (intentional wrongful foreclosure can support claim; here, servicer "engineered" default by falsely telling borrower it could not accept payments while modification was in progress and sending notices to address known to be wrong). See also Galima v. Ass'n of Apt. Owners of Palm Court, 2017 WL 1240181 (D. Haw. Mar. 30, 2017) (foreclosure usually does not support intentional infliction of emotional distress claim, but egregious conduct sufficiently alleged when, at time of foreclosure, short sale was nearing completion, and borrowers had offered reasonable payment plan that would pay off arrearage); Falcy v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2014 WL 2702651 (D. Or. June 13, 2014) (denying motion to dismiss intentional infliction of emotional distress claim; after deed in lieu of foreclosure, lender released borrower from further liability, then continued collection efforts and reporting of debt even after counsel drew its attention to the release); Ying Chang v. Citimortgage, Inc., 2013 WL 5939985 (D. Or. Nov. 2, 2013) (after denying loan modification application, lender placed borrower in modification that required higher monthly payments and began withdrawing them from bank account; when borrower cancelled automatic withdrawals, lender refused payments in original amount and began vigorous collection efforts).

130 See, e.g., Dowers v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 852 F.3d 964 (9th Cir. 2017) (Nev. law; affirming dismissal of intentional infliction of emotional distress claim against servicer; threatening to foreclose without possessing original loan documents, contacting homeowners after their attorney told it not to, and delaying rescission of previously-recorded notice of default not sufficiently outrageous); Cervantes v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 656 F.3d 1034 (9th Cir. 2011) (Ariz. law; allegation that subprime lenders and servicer targeted vulnerable consumers for unaffordable loans, and misrepresented terms and conditions of the loans, not sufficiently outrageous to support intentional infliction of emotional distress claim); Hernandez v. Wells Fargo & Co., 2019 WL 3017657 (N.D. Cal. July 10, 2019) (mishandling of loan modification in violation of consent decree; plaintiff third-party beneficiaries had no standing to enforce the decree, and failure to oversee compliance was not outrageous); Carson v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 2017 WL 1183960 (D. Me. Mar. 29, 2017) (stubborn refusal to correct coding error, and refusal to recognize loan modification, although "not to be condoned" are not outrageous enough to support claim); Hummel v. Northwest Tr. Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 3093255 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 23, 2016) (threat of foreclosure not outrageous because it threatens only "financial well-being"; must show physical threats or "emotional abuse"); DeHart v. HomeEq Serv. Corp., 47 F. Supp. 3d 246 (E.D. Pa. 2014) (noting that standard for intentional infliction of emotional distress in mortgage cases is very stringent; not shown here where house was sold after mortgage had been brought current, but sale was cancelled and borrowers remained in home); Montgomery v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 955 F. Supp. 2d 640 (S.D. Miss. 2013) (mishandling of loan modification insufficiently outrageous); Wallace v. Manley Deas Kochalski, L.L.C., 2013 WL 3338687 (W.D. Ky. July 2, 2013) (filing a foreclosure action during dispute over property taxes and payment amount not outrageous); Akar v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 843 F. Supp. 2d 154 (D. Mass. 2012) (dismissing intentional infliction claim where alleged outrageousness was pursuit of foreclosure without justification, but creditor had right to foreclose); Tatten v. Bank of Am. Corp., 912 F. Supp. 2d 1032 (D. Colo. 2012) (false representations during failed loan modification attempt not outrageous); Tann v. Chase Home Fin., L.L.C., 2012 WL 3553880 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 17, 2012) (rejection of timely trial payment, even if unjustified, not extreme or outrageous); Sanchez v. One West Bank, 2012 WL a few courts have gone so far as to hold that an intentional infliction of emotional distress claim will never lie for mortgage foreclosure.[131]

When a claim is allowed to go to a jury[132] and outrageous conduct is shown, five to six digit monetary recoveries, including punitive damages, are frequent.[133] However it is not unusual to see large jury verdicts in these types of cases overturned by trial and appellate judges on the ground that the collector's conduct, while abusive, is not sufficiently outrageous to state a cause of action or go to the jury.[134] Great care should be taken to determine the standard applied in intentional infliction of emotional distress cases by particular states to avoid such a reversal.

15.2.5 Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

Many states recognize negligent infliction of emotional distress as an independent cause of action,[135] although some 2929749 (N.D. Ill. July 18, 2012) (going ahead with foreclosure while accepting trial payments and advising borrowers to keep making payments while awaiting loan modification documents); Foxx v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2048252 (M.D. Fla. June 6, 2012) (initiation of foreclosure after refusal of loan modification payments not outrageous); Haynes v. Navy Fed. Credit Union, 825 F. Supp. 2d 285 (D.D.C. 2011) (mishandling of payments, collection harassment, inaccurate reporting, fear of foreclosure not sufficient); Enriquez v. Countrywide Home Loans, 814 F. Supp. 2d 1042 (D. Haw. 2011) (in general, default and foreclosure proceedings not outrageous, so denial of loan modification cannot be outrageous; but dismissing with leave to amend where consumer alleged unaffordable subprime loan); James v. Bank of Am., 2015 WL 2261692 (Ga. App. May 15, 2015) (borrowers who stated claims for breach of contract and wrongful foreclosure failed to state claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress); Jaffri v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 26 N.E.3d 635 (Ind. App. Feb. 13, 2015) (mishandling of loan modification not extreme and outrageous); Lyons v. U.S. Bank, 336 P.3d 1142 (Wash. 2014) (carrying on with foreclosure after loan had been brought current, resulting in loss to home-based business, was not outrageous). See also In re Lacey, 480 B.R. 13 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2012) (failure to offer HAMP modifications or to conduct foreclosure sale fairly and openly not outrageous); Hays v. Citimortgage, 2012 WL 1319413, adopted, 2012 WL 1314105 (D. Minn. Apr. 17, 2012) (D. Minn. Mar. 29, 2012) (during redemption period, when family still had right to occupy foreclosed home, lender's agents broke into home, leaving door unlocked and unlockable; valuable property disappeared; outrageous conduct not sufficiently alleged).

131 Shumake v. Caliber Home Loans, 2017 WL 1362681 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 6, 2017) (foreclosure can never support claim); Cingolani v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 2012 WL 3029829 (E.D. Mich. July 25, 2012) (intentional infliction of emotional distress claim will not lie for breach of contract or mishandling of foreclosure); Palestini v. Homecomings Fin. L.L.C., 2010 WL 3339459 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2010) (lender's and servicer's conduct in foreclosing mortgage is absolutely privileged). See also Perez v. J.P. Morgan Bank, 2016 WL 816752 (D.N.J. Feb. 29, 2016) (economic loss doctrine bars claims alleging mishandling of mortgage, because claims were rooted in the contractual relationship between homeowner and lender).

132 Meads v. Citicorp Credit Serv., Inc., 686 F. Supp. 330 (S.D. Ga. 1988) (question of whether collection behavior was tortious is particularly suitable for a jury and inappropriate for summary judgment).

133 See Black v. Aegis Consumer Funding Group, Inc., 2001 WL 228062 (S.D. Ala. Feb. 8, 2001) (punitive damages justified by high degree of recklessness and outrageousness where vicious harassment continued after consumer hospitalized for depression and anxiety); Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002) (affirming $5 million actual damages award for suing older, non-English speaking identity theft victim and telling her that she would be sent to jail, but reversing $10 million punitive damages award for failure to establish creditor's ratification of agent's conduct), vacated on other grounds, 2003 Tex. LEXIS 50 (Tex. Apr. 24, 2003) (vacating decision pursuant to parties' settlement).

134 See, e.g., Midas Muffler Shop v. Ellison, 650 P.2d 496 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1982) (setting aside $2500 jury verdict); Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Diffey, 378 So. 2d 1032 (La. Ct. App. 1979) (reversing lower court's award of $1000); Hamilton v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 502 A.2d 1057 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1986) (setting aside $52,551 jury verdict). See also Buckley v. Trenton Sav. Fund Soc'y, 544 A.2d 857 (N.J. 1988) (overturning $25,000 jury verdict).

135 ALASKA: Nome Commercial Co. v. Nat'l Bank of Alaska, 948 P.2d 443 (Alaska 1997) (negligent infliction of emotional distress requires a preexisting duty or physical injury; duty not shown in contractual relationship between bank and consumer).

CONNECTICUT: Davis v. Hunt Leibert Jacobson, P.C., 2014 WL 5798585 (D. Conn. Nov. 7, 2014) (simple breach of contract not enough, but sufficiently alleged here where defendant reopened foreclosure without proper notice when service member homeowner was deployed abroad, and ordered wife and family to move out when they were not required to do so); Holtman v. Citifinancial Mortg. Co., 2006 WL 1699589 (D. Conn. June 19, 2006) (consumers stated negligent infliction of emotional distress claim where they alleged debt collection harassment at time when payments current); Desardouin v. United Parcel Serv., Inc. 285 F. Supp. 2d 153 (D. Conn. 2003) (defendant knew or should have known refusal to accept payments and hostile remarks in presence of plaintiff's customers involved unreasonable risk of causing emotional distress, which might lead to illness or bodily harm); Merrill Lynch Interfunding Inc. v. Argenti, 2000 WL 490739 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 26, 2000) (Conn. law; negligent infliction of emotional distress does not require showing of physical injury if defendant's conduct involved unreasonable risk of causing emotional distress that might result in illness or bodily harm, but not shown here), aff'd, 242 F.3d 366 (2d Cir. 2001); Woodcrest Condo. Ass'n v. Ruby, 2012 WL 432558 (Conn. Super. Ct. Jan. 19, 2012) (foreseeability element more specific than in general negligence; must be foreseeable that breach of duty would result in distress sufficient to result in illness or bodily harm). Cf. Sorenson v. MBI, Inc., 2019 WL 3231762 (D. Conn. July 18, 2019) (must show negligence foreseeably resulting in distress sufficient to cause physical or mental illness; not shown here with repeated billing for debt that was fully paid).

HAWAII: Pourny v. Maui Police Dep't, 127 F. Supp. 2d 1129 (D. Haw. 2000) (negligent infliction of emotional distress depends on whether reasonable man would be able to cope with defendant's actions and whether distress reasonably foreseeable; fact issue where police officer dragged debtor across floor and threw him into police car because he protested process server's wrongful seizure of exempt property); Goran Pleho, L.L.C. v. Lacey, 439 P.3d 176 (Haw. 2019) (spelling out elements); Chedester v. Stecker, 643 P.2d 532 (Haw. 1982) (negligent infliction actionable if there is physical injury to property or person).

IDAHO: Wright v. Ada County, 2016 WL 3679935 (Idaho July 7, 2016) (Idaho elements are (1) legally recognized duty, (2) breach, (3) causal connection between defendant's conduct and breach, and (4) actual loss or damage).

KANSAS: Burdett v. Harrah's Kan. Casino Corp., 311 F. Supp. 2d 1166, 1178–1180 (D. Kan. 2004) (widow of gambling addict, who killed himself allegedly as a result of oppressive debt collection attempts by casino, stated claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress on late husband; plaintiff must show immediate physical injury that was direct and proximate result of emotional distress caused by the negligent conduct).

decline to recognize this tort.[136] In the alternative, some states allow such a claim to be pursued as a type of negligence, with the usual elements of duty, foreseeability, and causation.[137] Some courts allow recovery for negligent infliction of MAINE: Campbell v. Machias Sav. Bank, 865 F. Supp. 26, 36 (D. Me. 1994) (claim of negligent infliction of emotional distress does not require that defendant be found liable for underlying tort).

MASSACHUSETTS: Sullivan v. Boston Gas Co., 605 N.E.2d 805 (Mass. 1993) (reciting elements).

MONTANA: Henrickson v. State, 84 P.3d 38 (Mont. 2004) (must show serious or severe distress as foreseeable consequence of negligent act or omission; physical symptoms of post-traumatic stress sufficient); Maloney v. Home & Inv. Ctr., Inc., 994 P.2d 1124 (Mont. 2000) (elements of negligent infliction of emotional distress are serious or severe emotional distress as reasonably foreseeable consequence of defendant's negligent act or omission; outrageous conduct need not be shown); Sacco v. High Country Indep. Press, 896 P.2d 411 (Mont. 1995) (recognizing independent cause of action if plaintiff suffers severe emotional distress as a reasonably foreseeable result of defendant's negligent act or omission; employer's misinformation caused former employee to be charged with larceny).

NEVADA: Smith v. J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, 2011 WL 5373969 (D. Nev. Nov. 4 2011) (refusing to dismiss negligent infliction of emotional distress claim; debtor-husband committed suicide during time when lender was egregiously mishandling loan modification, harassing borrowers, and bringing arguably wrongful foreclosure action).

NEW YORK: United States ex rel. Rubar v. Hayner Hoyt Corp., 306 F. Supp. 3d 478 (N.D.N.Y. 2018) (negligent infliction of emotional distress claim must be based on duty specific to the plaintiff, not general duty to society); Warr v. Liberatore, 270 F. Supp. 3d 637 (W.D.N.Y. 2017) (negligent infliction of emotional distress claim will not lie for intentional conduct); In re Jacques, 416 B.R. 63 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 2009) (claim of negligent infliction of emotional distress requires extreme and outrageous conduct that threatened or caused plaintiff to fear for physical safety; filing of untimely proof of claim in bankruptcy case insufficient).

NORTH CAROLINA: Polanco v. HSBC Bank, 2019 WL 2590964 (W.D.N.C. June 21, 2019) (negligent conduct that will foreseeably result in, and does cause severe and disabling mental or emotional condition which may be generally recognized and diagnosed by professionals who are trained to do so; here negligent mishandling of loan application resulting in anxiety and depression); Basnight v. Diamond Developers, 146 F. Supp. 2d 754 (M.D.N.C. 2001) (elements are negligent conduct, reasonable foreseeability of severe emotional distress, and severe emotional distress, but collection calls in unfriendly tone at inconvenient times not sufficient); Silver v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 2000 WL 33682675 (E.D.N.C. July 31, 2000) (negligence in failing to inform court that check had been paid, foreseeably resulting in consumer's arrest and severe emotional distress). Cf. Williams v. HomeEq Servicing Corp., 646 S.E.2d 381 (N.C. Ct. App. 2007) (must show severe and disabling distress; consumer's uncorroborated testimony as to mild depression and disturbed sleep not sufficient).

PENNSYLVANIA: Toney v. Chester County Hosp., 36 A.3d 83 (Pa. 2011) (allowing recovery for emotional distress caused by negligent breach of contract or fiduciary duty absent physical injury or impact, but only if there is a special relationship where it is foreseeable that a breach of the relevant duty would result in severe emotional harm).

RHODE ISLAND: Gross v. Pare, 185 A.3d 1242 (R.I. 2018) (Rhode Island recognizes a cause of action for negligent infliction of emotional distress only in zone of danger or bystander cases).

SOUTH DAKOTA: Wells Fargo Bank v. Fonder, 868 N.W.2d 409 (S.D. 2015) (allowing claim to go forward where homeowners, relying on false representation that home was not in flood zone, failed to obtain insurance on house that was subsequently destroyed by flood).

WEST VIRGINIA: Marlin v. Bill Rich Constr., Inc., 482 S.E.2d 620 (W. Va. 1996) (adopting "traditional negligence" test for negligent infliction of emotional distress; foreseeability and severity of emotional distress must be judged by "reasonable person" standard, but need not show resulting physical injury).

136 See, e.g., Kennedy v. Hankey Group, 2010 WL 1664087, at *4 (D. Md. Apr. 27, 2010) (Maryland does not recognize cause of action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, but emotional distress damages may be awarded in negligence action); Hamilton v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 502 A.2d 1057, 1065–1066 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1986) (no action for negligent infliction of mental distress). Cf. Lapides v. Trabbic, 758 A.2d 1114, 1121–1122 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 2000) (no cause of action for "unintended emotional distress negligently inflicted by conduct not itself tortious"); Smith v. Tilton, 3 S.W.3d 77 (Tex. App. 1999) (Texas does not recognize a cause of action for negligent infliction of emotional distress).

137 CALIFORNIA: Burgess v. Superior Court, 831 P.2d 1197, 1200 (Cal. 1992) (negligently causing emotional distress is not an independent tort, but the tort of negligence, with the usual elements of duty, breach, causation, and damages); Carney v. Rotkin, Schmerin & McIntyre, 254 Cal. Rptr. 478 (Cal. Ct. App. 1988) (claim is a negligence claim with the usual elements; sufficient facts alleged where lawyer falsely informed seventy-four-year-old judgment debtor that bench warrant had been issued for her arrest). See also Amelina v. Manufacturers & Traders Trust Co., 2016 WL 3982483 (S.D. Cal. July 21, 2016) (no duty of care unless lender or servicer exceeds the scope of a "normal lending relationship," shown here where property service attempted to force entry and made threats which terrified debtor's children); Mueller v. Bank of Am., 2012 WL 3134243 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 1, 2012) (where bank had no duty to offer any loan modification, and did not step outside usual role of money lender, no negligent infliction of emotional distress claim for mishandling of application for special forbearance by victim of domestic abuse); Mehta v. Wells Fargo Bank, 737 F. Supp. 2d 1185 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (negligent infliction of emotional distress is a form of negligence, but financial institution owed no duty of care to borrower); Roybal v. Equifax, 2008 WL 4532447 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 9, 2008) (California does not recognize tort of negligent infliction of emotional distress, but where consumers stated claim for negligence, emotional distress damages were available). Cf. Chaconas v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 713 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (S.D. Cal. May 10, 2010) (violation of duty that does not risk physical injury, here state debt collection statute, will not support negligent infliction of emotional distress claim); Yu v. Signet Bank, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304 (Cal. Ct. App. 1999) (denying negligent infliction of emotional distress claim; filing in distant forum was not "negligence of type which will cause highly unusual as well as predictable emotional distress"), appeal after remand, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 516 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003); Sutherland v. Barclay's Am./Mortg. Corp., 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997) (no negligent infliction of emotional distress claim for mortgage's company's "inept" and "incompetent" handling of payment moratorium after earthquake; borrower's claim was, in effect, a breach-of-contract claim, for which emotional distress damages could not be recovered).

ILLINOIS: Sindles v. Saxon Mortg. Serv., Inc., 2012 WL 1899401, at *7 (N.D. Ill. May 22, 2012) (listing elements as duty, breach, and injury proximately caused by the breach; independent duty rule requires showing that defendant breached duty that did not arise from contract; because covenant of good faith and fair dealing is part of all contracts, breach will not support a negligent infliction of emotional distress claim).

MISSISSIPPI: Stewart v. GMAC Mortg., L.L.C., 2011 WL 1296887 (S.D. Miss. Mar. 31, 2011) (usual elements of negligence, plus physical injury or demonstrable physical or mental harm, reasonably foreseeable by defendant); Anderson v. Litton Loan Servicing, 2010 WL 445593 (S.D. Miss. Feb. 1, 2010) (elements of negligence plus physical manifestation of harm); Fouché v. Shapiro & Massey, L.L.P., 575 F. Supp. 2d 776 (S.D. Miss. 2008) (consumer failed to state claim for negligence; cannot show proximate cause of emotional distress because emotional distress only if the plaintiff suffered a physical impact[138] or physical injury,[139] was unreasonably endangered or put in fear of physical injury,[140] sought professional treatment,[141] or was particularly vulnerable.[142] Other courts require a showing of more severe distress when there is no personal debtor suffered disabling injury, major financial problems, and a long and hard-fought foreclosure action at same time as alleged negligence).

NEW JERSEY: Billings v. TD Bank, 2013 WL 3989572 (D.N.J. Aug. 1, 2013) (usual elements; foreseeability is key issue here; not foreseeable that bank's error in recording credit card applicant's address would lead to "genuine and substantial emotional distress or mental harm to average person").

TENNESSEE: Rogers v. Louisville Land Co., 367 S.W.3d 196 (Tenn. 2012) (usual elements plus serious mental injury); Camper v. Minor, 915 S.W.2d 437, 446 (Tenn. 1996) (usual elements of negligence plus severe emotional injury).

138 See, e.g., Chen v. Mayflower Transit, Inc., 2002 WL 1632412 (N.D. Ill. July 22, 2002) (applying impact rule to bar negligent infliction of emotional distress claim, but noting that recent Illinois cases had been less than clear on this issue); Saice v. MidAmerica Bank, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20845 (D. Minn. Sept. 20, 1999) (no cause of action for negligent infliction of emotional distress unless there is physical impact or presence in the zone of danger of physical impact). See generally Camper v. Minor, 915 S.W.2d 437, 446 (Tenn. 1996) (good overview of various approaches to physical impact requirements).

139 See, e.g., Malverty v. Equifax Info. Services, L.L.C., 407 F. Supp. 3d 1257 (M.D. Fla. 2019) (high blood pressure and exacerbation of existing heart condition not sufficient); Klein v. Just Energy Group, Inc., 2015 WL 3407837 (W.D. Pa. May 27, 2015) (negligence claim fails; emotional distress insufficient in the absence of physical impact, physical injury, presence in zone of danger, or special relationship); Davis v. Bank of Am. Corp., 2012 WL 3637903 (D. Ariz. Aug. 23, 2012) (physical injury or "long-term physical illness or mental disturbance"); Middleton v. Rogers Ltd., 804 F. Supp. 2d 632 (S.D. Ohio 2011) (must show physical injury or that plaintiff was bystander); Simon v. Bank of Am., 2010 WL 2609436 (D. Nev. June 23, 2010) (must show "physical manifestation of harm"; limited exceptions to this requirement do not include deceptive trade practices); North Shore Pharmacy Serv., Inc. v. Breslin Assoc. Consulting, L.L.C., 491 F. Supp. 2d 111 (D. Mass. 2007) (proof of physical injury required for negligent, but not for intentional, infliction of emotional distress claim); Burdett v. Harrah's Kan. Casino Corp., 311 F. Supp. 2d 1166 (D. Kan. 2004) (widow of gambling addict, who killed himself allegedly as a result of oppressive debt collection attempts by casino, stated claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress on late husband), related decision at 294 F. Supp. 2d 1215 (D. Kan. 2003) (widow failed to state claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress on herself, because physical injury not alleged); Zito v. Leasecomm Corp., 2004 WL 2211650 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2004) (denying claim where no allegation of "physical symptoms sufficient to demonstrate physical harm manifested by objective symptomology"); Henry v. Fleet Boston, 2003 WL 22401247 (D.N.H. Oct. 20, 2003) (denying negligent infliction claim because physical injury not shown; multiple banking errors thwarted consumer's efforts to pay credit card bill on time); Chapman v. Ontra, Inc., 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8331 (N.D. Ill. June 3, 1997) (dismissing claim based on debt collection letters in absence of allegation of physical impact or injury); Yu v. Signet Bank, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304 (Cal. Ct. App. 1999) (must show physical injury; unlawful debt collection, for example, filing in distant forum, was not "negligence of type which will cause highly unusual as well as predictable emotional distress"); Chedester v. Stecker, 643 P.2d 532 (Haw. 1982) (negligence not actionable for emotional distress without physical injury to property or a person); Wright v. Ada County, 2016 WL 3679935 (Idaho July 7, 2016) (recovery for emotional injury requires showing of "physical manifestation"); Dill v. Barnett Funeral Home, 83 P.3d 1270 (Kan. Ct. App. 2004) (table) (negligent infliction of emotional distress claim requires showing of "demonstrable" physical injury or impact; headaches, insomnia, nightmares, or even depression insufficient if professional help not sought); Sullivan v. Boston Gas Co., 605 N.E.2d 805 (Mass. 1993) (must be enough medically verifiable symptoms, for example, tension headaches, depression, and diarrhea, to corroborate claim); Franklin Collection Agency v. Kyle, 955 So. 2d 284 (Miss. 2007) (denying negligent infliction of emotional distress claim based on disclosure of private medical information during debt collection, because physical injury not alleged); Henrickson v. State, 84 P.3d 38 (Mont. 2004) (physical symptoms of post-traumatic stress sufficient to show "serious or severe distress" element of negligent infliction); Okocha v. Fehrenbacher, 655 N.E.2d 744 (Ohio Ct. App. 1995) (emotional distress manifested by depression, back pain, chemical dependency, and alcoholism sufficient); First Nat'l Bank v. Drier, 574 N.W.2d 597 (S.D. 1998) (must show "manifestation of physical symptoms"; diagnosed severe mental illness is insufficient). Cf. Lui Ciro, Inc. v. Ciro, Inc., 895 F. Supp. 1365 (D. Haw. 1995) (must be some physical injury to property or a person); Adams v. U.S. Homecrafters, Inc., 744 So. 2d 736 (Miss. 1999) (no need to show physical impact to recover emotional distress damages for negligent conduct, but must show demonstrable mental or physical injury; worry and loss of sleep insufficient). But see Palestini v. Homecomings Fin., L.L.C., 2010 WL 3339459 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2010) (need not show physical injury, but must show serious mental distress); Marlin v. Bill Rich Constr., Inc., 482 S.E.2d 620 (W. Va. 1996) (no need to show physical injury, but it can be further evidence of serious distress).

140 Colorado Capital Invs., Inc. v. Owens, 304 Fed. Appx. 906 (2d Cir. 2008) (New York law requires showing that defendant endangered plaintiff's physical safety or caused plaintiff to fear for his or her physical safety, or that there are special circumstances that raise a likelihood of genuine and serious mental distress); Kansas City Laser, Inc. v. MCI Telecomms. Corp., 252 Fed. Appx. 100 (8th Cir. 2007) (Mo. law; must show presence in "zone of danger" and reasonable fear of physical injury; economic damage to small business, even though resulting stress caused physical illness of owner, insufficient); Varnado v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 43 F. Supp. 3d 985 (N.D. Cal. 2014) (debt collection misconduct will not support negligent infliction of emotional distress claim if there is no threat of physical injury); Hutchens v. West Asset Mgmt., Inc., 2013 WL 1337178 (S.D. W. Va. Mar. 29, 2013) (negligent infliction of emotional distress claim fails because false threats of arrest did not put consumers in fear for their physical safety); E.B. v. Liberation Publications, 777 N.Y.S.2d 133 (N.Y. App. Div. 2004) (physical injury not required but must show breach of duty that either unreasonably endangers or causes plaintiff to fear for physical safety); Gross v. Pare, 185 A.3d 1242 (R.I. 2018) (Rhode Island recognizes a cause of action for negligent infliction of emotional distress only in zone of danger or bystander cases). See also Schweihs v. Chase Home Fin., 41 N.E.3d 1011 (Ill. Ct. App. 2015) (must show that plaintiff was "direct victim"—that is, suffered a physical impact or was within the zone of danger; not shown here where lender's property service prematurely broke into occupied house while owner was inside).

141 Smith v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2009 WL 1976513 (S.D. Miss. July 7, 2009) (must be medically cognizable and require treatment by medical profession); Dill v. Barnett Funeral Home, 83 P.3d 1270 (Kan. Ct. App. 2004) (table) (negligent infliction of emotional distress claim requires showing of "demonstrable" physical injury or impact; headaches, insomnia, nightmares, or even depression insufficient if professional help not sought).

142 See, e.g., Reedy v. White Consol. Indus., Inc., 890 F. Supp. 1417 (N.D. Iowa 1995) (company encouraged or required injured employee to continue medical treatment while it quietly assembled evidence to deny workers' compensation coverage; plaintiff's "peculiar susceptibility" by reason of physical or mental condition was one factor to be considered, but "major outrage" was still required).

injury.[143] Some courts accept lay evidence of emotional distress,[144] but others require medical testimony.[145]

Some states allow recovery if the defendant stood in a contractual or fiduciary relationship to the plaintiff, which created a special duty to refrain from causing emotional harm.[146] In many jurisdictions, a simple debtor-creditor relationship will not in itself create such a confidential relationship,[147] although the cases reflect some ambivalence on this point.[148] Acting as an escrow agent may be sufficient to create a special relationship.[149]

143 See, e.g., Swartz v. City Mortg., Inc., 911 F. Supp. 2d 916 (D. Haw. 2012) (in the absence of physical injury to person or property, must show that the negligent conduct caused mental illness).

144 Thornton v. Garcini, 928 N.E.2d 804 (Ill. 2010) (jury may find "based on personal experience" that distress would result; expert testimony unnecessary); Williams v. HomeEq Servicing Corp., 646 S.E.2d 381 (N.C. Ct. App. 2007) (negligent infliction of emotional distress claim requires showing of severe and disabling distress; lay testimony may suffice, but consumer's uncorroborated testimony as to mild depression and disturbed sleep insufficient).

145 Montgomery v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 955 F. Supp. 2d 640 (S.D. Miss. 2013) (negligent infliction of emotional distress claim requires medical evidence that demonstrable mental or physical harm was caused by defendants' actions; not shown here); Carlson v. SCI Iowa Funeral Serv., Inc., 674 N.W.2d 682 (Iowa Ct. App. 2003) (medical evidence required; consumers who saw health professionals for sleeplessness and depression stated claim, but not those who did not); Miller v. Willbanks, 8 S.W.3d 607 (Tenn. 1999) (medical or other expert testimony is necessary to prove severe emotional injury for negligent (although not intentional) infliction claim).

146 See Lesesne v. District of Columbia, 146 F. Supp. 3d 190 (D.D.C. 2015) (narrowly defining special relationship needed to support negligent infliction of emotional distress claim; fiduciary relation not sufficient if object of the relationship is financial, legal, or commercial; purpose of relationship must be "care for another's emotional wellbeing"); Grimaldi v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 1050549 (M.D. Pa. Mar. 14, 2013) (lender-borrower relationship insufficient); DeStefano v. Childrens Nat'l Med. Ctr., 121 A.3d 59 (D.C. Ct. App. 2015) (special relationship of medical center with patient and family limited to provision of medical care; claim fails where personal injury resulted from negligent maintenance of parking garage); Carlson v. SCI Iowa Funeral Serv., Inc., 674 N.W.2d 682 (Iowa Ct. App. 2003) (negligent infliction of emotional distress claim may arise if contract involves deeply emotional matter; special relationship with funeral home; damages available for negligent infliction, but severe distress requires proof of medical treatment); Oceanic Inn, Inc. v. Sloan's Cove, L.L.C., 133 A.3d 1021 (Me. 2016) (articulating Maine's criteria for fiduciary relationship; not shown in commercial real estate dealings among family members disputing an inheritance); Toney v. Chester County Hosp., 36 A.3d 83 (Pa. 2011) (allowing recovery for emotional distress caused by negligent breach of contract or fiduciary duty, without physical injury or impact, if there is a special relationship where it is foreseeable that breach will result in severe emotional harm). See also Chizmar v. Mackie, 896 P.2d 196 (Alaska 1995) (negligent infliction of emotional distress claim generally requires physical injury except where, as here, distress is foreseeable result of breach of preexisting contractual or fiduciary duty, such as physician-patient relationship); Wilson v. Houston Funeral Home, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 169 (Cal. Ct. App. 1996) (funeral director had special relationship with widow; taking her and relatives to bank instead of cemetery so director could try to cash check breached implied covenant to provide dignified burial service). Cf. Fogg v. Ocwen Loan Serv., L.L.C., 2015 WL 1565229 (D. Me. Apr. 8, 2015) (negligent infliction of emotional distress claim fails because mortgage servicer owed no special duty to borrower); Land v. Green Tree Serv., L.L.C., 2014 WL 5527854 (D.S.C. Oct. 31, 2014) (servicer had no special duty to borrowers; after foreclosure was settled, property service twice confronted homeowner, known to be in fragile health, telling him eviction was imminent; after second confrontation, homeowner died of heart attack). But see Lawrence v. Grinde, 534 N.W.2d 414 (Iowa 1995) (although attorney-client relationship is fiduciary, it is not "so coupled with matters of mental concern or with the sensibilities of the party to whom the duty is owed" that breach will necessarily or reasonably result in mental anguish).

147 See, e.g., Keenan v. Wells Fargo Bank, 246 F. Supp. 3d 518 (D. Mass. 2017) (lender does not owe duty of care to borrower); McDevitt v. Wells Fargo Bank, 946 F. Supp. 2d 160 (D.D.C. 2013) (granting summary judgment to lender on negligent infliction of emotional distress claim alleging misapplication of mortgage payment, as this is no more than breach of contract); Swartz v. City Mortg., Inc., 911 F. Supp. 2d 916 (D. Haw. 2012) (negligence element of negligent infliction of emotional distress not proven; lenders owe no non-contractual duty to borrowers); Mehta v. Wells Fargo Bank, 737 F. Supp. 2d 1185 (S.D. Cal. 2010); Quinteros v. Aurora Loan Serv., 740 F. Supp. 2d 1163 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 30, 2010) (no special duty owed to borrower by lender); Foster v. Argent Mortg. Co., 2010 WL 1136807 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 25, 2010), adopted in relevant part, rejected in part on other grounds by 2010 WL 1136804 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 24, 2010); Watts v. Decision One Mortg. Co., L.L.C., 2009 WL 2044595 (S.D. Cal. July 13, 2009) (lender and servicer owe no special duty to consumer, unlike mortgage broker, who is fiduciary); Nome Commercial Co. v. Nat'l Bank of Alaska, 948 P.2d 443 (Alaska 1997) (contract between bank and customer not sufficiently personal or laden with emotion); Sheen v. Wells Fargo Bank, 250 Cal. Rptr. 3d 677 (Cal. Ct. App. 2019) (no special duty to borrower in loan modification; noting conflict of authority on this issue), review granted by 451 P.3d 777 (Cal. 2019); Oceanic Inn, Inc. v. Sloan's Cove, L.L.C., 133 A.3d 1021 (Me. 2016) (refusing to adopt a general rule imposing fiduciary duty on foreclosing mortagees); Ed Schory & Sons v. Francis, 662 N.E.2d 1074 (Ohio 1996) (commercial debtor/creditor relationship not special or fiduciary so as to give rise to duty to refrain from causing emotional distress). See also Davis v. MCI Communications Serv., 421 F. Supp. 2d 1178 (E.D. Mo. 2006) (no special relationship between consumer and long-distance company that cut off service for making expensive calls); In re Prince, 414 B.R. 285 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 2009) (must show some duty independent of contract), rev'd in part on other grounds, 2010 WL 841273 (M.D. Tenn. Mar. 4, 2010).

148 Amelina v. Manufacturers & Traders Trust Co., 2016 WL 3982483 (S.D. Cal. July 21, 2016) (no duty of care unless lender exceeds the scope of a "normal lending relationship"; shown here where property service attempted to force entry and made threats that terrified debtor's children); Dougherty v. Bank of Am., 177 F. Supp. 3d 1230 (E.D. Cal. 2016) (lender or servicer's relationship with debtor usually does not create duty of care, but this must be determined on a case by case basis; foreseeability of harm and close connection between defendant's conduct and the harm weigh in favor of finding a duty here, where servicers strung borrowers along with false promises that unaffordable modification could be made feasible by state home-saver program, but never took necessary steps to enable homeowners to participate in the program); Stanton v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 2010 WL 3824640, at *5–6 (D. Utah Sept. 28, 2010) (denying motion to dismiss negligent infliction claim where lender made long series of reassurances that it would not foreclose during modification negotiations, but then foreclosed, without mentioning any need to show a special relationship); Stevens v. First Interstate Bank, 999 P.2d 551 (Or. Ct. App. 2000) (in absence of physical injury, plaintiff must show that relation to defendant gave rise to some legally protected interest beyond general obligation to take reasonable care not to cause a risk of foreseeable harm; bank-depositor relationship not sufficient, but debtor-creditor might be).

149 Hamilton v. Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp., 2015 WL 144562 (D. Me. Jan. 12, 2015) (allowing negligent infliction of emotional distress claim to go forward; when lender created escrow account, it became a

Courts recognize that the ability to pressure debtors to meet their obligations is a necessary adjunct of the debtor-creditor relationship, but they also recognize the difference in power and the potential for abuse inherent in the relationship.[150]

15.2.6 Recovery of Emotional Distress Damages for Other Collection Torts

Emotional distress damages may also be available for other debt-related causes of action.[151] Courts are more likely to find emotional distress damages available if the cause of action sounds in tort rather than in contract[152] and if the defendant's fiduciary). But see James v. GMAC Mortg., L.L.C., 772 F. Supp. 2d 307, 323–324 (D. Me. 2011) (no special relationship between borrower and escrow agent).

150 See Milton v. Illinois Bell Tel. Co., 427 N.E.2d 829 (Ill. App. Ct. 1981) (creditor must be given some latitude to pursue reasonable methods of collecting debts, but may abuse its position; debtor is protected from oppressive and outrageous conduct).

151 Contract Law and Uniform Commercial Code: See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Warranty Law § 10.5.3.3 (5th ed. 2015), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 13.2.3.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

Fair Credit Reporting Act: See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 12.5.2.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

Fair Debt Collection Practices Act: See §§ 2.6.2.2.2, 11.8.1 to 11.8.7, supra.

Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act: See National Consumer Law Center, Mortgage Servicing and Loan Modifications § 3.12.2 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

State Debt Collection Statutes: See § 16.2.5.2, infra.

State Tort Actions: See, e.g., Fiori v. Truck Drivers, Local 170, 354 F.3d 84 (1st Cir. 2004) (Mass. law; emotional distress damages available for libel); Washington v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2011 WL 1871228 (E.D. Va. May 16, 2011) (fraud; damages for emotional distress, unaccompanied by physical injury, if there exists a cause of action "independently of such harm"); Manno v. Am. Gen. Fin. Co., 439 F. Supp. 2d 418 (E.D. Pa. 2006) (damages for libel may include humiliation and mental anguish); Hayfield v. Home Depot, 168 F. Supp. 2d 436 (E.D. Pa. 2001) (in malicious prosecution action, emotional distress damages available without showing of physical injury or out-of-pocket costs); Yu v. Signet Bank/Virginia, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 516 (Cal. Ct. App. 2002) (emotional distress damages available for abuse of process, even if misconduct, here distant forum abuse, not outrageous enough to support intentional infliction of emotional distress claim) (Cal. Ct. App. 2003); JCM Constr. Co. v. Orleans Parish Sch. Bd., 860 So. 2d 610 (La. Ct. App. 2003) ($100,000 emotional distress damages for malicious prosecution supported by evidence, where baseless lawsuit resulted in destruction of one-man construction company); Cmty. Bank v. Courtney, 884 So. 2d 767 (Miss. 2004) (conversion of heavy equipment; emotional distress damages require either showing of intentionally tortious conduct or "garden variety" negligence accompanied by "demonstrable mental or physical injury"); Wilson v. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp., 883 So. 2d 56 (Miss. 2004) (physical manifestation of injury or demonstrable physical harm required for emotional distress damages for ordinary negligence, but not where defendant's actions are outrageous); Adams v. U.S. Homecrafters, Inc., 744 So. 2d 736 (Miss. 1999) (must show demonstrable physical or mental injury that was reasonably foreseeable to recover emotional distress damages for negligence; worry and loss of sleep insufficient); Holm v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg. Co., 2016 WL 1579383 (Mo. Ct. App. Apr. 19, 2016) (affirming $200,000 emotional distress damages for wrongful foreclosure; medical testimony not required where the loss of a home was sufficient to make the existence of emotional distress "readily understandable"); Fix v. State Bank of Roscoe, 807 N.W.2d 612 (S.D. 2011) (emotional distress damages for abuse of process do not require showing of "extreme and disabling" distress); Tranum v. Broadway, 283 S.W.3d 403 (Tex. App. 2008) (affirming $250,000 mental anguish damages for slander per se based on false accusation of crime, as mental anguish is presumed, but reversing award of mental anguish damages for malicious prosecution because plaintiff's worry, concerned about what people would think of him, and consultation with physician not sufficient to show "substantial disruption of daily routine or a high degree of mental pain and distress"); EMC Mortg. Co. v. Jones, 252 S.W.3d 857 (Tex. App. 2008) (allowing damages for past but not future mental anguish in tort claim for unreasonable collection methods; evidence of insomnia and depression severe enough to require prescription medication, but no evidence that problems would continue). But see Jacobini v. J.P. Morgan Chase, 2012 WL 252437 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 26, 2012) (emotional distress damages not available on trespass claim). But cf. Blanche v. First Nationwide Mortg. Co., 74 S.W.3d 444 (Tex. App. 2002) (no emotional distress damages for negligence where plaintiffs did not allege malice, intent, or serious bodily injury, where no special relationship existed between the parties, and where the injuries were not so severe that mental anguish was a foreseeable result in action resulting from an inaccurate credit report). See generally Joel E. Smith, Annotation, Recovery of Damages for Mental Anguish, Distress, Suffering, or the Like in Action for Wrongful Attachment, Garnishment, Sequestration or Execution, 83 A.L.R.3d 598 (1978).

Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices (UDAP): See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 12.3.3.9 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

Violation of Bankruptcy Automatic Stay or Discharge Injunction: See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 9.6.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

Other: 42 Pa. Cons. Stat. § 8353(5) (emotional distress damages recoverable for wrongful use of civil proceedings, a statutory tort which combines elements of malicious prosecution and abuse of process); McCarter v. Bankers Trust Co., 543 S.E.2d 755 (Ga. Ct. App. 2000) (emotional distress damages available for wrongful foreclosure claim, but plaintiff must prove elements of intentional infliction of emotional distress); Cooper v. Cooper, 783 A.2d 430 (Vt. 2001) (in action for violation of fiduciary duty by wrongful foreclosure, plaintiff need not allege elements of intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress to obtain damages for emotional distress).

See generally § 2.6.2, supra.

152 See DeHart v. HomeEq Serv. Corp., 47 F. Supp. 3d 246 (E.D. Pa. 2014) (damages for emotional distress awardable in breach-of-contract action only if defendant's misconduct was outrageous enough to support intentional infliction of emotional distress claim; not shown here with mishandling of mortgage); Mills v. Equicredit Corp., 344 F. Supp. 2d 1071 (E.D. Mich. 2004) (emotional distress damages not available for breach of contract; tort claim, here intentional infliction of emotional distress, arising from breach of contract must allege breach of some duty independent of the contract), aff'd, 172 Fed. Appx. 652 (6th Cir. 2006); Sutherland v. Barclay's Am./Mortg. Corp., 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997) (no negligent infliction of emotional distress claim for mortgage's company's "inept" and "incompetent" handling of payment moratorium after earthquake; borrower's claim was, in effect, a breach-of-contract claim for which emotional distress damages are unavailable); LaMothe v. Auto Club Ins. Ass'n, 543 N.W.2d 42 (Mich. Ct. App. 1995) (no emotional distress damages for breach of contract unless there was tortious action independent of the breach of contract); UMLIC VP L.L.C. v. T.& M. Sales & Envtl. Sys., Inc., 176 S.W.3d 595 (Tex. App. 2005) (in absence of "special relationship," cause of action for improper conduct of foreclosure sale was contractual; damages for emotional distress or loss of business reputation not available). But see Hammer v. Residential Credit Solutions, Inc., 2014 WL 4477948 actions were intentional.[153] The standard of proof to recover emotional distress damages for other torts may be less stringent than for a claim of intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress.[154]

15.3 Invasion of Privacy

15.3.1 Overview

The right to privacy is recognized in some form in almost all jurisdictions.[155] Various statutes and regulations protect consumers' privacy, either generally or with respect to specific information, such as banking, health care, or receipt of public benefits.[156] Protection of confidential information is also required by the rules governing lawyers and health care professionals, among others.[157] The FDCPA and state debt collection statutes protect some privacy interests—for example, by limiting third party[158] and employment contacts[159] by debt collectors. The right to privacy has also received some constitutional protection.[160]

With a few exceptions,[161] most states also recognize a cause of action in tort for invasion of privacy.[162] A suit alleging an invasion of the right to privacy generally does not require a showing of either severe harm or physical harm to the plaintiff.[163] While (N.D. Ill. Sept. 11, 2014) (emotional distress damages may be available if breach of contract is wanton or reckless and caused bodily harm, or if defendant had reason to know when the contract was made that its breach would cause more than pecuniary loss; here servicer's egregious breach of loan modification contract, with evidence of pecuniary losses and "steady decline in health"); Sinclair v. Donovan, 2011 WL 5326093 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 4, 2011) (emotional distress damages for breach of contract if the breach either causes physical injury or "is of such a kind that serious emotional disturbance was a particularly likely result"); Wilson v. Houston Funeral Home, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 169 (Cal. Ct. App. 1996) (allowing emotional distress damages against funeral director whose acts amounted to breach of contract's implied covenant to provide a dignified burial service). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Warranty Law § 10.5.3.3 (5th ed. 2015), updated at www.nclc.org/library (emotional distress damages for warranty claims).

153 Osbourne v. Capital City Mortg. Corp., 667 A.2d 1321 (D.C. 1995) (breach of contract and UDAP counts alleged for bank's misrepresentation of loan payoff amount and various accounting errors and excessive charges, which sabotaged consumers' efforts to refinance the loan; if misrepresentation intentional, consumers may recover for emotional distress alone; if negligent, they may not); Cmty. Bank v. Courtney, 884 So. 2d 767 (Miss. 2004) (emotional distress damages require either showing of intentionally tortious conduct or "garden variety" negligence accompanied by "demonstrable mental or physical injury"); Fix v. State Bank of Roscoe, 807 N.W.2d 612 (S.D. 2011) (emotional distress damages for intentional tort, other than intentional infliction of emotional distress, do not require showing of "extreme and disabling" distress); Johnson v. Marcel, 465 S.E.2d 815 (Va. 1996) (emotional distress damages available where landlord's trespass was "deliberate and accompanied by aggravating circumstances," here, tearing the phone out of the wall and making loud scenes at night).

154 See, e.g., Yu v. Signet Bank/Virginia, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 516 (Cal. Ct. App. 2002) (emotional distress damages available for abuse of process, even if misconduct, here distant forum abuse, not outrageous enough to support intentional infliction of emotional distress claim) (Cal. Ct. App. 2003).

155 Eli A. Meltz, No Harm, No Foul? Attempted Invasion of Privacy and the Tort of Intrusion upon Seclusion, 83 Fordham L. Rev. 3431, 3440 (May 2015) (state-by-state survey; "vast majority" of states recognize intrusion upon seclusion as a tort).

156 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 18.4.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

157 See Gaylor v. Hobdy, 2003 WL 23024802 (Cal. Ct. App. Dec. 30, 2003) (client stated claims for breach of fiduciary duty and intentional infliction of emotional distress against attorney who disclosed privileged information in course of fee dispute); In re Huffman, 983 P.2d 534 (Or. 1999) (two-year suspension of attorney for misconduct during attempt to collect fee, including revelation of client secrets).

158 See § 5.7, supra.

159 See § 5.6, supra.

160 See Stanley v. Georgia, 394 U.S. 557, 89 S. Ct. 1243, 22 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1969) (right to keep pornography in home without state seizure); Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479, 85 S. Ct. 1678, 14 L. Ed. 2d 510 (1965) (right to buy and use contraceptives); Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Serv., Inc., 2009 WL 6527758 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 23, 2009) (California's constitutional right to privacy covers personal financial information; communicating information by selling debt to debt buyer after it was fully paid violated reasonable expectations of privacy).

161 Hamlett v. Santander Consumer, USA, Inc., 931 F. Supp. 2d 451 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (New York does not recognize claim for intrusion on seclusion); Adams v. Martinsville DuPont Credit Union, 573 F. Supp. 2d 103 (D.D.C. 2008) (Virginia recognizes only misappropriation of name or likeness); Arthur v. Corporate Receivables, Inc., 2008 WL 4153683 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 5, 2008) (New York "has no common law of privacy"); Jones v. Commerce Bank, 2006 WL 2642153 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 15, 2006) (New York allows invasion-of-privacy action only for misuse of name or likeness for advertising purposes).

162 See, e.g., Gomez v. Foster & Garbus, L.L.P., 2019 WL 5418090 (D.N.J. Oct. 22, 2019) (New Jersey recognizes all four torts, and applies Restatement definitions; freezing or levying a bank account with knowledge of mistaken identity would support claim of intrusion on seclusion); Land v. Green Tree Serv., L.L.C., 2014 WL 5527854, at *6 (D.S.C. Oct. 31, 2014) (S.C. recognizes wrongful appropriation of personalty, publicizing of private affairs, and intrusion into private affairs); Brandt v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2010 WL 582051 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 19, 2010) (Florida recognizes intrusion-on-seclusion claim arising from harassing debt collection calls); Browning v. AT&T Corp., 682 F. Supp. 2d 832 (N.D. Ill. 2009) (Illinois recognizes all four forms of invasion of privacy); Rodgers v. McCullough, 296 F. Supp. 2d 895 (W.D. Tenn. 2003) (Tennessee recognizes all four privacy subtorts); Parnoff v. Aquarion Water Co., 204 A.3d 717 (Conn. Ct. App. 2019) (Connecticut recognizes all four privacy torts; noting lack of authority on definition of intrusion and applying Restatement standard, but holding that water company's entry on rural land to inspect hydrant and investigate theft was neither unreasonable nor offensive); Lawlor v. N. Am. Corp., 983 N.E.2d 414 (Ill. 2012) (recognizing tort of intrusion on seclusion); Barner v. Krohle, 2006 WL 3028766 (Ohio Ct. App. Oct. 26, 2006) (Ohio recognizes all four subtorts); Howard v. Aspen Way Enterprises, 406 P.3d 1271 (Wyo. 2017) (Wyoming recognizes tort of intrusion on seclusion, using Restatement definition; listing states that recognize tort). Cf. Krasnor v. Spaulding Law Office, 675 F. Supp. 2d 208 (D. Mass. 2009) (noting cases suggesting that Massachusetts recognizes cause of action for intrusion on seclusion). See generally Eli A. Meltz, No Harm, No Foul? Attempted Invasion of Privacy and the Tort of Intrusion upon Seclusion, 83 Fordham L. Rev. 3431, 3440 (May 2015) (state-by-state survey; "vast majority" of states recognize intrusion upon seclusion as a tort).

163 See, e.g., Panahiasl v. Gurney, 2007 WL 738642 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 8, 2007) (continuous abusive debt collection calls, resulting in emotional distress, sufficient to show intrusion on seclusion); Pulla v. Amoco Oil Co., 882 F. Supp. 836 (S.D. Iowa 1994) (while defendant's actions must be highly offensive to a reasonable person, resulting injury need not be severe), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 72 F.3d 648 invasion of privacy is an intentional tort,[164] malice usually need not be pleaded except to support punitive damages.[165]

The key element of this tort is unreasonable conduct that would be offensive (or "highly offensive" in some states) to a person of ordinary sensibilities.[166] Whether an invasion is highly offensive may depend upon whether the plaintiff has a reasonable expectation of privacy in the place or subject matter involved.[167] Courts generally recognize that creditors have a right to use reasonable means to collect their debts, but they balance this right against the consumer's right to privacy.[168] Courts require that conduct, in order to be tortious, (8th Cir. 1995); Welker v. Southern Baptist Hosp. of Fla., Inc., 864 So. 2d 1178 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2004) (invasion of privacy a recognized exception to impact rule, because emotional distress reasonably foreseeable and causation "relatively straightforward"), decision quashed and remanded on other grounds, 908 So. 2d 317 (Fla. 2005); Fischer v. Hooper, 732 A.2d 396 (N.H. 1999) (invasion of privacy does not require a showing of severe distress, only "emotional distress or personal humiliation . . . of a kind that normally results from such an invasion and . . . is normal and reasonable in its extent"; expert testimony not required). But see Dobson v. Sprint Nextel Corp., 2014 WL 553314 (D. Nev. Feb. 10, 2014) (for false-light claim, must show physical injuries, physical impact, or emotional distress that causes physical injury or illness). But cf. Isgett v. North Star Location Services, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4072094 (D.S.C. July 2, 2015) (must show "serious mental or physical injury or humiliation"); Minter v. AAA Cook County Consolidation, 2004 WL 1630781 (N.D. Ill. July 19, 2004) (claim of intrusion on seclusion requires proof of "anguish and suffering" that is "actual injury in the form of . . . medical care, an inability to sleep or work, or a loss of reputation and integrity in the community"; anger, frustration, and embarrassment resulting from alleged misuse of credit report were insufficient).

164 See Gamble v. Fradkin & Weber, P.A., 846 F. Supp. 2d 377 (D. Md. 2012) (showing of intent required; claim fails because no allegation that debt buyer's attorney actually knew that debt had been discharged in bankruptcy); Mirfendereski v. Rakestraw, 2011 WL 3584325 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 15, 2011) (negligence not sufficient; here, collection letter sent to similarly named, non-debtor brother). See also Cable v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 2012 WL 5966542 (M.D. Pa. Nov. 29, 2012) (intrusion on seclusion is an intentional tort, but collector's failure to correct its telephone system, which erroneously routed return calls from angry debtors to plaintiff's home number for over a year after being notified may amount to intent). But see Smith v. A.B. Bonded Locksmith, 757 N.E.2d 1242 (Ohio Ct. App. 2001) (can be either intentional or negligent).

165 Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 652B (requiring that intrusion on seclusion be intentional, but without requiring malice), 652C (listing no state of mind requirement for tort of appropriation of name or likeness), 652E (requiring showing of knowledge or recklessness for false-light tort) (1977). But see Boese v. Paramount Pictures Corp., 952 F. Supp. 550 (N.D. Ill. 1996) (actual malice is element of false-light claim in Illinois); Barrett v. Fonorow, 799 N.E.2d 916 (Ill. App. Ct. 2003) (actual malice is element). But cf. Hahn v. Satullo, 806 N.E.2d 567 (Ohio Ct. App. 2004) (showing of malice necessary to overcome immunity of attorney for acts performed while representing third party).

166 See, e.g., Herrera v. AllianceOne Receivables, Inc., 2016 WL 7048318 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 15, 2016) (vigorous collection efforts continued after collector knew of court order holding that plaintiff, whose name was similar to that of real debtor, was not liable for the debt); Reid v. LVNV Funding, 2016 WL 247571 (D. Utah Jan. 20, 2016) (highly offensive conduct alleged: after thief opened credit card account using plaintiff's Social Security number, collector told plaintiff's employer that she was using an alias, obtained her employment records, demanded large amounts of personal information from her, and refused to investigate or release garnishment); Barton v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2012 WL 4449860 (D. Minn. Sept. 26, 2012) (fact question whether accessing credit report without valid purpose was highly offensive; issue whether loan servicer reasonably believed its action was permissible); Quinlan v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2012 WL 2401380 (E.D. Cal. June 22, 2012) (whether calls and letters are highly offensive is fact-sensitive; here giving weight to fact that debt was allegedly not owed, and that consumers were put in fear of losing their home); Duncan v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2011 WL 5359698 (S.D. W. Va. Nov. 4, 2011) (fact issue whether numerous calls after request to cease contact were highly offensive); Jones v. U.S. Child Support Recovery, 961 F. Supp. 1518 (D. Utah 1997) (intrusion must be substantial and highly offensive to reasonable person); Nation v. Dep't of Correction, 158 P.3d 953, 964 (Idaho 2007) (public disclosure of private facts); Froelich v. Adair, 516 P.2d 993, 998 (Kan. 1973) (intrusion on seclusion); Swarthout v. Mut. Serv. Life Ins. Co., 632 N.W.2d 741 (Minn. Ct. App. 2001) (fact issue whether conduct highly offensive: insurance company altered release, enabling it to obtain information from several medical providers although consumer authorized contact with only one doctor); State v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court, 42 P.3d 233, 240 (Nev. 2002) (public disclosure of private facts); Remsburg v. Docusearch, Inc., 816 A.2d 1001, 1008 (N.H. 2003) (intrusion on seclusion); Munley v. ISC Fin. House, Inc., 584 P.2d 1336 (Okla. 1978) (must be "highly offensive to a reasonable person"); Rodriguez v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 52 S.W.3d 814 (Tex. App. 2001) (store's unintentional submission of wrong name to district attorney for bad check prosecution due to flaws in its system for handling business checks not highly offensive, so invasion of privacy not shown), rev'd in part on other grounds, 92 S.W.3d 502 (Tex. 2002). See also Semper v. JBC Legal Group, 2005 WL 2172377 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 6, 2005) (fact issue whether reporting as undisputed a sharply disputed bad check claim was "highly offensive"); Farrar v. Centerpoint Energy Resources Corp., 269 So. 3d 1149 (La. Ct. App. 2019) (applying balancing test; potential for abuse of receiver-transmitter installed on gas meter was not sufficient to outweigh cost savings to utility). See generally Jeffrey F. Ghent, Annotation, Unsolicited Mailing, Distribution, House Call, or Telephone Call As Invasion of Privacy, 56 A.L.R.3d 457 (1974); J. L. Litwin, Annotation, Public Disclosure of Person's Indebtedness As Invasion of Privacy, 33 A.L.R.3d 154 (1970).

167 Safari Club Int'l v. Rudolph, 862 F.3d 1113 (9th Cir. 2017) (invasion of privacy sufficiently alleged; false friend surreptitiously recorded conversation in restaurant; "privacy is relative . . . one can harbor an objectively reasonable expectation of privacy in a public location"); Luis v. Zang, 833 F.3d 619 (6th Cir. 2016) (installing spyware on computer in violation of state and federal statutes; reasonable expectation of privacy and wrongful intrusion sufficiently alleged).

168 See, e.g., Peterson v. Aaron's, Inc., 2017 WL 4390260 (N.D. Ga. Oct. 3, 2017) (use of software to locate or disable leased computer after theft or non-payment would be reasonable, but accessing user's data was not; fact issue whether accessing law firm's files was highly offensive); Bell v. Bank of Am., 2017 WL 380930 (M.D. Ga. Jan. 26, 2017) (in absence of physical intrusion, Georgia allows cause of action only for "a course of hounding" or "unreasonable surveillance . . . which is intended to frighten or torment the subject, not surveillance reasonably limited and designed to obtain information needed for a legitimate purpose; ascertaining debtor's new cell phone number was not unreasonable); Gamble v. Midland Funding, 2013 WL 979202 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 7, 2013) (fact issue whether harassment and baseless lawsuit for debt not owed went beyond "reasonable measures"); Pariscoff v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 2013 WL 3776589 (S.D. Ohio July 16, 2013) (issue is whether calls are "unreasonable action in pursuing the debtor," measured by the effect on a person of ordinary sensibilities; fact issue here as to number and pattern of calls); Puttner v. Debt Consultants of Am., 2009 WL 1604570 (S.D. Cal. June 4, 2009) (dismissing with leave to amend because of failure to allege that number and content of calls was sufficiently offensive to overcome creditor's limited privilege to attempt collection); Poltrock v. N.J. Auto. Accounts Mgmt., Co., 2008 WL 5416396, at *4–7 (D.N.J. Dec. 22, 2008) (balancing creditor's interest transgress "reasonable bounds."[169] Indeed, most successful cases involve conduct that a sympathetic person would consider outrageous.

Some courts recognize a privilege defense for legal proceedings.[170] For invasion-of-privacy claims involving credit reporting agencies, a provision of the Fair Credit Reporting Act may require proof of malice or willful intent to injure the consumer, if the disclosure giving rise to the claim falls within one of four designated categories.[171] The application of the invasion-of-privacy tort in the credit reporting context is discussed in more detail in NCLC's Fair Credit Reporting.[172]

Invasion of privacy encompasses not just one tort, but a complex of four distinct torts: intrusion upon seclusion, publicity placing a person in a false light, publicity given to private life, and appropriation of name or likeness.[173] The first three of these torts are likely to be applicable to collection abuses and are discussed in more detail in the next subsections.

15.3.2 Intrusion Upon the Debtor's Right to Seclusion

The tort known as intrusion upon the right to seclusion occurs in the debt collection context under the following circumstances:

- The collector intrudes upon the debtor's privacy;
- The intrusion is highly offensive under the reasonable person standard;
- The intrusion is without, or in excess of, privilege; and
- The intrusion is effected through speech, writing, or conduct.[174]

Publication is not an element of the tort of intrusion upon the right to seclusion.[175] The courts balance the creditor's in speedy and orderly collection of debt with debtor's privacy interest; debtor has no invasion-of-privacy claim against former employer who contacted third parties listed in his employment file while attempting to collect debt); Lowe v. Surpas Res. Corp., 253 F. Supp. 2d 1209 (D. Kan. 2003) (intrusion on seclusion difficult to prove in debt collection because collector has right to take "reasonable steps"); Parish Nat'l Bank v. Lane, 397 So. 2d 1282 (La. 1981) (court may allow judgment creditor's entry upon debtor's home site for an appraisal to determine if any property there is non-exempt; not an unreasonable invasion of debtor's privacy); Hairford v. Centurytel, Inc., 856 So. 2d 139 (La. Ct. App. 2003) ("[w]hether or not a debt is justly due, the debtor has a right to be free from unreasonable violations of his right to privacy in his personal affairs"; conduct is actionable if creditor "coerces the debtor or seriously abridges the obligor's right to privacy"); Household Fin. Corp. v. Bridge, 250 A.2d 878, 884 (Md. 1969) ("the question of how far a creditor may go to collect his debt must be decided on the individual facts of each case, but usually on the ground of reasonableness"); Havens-Tobias v. Eagle, 2003 WL 1601461 (Ohio Ct. App. Mar. 28, 2003) (negotiating with consumers' attorney and filing a lawsuit fell far short of "campaign of harassment" needed to support intrusion-on-seclusion claim); Cook v. Carrigan & Mains Funeral Home, Inc., 607 N.E.2d 466 (Ohio Ct. App. 1992) (judgment creditor who, pursuant to statute, obtained court order for examination of debtor and who confined his inquiries to the scope of the statute was not subject to action for invasion of privacy). See also Contreras v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 2964012 (N.D. Cal. July 12, 2017) (noting collector's privilege to make calls; whether telephone harassment that is sufficient to violate FDCPA and Rosenthal Act also amounts to intrusion on seclusion depends on facts; fact question for trial where collector made 383 mostly unanswered collection calls, including calls to debtor's minor children, despite repeated requests to stop).

169 May v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 852 F.3d 806 (8th Cir. 2018) (Mo. Law; affirming award of $400,000 punitive damages; where compensatory damages were $50,000 against lender who was aware of its error in calculating amount due after mortgage paid down in chapter 13 plan, but stonewalled consumer's attempts to correct error, engaged in harsh collection attempts, and wrongfully attempted to foreclose); Schwartz-Earp v. Advanced Call Ctr. Tech., Inc., 2016 WL 899149 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 9, 2016) (because creditor has qualified privilege to seek payment, claim based on phone calls must show "outrageous and unreasonable means" that "go beyond all reasonable bounds of decency"; 134 calls, as many as five per day, not sufficient); Shuler v. Ingram & Assoc., 710 F. Supp. 2d 1213 (N.D. Ala. 2010) (must show activity that "exceeds the bounds of reasonableness"; number, frequency and content of calls here not sufficient to state a claim), aff'd, 441 Fed. Appx. 712 (11th Cir. 2011); Lowe v. Surpas Res. Corp., 253 F. Supp. 2d 1209, 1237–1239 (D. Kan. 2003); Hairford v. Centurytel, Inc., 2003 WL 22244793 (La. Ct. App. Oct. 1, 2003) ("improper and unreasonable so as to be considered intentionally coercive"); Ellis v. Safety Ins. Co., 672 N.E.2d 979 (Mass. App. Ct. 1996) (invasion of privacy must be unreasonable and either serious or substantial; allegations that insurance adjuster followed claimant and her mother and made numerous phone calls to them at home and at work, some of which included offensive racial remarks, created jury question). See also Isgett v. North Star Location Services, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4072094 (D.S.C. July 2, 2015) (showing of "a blatant and shocking disregard of [plaintiff's] rights" is necessary; sufficiently alleged here by relentless phone calls from six different numbers, multiple daily calls to home and cell phone, including robocalls in violation of TCPA). Cf. Malverty v. Equifax Info. Services, L.L.C., 407 F. Supp. 3d 1257 (M.D. Fla. 2019) (not offensive to repeatedly report that live consumer is deceased).

170 Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 652F, 652G (1977) (absolute and conditional privileges in defamation cases also apply to invasion of privacy). See § 15.1.3.1, supra.

171 15 U.S.C. § 1681h(e) See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting §§ 6.11, 10.4, 10.5.3, 18.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

This provision differs from the Fair Credit Reporting Act's preemption provision, 15 U.S.C. § 1681t, which is the subject of conflicting court interpretations and is discussed in detail in National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 10.7 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

172 National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 18.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

173 Dan B. Dobbs, Paul T. Hayden, and Eileen M. Bubeck, The Law of Torts vol. 3, ch. 45, § 578, at 354 (2d ed. 2011); Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652A (1977). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 18.3.5 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (application of tort of appropriation of name or likeness in credit reporting context).

174 See Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 652A (setting forth elements), 652F, 652G (privileges) (1977).

175 Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652B cmt. a (1977). See In re Trans Union Corp., Privacy Litig., 326 F. Supp. 2d 893 (N.D. Ill. 2004) (gist of intrusion on seclusion is intrusion, not publicity; not shown where company accessed its own data to prepare and sell mailing lists); Fisher v. Hyundai Motor Fin. Co., 2002 WL 47968 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 11, 2002) (unreasonable contacts with co-workers, employer, and credit union not intrusion on seclusion; injury must result from the intrusion, not the publication). See also Trundle v. Homeside Lending, Inc., 162 F. Supp. 2d 396 (D. Md. 2001) (publicizing negative credit information right to collect the debt against the consumer's expectation of freedom from collection efforts. This tort overlaps with other invasion-of-privacy torts.

The following cases illustrate actionable intrusions:

- Repeated[176] or particularly offensive[177] calls; not intrusion on seclusion where it was obtained from public records, not from a source in which consumer expected privacy); Sofka v. Thal, 662 S.W.2d 502 (Mo. 1983). But see Sampaio v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 6800161 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 14, 2009) (Florida recognizes invasion-of-privacy claim only for physical invasion or widespread publicity). But cf. Craig v. Andrew Aaron & Assoc., 947 F. Supp. 208 (D.S.C. 1996) (where intrusion on seclusion, here offensive phone calls at home, was unaccompanied by the publication of embarrassing facts, claimant must show serious mental or physical injury or humiliation; allegations of distress and humiliation were insufficient).

176 See, e.g., St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Green Tree Fin. Corp., 249 F.3d 389 (5th Cir. 2001) (Tex. law; cause of action for invasion of privacy available to challenge frequent and abusive debt collection calls); Doe v. Siddeiqui, 2018 WL 3956292 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 17, 2018) (repeated phone calls may be sufficient to support intrusion on seclusion claim); Diehl v. Money Source, Inc., 2018 WL 2995721 (S.D. Ala. June 13, 2018) (unreasonable debt collection efforts, including phone calls, will support claim for intrusion on seclusion); O'Dell v. USAA Fed. Sav. Bank, 2018 WL 1701973 (S.D. W. Va. Apr. 5, 2018) (must show numerous calls in short time frame or calls at inappropriate hours); Hartley v. 21st Mortg. Corp., 2017 WL 4322430 (W.D. W. Va. Sept. 28, 2017) (refusing to dismiss invasion of privacy claim against creditor that made over 300 calls, seeking to collect debt not owed); Messina v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 210 F. Supp. 3d 992 (N.D. Ill. 2016) (jury question whether making 158 calls over four months is highly offensive); Baldwin v. Monterey Fin. Services, Inc., 2016 WL 5723734 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 30, 2016) (jury question whether making 86 collection calls and sending three emails over 166 days is invasion of privacy); Isgett v. North Star Location Services, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4072094 (D.S.C. July 2, 2015) (refusing to dismiss claim alleging relentless phone calls from six different numbers, multiple daily calls to home and cell phone, including robocalls in violation of TCPA); McFaul v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 232601 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 20, 2014) (numerous calls threatening foreclosure for debt that had been fully paid off may amount to actionable intrusion on seclusion even without allegations of yelling, cursing, or bullying); Corson v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2013 WL 4047577 (D.N.J. Aug. 9, 2013) (two months of daily phone calls to non-debtor, seeking location information for relative who did not live with plaintiff, offensive enough to support claim); Pariscoff v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 2013 WL 3776589 (S.D. Ohio July 16, 2013) (issue is whether calls are "unreasonable action in pursuing the debtor," measured by the effect on a person of ordinary sensibilities; fact issue here as to number and pattern of calls); Beal v. Wyndham Vacation Resorts, Inc., 956 F. Supp. 2d 962 (W.D. Wis. 2013) (100 phone calls after being told to cease contact are highly offensive); Humphrey v. U.S. Bank, NA, 2012 WL 3686272 (N.D. Okla. Aug. 24, 2012) (Restatement standard: twenty-five to thirty calls per day, over a period of months, for hotly disputed debt, sufficient to allege "a course of hounding"); Shupe v. J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, 2012 WL 1344786 (D. Ariz. Apr. 18, 2012) (need not show extreme and outrageous conduct; 100 phone calls sufficient to state claim for highly offensive conduct); Zirena v. Capital One Bank, 2012 WL 843489 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 2, 2012) (100 phone calls in one month to non-debtor's cell phone were highly offensive; not clear whether simple wrong number or identity theft); Smith v. J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, 2011 WL 5373969 (D. Nev. Nov. 4 2011) (telephone harassment of borrowers by lender that was egregiously mishandling loan modification); Duncan v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2011 WL 5359698 (S.D. W. Va. Nov. 4, 2011) (fact issue whether numerous calls after request to cease contact were highly offensive; giving phone number to creditor not blanket permission to call whenever it chose); Gray v. Chase Bank, 2011 WL 4716232 (S.D. W. Va. Oct. 7, 2011) (fact issue whether 594 calls, only four of which resulted in conversation, were highly offensive; giving phone number to creditor does not waive right to privacy); Sewell v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 2011 WL 32209 (E.D. Tenn. Jan. 5, 2011) (harassing calls at home; also employer contact); Basset v. IC Sys., Inc., 715 F. Supp. 2d 803, 814 (N.D. Ill. 2010) (series of 31 collection calls not unauthorized where consumer owed debt and did not make written demand to stop, so no invasion of privacy); Brandt v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2010 WL 582051 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 19, 2010) (Florida recognizes intrusion-on-seclusion claim arising from harassing debt collection calls; fact issue here as to number and pattern); Krasnor v. Spaulding Law Office, 675 F. Supp. 2d 208 (D. Mass. 2009) (harassing calls and false threats); Fausto v. Credigy Serv. Corp., 598 F. Supp. 2d 1049 (N.D. Cal. 2009) (number and content of phone calls, for debt allegedly not owed, sufficient to raise fact issue as to offensiveness); Campbell v. Triad Fin. Corp., 2007 WL 2973598 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 9, 2007) (numerous phone calls, including accusation of crime, and one nighttime visit sufficient to state claim for intrusion on seclusion); Panahiasl v. Gurney, 2007 WL 738642 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 8, 2007) (continuous abusive debt collection calls, resulting in emotional distress, sufficient to show intrusion on seclusion); Joseph v. J.J. MacIntyre Cos., L.L.C., 281 F. Supp. 2d 1156 (N.D. Cal. 2003) (numerous calls on same day to sick older consumer); Norris v. Moskin Stores, Inc., 132 So. 2d 321 (Ala. 1961); Hairford v. Centurytel, Inc., 856 So. 2d 139 (La. Ct. App. 2003) (numerous calls, threats to cut off phone service of older consumer for debt not owed); Housh v. Peth, 133 N.E.2d 340 (Ohio 1956). Cf. Charvat v. NMP, L.L.C., 656 F.3d 440, 452–453 (6th Cir. 2011) (Ohio law; repeated telemarketing calls, especially after do-not-call request, may be invasion of privacy). But see Baemmert v. Credit One Bank, 2017 WL 4804365 (W.D. Wis. Oct. 24, 2017) (invasion of privacy claim will not lie for harassing phone calls; physical intrusion must be shown); Ferguson v. Innovate Loan Servicing Co., 2019 WL 4804272 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 7, 2017) (telephone harassment can never support an intrusion on seclusion claim; must show surveillance or physical trespass), adopted, 2019 WL 8277249 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 4, 2019); Benedict v. State Farm Bank, 709 S.E.2d 314 (Ga. Ct. App. 2011) (more than 100 harassing calls insufficient; must show physical intrusion or surveillance; calls might suffice if they became "a substantial burden on [plaintiff's] existence). But cf. Jones v. Option One Mortg., 466 Fed. Appx. 449 (6th Cir. 2012) (multiple calls per day not invasion of privacy under Ohio law where landlord had multiple delinquent loans for multiple properties); Petri v. Valarity, L.L.C., 2015 WL 7253061 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 17, 2015) (confounding the elements of intrusion upon seclusion with those of public disclosure of private facts; repeated telephone calls insufficient); Smith v. Capital One Fin. Corp., 2012 WL 3138024 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 1, 2012) (twelve calls to home over considerable period of time, one with bad language, not sufficient to allege pattern of harassment); McEndree v. Rash, Curtis & Assoc., 2012 WL 1640465 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 9, 2012) (calls to cell phone with caller ID, which were refused by debtor, not highly offensive); Carlson v. First Revenue Assurance, 2002 WL 31866305 (D. Minn. Dec. 19, 2002) (six letters in five months and one threat to investigate assets not highly offensive), aff'd on other grounds, 359 F.3d 1015 (8th Cir. 2004); Shuler v. Ingram & Assoc., 710 F. Supp. 2d 1213 (N.D. Ala. 2010) (series of calls not invasion of privacy where callers accurately described collection remedies and it was debtor who made unreasonable demands and used profanity), aff'd, 441 Fed. Appx. 712 (11th Cir. 2011); Oppenheim v. IC Sys., Inc., 695 F. Supp. 2d 1303 (M.D. Fla. 2010) (applying intentional infliction of emotional distress standard to find telephone harassment insufficient to state claim), aff'd on other grounds, 2010 WL 4940015 (11th Cir. Dec. 7, 2010); Robinson v. Managed Accounts Receivable, Inc., 654 F. Supp. 2d 1051 (C.D. Cal. 2009) (one collection call and one phone message at home insufficient); Fabio v. Credit Bureau, 210 F.R.D. 688 (D. Minn. 2002) (single telephone call from debt collector in which

- Intrusive visits to the debtor's home;[178]
- Contacts with a debtor who is represented by an attorney[179] or has requested that the contacts cease;[180] collector used offensive language not highly offensive); Mlynek v. Household Fin. Corp., 2000 WL 1310666 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 11, 2000) (one angry phone call to consumer's home and rude response to consumer's calls not sufficient; unwanted calls must be persistent); Windsor v. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp., 323 So. 2d 350 (Ala. 1975) (calling and visiting debtor at home fifteen to twenty times over two-year period not actionable intrusion); Woods v. SunTrust Bank, 81 So. 3d 357 (Ala. Civ. App. 2011) (numerous phone calls to home of sick, older debtors, taken by their caregivers and relayed to their daughter, did not invade daughter's privacy); Sofka v. Thal, 662 S.W.2d 502 (Mo. 1983) (eight polite telephone calls over several months to collect $142.99 not unreasonable intrusion upon seclusion; not sufficient to allege that calls awakened debtor). See generally Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652B, cmt. d (debt collection calls amount to invasion of privacy "when the telephone calls are repeated with such persistence and frequency as to amount to a course of hounding the plaintiff, that becomes a substantial burden to his existence").

177 See, e.g., Dorris v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2013 WL 1209629 (D. Md. Mar. 22, 2013) (calls may support claim either by number or by "vicious quality"; obscene language and name-calling in single call were sufficient). See also Winberry v. United Collection Bureau, Inc., 697 F. Supp. 2d 1279 (M.D. Ala. 2010) (fact issue whether thirty-three calls in one month, using "coarse language" and threats, with knowledge that debtor was injured and unable to work, were highly offensive); Summit Loans, Inc. v. Pecola, 288 A.2d 114 (Md. 1972) (repeated, abusive phone calls, aggravated by threats of harm to children). But see Gibson v. Rosenthal, Stein & Assoc., 2013 WL 3367255 (N.D. Ga. July 3, 2013) (threatening call, here false threat of arrest, not sufficient, must show either "physical intrusion analogous to trespass [or] surveillance or monitoring of [p]laintiff's activities"); Hutchens v. West Asset Mgmt., Inc., 2013 WL 1337178 (S.D. W. Va. Mar. 29, 2013) (falsely claiming to be sheriff's officer and false threats of arrest in effort to collect debt that had already been settled, not highly offensive enough to support intrusion-on-seclusion claim); Neeley v. Wells Fargo Fin., Inc., 2012 WL 5949106 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 28, 2012) (rude and belligerent calls, some at inconvenient hours or at work, continuing after consumer known to be represented, not offensive enough); Household Fin. Corp. v. Bridge, 250 A.2d 878 (Md. 1969) (reversing damages award where only contacts with consumer were sporadic calls over eleven months and a false threat of jail that was dispelled by counsel).

178 See, e.g., Musenge v. SmartWay of the Carolinas, Inc., 2018 WL 4440718 (W.D.N.C. Sept. 17, 2018) (pounding on door and twisting knob; also sent unwanted texts and confronted consumer at work); Robertson v. Horton Bros. Recovery, Inc., 2007 WL 2009703 (D. Del. July 3, 2007) (early morning confrontation at consumer's home, false threats of arrest, numerous rude phone calls); Osborne v. Minnesota Recovery Bureau, 59 U.C.C. Rep. Serv. 2d 879 (D. Minn. 2006) (claim stated where repossessors entered on residential property at night, after being turned away during day, and shone flashlight into garage, causing consumer to fear attack by burglars); Holland v. GMAC Mortg. Co., 2006 WL 1133224 (D. Kan. Apr. 26, 2006) (where delinquency was result of lender's error, frequent phone calls, notes on door, and creditor's employee sitting in car watching house were highly offensive); Wal-Mart Stores v. Lee, 74 S.W.3d 634 (Ark. 2002) (upholding verdict against employer who made extremely lengthy and intrusive search of employee's home for stolen merchandise without valid consent); Mauri v. Smith, 929 P.2d 307 (Or. 1996) (jury question whether entering apartment without residents' consent was invasion of privacy). But see Laccinole v. Assad, 2016 WL 868511 (D.R.I. Mar. 7, 2016) (action that takes place in public, even close to plaintiff's home, cannot be intrusion on seclusion; claim fails where process server knocked on door, showed a badge, and demanded that debtor come out); Rodriguez v. Due Process of Mich., Inc., 2008 WL 4449651 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 30, 2008) (no intrusion-on-seclusion claim arising from process servers' misconduct at consumer's home, because no discovery of secret or private matter); In re Residential Capital, L.L.C., 2016 WL 797901 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. Feb. 29, 2016) (no intrusion on seclusion where property service photographers shouted and harassed family sitting on outside balcony; balcony was not private place); Windsor v. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp., 323 So. 2d 350 (Ala. 1975) (calling and visiting debtor at home fifteen to twenty times over two-year period not actionable intrusion); Harris v. Carbonneau, 685 A.2d 296 (Vt. 1996) (allegation that process server entered house "wrongfully" and "against plaintiff's wishes" insufficient). But cf. Land v. Green Tree Serv., L.L.C., 2014 WL 5527854, at *6–7 (D.S.C. Oct. 31, 2014) (inspecting and photographing home for foreclosure purposes insufficient); Beal v. Wyndham Vacation Resorts, Inc., 956 F. Supp. 2d 962 (W.D. Wis. 2013) (simply serving process at debtor's home cannot support invasion-of-privacy claim); Shorter v. Retail Credit Co., 251 F. Supp. 329 (D.S.C. 1966) (no invasion of privacy by collector ignoring plaintiff's "no trespassing" sign, approaching plaintiff's house, questioning plaintiff regarding age, occupation, size of family, and fire insurance but causing no serious injury; collector did not reveal his identity until he was about to leave).

179 Rabal v. Huntington Nat'l Bank, 2015 WL 3540660 (S.D. W. Va. June 4, 2015) (harassing calls to represented debtor sufficient, but just barely, for state claim of intrusion on seclusion); Wrenn v. Bank of Am. Home Loans, L.P., 2013 WL 369611 (S.D. W. Va. Jan. 30, 2013) (continued phone calls to home and work, after being informed of counsel's contact information, sufficient to support claims for intrusion on seclusion); Ramsour v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2012 WL 6004230 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 30, 2012) (seventy calls after being told to communicate only with counsel, sufficient to raise fact issue as to intrusion on seclusion); Desmond v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., Ltd., 2010 WL 2710540 (W.D. Pa. July 8, 2010) (polite and non-deceptive calls and letters in attempt to collect deceased wife's credit card debt, continuing after recent widower asked for time to grieve and referred collectors to his attorney; issue whether "whole course of conduct" was highly offensive); Simmons v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 2010 WL 2635220 (S.D. Cal. June 29, 2010) (allegation of repeated and continuous phone calls to represented consumers, resulting in "great mental and physical pain" sufficient to state claim for intrusion on seclusion); Chaconas v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 713 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (S.D. Cal. May 10, 2010) (300 calls to older, represented debtors, plus written correspondence and unauthorized third-party contact); Thompson v. Chase Bank, 2010 WL 1329061 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 30, 2010) (259 calls, up to ten or twelve per day, after receipt of attorney's cease contact letter).

180 Varnado v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 43 F. Supp. 3d 985 (N.D. Cal. 2014) (three to five calls per day for disputed debt, continuing after written demand to cease contact; use of automated dialer and spoofing to evade caller ID); Erickson v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2011 WL 1869044 (D. Minn. May 16, 2011) (phone calls to home continued after debtors provided contact information for counsel and orally requested that collector cease contact); Campbell v. Triad Fin. Corp., 2007 WL 2973598 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 9, 2007) (calls at home and at work, continued after receipt of attorney's letter); Burkhalter v. Lindquist & Trudeau, Inc., 2005 WL 1983809 (E.D. Mo. Aug. 16, 2005) (claim stated by allegation of "systematic and continuous" communications to plaintiff's home after repeated no-contact requests); Household Credit Serv. v. Driscol, 989 S.W.2d 72 (Tex. App. 1998) (upholding $11,000,000 verdict with remittur of $1,000,000, for frequent calls at work and home, including vulgar language and threats, despite debtor's and employer's repeated requests that the calls cease). But see Hamberg v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2010 WL 2523947 (S.D. Cal. June 22, 2010) (allegation that collector continued contact after written request to cease communication and interrupted debtor with "intimidating language" stated claim for state debt collection act violation but not intrusion on seclusion).

- Calls or visits to the debtor at work,[181] in a hospital,[182] and in other places where collection efforts are or may become inappropriate;[183]
- Contacts with the debtor's employer;[184]
- Contacts with other third parties;[185]
- Collection attempts against victims of identity theft or other non-debtors,[186] or against debtors who are not in default;[187]

181 See, e.g., Bohannon-Hingston v. Brachfield Law Group, 2011 WL 6211756 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 2011) (frequent calls to workplace, conversation with manager in which personal information was disclosed, number of calls made it necessary for debtor to disclose her problem to boss and co-workers to explain why she received so many calls); Robinson v. Managed Accounts Receivable, Inc., 654 F. Supp. 2d 1051 (C.D. Cal. 2009) (repeated calls to workplace, here a military base, with actual knowledge that employer prohibited calls); Reyes v. Saxon Mortg. Co., 2009 WL 3738177 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 5, 2009) (multiple calls per day at home, work, and on cell phones); Campbell v. Triad Fin. Corp., 2007 WL 2973598 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 9, 2007) (calls at home and at work, continued after receipt of attorney's letter); Robertson v. Horton Bros. Recovery, Inc., 2007 WL 2009703 (D. Del. July 3, 2007) (harassment of consumer and co-workers at work); Purcell v. Universal Bank, 2003 WL 1962376 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 28, 2003) (close question whether collection calls to cardholder's small business, resulting from negligent failure to credit payment, were highly offensive); Fisher v. Quality Hyundai Motor Fin. Co., 2002 WL 47968 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 8, 2002) (threats and harassment in person and over telephone states claim); Pittman v. J.J. MacIntyre Co., 969 F. Supp. 609 (D. Nev. 1997) (collector's repeated calls to consumer's workplace stated claim); Kuhn v. Account Control Tech., Inc., 865 F. Supp. 1443 (D. Nev. 1994) (repeated and disruptive calls to consumer at work stated claim and supported punitive damages); Jacksonville State Bank v. Barnwell, 481 So. 2d 863 (Ala. 1985) (upholding $10,000 jury verdict for, inter alia, harassing phone calls, some at work after a request to stop, and loud offensive language causing job reprimands); Fernandez v. United Acceptance Corp., 610 P.2d 461 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1980) (numerous telephone calls to debtor's place of employment plus groundless threat to repossess family car); Housh v. Peth, 133 N.E.2d 340 (Ohio 1956) (affirming verdict for consumer based on general campaign of harassment at home and work); King v. Cashland, Inc., 2000 WL 1232768 (Ohio Ct. App. Sept. 1, 2000) (reversing summary judgment on invasion-of-privacy claim to creditor who sent calls and faxes to debtor's employer). But cf. Chlanda v. Wymard, 1995 WL 17917574 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 5, 1995) (one call on message machine at work, which employee of debtor retrieved, not actionable intrusion); Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Diffey, 378 So. 2d 1032 (La. Ct. App. 1979) (creditor who telephoned debtor at work and went to her workplace on her lunch hour was not coercive; creditor did not intrude on employment situation); Montgomery Ward v. Shope, 286 N.W.2d 806 (S.D. 1979) (no actionable intrusion where creditor had no way to contact debtor except at work; "collection efforts were commensurate with the circumstances").

182 See, e.g., Carey v. Statewide Fin. Co., 223 A.2d 405 (Conn. Cir. Ct. 1966) (repeated calls to home and hospital about debt not owed by consumer stated cause of action).

183 See, e.g., K-Mart Corp. v. Weston, 530 So. 2d 736 (Ala. 1988) (store employee told customer in front of others that check could not be honored due to prior bad check, which store knew had not been dishonored due to fault of consumer).

184 See, e.g., Reid v. LVNV Funding, 2016 WL 247571 (D. Utah Jan. 20, 2016) (after thief opened credit card account using plaintiff's Social Security number, collector informed plaintiff's employer that she owed a judgment debt and was using an alias); Bohannon-Hingston v. Brachfield Law Group, 2011 WL 6211756 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 2011) (frequent calls to workplace and conversation with manager in which personal information was disclosed); Weakley v. Redline Recovery Serv., 723 F. Supp. 2d 1341 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (collector, who had contact information for debtor, repeatedly contacted debtor-marine's superior officers, discussed debt, described debtor as dishonest, and was rude to officers), clarified, 2010 WL 3033801 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 2, 2010); Davis v. Creditors' Interchange Receivable Mgmt., L.L.C., 585 F. Supp. 2d 968 (N.D. Ohio 2008) (false threats of arrest and garnishment, workplace and family contacts, and repeated calls to consumers known to be represented sufficient); Booty v. Am. Fin. Corp., 224 So. 2d 512 (La. Ct. App. 1969) (creditor's ten telephone calls and several letters to offices of debtor's employer plus threats to debtor to see him fired from every available job). But see Sparks v. Phillips Cohen & Assoc., Ltd., 641 F. Supp. 2d 1234 (S.D. Ala. 2008) (single phone call to debtor's employer's unlisted home number, and "rude and obnoxious" response when employer complained to collector, not highly offensive); Turner v. Gov't Employees Fin. Corp., 351 F. Supp. 181 (W.D. Pa. 1972) (one communication to employer not unreasonable intrusion); Hart v. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp., 437 So. 2d 1255 (Ala. 1983) (intrusion to enlist employer's help to collect debt not actionable, even though debtor lost job as a result); Household Fin. Corp. v. Bridge, 250 A.2d 878 (Md. 1969) (two calls to employer did not transgress reasonable bounds).

185 Diehl v. Money Source, Inc., 2018 WL 2995721 (S.D. Ala. June 13, 2018) (denying summary judgment to creditor; calls to non-debtor ex-husband, for debt that was arguably not delinquent may amount to invasion of privacy); Jones v. U.S. Child Support Recovery, 961 F. Supp. 1518 (D. Utah 1997) (publishing "wanted" poster to obligor's employer and close relatives, plus other harassment); Norris v. Moskin Stores, Inc., 132 So. 2d 321 (Ala. 1961) (female collector sought debtor's whereabouts by telephoning his wife and sister-in-law without identifying herself except as "Doris" and insinuating that she had extramarital relationship with debtor); Fernandez v. United Acceptance Corp., 610 P.2d 461 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1980) (numerous calls to workplace and neighbors and threat to repossess car without right to do so constituted invasion of privacy; court does not specify whether this conduct amounted to intrusion on seclusion or some other subtort). But see Windsor v. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp., 323 So. 2d 350 (Ala. 1975) (four to six phone calls and visits to consumer's mother causing hospitalization not unreasonable); F.B.C. v. MDWise, Inc., 122 N.E.3d 834 (Ind. App. Ct. 2019) (intrusion on seclusion claim requires showing of physical intrusion; dismissing claim against insurer that disclosed intimate medical information to patient's spouse); Munley v. ISC Fin. House, Inc., 584 P.2d 1336 (Okla. 1978) (one telephone call, four to six attempted visits, and inquiries to neighbor, landlord, and employer were not "highly offensive to a reasonable person").

186 See, e.g., Gomez v. Foster & Garbus, L.L.P., 2019 WL 5418090 (D.N.J. Oct. 22, 2019) (levying bank account of non-debtor, with knowledge of mistaken identity); N.L. by Mother Lemos v. Credit One Bank, 2018 WL 5880796 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 8, 2018) (highly offensive conduct sufficiently alleged; repeated calls to debtor's former phone number, which had been reassigned to a ten-year-old); Mulder v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2018 WL 3750627 (W.D. Pa. July 10, 2018) (thirty-five wrong-number calls after being told recipient was not the debtor); Hartley v. 21st Mortg. Corp., 2017 WL 4322430 (W.D. W. Va. Sept. 28, 2017) (debt had been discharged in bankruptcy, and encumbered property awarded to ex-wife); Sudhir v. PHH Mortg. Corp., 2017 WL 3142114 (N.D. Cal. July 25, 2017) (allowing business owner to add invasion of privacy claim regarding two or three harassing calls per day for debt not owed); Herrera v. AllianceOne Receivables, Inc., 2016 WL 7048318 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 15, 2016) (number of calls not dispositive; collector's actual knowledge of court order holding that recipient, whose name was similar to that of actual debtor, was not liable for debt made conduct highly offensive); Gallegos v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 169 F. Supp. 3d 1235 (D. Utah 2016) (fact issues whether intrusion was intentional or highly offensive; debt buyer twice obtained default judgment against debtor's same-named non-debtor son, after having been informed that information received from creditor was incomplete and inaccurate); Reid v. LVNV Funding, 2016 WL 247571 (D. Utah Jan. 20, 2016) (collector contacted employer and garnished wages of identity theft

- Accessing personal or confidential information;[188] and
- Other "campaigns of harassment" that involve repeated and abusive contacts.[189]

Debtors do not waive the right to be free from overly frequent telephone calls by giving their telephone number to the creditor[190] or by signing contract clauses to that effect.[191] victim; refused to investigate even after being shown extensive documentation that plaintiff was not the debtor); Masuda v. Citibank, 38 F. Supp. 3d 1130 (N.D. Cal. 2014) (300 calls to cell phone of non-debtor despite requests to stop; high number of calls to person known to be non-debtor sufficient to support "highly offensive" element); Corson v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2013 WL 4047577 (D.N.J. Aug. 9, 2013) (two months of daily phone calls to non-debtor, seeking location information for relative who did not live with plaintiff, offensive enough to support claim); Ramsour v. J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, 2011 WL 3739377 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2011) (after bank's collection action was dismissed with prejudice, because alleged debtor was fraud victim, bank sold debt to debt buyer who made daily phone calls to elderly plaintiff); Diaz v. D.I. Recovery Co., 486 F. Supp. 2d 474 (E.D. Pa. 2007) (allegation of one phone call to non-debtor, threatening immediate seizure of all her belongings if she did not pay boyfriend's debt, was sufficient to state claim); Stafford v. Cross Country Bank, 262 F. Supp. 2d 776 (W.D. Ky. 2003) (dunning of identity theft victim by bank that had issued card to thief); Lowe v. Surpas Res. Corp., 253 F. Supp. 2d 1209 (D. Kan. 2003) (threatening and harassing calls to sick older identity theft victim, continuing after being informed of dispute); Bauer v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 149 F. Supp. 2d 1106 (D. Minn. 2001) (creditor's actions continued after creditor was repeatedly informed that he was dunning the wrong person). But cf. Bourne v. Mapother & Mapother, PSC, 998 F. Supp. 2d 495 (S.D. W. Va. 2014) (twenty-seven auto-dialed calls to wrong number, at reasonable hours and about once per week, only one of which was answered, not highly offensive); Mirfendereski v. Rakestraw, 2011 WL 3584325 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 15, 2011) (negligently sending one polite collection letter to debtor's similarly named non-debtor brother not highly offensive); Beckstrom v. Direct Merchant's Credit Card Bank, 2005 WL 1869107 (D. Minn. Aug. 5, 2005) (collector's actions neither unreasonable nor highly offensive where it reasonably relied on information from card issuer but dunned father for son's debt); Haefka v. W.W. Extended Care, 2001 WL 1509200 (Ohio Ct. App. Nov. 28, 2001) (conduct of nursing home that sent monthly billing statements for four years to non-obligated granddaughter of deceased patient who had been listed as "contact" was not highly offensive).

187 Diehl v. Money Source, Inc., 2018 WL 2995721 (S.D. Ala. June 13, 2018) (phone harassment at time when there was a problem with misapplied payments sufficient to state RESPA and breach of contract claims); Rowland v. J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, 2014 WL 992005 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 12, 2014) (repeated calls and home visits, with threat of foreclosure, when lender knew or should have known that loan modification was in place and borrower was current).

188 See, e.g., Luis v. Zang, 833 F.3d 619 (6th Cir. 2016) (Ohio law; installing spyware on computer in violation of state and federal statutes; reasonable expectation of privacy and wrongful intrusion sufficiently alleged); Peterson v. Aaron's, Inc., 2017 WL 4390260 (N.D. Ga. Oct. 3, 2017) (using software intended to locate or disable computer in case of theft or non-payment to access lessee law firm's private data); Reid v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 926146 (D. Utah Mar. 4, 2015) (refusing to dismiss invasion-of-privacy claim based on collector's accessing personal employment information when garnishing wages for debt incurred by identity thief who used plaintiff's Social Security number); Bray v. Cadle Co., 2010 WL 4053794 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 14, 2010) (improperly accessing bank records); Capitol Records, Inc. v. Weed, 2008 WL 1820667 (D. Ariz. Apr. 27, 2008) (accessing hard disk and copying files without authorization is highly offensive; fact issue whether right to privacy waived by file-sharing); Rodgers v. McCullough, 296 F. Supp. 2d 895 (W.D. Tenn. 2003) (jury question whether conduct highly offensive where lawyer representing father in child custody matter improperly obtained mother's credit report in attempt to show she was irresponsible, untruthful, and financially unstable); Smith v. Bob Smith Chevrolet, 275 F. Supp. 2d 808 (W.D. Ky. 2003) (unable to rule as matter of law that accessing credit report for improper purpose not highly offensive); Pulla v. Amoco Oil Co., 882 F. Supp. 836 (S.D. Iowa 1994) (employer gained access to employee's credit card records, copied them, and put them in plaintiff's personnel file), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 72 F.3d 648 (8th Cir. 1995); Russell v. Am. Real Estate Co., 89 S.W.3d 204 (Tex. App. 2002) (tenants of foreclosed property stated claim against new owner who "rummaged" through locked space and handled personal items including clothing, family photos, and personal care items). But cf. Daniel v. DTE Energy, 2013 WL 4502151 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 22, 2013) (obtaining information by lawful, authorized means, here discovery in an ongoing lawsuit, cannot be highly offensive); Robinson v. TSYS Total Debt Mgmt., Inc., 447 F. Supp. 2d 502 (D. Md. 2006) (judgment creditor obtained "likelihood of collection score" from credit reporting agency; not offensive because FCRA permits this use); Korotki v. Attorney Serv. Corp., 931 F. Supp. 1269 (D. Md. 1996) (no invasion of privacy where creditor's lawyer obtained copy of credit report to get address for serving legal papers, as permitted by state and federal law), aff'd, 131 F.3d 135 (4th Cir. Dec. 5, 1997) (table).

189 Quinlan v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2012 WL 2401380 (E.D. Cal. June 22, 2012) (refusing to dismiss claim that collectors' numerous letters were intrusion upon seclusion; giving weight to fact that debt was allegedly not owed and that consumers were put in fear of losing their home); Durette v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2007 WL 869726 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 20, 2007) (campaign of harassment and false credit report, following holder's failure to credit consumer's payments to previous holder); Black v. Aegis Consumer Funding Group, Inc., 2001 WL 228062 (S.D. Ala. Feb. 8, 2001) (campaign of harassment that amounted to stalking, even after consumer hospitalized for anxiety and depression); Hairford v. Centurytel, Inc., 856 So. 2d 139 (La. Ct. App. 2003) (numerous phone calls, attempt to draft bank account, threats to cut off phone service of older consumer, failure to cooperate in efforts to resolve dispute; debt not owed); King v. Cashland, Inc., 2000 WL 1232768 (Ohio Ct. App. Sept. 1, 2000) (reversing summary judgment on invasion-of-privacy claim for creditor who, inter alia, contacted debtor's sister, friend, employer, and landlord). See also Gersh v. Anglin, 353 F. Supp. 3d 958 (D. Mont. 2018) (unleashing "troll storm" by internet publication of person's contact information, urging recipients to harass that person). But cf. Howard v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2013 WL 1760299 (E.D. Ky. Apr. 24, 2013) (mailing collection letters to debtor's home is not intrusion on seclusion); Baker v. Sentry Credit, Inc., 2012 WL 220243 (S.D. Ohio Jan. 25, 2012) (eight letters attempting to collect disputed deficiency on car loan not a campaign of harassment, nor was turning debt over to second collection agency after first agency sent it back when it learned that debt was disputed); Flores v. Quick Collect, 2007 WL 2769003 (D. Or. Sept. 18, 2007) (several phone calls, writ of garnishment, and seeking debtor exam in wrong county not sufficient to state claim for intrusion on seclusion). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 18.3.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (application of this tort in credit reporting context).

190 Duncan v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2011 WL 5359698 (S.D. W. Va. Nov. 4, 2011) (giving phone number to creditor not blanket permission to call whenever it chose); Gray v. Chase Bank, 2011 WL 4716232 (S.D. W. Va. Oct. 7, 2011) (giving phone number to creditor does not waive right to privacy). But cf. Cherkaoui v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 32 F. Supp. 3d 811 (S.D. Tex. 2014) (calls to cell phone not unreasonable, where consumer gave cell number on credit application and never told creditor not to call that number).

191 Singer v. Las Vegas Athletic Clubs, 376 F. Supp. 3d 1062 (D. Nev. Mar. 25, 2019) (initial consent to receive phone calls does not bar claims arising from unreasonable volume or frequency); King v. Cashland, Inc.,

15.3.3 Holding Up to False Light

The essence of the tort of placing a person in a false light is the false attribution to the debtor of an undesirable or negative character.[192] This tort is recognized in most jurisdictions,[193] but there are some exceptions.[194] While similar to defamation,[195] false light claims avoid several requirements of defamation actions, such as pleading special damages. On the other hand, while truth is an affirmative defense in a defamation claim, falsity is an element of a false light claim, so the plaintiff must make an affirmative showing of falsity.[196] Both torts may be pleaded in the same action.

In order to satisfy all the elements of this subtort, an attribution by a collector must have the following characteristics:

- It must be unreasonable;[197]
- It must be published by speech, writing, or conduct, and in some jurisdictions must be publicized more widely;[198]
- It must allege an untrue, offensive fact;[199]

2000 WL 1232768 (Ohio Ct. App. Sept. 1, 2000) (contract clause waiving any right to assert privacy claims is void as against public policy as to a creditor who uses abusive and harassing debt collection methods).

192 See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652E (1977) (listing elements).

193 Talley v. Time, Inc., 923 F.3d 878 (10th Cir. 2019) (Oklahoma recognizes the tort of false light, but requires a showing of actual malice—either knowing falsehood, or reckless disregard as to the falsity of the published matter); Donnachie v. Frank S. Falzone & Assoc., 2010 WL 3191981 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 11, 2010) (Pennsylvania recognizes "false light" tort); Haguewood v. Gannett River States Publ'g Corp., 2007 WL 1728700 (S.D. Miss. June 13, 2007) (Mississippi recognizes "false light" tort; public disclosure of false and offensive facts about plaintiff; truth a complete defense); Carson v. Lynch Multimedia Corp., 123 F. Supp. 2d 1254 (D. Kan. 2000) (Kansas recognizes tort where defendant's publicity places plaintiff before the public in a false light highly offensive to a reasonable man; plaintiff need not specifically plead emotional distress); Field v. U-Haul Co. of E. Bay, 2004 WL 2005739 (Cal. Ct. App. Sept. 8, 2004) (plaintiff stated claims for both defamation and false light; U-Haul came to pick up overdue truck accompanied by police officer and stated publicly that the officer "is there to arrest you," even though officer was present only to assist in gaining entrance to gated condominium complex); Denver Publ'g Co. v. Bueno, 54 P.3d 893 (Colo. 2002); Barrett v. Fonorow, 799 N.E.2d 916 (Ill. App. Ct. 2003) (elements are placing plaintiff in a false light "before the public" that would be highly offensive to reasonable person, and actual malice); Welling v. Weinfeld, 866 N.E.2d 1051 (Ohio 2007) (elements are "(a) the false light in which the other was placed would be highly offensive to a reasonable person, and (b) the actor had knowledge of or acted in reckless disregard as to the falsity of the publicized matter and the false light in which the other would be placed"); West v. Media Gen. Convergence, Inc., 53 S.W.3d 640 (Tex. 2001) (recognizing the tort); SIRQ, Inc. v. The Layton Companies, Inc., 379 P.3d 1237 (Utah 2016) (recognized in Utah; noting overlap with defamation); Benson v. AJR, Inc., 599 S.E.2d 747 (W. Va. 2004). Cf. Smith v. Humane Soc'y of the United States, 519 S.W.3d 789 (Mo. 2017) (Missouri will not recognize false light claim where, as here, plaintiff states a claim for defamation, but might recognize claim for falsely attributing to a person some opinion or utterance, or using a person's picture to illustrate as story that has no bearing on plaintiff).

194 Jurisdictions that do not recognize the tort of false light include Florida, Massachusetts, New York, South Carolina, Texas, and Virginia. See Amrak Productions, Inc. v. Morton, 410 F.3d 69, 73 (1st Cir. 2005) (Mass. law); Johnson v. Sawyer, 47 F.3d 716, 732 n.34 (5th Cir. 1995) (Tex. law); Brighton v. McIntosh, 2011 WL 3585982 (S.D.N.Y. July 28, 2011) (misuse of name or image is actionable only if for purposes of "advertising or trade," so setting up fake website with debtor's name and information not actionable); Falwell v. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd., 521 F. Supp. 1204, 1206 (W.D. Va. 1981); Jews for Jesus, Inc. v. Rapp, 997 So. 2d 1098 (Fla. 2008) (the tort would be duplicative of defamation by implication but without protection for free flow of information); Cruz v. Latin News Impacto Newspaper, 627 N.Y.S.2d 388 (N.Y. App. Div. 1995); Brown v. Pearson, 483 S.E.2d 477, 484 (S.C. Ct. App. 1997).

195 Seaquist v. Caldier, 438 P.3d 606 (Wash. App. Ct. 2019) (contrasting the two causes of action; defamation compensates for harm to reputation, false light for mental suffering).

196 Rice v. Seterus, Inc., 2018 WL 513345 (N.D. Ala. Jan. 23, 2018) (burden of proof of falsity is on plaintiff); Regions Bank v. Plott, 897 So. 2d 239 (Ala. 2004); Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652E, cmt. b (comparison of the elements of defamation and false light).

197 Strickland v. Univ. of Scranton, 700 A.2d 979 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1997) (false light requires proof of "such a major misrepresentation of . . . character, history, activities or beliefs that serious offense may reasonably be expected to be taken by a reasonable man"; newspaper article reporting creditor's disappointment in district attorney's failure to follow up on criminal charges was insufficient).

198 See Rice v. Seterus, Inc., 2018 WL 513345 (N.D. Ala. Jan. 23, 2018) (disclosure to credit bureau and insurance company not sufficient; foreclosure notice published in newspaper could be sufficient but not sufficiently alleged here); McCleary v. DLJ Mortg. Capital, Inc., 2017 WL 4542054 (S.D. Ala. Oct. 11 2017) (noting conflict of authority on the question whether reports to credit bureaus are sufficient publicity to support false light claim; concluding that they are not); Jackson v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 2016 WL 4942085 (S.D. Ala. July 19, 2016) (statements to credit bureaus and insurance carrier not sufficient); Neil v. Nesbit, 2014 WL 4897315 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 27, 2014) (may be publication either to general public or to small group with special relationship to plaintiff, here co-workers, supervisor, and tenant); Phillips v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2013 WL 4854760 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 11, 2013) (publication of foreclosure notice is sufficient); Donnachie v. Frank S. Falzone & Assoc., 2010 WL 3191981 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 11, 2010) (widespread publicity required; publication to one family member insufficient); L-S Indus., Inc. v. Matlack, 641 F. Supp. 2d 680 (E.D. Tenn. 2009) (letter and three email messages to business contacts insufficient to make information public knowledge); Brown v. O'Bannon, 84 F. Supp. 2d 1176 (D. Colo. Feb. 16, 2000) (publicity, not just publication, necessary for false-light invasion-of-privacy claim); In re Lansaw, 2015 WL 224093 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. Jan. 14, 2014) (posting a sign at entrance to business premises, visible to customers, employees, and passersby was sufficient publicity); Regions Bank v. Plott, 897 So. 2d 239 (Ala. 2004) (returning one check, stamped with a message, to each of two banks is insufficient); Lee Ching v. Dung, 446 P.3d 1016 (Haw. App. Ct. 2019) (posting information that clearly identifies plaintiff on shared Facebook page will support claim; yelling insults where neighbors can hear will not), reversed in part on other grounds, 477 P.3d 856, 872 (Haw. 2020) (no error in intermediate appellate court's ruling on false light claim); Barrett v. Fonorow, 799 N.E.2d 916 (Ill. App. Ct. 2003) (must be communicated to "so many persons that the matter must be regarded as substantially certain to become one of public knowledge"); Benson v. AJR, Inc., 599 S.E.2d 747 (W. Va. 2004) (widespread publicity is element; publication to three persons within same company insufficient); Marleau v. Truck Ins. Exch., 37 P.3d 148 (Or. 2001) (falsely telling lender that borrower was not paying debts not sufficient publicity).

199 See Dougherty v. Harvey, 317 F. Supp. 3d 1287 (N.D. Ga. 2018) (must show false but non-defamatory statement; dismissing false light claim that duplicates defamation claim); Phillips v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2013 WL 4854760 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 11, 2013) (publication of foreclosure notice when debtor not in default is sufficiently offensive to support claim); Knechtel v. Choicepoint, Inc., 2009 WL 4123275 (D.N.J. Nov. 23, 2009) (denying motion to dismiss; attributing to consumer judgment against another person with same last name could be

- It must be about the debtor; and
- It must be objectionable under the reasonable person standard.

The following cases illustrate the false light tort:

- A cause of action was stated by a plaintiff who alleged that a creditor had included the plaintiff's name on a sign in a store window and in a list in a newspaper of "undisputed" claims for sale, when in fact the debt was disputed by the plaintiff;[200]
- Publication of false information in a credit report may state a claim,[201] unless the claim is barred by the FCRA's preemption provisions;[202]
- A plaintiff was awarded damages for his impaired credit, mental anguish, humiliation, and embarrassment caused when a store accidentally issued a credit card in his name to his brother and then served him with suit at his job after being informed of the error;[203] and
- Police officers stated a cause of action against collectors who had impersonated them while threatening and intimidating debtors.[204]

15.3.4 Public Disclosure of Private Facts

The tort of invasion of privacy involving public disclosure of true but private facts may apply to a disclosure by a debt collector if the disclosure meets the following criteria:

- It is published;
- It is about the debtor;
- It discloses a true but private fact;[205]
- It is of a kind or is expressed in a manner that is offensive under the reasonable person standard; and
- It causes the debtor harm.[206]

The principal advantage of alleging this form of invasion of privacy is that it applies when false light and defamation claims will not, because the truth of the matter disclosed is immaterial.

In the debt collection context, liability for this tort vindicates the right to be free from unreasonable disclosure of private financial or personal affairs. Reasonableness is usually measured in terms of two variables: the size of the group that receives the publication and the degree of offensiveness of the facts published. The burden of justifying publication becomes progressively heavier as the audience grows larger and as the offensiveness of the publication increases.

One court has held that the facts revealed must be "intimate" or "highly objectionable to a person of ordinary sensibilities" and of no "legitimate concern to the public."[207] The plaintiff highly offensive); Henson v. CSC Credit Serv., 830 F. Supp. 1204 (S.D. Ind. 1993) (dismissing claim because consumer failed to allege that collector's statements about him were false), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 29 F.3d 280 (7th Cir. 1994); In re Lansaw, 2015 WL 224093 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. Jan. 14, 2014) (posting sign stating that business was being evicted for nonpayment of rent would be highly offensive, if false); Regions Bank v. Plott, 897 So. 2d 239 (Ala. 2004) (messages bank stamped on checks it returned were not false, so no false light claim); SIRQ, Inc. v. The Layton Companies, Inc., 379 P.3d 1237 (Utah 2016). But see Funk v. Lincoln-Lancaster County Crime Stoppers, 885 N.W.2d 1 (Neb. 2016) (if claim arises from false statement, only cause of action is defamation, not false light).

200 Tollefson v. Price, 430 P.2d 990 (Or. 1967). See also Wal-Mart Stores v. Lee, 74 S.W.3d 634 (Ark. 2002) (affirming verdict for employee where employer displayed allegedly stolen goods on front lawn in presence of neighbors and media and stated that employee was thief).

201 See, e.g., Champion v. Global Credit Card Serv., 2012 WL 3542225 (N.D. Ala. Aug. 15, 2012) (malicious or reckless report to credit bureau sufficient to allege publicity, considering the wide variety of uses for which credit reports are sought); Knechtel v. Choicepoint, Inc., 2009 WL 4123275, at *6 (D.N.J. Nov. 23, 2009) (publication in credit reports sufficient); Cross v. Receivables Mgmt. Solutions, Inc., 2006 WL 446083 (D. Colo. Feb. 21, 2006) (false light claim may go forward where collectors persistently reported and dunned on disputed debt); Semper v. JBC Legal Group, 2005 WL 2172377 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 6, 2005) (report to credit reporting agency was publicity sufficient to support false light claim; report was accessed by six creditors, and was available to others). But see Brignola v. Home Properties, L.P., 2013 WL 1795336 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 26, 2013) (report to credit bureau not sufficient publicity to support false light claim); Gagliardi v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 2009 WL 365647 (W.D. Pa. Feb. 12, 2009) (reporting to three credit bureaus is insufficient publicity), aff'd on other grounds, 357 Fed. Appx. 413 (3d Cir. 2009); In re BFW Liquidation, L.L.C., 471 B.R. 652 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 2012) (reports to credit bureau and law enforcement not sufficient publicity).

202 See, e.g., Abusaab v. Equifax Info. Serv., L.L.C., 2006 WL 1214782 (E.D. Pa. May 4, 2006) (denying summary judgment where credit reporting agency persistently reported reversed judgment as "satisfied"; allegations of willfulness sufficient to avoid Fair Credit Reporting Act preemption at summary judgment stage). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 10.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

203 Montgomery Ward v. Larragoite, 467 P.2d 399 (N.M. 1970).

204 Nolfi v. Melson, 2000 WL 839971 (Conn. Super. Ct. June 12, 2000).

205 See McMullen v. McHughes Law Firm, 454 S.W.3d 200 (Ark. 2015) (claim fails where plaintiff alleged that information disclosed was false; must show disclosure of true, but private, facts).

206 Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652D (1977) (listing elements). But see Clark v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2008 WL 4601582 (S.D. Ind. Oct. 16, 2008) (Indiana does not recognize tort claim for disclosure of private facts).

207 Johnson v. Sawyer, 47 F.3d 716, 731–732 (5th Cir. 1995) (Internal Revenue Service's issuance of press release including full name, address, and job title of executive who pleaded guilty to tax evasion insufficient to state claim because information not "intimate," even though some of it was illegally released from tax returns). See also Miller v. Davis, 653 Fed. Appx. 448 (6th Cir. 2016) (Ohio law; affirming summary judgment for defendants; couple's private financial information was of interest to the public when they were indicted and tried for elder abuse); Pawlaczyk v. Besser Credit Union, 2014 WL 5425576 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 22, 2014) (fact that plaintiff is no longer employed by defendant is not private); Maddox v. Martin Co., L.L.C., 2006 WL 1308211 (S.D. Ohio May 11, 2006) (disclosure of non-debtor's Social Security number to other family members, in message on household answering machine, not highly offensive); Clearwater Court L.P. v. MacInnes, 2006 WL 2811807 (Cal. Ct. App. Oct. 3, 2006) (revealing that developer had been involved in embezzlement scandal—as victim—was offensive because it could interfere with his ability to obtain investors); Robert C. Ozer, P.C. v. Borquez, 940 P.2d 371 (Colo. 1997) (elements include facts of no legitimate concern to the public and reckless disregard for the private nature of the facts); Busse v. Motorola, Inc., 813 N.E.2d 1013 (Ill. App. Ct. 2004) (no tort unless may also need to show that the facts were private—that is, they had not been previously published.[208]

Most courts have held that widespread "publicity" is required for a cause of action to arise.[209] Thus, informing other creditors,[210] a credit reporting agency,[211] or a few family members[212] of a debtor's delinquency is generally not actionable as this tort. But if information is made available to the public at large it will constitute publicity even if very few people actually receive it—for example, a late-night radio broadcast or a

"the matter intruded on was private"; not shown here where cell phone company disclosed information including names, ages, Social Security number, and usage patterns for use in epidemiological study of cell phone safety); Franklin Collection Agency v. Kyle, 955 So. 2d 284 (Miss. 2007) (itemized medical bill; issue whether medical details exceeded what was necessary to support claim for open account); Barner v. Krohle, 2006 WL 3028766 (Ohio Ct. App. Oct. 26, 2006) (fact that condominium owner was not paying fees was not private or intimate where by-laws required that payment information be available to all owners); Huntington Ctr. Assoc. v. Schwartz, Warren & Ramirez, L.L.C., 2000 WL 1376524 (Ohio Ct. App. Sept. 26, 2000) (no invasion of privacy where existence of judgment and financial arrangements made when partnership split up were not information about anyone's private life, and revelation would not be highly offensive to normal person); Pontbriand v. Sundlun, 699 A.2d 856 (R.I. 1997) (information about one's bank balance is "private fact," but remanding for determination whether governor's release to the media of list of persons having bank balances of more than $100,000, in effort to prove that his costly bank bailout bill was not a favor to large political contributors, would be offensive to a reasonable person); Judge v. Saltz Plastic Surgery, P.C., 367 P.3d 1006 (Utah 2016) (adopting Restatement definition; discussing legitimate interest to the public).

208 Brignola v. Home Properties, L.P., 2013 WL 1795336 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 26, 2013) (no showing that facts reported to credit bureau, here deceased father's debt reported as debt of son, were private); Tenorio v. Reliable Collection Agency, Inc., 2003 WL 23150110 (D. N. Mar. I. Dec. 31, 2003) (no disclosure of private facts where collector's clerk queried amount of check consumer was writing at counter, as consumer's presence at counter already revealed he was debtor); McCorkle v. McCorkle, 811 So. 2d 258 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001); Barner v. Krohle, 2006 WL 3028766 (Ohio Ct. App. Oct. 26, 2006) (no disclosure of private facts because condominium owner had already told others of his decision to withhold disputed payments); Huntington Ctr. Assoc. v. Schwartz, Warren & Ramirez, L.L.C., 2000 WL 1376524 (Ohio Ct. App. Sept. 26, 2000) (no invasion of privacy where information was matter of public record); Strickland v. Univ. of Scranton, 700 A.2d 979 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1997) (existence of a lawsuit is a public, not private, fact; notifying creditors that plaintiff was about to receive a substantial settlement was not actionable, as they had a legitimate interest in this information); Judge v. Saltz Plastic Surgery, P.C., 367 P.3d 1006 (Utah 2016) (fact issues whether plastic surgery patient, who had consented to use of photographs for educational purposes and been interviewed for television show, had placed information before the public).

209 Pawlaczyk v. Besser Credit Union, 2014 WL 5425576 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 22, 2014) (former employer's email to management of other credit unions was not publicity); Stokes v. Barnhart, 257 F. Supp. 2d 288 (D. Me. 2003) (publication to individual or small group can never support claim); Tenorio v. Reliable Collection Agency, Inc., 2003 WL 23150110 (D. N. Mar. I. Dec. 31, 2003) (no publicity where only collector's employees heard conversation about the debt); Davenport v. Farmers' Ins. Group, 2003 WL 21975843 (D. Minn. Aug. 12, 2003) (insurer's disclosure of credit report to a few insurance agents not sufficient), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 378 F.3d 839 (8th Cir. 2004); Challen v. Town & Country Charge, 545 F. Supp. 1014 (N.D. Ill. 1982) (one letter to consumer's employer enlisting employer's aid in collecting debt is not publicity); In re Residential Capital, L.L.C., 2016 WL 797901 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. Feb. 29, 2016) (disclosure of delinquency to near neighbors not publicity; property service photographers shouted at and heckled family members); Robert C. Ozer, P.C. v. Borquez, 940 P.2d 371 (Colo. 1997) (disclosure must be to general public rather than one individual or a few); Robins v. Conseco Fin. Loan Co., 656 N.W.2d 241 (Minn. Ct. App. 2003) (disclosure of confidential credit information to one person not publicity; distinguishing case of revealing affair to spouse because of "delicacy" of that situation); Balke v. Ream, 33 S.W.3d 589 (Mo. Ct. App. 2000) (publicity not shown where party shared unlawfully recorded telephone conversation only with his attorney); Wilkinson v. Methodist, Richard Young Hosp., 612 N.W.2d 213 (Neb. 2000) (after father refused to pay or file an insurance claim for treatment of his runaway daughter, hospital accessed information from father's previous hospitalization and used it to file the insurance claim; no invasion of privacy because publication to insurance company, hospital employees, and daughter's mother was not publicity); Cullum v. Gov't Employees Fin. Corp., 517 S.W.2d 317 (Tex. App. 1974) (one letter to debtor's employer not publication). But see Biddle v. Warren Gen. Hosp., 715 N.E.2d 518 (Ohio 1999) (unauthorized disclosure of non-public medical information is tortious; publicity not required).

210 Salter v. AmSouth Bank, 487 So. 2d 927, 930 (Ala. Civ. App. 1985). See also Regions Bank v. Kaplan, 2013 WL 1193831 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 22, 2013) (fraud alert in secured online database, accessible to financial institutions and law enforcement, not sufficient publication to the general public), on reconsideration, 2015 WL 1456697 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 30, 2015); Strickland v. Univ. of Scranton, 700 A.2d 979 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1997) (informing creditors that debtor was about to receive a substantial settlement was not actionable; creditors had a legitimate interest in the funds); Swinton Creek Nursery v. Edisto Farm Credit, 483 S.E.2d 789 (S.C. Ct. App. 1997) (no invasion of privacy where commercial lender revealed to prospective buyer of borrower's business that the business was under financial duress; publication to an individual or small group was not publicity), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 514 S.E.2d 126 (S.C. 1999). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting §§ 18.3.2, 18.3.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (application of the tort of public disclosure of private facts to credit reporting).

211 Blair v. Bank of Am., 2012 WL 860411 (D. Or. Mar. 13, 2012) (disclosure to debt collector and credit bureau not publicity); Blakey v. Victory Equip. Sales, 576 S.E.2d 288 (Ga. Ct. App. 2002) (report to credit reporting agency not sufficient publicity). See also National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 18.3.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (immunity for disclosures made pursuant to certain FCRA provisions).

212 Sapia v. Regency Motors, 276 F.3d 747 (5th Cir. 2002) (La. law; car dealer did not act unreasonably by asking buyer's father to return car and disclosing that buyer, who was away on business, had failed to secure financing); Morin v. Nationwide Fed. Credit Union, 2008 WL 5157740 (D. Conn. Dec. 8, 2008) (publicity not shown where lender discussed debt only with borrower's daughter, who was co-maker of one note); Campbell v. Triad Fin. Corp., 2007 WL 2973598 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 9, 2007) (calls to friends and family not sufficient publicity); Jones v. U.S. Child Support Recovery, 961 F. Supp. 1518 (D. Utah 1997) (distribution of wanted poster, describing child support obligor as deadbeat, to obligor's employer, mother, and siblings is insufficient publicity). See also Doe v. TCF Bank Ill., 707 N.E.2d 220 (Ill. App. Ct. 1999) (disclosure to individual or small group may be actionable if there is "special relationship" with plaintiff, but disclosure of financial information to wife was permissible because of her possible liability under family expenses statute, and effect of husband's debt on her rights in case of divorce or separation); Vogel v. W.T. Grant Co., 327 A.2d 133 (Pa. 1974) (contacting three relatives and employer not unreasonable publicity).

Facebook page viewed by just a few people.[213] When the group receiving the publication is small but the collector's conduct is particularly outrageous, however, courts tend to interpret the publication requirement more loosely.[214] Liability for this subtort can be based on oral communications.[215]

Unless the disclosure is aggravated by wider publicity, abuse, or blatant coercion, some older decisions have held that an employer has a "privilege" to learn of the debts of an employee.[216] These courts ignore the enormous coercive effect that an employer contact has on a debtor,[217] and a number of courts allow such claims.[218] Congress's policy (evidenced by the FDCPA) of not permitting employer contacts by collection agencies[219] may persuade more courts to reach this result.

Other examples of public disclosures of private facts in the debt collection context that have been found actionable include:

- Publishing lists of debtors ("deadbeat" lists);[220] and
- Disclosure of non-public medical information.[221]

213 Pinero v. Jackson Hewitt Tax Serv. Inc., 594 F. Supp. 2d 710 (E.D. La. 2009) (genuine issue of fact whether copies of tax returns, thrown unshredded into dumpster, were "made public"); In re McKenzie, 2010 WL 917262 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. Mar. 10, 2010) (attaching private medical and financial information to proof of claim in bankruptcy sufficient to show publicity); Yath v. Fairview Clinics, N.P., 767 N.W.2d 34 (Minn. Ct. App. 2009) (Facebook page). But see In re Ricker, 2012 WL 2562760 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. June 29, 2012) (filing of unredacted Social Security number with proof of claim; filings are accessible to the public upon payment of a fee, but claim fails because no evidence that any person actually tried to access the information or that debtor suffered any damage); In re Carter, 411 B.R. 730 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2009) (attaching personal medical information to proof of claim in bankruptcy not publicity; claim is public record, but no evidence anyone viewed file before information redacted).

214 See, e.g., Finley v. Kelly, 384 F. Supp. 3d 898 (M.D. Tenn. 2019) (Tennessee recognizes this tort, but has not clearly defined publicity; predicting that revelation to a small but important group, here family and friends, will be sufficient); Browning v. AT&T Corp., 682 F. Supp. 2d 832 (N.D. Ill. 2009) (revealing information to business acquaintances and a friend; publication to small group is sufficient if there is a special relationship); Parks v. Rainbow Rentals, Inc., 2008 WL 2325154 (W.D. Ky. June 4, 2008) (publication to small group such as fellow employees or club members sufficient if revelation would be embarrassing; posting computer printout with name, Social Security number, and amount allegedly due on outside of home, visible to passersby, was publicity); Wagner v. City of Holyoke, 241 F. Supp. 2d 78 (D. Mass. 2003) (publication of personal medical information to co-workers without need to know); Purcell v. Universal Bank, 2003 WL 1962376 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 28, 2003) (collection calls to cardholder's small business caused gossip within small company and small town); Sacco v. Eagle Fin. Corp., 234 So. 2d 406 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1970) (yelling and banging on debtor's door presented jury question); Boudreaux v. Allstate Fin. Corp., 217 So. 2d 439 (La. Ct. App. 1968) (creditor explained debtor's financial problems to a neighbor in course of offensive telephone collection campaign); Biederman's, Inc. v. Wright, 322 S.W.2d 892 (Mo. 1959) (embarrassing visits to workplace); Karch v. BayBank, 794 A.2d 763 (N.H. 2002) (publicity does not depend on number of people told; disclosure of illegally intercepted phone conversation to co-workers, resulting in hostility, sufficient to state a claim). See also Pachowicz v. Ledoux, 666 N.W.2d 88 (Wis. Ct. App. 2003) (publicity sufficiently alleged with disclosure to one notorious gossip).

215 See, e.g., Ignat v. Yum! Brands, Inc., 154 Cal. Rptr. 3d 275 (Cal. Ct. App. 2013). But see Midwest Glass Co. v. Stanford Dev. Co., 339 N.E.2d 274 (Ill. App. Ct. 1975) (in actions involving debt collection, invasion of privacy cannot be based merely on oral communications).

216 See, e.g., Yoder v. Smith, 112 N.W.2d 862 (Iowa 1962); Passman v. Commercial Credit Plan, Inc., 220 So. 2d 758 (La. Ct. App. 1969) (judgment creditor warning employer of garnishment proceedings); Vogel v. W.T. Grant Co., 327 A.2d 133 (Pa. 1974) (contacting three relatives and employer not unreasonable publicity). See also Hart v. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp., 437 So. 2d 1255 (Ala. 1983) (not unreasonable for creditor to seek employer's help in collecting debt; debtor later lost job); Windsor v. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp., 323 So. 2d 350 (Ala. 1975) (reporting repossession of car to police and consumer's employer not unreasonable); Timperley v. Chase Collection Serv., 77 Cal. Rptr. 782 (Cal. Ct. App. 1969) (limited right to reveal existence of debt encompasses contacting employer).

217 See Hawley v. Prof'l Credit Bureau, Inc., 76 N.W.2d 835, 839 (Mich. 1956) (Smith, J., dissenting).

218 Sewell v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 2011 WL 32209 (E.D. Tenn. Jan. 5, 2011); Pack v. Wise, 155 So. 2d 909 (La. Ct. App. 1963) (awarding damages against creditor that showed consumer's employer a letter from consumer's attorney requesting that creditor desist from further contacts regarding disputed debt, which led employer to fire consumer). See also Weakley v. Redline Recovery Serv., 723 F. Supp. 2d 1341 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (debtor stated claim for common law invasion of privacy against collector who, despite having debtor-marine's contact information, repeatedly contacted his superior officers and described debtor as dishonest), clarified, 2010 WL 3033801 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 2, 2010); Gen. Fin. Corp. v. Davis, 191 S.E.2d 865 (Ga. Ct. App. 1972) (unreasonable employer contacts actionable, but not shown here); Pachowicz v. Ledoux, 666 N.W.2d 88 (Wis. Ct. App. 2003) (disclosure to employer actionable because revelation can be "as devastating as widespread publicity").

219 See §§ 5.6, 5.7, supra.

220 Trammell v. Citizens News Co., 148 S.W.2d 708 (Ky. 1941) (notice posted in store and published in newspaper); Brents v. Morgan, 299 S.W. 967 (Ky. 1927) (five by eight foot sign listing debtors in a store window); Mason v. Williams Discount Ctr., Inc., 639 S.W.2d 836 (Mo. Ct. App. 1982) (listing plaintiff's name under a list headed "NO CHECKS" in plain view of customers at checkout counter states claim). But cf. City Stores Co. v. Henderson, 156 S.E.2d 818 (Ga. Ct. App. 1967) (although other customers may have heard store clerk ask debtor to return credit card, not tortious).

221 Wagner v. City of Holyoke, 241 F. Supp. 2d 78 (D. Mass. 2003) (under Massachusetts privacy statute, massive publicity not required; publication of personal medical information to co-workers was sufficient); In re McKenzie, 2010 WL 917262 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. Mar. 10, 2010) (attaching private medical information to proof of claim in bankruptcy); Franklin Collection Agency v. Kyle, 955 So. 2d 284 (Miss. 2007) (itemized medical bill; issue whether medical details exceeded what was necessary to support claim for open account); McCorkle v. McCorkle, 811 So. 2d 258 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001) (confidential Veterans Administration medical and claims records unlawfully obtained and widely publicized in course of family financial dispute); Biddle v. Warren Gen. Hosp., 698 N.E.2d 1007 (Ohio 1999) (patients stated claim against hospital and law firm, where hospital passed all patient registration forms to law firm, which sought out patients eligible for SSI or other benefits and offered to represent them in applying for these benefits). But cf. In re Mallard, 2014 WL 988779 (Bankr. E.D. Ky. Mar. 12, 2014) (publicity not sufficiently alleged; proof of claim for medical bill disclosed HIV diagnosis, but court promptly restricted access to it).

15.4 Intentional Interference with Contractual Relationships or Prospective Economic Relations

15.4.1 Overview

Two closely related torts that may occur in the debt collection context are tortious interference with a contract and tortious interference with prospective economic relations. Because the law is protective of existing contracts, the former cause of action is better developed and easier to prove.

Both torts require a showing of wrongful conduct which is intended to, and does, cause the loss of present or prospective business relations. A substantially higher degree of wrongfulness is required for interference with prospective relations.[222]

In determining whether a creditor's actions were improper, courts may look to "recognized standards of business ethics and business customs and practices."[223] The consumer will generally need to prove that the creditor's action either lacked any legitimate purpose[224] or was independently tortious or

222 Matter of Dallas Roadster, Ltd., 846 F.3d 112 (5th Cir. 2017) (Tex. law; for interference with business expectancy must show independently tortious or unlawful act); Thimjon Farms P'ship v. Int'l Bank and Trust, 837 N.W.2d (N.D. 2013) (articulating elements of the two torts); Ordonez v. Saxon Mortg. Serv., Inc., 2009 WL 395488 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 17, 2009); Vinas v. Chubb Corp., 499 F. Supp. 2d 427 (S.D.N.Y. 2007) (claim stated for interference with contract, with fact issues as to economic justification, but no claim for prospective relations, which requires showing of "extreme and unfair" wrongful means or action solely out of malice); Gen. Elec. Capital Corp. v. Commercial Serv. Group, 485 F. Supp. 2d 1015 (N.D. Iowa 2007) (wrongfulness must be shown for either tort, but different in degree; balancing test for interference with contract; must show "sole or predominant purpose to injure or financially destroy" another for interference with prospective relations); Farm Credit Midsouth, PCA v. Bollinger, 548 S.W.3d 164 (Ark. Ct. App. 2018) (justification defense will receive greater recognition in cases involving prospective relations); White Plains Coat & Apron Co. v. Cintas, Corp., 867 N.E.2d 381 (N.Y. 2007) (articulating criteria for the two torts; law is more protective of existing contracts); Carvel Corp. v. Noonan, 785 N.Y.S.2d 359 (N.Y. 2004) (both are torts, but different elements; if interference results in breach of contract, interferer is liable even if behavior was lawful; if only nonbinding economic relation, must show crime or independent tort, or conduct the sole purpose of which is inflicting harm on plaintiff). See also Duradrill, L.L.C. Dynmax Drilling Tools, Inc. 516 S.W.3d 147 (Tex. App. 2017) (complex commercial case; articulating the elements of the two causes of action). But cf. Hamann v. Carpenter, 937 F.3d 86, 92 (1st Cir. 2019) (Mass. has not consistently distinguished between the two torts). See generally Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 766, 766A, 766B (1979).

223 Saglioccolo v. Eagle Ins. Co., 112 F.3d 226 (6th Cir. 1997) (remanding for fact finding regarding industry custom where insurance company, in effort to collect disputed debt for premiums, refused to issue "tort letter" stating there were no claims against insured cab driver, who needed it to sell his New York City medallion); Parvez v. Bigelman, 2005 WL 3479824 (Mich. Ct. App. Dec. 20, 2005) (no tortious interference where action taken for proper business reasons; notices to debtor's account debtors to pay creditor who had security interest in accounts receivable were limited in scope and permitted by Uniform Commercial Code); C.R. England v. Swift Transp. Co., 437 P.3d 343 (Utah 2019) (use of improper means is an element of the claim; must show that act was contrary to a statute, regulation, common law rule, or established standard of a trade or profession). See also Janvrin v. Continental Resources, Inc., 934 F.3d 845 (8th Cir. 2019) (S.D. law) (relying on Restatement factors and upholding jury's determination that interference was improper).

224 See 16 Casa Duse, L.L.C. v. Merkin, 791 F.3d 247 (2d Cir. 2015) (N.Y. law) (must show either independently wrongful or tortious means, or conduct "for the sole purpose of inflicting economic harm on the plaintiff"; harassment with meritless litigation may be sufficient, but not shown here where stubbornly pursued and unsuccessful claim was not "frivolous, objectively unreasonable, or patently meritless"); Winding v. Cal-Western Reconveyance Corp., 2011 WL 221321 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 24, 2011) (wrongful interference not shown where debtor's tenant broke lease after lender posted notice required by foreclosure law); Tredit Tire & Wheel Co. v. Regency Conversions, L.L.C., 636 F. Supp. 2d 598 (E.D. Mich. 2009) (must show intentional doing of act wrongful in itself or act that is lawful but unjustified in law and done with malice for purpose of invading plaintiff's contractual rights or business relationship); Thomas v. Wakulla Bank, 2009 WL 1410289 (M.D. Ga. May 18, 2009) (actions of secured creditor exercising its contractual rights cannot be "wrongful improper conduct" necessary to support tortious interference claim); Fuller v. Exxon Mobil, M.C., 2009 WL 91707 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 14, 2009) (must show act done for purpose of invading contract rights or business relation; calls at work not sufficient where purpose of calls was debt collection); Pippert v. Niece, 518 F. Supp. 2d 1265 (D. Or. 2007) (tenants failed to state claim against landlord for tortious interference with their contract with housing authority, as landlord's report of damage and delinquency was required by authority's rules); Audio Odyssey, Ltd. v. Brenton First Nat'l Bank, 284 F. Supp. 2d 1159 (S.D. Iowa 2003) (creditor's enforcement of its contract with borrower was not tortious interference with other contracts); VonTurkovich v. APC Capital Partners, L.L.C., 259 F. Supp. 2d 314 (D. Vt. 2003) (lender's "threatening and overbearing" questioning of borrower's long-term tenant, which caused tenant to relocate, had no proper relationship to assignment of rents; borrower stated claim for tortious interference); Bowshier v. Chrysler Fin. Corp., 144 F. Supp. 2d 919 (S.D. Ohio 2001) (creditor's seizure of non-consumer debtor's assets privileged where undertaken as good-faith attempt to defend legally protected interest; resulting interference with debtor's contract with its landlord not tortious); Lombard v. Economic Dev. Admin., 2000 WL 347177 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 30, 2000) (either action for sole purpose of harming plaintiff or use of dishonest, criminal, or fraudulent means), aff'd, 280 F.3d 209 (2d Cir. 2002); In re Gormally, 550 B.R. 27 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. Apr. 25, 2016) (usual rule requiring showing of crime or tort makes exception for conduct for the sole purpose of inflicting economic harm on plaintiff; filing lis pendens, with knowledge that underlying litigation was meritless and that property owner was negotiating a sale, was abuse of process); IN Energy Solutions, Inc. v. Realgy, L.L.C., 969 A.2d 807 (Conn. App. Ct. 2009) (must show either malice or improper means such as fraud or intimidation); Blakey v. Victory Equip. Sales, 576 S.E.2d 288 (Ga. Ct. App. 2002) (malice is essential element; not shown where creditor had good-faith belief that identity theft victim was complicit in misuse of name); Morgan Asset Holding Corp. v. CoBank, 736 N.E.2d 1268 (Ind. Ct. App. 2000) (where senior creditor acted to protect itself, it had legitimate reason for its action, so interference with rights of subordinate creditor not tortious); Walts v. First Union Mortg. Corp., 686 N.Y.S.2d 428 (N.Y. App. Div. 1999) (dismissing claim of tortious interference with contractual relations against insurer that billed banks for mortgage insurance premiums that were no longer required because loan principal had dropped to 75% of appraised value; it sent bills out of economic justification, not malice); Filmar Racing, Inc. v. Stewart, 541 S.E.2d 733 (N.C. Ct. App. 2001) ("lack of justification" element requires showing of an act not reasonably related to legitimate business interest and "no motive for interference other than malice"). See also Smith v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2014 WL 6790749 (N.D. Tex. Dec. 2, 2014) (lender's employee did not tortiously interfere with lender's commitment to make loan wrongful.[225] If the wrongful act is a false report to a credit reporting agency, the claim may be preempted by the Fair Credit Reporting Act.[226]

Only a stranger to a contract can tortiously interfere with it; one who has a direct economic interest in the contract, or is party to the contractual arrangement, is not a stranger.[227] For example, a mortgage servicer will not be liable for interfering with the homeowner's relationship with the lender unless it is acting for its own interest or commits an independently wrongful act.[228] Similarly, the Hawaii Supreme Court held that an attorney representing a client will not be liable for interference with the other party's contract or prospective economic relationships unless the plaintiff can show actions outside the scope of representation and actual malice—that is, a desire to harm, independent of the duty to protect the client.[229] to plaintiffs where he obtained no personal benefit from sabotaging refinancing). But see Others First, Inc v. Better Bus. Bureau of Greater St. Louis, Inc., 829 F.3d 576 (8th Cir. 2016) (Mo. law; must show improper means, i.e., independently wrongful acts, for either tort); SIRQ, Inc. v. The Layton Companies, Inc., 379 P.3d 1237 (Utah 2016) (Utah definition of interference with business expectancy has recently been narrowed to require showing of improper means; showing of improper purpose is insufficient).

225 Pierce v. Zoetis, Inc., 818 F.3d 274 (7th Cir. 2016) (Ind. law) (must show illegal, not merely tortious, act; defamation is not sufficient); Muir v. Navy Fed. Credit Union, 529 F.3d 1100 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (bank's wrongful debit to consumer's account was conversion, so consumer's claim of tortious interference with prospective economic relations should have gone forward); Lombard v. Economic Dev. Admin., 280 F.3d 209 (2d Cir. 2002) (dishonest, criminal, or fraudulent); Davric Marine Corp. v. Rancourt, 216 F.3d 143 (1st Cir. 2000) (fraud or intimidation); Kahalas v. Schiller, 2016 WL 659680 (D. Mass. Feb. 18, 2016) (must show wrongfulness in addition to the interference; defamation, threats, or misrepresentations are sufficient); Dommel Properties L.L.C. v. Jonestown Bank and Trust Co., 2013 WL 1149265 (M.D. Pa. Mar. 19, 2013) (imparting truthful information not tortious, but former owner stated a claim if tax sale purchaser informed tenant it was new owner at time when title had not passed); Hoffman v. Connecticut, 2009 WL 2366001 (D. Me. July 29, 2009) (wrongful means sufficiently alleged, here fraud), modified on other grounds and adopted by 671 F. Supp. 2d 166 (D. Me. 2009); Ford v. Torres, 2009 WL 537563 (E.D. Va. Mar. 3, 2009) (false statement is wrongful means sufficient to support claim for intentional interference with prospective economic relations); North Shore Pharmacy Serv., Inc. v. Breslin Assoc. Consulting, L.L.C., 491 F. Supp. 2d 111 (D. Mass. 2007) (claim stated for tortious interference with auditor's contract with nursing home chain, where defendant pharmacy refused to participate in audit process, making it impossible to complete audit; jury question as to wrongful means); Italverde Trading Inc. v. Four Bills of Lading, 485 F. Supp. 2d 187 (E.D.N.Y. 2007) (independent tort sufficient to support wrongful conduct element of tortious interference with prospective economic advantage); Blair v. Supportkids, Inc., 222 F. Supp. 2d 1038 (N.D. Ill. 2002) (obligors stated claim with allegations that private child support collector sent income withholding notices to employers without required court order); Downes-Patterson Corp. v. First Nat'l Supermarkets, 780 A.2d 967 (Conn. App. Ct. 2001) ("improper motive or improper means" element of tort requires showing that interference was wrongful "by some measure beyond the fact of the interference"); Saye v. Deloitte & Touche, L.L.P., 670 S.E.2d 818 (Ga. Ct. App. 2008) (where wrongful means alleged is defamation, must show all elements of defamation); Spengler v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 878 A.2d 628 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 2005) (must show improper means such as violence, intimidation, defamation, injurious falsehood, fraud, criminal act, or bad faith institution or threat of groundless civil suits or criminal prosecutions); Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Sturges, 52 S.W.3d 711 (Tex. 2001) (interference with prospective business advantage requires showing of "independently tortious or unlawful means"). See also Matrix Group Ltd. v. Rawlings Sporting Goods Co., 477 F.3d 583 (8th Cir. 2007) (Fla. law; degree of wrongfulness needed to support claim of tortious interference with contract is less than that required for punitive damages); Carl v. Republic Sec. Bank, 282 F. Supp. 1358 (S.D. Fla. 2003) (no independently wrongful act; bank that set off account had contractual right of setoff and no notice of special purpose); First Nat'l Bank v. Cunningham, 308 P.3d 30 (Kan. Ct. App. 2013) (providing truthful information not wrongful); Mantia v. Hansen, 79 P.3d 404 (Or. Ct. App. 2003) (if the improper means alleged is filing of a baseless lawsuit, plaintiff must show all the elements of malicious prosecution; not shown here because no termination in favor).

226 See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 10.7 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

227 Johnson v. Wellborn, 418 Fed. Appx. 809 (11th Cir. 2011) (Fla. law; persons who are acting as creditor's agents cannot tortiously interfere with mortgage contract between creditor and consumer); Thompson v. Lyndon S. Ins. Co., 2018 WL 4095920 (N.D. Ala. Aug. 28, 2018) (lender who was listed as additional loss payee on car insurance was not a stranger to borrower's contract with insurance company); Brooks v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 107 F. Supp. 3d 1290 (N.D. Ga. 2015) (dismissing intentional interference claim; lender was not stranger to contracts between borrower and the tenants of the mortgaged property, because the security agreement allowed lender to collect the rents if borrower defaulted); Ragan v. Hancor, Inc., 920 F. Supp. 2d 810 (N.D. Ohio 2013) (parent corporation cannot tortiously interfere with contract with subsidiary); Taylor v. McNichols, 243 P.3d 642, 660 (Idaho 2010); Ihebereme v. Capital One, 730 F. Supp. 2d 40 (D.D.C. 2010) (lender cannot tortiously interfere with mortgage), aff'd, 573 Fed. Appx. 2 (D.C. Cir. 2014); Kevilegian v. Trott & Trott, P.C., 771 F. Supp. 2d 763 (E.D. Mich. 2010) (parties to a contract or their agents, here mortgage lenders and servicers, cannot tortiously interfere); Chapman v. Chase Manhattan Mortg. Co., 2007 WL 2815246 (N.D. Okla. Sept. 24, 2007) (person cannot tortiously interfere with contract to which it is a party); All Fleet Refinishing, Inc. v. West Ga. Nat'l Bank, 634 S.E.2d 802 (Ga. Ct. App. 2006); LaSonde v. Chase Mortg. Co., 577 S.E.2d 822 (Ga. Ct. App. 2003) (non-party with "legitimate economic interest," here lender who provided mortgage for previous owner and refused to let new owner assume, not a stranger, so cannot tortiously interfere). But cf. U.S. Capital Funding VI, Ltd. v. Patterson Bankshares, Inc., 137 F. Supp. 3d 1340 (S.D. Ga. 2015) (consultant that advised client to act in a way that caused it to breach its contract with plaintiff was a stranger to the contract; consultant was not a party to contract, nor to business relationship that gave rise to contract, and had no economic interest in contract); Sparkman v. CONSOL Energy, Inc., 571 S.W.3d 569 (Ky. 2019) (parent corporation's privilege to interfere in affairs of subsidiary may be lost by malice, but not sufficiently alleged here).

228 Stapp v. Bank of Am., 2012 WL 3853440 (E.D. Tex. Sept. 5, 2012) (servicer cannot tortiously interfere with loan contract unless it acts "solely in its own interests"; not shown here), adopted, 2012 WL 4502422 (E.D. Tex. Sept. 28, 2012); Parker v. BAC Home Loan Servicing, L.P., 831 F. Supp. 2d 88 (D.D.C. 2011) (exception if agent acts for its own pecuniary interest or commits independently wrongful act; borrower stated claim if systemic failures of servicer's recordkeeping resulted in refusal to accept loan modification payments and forward them to lender, but claim will fail if servicer acted at behest of lender).

229 Kahala Royal Corp. v. Goodsill, Anderson, Quinn and Stifel, 151 P.3d 732, 748–754 (Haw. 2007) (finding no liability in absence of evidence that attorneys had a desire to harm that was independent of their duty to their clients or that they acted for personal gain or with ill will).

15.4.2 Tortious Interference with a Contract

A claim of tortious interference with a contract may arise in the debt collection context where a creditor prevents a debtor from benefiting from a contract with a third party.[230] For example, the collector's contacts with the debtor's employer may cause the debtor to lose a job. As another example, a mortgage lender or servicer may commit this tort if it interferes with a property owner's contract with a tenant.[231]

One court has recited the elements of tortious interference with contract as "the existence of a valid contract between the plaintiff and a third party, defendant's knowledge of that contract, defendant's intentional procurement of the third party's breach of that contract without justification, actual breach of the contract and damages resulting therefrom."[232] The elements of the tort can be translated to the employment context as:

- That the consumer was employed;
- That the collector knew of the employment contract;
- That the collector intended to bring about its termination;[233]
- That the employer did terminate the contract;[234] and
- That the interference by the collector proximately caused the employer to end the plaintiff's employment contract.

Generally, the plaintiff must show interference with an existing contract, not a prospective contract.[235] Liability under 230 Dawson v. Litton Loan Servicing, L.P., 2013 WL 1283848 (D. Colo. Mar. 28, 2013) (failed loan modification; servicer tortiously interfered with contract with lender if it misdirected borrowers' performance and thwarted attempts at cure); Nash v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 943 F. Supp. 2d 640 (E.D. Va. 2013) (mishandled loan modification not tortious, but refusal to correct errors and failure to cooperate in efforts to avoid default sufficient to state claim); Dorr v. Sacred Heart Hosp., 597 N.W.2d 462 (Wis. Ct. App. 1999). But cf. McCarthy v. Wachovia Bank, 759 F. Supp. 2d 265, 280 (E.D.N.Y. 2011) (judgment creditor's garnishment of debtor's bank account did not interfere with debtor's contract with bank, as that contract authorized bank to comply with garnishment orders).

231 See, e.g., Sovereign Bank v. Sturgis, 863 F. Supp. 2d 75 (D. Mass. 2012) (claim stated where, after void foreclosure, lender interfered with homeowner's contract with tenant by demanding rent from borrower's tenant); Webb v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6141464 (D. Md. Dec. 9, 2011) (refusing to dismiss claim that mortgage servicer intentionally interfered with homeowner's contract with tenant where it sent agents to the property, threatened to lock tenant out, and called tenant repeatedly, all at a time when homeowner was in arrears but no foreclosure had occurred); Smith v. J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, 2011 WL 5373969 (D. Nev. Nov. 4 2011) (contacting borrower's tenants and demanding they pay rent to lender); Barbanti v. Quality Loan Serv. Co., 2006 WL 3692638 (E.D. Wash. Dec. 11, 2006) (purchaser under contract for deed stated tortious interference claim against original seller who ordered plaintiff's commercial tenant to leave, causing tenant to stop paying rent); VonTurkovich v. APC Capital Partners, L.L.C., 259 F. Supp. 2d 314 (D. Vt. 2003) (lender's "threatening and overbearing" questioning of borrower's long-term tenant, which caused tenant to relocate, had no proper relationship to assignment of rents; borrower stated claim for tortious interference). See also Dommel Properties L.L.C. v. Jonestown Bank and Trust Co., 2013 WL 1149265 (M.D. Pa. Mar. 19, 2013) (imparting truthful information not tortious, but former owner stated claim if tax sale purchaser informed tenant it was new owner at time when title had not passed). But cf. Brooks v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 107 F. Supp. 3d 1290 (N.D. Ga. 2015) (dismissing intentional interference claim; lender was not stranger to contracts between borrower and the tenants of the mortgaged property, because the security agreement allowed lender to collect the rents if borrower defaulted); Winding v. Cal-Western Reconveyance Corp., 2011 WL 221321 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 24, 2011) (wrongful interference not shown where debtor's tenant broke lease after lender posted notice required by foreclosure law).

232 Astor Holdings, Inc. v. Roski, 325 F. Supp. 2d 251 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) (also questioning whether New York law requires proof of "but for" causation). See also Werbicky v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 1248697 (D. Nev. Mar.28, 2016) (reciting list of elements; must show specific intent to interfere unless criminal or fraudulent conduct is alleged); City Bank v. Compass Bank, 717 F. Supp. 2d 599 (W.D. Tex. 2010) (non-consumer case with detailed discussion of elements).

233 See Walters v. Fid. Mortg. of California, 730 F. Supp. 2d 1185 (E.D. Cal 2010) (need not show actual intent; just "knowledge that interference is certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of [defendant's] action;" interference may be incidental to other purpose, if interference is known to be a necessary consequence); Mumford v. ITT Commercial Fin. Corp., 858 P.2d 1041 (Utah Ct. App. 1993) (intent requirement is met if defendant knows that the interference is substantially certain to occur as a result of defendant's action). Cf. Fuller v. Exxon Mobil, M.C., 2009 WL 91707 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 14, 2009) (collection call to workplace not actionable without evidence that defendant had specific purpose of interfering with debtor's employment).

234 Robinson v. Managed Accounts Receivable, Inc., 654 F. Supp. 2d 1051 (C.D. Cal. 2009) (military officer's fear that collection calls at base could cause loss of promotion or charges of conduct unbecoming an officer too speculative to support claim); Challen v. Town & Country Charge, 545 F. Supp. 1014 (N.D. Ill. 1982) (creditor's letter enlisting employer's support in collecting the debt not tortious interference with contract in absence of allegation that employee was fired). But see Griffin v. Turner, 830 S.E.2d 239 (Ga. Ct. App. 2019) ("interference with a contractual right or relationship need not result in a breach of the contract to be actionable; it is sufficient if the invasion retards performance of the duties under the contract or makes the performance more difficult or expensive;" refusing to dismiss claim by school photographer who resigned after defendant defamed him to school authorities and threatened to defame him to parents).

235 Jones v. Option One Mortg. Corp., 466 Fed. Appx. 449 (6th Cir. 2012) (Ohio law; expert testimony that defendant's misstatements reduced credit score below level needed to qualify for a loan was insufficient; must show specific contract that would have been made if credit score had been higher); Banga v. Allstate Ins. Co., 2009 WL 3073925 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 22, 2009) (claim fails because no showing of specific contract with third party), rejected in part on other grounds by 2010 WL 1267841 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 31, 2010); Dulin v. Bd. of Comm'rs of Greenwood Leflore Hosp., 2009 WL 2922984 (N.D. Miss. Sept. 8, 2009) (must show existing contract, that would have been performed but for the interference); Gagliardi v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 2009 WL 365647 (W.D. Pa. Feb. 12, 2009) (claim fails because no contract identified), aff'd, 357 Fed. Appx. 413 (3d Cir. 2009); Roybal v. Equifax, 2008 WL 4532447 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 9, 2008) (denying claim because no showing of interference with existing contract; consumer's attempt to refinance was defeated by inaccurate reporting); Util. Metal Research v. Coleman, 2008 WL 850456 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 28, 2008) (denying claim because debtor fails to identify specific contract, or show that creditor's actions were a substantial factor in disrupting contractual relations; difficult to prove where debtor's business was in process of failing); Chapman v. Chase Manhattan Mortg. Co., 2007 WL 2815246 (N.D. Okla. Sept. 24, 2007) (interference with unsuccessful refinancing insufficient, as no contract had been formed). See generally § 15.4.3, infra (tortious interference with prospective economic relations).

this tort may protect employment at will.[236] Some courts, however, treat interference with contracts terminable at will as interference with prospective economic relations and require a showing of independently wrongful means.[237] An employer contact that violates state or federal debt collection law would probably meet the standard of wrongfulness.

Causation can be established by showing that the consumer was discharged and that the collector had either threatened to cause the job loss or had taken steps which put the job in jeopardy.[238] If the employer refuses to testify or asserts other reasons for firing the consumer, the consumer may still be able to establish proximate cause by circumstantial evidence. For example, proximate cause can be inferred when there is a short period of time between the collector's contact with the employer and the termination of employment.[239]

Examples of claims against creditors for interference with contract include:

- An employee whose former company had defaulted on a debt to a supplier was fired after the supplier doubled its prices to his new employer, told the employer that "everything would be all right" if it fired the employee, and repeatedly asked whether the employee still worked there.[240]
- Damages were awarded to consumers for the seizure of half their modular home to coerce payment of a debt owed not by the consumers but by the contractor who was installing the home. The seizure interfered with the consumers' contract with the contractor.[241]
- A court refused to dismiss a claim that an insurance company tortiously interfered with a homeowner's relationship with his mortgage company by entering into an exclusive contract with it to force-place insurance at inflated premium rates.[242]
- Summary judgment for consumers was upheld against a hospital which placed a lien on their personal injury recovery for the full amount of a medical bill, instead of filing a claim against their health maintenance organization (HMO), where the contracts between the hospital, the HMO, and the consumers required the hospital to accept a lesser amount from the HMO. The hospital deliberately prevented the consumers from benefiting from their contract with the HMO. Because the hospital acted with intentional disregard for the patient's rights, the issue of punitive damages should have been submitted to the jury.[243]
- After being told that the consumers were represented by counsel, a collector continued to threaten and harass them, causing them to violate a clause of their contract with their attorney that forbade them from dealing directly with an opposing party.[244]

The measure of damages for tortious interference with a contract is the same as that for breach of contract: the amount necessary to put the plaintiff in the same position they would have been in if the contract had been performed.[245]

236 Western Air Charter, Inc. v. Sojitz Corp., 2019 WL 4509304 (C.D. Cal. May 2, 2019) (interference with an at-will contract may be tortious interference with contract—not just with prospective economic advantage—if an independently wrongful act is alleged); Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co., 791 P.2d 587, 590–591 (Cal. 1990) (interference with at-will contract is actionable interference with contractual relationship, on theory that contract "at the will of the parties, respectively does not make it one at the will of others"; "[t]he actionable wrong lies in the inducement to break the contract or to sever the relationship, not in the kind of contract or relationship so disrupted, whether it is written or oral, enforceable or not enforceable"); Griffin v. Turner, 830 S.E.2d 239 (Ga. Ct. App. 2019) (refusing to dismiss tortious interference with contract claim; at-will employment can give rise to contractual rights); Fellhauer v. City of Geneva, 568 N.E.2d 870 (Ill. 1991); Levens v. Campbell 733 So. 2d 753, 761 (Miss. 1999) (an at-will employee may have a cause of action for tortious interference with contract).

237 Guzik v. Albright, 2018 WL 4386084, at *6 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 14, 2018) (when employment contract is at will, employee can only bring claim for tortious interference with prospective contract, and must show that defendant used wrongful means, violated a duty to plaintiff, or acted with malice); Herron v. Fannie Mae, 861 F.3d 160 (D.C. Cir. 2017) (noting that courts are "especially unwilling" to find reasonable expectations in at-will relationships); Transcription Communications Corp. v. John Muir Health, 2009 WL 666943 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 13, 2009); Ford v. Torres, 2009 WL 537563 (E.D. Va. Mar. 3, 2009); Selinger v. GF Health Prods., Inc., 885 N.Y.S.2d 713 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2009). See § 15.4.3, infra.

238 See Janvrin v. Continental Resources, Inc., 934 F.3d 845, 852 (8th Cir. 2019) (S.D. law) (causation sufficiently shown where company would not have terminated independent trucker's contract if it had not received call from defendant customer demanding that he be terminated); Gottlieb v. Culp, 2002 WL 10064 (Cal. Ct. App. Jan. 3, 2002) (issue of material fact whether supplier, which refused to sell fabric to manufacturer because it employed an individual whose former company had defaulted on debt to supplier, caused manufacturer to breach its contract with the employee). But cf. Strickland v. Univ. of Scranton, 700 A.2d 979 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1997) (debtor failed to raise fact issue whether single contact with employer was "but for" cause of loss of employment; fact that debt collection lawsuit resulted in unfavorable publicity was insufficient absent evidence of purposeful action specifically intended to harm the present or proposed contract).

239 Warschauser v. Brooklyn Furniture Co., 144 N.Y.S. 257 (N.Y. App. Div. 1913) (employee fired two days after creditor threatened to cause termination if employee did not pay delinquent installment).

240 Gottlieb v. Culp, 2002 WL 10064 (Cal. Ct. App. Jan. 3, 2002). See also Hill Grocery Co. v. Carroll, 136 So. 789 (Ala. 1931) (creditor caused debtor to be fired from job); Long v. Newby, 488 P.2d 719 (Alaska 1971) (same); London Guar. & Accident Co. v. Horn, 69 N.E. 526 (Ill. 1903) (upholding award of damages for employee who lost job because his refusal to settle claim with insurer led insurer to threaten employer with cancellation of entire insurance policy); Warschauser v. Brooklyn Furniture Co., 144 N.Y.S. 257 (N.Y. App. Div. 1913) (employee fired two days after creditor threatened to cause termination if employee did not pay delinquent installment).

241 Cady v. Marcella, 729 N.E.2d 1125 (Mass. App. Ct. 2000).

242 Persaud v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 4260853, at *14–16 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 8, 2014). See also Burdick v. Bank of Am., 99 F. Supp. 3d 1372, 1379 (S.D. Fla. 2015).

243 Dorr v. Sacred Heart Hosp., 597 N.W.2d 462 (Wis. Ct. App. 1999). But see Morrow v. Cmty. Health Systems, Inc., 2017 WL 4641797 (M.D. Tenn. Oct. 17, 2017) (healthcare provider refused payments from health insurance and sought full recovery from tort recoveries; tortious interference not shown because patients were neither parties to, nor third-party beneficiaries of, insurance companies' contracts with providers).

244 Polis v. Am. Liberty Fin., Inc., 237 F. Supp. 2d 681 (S.D. W. Va. 2002).

245 In re EZ Pay Serv., Inc., 390 B.R. 421 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2007).

15.4.3 Tortious Interference with Prospective Economic Relations

The elements of tortious interference with prospective economic relations have been stated as: (1) a reasonable expectation of entering into a relationship; (2) defendant's knowledge of that expectancy; (3) intentional[246] and unjustified interference by defendant that caused a termination of that expectancy; and (4) damage to plaintiff as a result of defendant's conduct.[247] A claim may arise if the creditor's or collector's wrongful acts interfere with the consumer's ability to obtain other credit[248] or enter into some other transaction.[249] A consumer claiming tortious interference with prospective contractual relations must show a reasonable expectation of entering into the contract.[250] Courts may require that there be an independent tortious or wrongful act.[251]

246 See, e.g., Johnson v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2017 WL 3401303 (W.D. Ky. Aug. 8, 2017) (must show that interference with prospective contract was intentional; dismissing claim where mortgage servicer's inaccurate reports that property owners were delinquent was merely negligent).

247 Hukic v. Aurora Loan Serv., Inc., 2006 WL 1457787 (N.D. Ill. May 22, 2006) (claim sufficiently alleged where willful failure to correct inaccurate reporting resulted in credit denials), later op. aff'd on other grounds, 588 F.3d 420 (7th Cir. 2009) (affirming dismissal of other counts and later entry of summary judgment against consumer on tortious interference count). See also Petit v. Key Bank, 688 A.2d 427 (Me. 1996) (listing elements as: existence of valid contract or prospective economic advantage, interference with that contract or advantage through fraud or intimidation, and damages proximately caused by interference; proof may be by preponderance).

248 Dawson v. Litton Loan Servicing, L.P., 2013 WL 1283848 (D. Colo. Mar. 28, 2013) (if servicer purported to offer loan modification, with intent to "pull the rug out from under" borrowers, interference with expectancy shown); Roybal v. Equifax, 2008 WL 4532447 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 9, 2008) (claim stated where consumer was negotiating with specific lenders during time when defendant credit reporting agency knew of inaccurate information, but had not deleted it); Hukic v. Aurora Loan Serv., Inc., 2006 WL 1457787 (N.D. Ill. May 22, 2006) (declining to dismiss tortious interference claim where willful failure to correct inaccurate reporting resulted in credit denials; reasonable expectation, defendant's knowledge, intentional interference, and injury sufficiently alleged), later op. aff'd on other grounds, 588 F.3d 420 (7th Cir. 2009) (affirming dismissal of other counts and later entry of summary judgment against consumer on tortious interference count).

249 In re Houston Reg'l Sports Network, L.L.C., 547 B.R. 717 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 16, 2016) (tortious interference sufficiently alleged; plaintiff was able to enter into transaction with third party, but at much lower sales price than would have been received in absence of defendant's interference); Smith v. Chase Bank & Mortg., 2011 WL 939288 (D.S.C. Jan. 13, 2011) (refusing to dismiss claim for tortious interference where creditor's assistant manager spoke with prospective tenant, who then decided not to rent from debtor-landlord), adopted, 2011 WL 938409 (D.S.C. Mar. 16, 2011). But cf. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n v. Obradovich, 2016 WL 1213920 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2017) (claim fails; must show conduct directed to person with whom plaintiff hopes for a business relationship; not shown where prospective purchasers of home withdrew because lender's property service had damaged the property, but neither lender nor property service had directed any communication or activity toward the prospective purchasers).

250 Kllosowski v. City of Bay City, 696 Fed. Appx. 707 (6th Cir. 2017) (city employee who told seasonal employee not to come back next year did not tortiously interfere with business expectations; employee had no reasonable expectation of being given this assignment every year); Herron v. Fannie Mae, 861 F.3d 160 (D.C. Cir. 2017) (noting that courts are "especially unwilling" to find reasonable expectations in at-will relationships); Muir v. Navy Fed. Credit Union, 529 F.3d 1100 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (bank had actual knowledge that consumer was pursuing a business opportunity at time it converted funds from consumer's account); Giacalone v. Experian PLC, 2013 WL 3199982 (N.D. Ill. June 24, 2013) (claim based on inaccurate credit reporting must show that specific third party accessed the information and denied credit as a result); In re Eze, 565 B.R. 464 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2017) (damage is essential element of tortious interference with business expectancy; not shown here because insufficient detail about possible contracts and reasons for denial); Edeh v. Equifax Info. Serv., Inc., 919 F. Supp. 2d 1006 (D. Minn. 2013) (consumer failed to show that credit would have been granted if report timely provided); DT Apartment Group, L.P. v. CWCapital, L.L.C., 2012 WL 6693192 (N.D. Tex. Dec. 26, 2012) (letter of intent from prospective purchaser of real estate sufficient to show reasonable expectation); Pulliam v. Am. Express Travel Related Serv. Co., 2009 WL 1586012 (N.D. Ill. June 4, 2009) (must show more than "a wish or a hope"; claim fails where consumer fails to allege what loans he applied for and why, but for misinformation reported by defendant, he would have qualified); Helena Chem. Co. v. Huggins, 2008 WL 4908463 (D.S.C. Nov. 13, 2008) (prospect must be "a close certainty"; not shown where general discussions about purchase of business had not reached agreement as to price); Roybal v. Equifax, 2008 WL 4532447 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 9, 2008) (consumer negotiating with specific lenders stated claim for interference with prospective economic relations, but fact question as to damages because accurate derogatory information also in file); Thomas v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2004 WL 1630779 (N.D. Ill. July 16, 2004) (claim stated where current lender knew of refinancing efforts, consumer had reasonable chance of refinancing, current lender persistently reported three missed payments after consumer presented canceled checks showing payment, and this caused denial of refinancing); In re Gormally, 550 B.R. 27 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. Apr. 25, 2016) (reasonable expectation shown where third party persistently attempted to buy plaintiff's property on which defendant placed abusive lis pendens); In re McWade Properties, L.L.C., 2012 WL 5897184 (Bankr. D.D.C. Nov. 7, 2012) (borrower failed to allege that lender's refusal to provide payoff amount and premature posting of foreclosure signs resulted in loss of sale to specific buyers); Havilah Real Prop. Services v. VLK, L.L.C., 108 A.3d 334 (D.C. 2015) (reasonable expectation shown where landowner had actively marketed properties, buyers had expressed interest, and some had begun negotiating contracts that fell through because of defendant's bad-faith filing of litigation). But cf. Personnel Dep't, Inc. v. Prof'l Staff Leasing Corp., 297 Fed. Appx. 773 (10th Cir. 2008) (Colo. law; claim of tortious interference with prospective business relations does not require showing of specific relationship or customer).

251 Matter of Dallas Roadster, Ltd., 846 F.3d 112 (5th Cir. 2017) (Tex. law; for interference with business expectancy must show independently tortious or unlawful act); Pierce v. Zoetis, Inc., 818 F.3d 274 (7th Cir. 2016) (Ind. law; must show illegal, not merely tortious, act; defamation is not sufficient); ProTradeNet, L.L.C. v. Predictive Profiles, Inc., 369 F. Supp. 3d 788 (W.D. Tex. 2019) (sharp or unfair conduct not sufficient, must be independently tortious); In re Ivie, 587 B.R. 729 (D. Idaho 2018) (wrongful means shown; unpaid subcontractor on project to build fiber optic network sent meritless mechanic's lien notices to homeowners and businesses served by the network, predictably unleashing frenzy of complaints to project manager); Guzik v. Albright, 2018 WL 4386084 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 14 2018) (bad faith threat of litigation against entity

One court held that a consumer alleged sufficient facts to state a claim for interference with prospective economic relations when the debtor ceased making payments on a truck after discovering that the seller had understated the mileage by 100,000 miles. Even though it was aware of the understated mileage, the bank, the assignee of the note, reported to a credit reporting agency that the debt was delinquent. As a result, the consumer was denied other credit. The court held that the consumer was justified in ceasing to make payments and that the bank knew or should have known that a report that the debt was delinquent would unlawfully interfere with the debtor's ability to obtain future credit.[252]

Some courts hold that the defendant must have knowledge of a specific prospective relationship and intend to interfere with it, for example by sabotaging a refinancing.[253] Intent can be shown if the defendant knows that interference is substantially certain to occur as a result of its actions.[254] In one case a consumer's allegation that he was denied credit after a credit reporting agency furnished inaccurate information to the lender, even though it was notified of problems with the information, was sufficient to state a claim for intentional interference with a prospective contractual relationship.[255] "Reckless disregard" for the truth was sufficient to show intent, and the agency's knowledge of the purpose for which lenders use credit reports was sufficient to show knowledge of the prospective relationship. A banker's testimony that the consumer might have received the loan but for the incorrect information was sufficient to show interference.

15.4.4 Justification As a Defense

Justification is a defense to a claim of tortious interference with a contract or with prospective economic relations. In determining whether a creditor's actions are justified, courts will consider: (1) the nature of the defendant's conduct; (2) the defendant's motive if it claims to have exercised a colorable legal right in good faith; (3) the plaintiff's interests in the contract; (4) the interests sought to be advanced by the defendant; (5) society's interests in protecting the defendant's freedom of action and the plaintiff's contractual interests; (6) the proximity or remoteness of the defendant's conduct to the interference; and (7) the relations between the plaintiff and the defendant.[256] When the act that interferes with the contract or with which plaintiff seeks economic relations is a wrongful means); Kabalas v. Schiller, 2016 WL 659680 (D. Mass. Feb. 18, 2016) (must show wrongfulness in addition to interference; defamation, threats, or misrepresentations are sufficient); SWL, L.L.C. v. NextGear Capital, Inc, 131 N.E.3d 746 (Ind. Ct. App. 2019) (defamation is not sufficient to support independently wrongful element); Thimjon Farms P'ship v. Int'l Bank and Trust, 837 N.W.2d 327, 334–335 (N.D. 2013); SIRQ, Inc. v. The Layton Companies, Inc., 379 P.3d 1237 (Utah 2016) (must show improper means). See generally § 15.4.1, supra.

252 Maberry v. Said, 911 F. Supp. 1393, 1405 (D. Kan. 1995) (applying Mo. law).

253 Muir v. Navy Fed. Credit Union, 529 F.3d 1100 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (sufficiently alleged bank's knowledge that consumer was pursuing business opportunity at time it converted his funds); Guzik v. Albright, 2018 WL 4386084 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 14, 2018) (fact issue whether defendant actually knew of prospective consulting agreement at time when it made threats to company with which plaintiff was negotiating agreement); Lanton v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, Inc., 2016 WL 4734674 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 8, 2016) (defendant's incorrect credit reporting prevented small business from obtaining financing to buy vehicles to fulfill existing or offered contracts; interference with business expectations claim fails because no showing that defendant knew of specific contract opportunities); Nelson v. Canon USA, Inc., 2008 WL 410649 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 12, 2008) (allegation that creditor knew of, and thwarted, sale of equipment that would have brought in sufficient funds to pay debtor's obligations states claim); Italverde Trading Inc. v. Four Bills of Lading, 485 F. Supp. 2d 187 (E.D.N.Y. 2007) (must show knowledge of specific business relations); Chapman v. Chase Manhattan Mortg. Co., 2007 WL 2815246 (N.D. Okla. Sept. 24, 2007) (consumer failed to allege creditor's knowledge of refinancing attempt, or intent to interfere); Thomas v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2004 WL 1630779 (N.D. Ill. July 16, 2004) (claim stated where current lender knew of consumer's refinancing efforts); Robb v. Bond Purchase, L.L.C., 580 S.W.3d 70 (Mo. Ct. App. 2019) (need not allege details about contract or expectancy, just enough to enable defendant, upon reasonable inquiry, to ascertain those facts; here, knowledge of potential buyer was sufficient).

254 Bank of Commerce v. Jefferson Enters., L.L.C., 303 P.3d 183 (Idaho 2013).

255 Yeager v. TRW, Inc., 984 F. Supp. 517 (E.D. Tex. 1997).

256 See Jacked Up, L.L.C. v. Sara Lee Corp., 854 F.3d 797 (5th Cir. 2017) (both Illinois and Texas recognize defense of "privilege" in tortious interference with contract cases); Noble Sys. Corp. v. Alorica Cent., L.L.C., 543 F.3d 978 (8th Cir. 2008) (Minn. Law; defense of justification is shown if defendant pursued its legal rights via legal means or has a legitimate interest, economic or otherwise, in the contract or expectancy sought to be protected, and employs no improper means; senior creditor who foreclosed and seized collateral did not tortiously interfere with junior creditor's contract); Wilson v. Everbank, 77 F. Supp. 3d 1202 (S.D. Fla. 2015) (Fla., N.Y., and Ill. law; privilege to interfere with contract to protect one's own economic interests will be lost if interferer acts in bad faith, "maliciously or with conspiratorial motives"; bad faith sufficiently alleged here where lender charged "unearned commissions" to cover kickbacks to insurers for force-placed insurance); Herzig v. Suntrust Mortg., 2014 WL 1319468 (W.D. Ky. Mar. 31, 2014) (sending foreclosure notice to debtor's tenant was justified; necessary to protect tenant's statutory rights in foreclosure); Rapid Circuits, Inc. v. Sun Nat'l Bank, 2011 WL 1666919 (E.D. Pa. May 3, 2011) (justification shown if creditor, which had security interest in plaintiff debtor's receivables, sent letters directing payment to creditor only to plaintiff's current debtors; but defense fails if letters sent to customers who did not currently owe anything, in effort to publicize plaintiff's troubles and force it out of business), order entered by 2011 WL 1667917 (E.D. Pa. May 3, 2011); Vinas v. Chubb Corp., 499 F. Supp. 2d 427 (S.D.N.Y. 2007) (fact issues as to economic justification of surety company that disparaged client's accountants); Gen. Elec. Capital Corp. v. Commercial Serv. Group, 485 F. Supp. 2d 1015 (N.D. Iowa 2007) (no tortious interference where creditor simply exercised its contractual rights in protection of its financial interests); Italverde Trading Inc. v. Four Bills of Lading, 485 F. Supp. 2d 187 (E.D.N.Y. 2007) (economic justification defense fails if malice or fraudulent or illegal acts proven); Farm Credit Midsouth, PCA v. Bollinger, 548 S.W.3d 164 (Ark. Ct. App. 2018) (crop lender's interference in farmer's relationship with prospective purchaser of crops was justified by lender's need to protect own interests); DVG Pub. Adjustment Services, L.L.C. v. People's United Bank, 2016 WL 3097013 (Conn. Super. Ct. May 12, 2016) (freezing of account was justified; bank knew it would interfere with depositor's business, but was protecting itself while it negotiated about improperly endorsed checks deposited in plaintiff's account); Sulu v. Megana, 879 N.W.2d 674 (Neb. 2016) (must show that interference was unjustified; no liability for giving truthful prospective contract is the initiation of litigation or acts such as the filing of a lis pendens that are ancillary to litigation, the District of Columbia's highest court holds that a defendant can claim only a conditional good-faith privilege, not the absolute privilege applicable to statements made in judicial proceedings.[257] The burden is on the defendant to prove justification or privilege.[258]

15.5 Defamation

15.5.1 Overview of Elements

The law of libel and slander is subject to complex local variation, and decisions are often inconsistent even within the same jurisdiction. The development of a particular jurisdiction's case and statutory law therefore requires especially close scrutiny. The law of defamation has its own vocabulary and requirements of pleading, damages, and privilege, which will be discussed here only as relevant to debt collection.

The law of defamation is intended to protect a person's reputation; it presumes that others in the community have a good opinion of the person defamed. Libel encompasses both written and recorded defamation, while slander applies in cases of oral, televised, or gesticulated defamation.

Libel is generally held to comprise the following elements:

- It must be a statement that is partially or wholly false;
- It must be communicated to a third party;[259]
- It must be injurious to reputation, esteem, or good will;[260] and information to another or "honest advice within the scope of a request for the advice"; here, advising student that she could write to school board if she was dissatisfied with teacher); Thimjon Farms P'ship v. Int'l Bank and Trust, 837 N.W.2d 327 (N.D. 2013) (bank had right to force company to turn over plaintiff customers' deposits to repay line of credit, even if this caused company to fail and customers to lose their deposits); Bridge v. Park Nat'l Bank, 903 N.E.2d 702 (Ohio Ct. App. 2008) (fact question whether mortgage lender had privilege to interfere in borrower's contract with restoration contractor hired to repair fire-damaged property); Dykstra v. Page Holding Co., 766 N.W.2d 491 (S.D. 2009) (justification shown where bank that cut off farmer's line of credit was acting to preserve its own interests and did not violate any banking laws); Collins v. Greene County Bank, 916 S.W.2d 941 (Tenn. Ct. App. 1995) (urging a guarantor to break contract would be privileged if bank was "charged with responsibility" for guarantor, no improper means were used, and bank acted to protect welfare of another, but noting that banker's statement that debtor was "stealing you blind" was "a questionable manner of informing of problems with a loan"). See also Audi of Am., Inc. v. Bronsberg & Hughes Pontiac, Inc., 321 F. Supp. 3d 503 (M.D. Pa. 2018) (non-consumer case with extensive discussion of lack of privilege element of tortious interference; applying Restatement standards); Ragan v. Hancor, Inc., 920 F. Supp. 2d 810 (N.D. Ohio 2013) (parent corporation is privileged to act—even aggressively—to further the business interests of its subsidiary); Lee v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2013 WL 754053 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 27, 2013) (prospective purchaser of debtor's home, who had got as far as earnest money stage, failed to state claim against foreclosing bank; bank had privilege to interfere with sale contract to enforce power of sale provision of its mortgage); Recio v. Evers, 771 N.W.2d 121 (Neb. 2009) (providing truthful information cannot support tortious interference claim, even if actual malice can be shown); Lenders Funding, L.L.C. v. WAIM Mgmt. Co., 2018 WL 3338832 (N.C. Super. Ct. July 6, 2018) (justification not shown where creditor was seeking to coerce individual to pay corporate debt for which he was not personally liable). But see Rich v. Fox News Network, L.L.C., 939 F.3d 112 (2d Cir. 2019) (N.Y. law; justification defense can be defeated by showing of malice; here, media organization arranged for private detective to contract with family of murder victim and then breach confidentiality provision of the contract); Westgate Resorts, Ltd. v. Sussman, 387 F. Supp. 3d 1318 (M.D. Fla. 2019) (justification not shown; attorney advised time-share owners, who wished to terminate contracts, to stop paying; attorney knew that his strategy was legally ineffective).

See generally Restatement (Second) of Torts, introductory note to div. 9, ch. 37, and §§ 766 to 767 (1979); § 15.4.1, supra.

257 Havilah Real Prop. Services v. VLK, L.L.C., 108 A.3d 334 (D.C. 2015) (noting mixed views on this question). See generally § 15.1.3.1, supra (litigation privilege).

258 Finch v. Southside Lincoln-Mercury, Inc., 685 N.W.2d 154 (Wis. Ct. App. 2004).

259 Yohannes v. Olympic Collection, Inc., 2017 WL 6060113 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 7, 2017) (refusing to dismiss defamation claim; falsified information in garnishment notice published to consumer's employer); Ihebereme v. Capital One, 933 F. Supp. 2d 86 (D.D.C. 2013) (publication to family members not shown, where letters sent to debtor's home were addressed to debtor by name), aff'd, 573 Fed. Appx. 2 (D.C. Cir. 2014); Giacalone v. Experian P.L.C., 2013 WL 3199982 (N.D. Ill. June 24, 2013) (publication not sufficiently alleged; no showing that inaccurate information in credit report viewed by consumer was ever sent to prospective creditor); Gibson v. Regions Fin. Corp., 2008 WL 110917 (E.D. Ark. Jan. 9, 2008) (insults during verbal quarrel at time of police search could not support defamation claim, because all persons present were involved with the case), aff'd on other grounds, 557 F.3d 842 (8th Cir. 2009); DirectTV v. Cavanaugh, 321 F. Supp. 2d 825 (E.D. Mich. 2003) (denying defamation claim; no showing that demand letter, which accused consumer of signal theft, was published to third party); DirecTV, Inc. v. Karpinsky, 269 F. Supp. 2d 918 (E.D. Mich. June 17, 2003) (consumer failed to state claim; did not allege identities of third parties to whom misinformation published); Cabble v. Claire's Stores, Inc., 919 F. Supp. 397 (M.D. Ala. 1996) (where store's accusation of shoplifting was heard by all three accused plaintiffs, there was sufficient publication); Fed. Deposit Ins. Corp. v. S. Prawer & Co., 829 F. Supp. 439 (D. Me. 1993) (communication to someone within the same organization may meet publication requirement); Wal-Mart Stores v. Lee, 74 S.W.3d 634 (Ark. 2002) (sufficient publication shown where statements were made in hearing of unprivileged third parties, statements to police were accessible on police scanner, and republication was foreseeable); Curtis v. Citibank South Dakota, 261 P.3d 1059 (Mont. 2011) (sending debt to collection agency, with actual knowledge it was result of identity theft, was sufficient communication); Bentley v. Cravens, Dargan & Co., 1991 WL 216948 (Ohio Ct. App. Oct. 25, 1991) (collection agency's telephone statement to alleged debtor's employee that debtor was notorious for changing his audit figures was publication).

260 Ryan v. Romo, 2015 WL 1221281 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 17, 2015) (statement that plaintiffs do not occupy property as their principal residence, which caused lender to accelerate mortgage, was not defamatory; does not expose plaintiff to hatred or ridicule; acceleration was not the kind of damage defamation law is intended to remedy); Johnson v. Trott & Trott, P.C., 829 F. Supp. 2d 564 (W.D. Mich. 2011) (statement that debtor was currently married to co-debtor ex-wife not defamatory); Rapid Circuits, Inc. v. Sun Nat'l Bank, 2011 WL 1666919 (E.D. Pa. May 3, 2011) (false statement that small business is involved in litigation could be defamatory), order entered by 2011 WL 1667917 (E.D. Pa. May 3, 2011); Blagogee v. Equity Trs., Inc., 2010 WL 2933963 (E.D. Va. July 16, 2010) ("social embarrassment" resulting from erroneous advertisement of foreclosure not sufficient to show "reputational

- It must be defamatory on its face (per se) or in light of extrinsic facts (per quod), and, in some jurisdictions, if it is defamatory only in light of extrinsic facts, it must have caused special (pecuniary) damage.[261]

The requirement of a statement is not satisfied by a threat to make a statement[262] or a request for a credit report.[263]

The elements of slander are generally the same as those of libel, except that the words must be communicated orally or in an otherwise transitory manner. However, some courts make distinctions between slander and libel on the question whether a statement is defamatory per se or only when special damages are proven. This issue is discussed in §§ 15.5.2 and 15.5.3, infra.

15.5.2 Defamation Per Se and Defamation Per Quod

Many courts make a distinction between two types of defamation: defamation per se and defamation per quod. These courts define certain statements whose defamatory meaning is clear without reference to extrinsic facts as defamation per se. These statements are actionable without the need to prove any special type of damage. By contrast, statements whose defamatory meaning is apparent only in light of additional facts are defined as defamation per quod, and are actionable only if the plaintiff proves "special," i.e., pecuniary damages.

Courts often recite a closed list of statements that are defamatory per se. In the case of slander, one formulation is that a statement is slander per se if there is an imputation of:

- Criminal conduct;
- Unchastity;
- A loathsome disease; or
- Conduct or character adversely affecting the slandered party's business, trade, or professional reputation.[264]

Some courts recite a similar list when defining the types of statements that are libel per se, or describe the list as one generally applicable to defamation.[265] Other courts, however, define libel per se in more general terms as a statement that a person is guilty of a crime, dishonesty, or immorality.[266] Yet other courts have abandoned the distinction between libel per se and libel per quod, so do not require special damages to be pleaded regardless of the nature of the defamatory statement.[267]

If "special damages" are required, they must be pecuniary.[268] They may include loss of a job or a promotion,[269] denial harm"); Carlton v. Choicepoint, Inc., 2009 WL 4127546 (D.N.J. Nov. 23, 2009) (refusing to dismiss claim that reporting a judgment as outstanding after it had been satisfied was defamatory under N.J. and N.Y. law); Bauer v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 140 F. Supp. 2d 1019 (D. Minn. 2001) (creditor's phone calls to neighbors and employers of wrong consumer, which resulted in considerable small-town gossip, not defamatory where consumers produced no evidence that anyone's opinion of them was lowered as a result), vacated in part on other grounds, 149 F. Supp. 2d 1106 (D. Minn. 2001); Pennfield Precision, Inc. v. EF Precision, Inc., 2000 WL 1201381 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 15, 2000) (false statement by business to a customer that rival company "is going out of business" capable of defamatory meaning as it may deter others from associating or dealing with plaintiff in business relationships).

261 See § 15.5.2, infra.

262 Federico v. Bank of Am. Corp., 2011 WL 2470094 (D. Md. June 17, 2011) (must show statement actually made; written threat to do so not sufficient).

263 Robinson v. Greystone Alliance, 2011 WL 2601573 (D. Md. June 29, 2011) (request to CRA for consumer's credit report cannot be defamatory, because not a statement).

264 Baeza v. Bank of Am., 2012 WL 4062809 (D. Nev. Sept. 14, 2012) (reciting this list as slander per se); Ausley v. Bishop, 515 S.E.2d 72, 75–76 (N.C. Ct. App. 1999) (reciting similar list as slander per se).

265 See, e.g., Gros v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 525 F. Supp. 2d 1019 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (defamation per se is limited to statements regarding commission of a crime, infection with a venereal disease, inability to perform or want of integrity in discharge of duties of a public office, fornication or adultery, or words that prejudice a party in the party's trade, profession, or business); Wynne v. Stevenson, 2002 WL 31804497 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 13, 2002) (similar list). But see Jackson v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 2016 WL 4942085 (S.D. Ala. July 19, 2016) (for libel need only show false statement that exposes plaintiff to ridicule or contempt; for slander must show either accusation of indictable offense, or special, that is, pecuniary, damages).

266 McGowan v. Homeward Residential, Inc., 500 Fed. Appx. 882 (11th Cir. 2012) (Ga. law); Garner v. Academy Collection Serv., Inc., 2005 WL 643680, at *4 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 11, 2005). See also Murungi v. Texas Guaranteed, 693 F. Supp. 2d 597, 606 (E.D. La. 2010) (statement is defamatory per se if it accuses another of criminal conduct or by its nature tends to injure one's personal or professional reputation).

267 Hinkle v. Alexander, 417 P.2d 586, 590 (Or. 1966). See also Carlton v. Choicepoint, Inc., 2009 WL 4127546 (D.N.J. Nov. 23, 2009) (listing elements of defamation without making distinction between per se and per quod or requiring any showing of special damages).

268 Bruce v. HomeBridge Fin. Services, Inc., 2019 WL 5322554 (N.D. Ga. July 10, 2019) (false statements about a mortgage are not libel per se; must show special damages; emotional or reputational damages are not sufficient), adopted, 2019 WL 5387415 (N.D. Ga. July 29, 2019); Khepera-Bey v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 2012 WL 1965444 (D. Md. May 30, 2012) (special damages must be pecuniary, not just emotional, damages); Morin v. Nationwide Fed. Credit Union, 2008 WL 5157740, at *5 (D. Conn. Dec. 8, 2008); Garner v. Academy Collection Serv., Inc., 2005 WL 643680, at *4 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 11, 2005); Wynne v. Stevenson, 2002 WL 31804497, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 13, 2002). See also Haynes v. Alverno Heights Hosp., 515 P.2d 568 (Okla. 1973) (allegation of damage to "personnel rating" and "standing with [plaintiff's] employer" insufficient). See also Gentleman v. Mass. Higher Education Assistance Corp., 2017 WL 4180286 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 21, 2017) (special damages subject to heightened pleading standard; must specify what credit was applied for, whether it was denied or granted on less favorable terms, etc.). But see Rannels v. S.E. Nichols, Inc., 591 F.2d 242 (3d Cir. 1979) (allegations of loss of respect, pain and embarrassment, handicap in profession, and loss of consortium sufficient to plead special damages); Manno v. Am. Gen. Fin. Co., 439 F. Supp. 2d 418 (E.D. Pa. 2006) (stating that proof of damages is necessary for all defamation claims, but humiliation and mental anguish is sufficient for libel).

269 See Fiori v. Truck Drivers, Local 170, 354 F.3d 84 (1st Cir. 2004) (Mass. Law; affirming award of lost salary as special damages for libel); Wynne v. Stevenson, 2002 WL 31804497 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 13, 2002) (employer contact followed by loss of job). See also D. Dobbs, Handbook of the Law of Remedies § 7.2(3), at 268 (2d ed. 1993); Dan B. Dobbs, Paul T. Hayden and Eileen M. Bubeck, The Law of Torts vol. 3, ch. 44, § 534, at 226–227 (2d ed. 2011); id. § 535, at 229.

of credit,[270] higher interest rates,[271] or other out-of-pocket losses.[272] By contrast, for defamation per se, "general damages" may be awarded to compensate for the injury to the plaintiff's reputation without proof of injury or loss.[273]

15.5.3 Is It Defamatory to State That a Person Has Failed to Pay a Debt?

In jurisdictions that distinguish between defamation per se and defamation per quod, an important issue is whether a false statement that a person has failed to pay a debt is defamation per se. If it is not, then the statement will be actionable only if it has caused "special"—that is, pecuniary—damages.

If the statement implies criminal wrongdoing, such as violating a bad check law, concealing collateral, or committing criminal fraud, then it will likely be defamation per se because it is an imputation of criminal conduct.[274] The statement may also be defamatory per se if the failure to pay the debt reflects poorly on a consumer's business, profession, or trade.[275] If the jurisdiction defines defamation per se to include any statement that a person is guilty of dishonesty or immorality, then a statement that implies that the consumer has the ability to pay but is refusing to pay a just debt may be defamation per se.[276]

However, many courts follow what is sometimes called the "nontrader rule" and hold that a false representation that a nonmerchant consumer refuses to pay a just debt is not defamatory per se, so is actionable only if special damages are proven.[277] This rule is based on the fiction that the false assertion of 270 Ellis v. Bureaus, Inc., 2017 WL 3034327 (S.D. Ala. July 17, 2017) (denial of credit sufficient to support libel per quod claim); Dornhecker v. Ameritech Corp., 99 F. Supp. 2d 918 (N.D. Ill. 2000) (denial of credit is sufficient pecuniary loss to support special damages, which must be shown in libel per quod). See also McGowan v. Homeward Residential, Inc., 500 Fed. Appx. 882 (11th Cir. 2012) (Ga. law; affirming dismissal of libel claim because of insufficient pleading of special damages, but implying that denial of specific credit application or grant of credit on less favorable terms would be sufficient).

271 Dixon-Rollins v. Experian Info. Serv., Inc., 753 F. Supp. 2d 452 (E.D. Pa. 2010) (special damages must be "estimable in money" and "established by specific instances," here evidence that mortgage lender charged higher rate because of erroneous report); Woods v. Asset Res., 2006 WL 3782704 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 21, 2006) (special damages sufficiently alleged; damage to credit reputation prevented consumers from refinancing house to take advantage of lower interest rates); Rubin v. Sterling Enters., 674 A.2d 782 (Vt. 1996) (special damages shown where defamatory communication to bank caused plaintiff to be charged higher interest rate).

272 Banga v. Allstate Ins. Co., 2009 WL 3073925 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 22, 2009) (increase in homeowner's insurance premiums as result of false report that she had filed two fire-related claims), report and recommendation rejected in part on other grounds by 2010 WL 1267841 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 3, 2010).

273 See generally 50 Am. Jur. 2d Libel & Slander §§ 143, 147 (2017). See generally R.E. Barber, Annotation, Libel: Imputing Credit Unworthiness to Nontrader, 99 A.L.R.2d 700 (1965).

274 Campbell v. Triad Fin. Corp., 2007 WL 2973598 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 9, 2007) (statement that consumers were concealing collateral was defamation per se; defrauding creditor is crime under Ohio law); Harris v. Americredit Fin. Serv., Inc., 2005 WL 2180477 (W.D. Va. Sept. 9, 2005) (repossessor loudly and publicly accused consumer of crime and stated he would be arrested); Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., 2002 WL 31618443 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 6, 2002) (characterizing plaintiff as "thief" who stole thousands of dollars), later decision at 2006 WL 43770 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 3, 2006) (denying summary judgment; fact issue as to what was said during workplace confrontation); Tranum v. Broadway, 283 S.W.3d 403 (Tex. App. 2008) (false accusation of larceny was slander per se; special damages need not be shown). See also Fennell v. G.A.C. Fin. Corp., 218 A.2d 492 (Md. 1966) (letter to consumer's employer that discussed debt and consequent pressure to "tip the till" was libelous per se); Ellis v. Safety Ins. Co., 672 N.E.2d 979 (Mass. App. Ct. 1996) (accusation of filing false insurance claim is defamatory per se, because it alleges commission of crime).

275 See, e.g., North Shore Pharmacy Serv., Inc. v. Breslin Assoc. Consulting, L.L.C., 491 F. Supp. 2d 111, 128 (D. Mass. 2007) (special damages not necessary where defendant allegedly stated that auditor was incompetent and untrustworthy); Hanania v. Loren-Maltese, 319 F. Supp. 2d 814 (N.D. Ill. 2004) (statement that former town clerk "is a bigot who cost the town $300,000" is defamation per se; accuses her of "lack of ability to function as a public official"); Pinnacle Sys., Inc. v. XOS Technologies, Inc., 2003 WL 21397845 (N.D. Cal. May 19, 2003) (statement that business is "in financial trouble" and "will be bankrupt soon" was slander per se); Tech Plus, Inc. v. Ansel, 793 N.E.2d 1256 (Mass. App. Ct. 2003) (accusing sales agent of anti-Semitism is defamation per se, because good sales agent must get along with persons of diverse backgrounds); Ausley v. Bishop, 515 S.E.2d 72 (N.C. Ct. App. 1999) (falsely informing mortgage lender that borrower made false statements in his mortgage application and informing potential customer that former employee, now a competitor, has stolen files, is defamation per se because it damages plaintiff in his profession); Tranum v. Broadway, 283 S.W.3d 403 (Tex. App. 2008) (accusing employee of dishonesty vis-à-vis employer injuriously affects employee in profession or occupation, so is slander per se; special damages need not be shown). But see Kin Chun Chung v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 975 F. Supp. 2d 1333 (N.D. Ga. 2013) (statement that real estate investor was delinquent on her mortgage not per se defamatory because it did not attack her general capacity to carry out her profession).

276 See, e.g., Wynne v. Stevenson, 2002 WL 31804497 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 13, 2002); Carter v. Sterling Fin. Co., 132 So. 2d 430 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1961) (referring to consumer as "deadbeat and not an honest person" was defamatory in itself); Stickle v. Trimmer, 143 A.2d 1 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 1958) (if statement that consumer had failed to pay a just debt is found to imply refusal, rather than inability, it can be defamatory, and special damages need not be proven).

277 See McGowan v. Homeward Residential, Inc., 500 Fed. Appx. 882 (11th Cir. 2012) (Ga. law; statement that individual owes a debt or that mortgage is in foreclosure not defamatory per se); Smith v. First Nat'l Bank, 837 F.2d 1575 (11th Cir. 1988) (Ga. law; creditor's report to a credit reporting agency of consumer's delinquency on a credit card account to which her ex-husband had signed her name was not libel per se, so not actionable without showing of special damages); Jordan v. Tucker, Alba & Assoc., 2017 WL 2223918 (E.D.N.Y. May 19, 2017) (misstatements about personal finances are libel per se only if plaintiff can show connection with plaintiff's trade or business); Baeza v. Bank of Am., 2012 WL 4062809 (D. Nev. Sept. 14, 2012) (false report of default not libel per se); Steinmetz v. Gen. Elec. Co., 2009 WL 2058792 (S.D. Cal. July 13, 2009) (false statement that debt was "included in bankruptcy" not defamation per se); Morin v. Nationwide Fed. Credit Union, 2008 WL 5157740 (D. Conn. Dec. 8, 2008) (statement that borrower was in default not defamatory per se, but plaintiff here raised fact issues as to special damages); Gros v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 525 F. Supp. 2d 1019 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (statements impugning credit are defamation per quod; special damages must be pleaded very specifically); Cross v. Receivables Mgmt. Solutions, Inc., 2006 WL 446083 (D. Colo. Feb. 21, 2006) (report that person owes debt not defamatory unless additional facts and special damages are shown); Jolly v. Academy Collection Serv., 400 F. Supp. 2d 851, 863–864 (M.D.N.C. 2005) (must default does not cause injury except to merchants who depend upon credit.

This rule may have made some sense when credit was not an important part of life for ordinary consumers, but has little justification today. Because a false statement of refusal to pay is in fact injurious to a consumer's employment and credit reputation, some courts hold that these misrepresentations are actionable without any need to prove special damages.[278] plead special damages if defamation claim is based on statement that plaintiff did not pay a debt); Garner v. Academy Collection Serv., Inc., 2005 WL 643680 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 11, 2005) (denying consumer's defamation claim against collector who reported paid debt as unpaid because special damages not alleged); Wynne v. Stevenson, 2002 WL 31804497 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 13, 2002) (special damages must be pleaded; sufficiently alleged here); Aronson v. Creditrust Corp., 7 F. Supp. 2d 589 (W.D. Pa. 1998) (debt buyer falsely indicated that debtor entered into and breached settlement agreement; statement capable of defamatory meaning (for example, plaintiff unwilling to pay debts) but no cause of action because plaintiff pleaded no special/actual damages); Ragland v. Household Fin. Corp., 119 N.W.2d 788 (Iowa 1963) (dunning letter sent to schoolteacher's employer is not libelous per se; must show special damages); Haynes v. Alverno Heights Hosp., 515 P.2d 568 (Okla. 1973) (letter to consumer's employer stating that debt was owed and requesting assistance, but not otherwise maligning the debtor, is not libelous per se, but could be actionable if special damages shown); Fields v. Worsham, 476 S.W.2d 421 (Tex. App. 1972) (letter to plaintiff's business associates notifying them of suit against him and his refusal to pay was not defamatory in itself; special damages had to be shown); Weaver v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 106 S.E.2d 620 (Va. 1959) (dunning letter to employer is not actionable as defamation without special damages). See also Makofsky v. Cunningham, 576 F.2d 1223 (5th Cir. 1978) (La. law; false statement that businessman had failed to perform a contract was not defamatory per se, which under Louisiana law means that proof of malice is required); Franklin v. Pepco Holdings, 875 F. Supp. 2d 66 (D.D.C. 2012) (employer's statement to debt collector that former employee owed money for tuition reimbursement not libel per se; might be defamatory if published to debtor's friends or business partners; claim also fails because no showing of special damages). See generally Note, Debt Collection Practices: Iowa Remedies for Abuse of Debtor's Rights, 68 Iowa L. Rev. 753 (1983); R.E. Barber, Annotation, Libel: Imputing Credit Unworthiness to Nontrader, 99 A.L.R.2d 700 (1965).

278 See, e.g., Holt v. Boyle Bros., 217 F.2d 16 (D.C. Cir. 1954) (statement that consumer refused to pay a just debt was defamatory without need to show special damages); Ihebereme v. Capital One, 730 F. Supp. 2d 40 (D.D.C. 2010) (refusing to dismiss libel claim without mentioning any requirement of special damages; falsely stating that homeowner was in default on mortgage made him appear "at the very least both irresponsible and financially insolvent"), aff'd, 573 Fed. Appx. 2 (D.C. Cir. 2014); Carlton v. Choicepoint, Inc., 2009 WL 4127546 (D.N.J. Nov. 23, 2009) (refusing to dismiss claim that reporting a judgment as outstanding after it had been satisfied was defamatory under N.J. and N.Y. law); Conway v. Signal Oil & Gas Co., 194 S.E.2d 909 (Ga. 1972) (letter to unobligated consumer's employer accusing her of default on account owed by her spouse and requesting employer's assistance was libelous per se); Stickle v. Trimmer, 143 A.2d 1 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 1958) (if statement that consumer had failed to pay just debt is found to imply refusal, rather than inability, it can be defamatory, and special damages need not be proven); Neaton v. Lewis Apparel Stores, 48 N.Y.S.2d 492 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944) (letter to employer that threatened garnishment and accused employee of refusing to pay "just debt" is libelous per se).

15.5.4 Truth As a Defense

The falsity of the statement is an element of a defamation claim, and truth is often called an absolute defense.[279] This defense requires proof of more than the validity of the debt or the literal truth of the statement. It imposes upon the defendant the burden of rebutting any defamatory meaning, purpose, or effect of the statement.[280] Nonetheless, a number of decisions deny defamation claims even where the statement appears to overstate the debtor's delinquency, often on the ground that the statement is literally true or that the gist of it is true.[281]

279 See, e.g., Fuller v. Exxon Mobil, M.C., 2009 WL 91707 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 14, 2009) (not defamation where it was true that debtor owed debt); Cohn v. Gulf State Credit, L.L.C., 2004 WL 2032822 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 3, 2004) (granting summary judgment to defendant where plaintiff failed to show that defendant knew that statement was false or, believing it to be true, lacked reasonable grounds for that belief).

280 See, e.g., San Antonio Credit Union v. O'Connor, 115 S.W.3d 82, 100 (Tex. App. 2003) (defendant bears burden of proving substantial truth of defamatory statement; not shown here).

281 Williams v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 2002 WL 2026032 (6th Cir. Aug. 28, 2002) (report of "voluntary repossession" not defamatory even though it was "paper repossession" after car was totaled so that creditor could negotiate directly with insurance company); Lupo v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 2015 WL 5714641 (D. Md. Sept. 28, 2015) (falsity not shown; during dispute over amount of payments, lender reported delinquency to credit bureaus, resulting in loss of debtor's security clearance; statement that debtor had not paid was true, even if amount demanded was unauthorized); Wilson v. Am. Gen. Fin., Inc., 2013 WL 967161 (W.D. Pa. Mar. 12, 2013) (statement that account was four months past due was literally true, where homeowner had missed four payments over a period of years, and not made them up); Dalton v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 828 F. Supp. 2d 1242 (D. Colo. 2011) (statement that borrower had settled for less than amount due was true, and thus non-defamatory, even though borrower was forced into default and short sale by lender's mishandling of construction loan); Pippert v. Niece, 518 F. Supp. 2d 1265 (D. Or. 2007) (disagreement about amount owed does not make landlord's required report to housing authority false and defamatory); Allen v. Nelnet, Inc., 2007 WL 2786432 (D. Colo. Sept. 24, 2007) (statement that consumer had neither paid loan nor filed disability application was substantially true when made, despite ongoing dispute over required proof of disability); Trundle v. Homeside Lending, Inc., 162 F. Supp. 2d 396 (D. Md. 2001) (report that mortgage was "involved in" bankruptcy literally true where consumer's ex-husband filed bankruptcy and listed mortgage among his debts); Vaneck v. Countrywide Home Loans Corp., 2006 WL 279366 (Conn. Super. Ct. Jan. 11, 2006) (where gist of publication is true, error of detail not defamatory; where statement that mortgage was in foreclosure was true, defendant servicer's statement that it was creditor not actionable); Hnilica v. Rizza Chevrolet, 893 N.E.2d 928 (Ill. App. Ct. 2008) (defamation claim fails; statement that consumers had signed contract to buy car was true when made, even if signature was induced by fraud, but allowing UDAP claim, alleging this fraud, to go forward); Altman v. Amoco Oil Co., 406 N.E.2d 142 (Ill. App. Ct. 1980) (applying rule of innocent construction; "09" bad debt rating not defamatory, as one of its meanings was merely "in collection" rather than "skip"); Kirksey v. New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Found., 116 So. 3d 664 (La. Ct. App. 2013) (statement that businessman had misappropriated funds was substantially true, where he avoided liability only because of finding that his one-man company, not businessman individually, had misappropriated); Spengler v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 878 A.2d 628 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 2005) (report of delinquency not false where person who had made charges was authorized user); Smith

If a statement was true when made, some courts hold it is not defamatory even if later events cause it to be untrue.[282] A statement of opinion is defamatory only if it implies the existence of underlying facts.[283] Some courts allow defamation claims to proceed where the statement that the consumer is in default on a debt is true except that the debt is invalid or disputed,[284] or where the defendant omitted material facts.[285]

15.5.5 Immunity and Privilege

In most jurisdictions, malice is an element of the tort of defamation only if the plaintiff is a public figure or the defamatory statement relates to a matter of public concern.[286] By virtue of a qualified immunity provision of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA), however, a plaintiff must plead and prove malice or a willful intent to injure in a defamation claim against a credit reporting agency or against a user of or contributor to a consumer credit report.[287] This immunity applies where the false information was discovered through the FCRA's procedures that require disclosure to consumers, or through a disclosure by certain users of the consumer's report.[288] It does not protect a creditor from liability for sending a false claim of debt to a collector.[289]

Reports of suspected criminal behavior made to the proper authorities may be protected by absolute or qualified privilege.[290] A qualified privilege will be lost by

v. Magnolia Lady, Inc., 925 So. 2d 898 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006) (statement to unemployment commission that large sum of cash was "missing" when in fact it had been temporarily misplaced, was substantially true; defamation not sufficiently alleged); Witherwax v. Transcare, 801 N.Y.S.2d 782 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2005) (no defamation claim where statement that consumer owed bill was true, even though this resulted from creditor's negligence in sending bill to wrong address).

282 Frascogna v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2009 WL 2843284 (S.D. Miss. Aug. 31, 2009) (statement that foreclosure sale was scheduled was true when made, even though last-minute workout caused cancellation); Thurman v. Case Credit Corp., 2005 WL 3074149 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 16, 2005) (no defamation if statements were true when made; payments were delinquent, but buyer then negotiated extension of time).

283 North Shore Pharmacy Serv., Inc. v. Breslin Assoc. Consulting, L.L.C., 491 F. Supp. 2d 111 (D. Mass. 2007); Marshall Invs. Corp. v. R.P. Carbone Co., 2006 WL 2644959 (E.D. La. Sept. 13, 2006) (statement that prospective borrower is "a bad person" does not imply any defamatory facts).

284 Manno v. Am. Gen. Fin. Co., 439 F. Supp. 2d 418 (E.D. Pa. 2006) (fact issue whether statement that debt was "charged off" was false, where consumer paid reduced amount pursuant to settlement of dispute over damaged goods); Watson v. Telecheck Serv., Inc., 2010 WL 4273188 (Tex. App. Oct. 21, 2010) (fact issue whether consumer owed debt; stopped payment on check because of dispute). See also Lyon v. Chase Bank, 2009 WL 2170518 (D. Or. Apr. 27, 2009) (statement that cardholder owed debt was false, because cardholder not obligated to pay until card issuer responded to billing dispute; here, consumer consistently expressed willingness to pay amount actually owed and issuer stonewalled attempts to determine this), later decision reversed on other grounds, 656 F.3d 877 (9th Cir. 2011) (reversing denial of claim under state debt collection statute and refusal to award actual damages and other relief on FCBA claim; noting that jury rendered verdict against consumer on defamation claim). But see Hammond v. Citibank, 2011 WL 4484416 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 27, 2011) (statement that lender had obtained a foreclosure judgment was true, even though foreclosure was improper); Montoya v. Countrywide Bank, 2009 WL 1813973 (N.D. Cal. June 25, 2009) (statement that consumers owed mortgage and were unable to pay was true, even if underlying mortgage was illicitly obtained); Hnilica v. Rizza Chevrolet, 893 N.E.2d 928 (Ill. App. Ct. 2008) (defamation claim fails; statement that consumers had signed contract to buy car was true when made, even if signature was induced by fraud, but allowing UDAP claim, alleging this fraud, to go forward); Barner v. Krohle, 2006 WL 3028766 (Ohio Ct. App. Oct. 26, 2006) (statement that condominium owner was not paying fees was not defamation, as it was substantially true, even though it omitted fact that owner withheld fees because of dispute). But cf. Vargas v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 1386342 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 4, 2013) (statement that consumer owed a deficiency after mortgage foreclosure not false, where anti-deficiency statute made debt uncollectible, but did not eliminate it).

285 See, e.g., Nelson v. Canon USA, Inc., 2008 WL 410649 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 12, 2008) (fact issue as to "defamation by omission"; whether arguably selective communication to police "left a false impression that would be contradicted by the inclusion of omitted facts"); Allen v. Nelnet, Inc., 2007 WL 2786432 (D. Colo. Sept. 24, 2007) (defense of substantial truth may be defeated by showing that defendant omitted material facts, which caused publication to create defamatory impression).

286 Floyd v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg. Corp., 848 F. Supp. 2d 635 (E.D. La. Jan. 31, 2012) (claim requires showing of fault, but need not amount to malice); Goldsmith v. HSW Fin. Recovery, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 2d 95 (D.N.H. 2010) (expressing standard as failure to exercise reasonable care in publishing a false and defamatory statement of fact to a third party, assuming no privilege applies to the communication); In re Maxey, 395 B.R. 665 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 2008) (standard for private-figure defamation is negligence); Sateren v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 362 S.E.2d 324, 326 n.2 (Va. 1987). See also Wolfe v. MBNA Am. Bank, 485 F. Supp. 2d 874 (W.D. Tenn. 2007) (showing of malice required only to overcome Fair Credit Reporting Act's qualified immunity provision). But see Stroman v. Bank of Am. Corp., 852 F. Supp. 2d 1366 (N.D. Ga. 2012) (Georgia requires showing of malice—knowing falsehood or reckless disregard for truth—in ordinary libel action, not involving public figure). But cf. Makofsky v. Cunningham, 576 F.2d 1223 (5th Cir. 1978) (Louisiana requires showing of malice unless statement is defamatory per se).

287 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 10.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

288 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 10.4.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

289 Curtis v. Citibank South Dakota, 261 P.3d 1059 (Mont. 2011) (FCRA preemption provision did not apply to provision of false information to collector, which was not a credit reporting agency, and was receiving information for purposes of debt collection, not reporting).

290 Councilman v. Alibris, Inc., 386 F. Supp. 2d 5 (D. Mass. 2005) (absolute privilege for statements made in response to law enforcement investigation; qualified privilege for statements to law enforcement seeking to initiate complaint or investigation); Field v. U-Haul Co. of E. Bay, 2004 WL 2005739 (Cal. Ct. App. Sept. 8, 2004) (police report was privileged, but not accusations at the scene that were directed to plaintiff, not to police, and overheard by others); Packard v. Cent. Me. Power Co., 477 A.2d 264 (Me. 1984) (utility's report to sheriff's department, which happened to be customer's employer, of its suspicion that customer had stolen electricity was protected by qualified privilege because it was made for the public purpose of detecting and bringing a criminal to punishment); Corellas v. Viveiros, 572 N.E.2d 7 (Mass. 1991) (spontaneous initial report to police conditionally privileged; reports to police during ongoing investigation are absolutely privileged; defamation claim barred). See also Stoutt v. Baco Popular, 320 F.3d 26 (1st Cir. 2003) (federal anti-money-laundering act provides absolute immunity to financial institution that reports possible criminal activity to law enforcement, even if report is knowingly false and malicious); Nieman v. Firstar Bank, 2005 WL malice,[291] bad faith,[292] or possibly failure to investigate.[293] In many states, a litigation or "judicial proceedings" privilege will protect any statements made in connection with a judicial or administrative proceeding,[294] or a fair and substantially accurate report of such a proceeding.[295] In addition, courts recognize a common interest privilege that shields statements made to someone who has a legitimate interest in the information.[296] A credit report given to other creditors is privileged, absent proof of malice or broader communication.[297]

Many defamation cases in the debt collection context arise either from a letter to a consumer's employer or from publication of a list of debts allegedly due (a "deadbeat" list). It can be argued that neither communication is protected by the creditor's qualified privilege because each type of communication inevitably reaches persons having no right or interest in receiving it.[298]

15.5.6 Pleading and Proof

Some jurisdictions require allegations of defamation to be pleaded with specificity.[299] Whether a statement is defamatory 2346998 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 26, 2005) (anti-money-laundering act provides absolute immunity for banks' reports of suspicious activity; some circuits recognize only qualified immunity). See generally § 15.1.3, supra.

291 Border Collie Rescue, Inc. v. Ryan, 418 F. Supp. 2d 1330 (M.D. Fla. 2006) (qualified privilege for "voluntary statements by private individuals to law enforcement in furtherance of an investigation" may be lost by showing of falsity and "common law express malice"); In re BFW Liquidation, L.L.C., 471 B.R. 652 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 2012) (conditional privilege, lost by malice; fact issue here where store swore out bad check complaint against identity theft victim); Fleming v. U-Haul of Ga., Inc., 541 S.E.2d 75 (Ga. Ct. App. 2000) (privilege for report to law enforcement is conditional, lost by malice); Carney v. Patino, 2018 WL 5629638 (Ind. App. Oct. 30, 2018) (qualified privilege for good faith reports to law enforcement lost by malice; shown here where complaining witness, who had shown hostility to current plaintiff, lied to police). See Cal. Civ. Proc. Code, § 47(b)(5) (privilege for reports to law enforcement is lost if report is knowingly or recklessly false).

292 Hall v. District of Columbia, 867 F.3d 138 (D.D.C. Cir. 2017) (qualified privilege can be lost by bad faith; here restaurant workers who caused customer's arrest should have known that customer who temporarily exited building after paying undisputed amount of bill, leaving behind her credit card, various belongings, and other members of her party, did not intend to walk out on bill; also knew that amount left after payment was well below the threshold for felony theft).

293 Funk v. Lincoln-Lancaster County Crime Stoppers, 885 N.W.2d 1 (Neb. 2016) (qualified privilege lost where officer failed to investigate obvious problems with bank's complaint; reasonably prudent officer would have done so). But see Robert B. James, DDS, Inc. v. Elkins, 553 S.W.3d 596 (Tex. App. 2018) (qualified privilege lost by malice; inadequate investigation is not sufficient but reckless disregard for truth shown here).

294 See § 15.1.3.1, supra.

295 Vaile v. Willick, 2008 WL 2754975 (W.D. Va. July 14, 2008) (jury question whether statement that plaintiff, who had been held civilly liable in case arising from removal of children from ex-wife's custody, had been "found guilty" of kidnapping and felony non-support, had so "substantially departed" from the record as to lose privilege).

296 See § 15.1.3.2, supra.

297 See Dawkins v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 109 F.3d 241 (5th Cir. 1997) (Miss. law; common law privilege protects creditor's report to credit reporting agency where malice not shown); A.B.C. Needlecraft Co. v. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., 245 F.2d 775 (2d Cir. 1957) (N.Y. law; actual malice must be shown to overcome qualified privilege of credit reporting agency); Janossy v. Washington Mut. Bank, 2002 WL 31031636 (Cal. Ct. App. Sept. 12, 2002) (negligence or inadvertence insufficient to defeat qualified privilege); Pulver v. Avco Fin. Serv., 227 Cal. Rptr. 491 (Cal. Ct. App. 1986) (defense of privilege must be raised affirmatively; cause of action against lender stated for giving a false credit report); Vidrine v. Am. Prof'l Credit, Inc., 477 S.E.2d 602 (Ga. Ct. App. 1996) (no defamation if collector reported truthfully that account had been placed for collection, though he failed to add that debt was disputed); Calhoun v. Chase Manhattan Bank, 911 S.W.2d 403 (Tex. App. 1995) (privilege may be lost either by publication outside the legitimate "interest group" or by malice, for example, known falsehood or reckless disregard for truth; burden on plaintiff to prove malice or excessive publication); Rubin v. Sterling Enters., 674 A.2d 782 (Vt. 1996) (privilege would be lost if plaintiff showed clear and convincing evidence of malice). But cf. Vinson v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 259 So. 2d 768 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1972) (even if conditional privilege is still recognized, not applicable where creditor falsely told credit reporting agency that car had been repossessed when it had been voluntarily returned); Student Loan Fund, Inc. v. Duerner, 951 P.2d 1272 (Idaho 1997) (upholding punitive damages award where student loan guarantee agency "recklessly" provided false information to credit reporting agencies after consumer provided evidence that his payments had been made). See generally § 15.1.3, supra; National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 10.5.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (statutory immunities under Fair Credit Reporting Act); 50 Am. Jur. 2d Libel & Slander §§ 259 to 268, 301 (2017).

298 See Blair v. Supportkids, Inc., 222 F. Supp. 2d 1038 (N.D. Ill. 2002) (private child support collector exceeded privilege by sending income withholding notices to employers without required court order); Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., 2002 WL 31618443 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 6, 2002) (telling employer and co-workers that consumer was "a thief" was defamatory; no privilege because employer was stranger to debt collection case, and statement was "over-embellished"), later decision at 2006 WL 43770 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 3, 2006) (denying summary judgment; fact issue as to what was said during workplace confrontation); Warren v. Bank of Marion, 618 F. Supp. 317 (D. Va. 1985) (denying summary judgment where notice of lis pendens, allegedly containing claim of fraud known to be false, was filed in land records office); Neigel v. Seaboard Fin. Co., 173 A.2d 300 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 1961); Hinkle v. Alexander, 417 P.2d 586 (Or. 1966) ("deadbeat" list in store window published to general public was defamatory; libel is actionable without allegation of special damages). Cf. Swinton Creek Nursery v. Edisto Farm Credit, 514 S.E.2d 126 (S.C. 1999) (question of fact whether "common interest" privilege was exceeded where lender revealed information to prospective buyer of borrower's property to explain why it had problem with buyer's loan application; question whether lender could have explained problem without giving this specific information). But cf. Payne v. Diner's Club Int'l, 696 F. Supp. 115 (S.D. Ohio 1988) (listing of consumer's card number in Diner's Club warning bulletin not actionable because bulletin stated that reason included loss and theft and that no inference should be made about person's reputation or credit rating).

299 Huertas v. United States Dep't of Educ., 2009 WL 3165442 (D.N. Sept. 28, 2009) ("false credit information" not specific enough t state claim); Steinmetz v. Gen. Elec. Co., 2009 WL 2058792 (S.D Cal. July 13, 2009) ("wildly inaccurate information" not specif enough to state claim; need not quote exact words, but must provic "the substance"); Fuller v. Exxon Mobil, M.C., 2009 WL 91707 (E.D Mich. Jan. 14, 2009) (if written statement alleged, must quote exa per se is often treated as a question of law, while it is a question of fact whether a statement is defamatory in light of extrinsic facts.[300] Some courts, however, state more generally that it is always a question of law whether a statement is capable of a defamatory meaning.[301] Yet other courts state that it is a question of law whether a statement is reasonably susceptible of a defamatory interpretation but that, if it is susceptible of such an interpretation, it is a question of fact whether it was so understood.[302]

15.6 Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process

15.6.1 Description of the Two Torts and State Variants

Malicious prosecution and abuse of process are both torts that apply to wrongful use of judicial or quasi-judicial processes.[303] Malicious prosecution is the more widely accepted and precisely defined of the two. Some courts restrict malicious prosecution to criminal proceedings,[304] but more commonly both of these torts may be applied to either criminal or civil proceedings. Malicious prosecution is sometimes labeled "wrongful civil prosecution" or "vexatious litigation" when applied to civil processes.

The most commonly cited distinction between the two torts is that abuse of process cannot be based on the wrongful initiation of legal proceedings, but only on misuse of process after it has been issued.[305] However, these distinctions are not always recognized, and some courts hold that the two torts words; if slander, exact words not needed, but must show substance of statement "with specificity"); Adams v. Martinsville DuPont Credit Union, 573 F. Supp. 2d 103 (D.D.C. 2008) (must quote exact words); Purdue Employees Fed. Credit Union v. VanHouten, 2008 WL 4414712 (N.D. Ind. Sept. 24, 2008) ("precise words" must be alleged); Arikat v. J.P. Morgan Chase & Co., 430 F. Supp. 2d 1013 (N.D. Cal. 2006) (must specify who published what to whom), later decision at 2006 WL 3086702 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 30, 2006) (amended complaint also fails for lack of specificity); Gorman v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 370 F. Supp. 2d 1005 (N.D. Cal. 2005); Morris v. Household Mortg. Serv., Inc., 350 F. Supp. 2d 786 (N.D. Ill. 2004) (must quote defamatory words and show special damages); Varela v. Investors Ins. Holding Corp., 586 N.Y.S.2d 272 (N.Y. App. Div. 1992) (must state the specific words; not sufficient to allege existence of improper default judgment and refusal to set it aside), aff'd, 615 N.E.2d 218 (N.Y. 1993). But see Murray v. Amoco Oil Co., 539 F.2d 1385 (5th Cir. 1976) ("barebone" pleading sufficient; consumer alleged that creditor libeled him by turning an account over to collection agency); Util. Metal Research v. Coleman, 2008 WL 850456 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 28, 2008) (federal rules do not require precise words; gist of slanderous statement is sufficient); North Shore Pharmacy Serv., Inc. v. Breslin Assoc. Consulting, L.L.C., 491 F. Supp. 2d 111, 128 (D. Mass. 2007) (complaint need not set forth false statements verbatim; need only show content, timing, and context, to whom made, and that they damaged plaintiff's reputation); Wynne v. Stevenson, 2002 WL 31804497 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 13, 2002) (exact words not required, but "general nature" of statements and to whom communicated).

300 See Purcell v. Universal Bank, 2003 WL 1962376 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 28, 2003) (fact question whether statement that business owner had failed to pay debt was defamatory where failure to credit payment resulted from card issuer's negligent failure to legibly print routing numbers); Brown v. O'Bannon, 84 F. Supp. 2d 1176 (D. Colo. 2000) (defamation per se a question of law; plaintiff must show that false statement made plaintiff contemptible or ridiculous in public estimation, exposed plaintiff to public hatred or contempt, or hindered association with "virtuous men").

301 Pennoyer v. Marriott Hotel Serv., Inc., 324 F. Supp. 2d 614, 618 (E.D. Pa. 2004) (stating generally that determination whether statement is capable of defamatory meaning is for the court).

302 Smith v. Maldonado, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 397, 403 (Cal. Ct. App. 1999); Chedester v. Stecker, 643 P.2d 532 (Haw. 1982) (when statements are susceptible of both a defamatory and non-defamatory meaning, question whether they are libelous per se is for jury); Neaton v. Lewis Apparel Stores, Inc., 48 N.Y.S.2d 492 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944) (if language is capable of two meanings, only one of which is defamatory, it is jury question whether language is defamatory).

303 For cases comparing the two torts, see: Munger v. Deutsche Bank, 2011 WL 2930907 (N.D. Ohio July 18, 2011) (explaining the difference: bringing foreclosure action for intended purpose, but knowing that creditor lacked standing, would be malicious prosecution but not abuse of process; claim fails here because special damages not shown); DirecTV, Inc. v. Zink, 286 F. Supp. 2d 873 (E.D. Mich. 2003) (allegation that groundless action was brought to extort money did not state claim for abuse of process); Fletcher v. Wagner, 221 F. Supp. 2d 153 (D. Mass. 2002) (unsuccessfully applying for criminal complaint will not support malicious prosecution claim; abuse-of-process claim available if plaintiff can show ulterior, improper purpose); Sickler v. Eckroth (In re Eckroth), 247 B.R. 799 (Bankr. D.N.D. 2000); Sodesky v. Cherry Scaffolding, Inc., 2017 WL 38735678 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 5, 2017) (dismissing abuse of process but allowing Dragonetti Act (malicious prosecution) claim to go forward; meritless lawsuit in retaliation for exercise of FLSA rights; no evidence of misuse of process after issuance); Ramona Unified Sch. Dist. v. Tsiknas, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 381 (Cal. Ct. App. 2005) (continued pursuit of litigation after lack of merit becomes apparent may be malicious prosecution, but cannot be abuse of process, however bad the motive); McGrew v. Heinold Commodities, Inc., 497 N.E.2d 424 (Ill. App. Ct. 1986) (taking judgment and issuing garnishment on paid debt not abuse of process but may have been malicious prosecution); Prather v. Providian Nat'l Bank, 2006 WL 1868335 (Ky. Ct. App. July 6, 2006) (consumer stated claim for wrongful use of civil proceedings but not for abuse of process where she alleged that evidence in collection action was withheld and falsified, but not that action was used for purpose other than debt collection); Honzawa v. Honzawa, 766 N.Y.S.2d 29 (N.Y. App. Div. 2003) (malicious prosecution and abuse of process may be pleaded in the alternative; personal animosity led to filing of groundless lawsuit and attachment of bank accounts). See also Metro Media Entertainment, L.L.C. v. Steinruck, 912 F. Supp. 2d 344 (D. Md. 2012) (explaining the difference between "malicious use of process" and "abuse of process"). See generally § 15.6.3.1, infra (comparison of torts of abuse of process and malicious prosecution).

304 See, e.g., Szekeres v. Szekeres, 16 A.3d 713 (Conn. App. Ct. 2011) (malicious prosecution ordinarily implies prior criminal complaint); LaMantia v. Redisi, 38 P.3d 877 (Nev. 2002) (malicious prosecution claim available only for misuse of criminal proceedings; abuse-of-process claim can arise from criminal or civil proceedings but requires willful use of process for purpose other than resolving a legal dispute).

305 See § 15.6.3.1, infra.

may overlap.[306] Some courts recognize three instead of two torts.[307]

Because of the similarity between these two torts, some judicial decisions merge their respective elements. For example, New Mexico has merged the two causes of action into a hybrid tort, called "malicious abuse of process," which combines elements from the two former actions.[308] Lack of probable cause remains relevant, but termination in favor of the plaintiff is no longer required.[309] Pennsylvania's statutory tort of wrongful use of civil proceedings also combines elements of the two common law torts: a civil action must have been procured, initiated, or continued in a grossly negligent manner or without probable cause as defined by the statute, for a purpose other than securing proper discovery, joinder, or adjudication of a claim, and proceedings must have terminated in favor of the person against whom they were brought.[310] Georgia has codified a tort of abusive civil litigation, combining some elements of both torts, and has provided statutory defenses and a pre-suit demand requirement.[311]

In a case where the defense fabricated evidence, New Hampshire recognized a new tort of "malicious defense." The elements of the tort are similar to those for malicious prosecution: lack of probable cause; knowledge of the lack of probable cause; "a purpose other than that of securing the proper adjudication of the claim and defense thereto, such as to harass, annoy or injure, or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation"; termination in favor of plaintiff; and injury to plaintiff.[312]

Connecticut's statutory tort of vexatious litigation applies to defenses as well as affirmative claims.[313] Other jurisdictions have refused to recognize a malicious prosecution cause of action for assertion of a defense.[314] However, filing a counterclaim may amount to the initiation of a proceeding for purposes of a malicious prosecution claim.[315] In addition, a claim

306 See, e.g., In re Babb, 2009 WL 212568 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. Jan. 26, 2009) (either malicious prosecution or abuse of process available to challenge malicious filing of lis pendens); Toll Bros. v. Gen. Accident Ins. Co., 1999 WL 744426 (Del. Super. Ct. Aug. 4, 1999) (liability insurance policy that covers "malicious prosecution" also covers abuse of process where the two torts are so similar that lawyers find them confusing), aff'd, 765 A.2d 953 (Del. 2000); Verdon v. Song, 251 So. 3d 256 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2018) (malicious prosecution and abuse of process are two separate torts, but may overlap, and do so here, where wife used threats of domestic violence complaint to coerce husband to authorize use of his credit card); Seipel v. Olympic Coast Inv., 188 P.3d 1027 (Mont. 2008) (knowingly filing a baseless claim can be both abuse of process and malicious prosecution); Connette v. Key Risk Ins. Co., 819 S.E.2d 741 (N.C. App. 2018) (plaintiff stated claims for both malicious prosecution and abuse of process against insurer that used "heavily edited" surveillance video to obtain criminal complaints in effort to force worker to pay back workers' compensation award); Miller-Wagenknecht v. City of Monroe Falls, 2001 WL 1545626 (Ohio Ct. App. Dec. 5, 2001) (in some situations the same elements that constitute abuse of process may also support an action for malicious prosecution).

307 Read v. Profeta, 2017 WL 123438 (D.N.J. Jan. 11, 2017) (describing New Jersey's three closely related torts arising from misuse of legal process: malicious prosecution, malicious use of process, and malicious abuse of process); Shea v. Chase Manhattan Bank, 2000 WL 288360 (Conn. Super. Ct. Mar. 6, 2000) (explaining differences between Connecticut's three "similar but not identical causes of action for misuse of the legal system:" malicious prosecution (criminal), vexatious litigation (civil malicious prosecution), and abuse of process); Gilbert v. Ince, 981 P.2d 841 (Utah 1999) (non-consumer case; defining elements of malicious prosecution, abuse of process, and wrongful use of civil proceedings using Restatement definitions).

308 The elements of malicious abuse of process in New Mexico are (i) the use of process in a judicial proceeding that would be improper in the regular prosecution or defense of a claim or charge; (ii) a primary motive in the use of process to accomplish an illegitimate end; and (iii) damages. Initiation need not be shown. In short, there must be both a misuse of the power of the judiciary by a litigant and a malicious motive. See Taylor v. L. & P. Building Supply of Las Cruces, Inc., 2015 WL 7803614 (D.N.M. Oct. 27, 2015); Durham v. Guest, 204 P.3d 19 (N.M. 2009) (initiation not required; overruling earlier decision on this issue); Weststar Mortg. Corp. v. Jackson, 61 P.3d 823 (N.M. 2002); Devaney v. Thriftway Mktg. Co., 953 P.2d 277 (N.M. 1998).

309 Weststar Mortg. Corp. v. Jackson, 61 P.3d 823 (N.M. 2002) (probable cause must be determined based on what defendant knew at time of initiating prosecution). See also Hewitt v. Rice, 154 P.3d 408 (Colo. 2007) (contrasting Colorado law, which recognizes both abuse of process and malicious prosecution, with New Mexico which recognizes a single tort; in Colorado, termination in favor is essential element of malicious prosecution, while in New Mexico it is simply evidence on issue of probable cause).

310 42 Pa. Cons. Stat. §§ 8351 to 8354. See Gigli v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2008 WL 3823295 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 14, 2008) (consumer stated claim where debt buyer filed claim, despite absence of paperwork showing validity of debt or assignment, then voluntarily dismissed when consumer sought discovery; fact questions as to lack of probable cause and improper purpose); Donnelly v. Commonwealth Fin. Sys., Inc., 2008 WL 762085 (M.D. Pa. Mar. 20, 2008) (evidence that debt buyer purchased claims at steeply discounted prices was probative on question whether it knew it lacked paperwork to prove that current plaintiff was obligated, and thus whether it acted with gross negligence or recklessness in violation of statute creating liability for wrongful use of civil process); Drudy v. Slomnicki (In re Slomnicki), 243 B.R. 644 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 2000) (statute codifies elements of wrongful use of civil proceedings: proceedings "procured, initiated or continued primarily for a purpose other than that of securing the proper adjudication of the claim in which the proceedings are based").

311 Ga. Code Ann. §§ 51-7-80 to 51-7-85. See Coen v. Apteam, Inc., 816 S.E.2d 64 (Ga. Ct. App. 2018) (statutory abusive litigation claim for vigorous pursuit of meritless defense; general damages, including emotional distress damages, are available, and plaintiff need not prove special damages, but punitive damages are not available); Sevostiyanova v. Tempest Recovery Serv., 705 S.E.2d 878 (Ga. Ct. App. 2011) (notices from Bankruptcy Court not sufficient substitute for statutory demand requirement).

312 Aranson v. Schroeder, 671 A.2d 1023 (N.H. 1995).

313 Conn. Gen. Stat. § 52-568.

314 See In re Kids Creek, 2000 WL 1761020 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 29, 2000) (defense against a claim, even in bad faith, can never support malicious prosecution claim); Young v. Allstate Ins. Co., 198 P.3d 666 (Haw. 2008) (noting the risk of chilling legitimate defenses and the availability of an intentional infliction of emotional distress claim if party goes beyond insisting upon its legal rights in a permissible way); Wilkinson v. Shoney's, Inc., 4 P.3d 1149 (Kan. 2000).

315 Restatement (Second) of Torts § 674, cmt. A (1977). See Klemp v. Columbia Collection Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 5324318 (D. Or. Oct. 17, 2014).

for abuse of process may be available for actions taken in defense of a suit.[316]

15.6.2 Malicious Prosecution

15.6.2.1 Summary of Elements

The elements of a malicious prosecution claim are often identified as:

- A proceeding is instituted;
- The proceeding is without probable cause;
- The proceeding was instituted either maliciously or for an improper purpose; and
- The proceeding is terminated in favor of the defendant.[317]

Courts in some jurisdictions, including the District of Columbia,[318] Illinois,[319] Maryland,[320] New York,[321] North Carolina,[322] Ohio,[323] Texas,[324] and Virginia,[325] impose an additional requirement of "special injury" such as arrest or seizure of property.[326] New Jersey requires a showing of special damages for a claim arising from a civil matter.[327]

One advantage of a malicious prosecution claim is that the privilege for statements made in litigation or to the authorities generally does not apply to it.[328]

15.6.2.2 Institution of a Proceeding

The first required element of a malicious prosecution claim is the institution of a proceeding. Arbitration proceedings[329] and small claims actions[330] qualify. Filing a complaint is sufficient, even without service of process.[331] On the other hand, examples of steps that have been held not to constitute a proceeding include:

- Preliminary steps in a criminal prosecution, such as execution of a search warrant or an arrest that does not result in the filing of charges;[332]

316 See § 15.6.3.2, infra.

317 Dan B. Dobbs, Paul T. Hayden, and Eileen M. Bubeck, The Law of Torts, vol. 3, ch. 46, § 586, at 388–389 (2d ed. 2011). See, e.g., McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 956 (9th Cir. 2011) (Mont. law; reciting these elements plus damages and that the defendant was responsible for instigating, prosecuting, or continuing the proceedings); Martin v. O'Daniel, 507 S.W.3d 1 (Ky. 2016) (detailed history of malicious prosecution cause of action; articulating elements and abrogating prior law defining initiation of proceeding).

318 See, e.g., Pleznac v. Equity Residential Mgmt., L.L.C., 320 F. Supp. 3d 99 (D.D.C. 2018) (filing of consecutive meritless lawsuits amounts to special damages); Griffith v. EduCap, Inc., 2018 WL 4308572 (D.D.C. Sept. 10, 2018) (expenses incurred in defending against a lawsuit—even if grossly disproportionate to the amount at stake—are not special damages); Osinubepi-Alao v. Plainview Fin. Serv., Ltd., 44 F. Supp. 3d 84 (D.D.C. 2014) (wage garnishment is special damage); Joeckal v. Disabled Am. Veterans, 793 A.2d 1279 (D.C. 2002) (must show arrest, seizure of property, or other limited circumstances; emotional distress, injury to reputation, loss of income, and litigation expenses insufficient). See also Havilah Real Prop. Services v. VLK, L.L.C., 108 A.3d 334 (D.C. 2015) (lis pendens not special injury).

319 See Johnson v. Pushpin Holdings, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1345768 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 23, 2015) (actions filed in distant venues; costs of travel, etc., which exceeded amount at stake, were not special injury sufficient to support Illinois malicious prosecution claim); Thomas v. Hileman, 775 N.E.2d 231 (Ill. App. Ct. 2002) (must be "special injury," consisting of more than the ordinary effects of a lawsuit; arrest of person, seizure of property, or possibly filing of multiple suits sufficient, but here chilling of free speech is insufficient).

320 See Gittens v. Thieblot Ryan, PA, 2013 WL 2103668 (D. Md. May 14, 2013) (must show arrest, imprisonment, seizure of property or other "special injury"; not sufficient that garnishment action for similarly-named person's judgment debt resulted in freezing of bank account, bounced checks, fees and cancellation of services and debit cards); Krashes v. White, 341 A.2d 798 (Md. 1975) (defining the situations in which plaintiff must show arrest, seizure of property or other special injury).

321 Engel v. CBS, Inc., 711 N.E.2d 626 (N.Y. 1999) (must be special injury, consisting of highly substantial and identifiable interference with person, property, or business similar to that caused by provisional remedy such as arrest).

322 See, e.g., Alexander v. Alexander, 567 S.E.2d 211 (N.C. Ct. App. 2002) (for civil malicious prosecution must show some arrest of the person, seizure of property, or other special damage; requirement satisfied by restraining order that limited plaintiff's freedom of movement).

323 See, e.g., Turner v. Lerner, Sampson & Rothfuss, 776 F. Supp. 2d 498 (E.D. Ohio 2011) (lis pendens or asset freeze not sufficient); Robb v. Chagrin Lagoons Yacht Club, Inc., 662 N.E.2d 9 (Ohio 1996) (claim of malicious prosecution based on a civil action requires proof of seizure of property, even though arrest is no longer a required element of malicious prosecution based on a criminal case).

324 See, e.g., Liu v. Arrow Fin. Serv., Inc., 2010 WL 1994190, at *12 (S.D. Tex. May 17, 2010); Finlan v. Dallas Indep. Sch. Dist., 90 S.W.3d 395 (Tex. App. 2002) (must show "physical interference with a party's person or property in the form of an arrest, attachment, injunction or sequestration"; business loss or damage to reputation insufficient).

325 See, e.g., Chien v. Commonwealth Biotechnologies, Inc., 2013 WL 4482750 (D. Conn. Aug. 21, 2013) (Va. law; must show arrest, seizure of property, or other "special injury" if claim arises from civil proceedings).

326 See generally W. Page Keeton, Prosser & Keeton on the Law of Torts § 120 (5th ed. 1984) (many jurisdictions require "specialized grievance" such as interference with person or property).

327 Ali v. Jersey City Parking Auth., 2014 WL 1494578 (D.N.J. Apr. 16, 2014) (parking ticket is civil; claim fails because special damages not sufficiently alleged), aff'd 594 Fed. Appx. 730 (3d Cir. 2014).

328 See, e.g., Hagberg v. California Fed. Bank, 81 P.3d 244 (Cal. 2004); Debrincat v. Fisher, 217 So. 3d 68 (Fla. 2017) (litigation privilege does not bar malicious prosecution claim; applying privilege would abolish a cause of action well-recognized in Florida law). See also Rosales v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., 2017 WL 1436957 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 24, 2017) (privilege bars every state cause of action except malicious prosecution or abuse of process). But see Yates v. Allied Int'l Credit Corp., 578 F. Supp. 2d 1251 (S.D. Cal. 2008) (exception applies only if prosecution reached arraignment stage; no claim where victim of false report was released informally when police realized they had been deceived). See generally § 15.1.3, supra.

329 Durham v. Guest, 204 P.3d 19 (N.M. 2009).

330 Kamps v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 622505 (N.D. Ala. Feb. 19, 2013).

331 Shirokov v. Dunlop, Grubb & Weaver, P.L.L.C., 2012 WL 1065578, at *32–33 (D. Mass. Mar. 27, 2012).

332 Vine v. PLS Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 456031 (W.D. Tex. Jan. 16, 2018) (submitting checks to DA's hot check program, which sent

- Sending a demand letter with a copy of a complaint;[333]
- Initiation of a non-judicial foreclosure;[334] and
- Application for a prejudgment remedy.[335]

A malicious prosecution claim may be available for continuing to pursue a properly filed lawsuit after learning that it lacks probable cause.[336]

In most jurisdictions, simply reporting information believed to be true and allowing the prosecuting authorities to make their own decision does not satisfy the requirement of institution of a proceeding, but a malicious prosecution claim will be available against a party who procures a criminal prosecution by providing false information or withholding relevant information.[337] However, a claim may not be available if the demand letters but did not instate formal proceedings, did not amount to malicious prosecution); Yates v. Allied Int'l Credit Corp., 578 F. Supp. 2d 1251 (S.D. Cal. 2008) (California proceeding initiated at arraignment; no claim if victim of false and malicious police report released before that stage); Gibson v. Regions Fin. Corp., 2008 WL 110917 (E.D. Ark. Jan. 9, 2008) (initiation of proceeding not shown: search warrant issued, and car dealer's home and business searched, but dealer never arrested or brought before court), aff'd on other grounds, 557 F.3d 842 (8th Cir. 2009); Fletcher v. Wagner, 221 F. Supp. 2d 153 (D. Mass. 2002) (unsuccessfully applying for criminal complaint will not support malicious prosecution claim); Mayberry v. Ememessay, Inc., 201 F. Supp. 2d 687 (W.D. Va. 2002) (after financing fell through, car dealer falsely told consumer there was an arrest warrant and all-points bulletin out for her; no malicious prosecution because no proceeding actually instituted); Medina v. Downey Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 2005 WL 906507 (Cal. Ct. App. Apr. 20, 2005) (no proceeding instituted where bank customer jailed but not charged); Stanford v. Gaultieri, 2005 WL 1335340 (Mich. Ct. App. June 7, 2005) (filing police report or complaining to prosecutor not a proceeding where investigation never rose to the level of a prosecution); Stead-Bowers v. Langley, 636 N.W.2d 334 (Minn. Ct. App. 2001) (initiation not shown where complaint to police resulted in investigation but no prosecution); Warner Bros. Entertainment, Inc. v. Jones, 538 S.W.3d 781 (Tex. App. 2017) (incident report not sufficient; must show arrest or issuance of warrant). See also Councilman v. Alibris, Inc., 386 F. Supp. 2d 5 (D. Mass. 2005) (suspects who falsely accused others to save themselves did not initiate prosecution as it was ongoing).

333 Shirokov v. Dunlop, Grubb & Weaver, P.L.L.C., 2012 WL 1065578, at *32–33 (D. Mass. Mar. 27, 2012).

334 Severson v. Chase Manhattan Mortg. Co., 2013 WL 1688026 (D. Or. Mar. 8, 2013) (distinguishing cases that allow claims arising from administrative proceedings), adopted, 2013 WL 1702163 (D. Or. Apr.18, 2013); Sain v. Geske, 2008 WL 2811166 (D. Minn. July 17, 2008) (malicious prosecution claim cannot be based on non-judicial foreclosure; no lawsuit initiated). See also Lopez v. Countrywide Mortg., 2008 WL 4682040 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 20, 2008) (rescission of foreclosure, after discovering contamination of property, not malicious prosecution because creditor never sued property owner over the rescission deed).

335 Bernhard-Thomas Bldg. Co. v. Dunican, 2006 WL 301908 (Conn. Super. Ct. Jan. 18, 2006) (application for prejudgment remedy not a "civil proceeding" for purposes of vexatious litigation action, because no adjudication on merits).

336 Dickens v. Gemini Capital Group, 2015 WL 9412928 (W.D. Ark. Dec. 21, 2015) (debt buyer persisted for six months in prosecuting claim and resisting discovery after learning that claim was time-barred, then agreed to dismiss four days before trial); Zamos v. Stroud, 87 P.3d 802 (Cal. 2004); Inlet Beach Capital Investments, L.L.C. v. Enclave at Inlet Beach Owners' Ass'n, 236 So. 3d 1140 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2018) (carrying on with foreclosure action for a year after learning that it was meritless); Arquette v. State of Hawaii, 290 P.3d 493, 500–503 (Haw. 2012).

337 See Gatheright v. Clark, 2016 WL 237153 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 20, 2016) (initiation shown if complainant filed knowingly false bad check affidavit); Samtani v. Cherukuri, 2015 WL 64671 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 5, 2015) (allowing claim to proceed where defendant's statement omitted critical information, and district attorney, who "relied heavily" on it, dismissed charges upon learning the full story); Kent v. Drought, 2010 WL 4320334 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 28, 2010) (providing false information to law enforcement will support claim of malicious prosecution or the closely related tort of false arrest); Rafter v. Bank of Am., 2009 WL 691929 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 12, 2009) (complaint to law enforcement not initiation unless complainant furnishes false information or withholds relevant information); Heining v. Abernathy, 295 So. 3d 1032 (Ala. 2019) (for malicious prosecution claim alleging provision of false information to law enforcement, plaintiff must show that prosecution would not have been instituted but for false information); Shoney's Inc. v. Barnett, 773 So. 2d 1015 (Ala. Civ. App. 1999) (managers instituted criminal proceeding when they contacted police and suppressed known material facts); Bank of Eureka Springs v. Evans, 109 S.W.3d 672 (Ark. 2003) ("[w]here the information given to the prosecutor is known by the giver to be false, an intelligent exercise of the officer's discretion becomes impossible"; affirming malicious prosecution judgment against bank that lied to prosecutor to procure groundless prosecution of debtor who filed bankruptcy); Horne v. J.H. Harvey Co., 617 S.E.2d 648 (Ga. Ct. App. 2005) (fact issue regarding malice where after bad check complaint issued, store employee furnished false information in filling out additional paperwork); Wolf Camera, Inc. v. Royter, 558 S.E.2d 797 (Ga. Ct. App. 2002) (employer accusing employee of theft withheld strongly exculpatory evidence); Fleming v. U-Haul of Ga., Inc., 541 S.E.2d 75 (Ga. Ct. App. 2000) (reversing summary judgment for defendant rental company that failed to make full and fair disclosures when swearing out theft complaint); Beeman v. Freesmeyer, 131 N.E.3d 488 (Ill. 2019) (commencement or continuance element of malicious prosecution may be shown by (1) significant role; (2) advice and cooperation or (3) pressure, influence or misstatement; issue is whether defendant proximately caused commencement of proceeding); Allen v. Berger, 784 N.E.2d 367 (Ill. App. Ct. 2002) (knowingly providing false information to authorities is sufficient to support the "instigating prosecution" element of malicious prosecution); Martin v. O'Daniel, 507 S.W.3d 1 (Ky. 2016) (abrogating prior law; proper standard is whether defendant is "the proximate and efficient cause of putting the law in motion against another person;" remanding to allow trial court to apply this standard in case alleging that police officers provided "inaccurate, false and misleading" information to prosecutor); Seguro-Suarez by and through Connette v. Key Risk Ins. Co., 819 S.E.2d 741 (N.C. Ct. App. 2018) (one who knowingly provides false information to law enforcement, here "heavily edited" surveillance video, has initiated prosecution, "irrespective of independent prosecutorial discretion"); Singh v. McLaughlin, 297 P.3d 514 (Or. Ct. App. 2013) (actively encouraging arrest while knowing it to be based on false allegations is sufficient for liability); Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Rodriguez, 92 S.W.3d 502 (Tex. 2002) (party procures criminal prosecution by providing false information, or if the party's request was determining factor); Fuqua v. Graber, 158 S.W.3d 635 (Tex. App. 2005) (claim stated by allegation of false and misleading statements in a groundless adversary proceeding that led to criminal trial resulting in acquittal); Ellis County State Bank v. Keever, 936 S.W.2d 683 (Tex. App. 1996) (upholding actual and punitive damage award against creditor that twice failed to show up to take collateral from debtor and then obtained debtor's arrest for not turning it over). Cf. Huffman v. Sunshine Recycling, L.L.C., 826 S.E.2d 609 (S.C. 2019) (individual who makes report to police is not required to make investigation; emphasizing distinction between good faith report of mistaken or inaccurate information and purposeful provision of knowingly false information). But cf. First Valley Bank v. Martin, 144 S.W.3d 466 (Tex. 2004) (no malicious prosecution, even though creditor failed to disclose material facts and lied about having law enforcement authorities do not rely on the false information, but act only after making an independent investigation.[338]

15.6.2.3 Lack of Probable Cause

The primary hurdle in a malicious prosecution suit is usually the requirement that the wrongful proceeding have been without probable cause or possible validity. This element is very fact specific.[339] Instituting a proceeding without investigating or obtaining documentation of its merits is a factor supporting a finding of lack of probable cause.[340] The mere already seized part of collateral, where there was probable cause for criminal charges based on failure to turn over sales proceeds of rest of the collateral; creditor need not enquire into excuses or alibis).

338 James v. Woods, 899 F.3d 404 (5th Cir. 2018) (La. law; complaint to police is sufficient to support initiation element of malicious prosecution if police act on it without further investigation, but chain of causation here was broken by independent investigation); Linn v. Montgomery, 903 N.W.2d 337 (Iowa 2017) (report to police will support claim only if defendant makes knowingly false statements and law enforcement relies on them; not shown here where police reviewed financial records before bringing complaint); Smith v. City Bank & Tr. Co., 271 So. 3d 263 (La. Ct. App. 2019) (independent investigation not shown; officer relied solely on incomplete and inaccurate statements by bank official); Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cully's Motocross Park, Inc., 742 S.E.2d 781 (N.C. 2013) (even if party withheld information, this does not amount to institution of criminal proceeding where charging officer exercises discretion as to whether to file charges). See also Borneisen v. Capital One Fin. Co., 490 Fed. Appx. 206 (11th Cir. 2012) (Fla. law; creditor's report of debtor's bomb threat was not initiation of prosecution where law enforcement authorities made independent investigation before arresting debtor); Scientific Prods., Inc. v. Garcia, 442 So. 2d 1019 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1983) (if state's attorney makes decision to prosecute, creditor, who merely lodged information, not liable under state statute for malicious prosecution; strong dissent).

339 Lack of probable cause sufficiently alleged or proven: Briner v. City of Ontario, 370 Fed. Appx. 692 (6th Cir. 2010) (Ohio law; fact issue whether key witness was "badgered or threatened" by police into making accusation); Kitchens v. Bryan County Nat'l Bank, 825 F.2d 248 (10th Cir. 1987) (Okla. law; upholding jury's finding of no probable cause where evidence was conflicting); Cave v. Davison, 2001 WL 1098058 (E.D. La. Sept. 18, 2001) (probable cause absent where transactions in question were so clearly within scope of executive's duties that employer could not have held good-faith belief in alleged fraud); Citi-wide Preferred Couriers v. Golden Eagle Ins. Co., 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 199 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003) (malicious process claim available if creditor demanded most but not all of alleged debt without probable cause); Sohacheski v. Baker, 2002 WL 31317336 (Cal. Ct. App. Oct. 16, 2002) (lack of probable cause shown where creditor's attorney failed to present evidence on essential element of claim); Arcaro v. Silva & Silva Enters. Corp., 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 433 (Cal. Ct. App. 1999) (lack of probable cause where suit was filed after alleged debtor informed creditor and collection agency that signature was a forgery, provided handwriting exemplars, and told them that former officemate had access to information needed to open account in alleged debtor's name); Fleming v. U-Haul of Ga., Inc., 541 S.E.2d 75 (Ga. Ct. App. 2000) (reversing summary judgment for defendant; lack of probable cause for larceny prosecution is fact question where consumer made repeated calls to road service after rental truck broke down, then abandoned vehicle after waiting nearly two hours); Amos v. Brown, 828 So. 2d 138 (La. Ct. App. 2002) (lack of probable cause shown where there was "at least a reckless disregard for truth" in criminal proceeding arising from divorce-related property dispute); San Antonio Credit Union v. O'Connor, 115 S.W.3d 82 (Tex. App. 2003) (presumption of probable cause rebutted where complainant's belief that contractor had feloniously misappropriated funds was "unreasonable" in light of non-criminal explanations for his inability to pay subcontractors).

Lack of probable cause not sufficiently alleged or proven: Vanover v. Cook, 260 F.3d 1182 (10th Cir. 2001) (Kan. law; creditor had probable cause to garnish amount of original judgment that was reduced on appeal); Land v. Helmer, 843 F. Supp. 2d 547 (D.N.J. 2012) (dismissing malicious prosecution claim, even though prosecution on bad check charges was obtained by "inaccurate" grand jury testimony, because malicious prosecution claims are disfavored and facts fell within New Jersey's very broad bad check law); Gibbons v. Bank of Am. Corp., 2012 WL 94569 (D. Md. Jan. 11, 2012) (bank seeking to recover funds stolen by husband had probable cause to pursue wife and freeze bank accounts, where wife's name was on accounts, and she wrote checks for household expenses); Shapiro v. Haenn, 222 F. Supp. 2d 29 (D. Me. 2002) (probable cause where bank's legal position plausible); Goodwin v. Barry Miller Chevrolet, Inc., 543 So. 2d 1171 (Ala. 1989); Liberty Loan Corp. v. Mizell, 410 So. 2d 45 (Ala. 1982) (suit against debtor's ex-wife not malicious prosecution where creditor knew that, under divorce decree, debtor ex-husband had assumed liability but had later filed for bankruptcy); Cordes v. Outdoor Living Ctr., Inc., 781 S.W.2d 31 (Ark. 1989) (not malicious prosecution where warrant for debtor's arrest was issued before the debt was paid); Cammarano v. Kralik, 2009 WL 1459129 (Cal. Ct. App. May 26, 2009) (former plaintiff was not required to believe former defendant's denials, even if under oath, in light of various suspicious circumstances); Ben Palazzola, D.D.S. v. Jonathan Neil & Assoc., 2005 WL 2461811 (Cal. Ct. App. Oct. 5, 2005) (lack of probable cause not shown where insurer's error as to amount due resulted from miscalculation by insured and collector did not know of error); Marriott Corp. v. Allen, 463 S.E.2d 716 (Ga. Ct. App. 1995) (neither malice nor lack of probable cause shown where hotel sought prosecution of plaintiff who tried to cash check at hotel where he had cashed three prior dishonored checks, and a call to the bank revealed insufficient funds to cover new check); Troup County Elec. Membership Corp. v. Traylor, 316 S.E.2d 568 (Ga. Ct. App. 1984) (probable cause found where purpose for filing suit was collection of bona fide debt); DiGiacomo v. Walmart Stores, Inc., 2011 WL 2637189 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. July 7, 2011) (identity theft victim failed to state claim against store that initiated larceny prosecution; probable cause existed where NSF checks were imprinted with victim's name and address); Pierson v. Aaron's Rental, 2010 WL 4522425 (Ohio Ct. App. Nov. 9, 2010) (consumer's boyfriend told rent-to-own agent to come back when consumer was home from work, rent-to-own company reported to police that consumer had "resisted" repossession attempt; probable cause for larceny complaint shown where payments were in arrears and consumer had not made arrangements for return of property).

340 Melford v. Kahane and Assoc., 371 F. Supp. 3d 1116 (S.D. Fla. 2019) (filing foreclosure action with actual knowledge of loan modification); Motes v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 233 F. Supp. 3d 1256 (N.D. Ala. 2016) (allowing malicious prosecution claim to go to trial; fact issue whether debt buyer, who proceeded with small claims trial despite lack of key documents, could have reasonably believed it had a chance to win); Faulk v. Midland Funding, 2015 WL 5736103 (M.D. Ala. Sept. 30, 2015) (actual knowledge that debt was not owed); Osinubepi-Alao v. Plainview Fin. Serv., Ltd., 44 F. Supp. 3d 84 (D.D.C. 2014) (refusing to dismiss malicious prosecution claim against debt buyer that filed affidavits not based on personal knowledge and obtained garnishment of plaintiff's wages); McCullough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, 610 F. Supp. 2d 1247 (D. Mont. 2009) (good-faith belief not shown where debt buyer's attorneys, a large-volume debt collection firm, did not verify information received from debt seller, even though seller explicitly did not warrant its reliability; defendant firm sued on time-barred debt and persisted for six months after learning of problem), later decision at 645 F. Supp. 2d 917 (D. Mont. 2009) (denying defendant's motion for new trial), aff'd, 637 F.3d 939, 956 (9th Cir.

fact that the party who instituted the matter lost on the merits is insufficient to show lack of probable cause.[341] California courts hold that the plaintiff must show that no reasonable attorney would have believed the underlying suit to be tenable.[342]

Ordinarily an indictment or a court finding of probable cause is sufficient to show probable cause,[343] but a plaintiff may present evidence that these actions resulted from false testimony or other misconduct.[344] Denial of a directed verdict or motion for summary judgment for the defendant in the underlying suit may also be some evidence of probable cause, but courts are unlikely to treat it as conclusive.[345]

The consumer's guilt of a crime is a complete defense for the creditor and shields the creditor from liability for malicious prosecution.[346] The defendant may also disprove lack of probable cause by showing a good-faith belief in the validity of their actions at the time.[347] Good-faith reliance upon the advice

2011) (affirming finding of malice where defendant law firm knew of or intentionally disregarded facts showing that suit was time-barred); Gigli v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2008 WL 3823295 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 14, 2008) (fact question where debt buyer sued despite lack of paperwork to show validity of debt or assignment, dismissed precipitously when asked for discovery); Turner v. Debt Buyers, Inc., 2011 WL 287901 (Cal. Ct. App. Jan. 31, 2011) (citing debt buyer's lack of investigation and its voluntary dismissal shortly after consumer's lawyer requested discovery as evidence that collection action was filed without probable cause); Geter v. Graham, 2005 WL 1846541 (Cal. Ct. App. Aug. 5, 2005) (eviction action not "objectively reasonable" where landlord failed to check whether tenants had paid former landlord); Nicholl v. Great Atl. & Pac. Tea Co., 517 S.E.2d 561 (Ga. Ct. App. 1999) (malice and lack of probable cause shown where store did not make reasonable investigation or follow its own standard procedures before criminally prosecuting identity theft victim); Smith v. City Bank & Tr. Co., 271 So. 3d 263 (La. Ct. App. 2019) (careless investigation, failure to disclose exculpatory video). Cf. Gill v. Kostroff, 82 F. Supp. 2d 1354 (M.D. Fla. 2000) (issue of fact as to probable cause where it was unclear what information card issuer possessed when it attempted to collect from consumer who was victim of identity theft). But cf. Smith v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3981144 (W.D. Ark. Sept. 11, 2017) (action on time-barred debt, dismissed as soon as consumer's lawyer appeared; probable cause was sufficient if consumer at one time owed debt and had not paid); Miller v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, L.L.P., 397 F. Supp. 2d 991 (N.D. Ind. 2005) (probable cause is objective; shown here where debt buyer's attorneys had report indicating original balance and interest rate, and bill of sale to debt buyer, but no copy of original account agreement); Myles v. Screentech, Inc., 98 So. 3d 563 (Ala. Civ. App. 2012) (probable cause shown, where larceny prosecution was initiated after inadequate, but apparently good-faith, investigation).

341 Hemmingson v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2011 WL 494941 (D. Minn. Feb. 7, 2011) (granting summary judgment to former defendant not sufficient to show lack of probable cause or malice), aff'd on other grounds, 674 F.3d 814 (8th Cir. 2012); Traiger v. Bicer, 2006 WL 2879779 (Cal. Ct. App. Oct. 11, 2006) (summary judgment for defendant sufficient to show termination in favor, but not lack of probable cause); Cadle Co. v. D'Addario, 26 A.3d 682 (Conn. App. Ct. 2011); Winckel v. VonMaur, Inc., 652 N.W.2d 653 (Iowa 2002) (dismissal by prosecutor or acquittal after trial not sufficient to prove lack of probable cause at time of arrest); Spicer v. Spicer, 2017 WL 6418308 (Ill. App. Ct. Dec. 14, 2016) (incorrect legal advice or going to trial with weak case not sufficient; if defendant is an attorney, plaintiff bears a heavy burden to show malice sufficient to overcome litigation privilege); Prather v. Providian Nat'l Bank, 2006 WL 1868335 (Ky. Ct. App. July 6, 2006) (attorney's filing of suit that fails at trial not actionable as long as attorney made reasonable investigation before filing; claim against creditor's lawyer fails where he knew account was disputed but not that creditor had falsified records).

342 Litinsky v. Kaplan, 253 Cal. Rptr. 3d 626 (Cal. Ct. App. 2019) ("whether any reasonable attorney would have thought the claim tenable;" lawyer is entitled to rely on information from client, unless he or she discovers that information was false); Paulus v. Bob Lynch Ford, Inc., 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 148, 153 (Cal. Ct. App. 2006).

343 See, e.g., Miller v. Davis, 653 Fed. Appx. 448 (6th Cir. 2016) (Ohio law; grand jury indictment creates "conclusive presumption" of probable cause; exception if indictment obtained by false testimony or "reckless disregard for truth, but not shown here); Tucker v. Lakeshore Chevrolet, Inc., 2004 WL 2251807 (Ohio Ct. App. Oct. 7, 2004) (indictment for insufficient funds check establishes probable cause where consumer did not show it was procured by perjured testimony).

344 Samtani v. Cherukuri, 2015 WL 64671 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 5, 2015) (grand jury indictment based on omissions and misrepresentations in current defendant's testimony); Lauter v. Anoufrieva, 642 F. Supp. 2d 1060 (C.D. Cal. 2009) (issuance of criminal complaint not conclusive as to probable cause if information furnished was false); Hawkins v. City of Greenville, 101 F. Supp. 2d 1356 (M.D. Ala. 2000); Shoney's Inc. v. Barnett, 773 So. 2d 1015 (Ala. Civ. App. 1999) (suppression of known material facts); Mulder v. Pilot Air Freight, 2005 WL 3163862 (Cal. Ct. App. Nov. 29, 2005) (defendant's report to police was so selective and incomplete as to be false); Fleming v. U-Haul of Ga., Inc., 541 S.E.2d 75 (Ga. Ct. App. 2000) (warrant did not establish probable cause where rental company failed to make full and fair disclosures when swearing out theft complaint); Braswell v. Medina, 805 S.E.2d 498 (N.C. Ct. App. 2017) (allowing malicious prosecution claim to go forward in case where conviction was reversed on appeal; fact that DA decided to prosecute and grand jury decided to indict created a prima facie case that there was probable cause, which was rebutted by evidence that current defendants "misrepresented, withheld or falsified evidence"); Tranum v. Broadway, 283 S.W.3d 403 (Tex. App. 2008) (knowingly providing false information to prosecutor showed lack of probable cause); San Antonio Credit Union v. O'Connor, 115 S.W.3d 82 (Tex. App. 2003). See generally § 15.6.2.2, supra.

345 Wolf Camera, Inc. v. Royter, 558 S.E.2d 797 (Ga. Ct. App. 2002) (denial of motion for directed verdict at criminal trial did not negate lack of probable cause, where it resulted from withholding of exculpatory evidence); Bacon v. Reimer & Braunstein, L.L.P., 929 A.2d 723 (Vt. 2007) (fact that claim survived motion for summary judgment is persuasive as to probable cause, but not sufficient here where denial was because of insufficient opportunity for discovery).

346 Blackford v. Wal-Mart Stores, 912 F. Supp. 537 (S.D. Ga. 1996) (proof by preponderance of evidence that consumer was guilty of crime defeats malicious prosecution claim); James v. Fast Fare, Inc., 685 F. Supp. 565 (D.S.C. 1988) (debtor had no cause of action for malicious prosecution where she admitted presenting checks knowing there were insufficient funds); Kmart v. Asaro, 751 So. 2d 513 (Ala. Civ. App. 1999) (no malicious prosecution where consumer knowingly wrote bad check); Morrill v. Norstar Bank, 557 N.Y.S.2d 655 (N.Y. App. Div. 1990) (no malicious prosecution where bad check charges were dismissed without prejudice on a technical error; no indication of plaintiff's innocence); First Valley Bank v. Martin, 144 S.W.3d 466 (Tex. 2004) (guilt prevents debtor from showing absence of probable cause even though creditor omitted and misstated facts in report to police); Tranum v. Broadway, 283 S.W.3d 403 (Tex. App. 2008) (malicious prosecution plaintiff must show innocence of crime charged; sufficiently shown here). But cf. Jones v. Soileau, 448 So. 2d 1268 (La. 1984) (upholding malicious prosecution judgment where criminal proceedings had ended in conviction that was later overturned on appeal).

347 See Davis v. World Credit Fund I, L.L.C., 543 F. Supp. 2d 953 (N.D. Ill. 2008) (key issue is what evidence debt buyer's lawyer, who sued then months later voluntarily dismissed, had in hand when suit was filed; here reasonable lawyer could believe client had justiciable claim); Sain of counsel also disproves lack of probable cause,[348] but only if the defendant made full disclosure to counsel.[349]

15.6.2.4 Malice or Improper Purpose

Another required element of a malicious prosecution claim is that the proceeding must have been instituted either maliciously[350] or for an improper purpose.[351] The plaintiff need not

v. Geske, 2008 WL 2811166 (D. Minn. July 17, 2008) (probable cause shown; when eviction proceeding brought, foreclosure sale had taken place and redemption period passed; trespass citations also based on probable cause, when former owner kept coming back after eviction); Nutter v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 500 F. Supp. 2d 1219 (D. Minn. 2007) (even if stipulated dismissal was termination in favor, malicious prosecution claim fails because reasonable creditor could have believed debt was owed); Petty v. Venable, Baetjer, Howard & Civiletti, L.L.P., 2004 WL 1629774 (N.D. Tex. July 24, 2004) (probable cause exists if "a reasonable person would believe that a crime had been committed given the facts as the complainant honestly and reasonably believed them to be before the criminal proceedings were initiated"); Harrison v. McMahon, 2004 WL 1171391 (D. Conn. May 24, 2004) (fact question whether defendants had good-faith belief that intent element of bad check crime was met); Ancona v. Manafort Bros., 746 A.2d 184 (Conn. App. Ct. 2000); Traina v. Manousos, 2006 WL 3860315 (Conn. Super. Ct. Dec. 12, 2006) (standard is objective, "reasonable lawyer," but if lawyer actually admitted that claim was meritless, and being brought for leverage, then vexatious litigation sufficiently alleged); Buckenmaier v. Kondrat, 2004 WL 944770 (Conn. Super. Ct. Apr. 14, 2004) (where evidence of amount owed was "conflicting," no showing that creditor lacked good-faith belief in his claim); Stark v. Eunice Superette, Inc., 457 So. 2d 291 (La. Ct. App. 1984) (misidentification of plaintiff as person who cashed forged check was an honest mistake; not actionable); Smith v. Magnolia Lady, Inc., 925 So. 2d 898 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006) (lack of probable cause not sufficiently alleged where employee's violation of cash handling procedures was "suspicious" even though allegedly missing cash was in fact misplaced); Lester v. Buchanen, 929 P.2d 910 (Nev. 1996). See also Rodriguez v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 52 S.W.3d 814 (Tex. App. 2001) (lack of probable cause not shown where faulty system for processing business checks led to bad check prosecution of wrong person; knowledge that system was imperfect not sufficient to show malicious prosecution), rev'd in part on other grounds, 92 S.W.3d 502 (Tex. 2002).

348 Collins v. Roost, 2009 WL 2168673 (Bankr. D. Or. July 17, 2009); Ancona v. Manafort Bros., 746 A.2d 184 (Conn. App. Ct. 2000); Shea v. Chase Manhattan Bank, 2000 WL 288360 (Conn. Super. Ct. Mar. 6, 2000) (for advice of counsel defense, must show actual consultation with counsel, full and fair disclosure, that lawyer was one from whom client could reasonably expect accurate and impartial opinion (in-house acceptable), and that advice was actually relied on in good faith); Kentucky Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Burton, 922 S.W.2d 385 (Ky. Ct. App. 1996); Blandino v. Fischel, 39 P.3d 258 (Or. Ct. App. 2002) (advice of counsel that a doubtful legal theory has a reasonable chance of success is sufficient to show probable cause to institute civil case; standard is higher for criminal case); Strickland v. Univ. of Scranton, 700 A.2d 979 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1997); Kaarup v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 485 N.W.2d 802 (S.D. 1992). See also Henze v. City of Lee's Summit, 2010 WL 2545841 (W.D. Mo. June 24, 2010) (giving weight to fact that police advised current defendant to seek protective order and assisted him in doing so, when he complained of threats by co-worker).

349 Harold McLaughlin Reliable Truck Brokers v. Cox, 922 S.W.2d 327 (Ark. 1996); Swat-Fame, Inc. v. Goldstein, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556 (Cal. Ct. App. 2002) (allowing malicious prosecution claim to go forward against original complainant but not her lawyers; fact question whether she misinformed lawyers), overruled on other grounds by Zamos v. Stroud, 87 P.3d 802 (Cal. 2004); Linn v. Moffitt, 73 S.W.3d 629 (Mo. Ct. App. 2002) (dismissing malicious prosecution complaint as to lawyers, who reasonably believed client's story, but allowing it to go forward as to client who omitted key information when consulting them); Lawson v. Wilkinson, 447 S.W.2d 369 (Tenn. Ct. App. 1969) (rejecting advice of counsel defense where creditor did not make full disclosure to prosecuting attorney, and filed criminal complaint against his advice).

350 Malice found: McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 956 (9th Cir. 2011) (Mont. law; malice shown where law firm for debt buyer knew of or intentionally disregarded facts showing that its suit was time-barred); Briner v. City of Ontario, 370 Fed. Appx. 692 (6th Cir. 2010) (Ohio law; malice sufficiently alleged; ongoing controversy between police and towing company operator, who had complained of police misconduct; evidence that employee was badgered into accusing boss); Kitchens v. Bryan County Nat'l Bank, 825 F.2d 248 (10th Cir. 1987) (Okla. law; sufficient evidence for jury to determine malice: whether known and necessary consequence of action is to injure another); Samuels v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 921 F. Supp 2d 1321 (S.D. Ala. 2013) (malice sufficiently alleged where debt buyer received minimal information from sellers, made no effort to obtain more, and was unable to produce any evidence at trial); HMS Capital, Inc. v. Lawyers Title Co., 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 786 (Ct. App. 2004) (prima facie showing of malice where counsel, who engaged in "only perfunctory" discovery, knew that agreement did not provide for the charges sought); Fleming v. U-Haul of Ga., Inc., 541 S.E.2d 75 (Ga. Ct. App 2000) (malice shown where rental company prosecuted consumer for theft; consumer made repeated calls to road service after rented truck broke down, then abandoned truck after waiting nearly two hours); Amos v. Brown, 828 So. 2d 138 (La. Ct. App. 2002) (lack of probable cause plus use of criminal proceedings in divorce-related property dispute sufficient to show malice).

Malice not found: Duke v. Nachtigal, 2012 WL 195466 (D. Or. Jan. 19, 2012) (lack of probable cause not sufficient to prove malice; must show ulterior purpose; not shown here where unfounded action resulted from recordkeeping error); Edmonds v. Beneficial, Inc., 2005 WL 2361913 (S.D. Miss. 2005) (malice not shown where lender substantiated that identity thief had intercepted and cashed "live check," but failed to inform collection lawyers, who obtained default judgment and garnished consumers' wages), aff'd, 212 Fed. Appx. 334 (5th Cir. 2007); Ex parte State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co., 924 So. 2d 706 (Ala. 2005) (negligence not sufficient; no malicious prosecution where default judgment resulted from persistently sending notices to wrong address); Walker v. Windom, 612 So. 2d 1167 (Ala. 1992) (no evidence of malice where attorney representing bank brought suit against plaintiff for her former husband's obligations on a joint credit card account); Rogers v. Ash Grove Cement Co., 799 So. 2d 841 (La. Ct. App. 2001) (malice not shown where plaintiff did not allege that creditor's lawyers in unsuccessful racketeering action knew statements were false or intended to injure plaintiff); Beecy v. Pucciarelli, 441 N.E.2d 1035 (Mass. 1982) (lawyer's filing suit against wrong person after notice of mistake did not support an inference of malice, where lawyer dismissed the suit after being told again suit was filed against wrong person).

See generally Debra E. Wax, Annotation, Liability of Attorney, Acting for Client, for Malicious Prosecution, 46 A.L.R.4th 249, supp. § 3 (1986).

351 See Sodesky v. Cherry Scaffolding, Inc., 2017 WL 38735678 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 5, 2017) (meritless lawsuit in retaliation for exercise of FLSA rights); Klemp v. Columbia Collection Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 5324318, at *15 (D. Or. Oct. 17, 2014) (filing of inflated counterclaim to cause transfer of case from small claims court to circuit court may be improper purpose); Gigli v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2008 WL 3823295 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 14, 2008) (lack of probable cause relevant to question whether action brought for improper purpose; here debt buyer sued despite lack of paperwork to prove validity of debt or assignment, dismissed when confronted with discovery request); prove intent to harm; "gross negligence or great indifference to persons, property, or the rights of others" is sufficient to show "legal malice."[352] Malice is subjective and may be shown by circumstantial evidence.[353] Malice is a question of fact.[354]

Lack of probable cause and malice are closely related but not interchangeable.[355] For example, where wrongful foreclosure resulted from a bank's errors, there may have been a lack of objective probable cause, but malice was not shown where the bank, upon discovering the problem, undid the foreclosure and terminated the eviction proceedings.[356] Nonetheless, in some circumstances courts will infer malice from a complete lack of probable cause.[357]

Evidence of malice includes:

- Extensive Internet publication of sensational and groundless accusations;[358]
- Persisting with a proceeding after learning of its lack of merit;[359]

Turner v. Debt Buyers, Inc., 2011 WL 287901 (Cal. Ct. App. Jan. 31, 2011) (lack of investigation and demands for excessive amounts supported conclusion that action brought for improper purpose of coercing settlement of meritless claim). See also Reyes-Cardona v. J.C. Penney Co., 694 F.2d 894 (1st Cir. 1982) (applying Puerto Rico civil law, which is similar to common law standard; negligent filing of debt collection suit against wrong person is insufficient to create a cause of action). Cf. Williams v. Pinks, Feldman & Brooks, 530 N.Y.S.2d 162 (N.Y. App. Div. 1988) (no evidence of improper motive when creditor commenced action to collect debt); Citibank v. Hauff, 668 N.W.2d 528 (S.D. 2003) (improper purpose not shown where creditor had arguable, though unsuccessful, claim for ex-husband's unauthorized use of card). See generally Note, Malicious Prosecution, 26 U. Balt. L. Rev. 583 (1997).

352 In re Slaich, 2019 WL 1302338 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. Mar. 19, 2019) (subjective intent to injure is not required; recklessness is sufficient); In re Smith, 489 B.R. 875 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 2013) (Georgia malicious prosecution judgment may be based on "reckless disregard" or "conscious indifference"); Soukup v. Law Offices of Herbert Hafif, 139 P.3d 30 (Cal. 2006) (malice may range from open hostility to indifference); Clemons v. State Risk Mgmt. Trust Fund, 870 So. 2d 881 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2004); Brooks v. H & H Creek, Inc., 478 S.E.2d 451 (Ga. Ct. App. 1996) (improper motive, reckless disregard, or conscious indifference to plaintiff's rights sufficient to show malice); Smith v. City Bank & Tr. Co., 271 So. 3d 263 (La. Ct. App. 2019) (malice inferred from finding that defendant acted in reckless disregard of plaintiff's rights; here employer brought criminal charges based on very inadequate investigation); Jestic v. Long Island Sav. Bank, 440 N.Y.S.2d 278 (N.Y. App. Div. 1981); Gunnels v. City of Brownfield, 153 S.W.3d 452 (Tex. App. 2003). See also Poskin v. T.D. Banknorth, 687 F. Supp. 2d 530 (W.D. Pa. 2009) (gross negligence is sufficient for Pennsylvania's statutory tort; borrowers stated claim against assignee bank that went ahead with foreclosure, without verifying information received from assignor finance company, despite knowledge that finance company had been caught falsifying information on other loans). But cf. LeForge v. BAC Home Loans, L.P., 2011 WL 1532139 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 21, 2011) ("shoddy procedures and negligence" not equivalent to malice; here lender brought foreclosure proceedings after mortgage delinquency had been resolved by short sale); Wal-Mart Stores v. Binns, 15 S.W.3d 320 (Ark. 2000) (incompetence not equivalent to malice).

353 Paulus v. Bob Lynch Ford, Inc., 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 148 (Cal. Ct. App. 2006).

354 Zablonsky v. Perkins, 187 A.2d 314 (Md. 1963).

355 Beaulieu v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 4843809 (D. Me. Sept. 29, 2014) (lack of probable cause just barely alleged where foreclosure failed because lender neglected to give statutorily required notice, but malice may be inferred only if groundlessness of claim is obvious); Duke v. Nachtigal, 2012 WL 195466 (D. Or. Jan. 19, 2012); In re Prince, 414 B.R. 285 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 2009), rev'd in part on other grounds, 2010 WL 841273 (M.D. Tenn. Mar. 4, 2010); Wal-Mart Stores v. Binns, 15 S.W.3d 320 (Ark. 2000).

356 In re Prince, 414 B.R. 285 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 2009), rev'd in part on other grounds, 2010 WL 841273 (M.D. Tenn. Mar. 4, 2010).

357 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 956 (9th Cir. 2011) (Mont. law; rebuttable presumption of malice arises from absence of probable cause); Melford v. Kahane and Assoc., 371 F. Supp. 3d 1116 (S.D. Fla. 2019) (lack of probable cause is sufficient basis for jury to infer malice; law firm carried on with foreclosure despite actual knowledge of loan modification); Samuels v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 921 F. Supp. 2d 1321 (S.D. Ala. 2013) (malice can be inferred from lack of probable cause; sufficiently alleged where large volume debt buyer received minimal information from sellers, made no effort to obtain more, and was unable to produce any evidence at trial); Francis v. Hertz Corp., 2010 WL 761232 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 3, 2010) (malice may be inferred from complete lack of probable cause; not shown here where rental car company brought larceny complaint after sketchy investigation); Montgomery Ward v. Wilson, 664 A.2d 916 (Md. 1995) (malice can be implied from lack of probable cause for purposes of compensatory damages, but jury instructions should not imply that mere negligence in investigating is sufficient; for punitive damages, malice cannot be implied); Semones v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 416 S.E.2d 909 (N.C. Ct. App. 1992) (malice can be inferred from lack of probable cause to initiate criminal prosecution). Cf. Barrett v. Negrete, 126 Fed. Appx. 816 (9th Cir. 2005) (Cal. law; open question whether malice can be inferred from lack of probable cause). But see Sanders v. Daniel Int'l Corp., 682 S.W.2d 803 (Mo. 1994) (mere absence of probable cause insufficient; must show improper motive). But cf. Geter v. Graham, 2005 WL 1846541 (Cal. Ct. App. Aug. 5, 2005) (lack of probable cause not sufficient in itself to show malice, but shown here where landlord failed to investigate facts and filed eviction action to force tenants to accept unlawful rent increase).

358 Barrett v. Negrete, 126 Fed. Appx. 816 (9th Cir. 2005) (Cal. law).

359 Pierce v. Clayton County Georgia, 717 Fed. Appx. 866 (11th Cir. 2017) (actual knowledge of police department's clerical error); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 956 (9th Cir. 2011) (Mont. law; malice shown where law firm continued with collection suit after its client confirmed that suit was barred); Kaplan v. Regions Bank, 2018 WL 3642576 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 1, 2018) (bank vigorously pursued victim of Ponzi scheme after federal courts had found current plaintiff to be innocent victim); Dickens v. Gemini Capital Group, 2015 WL 9412928 (W.D. Ark. Dec. 21, 2015) (debt buyer persisted for six months after learning that claim was time-barred); Lee v. Kim, 254 Cal. Rptr. 3d 546 (Cal. Ct. App. 2019) (making demand for monetary settlement at time when belief in probable cause was "no longer defensible"); Cuevas-Martinez v. Sun, Salt, Sand, Inc., 248 Cal. Rptr. 3d 200 (Cal. Ct. App. 2019) (persisting with action for twenty months after discovery had shown that claims were meritless); Medley Capital Corp. v. Security Nat'l Guar., Inc., 225 Cal. Rptr. 3d 736 (Cal. Ct. App. 2017) (failure to investigate facts or research law before filing six-figure claim against wrong entity, and persisting with litigation after being repeatedly told of mistake, are sufficient allegations of malice); Guzman v. Olaires, 2004 WL 2030230 (Cal. Ct. App. Sept. 10, 2004) (malice or lack of probable cause may be shown by continuing with litigation after it becomes obvious that cause of action is meritless); Brewer v. Christiansen, 2002 WL 31174236 (Cal. Ct. App. Sept. 30, 2002) (malice is subjective; shown here where lawyer pressed forward even after learning of serious factual inaccuracies in client's story). See also Bloomer v. Ouellette, 333 F. Supp. 3d 1172 (D. Kan. 2018) (failure to disclose new evidence that eliminates probable cause is probative of malice); Shaw v. Law Offices of Hayt, Hayt, & Landau,

- Evidence of similar treatment of other debtors;[360]
- Threats;[361]
- False testimony or suppression of evidence;[362] and
- Institution of a criminal proceeding as a way of accomplishing some other purpose.[363]

Expressions of personal ill will are germane,[364] but personal ill will need not be shown.[365]

15.6.2.5 Termination in Favor

The final element of a malicious prosecution claim is that the proceeding must have been terminated in the defendant's favor.[366] Because of this requirement, a malicious prosecution action cannot be brought while the underlying suit is still pending.[367] Accordingly, it is premature to assert malicious prosecution by way of a counterclaim or defense.[368] It is safest to wait until any appeal of the underlying suit has been decided and all appeal periods have passed.[369]

A malicious prosecution claim cannot be brought if the plaintiff in the prior suit obtained a favorable judgment.[370] Some courts require that the proceeding be terminated on the merits, rather than on a basis such as the statute of limitations.[371] However, dismissal of a proceeding on non-merits 2018 WL 1634829 (D.N.J. Apr. 5, 2018) (denying summary judgment to collector; repeated levies on bank account of non-debtor father for debt of similarly-named son after being informed of error is sufficient evidence of malice). But see Collins v. Roost, 2009 WL 2168673 (Bankr. D. Or. July 17, 2009) (continuing to prosecute one claim after realizing it was bad not sufficient to show malice).

360 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 953–954 (9th Cir. 2011) (Mont. law).

361 Cave v. Davison, 2001 WL 1098058 (E.D. La. Sept. 18, 2001) (employer's threat to "destroy" former employee if he did not repay alleged debt and subsequent pursuit of criminal charges sufficient evidence of malice).

362 Shoney's Inc. v. Barnett, 773 So. 2d 1015 (Ala. Civ. App. 1999) (false testimony or suppression of evidence sufficient to prove malice by clear and convincing evidence); Lin v. Severson & Werson, 2004 WL 1345118 (Cal. Ct. App. June 16, 2004) (evidence that counsel in underlying action tried to suborn perjury is probative on malice and probable cause; tends to show counsel believed case was untenable); Horne v. J.H. Harvey Co., 617 S.E.2d 648 (Ga. Ct. App. 2005) (fact issue regarding malice where store employee furnished false information in filling out additional paperwork after bad check complaint issued); Prather v. Providian Nat'l Bank, 2006 WL 1868335 (Ky. Ct. App. July 6, 2006) (allegation that creditor withheld and falsified account statements sufficient to allege malice); Digby v. Texas Bank, 943 S.W.2d 914 (Tex. App. 1997) (facts sufficient to support malice and lack of probable cause elements where bank failed to make "full and fair" disclosure to authorities; reporting inculpatory evidence but not exculpatory, negated presumption of good faith).

363 Samtani v. Cherukuri, 2015 WL 64671 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 5, 2015) (seeking criminal indictment in order to improve position in negotiations over commercial debt may be actionable if proven); George v. W.W.D. Automobiles, Inc., 937 So. 2d 958 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006) (malice shown where car dealer instituted criminal case as way of getting car back).

364 Bank of Eureka Springs v. Evans, 109 S.W.3d 672 (Ark. 2003) (when borrower mentioned bankruptcy, bank officials expressed personal ill will to borrower, then lied to prosecutor to initiate groundless prosecution for defrauding a secured creditor); Soukup v. Law Offices of Herbert Hafif, 139 P.3d 30 (Cal. 2006) (malice clearly shown; meritless action and personal ill will); Zimmerman & Kabanovich v. Scottsdale Ins. Co., 2006 WL 2961021 (Cal. Ct. App. Oct. 18, 2006) (malice may be shown either by evidence of hostility or ill will, or by improper purpose for bringing action).

365 Shoney's Inc. v. Barnett, 773 So. 2d 1015 (Ala. Civ. App. 1999).

366 Houghton v. Foremost Fin. Serv. Corp., 724 F.2d 112 (10th Cir. 1983) (no malicious prosecution claim where creditor's replevin action not terminated in debtor's favor); Shaw v. Law Offices of Hayt, Hayt, & Landau, 2018 WL 1634829 (D.N.J. Apr. 5, 2018) (bank account levy was action, and withdrawal was termination in favor); Kent v. Drought, 2010 WL 4320334 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 28, 2010) (grand jury's refusal to indict was termination in favor); Rafter v. Bank of Am., 2009 WL 691929 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 12, 2009) (issue of fact whether dismissal of criminal charges was termination in favor); Mulder v. Pilot Air Freight, 2005 WL 3163862 (Cal. Ct. App. Nov. 29, 2005) (dismissal of criminal charge for insufficient evidence was termination in favor); Verdon v. Song, 251 So. 3d 256 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2018) (nolle prosequi is termination in favor where it occurred because prosecutor, after review of merits, concluded that chance of conviction was slight); Berman v. Karvounis, 518 A.2d 726 (Md. 1987); Otiniano v. Magier, 580 N.Y.S.2d 759 (N.Y. App. Div. 1992); San Antonio Credit Union v. O'Connor, 115 S.W.3d 82 (Tex. App. 2003) (affirming malicious prosecution judgment for contractor whose indictment for misappropriation of funds was dismissed; reasonable jury could find that contractor was innocent and accuser's beliefs unreasonable).

367 Jordan v. Berman, 758 F. Supp. 269 (E.D. Pa. 1991) (malicious prosecution claim available only if prior proceeding has been terminated), aff'd in part, vacated in part on other grounds, 20 F.3d 1250 (3d Cir. 1994); Leek v. Cooper, 2012 WL 1511411 (Cal. Ct. App. May 1, 2012) (malicious prosecution claim will not lie for action taken in pending case, here seeking a debtor's exam at a time when collection activity was stayed pending appeal); Ulmer v. Frisard, 694 So. 2d 1046 (La. Ct. App. 1997) (proper to dismiss malicious prosecution claim that was brought before termination of allegedly malicious litigation).

368 Minnesota Corn Processors, Inc. v. McCormack, 2000 WL 948659 (E.D. Pa. July 7, 2000); Equality, Inc. v. I-Link Communications, 76 F. Supp. 2d 227 (D. Conn. 1999); First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Stone, 467 N.E.2d 1226 (Ind. Ct. App. 1984).

369 Montemayor v. Ortiz, 208 S.W.3d 627 (Tex. App. 2006) (no termination in favor until appellate process exhausted).

370 LaSonde v. Chase Mortg. Co., 577 S.E.2d 822 (Ga. Ct. App. 2003) (substantial success in underlying civil proceeding is complete defense); Watson v. Auto Advisors, Inc., 822 N.E.2d 1017 (Ind. Ct. App. 2005) (no malicious prosecution claim where creditor won its collection suit).

371 Mills v. City of Covina, 921 F.3d 1161 (9th Cir. 2019) (Cal. law; reversal on appeal was not termination in favor, where judgment was reversed because key evidence should have been suppressed pursuant to exclusionary rule); Murawski v. Reid, 375 F. Supp. 3d 998 (N.D. Ill. 2019) (nolle prosequi because witnesses were absent was not termination in favor; prosecutor remained free to re-file charges); Jesse L. Morgan v. The Vogler Law Firm, 2016 WL 3958608 (E.D. Mo. July 16, 2016) (dismissal because debt discharged in bankruptcy not termination in favor); Reynolds Casas & Reilly, L.L.P. v. 4920 Corp., 2005 WL 995244 (Cal. Ct. App. Apr. 29, 2005) (dismissal of eviction proceeding for defective three-day notice not termination in favor as it did not reflect on merits (whether rent was due)); Guerrero v. Windsor Square Homeowners Ass'n, 2001 WL 1480637 (Cal. Ct. App. Nov. 21, 2001) (successful statute-of-limitations defense was not a favorable termination because it did not reflect merits of case); Health Mgmt. Assoc., Inc. v. Weiner, 264 So. 3d 747 (Miss. 2019) (dismissal of federal criminal charge for lack of jurisdiction was procedural, not termination on merits). But see Di Loreto v. Costigian, 600 F. Supp. 2d 671 (E.D. Pa. 2009) (dismissal of involuntary bankruptcy petition because of defective service was favorable termination, but debtors failed to allege other required elements), aff'd on other grounds, 351 Fed. Appx. 747 (3d Cir. 2009); Prather v. Providian Nat'l Bank, 2006 WL 1868335 (Ky. Ct.

grounds in circumstances suggesting that failure on the merits was imminent may be sufficient.[372] A number of courts hold that termination of a proceeding by way of a settlement agreement is not a termination in favor of the defendant.[373]

Vacating a judgment[374] or granting a special motion to strike under an anti-SLAPP suit statute[375] can satisfy the requirement of termination in favor of the defendant. Voluntary dismissal may amount to termination in favor of the defendant,[376] but at least in some circumstances a dismissal without prejudice may be insufficient.[377] Denial of a prejudgment remedy or one part App. July 6, 2006) (dismissal with prejudice for discovery violations is favorable termination).

372 Spak v. Phillips, 857 F.3d 458 (2d Cir. 2017) (Conn. Law; nolle prosequi of criminal charges is termination in favor, provided it is not result of compromise with defendant); Margheim v. Buljko, 855 F.3d 1077 (10th Cir. 2017) (dismissal of criminal case following grant of motion to suppress not termination in favor; grounds for dismissal were "purely technical" and had nothing to do with guilt or innocence); Lee v. Kim, 254 Cal. Rptr. 3d 546 (Cal. Ct. App. 2019) (dismissal for lack of standing reflected on merits; company was shown to neither own nor control ADA non-compliant parking lot at issue); Guzman v. Olaires, 2004 WL 2030230 (Cal. Ct. App. Sept. 10, 2004) (dismissal as sanction for litigation conduct is favorable termination only if misconduct "amounts to a concession that plaintiff had no case"; here, complete and long-continued failure to respond to discovery made out prima facie case of favorable termination); Buckenmaier v. Kondrat, 2004 WL 944770 (Conn. Super. Ct. Apr. 14, 2004) (dismissal for failure to prosecute was favorable termination).

373 Zebrowski v. Wells Fargo Bank, 657 F. Supp. 2d 511 (D.N.J. 2009) (termination was unfavorable where consumers paid disputed amounts in order to stop foreclosure); Shapiro v. Haenn, 222 F. Supp. 2d 29 (D. Me. 2002) (voluntary withdrawal after settlement not favorable termination); Givens v. Rent-A-Center, Inc., 720 F. Supp. 160 (S.D. Ala. 1988), aff'd, 885 F.2d 879 (11th Cir. 1989) (dismissing malicious prosecution claim because nolle prosequi of criminal charges was result of settlement agreement); Dalany v. Am. Pac. Holding Corp., 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13 (Cal. Ct. App. 1996) (malicious prosecution action unavailable where prior proceeding was terminated by settlement agreement); Fuentes v. Berry, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 848 (Cal. Ct. App. 1995) (negotiated settlement not termination in favor of defendant; if termination is not on merits, the reasons must be examined to see if this reflects the opinion of the court or the prosecuting party that an action would not succeed); Laster v. Star Rental, Inc., 353 S.E.2d 37 (Ga. Ct. App. 1987) (denying malicious prosecution claim by rent-to-own customer where criminal prosecution for not returning leased goods was dismissed upon customer's promising to return the goods); Lee Ching v. Dung, 446 P.3d 1016 (Haw. Ct. App. 2019) (downgrading trespass claim to parking violation was compromise, not termination in favor), rev'd in part on other grounds, 477 P.3d 856 (Haw. 2020); Swick v. Liautaud, 662 N.E.2d 1238 (Ill. 1996) (allegation that prosecution ended in nolle prosequi, without more, was not sufficient to prove "termination in favor of accused"; nolle prosequi must be for "reasons consistent with innocence," not a result of agreement or compromise). See also Faulk v. Midland Funding, 2015 WL 5736103 (M.D. Ala. Sept. 30, 2015) (fact issue whether debt buyer's voluntary dismissal with prejudice was result of negotiation).

374 Gill v. Kostroff, 82 F. Supp. 2d 1354 (M.D. Fla. 2000) (question of fact whether vacation of judgment was termination in consumer's favor).

375 Soukup v. Law Offices of Herbert Hafif, 139 P.3d 30 (Cal. 2006) (grant of special motion to strike under anti-SLAPP statute is favorable termination).

376 Barrett v. Negrete, 126 Fed. Appx. 816 (9th Cir. 2005) (Cal. law; favorable termination sufficiently alleged where accusation of sensational crime, unsupported by facts, voluntarily dismissed when accuser faced discovery requests); Holick v. Burkhart, 388 F. Supp. 3d 1370 (D. Kan. 2019) (dismissal without prejudice is favorable termination, so long as it is not inconsistent with lack of merit; need not show that it reflects on merits); Fooks v. Mason, Schilling & Mason Co., L.P.A., 2019 WL 4455983 (E.D. Ky. Sept. 17, 2019) (voluntary dismissal with prejudice is termination in favor); Dickens v. Gemini Capital Group, 2015 WL 9412928 (W.D. Ark. Dec. 21, 2015) (time-barred claim dismissed four days before trial); Osinubepi-Alao v. Plainview Fin. Serv., Ltd., 44 F. Supp. 3d 84 (D.D.C. 2014) (voluntary dismissal with prejudice after being served with discovery requests); Klemp v. Columbia Collection Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 5324318 (D. Or. Oct. 17, 2014) (reasonable jury could find that voluntary dismissal when faced with motion to dismiss "reflects on the merits"); Poskin v. TD Banknorth, 687 F. Supp. 2d 530 (W.D. Pa. 2009) (voluntary dismissal sufficient to show favorable termination for purposes of Pennsylvania's statutory wrongful use of civil proceedings claim); Noel v. Town of Plymouth, 895 F. Supp. 346 (D. Mass. 1995) (criminal prosecution was terminated in favor of the accused if district attorney formally abandoned the proceeding by a nolle prosequi or a motion to dismiss, unless this was on strictly technical or procedural grounds); Olivares v. Pineda, 253 Cal. Rptr. 3d 213 (Cal. Ct. App. 2019) (voluntary dismissal rebuttably presumed to be termination on merits); Medley Capital Corp. v. Security Nat'l Guar., Inc., 225 Cal. Rptr. 3d 736 (Cal. Ct. App. 2017) ("a voluntary dismissal, even one without prejudice, reflects on the merits. Although not res judicata, it is generally a favorable termination"); Turner v. Debt Buyers, Inc., 2011 WL 287901 (Cal. Ct. App. Jan. 31, 2011) (voluntary dismissal presumed to be termination in favor; further supported here by timing: dismissed shortly after consumer's lawyer requested discovery); Citi-Wide Preferred Couriers v. Golden Eagle Ins. Corp., 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 199 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003) (favorable termination shown: when insured appeared ready for trial, insurer conceded that insured had paid all that was due and voluntarily dismissed case with prejudice); Nicholl v. Great Atl. & Pac. Tea Co., 517 S.E.2d 561 (Ga. Ct. App. 1999) (favorable termination shown where nolle prosequi of criminal charges occurred after handwriting exemplar showed that identity theft victim had not written the bad check). Cf. Allen v. Berger, 784 N.E.2d 367 (Ill. App. Ct. 2002) (voluntary dismissal of criminal charge not favorable termination unless "the circumstances . . . compel an inference . . . that there existed a lack of reasonable grounds to pursue the criminal prosecution.").

377 DeBoskey v. SunTrust Mortg., Inc., 2017 WL 4083557 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 14, 2017) (voluntary dismissal of foreclosure for lack of standing not termination in favor, because it did not "indicate the innocence of the plaintiff," that is, that he was not in default); Shirokov v. Dunlop, Grubb & Weaver, P.L.L.C., 2012 WL 1065578, at *33 (D. Mass. Mar. 27, 2012) (dismissal without prejudice not termination in favor); Carr v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2011 WL 3568338 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 12, 2011) (voluntary dismissal without prejudice not termination in favor); Walker v. Toyota Motor Credit Corp., 2007 WL 2500177 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 30, 2007) (dismissal without prejudice not favorable termination; here, replevin dismissed without prejudice after vehicle found, and creditor remained free to refile to seek damages for loss of use); Broadnax v. Greene Credit Serv., 694 N.E.2d 167 (Ohio Ct. App. 1997) (dismissal of bad check prosecution without prejudice not termination in favor where judge noted that there were "problems" with the case and that prosecutor "may want to" refile); Goodwin v. City of Shepardstown, 825 S.E.2d 363 (W. Va. 2019) (dismissal of criminal charges is favorable termination only if it prevents charges from ever being revived; dismissal without prejudice not sufficient). But see Sternberg v. Horner, 2009 WL 2468466 (Cal. Ct. App. Aug. 13, 2009) (voluntary dismissal without prejudice after demurrer was sustained was favorable termination); Olympia Sales, Inc. v. Roberts Enters., Inc., 2006 WL 1391217 (Conn. Super. Ct. May 7, 2006) (sufficient if proceeding terminated "without consideration"; here, voluntary dismissal without prejudice was favorable termination); Seipel v. Olympic of a claim may be insufficient if the underlying action itself is not terminated,[378] but an abuse-of-process claim may be an alternative approach in these circumstances.[379]

15.6.2.6 Examples

Examples of malicious prosecution claims in the debt collection context include:

- A creditor's initiation of a bad check prosecution solely to coerce payment of a debt known to have resulted from identity theft,[380] a financial institution's error,[381] a good-faith dispute over the goods or services provided,[382] or other circumstances that would not support a conviction.[383] However, some states have statutes that immunize creditors from malicious prosecution claims if they follow certain procedures before initiating a dishonored check prosecution;[384]

Const Invs., 188 P.3d 1027 (Mont. 2008) (genuine issue of fact whether dismissal without prejudice was favorable termination).

378 Vanover v. Cook, 260 F.3d 1182 (10th Cir. 2001) (Kan. law; reduction on appeal of amount owed was not termination in favor); Hoffman v. Connecticut, 2009 WL 3055137 (D. Me. Aug. 7, 2009) (favorable termination not shown; real estate attachment was dissolved, but underlying fraudulent transfer action was ongoing), modified on other grounds and adopted by 671 F. Supp. 2d 166 (D. Me. 2009); Hewitt v. Rice, 154 P.3d 408 (Colo. 2007) (for malicious prosecution action based on filing of lis pendens, underlying action in which lis pendens filed must be terminated in current plaintiff's favor); Bernhard-Thomas Bldg. Sys., Inc. v. Dunican, 2006 WL 301908 (Conn. Super. Ct. Jan. 18, 2006) (denial of application for prejudgment remedy not termination of civil proceeding in favor, because it does not adjudicate the merits); Gecy v. Somerset Point at Lady's Island Homeowners' Assoc., Inc., 828 S.E.2d 73 (S.C. Ct. App. 2019) (removal of lis pendens, while underlying litigation remains pending, is not favorable termination, but if litigation terminates favorably, filing of improper lis pendens can support claim); Asser v. Commonwealth, 69 Va. Cir. 75 (Va. Cir. Ct. 2005) (even if malicious prosecution action available against taxing authorities, taxpayer failed to allege favorable termination where state released lien but continued to seek collection of amount due).

379 See § 15.6.3, infra.

380 In re BFW Liquidation, L.L.C., 471 B.R. 652 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 2012) (victim stated claim for malicious prosecution against store that cashed check for thief despite obvious problems with identification, then prosecuted victim); Wal-Mart Stores v. Patterson, 816 So. 2d 1 (Ala. 2001) (checking account owner who was arrested and charged after his ex-wife forged his signature stated claim for negligence and malicious prosecution); Nicholl v. Great Atl. & Pac. Tea Co., 517 S.E.2d 561 (Ga. Ct. App. 1999) (favorable termination shown where nolle prosequi of criminal charges occurred after handwriting exemplar showed that consumer, a victim of identity theft, had not written the bad check); K-Mart Corp. v. Salmon, 547 A.2d 1069 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1988) (actual and punitive damages proper where store brought bad check charges against plaintiff even though it had accepted check from thief while doubting the thief's identity).

381 Hayfield v. Home Depot, 168 F. Supp. 2d 436 (E.D. Pa. 2001) (retailer vigorously pursued criminal bad check prosecution against customer whose check company negligently misprinted her account number, despite extensive efforts by customer and check company to correct the problem).

382 Rannels v. S.E. Nichols, Inc., 591 F.2d 242 (3d Cir. 1979) (Pa. law) (cause of action stated where consumer alleged that seller knew her stop payment order on check was result of dispute over defective zipper); Gooch v. Tudor, 674 S.E.2d 331 (Ga. Ct. App. 2009) (affirming malicious prosecution judgment and punitive damages against contractor who initiated theft-by-deception prosecution by swearing falsely that consumer, who offered to pay undisputed portion of bill and negotiate about the rest, had refused to pay); Hupp v. North Hills Lincoln-Mercury, Inc., 610 S.W.2d 349 (Mo. Ct. App. 1980) (upholding actual and punitive damages for bad check charges where consumer had told dealer not to deposit check until myriad of defects had been corrected on new car); Lawson v. Wilkinson, 447 S.W.2d 369 (Tenn. Ct. App. 1969) (stop payment after purchased horse proved to be unmanageable). See also Mason v. Rainbow Rentals, 2004 WL 102873 (Ohio Ct. App. Jan. 23, 2004) (no probable cause where creditor should have known difference between consumer's stop payment order and a bad check).

383 See, e.g., Papadopoulos v. Josem, 2002 WL 194494 (Conn. Super. Ct. Jan. 11, 2002) (allowing plaintiff to proceed malicious prosecution claim against her former attorney who allowed a criminal dishonored check prosecution to go forward, even though she had covered the check); Semones v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 416 S.E.2d 909 (N.C. Ct. App. 1992) (denying summary judgment for malicious prosecution defendant who did not have reasonable grounds to believe that plaintiff knew when he drew check that there were insufficient funds to pay it); Gumm v. Heider, 348 P.2d 455 (Or. 1960) (general and punitive damages proper where payee brought bad check charges over insufficient funds check for a preexisting, disputed debt). See also Kitchens v. Barlow, 164 So. 2d 745 (Miss. 1964) (cause of action stated for bad check criminal prosecution when wrong person was allegedly being prosecuted; check writer's name was similar to current plaintiff's). But see Gatheright v. Clark, 2016 WL 1307519 (N.D. Miss. Mar. 31, 2016) (summary judgment for defendants; intentional misuse of bad check procedure not shown, even though creditor, seeking to collect on post-dated check, which is not covered by Mississippi law, filed false affidavit after it learned of debtor's bankruptcy filing); Guidry v. Clare, 442 F. Supp. 2d 282 (E.D. Va. 2006) (denying malicious prosecution claim and sanctioning consumer for frivolous action, where payee of insufficient funds check had legal and factual basis for criminal complaint); Kmart v. Asaro, 751 So. 2d 513 (Ala. Civ. App. 1999) (no malicious prosecution where consumer knowingly wrote bad check); Wenger v. Aceto, 883 N.E.2d 262 (Mass. 2008) (allowing anti-SLAPP motion to dismiss malicious prosecution and abuse-of-process claims; creditor's action had "reasonable basis in law" when law unclear whether check for antecedent debt could support larceny charge). But cf. Vasseur v. Eunice Superette, Inc., 386 So. 2d 692 (La. Ct. App. 1980) (upholding finding that payee of dishonored checks had not acted maliciously in bringing criminal charges). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 8 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

384 ALABAMA: The Alabama Worthless Check Act provides a safe harbor for payees of worthless checks who give the prescribed notice and follow statutory procedure, Ala. Code § 13A-9-13.2(3). See West v. Bruno's Inc., 837 So. 2d 303 (Ala. Civ. App. 2002) (statute protects only holder of worthless instrument; fact issue here whether check was worthless where bank records indicated it had been paid).

FLORIDA: A Florida statute also prescribes a notice procedure, but the plain language of the statute gives immunity only to subsequent holders of the check who give notice, not original holders. Fla. Stat. § 832.07(1)(a). However, a court has described the statute as applying to "any party who holds a worthless check." Vann Goings v. West Fla. Hosp., 504 So. 2d 1254, 1255 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1986) (also holding statutory immunity inapplicable where payee withholds information from state attorney).

GEORGIA: Georgia provides a statutory defense where the creditor sends a letter demanding payment of the check before filing suit. Ga. Code Ann. § 16-9-20(h) (holder of worthless check who provides statutory notice is immune from civil liability for the giving of such notice and for proceeding as required; person who initiates prosecution against check writer who had no account at bank on which check was drawn is deemed to have probable cause even without giving notice).

- Wrongful garnishment;[385]
- Suing on a time-barred debt without verifying the information received from the prior holder, and persisting with the suit after learning of the problem;[386] or
- A false automobile theft prosecution by a car dealer as a means of obtaining possession of a car or forcing the consumer to drop a fraud, warranty, or other claim.[387]

15.6.3 Abuse of Process

15.6.3.1 Elements

Abuse of process is often described as the use of "legal process against another in an improper manner to accomplish a purpose for which it was not designed."[388] One court described this tort as having a "broad reach," and explained that it developed historically "as a 'catch-all' category to cover improper uses of the judicial machinery that did not fit within the earlier established, but narrowly circumscribed, action of malicious prosecution."[389]

In contrast to malicious prosecution, the tort of abuse of process is not based on the improper institution of legal proceedings.[390] The gist of the action is the improper use of process after it has been issued to accomplish a purpose for which it was not designed.[391] However, some courts allow

See Tallman v. Hinton, 467 S.E.2d 596 (Ga. Ct. App. 1996) (Georgia statute would not provide a defense to merchant where notice did not conform to requirements of statute); Hartsfield v. Union City Chrysler-Plymouth, 463 S.E.2d 713 (Ga. Ct. App. 1995) (applying statutory provision that prohibits introduction of agreements that are not written on the check—here, an oral agreement not to cash a check); Grand Union Co. v. Edwards, 456 S.E.2d 736 (Ga. Ct. App. 1995) (Ga. Code Ann. § 16-9-20 does not require seller to give notice to consumer when account is closed, as opposed to overdrawn; merchant who gave notice, which partially complied with statute, did more than required; no cause of action); Blankenship v. Home Depot, Inc., 356 S.E.2d 61 (Ga. Ct. App. 1987) (statute provides immunity defense to creditor who gave notice to drawer to pay check); Wilson v. Home Depot, Inc., 348 S.E.2d 588 (Ga. Ct. App. 1986) (nolle prosequi of bad check charge after restitution does not overcome presumption of probable cause where consumer did not make check good within statutory notice period).

See generally National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 8.4 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (civil dishonored check statutes).

385 Shaw v. Law Offices of Hayt, Hayt, & Landau, 2018 WL 1634829 (D.N.J. Apr. 5, 2018) (denying summary judgment to collector; repeated levies on bank account of non-debtor father for debt of similarly-named son after being informed of error is sufficient evidence of malice); Pinkstaff v. Hill, 827 S.W.2d 747 (Mo. Ct. App. 1992) (wrongful garnishment was basis for malicious prosecution where garnishment was quashed after real owner of bank account intervened). But cf. Kentucky Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Burton, 922 S.W.2d 385 (Ky. Ct. App. 1996) (reliance on advice of counsel bars malicious prosecution claim based on wrongful garnishment).

386 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 955–956 (9th Cir. 2011) (Mont. law; affirming verdict against collection firm that filed and persisted with time-barred collection suit while knowing or intentionally disregarding facts showing that it was untimely).

387 Plessy v. Hayes Motor Co., 742 So. 2d 934 (La. Ct. App. 1999) (malicious prosecution proved where car dealer, after sale, had dispute with buyer over paperwork and payment and reported car stolen, leading to arrest of buyer and court proceedings); George v. W.W.D. Automobiles, Inc., 937 So. 2d 958 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006) (car dealer accused buyer of unauthorized use of vehicle it had sold her in yo-yo sale, as way of getting car back). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Automobile Fraud § 4.5.2 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

388 Coursen v. JP Morgan Chase & Co., 2012 WL 3055857, at *5 (M.D. Fla. July 25, 2012) ("willful or intentional misuse of process for some wrongful or unlawful object, or ulterior purpose not intended by law"); Larobina v. McDonald, 876 A.2d 522, 528 (Conn. 2005); Riemers v. Hill, 881 N.W.2d 624 (N.D. 2016). See also Houghton v. Foremost Fin. Serv. Corp., 724 F.2d 112 (10th Cir. 1983) (Okla. law; use of legal process for an improper purpose, to accomplish an end not lawfully obtainable, or to compel someone to do some collateral thing he could not legally be compelled to do); Pinewood Homes, Inc. v. Harris, 646 S.E.2d 826, 831 (N.C. Ct. App. 2007) ("the misapplication of civil or criminal process to accomplish some purpose not warranted or commanded by the process"); Restatement (Second) of Torts § 682 (1977) ("[o]ne who uses a legal process, whether criminal or civil, against another primarily to accomplish a purpose for which it is not designed, is subject to liability to the other for harm caused by the abuse of process").

389 Barquis v. Merchants Collection Ass'n, 496 P.2d 817 (Cal. 1972).

390 See, e.g., Vanover v. Cook, 260 F.3d 1182, 1191 (10th Cir. 2001) (Kan. law); Evans v. West, 935 F.2d 922 (7th Cir. 1991) (mere institution of proceeding not abuse of process); Zachary v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3474691, at *6 (E.D. Pa. July 18, 2018); Turner v. Lerner, Sampson & Rothfuss, 776 F. Supp. 2d 498 (E.D. Ohio 2011) (allegation that filing of suit was improper from the start will support malicious prosecution but not abuse of process); Munger v. Deutsche Bank, 2011 WL 2930907 (N.D. Ohio July 18, 2011) (filing of foreclosure by creditor that knew it lacked standing is malicious prosecution, not abuse of process; claim fails here for lack of special damages); Equality, Inc. v. I-Link Communications, 76 F. Supp. 2d 227 (D. Conn. 1999) (filing of suit and actions taken before filing cannot be abuse of process); Kmart v. Asaro, 751 So. 2d 513, 516 (Ala. Civ. App. 1999) (abuse-of-process claim cannot be based on issuance of criminal complaint); Packard v. Cent. Me. Power Co., 477 A.2d 264 (Me. 1984) (unlike malicious prosecution, must show improper conduct after complaint issued; wrongfully reporting theft of electricity to law enforcement officials insufficient); Montemayor v. Ortiz, 208 S.W.3d 627 (Tex. App. 2006) (misrepresentations made to obtain issuance of process will support claim for malicious prosecution but not abuse of process).

391 Gibson v. Regions Fin. Corp., 557 F.3d 842 (8th Cir. 2009) (Ark. law; search warrant is process, but no abuse-of-process claim where defendant did not pervert it to improper use after it was issued); Gen. Refractories Co. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 337 F.3d 297, 304 (3d Cir. 2003) (Pa. law); Orellana v. Macy's Retail Holdings, Inc., 2018 WL 3368716, at *17 (S.D.N.Y. July 10, 2018) (abuse of process claim cannot be based on misdeeds that occurred before plaintiffs were arrested); Kamaha VI, L.L.C. v. HJH, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5177843, at *3 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 12, 2013) (issuance of process for improper motive not sufficient; must show subsequent misuse); Owens v. Chasko, 2011 WL 3163261 (E.D. Cal. July 26, 2011) (allegation that creditor faxed discovery requests to debtor's place of business as way of humiliating him, before complaint had even been served, states claim); Zebrowski v. Wells Fargo Bank, 657 F. Supp. 2d 511 (D.N.J. 2009) (needlessly prolonging baseless litigation not sufficient; must show use of garnishment, attachment, arrest, or other process to compel compliance); Capitol Records, Inc. v. Weed, 2008 WL 1820667 (D. Ariz. Apr. 27, 2008) (claim can be based on filing of documents containing private information for improper purpose of coercing payment, but not on allegation that filing suit was malicious or oppressive); Hampton v. Nustar Mgmt. Fin. Group, 2007 WL 119146 (D. Nev. Jan. 10, 2007) (must allege abusive measures after filing of complaint); DirecTV, Inc. v. Zink, 286 F.

abuse-of-process claims to be based on the initiation of suit for a wrongful purpose, such as to coerce settlement of other matters.[392] A claim of abuse of process can be made out without showing that the underlying suit was terminated in the plaintiff's favor.[393] Conversely, the fact that the underlying suit lacked merit does not mean that the use of process in that case is abuse of process.[394]

Courts vary in their listings of the elements of the tort. One common statement of the elements is:

- The defendant made an illegal, improper, perverted use of the process, a use neither warranted nor authorized by the process;
- The defendant had an ulterior motive or purpose; and
- Damage resulted to the plaintiff from the irregularity.[395]

Damages may include damage to reputation, emotional distress, and the cost of defending against the improperly used process.[396]

Supp. 2d 873 (E.D. Mich. 2003); Givens v. Rent-A-Center, Inc., 720 F. Supp. 160 (S.D. Ala. 1988), aff'd, 885 F.2d 879 (11th Cir. 1989); Cordes v. Outdoor Living Ctr., Inc., 781 S.W.2d 31, 33 (Ark. 1989); Kennedy v. First Nat'l Bank, 551 N.E.2d 1002 (Ill. App. Ct. 1990) (mere institution of a proceeding not abuse of process); Advanced Constr. Co. v. Pilecki, 901 A.2d 189, 197 (Me. 2006) (abuse-of-process claims arise when litigants misuse individual legal procedures after a lawsuit has been filed); Celley v. Stevens, 2004 WL 134000 (Mich. Ct. App. Jan. 27, 2004); Ruggiero v. Kavlich, 2010 WL 3351429 (Ohio Ct. App. Aug. 26, 2010) (wrongfully filing action, here suing on debt allegedly already paid, not abuse of process; must show use of process after issuance for ulterior purpose); Mendoza v. Fleming, 41 S.W.3d 781 (Tex. App. 2001) (reversing denial of wrongful garnishment and abuse-of-process claims for issuing garnishment not for purpose of collecting debt but to freeze debtor's political campaign fund). See also Seguro-Suarez by and through Connette v. Key Risk Ins. Co., 819 S.E.2d 741 (N.C. Ct. App. 2018) (affirming denial of motion to dismiss; plaintiff's allegations met these requirements where, after defendants made false report to police and plaintiff was arrested, they caused criminal proceedings to be continued and plaintiff to be indicted). Cf. McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 956 (9th Cir. 2011) (Mont. law; affirming abuse-of-process claim where law firm both filed and then continued to prosecute time-barred suit on debt). But see Sprint Communications Co. v. Leggett, 307 S.W.3d 109 (Ky. 2010) (misuse of process, in other words, use to coerce result that court could not order, may take place before or after process is issued; here, utility's threats of eminent domain proceeding to take easement, used to coerce landowner into outright sale that could not be compelled through eminent domain).

392 See, e.g., Neil v. Nesbit, 2014 WL 4897315 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 27, 2014) (baseless debt collection litigation, in attempt to force out plaintiff unit owner and her African-American tenant); Nelson v. Am. Power & Light, 2010 WL 3219498 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 12, 2010) (filing eviction action to coerce payment of utility bill may be abuse of process); North Shore Pharmacy Serv., Inc. v. Breslin Assoc. Consulting, L.L.C., 491 F. Supp. 2d 111 (D. Mass. 2007) (filing groundless suit may be abuse of process if purpose was to drive party out of business); Assoc. Fin. Serv. Co. v. Bowman, Heintz, Boscia & Vician, P.C., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7874 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 25, 2001) (allowing abuse-of-process claim to go forward based on filing of complaint with false allegations as means of coercing settlement of other matters); Cais v. Citizens Sav. Bank, 2001 WL 1200870 (Conn. Super. Ct. Sept. 17, 2001) (allowing abuse-of-process claim to go forward based on filing of foreclosure actions as means of inducing property owner to pay money that was not yet owed); Medford Coop. Bank v. Skerry, 2004 WL 1853343 (Mass. App. Ct. Aug. 12, 2004) (upholding abuse-of-process judgment for filing groundless suit with allegations that would harm defendant's reputation, as means of coercing him to pay a debt); Seipel v. Olympic Coast Inv., 188 P.3d 1027 (Mont. 2008) (abuse of process shown if defendant knowingly filed meritless claim as "instrument of coercion"); Singh v. McLaughlin, 297 P.3d 514 (Or. Ct. App. 2013) (reversing directed verdict on claim that defendant committed abuse of process by seeking false criminal charges to gain advantage in fight for control of small business). See also Sara Lee Corp. v. Pro Sports, Inc., 2004 WL 537926 (M.D.N.C. Mar. 12, 2004) (abuse of process may be based on filing of suit, if for a wrongful purpose, but not shown here).

393 Bright View Trading Co. v. Park, 2004 WL 2071976 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 16, 2004) (because abuse of process, unlike malicious prosecution, does not require termination in favor of claimant, abuse-of-process claim may be brought as counterclaim); Minnesota Corn Processors, Inc. v. McCormack, 2000 WL 948659 (E.D. Pa. July 7, 2000); Cordes v. Outdoor Living Ctr., Inc., 781 S.W.2d 31, 34 (Ark. 1989) (claim can be stated even if legal procedure is ultimately successful); Cervantes v. Law Offices of John G. Hanlin, 2004 WL 1638174, at *8 n.4 (Cal. Ct. App. July 23, 2004); Goodwin Agency, Inc. v. Chesser, 206 S.E.2d 568 (Ga. Ct. App. 1974). But cf. Larobina v. McDonald, 876 A.2d 522 (Conn. 2005) (finding abuse-of-process claim premature where eventual outcome of underlying case and the evidence presented in it will be relevant to the claim).

394 Karony v. Dollar Loan Ctr., L.L.C., 2010 WL 5186065 (D. Nev. Dec. 15, 2010) (filing meritless action not abuse of process; must show misuse of process after issuance); North Shore Pharmacy Serv., Inc. v. Breslin Assoc. Consulting, L.L.C., 491 F. Supp. 2d 111 (D. Mass. 2007) (filing groundless suit not abuse of process in and of itself, even if filed for purposes of harassment, but may be abuse of process if purpose was to drive party out of business); Shapiro v. Haenn, 222 F. Supp. 2d 29, 48 (D. Me. 2002) (abuse-of-process claim may be available even if underlying action was not wrongfully instituted); Lewis Truck & Trailer, Inc. v. Jandreau, 526 A.2d 532 (Conn. App. Ct. 1987) (prejudgment attachment used for proper purpose although underlying claim for unauthorized repairs not enforceable); Burton v. Bird, 99 P.3d 150 (Kan. Ct. App. 2004) (where garnishment was used to enforce valid child support order and order was later reversed on appeal, there was no ulterior purpose).

395 Vanover v. Cook, 260 F.3d 1182, 1191 (10th Cir. 2001) (Kan. law). Accord Franklin Collection Serv., Inc. v. Stewart, 863 So. 2d 925, 931 (Miss. 2003). See also Hogue v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 494 F. Supp. 2d 1043, 1053 (S.D. Iowa 2007) (elements are: (1) use of a legal process; (2) in an improper or unauthorized manner; and (3) resulting damages); Tomash v. John Deere Indus. Equip. Co., 399 N.W.2d 387, 390 (Iowa 1987) (elements are: (1) legal process and (2) its use in an improper or unauthorized manner); Millennium Equity Holdings, L.L.C. v. Mahlowitz, 925 N.E.2d 513, 522 (Mass. 2010) (elements are use of legal process to accomplish some ulterior purpose for which it was not designed or intended, or which was not legitimate propose of particular process employed, resulting in damage); McLain v. West Side Bone & Joint Ctr., 656 So. 2d 119, 123 (Miss. 1993) (elements are: (1) illegal use of process; (2) ulterior motive; and (3) resulting damage); Cent. Mo. Elec. Coop. v. Balke, 119 S.W.3d 627 (Mo. Ct. App. 2003) (elements are: (1) illegal, improper, perverted use of process, a use neither warranted nor authorized by the process; (2) for an illegal purpose; and (3) damage); Smith v. A.B. Bonded Locksmith, 757 N.E.2d 1242, 1249 (Ohio Ct. App. 2001) (elements are: (1) a legal proceeding has been set in motion in proper form and with probable cause; (2) the proceeding has been perverted to attempt to accomplish an ulterior purpose for which it was not designed; and (3) direct damage).

396 Millennium Equity Holdings, L.L.C. v. Mahlowitz, 925 N.E.2d 513 (Mass. 2010). See also Seidling v. Stepan, 890 N.W.2d 48 (Wis. Ct. App. 2016) (affirming award of attorney fees as damages for abuse of process; defendant twice used falsified service to obtain default

Some decisions listing the elements of the tort do not explicitly include damages as a requirement.[397] Some decisions require actual arrest or seizure of property as an element.[398] New York courts state the elements as "regularly issued civil or criminal process, an intent to do harm without excuse or justification, and use of the process in a perverted manner to obtain a collateral objective."[399]

Malice is not usually included as an element of an abuse-of-process claim.[400] Some courts require that the defendant's act be willful,[401] but even in jurisdictions that do not explicitly list willfulness as an element it may be subsumed in the requirement of an ulterior purpose. Willfulness is also relevant because some decisions hold that an ulterior motive may be inferred from willful abuse of process.[402]

Negligent acts in pursuit of a legitimate purpose do not amount to abuse of process, because there is no ulterior motive. For example, one court held that seeking and obtaining a court order to repossess an item from the wrong address, under the mistaken belief that it was located there, is not an abuse of process.[403] judgments in improper venues; consumer incurred fees in opening the defaults and contesting the actions).

397 See, e.g., Hampton v. Nustar Mgmt. Fin. Group, 2007 WL 119146 (D. Nev. Jan. 10, 2007) (elements are: (1) an ulterior purpose other than resolving a legal dispute; and (2) willful act in the use of legal process not proper in the regular conduct of the proceeding); Conner v. Howe, 344 F. Supp. 2d 1164 (S.D. Ind. 2004) (elements are: (1) ulterior motive; and (2) use of process that would not be proper in the normal prosecution of the case); Klass v. Frazer, 290 F. Supp. 2d 425 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) (elements of abuse of process are regularly issued civil or criminal process, intent to do harm without excuse or justification, and use of process in a perverted manner to obtain a collateral objective); Shapiro v. Haenn, 222 F. Supp. 2d 29, 47 (D. Me. 2002) (elements are: (1) a bad motive; and (2) use of a legal process for an improper, collateral objective); Minnesota Corn Processors, Inc. v. McCormack, 2000 WL 948659 (E.D. Pa. July 7, 2000) (elements are: (1) an ulterior purpose; and (2) use of the process to accomplish a result not within the scope of the proceeding in which it was issued, whether such result might otherwise be lawfully obtained or not); McGrew v. Heinold Commodities, Inc., 497 N.E.2d 424, 429 (Ill. App. Ct. 1986) (elements are: (1) an ulterior purpose or motive for the use of regular court process; and (2) an act in the use of process not proper in the regular prosecution of a suit); Sprint Communications Co. v. Leggett, 307 S.W.3d 109, 114 (Ky. 2010) (elements are: (1) an ulterior purpose; and (2) a willful act in the use of the process not proper in the regular conduct of the proceeding; nominal damages available if plaintiff cannot show actual damages); Advanced Constr. Co. v. Pilecki, 901 A.2d 189, 197 (Me. 2006) (elements are: (1) use of process in a manner improper in the regular conduct of the proceeding; and (2) an ulterior motive); Celley v. Stevens, 2004 WL 134000, at *4 (Mich. Ct. App. Jan. 27, 2004) (elements are: (1) ulterior purpose; and (2) use of process that is improper in the regular prosecution of the proceeding); Hewes v. Wolfe, 330 S.E.2d 16, 19 (N.C. Ct. App. 1985) (elements are: (1) ulterior motive; and (2) an act in the use of the legal process not proper in the regular prosecution of the proceeding).

398 See, e.g., Edelson, PC v. Bandas Law Firm, PC, 2018 WL 3496085 (N.D. Ill. July 20, 2018) (Illinois claim for abuse of civil process requires showing of arrest or property seizure); Neil v. Nesbit, 2014 WL 4897315 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 27, 2014) (must suffer arrest or seizure of property; time and expense of contesting garnishment not special injury, where garnishment was quashed before any funds were seized); Metro Media Entertainment, L.L.C. v. Steinruck, 912 F. Supp. 2d 344 (D. Md. 2012) (abuse-of-civil-process claim must allege arrest or seizure of property); Krol v. Halloran and Sage, L.L.P., 2013 WL 811902 (Conn. Super. Ct. Jan. 24, 2013) (abuse-of-process claim must show "special injury"); Parks v. Neuf, 578 N.E.2d 282 (Ill. App. Ct. 1991).

399 Varela v. Investors Ins. Holding Corp., 586 N.Y.S.2d 272, 274 (App. Div. 1992), aff'd on other grounds, 615 N.E.2d 218 (N.Y. 1993). See also Tsafatinos v. Ward, 676 N.Y.S.2d 748 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1998) (elements are initiation of regularly issued civil process compelling the performance or forbearance of some prescribed act; purpose to do harm without economic or social excuse or justification; injury to person or property; and perversion of the process to seek some collateral advantage outside the legitimate ends of the process), aff'd mem., 691 N.Y.S.2d 820 (N.Y. App. Term 1999).

400 Nevada Credit Rating Bureau v. Williams, 503 P.2d 9 (Nev. 1972). But see Beem v. Ferguson, 713 Fed. Appx. 974 (11th Cir. 2018) (Florida abuse of process claim requires showing of willful and malicious conduct); Dream Dealers Music v. Parker, 924 F. Supp. 1146, 1154 (S.D. Ala. 1996) (elements are malice, an ulterior purpose, and the wrongful use of process); Shoney's Inc. v. Barnett, 773 So. 2d 1015, 1024 (Ala. Civ. App. 1999). But cf. Pinewood Homes, Inc. v. Harris, 646 S.E.2d 826 (N.C. Ct. App. 2007) (elements are: (1) defendant had an ulterior motive to achieve a collateral purpose not within the normal scope of the process used; and (2) defendant committed some act that is a malicious misuse or misapplication of that process after issuance, to accomplish some purpose not warranted or commanded by the writ).

401 Beem v. Ferguson, 713 Fed. Appx. 974 (11th Cir. 2018) (Florida abuse of process claim requires showing of willful and malicious conduct); Grant v. Farm Credit Bank, 841 F. Supp. 186, 190 (W.D. La. 1992) (elements are: (1) an ulterior purpose; and (2) a willful act in the use of the process not proper in the regular conduct of the proceedings), aff'd, 8 F.3d 295 (5th Cir. 1993); Cordes v. Outdoor Living Ctr., Inc., 781 S.W.2d 31, 34 (Ark. 1989) (elements are: (1) a legal procedure set in motion in proper form, even with probable cause, and even with ultimate success; but (2) perverted to accomplish an ulterior purpose for which it was not designed; and (3) a willful act in the use of the process not proper in the regular course of the proceeding); Watson v. Auto Advisors, Inc., 822 N.E.2d 1017 (Ind. Ct. App. 2005) (elements are: (1) ulterior purpose; and (2) willful act in the use of process not proper in the regular conduct of the proceeding); Nevada Credit Rating Bureau v. Williams, 503 P.2d 9 (Nev. 1972) (elements are: (1) an ulterior purpose; and (2) a willful act in the use of the process not proper in the regular conduct of the proceeding). See also Markowitz v. Herbert, 2005 WL 950172 (Cal. Ct. App. Apr. 26, 2005); Drum v. Bleau, Fox & Assoc., 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602, 608 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003); Ratcliff v. Boydell, 674 So. 2d 272, 280 (La. Ct. App. 1996).

402 Shapiro v. Haenn, 222 F. Supp. 2d 29, 48 (D. Me. 2002) (wrongful motive may be inferred from improper act); Drum v. Bleau, Fox & Assoc., 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602, 609 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003); Kappell v. Bartlett, 246 Cal. Rptr. 815 (Cal. Ct. App. 1988) (ulterior motive can be inferred from knowing execution of false affidavit of service). See also Ladd v. Polidoro, 675 N.E.2d 382, 384 (Mass. 1997) (may be inferred, but proof of groundlessness of claim is insufficient); Medford Coop. Bank v. Skerry, 2004 WL 1853343 (Mass. App. Ct. Aug. 12, 2004) (evidence here sufficient to allow inference of improper purpose); Hewes v. Wolfe, 330 S.E.2d 16, 19 (N.C. Ct. App. 1985) (ulterior motive can be shown by willful act to use the prior proceeding to gain advantage in some collateral matter).

403 Smith v. A.B. Bonded Locksmith, 757 N.E.2d 1242 (Ohio Ct. App. 2001). See also Wal-Mart Stores v. Binns, 15 S.W.3d 320 (Ark. 2000) (no abuse of process where no misuse or ulterior motive; "negligent or incompetent" management brought larceny charges against employee as a result of a computer error); Burks v. Am. Acceptance Co., 863 N.E.2d 924 (Ind. Ct. App. Mar. 27, 2007) (debt buyer, apparently acting

15.6.3.2 "Process" Defined

Courts construe the term "process" broadly to include the entire range of procedures incident to the litigation process,[404] including discovery requests,[405] garnishment,[406] motions,[407] asserting bogus claims of privilege to obstruct discovery,[408] and making misrepresentations to opposing counsel or to the court.[409] Some courts allow an abuse-of-process claim to be based on actions defending a suit.[410]

Courts often hold that process does not include matters that do not involve judicial procedures.[411] For example, a number of decisions hold that non-judicial foreclosure is not process, because there is no action pursuant to court authority.[412] Nor does process include steps that do not result in suit being filed, such as sending dunning letters or complaining to police if they do not file charges.[413] Actions in on incorrect information from seller, sued wrong consumer; no abuse of process because no ulterior purpose); Thomas v. Marion County, 652 N.W.2d 183 (Iowa 2002) (no abuse of process where damage resulted not from store's accurate report of bad check, but from county's mistaken arrest of check-writer's father who had nearly identical name); Beecy v. Pucciarelli, 441 N.E.2d 1035 (Mass. 1982) (collection suit filed negligently against wrong person was not filed for an improper purpose and not an abuse of process).

404 Gen. Refractories Co. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 337 F.3d 297, 310–311 (3d Cir. 2003) (Pa. law); Capitol Records, Inc. v. Weed, 2008 WL 1820667 (D. Ariz. Apr. 27, 2008) (process is "the entire range of procedures incident to the litigation process"); North Star Capital Acquisitions, L.L.C. v. Krig, 2008 WL 346021 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 7, 2008) (abuse-of-process claim can be based on deceptive letter that was enclosed with summons but was not necessary to serve purpose of notifying defendant she was being sued); Barquis v. Merchants Collection Ass'n, 496 P.2d 817 (Cal. 1972). But see Friello v. Bank of New York, 2012 WL 4892856 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 15, 2012) ("process" must be issued by court, under its official seal; pleadings, created and filed by the litigants, are not "process"); Zebrowski v. Wells Fargo Bank, 657 F. Supp. 2d 511 (D.N.J. 2009) (process is narrowly defined; not all "products of litigation," only garnishment, attachment, arrest, or similar acts to compel defendant's compliance); Equality, Inc. v. I-Link Communications, 76 F. Supp. 2d 227, 230 (D. Conn. 1999) (arguing against venue motion is not process); Tsafatinos v. Ward, 676 N.Y.S.2d 748 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1998) (seeking continuance not process because it does not compel the performance of or forbearance from some act; settlement attempts, even if coercive or overbearing, do not involve process), aff'd mem., 691 N.Y.S.2d 820 (N.Y. App. Div. 1999). But cf. Shirokov v. Dunlop, Grubb & Weaver, P.L.L.C., 2012 WL 1065578, at *32–33 (D. Mass. Mar. 27, 2012) (Massachusetts definition limits process to writs of attachment, process used to initiate a civil action, or process related to bringing of criminal charges).

405 Owens v. Chasko, 2011 WL 3163261, at *5 (E.D. Cal. July 26, 2011).

406 Hogue v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 494 F. Supp. 2d 1043, 1053 (S.D. Iowa 2007). See also Hoffman v. Connecticut, 2009 WL 3055137 (D. Me. Aug. 7, 2009) (abuse of process sufficiently alleged: fraudulent transfer claim and real estate attachment against property of non-debtor spouse to coerce settlement by debtor spouse), modified on other grounds and adopted by 671 F. Supp. 2d 166 (D. Me. 2009); Advanced Constr. Co. v. Pilecki, 901 A.2d 189 (Me. 2006) (affirming abuse-of-process judgment based on filing of unjustified mechanic's lien).

407 Larobina v. McDonald, 876 A.2d 522, 530–531 (Conn. 2005) (includes request to court for extension of time, removing action to federal court, and moving for a settlement conference but failing to send a representative with settlement authority).

408 Gen. Refractories Co. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 337 F.3d 297, 310–311 (3d Cir. 2003) (Pa. law).

409 Id. See also Keylard v. Mueller Anderson, P.C., 2013 WL 4501446 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 22, 2013) (denying FDCPA claim, noting that state law claim for abuse of process is proper remedy if law firm used knowingly false affidavits of service to obtain body attachment).

410 See, e.g., Ratcliff v. Boydell, 674 So. 2d 272 (La. Ct. App. 1996). See generally § 15.6.1, supra (whether malicious prosecution claim can be based on assertion of a defense).

411 See, e.g., Yazzie v. Gov't Employees Ins. Co., 2018 WL 1384469 (D.N.M. Mar. 16, 2018) (threat of litigation as coercive negotiation tactic may be malicious abuse of process (New Mexico's combined tort), but only if suit is actually filed; bad faith refusal to settle is not sufficient); In re Ali, 2015 WL 4611343, at *60 (W.D. Tex. July 23, 2015) (endorsing and depositing checks does not involve process); In re Carpenter, 2013 WL 1953275 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. May 7, 2013) (statutorily required pre-foreclosure notice not process to support abuse-of-process claim); Fappani v. Bratton, 407 P.3d 78 (Ariz. Ct. App. 2017) (complaining to law enforcement and vigorously urging prosecution are not process); Larobina v. McDonald, 876 A.2d 522, 531 (Conn. 2005) (process does not include representation of party who has conflict of interest with another party, failing to make written settlement proposal, demanding payment of debt in full, or denying accuracy of facts alleged by opposing side); Varela v. Investors Ins. Holding Corp., 586 N.Y.S.2d 272, 274 (N.Y. App. Div. 1992), aff'd, 615 N.E.2d 218 (N.Y. 1993) (demanding payment before invalid judgment would be marked satisfied not process); Montpelier v. Moncier, 2017 WL 2378301 (Tenn. Ct. App. June 1, 2017) (even where improper purpose was clearly shown, serving Rule 11 sanctions motions on opposing counsel, which must be done 21 days before filing, was not process, because there was no use of court's authority before motions are filed).

412 Olson v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust, 2013 WL 3366280 (D. Ariz. July 5, 2013); Baeza v. Bank of Am., 2012 WL 4062809 (D. Nev. Sept. 14, 2012) (non-judicial foreclosure not process); Smith v. Wachovia, 2009 WL 1948829 (N.D. Cal. July 6, 2009). See also Lopez v. Countrywide Mortg., 2008 WL 4682040 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 20, 2008) (attempting to rescind non-judicial foreclosure sale after discovering contamination of property not abuse of process; rescission deed was not process and was not used to coerce debtor to do anything).

413 8600 Landis, L.L.C. v. City of Sea Isle City, 2018 WL 1509088 (D.N.J. Mar. 27, 2018) (misuse of the process of an administrative agency, here a municipal planning board and zoning officer, is not sufficient; must show process issued by a court); Robinson v. Phelan, Hallinan & Schmieg, L.L.P., 2015 WL 1400569 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 25, 2015) (letters demanding sums not owed were not abuse of process, but carrying on foreclosure with actual knowledge that it was unauthorized would support a claim); Shirokov v. Dunlop, Grubb & Weaver, P.L.L.C., 2012 WL 1065578, at *32–33 (D. Mass. Mar. 27, 2012) (demand letter not process even though it directed recipient to website where copy of a complaint was posted); Glover v. Bally Total Fitness Corp., 2007 WL 465578 (M.D. Pa. Feb. 9, 2007) (consumer persistently dunned, but not sued, for debt not owed; no abuse of process because no process issued); Liles v. Am. Corrective Counseling Serv., Inc., 131 F. Supp. 2d 1114 (S.D. Iowa 2001) (no abuse of process where no process has issued, even though collector sent out "official notices" stating that a criminal complaint had been received, when county attorney had not yet reviewed case for possible prosecution); Preskitt v. Lyons, 865 So. 2d 424 (Ala. 2003) (letter threatening to record a judgment not legal process); Fappani v. Bratton, 407 P.3d 78 (Ariz. Ct. App. 2017) (reports to sheriff insufficient, even if they led to filing of noise complaints); Carney v. Rotkin, Schmerin & McIntyre, 254 Cal. Rptr. 478 (Cal. Ct. App. 1988) (no abuse of process because no process invoked where attorney falsely represented in letter that court had issued a bench warrant); Land Baron Investments v. Bonnie Springs Family L.P., 356 P.3d 511 (Nev. 2015) (claim cannot be based on complaint to administrative

the context of an administrative agency proceeding may be insufficient.[414]

15.6.3.3 Ulterior Purpose

An abuse-of-process claim requires a showing that process was used primarily to accomplish a purpose for which it was not designed.[415] Some incidental motive or spite is insufficient.[416] Neither bad intentions alone nor lack of probable cause will create liability for abuse of process if the other elements are not met.[417] Nonetheless, the fact that a party has at least one valid purpose does not necessarily mean that that purpose is primary; if the party also has an improper purpose, that purpose may be shown to be primary.[418]

Some courts hold that an abuse-of-process claim lies only if the defendant used the process primarily for a purpose unrelated to the underlying litigation.[419] Cases taking this view agency, here citizen's complaint filed with county commissioners); Warner Bros. Entertainment, Inc. v. Jones, 538 S.W.3d 781 (Tex. App. 2017) (incident report to police insufficient if it does not result in arrest or issuance of warrant). But cf. Fletcher v. Wagner, 221 F. Supp. 2d 153 (D. Mass. 2002) (unsuccessfully applying for criminal complaint will not support malicious prosecution claim, but abuse-of-process claim available if plaintiff can show ulterior, improper purpose for the application).

414 Hawkeye Land Co. v. ITC Midwest, L.L.C., 125 F. Supp. 3d 885 (N.D. Iowa 2015) (abuse-of-process claim will not lie for abuse of administrative procedures or rules; must show misuse of the process of a court); Land Baron Investments v. Bonnie Springs Family L.P., 356 P.3d 511 (Nev. 2015) (claim cannot be based on complaint to administrative agency, here citizen's complaint filed with county commissioners); O'Hea v. Georgia Reg'l Health & Rehabilitation Ctr., 276 So. 3d 1266 (Miss. Ct. App. 2018) (making a report, even a false and malicious one, to an administrative agency, here the medical licensing board, is not abuse of process).

415 Harper v. Prof'l Probation Services, Inc., 2018 WL 5976560 (N.D. Ala. Nov. 14, 2018) (probationers stated claim against private probation service funded by fees; profit motive caused service to charge for unneeded services and increase probation period and fine); Wilson v. Brown Chrysler Dodge Jeep Ram, L.L.C., 2018 WL 700828 (W.D. La. Feb. 1, 2018) (procuring a criminal complaint in order to coerce the return of property involved in a civil dispute is an ulterior motive sufficient to support abuse of process claim); Hefley v. J. & M. Securities, L.L.C., 2016 WL 2643477 (E.D. Mo. May 10, 2016) (garnishment continued in knowing violation of automatic stay; intention to prevent debtor from making chapter 13 payments was improper purpose); Neil v. Nesbit, 2014 WL 4897315 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 27, 2014) (baseless debt collection litigation, in attempt to force out plaintiff unit owner and her African-American tenant); Hoffman v. Connecticut, 2009 WL 3055137 (D. Me. Aug. 7, 2009) (abuse of process sufficiently alleged: fraudulent transfer claim and real estate attachment against property of non-debtor spouse to coerce settlement by debtor spouse), modified on other grounds and adopted by 671 F. Supp. 2d 166 (D. Me. 2009); Capitol Records, Inc. v. Weed, 2008 WL 1820667 (D. Ariz. Apr. 27, 2008) (allegation that documents containing arguably private information filed with court to coerce payment of unreasonable sums sufficient to state a claim); Myles v. Screentech, Inc., 98 So. 3d 563 (Ala. Civ. App. 2012) (initiating unfounded criminal prosecution to extort payment of a debt would be abuse of process, but not shown here where inadequate, but good-faith, investigation led creditor to believe it was victim of fraud); Rogan v. Rungee, 140 A.3d 979 (Conn. Ct. App. 2016) (ulterior purpose shown; current defendant stated to lawyer that meritless and unsuccessful action he filed against neighbor had "worked" because it kept her "at bay" for four years, showing that purpose was to intimidate her from further complaints about his harassing behavior); Cadle Co. v. D'Addario, 26 A.3d 682 (Conn. App. Ct. 2011) (executors failed to show that primary purpose of creditor's persistent litigation against estate and executors was to coerce non-obligated family members to pay debt). See also Suffield Dev. Assoc. v. Nat'l Loan Investors, L.P., 802 A.2d 44, 48 (Conn. 2002); Millennium Equity Holdings, L.L.C. v. Mablowitz, 925 N.E.2d 513 (Mass. 2010) (affirming abuse-of-process judgment against litigant who filed suit against opposing party's attorney in hopes of disqualifying him from further work on the case); Seguro-Suarez by and through Connette v. Key Risk Ins. Co., 819 S.E.2d 741 (N.C. Ct. App. 2018) (affirming refusal to dismiss claim that defendant fabricated evidence to obtain criminal complaint, in effort to coerce worker to pay back sums awarded in workers' compensation case); Rodenberg Law Firm v. Sira, 931 N.W.2d 687 (N.D. 2019) (must show something "akin to extortion;" not shown here; unsuccessful FDCPA action was initiated for purpose of pursuing FDCPA claim); Riemers v. Hill, 881 N.W.2d 624 (N.D. 2016) (fact issue whether landlord's actions for rent and property damage were retaliation for tenant's complaints that led to Health Department condemnation of property).

416 Suffield Dev. Assoc. v. Nat'l Loan Investors, L.P., 802 A.2d 44, 48 (Conn. 2002); Gore v. Taylor, 792 P.2d 432 (Okla. Civ. App. 1990) (filing a claim for a proper purpose is not abuse of process even though an incidental effect is to pressure the defendant to pay an unrelated debt).

417 Vanover v. Cook, 260 F.3d 1182, 1191 (10th Cir. 2001) (Kan. law); Kamaha VI, L.L.C. v. HJH, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5177843, at *3 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 12, 2013) (spiteful motive not sufficient if process used for intended purpose); Henze v. City of Lee's Summit, 2010 WL 2545841, at *4 (W.D. Mo. June 24, 2010) (bad motive insufficient as long as process used for its intended purpose); Shapiro v. Haenn, 222 F. Supp. 2d 29, 48 (D. Me. 2002) (bad motive alone is insufficient); In re Prince, 414 B.R. 285 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 2009) (abuse-of-process claim fails if process used for intended purpose, even if evil motive present), rev'd in part on other grounds, 2010 WL 841273 (M.D. Tenn. Mar. 4, 2010); Cadle Co. v. D'Addario, 2007 WL 1532772 (Conn. Super. Ct. May 14, 2007) (no abuse of process if process used for its intended purpose, even if spite or ulterior purpose also present; not shown here where debt buyer had standing to sue to collect); Celley v. Stevens, 2004 WL 134000, at *4 (Mich. Ct. App. Jan. 27, 2004) (merely harboring bad motives without manifesting them by misusing process is insufficient). See also Hall v. Lilly, 666 So. 2d 1328 (La. Ct. App. 1996) (suing to collect a valid debt not improper, regardless of other motives; here, in-laws filed suit to foreclose on mortgage after husband separated from their daughter); Ladd v. Polidoro, 675 N.E.2d 382 (Mass. 1997) (bringing groundless action and attaching property not sufficient, must show ulterior purpose).

418 Young v. Allstate Ins. Co., 198 P.3d 666 (Haw. 2008) (use of process for its intended purpose does not necessarily mean it was used primarily for that purpose; ulterior purpose sufficiently alleged where insurer had company-wide policy of hardball litigation tactics even in meritless cases to force vulnerable accident victims to settle for much less than their actual damages).

419 Jordan v. Tucker, Alba & Assoc., 2017 WL 2223918 (E.D.N.Y. May 19, 2017) (filing mechanic's lien for grossly excessive amount not abuse of process where purpose was to enforce claim for work performed on property); Kenney v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2015 WL 1957880 (D. Kan. Apr. 29, 2015) (must show use of process for purpose that could not be achieved as end result of judicial proceeding; plaintiffs here failed to show that "sloppy" handling of motion to intervene in foreclosure was attempt to coerce them to pay discharged personal obligation); Olson v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust, 2013 WL 3366280 (D. Ariz. July 5, 2013) (providing false information to court, or presenting an invalid claim, not abuse of process); Metro Media Entertainment L.L.C. v. Steinruck, 912 F. Supp. 2d 344 (D. Md. 2012) ("settlement offer," even if pornographic nature of film consumer was accused of downloading hold, for example, that bringing suit on a debt for the purpose of recovering the money sought by the suit is not abuse of process, even if the debt is not owed, because recovering money is not a collateral purpose.[420] Similarly, courts have held that the use of a postjudgment collection procedure such as garnishment is not abuse of process, even if it seeks an excessive amount or is directed at the wrong person, as long as it is used for its proper purpose of collecting a judgment.[421] This circular gave powerful leverage, was used for proper purpose); Sharpe v. PHH Mortg. Co., 2012 WL 1809468 (S.D. Ohio May 17, 2012) (must show an attempt to achieve goals outside the lawsuit, or a result that court is powerless to order); Davis v. Nebraska Furniture Mart, Inc., 2012 WL 1252633 (D. Kan. Apr. 13, 2012) (repeatedly summoning unemployed debtor for debtor's examination was use of process for intended purpose; creditor could reasonably anticipate that debtor's situation would change), aff'd 567 Fed. Appx. 640 (10th Cir. 2014); Gibbons v. Bank of Am. Corp., 2012 WL 94569 (D. Md. Jan. 11, 2012) (temporary restraining order freezing bank accounts was used for intended purpose where bank was seeking to recover from wife funds stolen by husband); Riess v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2011 WL 5506290 (D. Minn. Nov. 10, 2011) (misuse of garnishment procedure—here obtaining garnishment one week after sending of required notice, although Minnesota law required twenty-five days—violated FDCPA but was not abuse of process; process here was being used for its intended purpose); Odom v. Southeast Supply Header, L.L.C., 2010 WL 1780367 (S.D. Ala. Apr. 29, 2010) (must show use of process to seek "unlawful or improperly obtainable" result; no claim against parties who filed tort suit to seek money damages, even if they had malevolent intentions), aff'd, 418 Fed. Appx. 871 (11th Cir. 2011); Rodriguez v. Due Process of Mich., Inc., 2008 WL 4449651 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 30, 2008) (ulterior motive not sufficiently alleged; civil process servers, serving valid execution, misrepresented themselves as law enforcement, threatened arrest, and tried to seize property not belonging to debtor); Bright View Trading Co. v. Park, 2004 WL 2071976 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 16, 2004) (collateral purpose sufficiently alleged where creditor made misstatements in application for attachment in order to gain control over a non-defendant's inventory and cause financial hardship and personal turmoil to defendants); DirecTV, Inc. v. Zink, 286 F. Supp. 2d 873, 876 (E.D. Mich. 2003) (no abuse of process to file suit to coerce and extort payment, as these objectives are "similar to those normally sought in lawsuits"); Equality, Inc. v. I-Link Communications, 76 F. Supp. 2d 227, 230 (D. Conn. 1999) (must have purpose other than obtaining judgment in underlying suit); Denardo v. Michalski, 811 P.2d 315 (Alaska 1991) (imprisonment of debtor for refusing to answer questions at debtor's examination not abuse of process where examination was used for its intended purpose of collecting debt); Markowitz v. Herbert, 2005 WL 950172, at *3 (Cal. Ct. App. Apr. 26, 2005) (adding debtor's daughter as defendant for purpose of pressuring debtor to settle a case is not abuse of process, as these steps are "within the normal use of process"); Pinewood Homes, Inc. v. Harris, 646 S.E.2d 826 (N.C. Ct. App. 2007) (listing collateral purpose as element).

420 Harvey v. Caesar's Entertainment Operating Co., 790 Fed. Appx. 582 (5th Cir. 2019) (Miss. Law; filing criminal worthless check charges because of desire to collect debt is not ulterior purpose); Cox v. Richland Holdings, Inc., 2018 WL 456877 (D. Nev. Jan. 16, 2018) (filing debt collection action, with demand for unauthorized fee, is not abuse of process); Smith v. Cavalry SPV I, 2017 WL 3981144 (W.D. Ark. Sept. 11, 2017) (attempt to collect time-barred debt not improper purpose); Hinten v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5739035 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 22, 2013) (not abuse of process if, despite use of false or misleading tactics, defendant intended to recover on the cause of action stated); Gamble v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 979202 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 7, 2013) (claim alleging filing of baseless collection action fails); Chapman v. Chase Manhattan Mortg. Co., 2007 WL 2815246 (N.D. Okla. Sept. 24, 2007) (process was used for intended purpose when, at time foreclosure filed, mortgage was one payment behind because of returned check); Guillory v. WFS Fin., 2007 WL 879017 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 21, 2007) (suit on forged contract not abuse of process because suit was used for its intended purpose); Ursery v. Option One Mortg. Co., 2007 WL 2192657 (Mich. Ct. App. July 31, 2007) (even if foreclosure attempt improper, not abuse of process unless it was used for something foreclosure is not designed to accomplish); Ruggiero v. Kavlich, 2010 WL 3351429 (Ohio Ct. App. Aug. 26, 2010) (suing to collect debt allegedly not owed; failed to allege ulterior purpose); McGinnity v. Kirk, 362 P.3d 186 (Okla. 2015) (eviction proceedings brought against delinquent contract for deed purchaser not abuse of process; process used for intended purpose even though Oklahoma law requires foreclosure, not eviction, in contract-for-deed case). See also Conner v. Howe, 344 F. Supp. 2d 1164 (S.D. Ind. 2004) (collection suit was not for improper purpose even though payday loan was void); Sara Lee Corp. v. Pro Sports, Inc., 2004 WL 537926 (M.D.N.C. Mar. 12, 2004) (filing suit that asserts claim of greater rights than plaintiff actually has is not abuse of process because plaintiff is not using action for any purpose outside the legitimate scope of relief obtainable in such actions); Ross v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 867 S.W.2d 546, 554 (Mo. Ct. App. 1993) (obtaining a replevin order is not abuse of process where creditor had no purpose other than gaining possession of the property); Tsafatinos v. Ward, 676 N.Y.S.2d 748 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1998) (filing suit to prevent landlord from locking out tenant not abuse of process, as it was used for its intended purpose of restoring possession of premises to tenant), aff'd mem., 691 N.Y.S.2d 820 (N.Y. App. Term 1999). Cf. Nutter v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 500 F. Supp. 2d 1219 (D. Minn. 2007) (if reasonable creditor could have believed debt was owed, attempt to collect was not abuse of process).

421 Vanover v. Cook, 260 F.3d 1182 (10th Cir. 2001) (Kan. law; excessive garnishment is not abuse of process as long as it is used for purpose of collecting a judgment); Gittens v. Thieblot Ryan, P.A., 2013 WL 2103668 (D. Md. May 14, 2013) (garnishment action against non-debtor with name similar to judgment debtor's was brought for proper purpose of collecting a judgment); Ross v. Vakulskas Law Firm, P.C., 2012 WL 4092419 (N.D. Iowa Sept. 17, 2012) (no abuse of process where, after small claims debtor failed to appear for debtor's examination, she was arrested and bond set at the amount of the debt; examination was used for its intended purpose and bond was set by judge, not creditor's attorney); Bray v. Cadle Co., 2010 WL 4053794 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 14, 2010) (garnishment not abuse of process, even though account known to contain exempt funds, because used for intended purpose); Reno v. Supportkids, Inc., 2004 WL 828150 (D. Minn. Apr. 13, 2004) (no abuse of process in filing a lien in excessive amount and without complying with state law, because debt collection is proper purpose); Jordan v. Berman, 758 F. Supp. 269, 280–281 (E.D. Pa. 1991) (judgment debtors failed to state claim that filing a confession of judgment against them constituted abuse of process where creditors carried out process to its authorized conclusion), aff'd in part, vacated in part on other grounds, 20 F.3d 1250 (3d Cir. 1994); Bernhard-Thomas Bldg. Co. v. Dunican, 2006 WL 301908 (Conn. Super. Ct. Jan. 18, 2006) (baseless prejudgment attachment not abuse of process where its primary purpose was to secure prejudgment remedy); McGrew v. Heinold Commodities, Inc., 497 N.E.2d 424, 429–430 (Ill. App. Ct. 1986) (no abuse of process where garnishment was used for its proper purpose of collecting money, even if underlying debt was invalid); Ladd v. Polidoro, 675 N.E.2d 382 (Mass. 1997) (knowingly maintaining a meritless action and obtaining attachment insufficient; attachment must have been obtained in order to further a purpose it was not designed to accomplish). Cf. In re Ali, 2015 WL 4611343, at *61–62 (W.D. Tex. July 23, 2015) (sending garnishment notice to wide circle of recipients, including debtor's vendors and trade association, not abuse or process, in absence of showing that creditor knew that these entities did not hold any assets of debtor).

reasoning can mean that misuse of collection remedies is not abuse of process as long as they are employed for the purpose of collection. Courts using this analysis even hold that it is not abuse of process to present false affidavits or perjured testimony,[422] file suit in a distant forum,[423] or misuse other judicial procedures,[424] as long as the litigation is merely seeking judgment in the underlying suit.

Other courts, however, reject this artificial distinction. The Third Circuit, applying Pennsylvania law, held that such a restriction would render the tort "inapplicable to those cases where a legal process is pursued in a perverted manner in order to directly harm an adversary."[425] Courts taking this approach hold that misuse of process as a tactical weapon to coerce a desired result in the underlying litigation can be abuse of process.[426] These courts also allow an abuse-of-process claim where a creditor uses a collection remedy such as garnishment for the purpose for which it was designed—collection of money—but without any right to the amount sought or the asset attached.[427] For example, the Ninth Circuit, applying Montana law, held that a litigant commits abuse of process if it knows it has no valid legal 422 Bugg v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3936454 (W.D. Ark. Aug. 19, 2019) (sewer service and false affidavits); Sneed v. Winston Honore Holdings, L.L.C., 2017 WL 467686 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 3, 2017) (falsified service used to obtain default judgment); Bohannon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 893362 (E.D. Va. Mar. 2, 2015) (false affidavit seeking default judgment not abuse of process where proceedings were being used for intended purpose of debt collection); Joy v. MERSCORP, Inc., 935 F. Supp. 2d 848 (E.D.N.C. 2013) (false statements in foreclosure action not abuse of process, where foreclosure was used for intended purpose); Hempel-DuBois v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2011 WL 3627294 (D.N.H. Aug. 17, 2011) (obtaining attachment by use of false statements not abuse of process where attachment not used for ulterior purpose; i.e., other than securing property in case judgment was obtained); Shoney's Inc. v. Barnett, 773 So. 2d 1015, 1025 (Ala. Civ. App. 1999) (giving perjured testimony in criminal case not abuse of process because purpose was not to achieve some result other than conviction); Krol v. Halloran and Sage, L.L.P., 2013 WL 811902 (Conn. Super. Ct. Jan. 24, 2013) (claim fails because motion for summary judgment used for intended purpose even if it contained knowing falsehoods).

423 Spartalian v. Citibank, 2012 WL 3314164 (D. Or. Aug. 10, 2012) (filing collection action in distant and inappropriate forum not abuse of process where objective was to collect debt; must show intent to coerce some result other than debt collection).

424 Todro v. Reimer, Arnovitz, Chernek & Jeffrey Co., 704 Fed. Appx. 440 (6th Cir. 2017) (at time when court handling foreclosure had stayed eviction, foreclosure purchaser brought eviction action in municipal court; misuse not shown where purpose of eviction action is to cause occupant to leave home); Watson v. Auto Advisors, Inc., 822 N.E.2d 1017 (Ind. Ct. App. 2005) (misuse of assignment procedure to circumvent requirement of attorney to obtain small claims judgment not abuse of process because process was used to obtain the result—a money judgment—it was designed to accomplish).

425 Gen. Refractories Co. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 337 F.3d 297, 306 (3d Cir. 2003) (Pa. law).

426 See, e.g., Gen. Refractories Co. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 337 F.3d 297, 308 (3d Cir. 2003) (Pa. law; using process to harass, drain the opponent's resources, delay payment, and delay the litigation may be abuse of process, but allegations here are too vague); Spaulding v. Tri-State Adjustments, Inc. 2019 WL 3986026 (W.D. Wis. Aug. 23, 2019) (allowing collector to file abuse of process counterclaim against consumers; if consumers "induced" collector to violate FDCPA, not use of statute for intended purpose); Bevan v. Butler and Assoc., 2017 WL 6557418 (D. Kan. Dec. 22, 2017) (improper purpose sufficiently alleged: causing service to be made at address known to be wrong, in order to obtain default judgment; proper purpose of summons it to notify party that lawsuit has been filed); Gatheright v. Clark, 2016 WL 237153 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 20, 2016) (filing of knowingly false bad check affidavit shortly after debtor filed bankruptcy sufficient to support claim of improper purpose); Osinubepi-Alao v. Plainview Fin. Serv., Ltd., 44 F. Supp. 3d 84 (D.D.C. 2014); Mueller v. Barton, 2014 WL 4546061 (E.D. Mo. Sept. 12, 2014) (rejecting the argument that bringing a collection action to collect a debt can never be abuse of process; debtor stated claim with allegations of deception as to ownership of debt and terms of payment agreement, and attempted to collect amounts arguably not owed); Samuels v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 921 F. Supp. 2d 1321 (S.D. Ala. 2013) (ulterior purpose of coercing settlement sufficiently alleged where large volume debt buyer received minimal information from sellers, made no effort to obtain more, and was unable to produce any evidence at trial). See also Bethea v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2011 WL 2650580 (D. Kan. July 6, 2011) (allegation that creditor kept foreclosure action open and filed notice of sale to provide increased leverage over consumers who were making timely payments on forbearance agreement states claim). See also Drum v. Bleau, Fox & Assoc., 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003) (ulterior purpose may be either to achieve a result "totally extraneous to" or "not within [the] legitimate scope" of the process; issuing execution contrary to stay, in hopes of depleting opponent's financial resources so that he could not appeal underlying judgment, may be abuse of process).

427 See, e.g., Shaw v. Law Offices of Hayt, Hayt, & Landau, 2018 WL 1634829 (D.N.J. Apr. 5, 2018) (denying summary judgment to collector; repeated garnishments of non-debtor father's account for debt of similarly-named son after being informed of its error showed willful blindness in effort to "get paid at any cost"); Whitehead v. Ocwen Fin. Corp., 2017 WL 489418 (N.D. Okla. Feb. 6, 2017) (improper purpose sufficiently alleged: effort to collect debt that had been discharged in bankruptcy; lender foreclosed when consumers filed bankruptcy and declined to reaffirm, then, after discharge, vacated foreclosure and sought to collect); Robinson v. Phelan, Hallinan & Schmieg, L.L.P., 2015 WL 1400569 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 25, 2015) (abuse of process shown if defendants carried on with foreclosure, with actual knowledge it was unauthorized, in order to extort sums not owed); Garner v. Barton, 2015 WL 1120085 (E.D. Mo. Mar. 12, 2015) (manipulating garnishment process to cause seizure of more than was owed); Hogue v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 494 F. Supp. 2d 1043, 1053 (S.D. Iowa 2007) (knowingly using garnishment to obtain exempt funds may be abuse of process); Aikens v. CIT Group/Sales Fin., Inc., 2007 WL 108301 (S.D. Miss. Jan. 9, 2007) (use of replevin action to repossess a manufactured home when creditor did not in fact have a security interest in it states abuse-of-process claim); Cervantes v. Law Offices of John G. Hanlin, 2004 WL 1638174, at *8 n.4 (Cal. Ct. App. July 23, 2004) (filing suit in inconvenient and inappropriate venue is abuse of process where ulterior motive is to secure a default judgment and obtain higher monetary recovery); Suffield Dev. Assoc. v. Nat'l Loan Investors, L.P., 802 A.2d 44, 49 (Conn. 2002) (executions are properly used in accordance with a valid judgment and in an appropriate amount, so obtaining attachment for more than judgment may be abuse of process). See also In re Mills Int'l, 570 B.R. 169 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 2017) (improper purpose shown if creditor's service of TRO, at time and place where equipment was about to be auctioned, coerced debtor into paying more than was owed, to prevent disruption of sale).

claim, yet files suit for the purpose of extracting money that the opposing party does not owe.[428]

Even some courts that require a collateral purpose construe the requirement broadly. For example, it may be a collateral purpose for a creditor to garnish exempt wages for the purpose of coercing the debtor to pay the debt.[429] Courts are split on the issue of whether collection of the underlying debt is an improper purpose for a creditor to instigate criminal charges.[430]

15.6.3.4 Examples

Examples of abuse of process in the debt collection context include:

- Filing a baseless lis pendens[431] or mechanic's lien;[432]
- Filing suit on a debt known to be time-barred, persisting in it after its untimeliness was confirmed, and seeking attorney fees from the opposing party without confirming that that party had a contractual fee obligation;[433]
- Obtaining an injunction preventing a judgment debtor from disposing of assets that has the effect of freezing the assets of non-debtors, where the judgment creditor's ulterior purpose is to coerce the non-debtor to pay the debt;[434]
- Engaging in venue abuse;[435]

428 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 956–957 (9th Cir. 2011) (Mont. law).

429 Shoney's Inc. v. Barnett, 773 So. 2d 1015, 1025 (Ala. Civ. App. 1999); Nevada Credit Rating Bureau v. Williams, 503 P.2d 9 (Nev. 1972) (excessive attachment as means of coercing payment of underlying debt is abuse of process). See also Nelson v. Am. Power & Light, 2010 WL 3219498 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 12, 2010) (filing eviction action to coerce payment of utility bill may be abuse of process); Sprint Communications Co. v. Leggett, 307 S.W.3d 109 (Ky. 2010) (reversing summary judgment for defendant telephone company on claim challenging its use of eminent domain powers, which could only obtain easement, in effort to coerce outright sale).

430 IMPROPER: Baker v. Oklahoma Tire & Supply Co., 344 F. Supp. 780 (W.D. Ark. 1972) (abuse of process for former employer to institute criminal bad check charges against employee for purposes of collecting debt); Routh Wrecker Serv. v. Washington, 980 S.W.2d 240 (Ark. 1998) (affirming $75,000 punitive damage award against vehicle seller who allowed meritless criminal case to proceed to trial for purpose of coercing payment); Harmon v. Cargo Carriage Corp., 895 S.W.2d 938 (Ark. 1995) (use of criminal prosecution to extort return of property or payment of money may constitute abuse of process; continuing criminal case after property sought was returned also may constitute abuse of process); Tomash v. John Deere Indus. Equip. Co., 399 N.W.2d 387, 290 (Iowa 1987) (use of criminal process to coerce payment of debt is abuse of process, but not shown here); Palmer Ford, Inc. v. Wood, 471 A.2d 297 (Md. 1984) (car repairer's threat of criminal charges of embezzlement, larceny and unauthorized use of a vehicle for the purpose of collecting a disputed repair bill improper); Weststar Mortg. Corp. v. Jackson, 39 P.3d 710 (N.M. Ct. App. 2002) (misuse of process shown by use of criminal prosecution to gain leverage in negotiations over civil debt), rev'd on other grounds, 61 P.3d 823 (N.M. 2002).

PROPER: Silver v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 2000 WL 33682675 (E.D.N.C. July 31, 2000) (filing insufficient funds charges with goal of collecting on check is not improper ulterior motive); Vasseur v. Eunice Superette, Inc., 386 So. 2d 692 (La. Ct. App. 1980) (store's instigation of bad check criminal prosecution in order to collect underlying debt not improper, particularly because insufficient funds check criminal statute authorizes restitution as part of sentence); Broadnax v. Greene Credit Serv., 694 N.E.2d 167 (Ohio Ct. App. 1997) (abuse of process means the use of process to compel some action which the court could not compel; use of criminal charges to collect on insufficient funds check not abuse of process where criminal court could order restitution).

See generally National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 8 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library; A.S. Klein, Annotation, Use of Criminal Process to Collect Debt as Abuse of Process, 27 A.L.R.3d 1202 (1969); §§ 8.5, 15.6.2, supra; § 16.5.3, infra.

431 In re Babb, 2009 WL 212568 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. Jan. 26, 2009) (malicious filing of lis pendens will support either malicious prosecution or abuse-of-process claim); Nat'l City Bank v. Shortridge, 689 N.E.2d 1248 (Ind. 1997) (sufficient facts to state a claim for abuse of process where personal injury attorneys filed two lis pendens notices, the second just days before the court was to rule on the first, as a way of preventing sale of defendant's real property, his only asset; state law did not permit use of lis pendens before judgment in personal injury action); Talk of the Millennium Realty, Inc. v. Sierra, 819 N.Y.S.2d 213 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2006) (filing lis pendens, under circumstances where New York law clearly does not permit it, to coerce payment of disputed real estate commission, is a tort whether called tortious interference with contract or abuse of process); Hewes v. Wolfe, 330 S.E.2d 16, 19 (N.C. Ct. App. 1985) (affirming abuse-of-process verdict for filing lis pendens with ulterior purpose of ruining the defendant). But cf. Klass v. Frazer, 290 F. Supp. 2d 425 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) (filing lis pendens for its proper purpose of giving potential purchasers or lienors notice of suit is not abuse of process); Bernhard-Thomas Bldg. Co. v. Duncan, 2006 WL 301908 (Conn. Super. Ct. Jan. 18, 2006) (baseless prejudgment attachment not abuse of process where its primary purpose was to secure prejudgment remedy).

432 Advanced Constr. Co. v. Pilecki, 901 A.2d 189 (Me. 2006) (affirming abuse-of-process judgment against contractor who filed mechanic's lien to deny plaintiffs access to house and coerce them to pay sums already paid or not yet due). But see Jordan v. Tucker, Alba & Assoc., 2017 WL 2223918 (E.D.N.Y. May 19, 2017) (filing mechanic's lien for grossly excessive amount not abuse of process where purpose was to enforce claim for work performed on the property).

433 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 956–957 (9th Cir. 2011) (Mont. law). But see Loftis v. Credit Acceptance Corp. 2011 WL 976621, at *4–5 (E.D. Ark. Mar. 18, 2011) (filing time-barred action to coerce payment of debt not owed not abuse of process because purpose was to collect debt).

434 Pinewood Homes, Inc. v. Harris, 646 S.E.2d 826 (N.C. Ct. App. 2007).

435 Barquis v. Merchants Collection Ass'n, 496 P.2d 817 (Cal. 1972) (claim stated by allegations that defendant knowingly filed legally insufficient complaints against consumers in improper venues to procure default judgments for the ulterior purpose of impairing the consumers' defenses); Cervantes v. Law Offices of John G. Hanlin, 2004 WL 1638174, at *8 n.4 (Cal. Ct. App. July 23, 2004) (filing suit in inconvenient and inappropriate venue is abuse of process where ulterior motive is to secure a default judgment and obtain higher monetary recovery); Yu v. Signet Bank, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304 (Cal. Ct. App. 1999) (reversing summary judgment for defendants for abuse of process where credit card company filed collection actions and obtained default judgments against California cardholders in Virginia without personal jurisdiction), appeal after remand, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 516 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003); Dishaw v. Wadleigh, 44 N.Y.S. 207 (N.Y. App. Div. 1897) (claim for abuse of process stated where attorney filed collection suits in distant counties, took default judgments, and collected them by issuing subpoenas to debtors, who paid the debts rather than journeying to the cities where the subpoenas were issued). See also Seidling v. Stepan, 890 N.W.2d 48 (Wis. Ct. App. 2016) (affirming award of punitive damages for "egregious" misuse of legal system;

- Suing an alleged debtor in court on a disputed debt, when the note required arbitration;[436]
- Altering a writ of execution so that the assets of an individual rather than a corporation could be seized;[437]
- Using sham documents and manufactured evidence to pursue a claim in court;[438]
- Obtaining and executing upon a default judgment after agreeing to dismiss the case;[439]
- Using replevin to obtain possession of property in which the creditor did not in fact have a security interest;[440]
- Instituting a replevin action on the pretext that the action was necessary to discover the location of the collateral, when in fact the creditor's ulterior purpose was to recover a debt that had been discharged in bankruptcy;[441]
- Using garnishment to obtain funds that the creditor knows are exempt,[442] or as a form of discovery when a debtor's examination could have been used;[443]
- Refusing to release a garnishment after receiving notice of the debtor's bankruptcy, in hopes of sabotaging the debtor's chapter 13 plan;[444]
- Falsifying an affidavit of service of process;[445]
- Continuing litigation[446] or postjudgment execution proceedings[447] known to be baseless;
- Obtaining an excessive attachment in an attempt to coerce payment of the underlying debt;[448] and after consumer prevailed in action to rescind land contract, current defendant twice used falsified service to obtain default judgments against her in improper venues). But see Spartalian v. Citibank, 2012 WL 3314164 (D. Or. Aug. 10, 2012) (filing collection action in distant and inappropriate forum not abuse of process where objective was to collect debt; must show intent to coerce some result other than debt collection). But cf. Meyer v. Conlon, 162 F.3d 1264 (10th Cir. 1998) (filing suit for delinquent insurance premiums in Iowa against a Wyoming insured and serving the insured by mail while insured and company were embroiled in controversy over other matters, not abuse of process, where this was permitted by policy provisions and Iowa law, and was company's standard practice); Owens v. Chasko, 2011 WL 3163261 (E.D. Cal. July 26, 2011) (filing suit, even in distant forum, may be privileged, but no abuse-of-process claim in any event in absence of pattern); Mackinder v. OSCA Dev. Co., 198 Cal. Rptr. 864 (Cal. Ct. App. 1984) (filing action in county where property giving rise to debt was located not abuse of process even though debtors did not reside there); Porter v. Stormont-Vail Hosp., 621 P.2d 411 (Kan. 1980) (numerous orders to appear in aid of execution and two arrests of a judgment debtor residing 200 miles from the court over disputed debt not abuse of process); Mercury Marine Div. v. Costas, 342 S.E.2d 632 (S.C. Ct. App. 1986) (where creditor twice sued business person in county other than county of residence, summary judgment for creditor proper; no purpose other than collection of debt shown). See generally Alan K. Chen, Due Process as Consumer Protection: State Remedies for Distant Forum Abuse, 20 Akron L. Rev. 9, 10–13 (1986); § 10.3, supra, § 16.3.5, infra.

436 Hicks v. Bank of Am., 218 Fed. Appx. 739 (10th Cir. 2007) (Tenn. law).

437 Miniscalco v. Gordon, 916 F. Supp. 478 (E.D. Pa. 1996).

438 Coursen v. JP Morgan Chase & Co., 2012 WL 3055857, at *5 (M.D. Fla. July 25, 2012).

439 Goodwin Agency, Inc. v. Chesser, 206 S.E.2d 568 (Ga. Ct. App. 1974).

440 Aikens v. CIT Group/Sales Fin., Inc., 2007 WL 108301 (S.D. Miss. Jan. 9, 2007) (denial of motion to dismiss). But cf. Ross v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 867 S.W.2d 546, 554 (Mo. Ct. App. 1993) (obtaining a replevin order is not abuse of process where creditor had no purpose other than gaining possession of the property).

441 Houghton v. Foremost Fin. Serv. Corp., 724 F.2d 112 (10th Cir. 1983) (Okla. law; reversing grant of summary judgment to creditor).

442 Davis v. Nebraska Furniture Mart, Inc., 2012 WL 1252633 (D. Kan. Apr. 13, 2012) (knowingly garnishing account containing only exempt funds is abuse of process; fact question here as to knowledge); Hogue v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 494 F. Supp. 2d 1043, 1053 (S.D. Iowa 2007) (denial of motion to dismiss); Arc Inv. Co. v. Tiffith, 330 P.2d 305 (Cal. 1958) (repeated issuance of garnishment on exempt wages may be abuse of process); Czap v. Credit Bureau, 86 Cal. Rptr. 417 (Cal. Ct. App. 1970) (levying on exempt wages with ulterior purpose of threatening debtor's employment and coercing her to pay debt may be abuse of process). But see Bray v. Cadle Co., 2010 WL 4053794 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 14, 2010) (garnishment not abuse of process, even though account known to contain exempt funds, because used for intended purpose); Parker v. Wetsch & Abbott, P.L.C., 2006 WL 4846042 (S.D. Iowa July 11, 2006) (use of garnishment to reach exempt funds not abuse of process, as this is its normal use and procedure is available to debtor to challenge it).

443 Hogue v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 494 F. Supp. 2d 1043, 1053 (S.D. Iowa 2007) (denial of motion to dismiss).

444 Hefley v. J. & M. Securities, L.L.C., 2016 WL 2643477 (E.D. Mo. May 10, 2016).

445 Bowens v. Mel S. Harris & Assoc., 2008 WL 619162 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 3, 2008) (allegation of "sewer service" sufficient to state claim), later op. at 2011 WL 6208303 (W.D.N.Y. Dec. 14, 2011) (granting summary judgment to defendants where they could reasonably have believed that service address was correct); Cordero v. Calvary SpIV L.L.C., 2004 WL 1244107 (N.D. Ill. June 3, 2004) (denial of motion to strike); Kappell v. Bartlett, 246 Cal. Rptr. 815 (Cal. Ct. App. 1988); Parks v. Neuf, 578 N.E.2d 282 (Ill. App. Ct. 1991) (allowing claim of abuse of process to go forward against private process server who falsified return of service for ulterior purpose of obtaining service fees). But see Smith v. Fireside Thrift Co., 2007 WL 2729329 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 18, 2007) (dismissing abuse-of-process claim; falsifying proof of service, obtaining default judgment and garnishing wages protected by litigation privilege); Rusheen v. Cohen, 128 P.3d 713, 718 (Cal. 2006) (filing false affidavit of service of process, which ultimately enabled litigant to levy upon judgment, is protected by absolute immunity under California statute).

446 Samuels v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 921 F. Supp. 2d 1321 (S.D. Ala. 2013) (ulterior purpose of coercing settlement sufficiently alleged where large volume debt buyer received minimal information from sellers, made no effort to obtain more, and was unable to produce any evidence at trial); Okemo Mtn., Inc. v. Sikorsky, 2006 WL 335858 (D. Vt. Feb. 14, 2006) (may be abuse of process to proceed to trial against individual while knowing that release absolved him, with purpose to harass and annoy him), later decision at 2006 WL 3333100 (D. Vt. Nov. 16, 2006) (judgment as matter of law for current defendant; no reasonable jury could have found that release was intended to cover current plaintiff); Gen. Elec. Capital Corp. v. MHPG, Inc., 2006 WL 2560314 (Mass. Super. Ct. July 26, 2004) (granting summary judgment on liability). But see Hempel-DuBois v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2011 WL 3627294 (D.N.H. Aug. 17, 2011) (continuing litigation after learning that key affidavits were forged not abuse of process); Hampton v. Nustar Mgmt. Fin. Group, 2007 WL 119146 (D. Nev. Jan. 10, 2007) (continuing litigation as lever to obtain settlement of underlying suit is neither improper motive nor ulterior purpose); Equality, Inc. v. I-Link Communications, 76 F. Supp. 2d 227, 230 (D. Conn. 1999) (continuing meritless litigation not abuse of process).

447 Shaw v. Law Offices of Hayt, Hayt, & Landau, 2018 WL 1634829 (D.N.J. Apr. 5, 2018) (denying summary judgment to collector on claim that it abused process by repeatedly garnishing non-debtor's account after being informed of its error).

448 Suffield Dev. Assoc. v. Nat'l Loan Investors, L.P., 802 A.2d 44, 49 (Conn. 2002) (reversing grant of creditor's motion to strike claim

- Procuring a criminal complaint in order to coerce the return of property involved in a civil dispute.[449]

15.7 Other Debt Collection Torts

15.7.1 Torts Involving Personal Injury or Restraint

Torts not applicable to typical debt collection practices may apply in particular factual situations. The common law torts of assault or battery can arise during abusive collection actions.[450] In extreme cases, where a harassed debtor commits suicide, a wrongful death claim may be attempted,[451] but will present difficult questions of proximate cause and foreseeability.[452]

False arrest and false imprisonment claims may be viable if a creditor or collector wrongfully causes the debtor to be arrested.[453] A false imprisonment claim may also be available involving misrepresentation of amount of judgment in order to obtain excessive attachment and pressure opponent to settle); Zinn v. Rice, 27 N.E. 772 (Mass. 1891) (issuing excessive attachment not for purpose of securing payment of the debt, but to injure debtor, may be abuse of process); Cady v. Marcella, 729 N.E.2d 1125 (Mass. App. Ct. 2000) (issuing execution on property of little market value as means of coercion may be abuse of process), Rahaman v. Weber, 2005 WL 89413 (Minn. Ct. App. Jan. 19, 2005) (seizure of more than $10,000 statutory limit from bank account states abuse-of-process claim); Nevada Credit Rating Bureau v. Williams, 503 P.2d 9 (Nev. 1972) (affirming abuse-of-process judgment based on issuing excessive attachment and refusing to release any items from attachment). See also Goldsmith v. Aargon Agency, 2018 WL 1567848 (D. Nev. Mar. 30, 2018) (refusing to dismiss abuse of process claim against judgment creditor that obtained writs of execution for sums not awarded by judgment). See generally Thomas J. Goger, Annotation, Liability of Creditor for Excessive Attachment or Garnishment, 56 A.L.R.3d 493, §§ 3, 5, 6, 8 (1974).

449 Wilson v. Brown Chrysler Dodge Jeep Ram, L.L.C., 2018 WL 700828 (W.D. La. Feb. 1, 2018) (yo-yo sale).

450 See Ryan v. Ford Motor Co., 939 N.E.2d 891 (Ohio Ct. App. 2010) (consumer who backed off because repossessor was "about thirty years younger . . . and 150 pounds heavier" stated claim for assault; wife who observed confrontation, but did not interact with repossessor, failed to state claim); Ledisco Fin. Serv., Inc. v. Viracola, 533 S.W.2d 951 (Tex. App. 1974) (collection agency responsible for employee's assault and battery on consumer while attempting to obtain return of the consumer's credit card, but not for obscene telephone calls). See also Robey v. Fed. Deposit Ins. Corp., 2011 WL 4102326 (D. Neb. Sept. 14, 2011) (fact issue whether repossessor's demeanor, in conversation with debtor's wife, was "menacing" enough to constitute assault). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 13.6 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

451 See, e.g., Smith v. J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, 2011 WL 5373969 (D. Nev. Nov. 4 2011) (suicide not a bar to wrongful death claim; debtor-husband committed suicide while lender was egregiously mishandling loan modification, harassing debtors, and bringing arguably wrongful foreclosure); North Shore Pharmacy Serv., Inc. v. Breslin Assoc. Consulting, L.L.C., 491 F. Supp. 2d 111 (D. Mass. 2007) (auditor allegedly committed suicide as a result of campaign to drive him out of business; fact issues as to causation; also questions as to Massachusetts law on wrongful death claims arising from suicide); Burdett v. Harrah's Kan. Casino Corp., 311 F. Supp. 2d 1166 (D. Kan. 2004) (Kansas wrongful death statute allows recovery for tort for which victim could have recovered in lifetime, here negligent infliction of emotional distress; widow of compulsive gambler who committed suicide after being harassed for casino debts alleged proximate cause sufficient to support claim).

452 See, e.g., MacDermid v. Discover Fin. Serv., 2006 WL 1454743 (M.D. Tenn. May 12, 2006) (neither proximate cause nor foreseeability sufficiently alleged, even though card issuer continued its threats of criminal prosecution after being informed of consumer's longstanding and severe bipolar disorder), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 488 F.3d 721 (6th Cir. 2007) (remanding for further proceedings as to intentional infliction of emotional distress claim). See also Wilkinson v. United States, 2007 WL 3544062 (D.N.D. Nov. 9, 2007) (wrongful death claim fails; proximate cause cannot be shown where debtor died of heart attack after wrongful seizure of land, but had multiple risk factors in addition to stress), rev'd in part on other grounds, 564 F.3d 927 (8th Cir. 2009).

453 See Hall v. District of Columbia, 867 F.3d 138 (D.C. Cir. 2017) (reversing dismissal of false imprisonment claim against officer who arrested customer without investigating restaurant workers' report that she had walked out without paying bill); Wilson v. Brown Chrysler Dodge Jeep Ram, L.L.C., 2018 WL 700828 (W.D. La. Feb. 1, 2018) (refusing to dismiss false arrest claim against officers who withheld exculpatory evidence showing that alleged theft was civil dispute over yo-yo sale); Kent v. Drought, 2010 WL 4320334 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 28, 2010) (during dispute over logging contract, landowner falsely informed police that logger had stolen timber; logger was arrested, detained, and arraigned, but grand jury refused to indict; logger stated claims for both false arrest and malicious prosecution); Watkins v. Kanitz, 2004 WL 3457634 (W.D. Mich. Sept. 24, 2004) (refusing to dismiss consumer's claims for false arrest and false imprisonment against police who arrested her when she disobeyed order to allow self-help repossession to go forward); Greenberg v. Pryszlak, 46 A.3d 591 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2012) (reversing summary judgment for defendants on false arrest and false imprisonment claims; fact issue whether trooper who arrested consumer at request of garage owner had probable cause to arrest, where consumer stopped payment on check and tendered check for smaller amount during dispute over the quality of repairs); Singh v. McLaughlin, 297 P.3d 514 (Or. Ct. App. 2013) (reversing directed verdict against plaintiff on false imprisonment charge; plaintiff alleged that attorney falsely procured his arrest to gain advantage in dispute over control of small business; attorney-client privilege will not apply if lawyer was helping client commit crime of filing false criminal complaint). See also Keylard v. Mueller Anderson, P.C., 2013 WL 4501446 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 22, 2013) (denying FDCPA claim, noting that state law claim for false arrest is proper remedy if law firm used knowingly false affidavits of service to obtain body attachment); Montgomery Ward v. Wilson, 664 A.2d 916, 925–929 (Md. 1995) (false imprisonment claim is available if private party detains a person or wrongfully instigates warrantless arrest, but not for wrongfully securing arrest warrant, which is malicious prosecution). But see Gatheright v. Clark, 2016 WL 237153 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 20, 2016) (false arrest not sufficiently alleged where sheriff's department made decision to arrest, even if complainant filed knowingly false bad check affidavit); Callon v. Cox, 2012 WL 314880 (S.D. Ind. Jan. 25, 2012) (state governmental immunity statute bars claim against municipal officials who failed to credit plaintiffs' payment of court costs and caused their arrest on a body attachment); In re BFW Liquidation, L.L.C., 471 B.R. 652 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 2012) (neither false imprisonment nor false arrest where defendant store did not detain consumer and arrest was based on a warrant—even though warrant was issued as a result of false statements by defendant); Myles v. Screentech, Inc., 98 So. 3d 563 (Ala. Civ. App. 2012) (false arrest claim against person who reports information to police requires showing that informant acted in bad faith without reasonable cause to believe accused committed a crime; not shown here where inadequate but apparently good-faith investigation led creditor to believe it was victim of a fraud); Hagberg v. California Fed. Bank, 81 P.3d 244 (Cal. 2004) (false arrest and false imprisonment claims barred by statutory privilege for statements made to authorities). But cf. Harvey v. Caesar's

if the debtor's freedom of movement is restrained in some other way during a collection attempt.[454]

15.7.2 Trespass

A collection attempt that involves a visit to the debtor's home may be a trespass.[455] Many states allow repossessors a qualified privilege to enter on private property, however, if this can be done without breach of peace.[456] Mortgage lenders and servicers may have a contractual right to enter a home to preserve it in certain circumstances such as abandonment by the homeowner, but acts that go beyond the steps that are reasonably necessary to inspect or protect the property may amount to trespass.[457] Nominal damages may be available for trespass even if the consumer suffers no actual damage.[458]

15.7.3 Conversion and Other Torts Directed Against the Consumer's Property

The tort of conversion occurs when the defendant wrongfully exercises dominion or control over identifiable personal property that the plaintiff has a right to possess.[459] This tort most commonly arises in the repossession context,[460] but other collection abuses may also amount to conversion.[461] Some Entertainment Operating Co., 55 F. Supp. 3d 901 (N.D. Miss. 2014) (La. law; false arrest claim fails, because debtor who voluntarily went to prosecutor's office was never restrained), aff'd 790 Fed. Appx. 582 (5th Cir. 2019); Fleming v. U-Haul of Ga., Inc., 541 S.E.2d 75 (Ga. Ct. App. 2000) (valid warrant bars false imprisonment claim); Hiber v. Creditors Collection Serv., 961 P.2d 898 (Or. Ct. App. 1998) (no liability where attorney acted in good faith when seeking arrest of debtor for failure to appear at debtor's exam, even though warrant was void because of jurisdictional irregularities); Rodriguez v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 92 S.W.3d 502 (Tex. 2002) (no false imprisonment where store did not knowingly provide false information to instigate arrest on bad check charge).

454 Wilson v. Houston Funeral Home, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 169 (Cal. Ct. App. 1996) (where funeral director drove widow to bank to try to cash check instead of to cemetery, side trip to the bank was false imprisonment). But cf. Smith v. Magnolia Lady, Inc., 925 So. 2d 898 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006) (false imprisonment not sufficiently alleged where there was no evidence that employee being questioned about misplaced cash was not free to leave, despite presence of armed sheriff's officer; also detention was reasonable where cash handling procedures had been violated).

455 See, e.g., Gordon v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon Corp., 2017 WL 662856 (N.D. Ind. Jan. 17, 2017) (discussing Indiana law of civil and criminal trespass; civil trespass requires only showing of unauthorized entry); Njema v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2015 WL 5008940 (D. Minn. Aug. Aug. 18, 2015) (borrower stated trespass claim against property preservation service and bank, arising from repeated lock-outs at time when borrower was residing in house and negotiating with bank for short sale); Gens v. Colonial Sav., 2013 WL 1120503 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 18, 2013) (at a time when it did not own the mortgage, bank caused its agents to enter occupied house and damage and remove personal property; clause of mortgage permitting entry no defense because it did not own mortgage); CitiFinancial Mortg. Co. v. Frasure, 2008 WL 2199496 (N.D. Okla. May 23, 2008) (harassing home visit to collect debt not owed was trespass), aff'd on other grounds, 327 Fed. Appx. 49 (10th Cir. 2009); King v. Bank of N.Y., 2005 WL 2177209 (S.D. Tex. Sept. 7, 2005) (allegation of eviction attempt pursuant to wrongful foreclosure stated claim for trespass); Countrywide Home Loan Serv. L.L.P. v. Stultz, 832 N.E.2d 125 (Ohio Ct. App. 2005) (consumer stated claim for trespass against mortgage servicer that locked family out and denied access to personal property before foreclosure). See also Mitchell v. First Call Bail & Surety, 412 F. Supp. 3d 1208 (D. Mont. 2019) (allowing plaintiff to proceed with claims of trespass, false imprisonment, and assault against bounty hunters who broke into his home and took him into custody at gunpoint for missing court appearance on traffic charge; bounty hunters have privilege to enter on private property, but it is not absolute and not blanket permission to perform actions that would be forbidden to police officers). But see Rodriguez v. Due Process of Mich., Inc., 2008 WL 4449651 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 30, 2008) (consent to enter bars trespass claim, even if consent obtained by fraud; here, civil process servers misrepresented selves as law enforcement); In re Sharpe, 391 B.R. 117 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 2008) (trespass claim fails because foreclosing lender had right to possession after default). But cf. O'Dea v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., 2013 WL 441461 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 5, 2013) (inspector sent by lenders lied to condo security to gain access to common areas, asked owners for access to condo and was denied; owners' trespass claim failed because mortgage agreement allowed exterior inspections without notice or consent); Case v. St. Mary's Bank, 63 A.3d 1209 (N.H. 2013) (trespass claim fails; foreclosing bank locked out tenant who had complained of code violations; although not yet an owner, bank was permitted by mortgage agreement to enter). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 13.6 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (discussion of trespass in context of repossession).

456 See National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 6.4.7.1 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

457 Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n v. Obradovich, 2016 WL 1213920 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2017) (contract allowed lender to enter mortgaged property to take "reasonable or appropriate" steps to preserve it; refusing to dismiss trespass claim where debtors alleged they had not defaulted, and property service's bungled preservation efforts damaged the home); Napolitano v. Green Tree Servicing, 2016 WL 447451 (D. Me. Feb. 4, 2016) (refusing to dismiss trespass claim; loan documents allowed lender to enter at reasonable times for reasonable cause; fact issues as to reasonableness where, at a time when property was unoccupied but being cared for by borrowers, property service entered and winterized so negligently that it caused property damage); Flippin v. Aurora Bank, 2012 WL 3260449 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 8, 2012) (refusing to dismiss trespass claim against lender's property service that entered property which was secure, well-maintained, and obviously occupied, and changed locks, turned off water, and removed valuable property at a time when no order of possession had been entered; mortgage allowed "reasonable and appropriate" entry as needed to protect property); Jacobini v. J.P. Morgan Chase, 2012 WL 252437 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 26, 2012) (mortgage permitted lender to enter for reasonable cause, upon notice, but if entry by property service was unreasonable, it was trespass); Nelson v. Safeguard Properties, 2017 WL 5196011 (Mich. Ct. App. Nov. 9, 2017) (at time when foreclosure not yet begun, and owner had notified lender that property was not vacant, contractors employed by property service broke in, ransacked the house, removed or damaged personal property, and locked out owner; key issue is whether contractors used by property service were its agents). But cf. Clay v. Nat'l City Bank, 2012 WL 5038336 (Ky. Ct. App. 2012) (visits by lender's property service to vacant property not trespass, because mortgage permitted lender to enter to protect abandoned property).

458 Smith v. A.B. Bonded Locksmith, 757 N.E.2d 1242 (Ohio Ct. App. 2001).

459 Dan B. Dobbs, Paul T. Hayden and Eileen M. Bubeck, The Law of Torts, vol. 1, ch. 4, § 61, at 168–170 (2d ed. 2011).

460 See National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 13.6.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

461 See, e.g., White v. Wachovia Bank, 563 F. Supp. 2d 1358 (N.D. Ga. 2008) (consumers stated claim for trover and conversion where bank imposed courts hold that wrongful seizure of money is not conversion in ordinary circumstances, but allow a conversion claim for money that has been set aside, such as a real estate escrow or settlement proceeds held in an attorney's trust account.[462] A willful and knowing conversion may be actionable under a state civil theft law, many of which provide for multiple damages.[463]

Trespass to chattels is a tort similar to conversion where the wrongdoer deprives a party of possession only temporarily.[464] A slander of title claim can arise if a collector files an unjustified lien or lis pendens on the consumer's property.[465]

15.7.4 Negligence

Negligence claims can arise in a variety of collection scenarios.[466] For example, a negligence claim may lie if a creditor

overdraft charges when account had positive balance, took funds from consumers' other accounts to cover, and refused to re-credit); Billsie v. Brooksbank, 525 F. Supp. 2d 1290 (D.N.M. 2007) (garnished wages of wrong person, because of mistyped Social Security number, refused to return improperly garnished funds); Matthews v. Homecoming Fin. Network, 2005 WL 2387688 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2005) (consumers stated claim for conversion and trespass to chattels where foreclosing creditor locked them out of their home before date set by foreclosure order and refused to return personal property left in the house); Liberty Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Caddell, 701 So. 2d 1132 (Ala. Civ. App. 1997) (conversion action where life insurance company continued to take automatic premium withdrawals out of insured's bank account after he cashed in insurance policy despite persistent efforts by insured to correct the problem; compensatory damages of $50,000 for "mental anguish," plus punitive damages); Becker v. Longinaker, 784 N.W.2d 202 (Iowa Ct. App. 2010) (seizure of property of debtor and third party, to which bank had no right, to coerce payment of deficiency to which it was not entitled); Rahaman v. Weber, 2005 WL 89413 (Minn. Ct. App. Jan. 19, 2005) (consumer stated claim for conversion of exempt funds by wrongful levy); Countrywide Home Loan Serv. L.L.P. v. Stultz, 832 N.E.2d 125 (Ohio Ct. App. 2005) (consumers stated conversion claim against mortgage servicer that locked them out before foreclosure complaint filed and denied access to personal property for over a month). See also Int'l Group, L.L.C. v. Padilla, 2012 WL 5398674 (W.D.N.Y. Nov. 2, 2012) (wrongful attachment may be conversion, but only if attachment is void or voidable). But cf. Morgan v. N.A.R., Inc., 2008 WL 639128 (D. Utah 2008) (creditor did not wrongfully interfere with consumer's possession of her money; after debt was paid, it twice informed employer that garnishment was canceled, and promptly returned garnished funds sent by employer); Taylor v. Gelfand, 505 S.E.2d 222 (Ga. Ct. App. 1998) (erroneous freezing of bank account was not conversion where account was frozen pursuant to legal process and debtor could not show malice or lack of probable cause).

462 Hall v. District of Columbia, 867 F.3d 138 (D.D.C. Cir. 2017) (reversing summary judgment on conversion claim to restaurant that retained cash left on table by consumer's party, after restaurant had coerced consumer to pay more than was owed); Garner v. Barton, 2015 WL 1120085 (E.D. Mo. Mar. 12, 2015) (failure to return excess sums garnished from debtor's pay may be conversion); Arnett v. Bank of Am., 874 F. Supp. 2d 1021 (D. Or. 2012) (misapplication of "specific, identifiable funds" from real estate escrow is conversion); Client Funding Solutions v. Crim, 2012 WL 3017984 (N.D. Ill. July 24, 2012) (settlement proceeds); Hausen v. PS Illinois Trust, 2012 WL 266169 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 29, 2012) (surplus sales proceeds where sale of contents of storage locker yielded more than the amount of the lien). But see Boler v. Bank of Am., 2017 WL 6555343 (N.D. Ala. Dec. 22, 2017) (conversion claim fails; proceeds of insurance check for property damage are not "money capable of identification").

463 Burt v. Chase Auto Fin. Corp., 2019 WL 6219508 (E.D. Wis. Nov. 21, 2019) (declining to dismiss civil theft complaint arising from allegedly unauthorized repossession; wrongful intent sufficiently alleged); Auto Liquidation Ctr. v. Bates, 969 N.E.2d 139 (Ind. Ct. App. 2012) (unpublished) (distinguishing criminal conversion from simple breach of contract; must show "knowing or intentional exercise of unauthorized control over the property of another," here awarding treble damages against yo-yo car dealer who refused to return down payment). But cf. Oliver v. ARS Ohio, L.L.C., 2019 WL 343249 (N.D. Ohio Jan. 28, 2019) (civil theft claim fails; theft offense not sufficiently alleged where wrongful repossession resulted from mistake); Bullard v. U.S. Bank, 2012 WL 2542907 (N.D. Fla. June 30, 2012) (civil theft statute requires clear and convincing evidence of intent to steal; not shown where valuable property disappeared after lender's property service trespassed and changed locks on shed). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 8.8 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

464 See National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions §§ 7.4.1, 13.6.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

465 See, e.g., Joy v. MERSCORP, Inc., 935 F. Supp. 2d 848 (E.D.N.C. 2013) (slander of title shown where servicer recorded a deed based on foreclosure that was void because of servicer's false statements and failure to comply with statutory requirements; special damages requirement satisfied because homeowner incurred moving expenses as result); Reno v. Supportkids, Inc., 2004 WL 828150 (D. Minn. Apr. 13, 2004) (refusing to dismiss slander of title claim where collector filed lien in inflated amount on debtor's home); First Nat'l Bank of Mo. v. Ricon, Inc., 311 S.W.3d 857 (Mo. Ct. App. 2010) (filing of unauthorized lis pendens; false statement shown, also pecuniary harm where notice caused refinancing to fail; fact issue as to malicious publication). But cf. Sam v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing, 2010 WL 761228 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 3, 2010) (slander of title claim arising from filing notice of mortgage default is barred by litigation privilege).

466 See, e.g., Ward v. Bank of Am., 2019 WL 2103124 (W.D. Wash. May 14, 2019) (mishandling of foreclosure; homeowner led to believe he had already lost house, then subjected to new foreclosure action; Washington deed of trust statute creates a duty sufficient to support claims of negligence and negligent misrepresentation); Hall v. District of Columbia, 867 F.3d 138 (D.C. Cir. 2017) (reversing summary judgment to restaurant on negligence claim; fact question whether restaurant workers negligently caused consumer's arrest and resultant injuries where they reported felony theft without grounds to conclude that she had refused to pay, and in particular had no grounds to allege that allegedly unpaid amount satisfied felony threshold); Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n v. Obradovich, 2016 WL 1213920 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2017) (denying motion to dismiss negligence claim against property service that entered unoccupied but not abandoned property, and winterized so unskillfully as to cause serious property damage); Quinones v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 282 F. Supp. 3d 1207 (C.D. Cal. 2017) (consumer stated negligence claim against creditor who made over 2000 robocalls; duty of care will arise if creditor goes beyond its role as lender of money and becomes aggressive debt collector); Arndt v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2015 WL 2395484 (E.D. Pa. May 20, 2015) (tenant of foreclosed property stated claim for negligence, including demand for punitive damages; property service locked out tenant and removed property despite being informed of tenant's lawful presence); Howard v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2014 WL 6802550 (S.D. Miss. Dec. 14, 2014) (egregious mishandling of mortgage servicing); Raley v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 6684906 (N.D. Ala. Nov. 24, 2014) (consumer alleged duty of care sufficient to support negligence claim; bank failed to investigate claim that debt was result of identity theft, and filed Form 1099 forgiveness of debt, resulting in large tax liability); Narramore v. HBSC Bank, 2010 WL 2732815 (D. Ariz. July 7, 2010) (foreclosure while loan modification was in progress; if lender told borrower that initiates collection activity after negligently failing to realize that a debt has been paid,[467] or if it negligently pursues collection activity against the wrong person.[468] A number of courts have held creditors liable for negligently extending credit to an identity thief.[469] A key issue in many cases is whether the defendant owed a duty to the consumer.[470] sale would be postponed, it had duty to notify him when it was not); DePrinzio v. MBNA Nat'l Bank, 2005 WL 2039175 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 24, 2005) (allowing negligence claim to go forward based on credit reports made by bank that omitted critical information; not barred by Fair Credit Reporting Act preemption); Johnson v. Citimortgage, Inc., 351 F. Supp. 2d 1368 (N.D. Ga. 2004) (breach of duty by mortgage servicer to exercise reasonable care and skill where it refused to apply payments properly and made knowingly false report to credit reporting agency); Witherwax v. Transcare, 801 N.Y.S.2d 782 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2005) (consumer stated claim for negligence against creditor that sent bill to wrong address, then referred debt to collection without attempting to telephone consumer or bill his insurance company; creditor had correct phone number and insurance information). Cf. Wilson v. GMAC Fin. Serv. Corp., 2009 WL 467583 (E.D. Tenn. Feb. 24, 2009) (allowing negligence claim arising from disagreement over return of leased vehicle to go forward, but if duty allegedly breached arose from contract, no tort claim would be available). See also Owens-Benniefield v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 258 F. Supp. 3d 1300 (M.D. Fla. June 15, 2017) (borrower stated negligence claim against servicer who assigned debt to another servicer after deed in lieu of foreclosure transaction had been completed and recorded). But see Cohen v. Beachside Two—I Homeowners' Ass'n, 2006 WL 1795140 (D. Minn. June 29, 2006) (negligence claim unavailable for violation of duty that arises solely from contract, here allegations that bank wrongfully paid certain disputed fees out of escrow), aff'd as modified, 272 Fed. Appx. 534 (8th Cir. 2008); Reno v. Supportkids, Inc., 2004 WL 828150 (D. Minn. Apr. 13, 2004) (negligence claim fails because private child support collector owed no duty to obligor); Hagberg v. California Fed. Bank, 81 P.3d 244 (Cal. 2004) (negligence claim barred by statutory privilege for statements made to authorities). But cf. Middleton v. Rogers Ltd., 804 F. Supp. 2d 632 (S.D. Ohio 2011) (economic loss rule bars claim regarding negligent collection acts that cause only economic harm); Chaconas v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 713 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (S.D. Cal. May 10, 2010) (proximate cause not shown; frail older debtor injured in fall when running to answer unauthorized call). See generally § 15.1.4, supra.

467 See, e.g., Goodwin v. Capital One, 2015 WL 5120860 (M.D. Ga. Aug. 28, 2015) (debtor stated negligence and conversion claims against creditor and repossessor who repossessed vehicle that had been paid for in chapter 13 plan); Searle v. Harrah's Entertainment, Inc., 2010 WL 3928632 (Tenn. Ct. App. Oct. 6, 2010) (affirming negligence judgment against creditor that engaged in abusive attempts to collect check that it should have known had been paid). See also Himmelstein v. Comcast of the Dist., L.L.C., 908 F. Supp. 2d 49 (D.D.C. 2012) (cable company charged for equipment that had been returned, and refused to correct records after mistake discovered; allowing negligence claim to go forward, but seeking additional briefing on question whether there was any duty outside the contract), later op. at 931 F. Supp. 2d 48 (D.D.C. 2013) (negligence claim is preempted by FCRA).

468 See, e.g., Reid v. LVNV Funding, 2016 WL 247571 (D. Utah Jan. 20, 2016) (law firm had duty to investigate to confirm judgment debtor's identity when faced with obvious conflict; here firm pursued identity theft victim after being presented with extensive documentation); Alves v. Verizon, 2010 WL 2989988 (D.N.J. July 27, 2010) (local phone company's persistent failure to fix equipment problem caused long-distance carrier's abusive dunning of consumer for another customer's debt; local company breached duty to maintain telephone line and account; long-distance carrier breached duty to bill proper owners of account); Liu v. Arrow Fin. Serv., Inc., 2010 WL 1994190 (S.D. Tex. May 17, 2010) (consumer stated claim for negligence but not gross negligence where creditor failed to tell counsel to discontinue action after learning that debt was result of identity theft); Phillips v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2008 WL 5050127 (D. Minn. Nov. 20, 2008) (allowing negligence claim to proceed for wrongful levy on funds of non-party, non-debtor spouse); Cross v. Receivables Mgmt. Solutions, Inc., 2006 WL 446083 (D. Colo. Feb. 21, 2006) (consumer stated claim for negligence where collectors persistently reported and dunned for debt they had not verified, and which consumer had never heard of); Pourny v. Maui Police Dep't, 127 F. Supp. 2d 1129 (D. Haw. 2000) (negligence action against creditor would lie, where creditor seized exempt property and property not owned by debtor); Lindor v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 914 N.Y.S.2d 867 (N.Y. Super. Ct. 2010) (collectors owe duty to persons with names similar to debtors'; here, misspelling of debtor's name resulted in false reporting of debt on credit report of non-debtor).

469 See § 15.1.5, supra.

470 Brandt v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5878581 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 29, 2017) (rejecting defendant's argument that negligence claim must be dismissed because of absence of duty; 1000 to 2000 collection calls over five years "would appear to constitute the type of 'harassing and abusive behavior that exceed[s] the normal domain of a lender collecting on a debt'"); Dougherty v. Bank of Am., 177 F. Supp. 3d 1230 (E.D. Cal. 2016) (lender or servicer's relationship with debtor usually does not create duty of care sufficient to support negligence claim, but this must be determined on a case by case basis; foreseeability of harm and close connection between defendant's conduct and the harm both weigh in favor of finding a duty here: servicers strung borrowers along with false promises that unaffordable modification could be made feasible by state home-saver program, but never took necessary steps to enable homeowners to participate in the program); Nunn v. JP Morgan ChaseBank, 2016 WL 2793003 (Cal. Ct. App. May 13, 2016) (finding duty of care when processing loan modification; fact issues whether it was breached by dual tracking and mishandling of documents).

15.7.5 Misrepresentation, Civil Conspiracy, and Extortion

Other torts that are occasionally applicable in the debt collection context are fraud[471] and negligent misrepresentation.[472] For either claim, the consumer must be able to show reliance on the misrepresentation.[473]

The elements of the tort of civil conspiracy vary among jurisdictions. One statement of the elements is:

1. A combination of two or more persons or entities;
2. An agreement among them for a common purpose;
3. Knowledge of the common purpose and intent to participate on the part of each participant; and
4. The commission of one or more overt acts in furtherance of the conspiracy.[474]

A civil conspiracy claim is useful as a way of reaching persons who joined in an agreement to accomplish some wrongful result but did not commit tortious acts themselves. Courts have allowed debtors to proceed with civil conspiracy 471 Vine v. PLS Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 456031 (W.D. Tex. Jan. 16, 2018) (payday lender falsely told borrowers that checks would not be used for criminal prosecution; misstatements when submitting post-dated checks to DA's program also actionable); Yohannes v. Olympic Collection, Inc., 2017 WL 6060113 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 7, 2017); Dougherty v. Bank of Am., 177 F. Supp. 3d 1230 (E.D. Cal. 2016) (falsity and reliance sufficiently alleged; servicers strung borrowers along with false promises to enable them to participate in state home-saver program that would make otherwise unaffordable modification feasible); Llames v. J.P. Morgan Chase & Co., 2012 WL 1032910 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 23, 2012) (refusing to dismiss claim that creditor committed fraud by misrepresenting that it would remove authorized user from account in return for her payment of past-due amount); Dimas v. Vanderbilt Mortg. & Fin., Inc., 2010 WL 3342216 (S.D. Tex. Aug. 25, 2010) (recording fraudulent liens; anyone doing title search would rely on the false statements); Alves v. Verizon, 2010 WL 2989988 (D.N.J. July 27, 2010) (fraud sufficiently alleged where local phone company broke months of promises to fix equipment problem that resulted in long-distance company's abusive dunning of wrong customer, and long-distance company failed to stop the dunning); Aikens v. CIT Group/Sales Fin., Inc., 2007 WL 108301 (S.D. Miss. Jan. 9, 2007) (reliance sufficiently alleged where consumer testified that she did not know whether creditor's statements were true or not, and hired counsel and sued to resolve the matter); Kmart v. Asaro, 751 So. 2d 513 (Ala. Civ. App. 1999) (evidence of fraud sufficient to go to jury, where store agreed to accept repayment for bad check from consumer's chapter 13 bankruptcy and not prosecute criminally, then prosecuted); Mbigi v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., 785 S.E.2d 8 (Ga. Ct. App. 2016) (reversing dismissal of fraud claim based on various misstatements in course of mishandled loan modification ending in wrongful foreclosure). But cf. Narvaez v. Wilshire Credit Corp., 757 F. Supp. 2d 621 (N.D. Tex. 2010) (lender misrepresented amount of debt by force-placing insurance on properly insured property, but claim barred by economic loss rule where duty breached arose from loan contract). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Automobile Fraud Ch. 8 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library (detailed discussion of fraud in the context of automobile sales).

472 See Allison v. J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, 2012 WL 4633177 (E.D. Tex. Oct. 2, 2012) (lender told borrowers they qualified for aid for hurricane-destroyed property, but they must be two months in arrears, then foreclosed and sold when they missed payments; negligent misrepresentation claim goes forward, not barred by statute of frauds or economic loss rule); Stanton v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 2010 WL 3824640 (D. Utah Sept. 28, 2010) (negligent misrepresentation will lie only if there is special or fiduciary relationship; lender/borrower not per se special, but long course of false reassurances during loan modification negotiations could create special relationship); Glover v. Bally Total Fitness Corp., 2007 WL 465578 (M.D. Pa. Feb. 9, 2007) (denying motion to dismiss consumer's fraudulent and negligent misrepresentation claims based on creditor's misrepresentations to credit reporting agency, on which other creditors relied); Barber v. Nat'l Bank, 815 P.2d 857 (Alaska 1991) (mortgage servicing company's misrepresentation that it had postponed foreclosure sale of a residence was actionable as knowing or negligent misrepresentation); Mbigi v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., 785 S.E.2d 8 (Ga. Ct. App. 2016) (reversing dismissal of negligent misrepresentation claim based on various misstatements in course of mishandled loan modification ending in wrongful foreclosure). But see Tipton v. Willamette Subscription Television, 735 P.2d 1250 (Or. Ct. App. 1987) (claim for negligent misrepresentation not stated by allegations that demand letters for unauthorized reception of cable television company's signals misrepresented consumers' legal liability; attorneys owed no duty to accurately advise their adversaries of the law).

473 Johnson v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2017 WL 3401303 (W.D. Ky. Aug. 8, 2017) (mortgage servicer's inaccurate reporting resulted in failure of homeowner's negotiations with Verizon for cell tower; misrepresentation claim fails because consumer's did not rely on false information); Owens-Benniefield v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 258 F. Supp. 3d 1300 (M.D. Fla. June 15, 2017) (dismissing fraud claim on ground that consumer who disputed servicer's statement that she owed debt did not rely on that statement), later decision at 2017 WL 3149429 (M.D. Fla. July 25, 2017) (dismissing amended fraud claim on same ground); Middleton v. Rogers Ltd., Inc., 804 F. Supp. 2d 632 (S.D. Ohio 2011) (dismissing misrepresentation claims because of insufficient reliance allegations); Aikens v. CIT Group/Sales Fin., Inc., 2007 WL 108301 (S.D. Miss. Jan. 9, 2007) (consumer, who actively disputed creditor's claim of right to possession, stated claim for fraud; reliance sufficiently alleged where consumer testified that she did not know whether creditor's statements were true or not, and hired counsel and sued to resolve the matter); Gros v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 525 F. Supp. 2d 1019 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (consumer fails to state common law fraud claim against creditor who knowingly sold invalid debt; reliance not shown where consumer's response was to sue creditor and debt buyer); Riker-Vanholland v. Transouth Fin. Corp., 2004 WL 1812739 (N.D. Iowa Aug. 13, 2004) (consumer failed to state fraud claim against collector who falsely threatened criminal prosecution; reliance not shown where consumer's response to threat was to sue the collector); Reno v. Supportkids, Inc., 2004 WL 828150 (D. Minn. Apr. 13, 2004) (fraud claim fails because plaintiffs neither believed misstatements nor parted with money in reliance on them); DirectTV v. Cavanaugh, 321 F. Supp. 2d 825 (E.D. Mich. 2003) (denying fraud claim because consumer did not rely on demand letters by paying the amount demanded); Richards v. United Collections Bureau, 46 Conn. L. Rptr. 161 (Super. Ct. 2008) (reliance shown where consumer took out unaffordable subprime loan in response to collector's negligent misrepresentation that she could save her house only by going to specified loan broker). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Warranty Law § 11.4.3 (5th ed. 2015), updated at www.nclc.org/library (detailed discussion of negligent misrepresentation).

474 See, e.g., Tertiary Butyl Ether Prods. Liab. Litig., 175 F. Supp. 2d 593 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (summarizing elements in California, Illinois, and New York as agreement to participate in unlawful act or lawful act in unlawful means, and overt act performed in furtherance of scheme, causing injury). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 10.4.2.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

claims where collectors work with other parties to wrong the debtor.[475]

Extortion is a crime that can arise in the debt collection context—for example, when a collector uses a false threat of criminal prosecution to persuade someone to pay a disputed debt. Some courts recognize a private cause of action to remedy extortion.[476]

15.7.6 Other Potential Tort Claims

A few states, including Georgia, Louisiana, New Mexico, and Texas, recognize a tort action for unreasonable collection methods.[477] Kansas and Colorado recognize a cause of action

475 Gordon v. Bank of New York Mellon Corp., 964 F. Supp. 2d 937 (N.D. Ind. 2013) (refusing to dismiss civil conspiracy claim where lender caused property service to break into wrong person's home, steal personal property, and leave the house open to vandals); Coursen v. JP Morgan Chase & Co., 2012 WL 3055857 (M.D. Fla. July 25, 2012) (refusing to dismiss claim alleging that holder and servicer conspired to use sham documents and fabricated evidence to "manufacture a default"); Client Funding Solutions, Inc. v. Crim, 2012 WL 3017984 (N.D. Ill. July 23, 2012) (conspiracy between attorney and litigation lender sufficiently alleged: withholding settlement proceeds needed for medical bills and everyday living, to coerce accident victim to settle with litigation lender); Combs v. NCO Fin. Sys., 2011 WL 1288686 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 5, 2011) (claim stated for creditor's conspiracy with collector to violate FDCPA; concerted action shown where calls to creditors' number automatically connected with collector), order entered by 2011 WL 1288699 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 5, 2011); Nelson v. Am. Power & Light, 2010 WL 3219498 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 12, 2010) (landlord had agreement with electric company, allowing it to bring eviction action in landlord's name against tenants who did not pay electric bill, but non-payment of utilities was not grounds for eviction under tenant's lease; tenant stated claim for conspiracy between electric company and landlord); Quesenberry v. Alliant Law Group, P.C., 2010 WL 1189457 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 5, 2010) (meeting of minds sufficiently alleged; collector and law firm working together to violate state and federal debt collection statutes), adopted, 2010 WL 1189481 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 24, 2010); Capitol Records, Inc. v. Weed, 2008 WL 1820667 (D. Ariz. Apr. 27, 2008) (copyright action seeking monetary relief for unauthorized file sharing; allowing consumer to bring counterclaim for conspiracy: agreement between record company and private investigator to access computer files in violation of federal law); Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., 2002 WL 31618443 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 6, 2002) (creditor and collection attorney may be liable on civil conspiracy claim for harassment by process server they hired if they authorized or ratified server's tactics), later decision at 2006 WL 43770 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 3, 2006) (denying summary judgment; fact issue as to what lawyers told process server; must show agreement either to do an unlawful act, or to do a lawful act by unlawful means); Greenberg v. Pryszlak, 46 A.3d 591 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2012) (reversing summary judgment for defendants on civil conspiracy claim; fact issue whether garage owner conspired with state trooper to cause unlawful arrest of consumer who stopped payment on check during dispute over quality of repairs). But see Tate v. Sallie Mae, Inc., 2011 WL 3651813 (W.D.N.C. Aug. 19, 2011) (dismissing civil conspiracy claim because of intracorporate immunity rule; fact that individual collectors' compensation was based on results not a sufficient personal stake to defeat immunity); Born v. Hosto & Buchan, P.L.L.C., 2010 WL 2431063 (Ark. June 17, 2010) (no claim for alleged conspiracy between attorney and client). But cf. Kevelighan v. Trott & Trott, P.C., 771 F. Supp. 2d 763 (E.D. Mich. 2010) (must show underlying actionable tort; claim fails when all other surviving claims sound in contract); Gonzalez v. First Franklin Loan Serv., 2010 WL 144862 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 11, 2010) (must show common design, wrongful act, and that defendant personally owed duty that was breached; claim against lender fails because it owed no duty beyond those arising in contract); Daviscourt v. Columbia State Bank, 2008 WL 113899 (D. Colo. Jan. 9, 2008) (must show agreement to do wrongful act or to do lawful act by wrongful means; not shown where bank officer made one call to sheriff's office, asking when bench warrant would be served); Gros v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 525 F. Supp. 2d 1019 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (creditor knowingly sold nonexistent debt to debt buyer, but conspiracy claim fails because no evidence that buyer knew debt nonexistent). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 10.4.2.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library (general discussion of civil conspiracy).

476 Flatley v. Mauro, 139 P.3d 2 (Cal. 2006) (allowing claim for civil extortion to go forward; "pre-litigation demand" was attempt at extortion by false criminal accusation, in violation of criminal statute); Schiffman v. Knoll, 2019 WL 1254152 (Cal. Ct. App. Mar. 19, 2019) (unpublished) (California recognizes civil cause of action for extortion, but claim here barred by litigation privilege where it arose from threat to disparage defendant in another suit, in response to that party's attorney's threat to file malicious prosecution action); Duncan v. Ford Motor Credit, Repossessors, Inc., 2018 WL 3060265 (Iowa Ct. App. June 20, 2018) (consumer stated civil extortion claim against defendants who, after she paid full amount owed for return of repossessed vehicle, refused to turn it over unless she signed release absolving them of all liability); Becker v. Longinaker, 784 N.W.2D 202 (Iowa Ct. App. 2010) (affirming verdict, including punitive damages, for civil extortion; threat to commit theft shown where bank seized property of debtor and third party to which it had no right, to coerce payment of deficiency to which it was arguably not entitled). See also In re Prebul, 2011 WL 2947045 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. July 19, 2011) (civil conspiracy to commit extortion is actionable, but dismissing claim because of failure to allege resulting harm where debtor did not pay in response to defendants' extortion). But see Rodriguez v. Due Process of Mich., Inc., 2008 WL 4449651 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 30, 2008) (no private civil cause of action for extortion); Chapman v. Chase Manhattan Mortg. Co., 2007 WL 2815246 (N.D. Okla. Sept. 24, 2007) (no civil cause of action for extortion; even if there were, threat to exercise a legal right cannot be extortion). But cf. Rolle v. Law Office of Samuel Streeter, 2010 WL 729022 (D. Ariz. Mar. 2, 2010) (no civil cause of action for extortion when Arizona statute allowing tort recovery for certain crimes was unconstitutionally overbroad; statute has since been amended); State v. Rendelman, 947 A.2d 546 (Md. 2008) (threat of litigation, however meritless or bad faith, cannot be "wrongful threat of economic injury" or extortion, within meaning of Maryland criminal law).

477 GEORGIA: Dolanson Co. v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 251 S.E.2d 274 (Ga. 1978) (unreasonable bill-collection procedures, e.g., making false statements, threats, and harassing telephone calls, constitute actionable tortious wrong; but not shown here); Blazer Fin. Serv., Inc. v. Stewart, 233 S.E.2d 1 (Ga. Ct. App. 1977).

LOUISIANA: Hairford v. Centurytel, Inc., 856 So. 2d 139 (La. Ct. App. 2003) (a "debtor has a right to be free from unreasonable coercion and from unreasonable violations of his right to privacy in his personal affairs"). Cf. Carr v. Hibernia Nat'l Bank, 251 Fed. Appx. 855 (5th Cir. 2007) (creditor revived judgment against plaintiff's deceased father, improperly served her, and prosecuted the action for five years; where no coercive action except filing suit alleged, daughter failed to state a claim for unreasonable debt collection).

NEW MEXICO: Billsie v. Brooksbank, 525 F. Supp. 2d 1290 (D.N.M. 2007) (recognizing claim for unreasonable collection activity, closely related to invasion of privacy; consumer stated claim where lawyer garnished wages of wrong consumer and refused to return funds when mistake discovered).

TEXAS: Enis v. Bank of Am., 2012 WL 4741073 (N.D. Tex. Oct. 3, 2012) (harassing calls by mortgage servicer, multiple times a day between 8:00 a.m. and 11:00 p.m., continuing after requests to stop, for wrongful garnishment.[478] Georgia and Hawaii recognize a cause of action for wrongful foreclosure.[479]

Louisiana recognizes a tort cause of action for "abuse of rights" against a person who "attempts to exercise a legal right with the intention of harming or imposing a detriment upon another" if there is "(1) no benefit to the person exercising the legal right and (2) damage or injury to the person against whom the legal right is asserted."[480] It is a defense that the person has a "legitimate and serious interest in the exercise of the right."[481] Alabama recognizes a cause of action for wanton or intentional conduct,[482] although the plaintiff may also need to allege an underlying wrong.[483] The law of nuisance has been applied in at least one case of typical debt collection harassment.[484]

If a creditor or collector violates or misuses a contract term, it may be liable for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing.[485] Most courts treat such a violation as a are sufficient to state claim for common law unreasonable debt collection); MacAllister v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.L.P., 2011 WL 2200672 (E.D. Tex. Apr. 28, 2011) (homeowners barely stated claim: lender persistently failed to respond to questions about new payment amount, told them to continue paying old amount during investigation of problem, then initiated foreclosure based on homeowners' continued payment of old amount), adopted, 2011 WL 2183844 (E.D. Tex. June 6, 2011); Vanderbilt Mortg. & Fin., Inc. v. Flores, 746 F. Supp. 2d 819 (S.D. Tex. 2010) (must show more than simple negligence; vigorous efforts to collect debt known to be not owed are sufficient); Bray v. Cadle Co., 2010 WL 4053794 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 14, 2010) (must show a course of harassment; improper garnishment not sufficient); In re Davis, 377 B.R. 827 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 2007) ("collection efforts such as a person of ordinary care and prudence would not have used under the same or similar circumstances"; shown where seller of real property repeatedly refused to credit payments, threatened foreclosure, and demanded sums not due); EMC Mortg. Co. v. Jones, 252 S.W.3d 857 (Tex. App. 2008) (unreasonable collection shown where foreclosure sale took place "by accident" after loan modification agreed to and foreclosure canceled; affirming damages for past mental anguish, lost time, and damage to credit reputation). Cf. Davis v. Farm Bureau Bank, 2008 WL 1924247 (W.D. Tex. Apr. 30, 2008) (must show "efforts that amount to a course of harassment that was willful, wanton, malicious, and intended to inflict mental anguish and bodily harm"; not shown where creditor reported discharged debt as "charged off" but made no other collection efforts). But cf. Enis v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 1721961 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 22, 2013) (claim fails; telephone harassment that did not include threats of bodily injury not sufficient to show "a willful course of harassment intended to inflict both mental anguish and bodily harm"); Narvaez v. Wilshire Credit Corp., 757 F. Supp. 2d 621 (N.D. Tex. 2010) (misrepresentations of amount due, here charging for force-placed insurance on properly insured property, not sufficient to state claim).

478 Chavez v. Liberty Acquisitions Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 814631 (D. Colo. Mar. 2, 2016) (malice and lack of probable cause need not be shown for wrongful garnishment claim); Sigg v. Emert, 361 P.3d 523 (Kan. Ct. App. 2015). Cf. Maxwell v. St Francis Health Ctr., 2017 WL 4037732 (D. Kan. Sept. 3, 2017) (Kansas law allows cause of action for wrongful garnishment after the underlying judgment is set aside only if that judgment was fraudulently obtained; not shown here even though creditor's misstatements about debtor's military status violated the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 14.2.7 (4th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (tort and other remedies for wrongful or excessive wage garnishment); National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 14.5.7 (4th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (tort and other claims for wrongful seizure of debtor's bank account).

479 Galima v. Ass'n of Apt. Owners of Palm Court, 2017 WL 1240181 (D. Haw. Mar. 30, 2017) (Hawaii recognizes claim for wrongful foreclosure if foreclosing entity fails to comply with law and has no right to foreclose); Mbigi v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., 785 S.E.2d 8 (Ga. Ct. App. 2016) (inducing default and using it as basis for foreclosure).

480 In re Cigars, Cigarettes, etc., Inc., 399 B.R. 605 (Bankr. M.D. La. 2009).

481 Id. (legitimate and serious interest shown where supplier had delivered product, current plaintiff had quickly removed it to storage area, and supplier had not been paid).

482 Faulk v. Midland Funding, 2015 WL 5736103 (M.D. Ala. Sept. 30, 2015) (wantonness claim goes forward; debt buyer alleged to have brought action despite actual knowledge that debt was not owed); Raley v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 6684906 (N.D. Ala. Nov. 24, 2014) (consumer alleged recklessness sufficient to support wantonness claim; without investigating consumer's claim that debt was result of identity theft, bank sent 1099 forgiveness-of-debt form to IRS, resulting in large tax liability for consumer); Gustin v. Allied Interstate, 2014 WL 1923735 (N.D. Ala. May 13, 2014) (fact issue whether collection agency committed tort of wantonness where its collectors, whose pay included commissions, were induced to cut corners and disregard the FDCPA in order to maximize their earnings); Gamble v. Midland Funding, 2013 WL 979202 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 7, 2013) (harassment for debt known not to be owed will support a claim); Kamps v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 622505 (N.D. Ala. Feb. 19, 2013) (bringing suit on debt known not to be owed will support a claim); Champion v. Global Credit Card Serv., 2012 WL 3542225 (N.D. Ala. Aug. 15, 2012) (Alabama recognizes cause of action for "wantonness"; must show that "defendant acts or fails to act with a reckless or conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others, and is aware that harm will likely or probably result").

483 Gamble v. Midland Funding, 2013 WL 979202 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 7, 2013) (allowing claim for negligent, wanton, or intentional conduct to proceed where consumer sufficiently alleged invasion of privacy).

484 Wiggins v. Moskins Credit Clothing Store, 137 F. Supp. 764 (E.D.S.C. 1956) (invasion of landlady's proprietary interest in her home by repeated collection calls regarding tenant's debt may be "tantamount to a nuisance" and actionable). Cf. Janossy v. Washington Mut. Bank, 2002 WL 31031636 (Cal. Ct. App. Sept. 12, 2002) (tort of private nuisance requires interference with use and enjoyment of land, but rejecting debtors' contention that several collection calls per month to their home made it uninhabitable); Sofka v. Thal, 662 S.W.2d 502 (Mo. 1983) (private nuisance is a nontrespassory invasion of another's interest in the private use and enjoyment of land, but collection calls here were not sufficiently offensive). But see Klein v. Just Energy Group, Inc., 2015 WL 3407837 (W.D. Pa. May 27, 2015) (nuisance claim applies only for invasion of interest in real property). See generally Note, Commercial Nuisance: A Theory of Consumer Protection, 33 Chi. L. Rev. 590 (1966).

485 See, e.g., Quimby v. Caliber Home Loans, 2015 WL 3751511 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 22, 2015) (claim for breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing will apply if defendants mishandled escrow); Howard v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2014 WL 6802550 (S.D. Miss. Dec. 14, 2014) (egregious mishandling of mortgage servicing); Belsito Communications, Inc. v. Dell, Inc., 2013 WL 4860585 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 12, 2013) (duty of good faith and fair dealing may plausibly include a duty not to treat customer as delinquent when he is not—and certainly to take steps to correct the problem when it is pointed out); Girgis v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 733 F. Supp. 2d 835 (N.D. Ohio 2010) (must allege breach of contract with bad motive; here, failure to timely credit payments and imposition of unauthorized late fees in order to deprive borrowers of the benefits of the contract); Ihebereme v. Capital One, 730 F. Supp. 2d 40 (D.D.C. 2010) (lender's arbitrary and capricious behavior in making payment process more difficult and sabotaging refinancing, although contract claim rather than a tort claim, however, at least in the absence of a special relationship between the parties.[486]

15.7.7 Framing a Criminal Law Violation As a Tort Claim; Prima Facie Tort

Some states incorporate the duties created by statutes, particularly criminal statutes, into their tort law on a general basis,[487] so a violation of any criminal law restricting collection methods can the basis for a tort claim. For example, a civil claim might be based on a simulated process or criminal blackmail statute. Unfair or deceptive acts or practices (UDAP) statutes often provide another means of framing a cause of action for violation of a criminal law.[488] Even where civil damages are not available for the crime, commission of a crime is highly probative of elements of other torts.[489]

A "prima facie tort" claim may also be available for other gratuitously harmful conduct that fails to fit into the definition of an established tort. The elements of a prima facie tort are: (1) an intentional but otherwise lawful act; (2) intent to cause injury to plaintiff; (3) injury to plaintiff; and (4) absence of justification or insufficient justification for defendant's act.[490] This is, however, a "tort of last resort," and recovery not explicitly forbidden by contract, "evaded the spirit" of contract by making performance more difficult), aff'd, 573 Fed. Appx. 2 (D.C. Cir. 2014); LPP Mortg., Ltd. v. Prosper, 2008 WL 5272723 (D. V.I. Dec. 17, 2008) (allegation that lender foreclosed when borrowers were not in default is sufficient to state a claim); Morin v. Nationwide Fed. Credit Union, 2008 WL 5157740 (D. Conn. Dec. 8, 2008) (borrower stated claim against former employer's credit union that made false credit reports and repossessed vehicle without proper notice at a time when borrower was in acrimonious conflict with former employer; apparent default may have been result of credit union's manipulations); In re Laskowski, 384 B.R. 518 (Bankr. N.D. Ind. 2008) (debtor and bankruptcy trustee stated claim for breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing against mortgage company that failed to credit or account for trustee's timely chapter 13 payments); Mbigi v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., 785 S.E.2d 8 (Ga. Ct. App. 2016) (inducing default and then using it as basis for foreclosure can violate covenant); First Nat'l Bank v. Twombly, 689 P.2d 1226 (Mont. 1984) (commercial lender tortiously breached obligation not to accelerate payment of a debt except in good faith; punitive damages recoverable); Wright Safety Co. v. U.S. Bank, 2009 WL 4653550 (Ohio Ct. App. Dec. 9, 2009) (allegations that lender misapplied payments so as to create default and collect default interest, then sabotaged refinancing, sufficient to state claim). But see Coyer v. HSBC Mortg. Serv., Inc., 701 F.3d 1104 (6th Cir. 2012) (Michigan does not recognize claim for breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing). But cf. Himmelstein v. Comcast of the Dist., L.L.C., 908 F. Supp. 2d 49 (D.D.C. 2012) (breach of covenant requires showing of "a conscious and deliberate act, which unfairly frustrates the agreed common purposes"; must be more than "honest mistake, bad judgment or negligence"; not shown here where cable company persistently failed to correct erroneous charge); Pulver v. Avco Fin. Serv., 227 Cal. Rptr. 491 (Cal. Ct. App. 1986) (sustaining demurrer to claim of breach of good faith and fair dealing; refusing to imply covenant that lender would not damage borrower's credit rating and harass her to repay loan of her sister).

486 See, e.g., Donald Marshall Berlin v. Bank of Am., 2015 WL 1873219 (D.D.C. Apr. 24, 2015) (borrowers stated claim; bank "willfully rendered imperfect performance" when it stonewalled borrowers' efforts to comply with settlement agreement; noting that breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing is contract claim); Rapacki v. Chase Home Fin., 797 F. Supp. 2d 1085 (D. Or. 2011) (contract claim: no emotional distress, damage to reputation, or punitive damages available); Baldain v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing, Inc., 2010 WL 56143 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 5, 2010) (claim for breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing states a breach-of-contract claim, but tort claim fails because no special relationship between borrower and lender); Chapman v. Chase Manhattan Mortg. Co., 2007 WL 2815246 (N.D. Okla. Sept. 24, 2007) (no tort claim for violation of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in debtor-creditor context); UMLIC VP L.L.C. v. T.& M. Sales & Envtl. Sys., Inc., 176 S.W.3d 595 (Tex. App. 2005) (tort action for breach of good faith and fair dealing allowed only in contracts creating a special relationship, arising from shared trust or imbalance of bargaining power; lender-borrower or lender-guarantor relationship is not special, so only contract damages available for improper conduct of foreclosure sale). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Credit Regulation § 2.4.11 (2d ed. 2015), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Warranty Law § 11.3 (5th ed. 2015), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

487 See, e.g., Massey v. MBNA Am. Bank, 2005 WL 3099011 (W.D. Ky. Nov. 17, 2005) (where Kentucky has criminal statute forbidding telephone harassment, consumer may have cause of action under statute providing tort action for violation of statute). But cf. Heavrin v. Nelson, 384 F.3d 199, 203 (6th Cir. 2004) (Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 446.070 (West) does not abrogate the litigation privilege; no private right of action for perjury in a legal proceeding). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Automobile Fraud § 7.1 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

488 See generally § 16.3, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 3.2.7 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

489 See, e.g., Searle v. Harrah's Entertainment, Inc., 2010 WL 3928632 (Tenn. Ct. App. Oct. 6, 2010) (criminal extortion, here threat of arrest to induce debtor to pay same debt twice, meets outrageousness element for intentional infliction of emotional distress).

490 Jackson Cnty., Mo., ex rel. Nixon v. MERSCORP, Inc., 915 F. Supp. 2d 1064 (W.D. Mo. 2013) (must show act committed with "specific, clear-cut, express malicious intent to injure," injury to plaintiff, and insufficient justification for defendant's act; intent to injure county not shown where MERS sought to save money by not recording certain transfers); Util. Metal Research v. Coleman, 2008 WL 850456 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 28, 2008) (must show: (1) intentional infliction of harm; (2) special damages; (3) absence of excuse or justification; (4) by an act or series of acts that would otherwise have been lawful; must show "disinterested malevolence"; not shown where creditor was trying to collect lawful debt); In re Borges, 485 B.R. 743 (Bankr. D.N.M. 2012) (very limited cause of action; must show acts committed with intent to injure plaintiff, and without justification; not shown here where all lender's actions were permitted by loan agreement or by statute); Cridlebaugh v. Putnam County State Bank of Milan, 192 S.W.3d 540 (Mo. Ct. App. 2006) (refusing to release deed of trust until homeowners paid off granddaughter's debt for which they were not liable was inequitable but did not show the actual malice—that is, an intent to cause injury—required to support claim of prima facie tort); Michaels v. MVP Health Care, Inc., 91 N.Y.S.3d 567 (N.Y. App. Div. 2018) (elements are: "(1) the intentional infliction of harm, (2) which results in special damages, (3) without any excuse or justification, (4) by an act or series of acts which would otherwise be lawful. In addition, there can be no recovery under this theory unless malevolence is the sole motive for defendant's otherwise lawful act or, in other words, unless defendant acts from disinterested malevolence;" sufficiently alleged is rare.[491] It may be unavailable in the debt collection context, because some states require a showing of "disinterested malevolence"—that is, conduct for the sole purpose of causing injury—so the claim will fail if a pecuniary or business motive exists.[492]

15.7.8 Tort Claims Against Governmental Entities

Where state officials are involved, a tort claim may be cast as a civil rights violation.[493] Ordinary tort actions against governmental creditors will, however, raise special problems: the consent to suit found in state tort claims acts generally excludes certain collection activities, such as tax collection, and the complexities of municipal liability law are beyond the scope of this treatise.[494] here where insurer gave wrong advice to insurance broker, then filed complaint, resulting in criminal prosecution, when he acted on that advice); Aurora Loan Serv. v. Grant, 851 N.Y.S.2d 56 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2007) (prima facie tort claim fails in absence of particularized statement of special damages). See also Amaya v. Bregman, 149 F. Supp. 3d 1312 (D.N.M. Dec. 16, 2015) (criteria for lack of justification similar to those for lack of probable cause or misuse of process in malicious abuse-of-process action).

491 Hinten v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5739035 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 22, 2013) (dismissing prima facie tort claim for debt collection abuses because there is a recognized tort available to remedy this wrong); Cosmas v. Am. Express Centurion Bank, 757 F. Supp. 2d 489 (D.N.J. 2010) (dismissing prima facie tort claim because it is a gap filler tort and will not lie where facts alleged would support claim of slander of credit or negligence, even though negligence claim was barred by FCRA preemption); Marseglia v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 750 F. Supp. 2d 1171 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (tort in se claim fails because Rosenthal Act provides private civil remedy); Chaconas v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 713 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (S.D. Cal. 2010) ("tort in se" claim unavailable because statutes, here state and federal debt collection acts, provide a remedy for the conduct in question); Michaels v. MVP Health Care, Inc., 91 N.Y.S.3d 567 (N.Y. App. Div. 2018) (claim will fail if plaintiff prevails on malicious prosecution claim). But see Weakley v. Redline Recovery Serv., L.L.C., 723 F. Supp. 2d 1341 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (allowing tort in se claim to go forward, even though consumer also stated claims for invasion of privacy and Rosenthal Act violations).

492 Williams v. Atlantic Law Group, L.L.C., 2016 WL 1253652 (D. Del. Mar. 30, 2016) (disinterested malevolence not shown; law firm, seeking to collect sum not owed, was motivated by desire to advance its client's interests and earn a fee); Schoolcraft v. City of New York, 133 F. Supp. 3d 563, 568–569 (S.D.N.Y. 2015) (must show "disinterested malevolence"; showing of pecuniary motive will defeat prima facie tort claim).

493 See § 14.11, supra.

494 In re Larsen v. Chinwuba, 832 A.2d 193 (Md. 2003) (sovereign immunity protected insurance commissioner from defamation and false light claims, even though statements made to media while investigating solvency of health maintenance organizations arguably violated insurance code); Smith v. A.B. Bonded Locksmith, 757 N.E.2d 1242 (Ohio Ct. App. 2001) (Ohio statute provides immunity for bailiff and locksmith acting under bailiff's orders who entered consumer's mother's home, where consumer no longer resided, to serve a valid repossession order; consumer could prove nothing worse than negligence). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 10.2.14 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (remedies for abusive debt collection by federal government); § 14.11, supra (section 1983 claims).

15.8 Attorney's Liability to Third Parties for Collection Negligence and Other Torts

Collection attorneys can be held liable under the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act to debtors against whom they prosecute claims.[495] Attorneys can also generally be held liable to opposing parties for intentional torts,[496] but common law rules may insulate the attorney from liability to consumers for damages caused by negligent debt collection acts.[497] Thus, a

495 See § 4.7.3.3, supra.

496 See, e.g., Rapid Circuits, Inc. v. Sun Nat'l Bank, 2011 WL 1666919 (E.D. Pa. May 3, 2011) (must allege intentional torts, committed with intent to injure; sufficiently alleged where creditor and attorneys used defamation and intentional interference with contract in effort to drive debtor out of business), order entered by 2011 WL 1667917 (E.D. Pa. May 3, 2011); Murungi v. Mercedes Benz Credit Corp., 2001 WL 649747 (E.D. La. June 11, 2001) (no immunity for "intentionally tortious actions, ostensibly performed for a client's benefit"); Carney v. Rotkin, Schmerin & McIntyre, 254 Cal. Rptr. 478 (Cal. Ct. App. 1988) (reversing dismissal of intentional infliction of emotional distress claims against attorney who falsely told elderly debtor that bench warrant had been issued for her arrest); Fox v. Pollack, 226 Cal. Rptr. 532 (Cal. Ct. App. 1986) (attorney has no duty to protect interest of adverse party, but can be subjected to liability for torts such as malicious prosecution); Thornwood, Inc. v. Jenner & Block, 799 N.E.2d 756 (Ill. App. Ct. 2003) ("actively aiding and abetting" a client's tortious conduct sufficiently alleged in complex real estate case); Mapother & Mapother, P.S.C. v. Douglas, 750 S.W.2d 430 (Ky. 1988) (creditor's attorney may be liable to non-client for intentional torts in the nature of abuse of process or malicious prosecution, but not for negligence); Ulmer v. Frisard, 694 So. 2d 1046 (La. Ct. App. 1997) (litigant had no cause of action against adversary's attorney except for "intentionally tortious" actions; creditors' attorney's vigorous attacks on debtors' bankruptcy discharge showed, at worst, "the acrimonious nature of the litigation"); Banco Popular N. Am. v. Gandi, 876 A.2d 253 (N.J. 2005) (attorney liable to adverse party for civil conspiracy if attorney knowingly counsels and assists client with fraudulent transfers; liable for misrepresentations if adverse party is intended to, and does rely, on statements during negotiations); Korn v. Ellyn M. Epstein & DeSimone Reporting Group, 727 A.2d 1130 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1999) (malicious prosecution). See also Taylor v. McNichols, 243 P.3d 642, 658 (Idaho 2010) (litigation privilege is absolute and generally protects attorney from liability to opposing party for acts or communication when the attorney is acting as a representative and not for his or her own interests; here, privilege bars claims for civil conspiracy and tortious interference with contract); Cantey Hangar, L.L.P. v. Byrd, 467 S.W.3d 477 (Tex. 2015) (attorney is immune from liability to opposing party for acts that are part of duties of an attorney, even if fraudulent, but not for acts such as assault that are foreign to those duties). Cf. Hahn v. Satullo, 806 N.E.2d 567 (Ohio Ct. App. 2004) (in absence of malice, attorney has no liability to opposing party for invasion of privacy). See generally § 15.1.3.1, supra.

497 Wyant v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2014 WL 3446633 (W.D. La. June 10, 2014) (foreclosure attorney liable to debtor only for intentional, tortious conduct; misstatements insufficient unless attorney knew they were false); Cingolani v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 2012 WL 3029829 (E.D. Mich. July 25, 2012) (attorney representing lender in foreclosure action owes duty only to lender, not to borrower; negligence claim fails); Lane v. Fein, Such & Crane, L.L.P., 767 F. Supp. 2d 382 (E.D.N.Y. 2011) (negligence insufficient; must allege fraud, collusion or a malicious or tortious act); Finserv Cas. Corp. v. Settlement Funding, L.L.C., 724 F. Supp. 2d 662 (S.D. Tex. 2010) (lawyer has qualified immunity for act such as supervising seizure pursuant to writ of execution that is normal part of lawyer's duties, even collection attorney who negligently files suit against or levies on the home of the wrong John Smith may be insulated from tort liability for negligence. Some states codify this protection.[498] A Minnesota statute that authorizes treble damages for attorney misconduct requires a showing of intentional fraud or deceit.[499]

One of the primary impediments found in common law to negligence claims has been the lack of privity between the attorney and the victim. This requirement of privity of contract has been attacked in general as outmoded,[500] and a number of cases recognize that a non-client who was an intended beneficiary of the lawyer's services can sue the lawyer for negligence.[501]

A few courts have gone further and recognized the right of an adverse party to sue an attorney for negligence. In a California case,[502] an attorney falsely informed an older widow that a warrant had been issued for her arrest. The attorney claimed that there could be no claim for negligence because the widow was an adverse party and he did not owe her a duty of care. The court rejected this claim, finding a duty of care in the statutory obligation of attorneys as officers of the court to deal honestly and fairly with adverse parties and counsel.

Another rule that protects attorneys is the adverse party rule. Many of the state privity cases involve suits by a former adverse litigant against the opponent's attorney for negligently bringing an unfounded claim. The courts generally hold that the adverse party's claim must contain all the elements of malicious prosecution:[503] intent, lack of probable cause, success in the terminated litigation, and malice.[504] Limiting adverse parties to malicious prosecution claims serves such public policies as the lawyer's duty to zealously represent a client, finality of judgments without retaliatory suits, access to courts free of retaliation, and parties' responsibility for their own attorney fees.[505] These policy concerns are not present when the plaintiff is not a former adverse party but merely a bystander harmed by the attorney's negligence.

One case held that the adverse party rule only protected attorneys' activities which required "the office, professional training, skill and authority of an attorney." Thus, where a judgment creditor's attorney accompanied the federal marshals who went to seize a debtor's property, inspected the non-debtor wife's intimate personal property, and prevented her from leaving the house, a court allowed the wife's claims of invasion of privacy and intentional infliction of emotional distress to go to trial. The court reasoned that the collection attorney's special skills were not necessary to help the marshals serve the writ, nor was she authorized to bar the wife from leaving the premises.[506]

---

if underlying action was frivolous, or lawyer was negligent in determining ownership of property seized; privilege lost only by intentional fraud or by tort "tangentially related" to case, for example, assaulting the other party); Karony v. Dollar Loan Ctr., L.L.C., 2010 WL 5186065 (D. Nev. Dec. 15, 2010) (professional negligence claim will not lie where consumer had no contractual professional relationship with creditor's attorney); Bertwell v. Allstate Ins. Co., 2008 WL 304735 (D.S.C. Jan. 31, 2008) (attorney liable to third party only for violation of "independent duty" owed to third party, or activity by lawyer for his or her own benefit); Jones v. Bass, 343 F. Supp. 2d 1066 (D. Wyo. 2004) (attorney owes no duty of care to adverse party), aff'd, 149 Fed. Appx. 764 (10th Cir. 2005 Mapother & Mapother, P.S.C. v. Douglas, 750 S.W.2d 430 (Ky. 1988) (creditor's attorney may be liable to non-client for intentional torts in the nature of abuse of process or malicious prosecution, but not for negligence). But cf. Banco Popular N. Am. v. Gandi, 876 A.2d 253 (N.J. 2005) (lender stated claims for both negligent and intentional misrepresentation against attorney who assisted borrower and guarantor in series of fraudulent transfers, then misrepresented guarantor's financial condition in opinion letter on which he knew lender would rely); Newman v. Upton, Cohen & Slamowitz, 781 N.Y.S.2d 508 (App. Div. 2004) (attorney liable to third persons only for affirmative acts of negligence; not shown by collection suit where plaintiff had not disputed debt in response to firm's collection letter). See generally Dan B. Dobbs, Paul T. Hayden and Eileen M. Bubeck, The Law of Torts, vol. 4, ch. 55, § 725, at 40–42 (2d ed. 2011); Ronald E. Mallen & Jeffrey M. Smith, Legal Malpractice § 6.1 (2017); Joan Teshima, Annotation, Attorney's Liability, to One Other Than Immediate Client, for Negligence in Connection with Legal Duties, 61 A.L.R.4th 615 (1988); Joan Teshima, Annotation, What Constitutes Negligence Sufficient to Render Attorney Liable to Person Other Than Immediate Client, 61 A.L.R.4th 464 (1988).

498 See, e.g., Ark. Code Ann. § 16-22-310. See also Born v. Hosto & Buchan, P.L.L.C., 372 S.W.3d 324 (Ark. 2010) (noting that statute does not immunize attorney from liability for fraud, other intentional torts, or negligent hiring and supervision, but finding these claims barred on other grounds; statute bars abuse-of-process claim based on filing of time-barred suit). See generally § 15.1.3.1, supra.

499 Minn. Stat. § 481.071. See Hemmingson v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2011 WL 494941 (D. Minn. Feb. 7, 2011) (fraud or deceit not sufficiently alleged), aff'd on other grounds, 674 F.3d 814 (8th Cir. 2012).

500 Dan B. Dobbs, Paul T. Hayden and Eileen M. Bubeck, The Law of Torts, vol. 4, ch. 55, § 725, at 36–38 (2d ed. 2011).

501 See, e.g., Sparks v. Craft, 75 F.3d 257 (6th Cir. 1996) (attorney may be liable under Kentucky law for damage caused by negligence to a person intended to be benefited by attorney's services regardless of lack of privity); Lucas v. Hamm, 364 P.2d 685 (Cal. 1961) (beneficiaries of will against testator's attorney); Morales v. Field, DeGolf, Huppert & MacGowan, 160 Cal. Rptr. 239 (Cal. Ct. App. 1979) (beneficiaries of trust against trustor's lawyer); Donaly v. Garry, 97 Cal. Rptr. 191 (Cal. Ct. App. 1979) (lender against collection agency's attorney). But see Born v. Hosto & Buchan, P.L.L.C., 372 S.W.3d 324, 332–333 (Ark. 2010) (Ark. Code Ann. § 16-22-310, which exempts lawyers from liability to third parties with whom they are not in privity, except for certain intentional torts, bars negligence claims).

502 Carney v. Rotkin, Schmerin & McIntyre, 254 Cal. Rptr. 478 (Cal. Ct. App. 1988). See also Fox v. Pollack, 226 Cal. Rptr. 532 (Cal. Ct. App. 1986) (attorney has no duty to protect interest of adverse party, but implying that negligent misrepresentation claim might be recognized on other facts).

503 Dan B. Dobbs, Paul T. Hayden and Eileen M. Bubeck, The Law of Torts, vol. 4, ch. 55, § 725, at 40–42 (2d ed. 2011). But see Gigli v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2008 WL 3823295 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 14, 2008) (no negligence cause of action against adversary's lawyer, even though consumer here stated claim for violation of Dragonetti Act, which combines elements of malicious prosecution and abuse of process).

504 See § 15.6, supra.

505 Dan B. Dobbs, Paul T. Hayden and Eileen M. Bubeck, The Law of Torts, vol. 4, ch. 55, § 725, at 40–42 (2d ed. 2011).

506 Miller v. Stonehenge/FASA-Texas, 993 F. Supp. 461 (N.D. Tex. 1998). See also Cantey Hangar, L.L.P. v. Byrd,467 S.W.3d 477 (Tex. 2015) (non-debt collection case; attorney is immune from liability to opposing party for acts that are part of duties of an attorney, even if fraudulent, but not for acts such as assault that are foreign to those duties).

courts have ruled that an adverse party y for breach of ethical rules,[507] such a determining whether the attorney has t, such as abuse of process.[508]

of Principals, Officers

creditor for acts of a collection agency, s inadequate capital, should always be bility generally turns on the level of concised over the collector's activities.[509] A creditor may also be liable for negligently hiring a collector, even if the collector is an independent contractor.[510]

In addition, a creditor or collector is liable for the wrongful acts of its employees in the course of their employment.[511] Even a clearly forbidden act—for example, assault and battery—may give rise to liability if it was a wrong way of doing an authorized task or an emotional reaction to work done for the employer.[512] Personal liability of the officers of a collection agency will

.3, infra.
.2d 271 (N.J. 1998).
Mortg. Ass'n, 641 Fed. Appx. 438 (5th Cir. 2016)
e whether Fannie Mae exercised enough supervision
C to create an agency relationship, making it liable ordon v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon Corp., 2017 WL 662856
017) (fact issues as to property service's control over ent contractors who secured or cleared out proper-Dean & Assoc., 2011 WL 2746847 (S.D. Fla. July 14, ble for independent contractor collector's common ons of state debt collection statute, if collector was pparent authority to take the actions complained of); Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 1200949 (D. Or.
t issues whether debt buyer liable for egregious mis-r it hired; issues whether debt buyer knew debt was her it either intended, or at least understood, that mis-ur); Freeman v. CAC Fin., Inc., 2006 WL 925609 (S.D.
06) (card issuer who hired collector will be liable for duct if it was negligent in hiring collector, exercised show agency, or knew how collector was conducting
v. Horton Bros. Recovery, Inc., 2005 WL 736681 (D.
5) (allowing state tort claims arising from attempted forward against seller; fact issue whether repossessor pendent contractor); Spencer v. Hendersen-Webb, Inc., (D. Md. 1999) (fact issue whether collector was cred-

(E.D. Tex. 2007) (original creditor not vicariously liable for assignee's misconduct in absence of evidence that it controlled assignee or knew what assignee was doing, or that assignee had apparent authority to act for creditor); Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp. v. Lamar, 2006 WL 2422903 (N.D. Ohio, Aug. 22, 2006) (law firm not vicariously liable for assault and intentional infliction of emotional distress by process server, who was independent contractor; no evidence of firm's right to control his method of carrying out duties), aff'd on other grounds, 503 F.3d 504 (6th Cir. 2007); Pourny v. Maui Police Dep't, 127 F. Supp. 2d 1129 (D. Haw. 2000) (creditor not vicariously liable for actions of independent contractor process server where it neither ordered him to do acts complained of, nor was negligent in hiring him); Craig v. Andrew Aaron & Assoc., 947 F. Supp. 208 (D.S.C. 1996) (creditor not liable for collector's actions, where it did not know what collector was going to do, and terminated contract with collection agency as soon as it learned of misconduct); Taylor v. Gelfand, 505 S.E.2d 222 (Ga. Ct. App. 1998) (creditor would not be liable, in the absence of evidence that it authorized, knew of, or ratified lawyer's allegedly tortious actions). See generally Restatement (Second) of Agency § 245 (1958); 15A Am. Jur. 2d Collection and Credit Agencies § 2 (2011); 6 Am. Jur. 2d Assault and Battery §§ 100 to 110 (2008); W.E. Shipley, Annotation, Liability for Assault by Employee in Collecting Debt, 22 A.L.R.2d 1227 (1952); National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 13.10.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (liability of creditor for acts of repossessors); § 2.9, supra.

510 Freeman v. CAC Fin., Inc., 2006 WL 925609 (S.D. Miss. Mar. 31, 2006) (credit card issuer who hired collector will be liable for collector's misconduct if it was negligent in hiring collector, it exercised enough control to show agency, or it knew how collector was conducting itself); corporate structure and the extent of an offi-nvolvement in the tort.[513]

.W.3d 361 (Ky. 2005) (dealership liable for action of fired gun at tires as consumer drove away; action was ıployment because purpose was to further employer's to repossess the vehicle); Soon Phat, L.P. v. Alvarado, (Tex App. 2013) (towing company liable for driver's use ırce). But cf. Berhow v. People's Bank, 423 F. Supp. 2d .. 2006) (bank officer not acting in course of his employ- stole from customers; no vicarious liability); Henderson lio, Inc., 506 S.W.2d 434 (Mo. 1974) (employer not liable s assault and battery because it was unforeseeable and scope of employment); Spitsin v. WGN Transp., Inc., 97 Super. Ct. 2014) (cab company not liable for actions of verely beat passenger who did not pay fare).

Due Process of Mich., Inc., 2008 WL 4449651 (E.D. 0, 2008) (fact issue as to supervisor's respondeat superior liability for fraud and false imprisonment, where process servers misrepresented selves as law enforcement, and one process server called "our boss" for advice during the incident); Dillon v. Select Portfolio Servicing, 2008 WL 227229 (D.N.H. Jan. 28, 2008) (failed to state claim against majority stockholder of corporate tortfeasor; no showing whether stockholder had knowledge of wrongdoing or power to prevent it); Fleming-Dudley v. Legal Investigations, Inc., 2007 WL 952026 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 22, 2007) (dismissing claim against owner and shareholder without prejudice; control not enough; liability only in "true veil-piercing" situation); Norton v. Collectronics, Inc., 2004 WL 238808 (Cal. Ct. App. Feb. 10, 2004) (collection agency chief executive officer who controlled the various corporate entities and "participated in all relevant decisions" could be personally liable). See Dobbyn, A Practical Approach to Consistency in Veil-Piercing Cases, 19 U. Kan. L. Rev. 185 (1971). See also § 11.4.4, supra; National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

Chapter 16 Other State Remedies

16.1 Introduction

16.1.1 Benefits of State Statutory Claims

This chapter summarizes state claims (other than tort actions for damages) for abusive collection practices. It provides only a starting point for explaining these remedies: local law varies and must be researched separately.

In many states, the state remedies described in this chapter provide powerful sanctions for abusive debt collection practices and should be closely examined. These state remedies are particularly significant because many provide causes of action with statutes of limitations that are longer than the FDCPA's one-year period.[1] Many extend to creditors collecting their own debts, so fill the most significant gap in the FDCPA. They may also apply to debt buyers without the need to prove the principal purpose of the debt buyer's business.[2] These state claims also allow the debtor to litigate the case in state court, if that is perceived as a better forum than federal court.[3]

This chapter first examines state debt collection laws. It then turns to the application of the general standards of state unfair and deceptive acts and practices (UDAP) statutes to abusive debt collection. (For purposes of this chapter, statutes that contain specific debt collection restrictions are treated as debt collection statutes, even if they are codified in the state UDAP statute.)

The chapter then analyzes state credit repair organization statutes and state restrictions on unethical and unauthorized practice of law. It concludes with brief examinations of criminal prosecution, injunctive relief, and other state limitations on debt collection.

16.1.2 Preemption Issues

The FDCPA does not preempt state statutory claims unless they are inconsistent with it.[4] A consumer can recover statutory damages under both the FDCPA and a state debt collection statute.[5] Nothing in the FDCPA prevents a state from, as a matter of state law, applying its prohibitions to entities that the FDCPA does not cover.[6]

In general, the National Bank Act (NBA), the Home Owners Loan Act (HOLA), and the regulations under these statutes do

1 See, e.g., Hoffman v. Transworld Systems, 2020 WL 1314399 (9th Cir. Mar. 19, 2020) (Washington Consumer Protection Act claim, asserting that certain FDCPA violations were per se CPA violations, is governed by CPA's four-year statute of limitations); Currier v. PDL Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 712887 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 23, 2017) (Michigan debt collection act claims are covered by six-year catch-all statute of limitations); Hagy v. Detmers & Adams, L.L.C., 2013 WL 434053 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 5, 2013) (granting consumer judgment on UDAP claim even though FDCPA claim is time-barred); Purnell v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2009 WL 1508340 (E.D. Mich. May 29, 2009) (six-year statute of limitations applies to Michigan Collection Practices Act claim that does not have traditional common-law counterpart); Harrington v. CACV of Colorado, L.L.C., 508 F. Supp. 2d 128 (D. Mass. 2007) (allowing UDAP claims, which are subject to four-year statute of limitations, to proceed even though parallel FDCPA claims were time-barred); Riker-Vanholland v. Transouth Fin. Corp., 2004 WL 1083260 (N.D. Iowa May 7, 2004) (pro se consumer could state claim under state debt collection act, even though her other claims were either time-barred or otherwise deficient; state statute, which does not specify limitations period, is "action not otherwise provided for" with five-year limitations period); Kouabo v. Chevy Chase Bank, 336 F. Supp. 2d 471 (D. Md. 2004) (FDCPA claim time-barred, but Maryland claim timely); Petrolito v. Arrow Fin. Services, 221 F.R.D. 303 (D. Conn. 2004) (certifying two subclasses—FDCPA and Connecticut UDAP—because Connecticut statute has longer limitations period than FDCPA); Fuller v. Becker & Poliakoff, P.A., 192 F. Supp. 2d 1361, 1365 (M.D. Fla. 2002) (FDCPA and state subclasses in class action, because Florida statute has four-year and FDCPA one-year statute of limitations); Tenuto v. Transworld Sys., 2000 WL 1470213 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 29, 2000) (splitting class action into subclasses; subclass members who received letters within four years have claims under Pennsylvania statute, even though FDCPA claims are time-barred); Watkins v. Peterson Enters., Inc., 57 F. Supp. 2d 1102 (E.D. Wash. 1999) (state debt collection statute probably subject to three-year statute of limitations, so would reach acts barred under FDCPA). See also § 16.3.3, infra.

2 See § 4.7.2.2, supra (issues regarding FDCPA coverage of debt buyers).

3 See, e.g., Nevada v. Bank of Am. Corp., 672 F.3d 661 (9th Cir. 2012) (no federal question jurisdiction over attorney general's suit even though it raised claim under state UDAP statute that borrowed FDCPA substantive standards); Ortega v. HomEq Servicing, 2010 WL 383368 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 25, 2010) (state debt collection claim cannot be removed to federal court even if state law incorporates FDCPA substantive provisions); Dean v. Compass Receivables Mgmt., Corp., 148 F. Supp. 2d 116 (D. Mass. 2001) (debt collection case cannot be removed to federal court if plaintiff pleads only UDAP claims). See also West Virginia ex rel. McGraw v. Fast Auto Loans, Inc., 918 F. Supp. 2d 551 (N.D. W. Va. 2013) (remanding to state court action by attorney general alleging debt collection harassment directed to consumers in West Virginia, in effort to collect auto title loans lawfully entered into in Virginia, on ground that claims under West Virginia debt collection statute did not arise under federal law and parties were not diverse).

4 Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055 (9th Cir. 2011); Dean v. Compass Receivables Mgmt., Corp., 148 F. Supp. 2d 116 (D. Mass. 2001). See also Som v. Daniels Law Offices, P.C. 573 F. Supp. 2d 349 (D. Mass. 2008) (FDCPA does not preempt Mass. UDAP statute). Cf. Codar v. Arizona, 1996 WL 471335 (9th Cir. Aug. 19, 1996) (Arizona debt collector licensure statute is preempted only to extent it prevents out-of-state collector from sending FDCPA-required notices to in-state debtors).

5 Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055 (9th Cir. 2011).

6 Pirouzian v. SLM Corp., 396 F. Supp. 2d 1124 (S.D. Cal. 2005) (state statute's broader definition of collector to include creditors is not inconsistent with FDCPA); Alkan v. CitiMortgage, 336 F. Supp. 2d 1061 (N.D. Cal. 2004) (state statute may cover creditors even though FDCPA does not).

not preempt state debt collection or UDAP statutes.[7] Prior to the passage of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act[8] in 2010, some courts held that federal banking laws preempted the application to mortgage servicers of state debt collection statutes' restrictions on contacting represented consumers.[9] Courts—even the court that issued the leading decision taking the contrary position[10]—have now abandoned that view in light of the Dodd-Frank Act.[11] That Act clarified that the preemptive effect of federal banking laws is significantly narrower than the federal banking agencies had asserted. Preemption under the NBA and HOLA is discussed in detail in NCLC's Mortgage Lending Ch. 5 (3d ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

The federal bankruptcy laws may preempt state debt collection statutes when they are applied to acts taken by a creditor in the context of a debtor's bankruptcy case.[12] However, claims that do not depend on bankruptcy law, and that are based on debt collection activities that occur after the bankruptcy case is closed, will not be preempted.[13] The exclusive remedy provisions of Medicare law may bar claims arising from attempts to collect Medicare liens.[14]

The Eleventh Circuit has held that the Higher Education Act (HEA) does not preempt state debt collection laws when they do not prevent the collector from taking the steps mandated by the Department of Education.[15] Thus, federal law did not

7 Barzelis v. Flagstar Bank, 784 F.3d 971 (5th Cir. 2015) (HOLA does not preempt state debt collection statute's prohibition of threats to take illegal action, unauthorized fees, mischaracterizing a debt, and other deceptive means); Boerner v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 358 F. Supp. 3d 767 (E.D. Wis. Jan. 8, 2019) (Wisconsin debt collection statute is not preempted by federal banking regulations); Commonwealth of Pa. v. Think Fin., Inc., 2016 WL 183289 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 14, 2016) (federal banking laws do not preempt state debt collection and UDAP claims against non-bank entity that engaged in "rent-a-bank" scheme to evade state usury and debt collection laws; non-bank defendant was the "de facto" lender); Pariscoff v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 2013 WL 3776589 (S.D. Ohio July 16, 2013); Lenhart v. Everbank, 2013 WL 5745602 (S.D. W. Va. Oct. 23, 2013) (pre-Dodd-Frank criteria; West Virginia statute forbidding contact with debtor known to be represented not preempted by HOLA); Moore v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2013 WL 3965313 (D. Or. Aug. 1, 2013) (application of UDAP statute's prohibition of unfair and deceptive practices to national bank is not preempted); Duran v. Wells Fargo Bank, 878 F. Supp. 2d 1312 (S.D. Fla. 2012) (NBA does not preempt state debt collection statute); Sacco v. Bank of Am., 2012 WL 6566681 (W.D.N.C. Dec. 17, 2012); Robinson v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2012 WL 12855469, at *10–11 (N.D. Tex. July 19, 2012) (applying pre-Dodd-Frank-Act rule; state laws prohibiting repeated debt collection telephone calls and threats to take actions prohibited by law are not preempted); Cline v. Bank of Am., 823 F. Supp. 2d 387 (S.D. W. Va. 2011) (collection of car loan; West Virginia statute forbidding harassment and abuse not preempted); Smith v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 769 F. Supp. 2d 1033, 1046 (S.D. W. Va. 2011) (interpreting pre-Dodd-Frank-Act statute and rule; claim that bank committed debt collection violation by breaching loan modification agreement, foreclosing, and sending foreclosure notices when homeowner was not in default is not preempted; preemption is not implicated just because a broad debt collection statute "happens to ensnare certain practices of national banks"); Lucia v. Wells Fargo Bank, 798 F. Supp. 2d 1059 (N.D. Cal. 2011) (holding claim not preempted, but dismissing on other grounds), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Corvello v. Wells Fargo Bank, 728 F.3d 878 (9th Cir. 2013) (finding state debt collection statute applicable and reversing dismissal of debt collection claim); Watkins v. Wells-Fargo Bank, 2011 WL 777895 (S.D. W. Va. Feb. 28, 2011) (National Bank Act and OCC regulations do not preempt West Virginia debt collection claim alleging that bank sought to collect debt that had been voided pursuant to settlement agreement); Bishop v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2010 WL 4115463 (S.D. W. Va. Oct. 19, 2010) (HOLA does not preempt claim based on demand for late fees that were not authorized by contract, although it preempts state laws that would place substantive limits on those fees); Alkan v. CitiMortgage, 336 F. Supp. 2d 1061 (N.D. Cal. 2004); Bate v. Wells Fargo Bank (In re Bate), 454 B.R. 869 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2011) (Florida debt collection act, which forbids telephone harassment and direct contact with represented debtor, applies generally to all creditors, and does not interfere with the business of banking; not preempted by National Bank Act); Hood v. Santa Barbara Bank & Trust, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 369, 382–383 (Cal. Ct. App. 2007) (federal banking laws do not preempt application of California debt collection statute to national banks and thrifts); Chevy Chase Bank v. McCamant, 512 S.E.2d 217 (W. Va. 1998). See also Tielke v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 3753968 (S.D. Tex. July 12, 2013) (NBA does not preempt Texas Debt Collection Act provision forbidding telephone harassment, but consumers here failed to sufficiently allege TDCA claims), rev'd on other grounds, 581 Fed. Appx. 408 (5th Cir. 2014) (reversing conclusion that TDCA claims were not sufficiently alleged). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Mortgage Lending §§ 5.8.4.6, 5.14.4.3, 5.14.4.4 (3d ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library (detailed discussion of banking agency preemption and its application to debt collection).

8 Pub. L. No. 111-203, 124 Stat. 1376 (July 21, 2010).

9 See, e.g., Padgett v. OneWest Bank, 2010 WL 1539839 (N.D. W. Va. Apr. 19, 2010) (HOLA preempts claim based on contact with represented debtor; note that in O'Neal v. Capital One Auto Fin., Inc., 2011 WL 4549148 (N.D. W. Va. Sept. 29, 2011), this judge abandoned this view); Lomax v. Bank of Am., 435 B.R. 362 (N.D. W. Va. 2010).

10 Meluzio v. Capital One Bank, 469 B.R. 250 (N.D. W. Va. 2012) (repudiating earlier view that federal banking laws preempted state restriction on contacting represented debtors).

11 Tinsley v. OneWest Bank, 2014 WL 3700456 (S.D. W. Va. July 24, 2014); Meluzio v. Capital One Bank, 469 B.R. 250 (N.D. W. Va. 2012); O'Neal v. Capital One Auto Fin., Inc., 2011 WL 4549148 (N.D. W. Va. Sept. 29, 2011) (concluding that its earlier decisions finding this state law preempted were wrongly decided); In re Pryor, 479 B.R. 694 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 2012) (treating Dodd-Frank Act as clarifying existing law; holding that NBA and implementing regulations do not preempt North Carolina law forbidding contact with debtor known to be represented); Bate v. Wells Fargo Bank (In re Bate), 454 B.R. 869 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2011) (Florida debt collection act, which forbids telephone harassment and direct contact with represented debtor, applies generally to all creditors and does not interfere with the business of banking; not preempted by National Bank Act).

12 See §§ 13.3, 13.7.4, supra.

13 See §§ 13.4.1, 13.4.2, supra.

14 Einhorn v. Care Plus Health Plans, Inc., 42 F. Supp. 3d 1329 (S.D. Fla. 2014) (failure to exhaust administrative remedies provided by Medicare law barred claim alleging that health plan attempted to collect Medicare lien in excess of permitted amount).

15 Lawson-Ross v. Great Lakes Higher Educ. Corp., 955 F.3d 908 (11th Cir. 2020) (Florida Consumer Collection Practices Act provisions forbidding misinformation are not preempted by Higher Education Act's preemption of disclosure requirements; noting difference between affirmative misrepresentation and failure to disclose; here, servicer made false statements in response to non-delinquent borrower's requests for information); Cliff v. Payco Gen. Am. Credits, Inc., 363 F.3d 1113 (11th Cir. 2004). Accord Ammedie v. Sallie Mae, Inc., 485 Fed. Appx. 399 (11th Cir. 2012) (reiterating limited scope of HEA preemption of state debt collection laws); Smith v. Collection Tech., Inc., 2016 WL 1169529 (S.D. W. Va. Mar. 22, 2016) (HEA does not prevent application of UDAP statute to collector that wrongfully garnished student loan debtor's preempt a claim under Florida's debt collection statute that the collector asserted a legal right that it knew did not exist. On the other hand, the Ninth Circuit, without analyzing whether the specific state requirements at issue were inconsistent with the HEA, held that the HEA preempted application of a state debt collection statute to the pre-litigation debt collection activities of a student loan guarantee agency.[16] This view has little justification, as the HEA's requirements are not inconsistent in any way with the core requirements of the typical state debt collection statute, such as prohibitions of abusive language, deception, and late-night calls.

A Florida court held that the exclusivity provisions of the state workers compensation law do not preempt a Florida Consumer Protection Act claim against a healthcare provider that unlawfully attempted to collect directly from the injured worker.[17]

Preemption by the Fair Credit Reporting Act[18] is occasionally an issue in UDAP debt collection litigation. Courts have held that the specific preemption provisions of the FCRA override a UDAP claim that is based on communications to a credit reporting agency.[19] But FCRA preemption is irrelevant to other claims, such as a claim that a creditor violated the state UDAP statute by referring to a collection agency a debt that it knew the consumer did not owe.[20] Preemption under the FCRA is discussed in detail in another NCLC treatise.[21]

16.1.3 Litigation Privilege

Courts are divided on the question of whether California's broad statutory litigation privilege bars claims under the state debt collection statute that arise from litigation, such as suit on a time-barred claim or pre-litigation misrepresentations to induce settlement. Some courts have found some or all claims barred.[22] Other courts,[23] however, including the first wages instead of performing its obligation to assist him in rehabilitating loan); Weber v. Great Lakes Educ. Loan Serv., 2013 WL 3943507 (W.D. Wis. July 30, 2013) (provisions of Wisconsin Consumer Act forbidding debt collection harassment not preempted by Higher Education Act); McComas v. Fin. Collection Agencies, Inc., 1997 WL 118417 (S.D. W. Va. Mar. 7, 1997) (HEA and its regulations do not preempt claims under West Virginia debt collection statute regarding collector's false threats, deceptive statements, misidentification, and demand for unauthorized fees). See also Peete-Bey v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 131 F. Supp. 3d 422 (D. Md. 2015) (due diligence regulations adopted under HEA apply to guaranty agency only when it is acting as such, so cannot be basis for preemption when it is pursuing collection of a loan that has already been assigned to DoE and then farmed out for collection); Snuffer v. Great Lakes Educ. Loan Serv., Inc., 97 F. Supp. 3d 827 (S.D. W. Va. 2015) (HEA does not preempt state law provisions forbidding threatening or fraudulent conduct, but does preempt provision forbidding contact with represented debtor); Williams v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 88 F. Supp. 3d 1338, 1343 (M.D. Fla. 2015) (HEA does not preempt Florida prohibition against threatening to enforce debts known not to be legitimate, or Florida's requirement of a notice that HEA does not require, but does preempt its prohibition of communication with represented debtor and its prohibition of harassment, because it would chill federal collections if courts determined whether level of contact was unreasonable); Adams v. Pa. Higher Educ. Assistance Agency, 787 S.E.2d 583 (W. Va. 2016) (HEA preempts state law forbidding contact with represented debtor, but not provisions forbidding assertion of a right known not to exist or collection of a debt known to be invalid). But see Clark v. Navient Solutions, L.L.C., 396 F. Supp. 3d 1083 (M.D. Fla. 2019) (provisions of Florida Consumer Collection Practices act that forbid contact with represented debtor and telephone harassment are preempted by Higher Education Act's requirements of direct communication with debtor and diligent efforts to collect debts).

16 Brannan v. United Student Aid Funds, Inc., 94 F.3d 1260 (9th Cir. 1996) (acknowledging that HEA only preempts inconsistent provisions of state law, yet concluding that all state pre-litigation collection requirements are preempted without further analysis). Accord Hunt v. Sallie Mae, Inc., 2014 WL 793075 (D. Or. Feb. 23, 2014) (holding state debt collection claims preempted, without examining whether the particular state law prohibitions alleged here were inconsistent with HEA). See also Pirouzian v. SLM Corp., 396 F. Supp. 2d 1124 (S.D. Cal. 2005) (reading Ninth Circuit precedent as preempting all state regulation of pre-litigation collection activities, without need to determine whether they are inconsistent with HEA). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Student Loan Law §§ 9.4.4, 14.6.3.4 (6th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

17 Davis v. Sheridan Healthcare, Inc., 281 So. 3d 1259 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2019).

18 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681 to 1681x. See § 14.6.1, supra.

19 See, e.g., Misel v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 782 F. Supp. 2d 171 (E.D.N.C. 2011) (North Carolina Debt Collection Act claim alleging false credit reporting is preempted by FCRA); Corby v. Am. Express Co., 2011 WL 4625719 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 5, 2011) (FCRA preempts section of Rosenthal Act that forbids knowingly communicating false credit information); Ayers v. Aurora Loan Services, L.L.C., 787 F. Supp. 2d 451 (E.D. Tex. May 27, 2011) (Texas Debt Collection act claim alleging false report that loan was in foreclosure is preempted by FCRA); Thomas v. U.S. Bank, 2007 WL 764312 (D. Or. Mar. 8, 2007); Islam v. Option One Mortgage Corp., 432 F. Supp. 2d 181, 200 (D. Mass. 2006).

20 Curtis v. Citibank, 261 P.3d 1059 (Mont. 2011). See also Fritz v. Duke Energy Carolinas, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3721373 (E.D.N.C. July 24, 2014) (FCRA did not preempt claim against creditor that failed to inform collector about misapplied payment, so that collector made inaccurate report).

21 National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 10.7 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

22 See, e.g., Hedayati v. Perry Law Firm, 2018 WL 3155186 (C.D. Cal. May 16, 2018) (litigation privilege bars Rosenthal Act claims that arose solely in context of litigation, here false statement in itemized statement of account provided during collection action), adopted, 2018 WL 3129803 (C.D. Cal. June 25, 2018); Boon v. Prof'l Collection Consultants, 978 F. Supp. 2d 1157 (S.D. Cal. 2013) (claim barred by privilege where only debt collection conduct alleged was filing of time-barred action); De la Torre v. Legal Recovery Law Office, 2013 WL 5462294 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 30, 2013) (litigation privilege protects cellphone and workplace calls made before filing action to collect judgment debt); Cassady v. Union Adjustment, Inc., 2008 WL 4773976 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 27, 2008) (case-by-case analysis; claims are barred where communications occurred "entirely in the context of filing a state court action to collect a debt"); Lopez Reyes v. Kenosian & Miele, L.L.P., 525 F. Supp. 2d 1158 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 6, 2007) (if gravamen of claim is communicative action, privilege applies); Nickoloff v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 511 F. Supp. 2d 1043 (C.D. Cal. 2007) (litigation privilege bars Rosenthal Act claims based on statements during arbitration proceeding); Taylor v. Quall, 458 F. Supp. 2d 1065 (C.D. Cal. 2006); G.R. v. Intelligator, 110 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559 (Cal. Ct. App. 2010) (where court rule governing use of credit reports in litigation provided adequate sanction for violation, application of privilege would not vitiate Rosenthal Act). See generally § 15.1.3, supra.

23 See, e.g., Picazo v. Tirey, 2018 WL 1583228 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 2, 2018) (Rosenthal Act prevails over litigation privilege); Gonzalez v. Law Office of Allen Robert King, 195 F. Supp. 3d 1118 (C.D. Cal. 2016) published state appellate decision,[24] hold that statutory claims are not barred. These courts reason that a contrary construction would effectively immunize activity that the statute specifically prohibits, and the more specific debt collection statute should prevail over the general privilege statute.

A federal court has applied a similar rationale to conclude that privilege does not bar a claim that a collector violated the Michigan Occupational Code by falsely stating in pleadings that certain claims had been assigned to its client.[25] Similarly, Wisconsin's health care privacy statute, specifically regulating the handling of confidential medical information in legal proceedings, has been held to override the common law judicial proceedings privilege.[26] A federal court in Utah has held that the privilege bars common law claims against a lawyer-debt collector, but not statutory claims, here a claim under the Utah Consumer Sales Practices Act.[27] Another federal court has declined to extend the District of Columbia litigation privilege to violations of the District's Debt Collection Practices Act, noting that D.C. courts have limited it to defamation cases.[28] A federal court refused to extend Washington's litigation privilege to a UDAP claim that alleged that an FDCPA violation was a per se violation of the UDAP statute.[29]

On the other hand, the Florida Supreme Court holds that the litigation privilege applies to all causes of action, common law and statutory, including claims under the state UDAP and debt collection statutes.[30] Nonetheless, the privilege does not protect deception in documents served with a complaint[31] or in letters sent after a foreclosure,[32] and it may not apply to correspondence during a foreclosure case about the reinstatement amount.[33] In Pennsylvania, the Third Circuit held that the litigation privilege barred UDAP and debt collection act claims that were based on a foreclosure action and communications in connection with that action.[34] A few decisions from Illinois[35] and Massachusetts[36] have also applied the privilege to statutory actions. Texas law grants broad immunity to attorneys, provided that their actions are not "foreign to the duties of a (noting split of authority; concluding that privilege does not apply); Picard v. ABC Legal Services, Inc., 2015 WL 3465832 (N.D. Cal. June 1, 2015) (allowing Rosenthal Act claim alleging sewer service to go forward); Huy Thanh Vo v. Nelson & Kennard, 931 F. Supp. 2d 1080 (E.D. Cal. 2013); Ansari v. Elec. Document Processing, Inc., 2013 WL 4547621 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 29, 2013) (litigation privilege does not bar Rosenthal Act claim alleging falsified service of process); Holmes v. Elec. Document Processing, Inc., 966 F. Supp. 2d 925 (N.D. Cal. 2013) (privilege does not bar claim of false service of process); Do v. Hollins Law, P.C., 2013 WL 4013659 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 5, 2013) (phone calls without proper disclosure of identity not privileged even though made in connection with litigation); Townsend v. Nat'l Arbitration Forum, Inc., 2012 WL 12736, at *13 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 4, 2012); Welker v. Law Office of Daniel J. Horwitz, 699 F. Supp. 2d 1164 (S.D. Cal. 2010); Gerber v. Citigroup, Inc., 2009 WL 248094 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 29, 2009) (violations of Rosenthal Act not privileged), adopted, 2009 WL 2058576 (E.D. Cal. July 14, 2009); Welker v. Law Office of Horwitz, 626 F. Supp. 2d 1068 (S.D. Cal. June 16, 2009) ("routine debt collection letters" not privileged); Oei v. N. Star Capital Acquisitions, L.L.C., 486 F. Supp. 2d 1089 (C. D. Cal. 2006); Gross v. Judge, 2013 WL 4606152 (Cal. Ct. App. Aug. 28, 2013) (unpublished) (refusing to dismiss Rosenthal Act claim; homeowners' association not protected by litigation privilege). See also People v. Persolve, L.L.C., 160 Cal. Rptr. 3d 841 (Cal. Ct. App. 2013) (since state debt collection statute that is "borrowed" to support a UDAP claim is more specific than, and in irreconcilable conflict with, the privilege statute, privilege will not apply).

24 Komarova v. Nat'l Credit Acceptance, Inc., 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 880 (Cal. Ct. App. 2009).

25 Eager v. Credit Bureau Collection Services, Inc., 2013 WL 5719224 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 18, 2013).

26 In re Ortiz, 430 B.R. 523 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 2010) (attachment of unredacted medical information to proof of claim).

27 Brown v. Constantino, 2009 WL 3617692 (D. Utah Oct. 27, 2009) (finding no preemption; noting that Johnson v. Riddle, 2007 WL 1732400 (D. Utah June 14, 2007), which certified this question to Utah Supreme Court, was settled before that court could rule).

28 Osinubepi-Alao v. Plainview Fin. Serv., Ltd., 2014 WL 22121383 (D.D.C. May 29, 2014).

29 Hoffman v. Transworld Systems, Inc., 2018 WL 5734641 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 2, 2018), aff'd in relevant part, 806 Fed. Appx. 549 (9th Cir. 2020) (litigation privilege is confined to defamation claims).

30 Echevarria, McCalla, Raymer, Barrett & Frappier v. Cole, 950 So. 2d 380 (Fla. 2007) (inclusion of inflated costs in re-instatement letter sent before mortgage foreclosure). See also Kinsey v. MLH Fin. Services, Inc., 509 Fed. Appx. 852 (11th Cir. 2013) (Fla. law; claims under state debt collection statute barred; privilege covers claims arising from "any act that occurs during the course of a judicial proceeding, so long as the act has some relation to the proceeding"); Trent v. Mortgage Elec. Registration Sys., Inc., 288 Fed. Appx. 571 (11th Cir. 2008) (Fla. law; litigation privilege bars state debt collection act claims arising from foreclosure); Perez v. Bureaus Inv. Group II, L.L.C., 2009 WL 1973476 (S.D. Fla. July 8, 2009) (privilege bars state debt collection act claim alleging filing of time-barred lawsuit); Gaisser v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 571 F. Supp. 2d 1273 (S.D. Fla. 2008) (privilege bars Florida debt collection statute claims arising from filing of time-barred lawsuit); Pack v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2008 WL 686800 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 13, 2008) (privilege bars claims under Florida debt collection statute arising from filing of lawsuit).

31 N. Star Capital Acquisitions, L.L.C. v. Krig, 611 F. Supp. 2d 1324 (M.D. Fla. 2009) (stipulated judgment for entire amount claimed, described as settlement offer and "your last chance to avoid going to court").

32 Monroe v. Citimortgage, 2007 WL 2071284 (M.D. Fla. July 19, 2007) (privilege did not protect letters sent after foreclosure, even though court retained jurisdiction over case, where letters not necessary to prosecute, defend, or appeal from foreclosure).

33 Blake v. Seterus, Inc., 2017 WL 543223 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 9, 2017).

34 Schwartz v. OneWest Bank, 614 Fed. Appx. 80 (3d Cir. 2015) (Pa. law; privilege protects foreclosure complaints, sale notices, and all communications between bank's attorneys and borrower's attorney). Accord Bronstein v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 703652 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 11, 2020) (law firm is immune from liability for statements made in foreclosure complaint); Bainbridge v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1178047, at *22–24 (M.D. Pa. Mar. 30, 2017) (misstatements to court in foreclosure action).

35 Rosales v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., 2017 WL 1436957, at *5 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 24, 2017) (dismissing UDAP claim; litigation privilege bars all claims for a wrongful lawsuit except malicious prosecution).

36 Mack v. Wells Fargo Bank, 41 N.E.3d 323 (Mass. Ct. App. 2015) (litigation privilege protects foreclosure firm from UDAP liability to homeowner for communicating with her while knowing she was represented by counsel and scheduling a foreclosure sale despite preliminary injunction barring it from conducting such a sale).

lawyer," but the state debt collection statute creates an exception in certain circumstances.[37]

California's litigation privilege may bar claims under the state's UDAP statutes, but only if the claim is premised on privileged communications.[38] If, for example, the claim is based on a lender's imposition of improper charges, and its prelitigation attempts to collect those charges, the privilege is inapplicable.[39]

Connecticut courts have held that the privilege precludes claims under the state debt collection practices and UDAP statutes against an attorney for filing allegedly baseless collection suits or pleadings that contain misstatements,[40] but not claims based on misrepresentations outside the pleadings.[41] But another court held that the litigation privilege did not bar a claim that a lender had led a borrower to believe that a foreclosure action against him had been dismissed, and then reopened it and sought to eject his family once he was deployed overseas and unable to respond.[42] The court viewed this conduct as not in furtherance of the litigation.

The application of the litigation privilege to common law torts is discussed in § 15.1.3.1, supra. That section also discusses the privilege for statements made in judicial proceedings.

16.1.4 State Governmental Immunity

Government entities may be immune when they are collecting their own debts,[43] or the debt may not fall within the statute's scope.[44] States may also have special sovereign immunity statutes that protect state employees.[45] Absolute judicial immunity is likely to protect persons acting under court order, such as guardians ad litem, from state statutory claims based on their attempts to collect debts.[46] One court has held that an attorney retained by a private collector that had contracted with the state to collect child support was entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity when she negotiated with and sued the obligor.[47] On the other hand, the Eleventh Amendment did not immunize a private company that was retained by a state governmental office as an independent contractor to carry out a bad check diversion program.[48]

16.1.5 Special Issues in Utility Collection Cases

Regulated utilities, which must file tariffs with an administrative agency, may be protected by the filed-rate doctrine from state debt collection claims.[49] Practitioners should, however, look closely to determine whether the conduct complained of is actually covered by a tariff. For example, where the relevant tariff limited telephone companies' liability except in case of willful misconduct, a consumer was allowed to go forward with state debt collection claims alleging that a long-distance carrier willfully and knowingly continued to bill him and seek termination for nonpayment after he had switched to a new carrier.[50]

Another question is whether consumers challenging collection methods for utility debts must proceed before the state utility commission rather than in court. An Oregon decision holds that utility customers were not required to seek administrative relief before bringing an action under the state debt collection statute, because the Public Utility Commission had no authority to enforce that statute.[51] Similarly, a claim that 37 Ruiz deBalderas v. ETX Successor Athens, 2020 WL 1479583 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 4, 2020), adopted, 2020 WL 1478563 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 26, 2020).

38 See, e.g., Carr v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2011 WL 3568338 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 12, 2011) (litigation privilege bars claim that false statements made in collection suit violated state UDAP statute).

39 Guiccone v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 2015 WL 1968114 (N.D. Cal. May 1, 2015).

40 Dina v. Cuda & Assoc., 950 F. Supp. 2d 396, 407–408 (D. Conn. 2013) (privilege bars claim based on filing of false affidavit to obtain judgment); Jonas v. Delallo, 2012 WL 6846396 (Conn. Super. Ct. Dec. 11, 2012).

41 Davis v. Hunt, Leibert, Jacobson, P.C., 2014 WL 5798585, at *5 (D. Conn. Nov. 7, 2014) (litigation privilege inapplicable to claim that collection firm violated UDAP statute by misrepresenting that foreclosure action was dismissed, and by demanding that family vacate home without advising them that it had not obtained court order necessary to give it right to possession).

42 Davis v. Hunt Leibert Jacobson, P.C., 2014 WL 5798585 (D. Conn. Nov. 7, 2014).

43 Wall v. City of Raleigh, 465 S.E.2d 551 (N.C. Ct. App. 1996) (city employees collecting parking fines were engaged in governmental function, so were immune from claims under state debt collection act).

44 See, e.g., In re DeSteph, 2009 WL 5171833 (Bankr. D.N.H. Dec. 2, 2009) (state agency is not subject to state debt collection statute when it imposes administrative penalties).

45 See Greenberg v. Caesar's Entertainment Corp., 2015 WL 437577 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 2, 2015) (list of exceptions in state sovereign immunity statute is exclusive, and does not include intentional violation of debt collection statute; dismissing claim against police officers who arrested casino patron for highly disputed debt), reconsideration denied, 2015 WL 2069411 (E.D. Pa. May 5, 2015).

46 Amour v. Collection Prof'ls, Inc., 350 P.3d 71 (Mont. 2015) (absolute quasi-judicial immunity barred state debt collection claim against court-appointed guardian ad litem arising from efforts to collect her fee; declining to reach question whether immunity would cover intentional tort).

47 Cottingham v. Policy Studies, Inc., 2008 WL 768854 (M.D. Tenn. Mar. 21, 2008).

48 Rosaria v. Am. Corrective Counseling Services, Inc., 506 F.3d 1039 (11th Cir. 2007).

49 See, e.g., Holt v. W. Va.-Am. Water Co., 760 S.E.2d 502 (W. Va. 2014) (construing UDAP statute's exemption transactions under public utility tariffs broadly to encompass all matters addressed by utility's tariff and to immunize water company from UDAP liability for terminating customer's service in violation of public utility commission order).

50 Adamson v. WorldCom Communications, Inc., 78 P.3d 577 (Or. Ct. App. 2003).

51 Isom v. Portland Gen. Elec. Co., 677 P.2d 59 (Or. Ct. App. 1984). See also Egbarin v. Northeast Utilities Serv. Co., 2015 WL 4965891 (Conn. Super. Ct. July 23, 2015) (finding jurisdiction to decide claims under state UDAP and debt collection statutes alleging that utility company transferred balance from one account to another in violation of agency rule, because agency had no power to enforce those statutes), later decisions 2016 WL 3202491 (Conn. Super. Ct. May 18, 2016) (CCPA and CUTPA violations sufficiently alleged), 2016 WL 3202494 (Conn.

a utility company attempted to collect a debt discharged in bankruptcy does not relate to rate structure, so can be litigated in court.[52]

16.2 Consumer Protections Under State Debt Collection Statutes and Regulations

16.2.1 Overview

State debt collection statutes provide the primary consumer remedy for debt collection abuse in many instances. For example, in many states these statutes apply to creditors who are not covered by the federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act.[53] Even in suits against collectors, state remedies, which often include statutory damages and attorney fees, may compare favorably to FDCPA remedies.

All but five states have statutes specifically dealing with abuses by debt collectors.[54] These statutes are cited and summarized at Appendix D, infra.

Although state debt collection statutes are varied, certain common forms exist. One common form provides standards for licensing collection agencies. These licensing laws may also:

- Proscribe abusive practices and provide a private right of action for injured consumers;
- Proscribe unethical practices in the relations between collection agencies and creditors; and
- Authorize an administrative agency to issue licenses and promulgate regulations.

Another common form emphasizes consumer protection rather than licensing, proscribing specific types of misconduct and providing a private right of action for injured consumers. A third common form provides criminal penalties against misconduct such as simulating legal process.

State statutes regulating specific types of debt, such as payday loans or rent-to-own transactions,[55] may also include debt collection standards, which will prevail over more general state debt collection statutes. A number of states have more than one type of statute.

Thirty-six jurisdictions require at least some debt collectors to be licensed, registered, or bonded, and about half provide an express private right of action for consumers.[56] A private right of action is implied under some of the other statutes.[57] Violation of statutory debt collection restrictions may also be actionable under general consumer protection law.[58]

State debt collection statutes should be applied and construed liberally to accomplish their remedial purposes.[59]

16.2.2 Constitutionality of State Debt Collection Statutes

In Harris v. Beneficial Finance Co.,[60] the Florida Supreme Court upheld the Florida debt collection statute, a relatively broad and protective state statute, against a creditor's claim that the statutory prohibition of employer contacts infringed upon its right of free speech under the First Amendment and that the remedy of $500 minimum statutory damages deprived it of property without due process of law. The West Virginia statute's restrictions on telephone harassment have been upheld against a First Amendment challenge.[61]

First Amendment jurisprudence is in a time of flux, and some Supreme Court justices have called for it to be reexamined.[62] In Barr v. American Ass'n of Political Consultants, Inc.,[63] the Supreme Court, at the behest of entities making political calls, struck down a provision of the Telephone Consumer Protection Act that carved out calls made to collect government debt from a restriction on autodialed and prerecorded calls. The Court held that this carve-out violated the First Amendment, because it was content-based. The plurality opinion explicitly distinguishes statutes like the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, however, and holds that "[o]ur decision is not intended to expand existing First Amendment doctrine or to otherwise affect traditional or ordinary economic regulation of commercial activity."[64] Three dissenters would not have found the carve-out unconstitutional at all.

A restriction on contact with represented debtors, if the attorney's contact information is "known or can be easily Super. Ct. May 18, 2016) (also stated claim for contact with represented consumer).

52 Thomas v. Peoples Gas Light & Coke Co., 959 N.E.2d 1201 (Ill. App. Ct. 2011).

53 See Hartman v. Meridian Fin. Services, 191 F. Supp. 2d 1031, 1048 (W.D. Wis. 2002) (refusing to read FDCPA's exceptions to definition of debt collector into Wisconsin debt collection statute).

54 The six states that do not have debt collection statutes are Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Ohio, and South Dakota. In addition, the Georgia statute summarized in Appendix D, Ga. Code Ann. §§ 7-3-1 to 7-3-29, deals only with debt collectors working for industrial loan companies.

55 See, e.g., Minn. Stat. Ann. §§ 325F.91, 325F.92.

56 See Appx. D, infra.

57 See § 16.2.5, infra.

58 See §§ 16.2.5, 16.3.6, infra.

59 Hartman v. Meridian Fin. Services, 191 F. Supp. 2d 1031, 1050 (W.D. Wis. 2002); Schauer v. GMAC, 819 So. 2d 809 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2002) (Fla. debt collection act must be liberally construed); City Fin. Co. v. Boykin, 358 S.E.2d 83 (N.C. Ct. App. 1987).

60 338 So. 2d 196 (Fla. 1976). See also In re Sechuan City, Inc., 96 B.R. 37 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1989) (coercive, harassing signs not constitutionally protected commercial speech because they went beyond informing public of bankruptcy). But cf. ACA Int'l v. Healey, 457 F. Supp. 3d 17 (D. Mass. 2020) (temporary ban on telephone calls and collection suits during coronavirus pandemic violates First Amendment; ban on calls does not materially advance debtors' interests beyond existing protections, and ban on suits denies right to petition for redress of grievances). See generally Annot., Validity, Construction, and Application of State Statutes Prohibiting Abusive or Coercive Collection Practices, 87 A.L.R.3d 786 (1978).

61 Stover v. Fingerhut Direct Mktg., Inc., 709 F. Supp. 2d 473 (S.D. W. Va. 2009).

62 Barr v. Am. Ass'n of Political Consultants, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 140 S. Ct. 2335, 2356, 207 L. Ed. 2d 784 (2020) (Breyer, J., concurring in judgment with respect to severability and dissenting in part).

63 Id.

64 Id. at 2347.

ascertained," although broader than that of the FDCPA, was not void for vagueness.[65] Statutory requirements that out-of-state debt collectors obtain a license or maintain an office are not an undue burden on commerce.[66] The Eleventh Circuit held that a requirement that debt buyers register in the state before filing suit did not violate the state constitution's guarantee of access to courts.[67]

16.2.3 Scope of State Debt Collection Statutes

16.2.3.1 Types of Debts Covered

16.2.3.1.1 "Claim" vs. "debt"; "credit"

Debt collection statutes are frequently limited in their coverage to a "claim"[68] or a "debt."[69] A number of courts hold that the term "debt" includes rent[70] and condominium and homeowner association assessments.[71] If the statute merely requires 65 Id. See also Hall v. Bureau of Employment Agencies, 138 Cal. Rptr. 725 (Cal. Ct. App. 1976) (requirement that collector conform to "ethical business standards" not unconstitutionally vague where it was applied to campaign of telephone harassment).

66 Silver v. Woolf, 694 F.2d 8 (2d Cir. 1982) (Connecticut's statute regulating out-of-state debt collection agencies and requiring them to obtain licenses not unconstitutional burden on interstate commerce); Collins v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 991 F. Supp. 2d 1195 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 28, 2013) (requiring out-of-state passive debt buyer to register before bringing garnishment actions in Florida did not violate dormant commerce clause); Hauk v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 749 F. Supp. 2d 358 (D. Md. 2010) (Maryland licensing statute did not facially discriminate against out-of-state collection agencies, and burden on interstate commerce was not excessive in relation to local benefits); Norton v. Local Loan Co., 251 N.W.2d 520 (Iowa 1977); Commonwealth v. Allied Bond & Collection Agency, 476 N.E.2d 955 (Mass. 1985) (statute did not violate Commerce Clause by requiring out-of-state collection agency to obtain license and maintain office in Massachusetts); Meyers v. Matthews, 71 N.W.2d 368 (Wis. 1955). But cf. Codar v. Arizona, 1996 WL 471335 (9th Cir. Aug. 19, 1996) (requirement that out-of-state collection agency maintain office in state may violate Commerce Clause if it requires more than office for recordkeeping and audit purposes; whether residency requirement is constitutional depends on whether employment of state resident merely to manage in-state office is sufficient); Nat'l Revenue Corp. v. Violet, 807 F.2d 285 (1st Cir. 1986) (prohibition of collection activities by anyone not licensed to practice in R.I. is unconstitutional burden on commerce); Eric M. Berman, P.C. v. City of New York, 895 F. Supp. 2d 453, 469–470 (E.D.N.Y. 2012) (debt collection ordinance violates Commerce Clause to extent it regulates contracts formed entirely outside the state), vacated in part on other grounds, 796 F.3d 171 (2d Cir. 2015) (vacating ruling that ordinance was preempted by state law; remanding for resolution of First Amendment challenge).

67 LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, 601 F.3d 1185, 1198 (11th Cir. 2010) (Fla. law).

68 See, e.g., Flores v. Rawlings Co., L.L.C., 177 P.3d 341 (Haw. 2008) (claims recovery service, which pursued subrogation claims for medical benefits plan, must register as Hawaii collection agency, defined to include entities that collect any type of "claim"). But cf. Hinkle v. Matthews, 337 F. Supp. 3d 674 (S.D. W. Va. 2018) (sale of gap insurance at time of automobile purchase, when its full cost was paid to seller, does not create a claim; seller's acceptance of payment does not make it a debt collector), aff'd, ___ Fed. Appx. ___, 2020 WL 7353778 (4th Cir. Dec. 15, 2020).

69 Finding coverage: Piper v. Portnoff Law Assoc., 274 F. Supp. 2d 681 (E.D. Pa. 2003) (delinquent water bill was debt), aff'd, 396 F.3d 227 (3d Cir. 2005); Hartman v. Meridian Fin. Services, 191 F. Supp. 2d 1031, 1048 (W.D. Wis. 2002) (timeshare obligation met definition of debt regardless of whether it was in default); People ex rel. Rhoades v. W. Va. Credit Bur. Reporting Services, 96 F. Supp. 2d 528 (S.D. W. Va. 2000) (W. Va. Consumer Credit Protection Act's debt collection provisions apply to "any debt," not just revolving charge accounts); Ledisco Fin. Services v. Viracola, 533 S.W.2d 951 (Tex. App. 1976) (collector attempting to repossess consumer's credit card was acting "in connection with a 'debt' "); Lily v. Tolar, 2002 WL 1926527 (Tex. App. Aug. 22, 2002) (bail bond covered); Tennessee Attorney General, Op. No. 00-105, 2000 Tenn. AG LEXIS 107 (June 8, 2000) (purchase of and collection upon unpaid judgments is covered). See also Kett v. Cmty. Credit Plan, Inc., 596 N.W.2d 786 (Wis. 1999), aff'g 586 N.W.2d 68 (Wis. Ct. App. 1998) (Wisconsin Consumer Act applies to in rem proceedings to recover collateral).

Finding no debt and no coverage: Fusco v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 2519978 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 2, 2020) (convenience fee for paying by phone or online is debt within meaning of FDCPA, but not Florida Consumer Collection Practices Act; FDCPA covers charges "incident to" payment of a debt, but Florida requires showing of an obligation; because consumer could avoid fee by mailing check, it was not an obligation); McGinity v. Tracphone Wireless, Inc., 5 F. Supp. 3d 1337 (M.D. Fla. 2014) (debt collection statute inapplicable to extortion attempt where extortionist demanded money, but did not claim that it was based on a debt); Vanderbilt Mortg. & Fin., Inc. v. Flores, 747 F. Supp. 2d 794 (S.D. Tex. 2010) (landowners whose land was used, without their knowledge or consent, to secure third parties' debts, never incurred debt or alleged debt for personal, family or household purposes); Hunter v. Bev Smith Ford, 2008 WL 1925265 (S.D. Fla. Apr. 29, 2008) (yo-yo sale of motor vehicle; no debt owed, because contract, which was contingent on financing, never formed), aff'd, 353 Fed. Appx. 218 (11th Cir. 2009); Jones v. TT of Longwood, Inc., 2006 WL 2789140 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 26, 2006) (dismissing claim under state debt collection statute arising from yo-yo sale of motor vehicle; no debt where transaction never completed and title never passed); Friday v. United Dominion Realty Trust, Inc., 575 S.E.2d 532, 537–538 (N.C. Ct. App. 2003) (stating that court costs are to be imposed by trial court and are not a "debt," so debt collection statute is inapplicable to landlord's demand for them); Pargas of Longview, Inc. v. Jones, 573 S.W.2d 571 (Tex. App. 1978) (dispute over ownership of butane gas tank affixed to consumer's land and repossessed by gas distributor did not involve "debt"). See also Henshaw v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2015 WL 5345439 (S.D. W. Va. Sept. 11, 2015) (noting two different definitions of consumer in West Virginia statute: general definitions include one who "incurs" a debt, but debt collection provisions apply only to one who is obligated or allegedly obligated to pay; finding no coverage for attempts by mortgage lender to collect debt discharged in bankruptcy because lender never alleged that borrowers were personally obligated).

70 Jarzyna v. Home Properties, L.P., 763 F. Supp. 2d 742 (E.D. Pa. 2011) (state debt collection statute applies to landlord); Pippert v. Niece, 518 F. Supp. 2d 1265 (D. Or. 2007) (Oregon statute covers landlord, manager, property management company, and rent collector); Friday v. United Dominion Realty Trust, Inc., 575 S.E.2d 532 (N.C. Ct. App. 2003) (landlord that sought to recover past due rent and related charges was debt collector; late fees for past due rent and contractual administrative fee for filing eviction action are debts as defined by state debt collection statute).

71 Agrelo v. Affinity Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 841 F.3d 944 (11th Cir. 2016) (fine imposed by homeowners' association is debt covered by Florida statute; distinguishing cases arising from government-imposed fines); Haddad v. Alexander, Zelmanski, Danner & Fioritto, 698 F.3d 290 (6th Cir. 2012) (condo assessments are debts covered a "claim" or a "debt" it will also probably apply to collection of dishonored checks[72] and to collection of obligations arising from non-credit transactions.[73]

Other state debt collection statutes are limited to "credit."[74] These statutes will probably not apply to collection of dishonored checks that are not written as part of a credit transaction, such as a payday loan.[75] Nor will they apply to debts for rent or condominium assessments,[76] or debts arising from cash transactions.[77]

by Michigan Collection Practices Act); Scherer v. Steel Creek Prop. Ass'n., 2016 WL 1251223 (W.D.N.C. Mar. 30, 2016) (property owners' association assessment is covered debt, but dismissing claim on other grounds); Malowney v. Bush/Ross, 2009 WL 3806161 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 12, 2009) (condo assessment is debt as defined by Florida debt collection statute); Wright v. Bush Ross P.A., 2008 WL 190466 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 18, 2008) (condominium and homeowners association assessments are consumer debts; debt need not arise from credit transaction); Kelly v. Dugan, 282 So. 3d 969 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2019) (statute applies to condominium assessments; note that Florida's intermediate appellate decisions are split on this issue); Reid v. Ayers, 531 S.E.2d 231 (N.C. Ct. App. 2000) ("debt" in North Carolina debt collection statute is not limited to credit transactions and includes homeowner association dues); Davis Lake Cmty. Ass'n v. Feldmann, 530 S.E.2d 865 (N.C. Ct. App. 2000) (homeowners association dues and assessments are "debts"); Fleet v. Webber Springs Owners' Assoc., Inc., 772 S.E.2d 369 (W. Va. 2015) (homeowners' association assessments are claims within meaning of West Virginia Consumer Credit Protection Act, because maintenance of common areas and roads is a family or household purpose).

72 Rosaria v. Am. Corrective Counseling Services, Inc., 506 F.3d 1039 (11th Cir. 2007) (allowing Florida debt collection statute claims to go forward against for-profit bad check program that contracted with prosecutor's office); Frankowski v. Nathanson, 2016 WL 7337247 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 19, 2016) (e-check, for automatic withdrawal as part of payment plan for debt, was debt covered by FDCPA and Michigan statute); Cavnar v. BounceBack, Inc., 2015 WL 4429095 (E.D. Wash. July 17, 2015) (Wash. statute does not specifically exempt bad check diversion programs; fact issue whether program here fits within general exemption for public officers); Semper v. JBC Legal Group, 2005 WL 2172377 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 6, 2005) (law firm that purchased debts, here NSF checks, for purpose of collecting them, was debt collector within meaning of Washington collection agency statute); Int'l Bureau of Fraud Control, Ltd. v. Clayton, 544 N.E.2d 416 (Ill. App. Ct. 1989) (company that collected returned checks for retailers was debt collector covered by collection agency statute); Cash N Go, Inc. v. Spruce, 2018 WL 2175703 (W. Va. Ct. App. May 11, 2018) (returned check was a claim). See also Iowa Code § 537.7102(3) (defining debt to include check when given in connection with rent-to-own, payday loan, or consumer sales transaction); Landfried v. Spokane County, 2011 WL 1584328 (E.D. Wash. Apr. 27, 2011) (check diversion program seeks to collect debts owed to others and meets definition of collection agency, so must be licensed); Liles v. Am. Corrective Counseling Services, 131 F. Supp. 2d 1114 (S.D. Iowa 2001) (fact question whether independent contractor hired by county attorney to process NSF checks, who sent out misleading notices about criminal prosecution, was debt collector under Iowa debt collection statute). But cf. St. Pierre v. Winn Dixie Stores, Inc., 592 So. 2d 1252 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1992) (payment of cash in exchange for check is not extension of credit, so is not covered by Florida debt collection statute).

73 See, e.g., PurCo Fleet Services v. Idaho State Dep't of Fin., 90 P.3d 346 (Idaho 2004) (claim for damage to rental vehicle is "claim or other indebtedness" covered by Idaho debt collection law). But see Sizemore v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 2017 WL 3528851 (S.D. W. Va. Aug. 16, 2017) ("claim" must include deferral of payment; attempt to collect alleged overpayment of disability benefits not covered).

74 See, e.g., Stephen Boston v. ClubCorp. USA, Inc., 2019 WL 1877592 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 2, 2019) (recurring payments for ongoing services, here club dues, are not debt because there is no credit transaction); Mlnarik v. Smith, Gardner, Slusky, Lazer, Pohren & Rogers, L.L.P., 2014 WL 6657747 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 21, 2014) (fines imposed for violation of homeowners' association rules were not a debt covered by Rosenthal Act, because association did not extend credit to homeowners); UDO v. Kelkris Assoc., Inc., 2012 WL 5985663 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 29, 2012) (Rosenthal Act does not apply to debt for nonconsensual towing and storage of car, because there was no extension of consumer credit); Jachimiec v. Regent Asset Mgmt. Solutions, 2011 WL 2160661 (S.D. Cal. May 26, 2011) (Rosenthal Act applies only to transactions in which property, services, or money are obtained on credit; bank fees not consumer debt); Branco v. Credit Collection Services Inc., 2011 WL 3684503 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2011) (debt for unpaid car insurance arises from credit transaction, so state debt collection statute applies); Leon v. Emergency Med. Group of Watsonville, 2016 WL 3773933 (Cal. Ct. App. July 11, 2016) (medical billing service could be debt collector; credit was extended because services were performed without advance payment); Alaskan Fireplace, Inc. v. Everett, 667 N.W.2d 378 (Wis. Ct. App. 2003) (not consumer credit transaction within meaning of Wisconsin statute where parties contemplated single payment to be made by homebuilder). But cf. Reid v. Ayers, 531 S.E.2d 231 (N.C. Ct. App. 2000) ("debt" in North Carolina debt collection statute is not limited to credit transactions).

75 Edwards v. Crosscheck, Inc., 2011 WL 2836759 (N.D. Cal. July 13, 2011) (NSF check not consumer credit transaction); Abels v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 428 F. Supp. 2d 1023 (N.D. Cal. 2005) (NSF check not debt because not credit transaction); Midwest Recovery Services v. Wolfe, 463 N.W.2d 73 (Iowa 1990) (collection of bad checks that were written for cash not covered by Iowa debt collection statute, which applies to consumer credit transactions).

76 See, e.g., State ex rel. Morrissey v. Copper Beech Townhome Communities Twenty-Six, L.L.C., 806 S.E.2d 172 (W. Va. 2017) (debt collection and deceptive practices provisions of West Virginia Consumer Credit Protection Act do not apply to fees charged by residential landlords pursuant to leases); Leasure v. Willmark Communities, Inc., 2013 WL 6097944 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 14, 2013) (landlord's attempts to collect rent not covered by Rosenthal Act; statute applies only to "consumer credit" transactions and landlord does not extend credit); Durham v. Cont'l Cent. Credit, 2009 WL 3416114 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 20, 2009) (homeowners association annual assessments not covered by Rosenthal Act because no extension of credit).

77 Greenberg v. Caesar's Entertainment Corp., 2016 WL 1106885 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 21, 2016) (erroneous overpayment by casino not debt covered by Pennsylvania's Fair Credit Extension Uniformity Act, which applies only to debts resulting from loans or purchases); UDO v. Kelkris Assoc., Inc., 2012 WL 5985663 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 29, 2012) (Rosenthal Act does not apply to towing debt because it was a cash transaction); Gouskos v. Aptos Vill. Garage, Inc., 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 558 (Cal. Ct. App. 2001) (California Fair Debt Collection Act did not apply to collection of car repair debt because there was no credit offered and no payment for repairs); Sterling Mirror, Inc. v. Gordon, 619 A.2d 64 (D.C. 1993) (D.C. Consumer Credit Protection Act applies to actions to enforce rights arising from consumer credit sale or direct installment loan, not to collection of cash due on delivery); Carter Opticians, Inc. v. Davis, 367 So. 2d 227 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1979) (sale of eyeglasses to be picked up and paid for in cash few hours after order did not involve "credit"); Anderson v. Nextel Partners, Inc., 745 N.W.2d 464 (Iowa 2008) (Iowa debt collection statute inapplicable to cell phone contract; no extension of credit where consumer paid in full for phone at time of purchase, even though contract was contingent on credit approval and consumer paid by month for phone service); State ex rel. Miller v. Nat'l Farmers Org., 278 N.W.2d 905 (Iowa 1979) (because organization's 16.2.3.1.2 Must the debt arise from a "transaction"?

Some debt collection statutes apply only to debts arising from a "transaction." Courts usually decline to apply these statutes to collection of tort claims,[78] claims of debt based on shoplifting[79] or unauthorized receipt of a subscription television service's signals,[80] benefit overpayments,[81] or fines.[82]

16.2.3.1.3 Is the statute limited to consumer debts?

Although some state debt collection statutes apply to business as well as consumer debts,[83] many apply only to consumer transactions.[84] Courts have held that transactions involving membership dues and assessments are "due and payable" on specific date, no "credit" and, therefore, no debt involved).

78 Antoine v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 662 F. Supp. 2d 1318 (M.D. Fla. 2009) (tort judgment not debt; no Florida Creditors Collection Practices Act claim against collector who vigorously pursued innocent third party whose name was vaguely similar to judgment debtor's); Shaw v. Credit Collection Services, 2008 WL 2941261 (M.D. La. July 28, 2008) (debt arising from motor vehicle accident); Ybarra v. Greenberg & Sada, P.C., 429 P.3d 839 (Colo. 2018) (subrogated tort claim not covered, because it does not arise from business transaction); Dickey v. Healthcare Recoveries, 1998 WL 20728 (Tex. App. Jan. 23, 1998) (Texas debt collection statute does not apply to health care insurer's pursuit of subrogation claim against third-party tortfeasor who caused consumer's injuries, because its rights did not arise from transaction, so is not debt). See also Panag v. Farmers Ins. Co., 204 P.3d 885 (Wash. 2009) (Washington Collection Agency Statute did not cover activities of agency collecting insurance company's subrogation claims from allegedly at-fault drivers, but drivers stated UDAP claim).

79 Payless Drug Store v. Brown, 698 P.2d 45 (Or. Ct. App. 1985) (debt collection statute does not apply to shoplifting because it is not "transaction"), rev'd and remanded on other grounds, 708 P.2d 1143 (Or. 1985).

80 See, e.g., DirecTV, Inc. v. Karpinsky, 269 F. Supp. 2d 918, 927 (E.D. Mich. 2003), as amended by 274 F. Supp. 2d 918 (E.D. Mich. 2003) (alleged signal theft not debt); DirecTV, Inc. v. Cephas, 294 F. Supp. 2d 760 (M.D.N.C. 2003) (sums owed as result of signal theft not debt, but allowing UDAP claims to go forward); Tipton v. Williamette Subscription Television, 735 P.2d 1250 (Or. Ct. App. 1987) (claims arising from unauthorized reception of signals is not consumer transaction, since no transaction).

81 Leach v. Connecticut Dep't of Labor, 2019 WL 1436969 (N.H. Mar. 14, 2019) (overpayment of employment benefits is not consumer transaction; state agency seeking repayment is not debt collector).

82 Syria v. Alliance One Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2018 WL 3455499 (W.D. Wash. July 18, 2018) (criminal court fines and fees, here being collected by private collector, are not claims because they do not originate in contract), aff'd, 770 Fed. Appx. 861 (9th Cir. 2019); Herrera v. AllianceOne Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 3796123 (S.D. Cal. June 18, 2015) (persistent attempt to collect traffic fines from wrong person; Rosenthal Act claim fails because fines are not a debt); Worley v. Mun. Collections of Am., Inc., 2015 WL 890878 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 27, 2015) (municipal fines not a debt covered by consumer act); Sailola v. Mun. Services Bureau, 2014 WL 3389395 (D. Haw. July 9, 2014) (fine and criminal court fees not covered, because underlying transaction not for consumer purpose); In re DeSteph, 2009 WL 5171833 (Bankr. D.N.H. Dec. 2, 2009) (state agency's imposition of penalties for sale of unregistered securities wholly different from collecting debt); In re Benson, 2009 WL 2957786 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. Sept. 10, 2009) (parking fines not debt under state debt collection statute); Rector v. City and County of Denver, 122 P.3d 1010 (Colo. App. 2005) (debt for traffic fines or municipal parking fees did not arise from consumer transaction, so Colorado Fair Debt Collection Act does not apply). But see Daley v. Datacom Sys. Corp., 585 N.E.2d 51 (Ill. 1991) (unpaid municipal parking fine was "debt").

83 See Shelton v. Wilson, 185 Fed. Appx. 696 (9th Cir. 2006) (Or. law) (affirming injunction against unlicensed collection of business debt).

84 See Jones v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 796 Fed. Appx. 821 (5th Cir. 2019) (consumer's testimony that she never used credit card other than for consumer purposes is sufficient, even though she did not tie her testimony to this particular credit card); McDonald v. Bennett, 674 F.2d 1080 (5th Cir. 1982) (Texas Debt Collection Act applies to consumer transactions, not to business ventures); Norton v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 396 F. Supp. 3d 901 (N.D. Cal. 2019) (consumer's allegation that she only used credit cards for consumer purposes sufficient, even though she could not identify this particular alleged credit card debt); Scherer v. Steel Creek Prop. Ass'n., 2016 WL 1251223 (W.D.N.C. Mar. 30, 2016) (dismissing claim regarding collection of property owners' association assessment, because plaintiff landowners who planned to use property for horse farm are not consumers); Amos Fin., L.L.C. v. Law Office of Charles Kazarian, 2016 WL 3102008 (D. Mass. June 2, 2008) (Mass. statute does not apply to line of credit provided to debtor's professional corporation, even if debtor used funds for consumer purposes); Harden v. Autovest, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3049308 (W.D. Mich. May 31, 2016) (fact issue whether loan was consumer; license plate for truck was commercial, but consumer testified that he simply transferred the plate from his old truck); Gray v. Chase Bank, 2011 WL 4716232 (S.D. W. Va. Oct. 7, 2011) (granting summary judgment to creditor because consumer failed to show that credit card was used for personal, family or household purposes); Golden v. Wisconsin Physician's Serv. Health Ins. Corp., 2010 WL 5289682 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 16, 2010) (insurer attempting to recover from physician sums paid in error; not consumer debt); Carlson v. Trans Union, L.L.C., 2003 WL 21750706 (N.D. Tex. July 22, 2003) (allegation that plaintiff was being wrongfully held liable for debts of former employer did not state claim under Texas statute; not consumer debt); In re DeSteph, 2009 WL 5171833 (Bankr. D.N.H. Dec. 2, 2009) (penalties imposed by state agency for sale of unregistered securities not consumer debt); Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C. v. Watkins, 249 Cal. Rptr. 3d 334 (Cal. Ct. App. 2019) (credit card debt arose from consumer credit transaction where card agreement prohibited non-consumer use and there was no evidence that plaintiff used it otherwise); Leach v. Conn. Dep't of Labor, 2019 WL 1436969 (N.H. Mar. 14, 2019) (receipt of unemployment benefits is not a consumer transaction, defined as one involving provision of property, service, or credit for personal, family, or household purposes or a consumer credit transaction, so debt collection statute does not apply to attempts to recoup overpayment); Wells Fargo Bank v. Corneal, 767 S.E.2d 374 (N.C. App. 2014) (must allege that loan was for personal, family, household, or agricultural purposes); Rowe v. Bank of the Cascades, 683 P.2d 93 (Or. Ct. App. 1984); Miller v. Clear Mtn. Bank, Inc., 2013 WL 1301128 (W. Va. Mar. 29, 2013) (definition of consumer in debt collection section of West Virginia Consumer and Credit Protection Act is narrower than that in general definitions section; loan for agricultural purposes not covered). See also ERGS II, L.L.C. v. Lichtin, 2013 WL 1246770 (E.D.N.C. Mar. 27, 2013) (North Carolina requirements for debt buyers' suits on purchased debts apply only to consumer debt; not applicable to personal guarantee of debt of L.L.C.). See generally § 4.6.1, supra (similar definition under FDCPA); National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.1.8 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library (similar definitions under state UDAP statutes).

timeshares,[85] taxes,[86] medical debts,[87] and bail bonds[88] are consumer transactions. The Ninth Circuit held that a loan obtained by the trustee of a revocable trust, to finance repairs to the home of her niece, the beneficiary, was a consumer transaction covered by California's Rosenthal Act.[89] By contrast, courts usually hold that these statutes do not apply to debts to purchases items for resale,[90] acquisition of property for investment purposes,[91] and debts by businesses for their ongoing expenses.[92] When a transaction has mixed purposes, courts often treat the question of whether it is a consumer transaction as a question of fact.[93]

One court granted summary judgment against an identity theft victim on her claim under the state debt collection law because she could not prove that the debt—of which she knew nothing—was incurred for consumer purposes.[94] The court noted, however, that evidence about the nature of the specific charges made with the fraudulently obtained credit card might be sufficient to establish consumer use. Another court, noting the difficulty of applying the consumer transaction definition in identity theft cases, allowed claims by the owner of a small business to go forward where the thief had used the owner's personal identifying information in connection with the accounts and the bank treated the debts as if they were owed personally by the victim.[95] Proof that the defendant's business is collection of consumer debts may be sufficient.[96]

In determining whether a debt arises from a consumer transaction, several courts hold that the purpose of the debt, not the nature of the collateral securing it, is determinative. Thus, a loan for business purposes may be considered a business debt that is not covered by the state debt collection statute, even when it is secured by the borrower's personal residence.[97] Conversely, a loan for personal, financial, or household use is subject to the statute, even if it is secured by business assets or 85 Hartman v. Meridian Fin. Services, 191 F. Supp. 2d 1031, 1048–1049 (W.D. Wis. 2002) (timeshare purchase is consumer transaction).

86 Peters v. Quinney, 2001 WL 1627650 (Tex. App. Dec. 20, 2001) (person who borrowed money to pay his income taxes was consumer within meaning of Texas Debt Collection Act).

87 Schools v. PMAB, L.L.C., 2014 WL 6460613 (D. Md. Nov. 14, 2014) (plaintiff who received barrage of wrong-number calls sufficiently alleged consumer debt; collector's website advertised that it collected individual medical debt, and numerous consumers had filed complaints against it with Better Business Bureau); Flores v. Rawlings Co., L.L.C., 177 P.3d 341 (Haw. 2008) (pursuing subrogation claims for medical benefits plan was consumer debt collection, because underlying debt arose from consumer transaction, purchase of medical care).

88 London v. Gums, 2014 WL 546914 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 10, 2014) (bond is consumer debt, guarantor-wife is consumer, and bonding company is creditor covered by Texas debt collection statute); Monroe v. Frank, 936 S.W.2d 654 (Tex. App. 1996) (person who obtained bail bond for family friend was consumer within meaning of Texas debt collection statute).

89 Gillam v. Levine, 955 F.3d 1117 (9th Cir. 2020) (Cal. law; trust created for tax and estate planning purposes does not lose all state and federal consumer protections).

90 Lockwood v. Auto. Fin. Co., 2005 WL 2107165 (W.D. Pa. Aug. 30, 2005) (where definition of debt is limited to "personal, family or household purposes," it does not apply to vehicle dealer's purchase of cars for resale); Ford v. City State Bank, 44 S.W.3d 121 (Tex. App. 2001) (rancher's purchase of cattle not for personal, household, or family purposes).

91 See, e.g., Kelly v. Regions Bank, 2013 WL 5436674 (N.D. Fla. Sept. 27, 2013) (borrowers' testimony that they "had thought about" building vacation home on land not sufficient to raise fact issue as to consumer use; borrowers already owned a vacation home in Florida, had purchased several parcels of Florida land, and had listed the parcel for sale); Acciard v. Whitney, 2008 WL 5120898 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 4, 2008) (Florida Creditors Collection Practices Act inapplicable where claims arose from complex scam involving sale of investment real estate to naive buyers); Margita v. Diamond Mortgage Corp., 406 N.W.2d 268 (Mich. Ct. App. 1987) (purchase of rental housing as investment was not "debt").

92 See, e.g., B.F. Jackson, Inc. v. CoStar Realty Info., Inc., 2009 WL 1812922 (S.D. Tex. May 20, 2009) (Texas debt collection statute inapplicable to collection of debt for small business's Internet access), adopted, 2015 WL 3902340 (S.D. Tex. June 24, 2015).

93 See, e.g., Rhoades v. W. Va. Credit Bureau Reporting Services, Inc., 96 F. Supp. 2d 528 (S.D. W. Va. 2000) (West Virginia debt collection statute applies to any consumer debt; fact question whether debtor was consumer, where she owned interior design business, but claimed that potted plants from creditor-florist were intended for her home). See also Oppenheim v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 627 F.3d 833 (11th Cir. 2010) (plaintiff here sold laptop online, using PayPal to process buyer's payment, parted with computer after PayPal informed him payment was good; PayPal then dunned him after buyer's payment proved fraudulent; this was consumer transaction because it arose from services provided by PayPal, and was consumer); Parent v. Citibank, 2010 WL 2425943 (E.D. Wis. June 11, 2010) (transaction was consumer under Wisconsin statute where, at request of builder's dissatisfied customer, Home Depot transferred amount from customer's account to builder's personal account; transaction at issue was Home Depot's handling of builder's personal account, not builder's commercial transaction with customer); Levant v. Am. Honda Fin. Corp., 356 F. Supp. 2d 776 (E.D. Mich. 2005) (car not leased for "personal, family or household purposes" within meaning of Michigan Collection Practices Act where it was driven for personal and business use by guarantor's daughter, who was property manager of family business, and some lease payments were made by company).

94 Touroussian v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5524831, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 4, 2013) (identity theft victims' FDCPA and RFDCPA claims fail because they did not sufficiently allege that the thief's debt—a charge account at a retail store—was incurred for personal or household purposes).

95 Soria v. U.S. Bank, 2019 WL 8167925 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 25, 2019). See also §§ 16.2.3.4, 16.2.4.4.7, infra (claims by non-debtors).

96 Schools v. PMAB, L.L.C., 2014 WL 6460613 (D. Md. Nov. 14, 2014) (plaintiff who received barrage of wrong-number calls sufficiently alleged consumer debt; collector's website advertised that it collected individual medical debt, and numerous consumers had filed complaints against it with Better Business Bureau).

97 Sosso v. ESB Bank, 2016 WL 3855031 (W.D. Pa. July 16, 2016) (fact issue whether loan was consumer; refinance of residential mortgage provided cash that may have been intended for business use); Hinchcliffe v. Option One Mortgage Corp. 2009 WL 1708007 (E.D. Pa. June 16, 2009) (loan secured by personal residence, but used to pay expenses of investment properties, was business loan, not covered by Pennsylvania debt collection statute); Ocasio v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2009 WL 650244 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 13, 2009) (loan was not for personal purposes where it was secured by personal residence, but borrower signed as individual and as proprietor of small business). See also In re Howe, 446 B.R. 170 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2009) (type of account—personal or commercial—not conclusive where debtor took cash advances on personal credit card in attempt to save failing business; debt was commercial).

paid from a business line of credit.[98] Courts may give weight to the borrower's statement of the purpose of the transaction at the time of consummation.[99] If the debtor originally enters into the transaction for consumer purposes, then the statute is likely to continue to apply, even if the consumer's purpose later changes.[100]

16.2.3.1.4 Other state provisions regarding particular types of debts

Some state debt collection statutes apply only to debts below a certain dollar amount.[101] The debt collection provisions of the Colorado Uniform Consumer Credit Code explicitly exempt the collection of student loans.[102] Pennsylvania's debt collection statute excludes debts owed to the state[103] and debts arising from loans secured by purchase money mortgages.[104]

In contrast to the FDCPA, some state debt collection statutes do not exclude debts that were not in default when acquired.[105] Nevertheless, California's debt collection statute applies only to a debt that is "due and owing."[106] A court has interpreted this requirement to mean that the debt must be delinquent at the time of the collection activity.[107] Rhode Island's debt collection statute also applies only to the extent that the collection activity concerns a debt that was in default at the time it was obtained by the collector.[108]

Whether state debt collection statutes apply to mortgage servicing, billing, and foreclosure is discussed at § 16.2.3.3.9, infra.

16.2.3.2 Types of Activities Covered

The typical state debt collection statute covers contacts made for the purpose of debt collection. An allegation that the defendant left messages requesting the called party to call a certain number may be insufficient, without more, to establish the debt collection purpose of the calls.[109] Some courts hold that contacts made in connection with mortgage foreclosure, or to offer a mortgage workout, are not made in connection with debt collection.[110]

Some courts have held that filing a proof of claim in bankruptcy is not an "attempt to collect a debt" as defined by the state debt collection statute.[111] The Ninth Circuit held that informational letters from a new mortgage servicer, advising the borrowers of the transfer of the loan and offering them repayment options, were not "in the collection of a claim" within meaning of the Washington statute where they did not 98 Davis v. Hollins Law, 942 F. Supp. 2d 1004 (E.D. Cal. 2013) (end use of funds is determinative; fact issues here where business credit card was used to purchase ordinary household items including groceries and diapers); Selby v. Bank of Am., Inc., 2011 WL 902182 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 14, 2011) (loan secured by investment real estate is consumer loan if proceeds used for personal, family, or household purposes). See also Hetherington v. Allied Int'l Credit Corp., 2008 WL 2838264 (S.D. Tex. July 21, 2008) (fact issue whether debt for NSF check, written on bank account opened in name of debtor d.b.a. his former small business, but used for household and personal purposes, was consumer debt).

99 Dixon v. Golden-Masano-Bradley, Law Firm, 228 Fed. Appx. 142 (3d Cir. 2007) (borrowers' claim under state collection practices law fails where promissory note provided that funds would not be used for personal, family, or household purposes, even though proceeds were so used); McCarthy v. WPB Partners, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4014581 (D.N.H. July 26, 2016) (statute did not apply where preprinted contract stated that loan was business and funds should not be used for personal purposes; no evidence that lender knew at time of origination that borrower might use funds for consumer purposes). Cf. Shapiro v. Haenn, 222 F. Supp. 2d 29, 40 (D. Me. 2002) (fact question whether loan to purchase land was for consumer purposes where consumer claimed that he bought it to build his home on, and did so five years later, but loan papers labeled it commercial and he had tried to sell land before he building home).

100 Haddad v. Alexander, Zelmanski, Danner & Fioritto, 698 F.3d 290 (6th Cir. 2012) (Mich. law; time for determining whether condo assessments are consumer debts is time of purchase; where purchaser lived in condo for fifteen years, then rented it out, assessments remained consumer debt).

101 Islam v. Option One Mortg. Co., 432 F. Supp. 2d 181 (D. Mass. 2006) (dismissing claim under state debt collection regulations because they exclude first mortgage real estate loans and loans over $25,000); Dorr v. Sacred Heart Hosp., 597 N.W.2d 462 (Wis. Ct. App. 1999) (remanding case for determination whether two hospital bills should be aggregated, in which case they would exceed statute's $25,000 cap).

102 Colo. Rev. Stat. § 5-1-202(1)(f).

103 See Keller v. GC Services, L.P., 2013 WL 3213338 (E.D. Pa. June 26, 2013) (debt owed to state student loan guaranty agency is excluded).

104 See, e.g., Dehart v. Homeq Servicing Corp., 2013 WL 12147768 (E.D. Pa. June 25, 2013) (even where claim under Pa. debt collection statute is based solely on collection of insurance, fees, and costs, if obligation arises from a purchase money mortgage it falls within exemption), aff'd, 679 Fed. Appx. 184 (3d Cir. 2017).

105 Hartman v. Meridian Fin. Services, 191 F. Supp. 2d 1031, 1048 (W.D. Wis. 2002); Flores v. Rawlings Co., L.L.C., 177 P.3d 341 (Haw. 2008) (since Hawaii's debt collection statute does not have exception for debts not in default when assigned, it applies to company that pursued collection against medical plan beneficiaries who settled claims with tortfeasors who caused their medical expenses). But see Laccinole v. Twin Oaks Software Dev., Inc., 2014 WL 2440400 (D.R.I. May 30, 2014) (dues processing firm that sent reminder letter to club member whose debit card was declined, during grace period when dues were not yet in default, was not a debt collector because debt was not in default when "obtained"); PurCo Fleet Services, Inc. v. Koenig, 240 P.3d 435 (Colo. App. 2010) (company that took assignment of debt for damages to rental car not debt collector, because debt not in default when assigned), aff'd on other grounds, 285 P.3d 979 (Colo. 2012).

106 Cal. Civ. Code § 1788.2(f), (h).

107 Sanders v. LoanCare, L.L.C., 2019 WL 441964 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 1, 2019) (debt collection statute applies when consumer has missed due date and is in grace period for making payment).

108 R.I. Gen. Laws § 19-14.9-3(5)(f)(3). See Laccinole v. Twin Oaks Software Dev., Inc., 2014 WL 2440400 (D.R.I. May 30, 2014) (billing company that sent out reminder letters during grace period was not debt collector, as debts were not yet in default).

109 Brody v. Genpact Serv., L.L.C., 980 F. Supp. 2d 817 (E.D. Mich. 2013) (message stating that "this is [name] from Genpact Services, please call back" was not a communication within meaning of FDCPA or Michigan debt collection statutes, because it did not convey information about the debt); Rogers v. Bank of Am. Corp., 2010 WL 3703030 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 15, 2010).

110 See § 16.2.3.3.9, infra.

111 Covert v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 6490318 (D. Md. Dec. 9, 2013) (filing proof of claim in bankruptcy case is not an attempt to collect a debt, so Maryland debt collection statute is inapplicable); Jenkins v. Genesis Fin. Solutions (In re Jenkins), 456 B.R. 236, 239–240 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 2011).

demand payment.[112] Another bankruptcy court held that a debt buyer that filed bankruptcy claims, but did not engage in any other collection activity, was not required to register as a collector under Tennessee law.[113] The court relied primarily on a ruling by the state licensing board that the particular debt buyer did not have to register.

16.2.3.3 Types of Collectors Covered

16.2.3.3.1 Creditors collecting their own debts

While some state debt collection statutes apply only to collection agencies,[114] many go beyond the FDCPA and apply to creditors collecting their own debts.[115] One implication of this 112 Walcker v. SN Commercial, L.L.C., 286 Fed. Appx. 455, 457 (9th Cir. 2008).

113 In re Rogers, 2008 WL 1902050 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. Apr. 25, 2008). See generally § 16.2.3.3.2, infra.

114 See Silberstein v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 2017 WL 187165 (W.D. Ark. Jan. 17, 2017) (mortgage lenders and servicers are creditors, not covered by statute, because they are not collecting debts owed to another); Lacelle v. 2010-2 SFR Venture, L.L.C., 2012 WL 5493999 (E.D. Wash. Nov. 9, 2012) (assignee who acquired mortgage from FDIC after original lender failed was a creditor collecting its own debt, not covered by Washington Collection Agency Act); Bohner v. LHR, Inc., 2011 WL 4472621 (D. Minn. Aug. 9, 2011) (Minnesota collection agency statute explicitly excludes banks collecting debts owed to themselves), adopted, 2011 WL 4460394 (D. Minn. Sept. 26, 2011); Braun v. Stawiarski, 2006 WL 2793150 (D. Colo. Sept. 28, 2006) (creditor bank foreclosing mortgage not covered by Colorado debt collection statute); Walcker v. SN Commercial, L.L.C., 2006 WL 3192503 (E.D. Wash. Nov. 2, 2006) (mortgage servicer not debt collector under Washington debt collection statute, which incorporates FDCPA exemptions, where it collected only for related companies, and its principal business was not debt collection), aff'd, 286 Fed. Appx. 455 (9th Cir. 2008); Ailetcher v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 632 P.2d 301 (Haw. Ct. App. 1981) (finance company not subject to collection agency statute); Calvary Invs., L.L.C. v. Vonderheide, 2001 WL 1386190 (Ohio Ct. App. Nov. 9, 2001) (Ohio statute requiring debt collector to have in-state office inapplicable to purchaser of debt after default that sued in own name). See also Bongiovanni v. World Fin. Nat'l Bank Recovery, 2013 WL 142080 (W.D. Wash. Jan. 11, 2013) (Washington Collection Agency Act claim fails; addition of "Recovery Department" after creditor's name would not create false impression that a third party was collecting debt); In re Rogers, 2008 WL 1902050 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. Apr. 25, 2008) (buyer of defaulted debt without recourse did not need to obtain collector's license to file bankruptcy claims).

115 CALIFORNIA: Masuda v. Citibank, 38 F. Supp. 3d 1130 (N.D. Cal. 2014); Moya v. Chase Cardmember Serv., 661 F. Supp. 2d 1129 (N.D. Cal. 2009); Aquino v. Capital One Fin. Corp., 2008 WL 1734752 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 14, 2008) (dismissing FDCPA claim but allowing Rosenthal Act claim to go forward against creditor); Bonvillian v. United Auto Credit, 2007 WL 810097 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 15, 2007); Pickering v. Coast Ctr. for Orthopedic Arthroscopic Surgery & Treatment, 2009 WL 932629 (Cal. Ct. App. Apr. 8, 2009) (creditor liable both for its own deception and for misconduct of collector, which was its agent); First N. Am. Nat'l Bank v. Superior Court, 2005 WL 67123 (Cal. Ct. App. Jan. 13, 2005) (consumer stated claim under state debt collection statute against creditor bank for telephone harassment and improper workplace contacts).

CONNECTICUT: Krutchkoff v. Fleet Bank, 960 F. Supp. 541 (D. Conn. 1996) (Connecticut Creditors Practices Act covers creditors as well as collectors, but provides no private right of action; Editor's Note: 2007 amendments created private right of action). Cf. Wagner v. Am. Nat'l Educ. Corp., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10287 (D. Conn. Dec. 30, 1983) (student loan servicing company billing and collecting debts for vocational school not subject to collection statute applying only to extenders of credit, but it was covered by state debt collection agency statute).

FLORIDA: Helman v. Bank of Am., ___ Fed. Appx. ___, 2017 WL 1350728, at *3 (11th Cir. Apr. 12, 2017); Williams v. Educ. Credit Mgt., Corp., 88 F. Supp. 3d 1338, 1343 (M.D. Fla. 2015); Groves v. U.S. Bank, 2011 WL 2192821 (M.D. Fla. June 6, 2011) (creditor whose primary business is not debt collection not covered by verification provision of debt collection statute, but is covered by other sections that apply to "any person"); Wright v. Bush Ross P.A., 2008 WL 190466 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 18, 2008) (Florida statute applies to any person committing forbidden debt collection acts; homeowners association collecting assessments is covered); Craig v. Park Fin. of Broward Cnty., Inc., 390 F. Supp. 2d 1150 (M.D. Fla. 2005) (some provisions of Florida statute apply to "any person"); Schauer v. GMAC, 819 So. 2d 809 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2002) (some parts of Florida act apply only to collectors, but sections forbidding deception, harassment, etc. apply to creditors); Heard v. Mathis, 344 So. 2d 651 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1977) (statute that applies to "any person" covers individual collecting debt owed to him); Williams v. Streeps Music Co., 333 So. 2d 65 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1976) (statute that applies to "any person" covers retailer); Cook v. Blazer Fin. Serv., Inc., 332 So. 2d 677 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1976) (statute that applies to "any person" covers small loan company even though licensing provisions apply only to collection agencies); White v. Fed. Fin. Corp., 379 So. 2d 136 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1980) (Florida statute covers collection agency even though it owned accounts it collected). See also Abby v. Paige, 2013 WL 141145 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 11, 2013) (comparing FDCPA and Florida Consumer Collection Practices Act; Florida act covers creditors, but imposes knowledge requirements not found in FDCPA), aff'd, 553 Fed. Appx. 970 (11th Cir. 2014).

MARYLAND: Wells Fargo Bank v. Scarlett, 2013 WL 4401315 (D. Md. Aug. 14, 2013) (Maryland act applies to creditor collecting own debts, here, mortgage lender seeking to collect from co-grantee who was not named on note or deed of trust).

MICHIGAN: Gingiloski v. Commercial Recovery Services, 2017 WL 2334946 (E.D. Mich. May 30, 2017) (entity collecting debt is either debt collector covered by Occupational Code, or regulated person covered by Regulation of Collection Practices Act; here dismissing MRCPA claim because defendant is shown to be collection agency covered by Occupational Code); Wolfe v. GC Services, L.P., 2009 WL 230637 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 30, 2009) (entity that collects debts is either "regulated person," subject to Mich. Comp. Laws §§ 445.251 to 445.258, or collection agency, subject to Mich. Comp. Laws §§ 339.901 to 339.920). See also Knight v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4918531 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 31, 2017) (Michigan Occupational Code, which regulates debt collectors, does not apply to mortgage servicer; granting leave to amend to assert claim pursuant to Regulation of Collection Practices Act). Cf. Cadle Co. II, Inc. v. Wechsler, 2006 WL 2959698 (Mich. Ct. App. Oct. 17, 2006) (owner of debt not required to be licensed as debt collector).

NEW HAMPSHIRE: Dionne v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 2016 WL 3264344 (D.N.H. June 14, 2016) (covers creditors collecting "directly or indirectly" so creditor may be vicariously liable for misconduct of collector).

NEW YORK: Frederick v. Capital One Bank, 2015 WL 5521769 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 17, 2015) (N.Y. statute covers principal creditors and assignees as well as third party collectors).

NORTH CAROLINA: Davis Lake Cmty. Ass'n v. Feldmann, 530 S.E.2d 865 (N.C. Ct. App. 2000); Friday v. United Dominion Realty Trust, Inc., 575 S.E.2d 532 (N.C. Ct. App. 2003) (landlord that sought to recover past due rent and related charges was debt collector). Cf. Williams v. HomeEq Servicing Corp., 646 S.E.2d 381 (N.C. Ct. App. 2007) (one of state's two debt collection statutes applies only to collection agencies and excludes banks and their subsidiaries).

broader coverage is that, while landlords are usually immune from liability under the federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act because they are collecting their own debts,[116] they are often subject to state debt collection and other state consumer protection statutes.[117] However, debt collection statutes that apply only to debts arising from extensions of credit may not apply to rent debts.[118]

State debt collection statutes may also provide a basis for holding creditors liable for the acts of debt collectors who are their agents.[119] Unless the statute sets forth some other standard,[120] courts usually apply common law agency principles in determining whether a creditor is liable for its collector's

OREGON: Ying Chang v. Citimortgage, Inc., 2013 WL 5939985 (D. Or. Nov. 2, 2013) (statute applies to creditors; here, servicer who took over servicing when loan not yet in default); Pippert v. Niece, 518 F. Supp. 2d 1265 (D. Or. 2007) (Oregon statute covers creditors, here landlord, manager, and property management company).

PENNSYLVANIA: Jarzyna v. Home Props., L.P., 763 F. Supp. 2d 742, 752 (E.D. Pa. 2011). See also Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., 2002 WL 31618443 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 6, 2002) (creditor liable under Pa. UDAP and debt collection statutes for hiring collectors known to engage in harassing debt collection methods). But see Conklin v. Purcell, Krug, & Haller, 2007 WL 404047 (M.D. Pa. Feb. 1, 2007) (erroneously dismissing pro se litigant's claims under Pa. debt collection and UDAP statutes; discussing FDCPA exemption for creditors collecting their own debts but not broader scope of Pa. statutes), aff'd, 282 Fed. Appx. 193 (3d Cir. 2008).

TEXAS: Miller v. BAC Home Loans, 726 F.3d 717 (5th Cir. 2013) (assignee was debt collector, whether or not mortgage was in default at time of assignment); Perry v. Stewart Title Co., 756 F.2d 1197 (5th Cir. 1985) (mortgage servicing company and bona fide assignee of debt fall within definition of "debt collector" under Texas statute), modified in part on other grounds, 761 F.2d 237 (5th Cir. 1985); Davis v. Wells Fargo Bank, 976 F. Supp. 2d 870 (S.D. Tex. 2013) (mortgage lender's successor is debt collector covered by TDCA), vacated in part on other grounds, 2014 WL 585403 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 14, 2014) (dismissing negligence and unjust enrichment claims of certain named plaintiffs); Gomez v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2010 WL 2900351 (N.D. Tex. July 21, 2010) (mortgagee bank); Peters v. Quinney, 2001 WL 1627650 (Tex. App. Dec. 20, 2001) (individual who loaned money to friend was subject to Texas Debt Collection Act when trying to collect debt).

WEST VIRGINIA: Patrick v. PHH Mortgage Corp., 937 F. Supp. 2d 773 (N.D. W. Va. 2013) (mortgage company is debt collector covered by West Virginia statute); Thomas v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 266 S.E.2d 905 (W. Va. 1980) (statute applying to "any person" covers retailer that is collecting its own debt). See also Watkins v. Wells-Fargo Bank, 2011 WL 777895 (S.D. W. Va. Feb. 28, 2011) (former creditor was "acting as a creditor," and subject to debt collection statute, when it sought to collect a debt that had been voided pursuant to settlement agreement); Universal Bank v. Machnic (In re Machnic), 271 B.R. 789 (Bankr. S.D. W. Va. 2002) (creditor would be liable for debt collection violations by its attorney, as attorney is its agent).

WISCONSIN: Barrows v. Petri & Stocking, S.C., 2008 WL 3540405 (W.D. Wis. Aug. 13, 2008) (lender who obtained judgment against consumer was merchant within meaning of Wisconsin Consumer Act, as was its successor, National Credit Union Administration, which took over failed credit union); Patzka v. Viterbo College, 917 F. Supp. 654 (W.D. Wis. 1996) (college was creditor covered by debt collection provisions of Wisconsin Consumer Act).

116 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692a(4), 1692a(6)(A). See § 4.8.1, supra.

117 See Jarzyna v. Home Properties, L.P., 763 F. Supp. 2d 742 (E.D. Pa. 2011) (state debt collection statute applies to landlord); Pippert v. Niece, 518 F. Supp. 2d 1265 (D. Or. 2007) (Oregon statute covers landlord, manager, property management company, and rent collector); Friday v. United Dominion Realty Trust, Inc., 575 S.E.2d 532 (N.C. Ct. App. 2003) (landlord that sought to recover past due rent and related charges was debt collector); Creekside Apartments v. Poteat, 446 S.E.2d 826 (N.C. Ct. App. 1994) (landlord violated state debt collection statute by collecting and demanding rent for apartments which had been declared uninhabitable by city). But cf. Lamb v. HSC Real Estate, Inc., 2008 WL 467410 (E.D. Wash. Feb. 19, 2008) (Washington Collection Agency Act exempts "property management companies"; fact question whether collector here fits definition). See generally § 16.3, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.2.6 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

118 See § 16.2.3.1, supra.

119 See, e.g., Agrelo v. Affinity Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 841 F.3d 944 (11th Cir. 2016) (Fla. law; homeowners' association may be vicariously liable under state law of agency for acts of collector it employed); Dionne v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 2016 WL 3264344 (D.N.H. June 14, 2016) (statute covers entities "directly or indirectly" collecting debts; creditor can be liable for misconduct of its law firm); White v. Sherman Fin. Group, L.L.C., 984 F. Supp. 2d 841 (E.D. Tenn. 2013) (debt buyer, even if not covered by licensing requirement, may be vicariously liable for actions of its law firm); Lilly v. RAB Performance Recoveries, L.L.C., 2013 WL 4010257 (E.D. Tenn. Aug. 5, 2013) (if debt buyer is collection agency, it can be vicariously liable for misconduct of law firm that is its agent); Boles v. Moss Codilis, L.L.P., 2011 WL 2618791 (W.D. Tex. July 1, 2011) (FDCPA claim fails but Texas Debt Collection Act claim goes forward against creditor whose lawyer's letters to debtors misrepresented their potential liability); Bottoni v. Sallie Mae, Inc., 2011 WL 2293226 (N.D. Cal. June 8, 2011) (agency relationship sufficiently alleged; creditor told collector to add impermissible fee); Valdez v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 2010 WL 4643272 (S.D. Tex. Nov. 16, 2010) (debt buyer did business as three closely related companies; two companies were agents of the third, and all were debt collectors who could be held liable for misconduct of collection agencies they employed); Cavanaugh v. HBSC Card Services, Inc., 2010 WL 3746260 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 22, 2010); Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., P.C., 2002 WL 31618443 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 6, 2002) (creditor liable under Pa. UDAP and debt collection statutes for hiring collectors known to engage in harassing debt collection methods); Baker v. Citibank, 13 F. Supp. 2d 1037 (S.D. Cal. 1998) (overruling motion to dismiss claim that creditor was liable under state debt collection statute for collection agency's misconduct); Pickering v. Coast Ctr. for Orthopedic Arthroscopic Surgery & Treatment, 2009 WL 932629 (Cal. Ct. App. Apr. 8, 2009) (creditor liable both for its own deception and for misconduct of collector, which was its agent). See also Long v. Nationwide Legal File and Serve, Inc., 2013 WL 5219053 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 17, 2013) (to hold attorney services company liable for falsified service of process by independent contractor it hired, must show first that both are debt collectors; RFDCPA definition of "act or practice in connection with the collection of consumer debt" is broad enough to cover service of process; must also show control; fact issue here); Richburg v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 247 F.R.D. 457 (E.D. Pa. 2008) (collector may be liable for letter sent by attorney who was its agent). But cf. Basich v. Patenaude & Felix, APC, 2013 WL 1755484 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 24, 2013) (summary judgment for creditor; no evidence that it controlled activities of collection law firm that levied on wrong person's bank account); Wells Fargo Bank. v. Scarlett, 2013 WL 4401315 (D. Md. Aug. 14, 2013) (borrower failed to show that title company, which made harassing calls, was agent of defendant lender).

120 See, e.g., Schakosky v. Client Services, Inc., 634 F. Supp. 2d 732 (E.D. Tex. 2007) (Texas debt collection statute makes creditor liable for independent collector's misconduct, but only if it hires with "actual knowledge that the independent debt collector repeatedly or continuously engages in acts or practices" that violate statute; not sufficiently pleaded here).

violation of a state debt collection statute.[121] Theories such as common enterprise, ratification, or alter ego liability may also be available to hold creditors or parent corporations liable.[122]

16.2.3.3.2 Assignees and debt buyers

The scope of state debt collection statutes is particularly complex as applied to debt buyers. Most state debt collection statutes were originally enacted before the proliferation of debt buying, and some are ambiguous as to whether they apply to debt buyers. Many of these statutes' definitions have been amended piecemeal over the years, and it is common for the definition of "debt collector" or "collection agency" to include multiple prongs, any number of which may apply to debt buyers. In some states, decisions have primarily interpreted just one prong of the definition, leaving other prongs open for interpretation. The summaries of these statutes in Appendix D, infra, include details about the definitions that may apply to debt buyers, and are a good starting point for analyzing their applicability, but there is no substitute for analyzing the particular statute's exact language.

In many states, the definition of "debt collector" or "collection agency" is idiosyncratic. However, there are some patterns in state definitions, discussed in this subsection.

First, some state debt collection statutes apply only to collection of debts owed to others. This limitation may be found in the definition of "debt collector" or "collection agency," or the statute may confine the term "claim" or "debt" to ones owed to others. A debt buyer may argue that such a statute does not apply to it, because the debts it purchases or acquires by assignment are then owed to it, not to others.

A number of courts have rejected this argument, interpreting the reference to a debt owed to "another" to refer to the original owner of the debt.[123] Often these courts find the key factor to be whether the debt was purchased when it was in default.[124] Other courts have held that these statutes do not apply to debt buyers.[125] Even these courts, though, may deny the exemption

121 See, e.g., Agrelo v. Affinity Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 841 F.3d 944 (11th Cir. 2016) (liability of homeowners' association for acts of collector it employed should be determined by Florida agency law); Mangiaracina v. Orange Lake Country Club, Inc., 2015 WL 685778 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 18, 2015) (consumers sufficiently alleged that entity collecting debts was agent of creditors); London v. Gums, 2014 WL 546914 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 10, 2014) (creditor-bail bondsman liable for misconduct of its employee collector, but not that of third party collector it hired in absence of evidence of agency, actual knowledge of misconduct, or ratification); Bent v. Smith, Dean & Assoc., 2011 WL 2746847 (M.D. Fla. July 14, 2011) (Florida statute, unlike FDCPA, applies to creditors; debtor alleged agency relationship sufficient to make creditor liable for collector's misconduct). Cf. Basich v. Patenaude & Felix, 2013 WL 1755484, at *9, 10 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 24, 2013) (applying agency principles; creditor not liable where it did not have right to control collector's activities); In re Humes, 496 B.R. 557 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 2013) (creditor not vicariously liable for intentional wrongdoing of law firm that falsely told debtor that action would "go away" if he entered into payment plan, then obtained default judgment, as fraudulent conduct is outside scope of agency, but creditor was liable for law firm's breach of payment agreement); Howe v. Creditors Interchange Receivable Mgmt., L.L.C. (In re Howe), 446 B.R. 153 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2009) (complaint that does not allege an agency relationship must be dismissed; state debt collection statute does not make creditor vicariously liable for collector's FDCPA violation).

122 FTC v. Vantage Point Services, 2015 WL 2354473 (W.D.N.Y. May 15, 2015) (fact question whether debt buyer and its related collection agencies amounted to a common enterprise); Davidson v. Seterus, Inc., 230 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441 (Cal. Ct. App. 2018) (reversing dismissal of complaint against parent corporation where complaint alleged agency, ratification, and active engagement in offending conduct; also noting that alter ego liability, while "an extreme remedy, and sparingly used," may be appropriate where plaintiff shows "specific manipulative conduct by the parent toward the subsidiary which relegate[s] the latter to the status of merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of the former").

123 Bray v. Cadle Co., 2010 WL 4053794 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 14, 2010) (owner and employee of debt buyer, both of whom actively participated in debt collection, were third-party debt collectors under Texas definition, which tracks FDCPA, where debt buyer acquired debt when it was in default); Commercial Serv. v. Fitzgerald, 856 P.2d 58 (Colo. App. 1993) (statute's reference to collection of debts "owed or due another" refers to credit originally extended by another, so covers debt buyer even though it owned debts at time it filed suit); Med. Recovery Services, L.L.C. v. Strawn, 321 P.3d 703 (Idaho 2014) (state debt collection statute applies to collection agency that received assignments of debts and then sued on them, as this amounts to "collecting or receiving payment for others"); Centurion Capital Corp. v. Druce, 828 N.Y.S.2d 851 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2006) (holding debt buyer to fall within New York City's administrative code definition of "debt collection agency," which tracks FDCPA, even though it now owns the debt); CA Partners v. Spears, 274 S.W.3d 51, 79 (Tex. App. 2008) (Texas definition of third-party debt collector same as FDCPA; holder of deed of trust was debt collector, because it received assignment after default). See also Spaulding v. Lajoie, 2014 WL 2006770 (Mass. App. Ct. 2014) (purchaser of landlord-tenant debts who then proceeds to collect on them must be licensed under state debt collection statute; this debt buyer actively sought collection and had direct contact with the debtors). Cf. PurCo Fleet Services, Inc. v. Koenig, 240 P.3d 435, 446–447 (Colo. App. 2010) (interpreting definition that tracks FDCPA to require debt buyer to be licensed if debt was obtained when it was in default, but not shown here), aff'd on other grounds, 285 P.3d 979 (Colo. 2012).

124 See, e.g., PurCo Fleet Services, Inc. v. Koenig, 240 P.3d 435, 446–447 (Colo. App. 2010) (interpreting definition that tracks FDCPA to require debt buyer to be licensed if debt was obtained when it was in default; mistakenly applying this rule to hold that licensure was not required where assignment was pursuant to master agreement that predated transactions with this debtor; decision is questionable since coverage turns on whether the debt was in default when it was obtained, not when agreement to assign debts was signed), aff'd on other grounds, 285 P.3d 979 (Colo. 2012); CA Partners v. Spears, 274 S.W.3d 51, 79 (Tex. App. 2008) (Texas definition of third-party debt collector same as FDCPA; holder of deed of trust was debt collector, because it received assignment after default).

125 Grismore v. RJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 2009 WL 806627 (D. Ariz. Mar. 26, 2009) (debt buyer not required to register as debt collector if it buys debts outright without time payments or any kind of contingency arrangement), aff'd, 399 Fed. Appx. 217 (9th Cir. 2010); McClain v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2019 WL 4451781, at *6 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 17, 2019) (debt buyer suing on purchased debt is not "collection agency," defined by Ohio Rev. Code § 1319.12 as one that collects on debts owed to another); Dorrian v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 94 N.E.3d 370 (Mass. 2018) (debt buyer that farms out collection work and has no contact with debtors does not meet statute's criterion that its principal purpose be collection of debt, so need not be licensed; giving weight to longstanding view of state regulator); Asset Acceptance when the assignment does not divest the assignor of all control or right to the claim or otherwise appears to be a sham.[126]

One of the prongs of the definition of "debt collector" in the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act also restricts it to collection of debts "owed or due or asserted to be owed or due another."[127] In its 2017 decision Henson v. Santander Consumer USA Inc.,[128] the Supreme Court interpreted that language to exclude a debt buyer that was collecting a debt that it owned, even though it had not originated the debt. Debt buyers may cite this decision as grounds for courts to interpret state debt collection statutes in the same way. However, the interpretation of state debt collection statutes is a question of state law, not federal law. Moreover, many of these statutes were enacted when it was widely accepted that the FDCPA's reference to a debt owed to "another" referred to the original owner of the debt.[129] It would be reasonable to conclude that state legislatures had this interpretation in mind when they enacted the statutory language, not a different interpretation that was issued years later.

Another reason that Henson should not interfere with the application of state debt collection statutes to debt buyers is that it interprets only one of the two prongs of the FDCPA's definition of "debt collector." The other prong applies the statute to "any person who uses any instrumentality of interstate commerce or the mails in any business the principal purpose of which is the collection of any debts."[130] The Henson court explicitly declined to address this "principal purpose" prong,[131] but many debt buyers are likely to meet it.[132] State debt collection statutes that incorporate the FDCPA's reference to "debts owed or due or asserted to be owed or due another" typically also incorporate the FDCPA's "principal purpose" prong,[133] so should continue to be applicable to debt buyers even if state courts adopt Henson's interpretation of the "due another" prong.[134]

A second pattern in state debt collection statutes is that many include a definition of "debt collector" or "collection agency" as any entity that solicits claims or accepts assignment of claims for purposes of collection.[135] Debt buyers are likely to be held to be soliciting claims for collection accepting assignment of claims, so will fall within the scope of these statutes even if they are not considered to be collecting debts for another.[136]

The applicability of some state debt collection statutes hinges on whether the entity is engaging in debt collection. Most courts have held that debt buyers who purchase debts, but then hire others to pursue collection—sometimes referred to as "passive" debt buyers—are engaged in debt collection.[137]

Corp. v. Robinson, 625 N.W.2d 804 (Mich. Ct. App. 2001) (holding that entity that purchased the obligation and then attempted to collect on it is not a collection agency, defined in part as an entity collecting a claim owed another; failing to evaluate other part of definition, which brings in entities directly or indirectly engaged in soliciting claims for collection); Equable Ascent Fin., L.L.C. v. Ybarra, 2013 WL 5442391 (Ohio Ct. App. Sept. 30, 2013) (purchaser of debt is not collecting it for another, so collection agency statute is inapplicable, but fact issue here whether debt buyer owned debt, or was collecting on behalf of owner).

126 See, e.g., Purco Fleet Services, Inc. v. Idaho State Dep't of Fin., 90 P.3d 346 (Idaho 2004) (state debt collection statute applicable where assignment did not divest the assignor of all control and right to the claim). See also Hernandez v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2008 WL 4426890 (D. Conn. 2008) (debt buyer is creditor, not subject to Collection Agency Act, if it purchases without recourse and not just as sham to avoid provision of act that forbids collection agencies to sue on assigned debts); Zapata v. Ball State Univ., 16 N.E.3d 491 (Ind. Ct. App. 2014) (unpublished) (company's "assignment" of debt to company president was sham to avoid requirement that corporation must be represented by counsel to sue on debt).

127 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6).

128 ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1718, 198 L. Ed. 2d 177 (2017).

129 See, e.g., Ruth v. Triumph P'ships, 577 F.3d 790 (7th Cir. 2009); Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Check Investors, Inc., 502 F.3d 159 (3d Cir. 2007); Schlosser v. Fairbanks Capital Corp., 323 F.3d 534, 536 (7th Cir. 2003); Pollice v. Nat'l Tax Funding, L.P., 225 F.3d 379 (3d Cir. 2000); N. Star Capital Acquisitions, L.L.C. v. Krig, 611 F. Supp. 2d 1324 (M.D. Fla. 2009); Larsen v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 533 F. Supp. 2d 290 (E.D.N.Y. 2008); Kimber v. Fed. Fin. Corp., 668 F. Supp. 1480, 1484 (M.D. Ala. 1987).

130 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6).

131 Henson v. Santander Consumer USA Inc., ___U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1718, 1721, 198 L. Ed. 2d 177 (2017).

132 See § 4.7.2.2, supra (analysis of Henson).

133 See, e.g., Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 93, § 24; 19 R.I. Gen. Laws 19-14.9-3.

134 See, e.g., Commercial Serv. of Perry, Inc. v. Fitzgerald, 856 P.2d 58 (Colo. App. 1993) (concluding that state debt collection statute applied to debt buyer because its principal purpose was debt collection, and construing other provisions of the statute to be consistent with this reading).

135 See, e.g., N.D. Cent. Code § 13-05-01.1.

136 In re Wilson, 311 B.R. 566 (D. Or. 2004) (debt buyer that purchases all right, title, and interest in debt and then seeks to collect falls within definition of "collection agency" because it is "engaged in soliciting claims for collection"; finding exclusion for factoring services inapplicable because debt buyer purchased the debts one at a time, without an overarching agreement), aff'd, 185 Fed. Appx. 696 (9th Cir. 2006); Fausset v. Mortgage First, L.L.C., 2010 WL 987169 (N.D. Ind. Mar. 12, 2010) (fact issue whether assignee of mortgage was collection agency required to be licensed; if "default loan servicing company" solicited claims for collection, license was required); McCorriston v. LWT, Inc., 536 F. Supp. 2d 1268 (M.D. Fla. 2008) (debt buyer that purchased portfolios of charged-off debts may be in business of soliciting debts for collection, and therefore required to register as collection agency); Goray v. CCR Unifund Partners, 2007 WL 4260017 (D. Haw. Dec. 4, 2007) (Hawaii statute defines collector to include persons who regularly accept assignment of claims; debt buyer who purchased charged-off credit card accounts and hired local counsel to sue in its name falls within this definition, even if it does not fall within other prongs of the definition, so is required to register); Simpson v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 440 S.W.3d 335 (Ark. 2014) (debt buyer that purchases accounts and retains attorney to sue on them is debt collector, subject to debt collection statute's licensing requirements); Gray v. Suttell & Assoc., 334 P.3d 14 (Wash. 2014) (debt buyer that solicits claims for collection is debt collector and must be licensed, even if it outsources the collection activity; recent amendment to Collection Agency Act, explicitly covering these debt buyers, was clarification, not change, of existing law). See also LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, G.P., 601 F.3d 1185 (11th Cir. 2010) (Fla. law; out-of-state debt buyer that sent dunning letter met statutory definition, which requires that it collect or attempt to collect debts and solicit debts for collection).

137 LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, G.P., 601 F.3d 1185, 1197 (11th Cir. 2010) (Fla. law); Lawrence v. First Fed. Inv. Fund, 2020 WL 1065860

Many statutes specify that either direct or indirect collection activity suffices, making it particularly clear that they apply to such debt buyers.[138] However, Tennessee amended its debt collection statute in 2014 to exempt debt buyers that hire attorneys or collection agencies to collect.[139]

Several state debt collection statutes have been amended in recent years to include an explicit definition of "debt buyer" or to add a definition that unequivocally sweeps them in. For example, the Maryland statute that requires collection agencies to be licensed applies, inter alia, to "an entity collecting a claim it owns, if the claim was in default when acquired."[140]

West Virginia's collection agency licensure statute defines "collection agency" as one seeking to collect a debt "originally" due or asserted to be due or owed another.[141] Sometimes, however, these definitions are only for the purposes of certain specific requirements such as licensure.

Several states have also adopted statutes or court rules in recent years that specifically address the documentation that debt buyers must present to a court in order to obtain a default judgment or that institute other protections against improper judgments on purchased debts.[142] The pleading and proof requirements for suits on assigned debts are discussed in detail in NCLC's Collection Actions treatise.[143]

The question whether a debt buyer has standing to sue on a debt assigned to it is discussed in another treatise in this series.[144] Whether, when a state credit statute requires a lender to be licensed in order to originate a debt, a debt buyer or collector of that debt must also be licensed, is also discussed in another treatise.[145]

16.2.3.3.3 Entities not in the business of debt collection

Some state debt collection statutes exclude entities that collect debts only occasionally.[146] For example, one of North

(D. Utah Mar. 5, 2020) (passive debt buyer is "collection office" which must register as collection agency; noting that "many of the worst abuses in the debt collection industry are by debt buyers"); Galvan v. NCO Fin. Systems, Inc., 2016 WL 792009 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 1, 2016) (passive debt buyer required to be licensed); Simpson v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 440 S.W.3d 335 (Ark. 2014) (debt buyer solicits claims for collection so debt collection statute applies to it even though its collection activity is limited to retaining law firms to file suit on the debts; rejecting argument that statute, which was silent on the question, should be interpreted to require that collection activity be direct); LVNV Funding, L.L.C. v. Trice, 32 N.E.3d 553, 559 (Ill. 2015) (Collection Agency Act applies to debt buyers and assignees that collect solely through attorneys they hire, even before statute was amended in 2013 to add a special definition of debt buyer); LVNV Funding v. Finch, 207 A.3d 202 (Md. 2019) (debt buyer on whose behalf affidavits were filed in collection actions by persons claiming to be its authorized representatives and to have personal knowledge of facts is acting as collection agency and must be licensed). See also Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C. v. Watkins, 249 Cal. Rptr. 3d 334 (Cal. Ct. App. 2019) (passive debt buyer can be debt collector if it indirectly collects through separate entity, if two form an "interdependent economic enterprise"; shown here where debt buyer and collector were under common ownership, shared some employees, and debt buyer made policy decisions exercised control over its affiliate). But see Dorrian v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 94 N.E.3d 370 (Mass. 2018) (debt buyer that farms out collection work and has no contact with debtors does not meet statute's criterion that its principal purpose be collection of debt, so need not be licensed; giving weight to longstanding view of state regulator).

138 See, e.g., Ademiluyi v. PennyMac Mortgage Inv. Trust Holdings I, 929 F. Supp. 2d 502 (D. Md. 2013) (Maryland Collection Agency Act applies to buyers of defaulted debt who file collection actions in Maryland); Fiorenzano v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2562415 (D.R.I. June 29, 2012) (debt buyer, which purchased past-due debt but hired law firm to collect it, is collector covered by registration requirement of Rhode Island statute, which applies to entities that directly or indirectly collect debts); Winemiller v. Worldwide Asset Purchasing, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1457749 (D. Md. Apr. 15, 2011) (debt buyer is a collection agency; rejecting arguments that filing lawsuits is not "do[ing] business" as a collection agency as required by statute, and that debt buyers do not meet definition).

139 Tenn. Code Ann. § 62-20-103(a)(9). See Bradford v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 599 Fed. Appx. 580 (6th Cir. 2015) (former Tennessee statute did not require license for debt buyer that hired attorney or collection agency to collect; statute has since been amended to explicitly exclude these debt buyers).

140 Md. Code Ann., Bus. Reg. §§ 7-101. See LVNV Funding v. Finch, 207 A.3d 202 (Md. 2019) (passive debt buyer must be licensed, and debt buyer on whose behalf "authorized representatives" filed affidavits in collection actions is acting as a collection agency). But cf. Blackstone v. Sharma, 191 A.3d 1188 (Md. 2018) (substitute trustees of out-of-state trusts owning defaulted mortgages are not required to obtain Maryland collectors' licenses before initiating foreclosure; amendment was intended to clarify coverage of debt buyers, not to expand statute to cover real estate mortgages).

141 W. Va. Code § 47-16-2(b).

142 Cal. Civil Code §§ 1788.50 to 1788.64; Colo. Rev. Stat. § 5-16-111(2); Conn. Gen. Stat. § 36a-813, 36a-814 Me. Stat. tit. 32, § 11013(9), 11013(10), 11019; Md. Rules of Civil Procedure § 3-306; Mass. Uniform Small Claim Rule 2(b); Minn. Stat. § 548.101; N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. tit. 22, §§ 202.27-a, 202.27-b, 208.14-a, 210.14-a, 212.14-a, 212.14-b; N.C. Gen. Stat. §§ 58-70-115, 58-70-150, 58-70-155; Or. Rev. Stat. § 646.639(2)(t); Vt. Rules Civ. Proc. 55; Vt. Rules of Small Claims Proc. 3e.

143 National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 3, 4 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

144 National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 4.3 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

145 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Credit Regulation § 3.11.7.2 (3d ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

146 Stephen Boston v. ClubCorp. USA, Inc., 2019 WL 1877592 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 2, 2019) (club that allowed one new member, current plaintiff, to make time payments on his initiation fee, was not debt collector); Moore v. Transworld Systems, Inc., 2018 WL 6683335 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 9, 2018) (dismissing Rosenthal Act claim against health insurer that tried twice to collect debt that was not owed; no showing that it regularly collects debts arising from consumer transactions); Calhoun v. Certegy Check Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 4146886 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 20, 2014) (construing debt collection statute, which applies only to entities regularly collecting debts, not to apply to check guarantee service, where debtor alleged only that it reported the debt to credit bureaus, not that it engaged in direct collection efforts); Kirkpatrick v. Dover & Fox, P.C., 2013 WL 5723077 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 21, 2013) (fact issue whether law firm collected debts often enough to be covered by Texas Debt Collection Act; 5% of its practice was debt collection, and consumers presented evidence that it sent 38 letters to various debtors); Groves v. U.S. Bank, 2011 WL 2192821 (M.D. Fla. June 6, 2011) (creditor whose primary business is not debt collection not covered by verification provision of debt collection statute, but is covered by other sections that apply to "any person"); Royal Co. Auctioneers, Inc. v. Coast Printing Equip. Co., 238 Cal. Rptr. 538 (Cal. Ct. App. 1987) (person collecting debt of another in single isolated instance not "in the business of collecting claims

Carolina's two debt collection statutes allows a claim only if the acts or practices were "in or affecting commerce," which is construed to mean those normal day-to-day activities regularly conducted by the business and for which the business was organized.[147] Illinois exempts businesses whose collection activities are confined to and directly related to the operation of a business other than debt collection.[148]

16.2.3.3.4 Attorneys

It is common for debt collection statutes to exclude lawyers from their licensing provisions, and sometimes from their substantive prohibitions as well.[149] In other states, courts for others"); Old Republic Ins. Co. v. Gordon, 137 A.3d 237 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 2016) (credit insurer that sought subrogation from defaulted debtor was not in the business of collecting debts); Catherman v. First State Bank, 796 S.W.2d 299 (Tex. App. 1990) (law firm that did not regularly collect consumer debts was not "debt collector"). See also Miller v. Faulkner, 2009 WL 2883140 (D. Conn. Sept. 12, 2009) (attorney who filed FDCPA suit on behalf of consumers, and made calls to the FDCPA defendants in pre-litigation efforts to resolve the matter, was not engaged in debt collection, so state UDAP and debt collection statutes are inapplicable); Hartman v. Meridian Fin. Services, 191 F. Supp. 2d 1031, 1049 (W.D. Wis. 2002) (timeshare seller was "merchant" under Wisconsin debt collection statute, as it met requirement of regularly engaging in consumer transactions).

147 Davis Lake Cmty. Ass'n v. Feldmann, 530 S.E.2d 865 (N.C. Ct. App. 2000).

148 225 Ill. Comp. Stat. § 425/2.03. See Residential Credit Solutions, Inc. v. Pendyuk, 2012 WL 6963533 (Ill. App. Ct. Oct. 4, 2012) (unpublished) (whether mortgage servicer is debt collector depends on what else it does besides collect mortgage payments).

149 ALASKA: Alaska Stat. § 08.24.090(b) (excluding attorneys when engaged in the regular course of their business).

ARIZONA: Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 32-1004 (exempting attorneys from licensing requirements), § 32-1051 (exempting attorneys from certain duties).

ARKANSAS: Ark. Code Ann. § 17-24-102(b) (attorneys licensed in Arkansas who are rendering collection services for clients are exempt from provisions regarding licensure, fees, and long-arm jurisdiction).

CONNECTICUT: Under Conn. Gen. Stat. § 36a-800(2), part of the Consumer Collection Agencies Act, "consumer collection agency" does not include "any member of the bar of this state." On the other hand, the Creditors' Collection Practices Act, Conn. Gen. Stat. §§ 36a-645 through 36a-648a, which applies to creditors collecting their own debts, does not contain any language that would exclude attorneys.

DELAWARE: Del. Code Ann. tit. 30, § 2301(a)(11) (excluding attorneys licensed in Delaware).

HAWAII: Haw. Rev. Stat. § 443B-1, part of the state collection agencies law, excludes licensed attorneys acting within the scope of their profession. See, e.g., Goray v. CCR Unifund Partners, 2007 WL 4250017 (D. Haw. Dec. 4, 2007) (attorney and legal assistants retained by debt buyer explicitly exempt from collection agency act). However, the state Collection Practices Act, Haw Rev. Stat. §§ 480D-1 to 480D-5, does not have an exception for attorneys.

IDAHO: Idaho Code Ann. § 26-2239 (stating that the Act does not apply to "[p]ersons licensed to practice law in this state, to the extent that they are retained by their clients to engage in activities authorized by this act, and such activities are incidental to the practice of law," but also stating "Such exemption shall not apply to an attorney engaged in a separate business conducting the activities authorized by this act").

ILLINOIS: 225 Ill. Comp. Stat. § 425/2.03 (Collection Agency Act does not apply to licensed attorneys at law). See Tilmon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 1001237 (S.D. Ill. Mar. 13, 2013) (law firms explicitly exempted by Illinois Collection Agency Act); Jeffries v. Dutton & Dutton, P.C., 2006 WL 1343629 (N.D. Ill. May 11, 2006) (lawyers are specifically exempted by Illinois statute); Gibbs v. Bitt & Gaines, P.C., 6 N.E.3d 755 (Ill. App. Ct. 2014) (law firm is exempt from Collection Agency Act); People ex rel. Khajehhosseini v. Kluever & Platt, L.L.C., 2014 WL 2730287 (Ill. App. Ct. June 13, 2014) (unpublished) (construing Illinois debt collection statute's exemption of attorneys to exempt law firms as well).

INDIANA: Ind. Code. § 25-11-1-2 (term "collection agency" does not include an attorney).

LOUISIANA: La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 9:3534.1 (the terms "collection agency" and "debt collector" do not include a licensed Louisiana attorney).

MARYLAND: Md. Code Ann., Bus. Reg. § 7-102(b)(9) (inapplicable to "a lawyer who is collecting a debt for a client, unless the lawyer has an employee who: (i) is not a lawyer; and (ii) is engaged primarily to solicit debts for collection or primarily makes contact with a debtor to collect or adjust a debt through a procedure identified with the operation of a collection agency"). See, e.g., Murray v. Bierman, Geesing, Ward & Wood, L.L.C., 2012 WL 440679, at *5 (D. Md. Sept. 27, 2012) ("MCALA's licensing requirement does not apply to lawyers collecting debts for clients."). See also Grant-Fletcher v. McMullen & Drury, P.A., 964 F. Supp. 2d 514, 527 (D. Md. 2013) (plaintiff did not allege facts showing that employee was primarily engaged to solicit debts for collection). But see Allen v. Silverman Theologou, L.L.P., 2015 WL 2129698 (D. Md. May 6, 2015) (law firm is a collection agency and does not qualify for the attorney exception).

MASSACHUSETTS: Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 93, § 24 (excluding "attorneys-at-law collecting a debt on behalf of a client").

MICHIGAN: The prohibitions of the state Regulation of Collection Practices Act apply to "regulated persons." Mich. Comp. Laws §§ 445.251(g) defines this term as "a person whose collection activities are confined and are directly related to the operation of a business other than that of a collection agency including . . . [a]n attorney who is handling a claim or collection on behalf of a client and in the attorney's own name"). See Newman v. Trott & Trott, P.C., 889 F. Supp. 2d 948, 965–967 (E.D. Mich. 2012) (state occupational code excludes attorneys and law firms from definition of "collection agency," but they fall within scope of state Regulation of Collection Practices Act); Misleh v. Timothy E. Baxter & Assoc., 786 F. Supp. 2d 1330 (E.D. Mich. 2011) (lawyer collecting on behalf of client is regulated person covered by state Regulation of Collection Practices Act). But see Stolicker v. Muller, Muller, Richmond, Harms, Myers & Sgroi, 2005 WL 2180481 (W.D. Mich. Sept. 9, 2005) (law firm collecting on behalf of client not "regulated person" covered by Regulation of Collection Practices Act).

On the other hand, the state Occupational Code's collection agency provisions exclude ""a person whose collection activities are confined and are directly related to the operation of a business other than that of a collection agency such as . . . [a]n attorney who is handling a claim or collection on behalf of a client and in the attorney's own name." Mich. Comp. Laws § 339.901(b). See Montgomery v. Shermeta, Adams & Von Allmen, P.C., 885 F. Supp. 2d 849 (W.D. Mich. 2012) (law firm is exempt from state occupational code's definition of "collection agency"); Dudis v. Mary Jane M. Elliott, P.C., 2012 WL 3150821 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 2, 2012) (state occupational code is inapplicable to law firm); Grden v. Leiken, Ingber & Winters, P.C., 2010 WL 199947 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 19, 2010) (attorney collecting on behalf of client is not a collection agency under Occupational Code), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 643 F.3d 169 (6th Cir. 2011).

MINNESOTA: Minn. Stat. § 332.32(2) (term "collection agency" does not include "persons whose collection activities are confined to and are directly related to the operation of a business other than that of a collection agency such as . . . lawyers"). See Burgi v. Gurstel Law Firm, P.A., 2008 WL 46234984 (D. Minn. Oct. 17, 2008) (collection agency act exemption for lawyers "engaged in the practice of law" applies to lawyers retained by card issuer to send pre-litigation demand letters and, if necessary, sue); State ex rel. Swanson v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2009 WL 1046869 (Minn. Ct. App. Apr. 21, 2009) (attorney exception in Minnesota Collection Agency Act applies broadly to attorneys engaged in practice of law and bars claims arising from garnishment practices or claims for unauthorized attorney fees).

NEBRASKA: Neb. Rev. Stat. § 45-602 (licensing statute; "collection agency" does not include "attorneys at law handling claims and collections in their own names and not operating a collection agency under the management of a layperson").

NEVADA: Nev. Rev. Stat. § 649.020 ("collection agency" does not include "[a]ttorneys and counselors at law licensed to practice in this State, so long as they are retained by their clients to collect or to solicit or obtain payment of such clients' claims in the usual course of the practice of their profession"). See Carpenter v. Alessi & Konig, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5234253 (D. Nev. Sep. 16, 2013) (Nevada's licensure law defines collection agency to exclude lawyers collecting for their clients "in the usual course of the practice of their profession" so long as the lawyers are not "conducting collection agencies"; firm hired by homeowners' association to collect assessments and file lien was not a collection agency); Calvert v. Alessi & Konig, L.L.C., 2013 WL 592906 (D. Nev. Feb. 12, 2013) (same).

NEW JERSEY: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 45:18-6 (exempting "an attorney at law duly authorized to practice in this state").

NEW MEXICO: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 61-18A-2(C)(6) ("collection agency" does not include "any attorney-at-law collecting a debt as an attorney on behalf of and in the name of a client"). See, e.g., Martinez v. Gugliemo & Associates, P.L.L.C., 2014 WL 12597409, at *5 (D.N.M. June 19, 2014) ("In other words, there is an exemption for lawyers and law firms.").

NORTH CAROLINA: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 58-70-15(c), part of the state collection agencies law, states that "collection agency" does not include "[a]ttorneys-at-law handling claims and collections in their own name and not operating a collection agency under the management of a layman." The article of the state UDAP statute entitled Prohibited Acts by Debt Collectors, N.C. Gen. Stat. §§ 75-50 to 75-56, does not explicitly exclude attorneys, but it makes a private cause of action available only through the state UDAP statute, which does exclude attorneys. See Schwinn v. Shapiro & Ingle, L.L.P., 2013 WL 1010457 (E.D.N.C. Mar. 13, 2013) (claim under North Carolina debt collection statute must satisfy requirements of UDAP statute, which exempts "professional services rendered by a member of a learned profession," so does not allow claim against lawyers collecting debts for their clients); Culver v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2005 WL 5621875 (E.D.N.C. June 28, 2005) (UDAP statute's exemption for members of learned professions applies to debt collection statute also); Godfredson v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 387 F. Supp. 2d 543 (E.D.N.C. 2005) (exemption for member of learned profession rendering professional services applies to lawyer collecting debts); Sadler v. Scott Lowery Law Office, P.C., 737 S.E.2d 191 (N.C. Ct. App. 2013) (collection law firm with one supervising attorney and numerous non-lawyer employees was not a collection agency, where collection was undertaken on behalf of clients, in the law firm's name); Reid v. Ayers, 531 S.E.2d 231 (N.C. Ct. App. 2000) (attorneys and law firms collecting debts are excluded by exemption for services provided by learned profession). Cf. In re Huff, 521 B.R. 107 (Bankr. N.D.N.C. 2014) (learned profession exception to North Carolina statute protects only the professional, not the client, here creditor who is alleged to have acted unconscionably in obtaining deed of trust).

NORTH DAKOTA: N.D. Cent. Code § 13-05-02.3 includes in its exemptions: "Attorneys at law who are licensed to practice in the state of North Dakota." The provision also states: "This exemption is limited to the actions of the licensed attorney and does not extend to persons either employed by the attorney or acting on behalf of the attorney."

OREGON: Or. Rev. Stat. § 697.005(1)(b)(D), part of the state collection agency law, states that "collection agency" does not include "attorney-at-law rendering services in the performance of the duties of an attorney-at-law." The provisions of Oregon's UDAP statute regarding unlawful debt collection practices, §§ 646.639 to 646.641, does not exclude attorneys, but a court held that the statute "does not apply to litigation activities, but rather only to nonlitigation collection efforts." Daniel N. Gordon, P.C. v. Rosenblum, 370 P.3d 850, 861 (Or. Ct. App. 2016).

PENNSYLVANIA: 18 Pa. Cons. Stat. § 7311, defines collection agency as "[a] person, other than an attorney at law duly admitted to practice in any court of record in this Commonwealth, who, as a business, enforces, collects, settles, adjusts, or compromises claims, or holds himself out, or offers, as a business, to enforce, collect, settle, adjust, or compromise claims." But cf. Lesher v. Law Office of Mitchell N. Nay, P.C., 2009 WL 4794176 (M.D. Pa. Dec. 7, 2009) ("The 18 Pa. C. S. § 7311 issues include the issue whether Law Offices of Mitchell N. Kay, P.C., is a collection agency. The defendant in its brief suggests that the plaintiff's theory that the defendant is a law firm, not a collection agency, should result in a dismissal of the 18 Pa. C. S. § 7311 claim. We do not agree. Whether the defendant law firm is a "collection agency" is not shown by the defendant to be free from dispute in this case.").

On the other hand, Pennsylvania's other debt collection practices statute, the Fair Credit Extension Uniformity Act, 73 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 2270.3(3)(ii), states that "collection agency" includes: "[a]n attorney, whenever such attorney attempts to collect a debt, as herein defined, except in connection with the filing or service of pleadings or discovery or the prosecution of a lawsuit to reduce a debt to judgment." See, e.g., Salvati v. DeutscheBank Nat'l Trust Co., 575 Fed. Appx. 49 (3d Cir. 2014) (sending statutorily required pre-foreclosure notice is "in connection with" a lawsuit); Glover v. Udren Law Offices, P.C., 139 A.3d 195, 200 (Pa. 2016) ("In the FCEUA, the Legislature sought directly to curtail abuses by these third parties—including attorneys, when their actions were taken in their capacities as debt collectors."). See also Fratz v. Goldman & Warshaw, P.C., 2012 WL 4931469 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 16, 2012) (attorneys' debt collection activities—here, submission of documents in arbitration proceedings—not exempted); Richburg v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 247 F.R.D. 457 (E.D. Pa. 2008) (attorney exemption inapplicable to lawyer's dunning letter that did not mention litigation). Cf. Gigli v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2008 WL 3853295 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 14, 2008) (attorney exemption bars claim against debt buyer's attorneys for inclusion of false information in pleading, but not claim against debt buyer that supplied arguably false information to attorneys). But cf. Silva v. Mid-Atlantic Mgmt. Corp., 277 F. Supp. 2d 460 (E.D. Pa. 2003) (lawyers, who were debt collectors within meaning of FDCPA, not covered by state debt collection statute, as they did not use extra-judicial methods of collection, and state statute exempts litigation activities).

RHODE ISLAND: R.I. Gen. Laws § 19-14.9-3(5) ("debt collector" does not include "[a]ttorneys-at-law collecting a debt on behalf of a client").

TENNESSEE: Tenn. Code Ann. § 62-20-103 (inapplicable to attorneys at law). See Lilly v. RAB Performance Recoveries, L.L.C., 2013 WL 3834008 (E.D. Tenn. July 23, 2013) (law firm that sent dunning letters for its client, a collection agency, was protected by attorney exception; distinguishing this from "non-lawyerly" activities such as debt buying).

TEXAS: Tex. Fin. Code § 392.001(7) states: "'Third-party debt collector' means a debt collector, as defined by [the FDCPA], but does not include an attorney collecting a debt as an attorney on behalf of and in the name of a client unless the attorney has nonattorney employees who: (A) are regularly engaged to solicit debts for collection; or (B) regularly make contact with debtors for the purpose of collection or adjustment of debts." This is only a partial exemption for attorneys, and courts have concluded that attorneys can be held liable under the Act if the evidence shows that they satisfy the separate definition of "debt collector." See Ruiz deBalderas v. ETX Successor Athens, 2020 WL 1479583 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 4, 2020), adopted, 2020 WL 1478563 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 26, 2020); Swank v. Citimortgage, Inc., 2014 WL 12464925, at *4 (W.D. Tex. Jan. 27, 2014); Kirkpatrick v. Dover & Fox, 2013 WL 5723077 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 21, 2013) (need not show that debt collection was principal business in order for law firm to meet definition of "debt collector"; firm that sent 38 debt collection letters in one year was debt collector); Hunt v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 2012 WL 219330, at *9 (S.D. Tex. Jan. 24, 2012); Eads v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.P., 538 F. Supp. 2d 981, 988 n.1 (W.D. Tex. 2008) (Gibson v. Crupo de Ariel, L.L.C., 2006 WL 42369, at *4 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 9, 2006).

UTAH: Utah Code Ann. § 12-1-7 (inapplicable to "an attorney licensed to practice in this state").

WASHINGTON: Wash. Rev. Code § 19.16.100(5) ("collection agency" does not mean "[a]ny person whose collection activities are carried on in his, her, or its true name and are confined and are directly related to the operation of a business other than that of a collection agency, such as . . . lawyers"). See Genschork v. Suttell & Hammer, 2013 WL 6118678 (E.D. Wash. Nov. 21, 2013) (after judgment was vacated and case dismissed, attorneys obtained garnishment order by misrepresenting that judgment was valid; debt collection claim fails because it arose from attorney's "competence or strategy," not the entrepreneurial aspects of practice); Lacelle v. 2010-2 SFR Venture, L.L.C., 2012 WL 5493999 (E.D. Wash. Nov. 9, 2012) (lawyer who served as trustee of deed of trust is protected by attorney exemption); Motherway v. Gordon, 2010 WL 2803052 (W.D. Wash. July 15, 2010) (law firm hired by debt buyer to collect is protected by attorney exception); Campion v. Credit Bureau Services, Inc., 2000 WL 33255504 (E.D. Wash. Sept. 19, 2000) (collector's lawyer is not collector, so not liable under Washington Collection Agency Act for failure to follow proper garnishment procedure). But see Paris v. Steinberg & Steinberg, 828 F. Supp. 2d 1212 (W.D. Wash. 2011) (interpreting Washington debt collection statute to exempt attorneys only when collecting their own debts, not debts owed to others); Mandelas v. Gordon, 2010 WL 2639846 (W.D. Wash. June 28, 2010) (exemption applies only if law firm is collecting debt owed to it; denying motion to dismiss claim against lawyer who obtained arbitration award in favor of debt buyer and used garnishment to collect). But cf. Moritz v. Daniel N. Gordon, P.C., 895 F. Supp. 2d 1097 (W.D. Wash. 2012) (out-of-state law firm is not exempt from requirement to obtain collection agency license); Carter v. Suttell & Assoc., P.S., 2011 WL 396038 (Wash. Ct. App. Jan. 13, 2011) (exemption for attorneys is not absolute, but merely engaging in collection litigation is insufficient; placing FDCPA warning on letters not conclusive, as FDCPA defines debt collector more broadly than state law); Lang v. Gordon, 2011 WL 62141 (W.D. Wash. Jan. 6, 2011) (applying collection agency act to law firm not unconstitutional, because running a collection agency is entrepreneurial; fact issue here whether firm was a collection agency); Trust Fund Services v. Aro Glass Co., 575 P.2d 716 (Wash. 1978) (trust fund that was created to receive assignments of, and bring suit for, employers' unpaid obligations to union health plans was mere alter ego of law firm that filed suit, so firm need not be licensed as debt collector as it falls within exemption for lawyers, whose collection activities are carried on in true name and are confined and directly related to operation of noncollection agency business).

WEST VIRGINIA: W. Va. Code § 47-16-2(b) (licensing statute; "collection agency" does not include "attorneys-at-law handling claims and collections in their own names and not operating a collection agency under the management of a layman").

WISCONSIN: Wis. Stat. § 218.04(1)(a), part of a statute regulating collection agencies, states that the term collection agency "does not include attorneys at law authorized to practice in this state and resident herein." On the other hand, the debt collection provisions of Wisconsin's Consumer Act, Wis. Stat. §§ 427.101 to 427.105, do not exclude attorneys, and courts have held that a law firm may be a debt collector. Kobilka v. Cottonwood Fin. Wisconsin, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1137471 (W.D. Wis. Mar. 12, 2015) ("Defendant Kohn Law Firm, SC, is a limited liability company, engaged in the collection of debt on behalf of others. Kohn Law Firm is also a 'debt collector' and 'merchant' as defined by Wis. Stat. § 421.301"); Hopkins v. Capital One Bank, USA, 2015 WL 327631 (W.D. Wis. Jan. 26, 2015) (same).

distinguish between the practice of law on the one hand, and running a collection agency[150] or buying defaulted debts for purposes of collection on the other.[151] Some states exempt lawyers from the registration requirements for collection agencies, but apply the substantive prohibitions.[152] Other state debt collection statutes apply generally to lawyers.[153] The WYOMING: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 33-11-101(b)(viii) ("collection agency" does not include "[a]ny licensed attorney acting in an attorney-client relationship with the creditor, and who conducts the collection in the true name of the client").

150 See, e.g., Carpenter v. Alessi & Konig, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5234253 (D. Nev. Sept. 16, 2013) (attorney exemption of Nevada's licensure statute inapplicable to lawyers who are "conducting collection agencies," but collecting assessments and filing lien for homeowners association is practice of law); Grant-Fletcher v. McMullen & Drury, P.A., 964 F. Supp. 2d 514 (D. Md. 2013) (law firm not required to be licensed; debtor failed to sufficiently allege that non-lawyer employees who spoke to her about the debt and sent a dunning letter were primarily engaged in debt collection); McLain v. Gordon, 2010 WL 3340528 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 24, 2010) (statutory exemption for attorneys applies only if they are not acting as collection agencies); Gibson v. Grupo de Ariel, L.L.C., 2006 WL 42369 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 9, 2006) (Texas debt collection statute covers attorneys who employ non-attorneys who regularly solicit debts for collection or contact debtors for purposes of collection; fact issues here as to attorney who owned debt buyer); Sadler v. Scott Lowery Law Office, PC, 737 S.E.2d 191 (N.C. Ct. App. 2013) (collection law firm with one supervising attorney and numerous non-lawyer employees was not a collection agency, where collection was undertaken on behalf of clients, in the law firm's name); Daniel N. Gordon, P.C. v. Rosenblum, 370 P.3d 850 (Or. App. 2016) (Oregon statute does not apply to litigation activities, here demanding sums not owed).

151 Abels v. JBC Legal Group, 227 F.R.D. 541 (N.D. Cal. 2005) (California Fair Debt Collection Act does not apply to lawyer-collector, but claims allowed to go forward against law firm that purchased and sought to collect old NSF checks); Semper v. JBC Legal Group, 2005 WL 2172377 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 6, 2005) (law firm that purchased debts, here NSF checks, for purpose of collecting them, was debt collector; state license required); State ex rel. Hatch v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2006 WL 1388453 (Minn. Dist. Ct. Apr. 13, 2006) (state statute's exemption for lawyers is absolute, but fact issue here whether firm that bought old NSF checks was acting "as lawyers" where it had 99:1 ratio of non-lawyer to lawyer employees, lawyers were not licensed to practice in jurisdictions where they dunned, and firm had never sued Minnesota debtor); Tennessee Attorney General, Op. No. 00-105, 2000 Tenn. AG LEXIS 107 (June 8, 2000) (company that purchases and collects upon unpaid judgments is collection service even though it is owned by attorneys, who would be exempt if acting on behalf of clients). See also Lilly v. RAB Performance Recoveries, L.L.C., 2013 WL 3834008 (E.D. Tenn. July 23, 2013) (attorney exemption applies to law firm that sent dunning letters for its client, a collection agency; distinguishing this from "non-lawyerly" activities such as debt buying).

152 See, e.g., McKeown v. Mary Jane M. Elliot, P.C., 2007 WL 4326825 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 10, 2007) (attorney representing creditor was exempt from collection agency act but covered by collection practices act); Lemieux v. Jensen, 2004 WL 302318 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 29, 2004) (attorneys excluded from definition of debt collector in Cal. Civil Code § 1788.2, but § 6077.5 requires them to comply with state debt collection law). See also Mass. Banking Op. 06-059, Attorney-at-Law Exclusion and Applicability of Debt Collection Law to Attorneys (Oct. 13, 2006), available at www.mass.gov, search for "selected opinion 06-060 (debt collector licensing law applies to collection attorneys unless they are admitted to practice law in Massachusetts).

153 Ward v. G. Reynolds Sims & Assoc., 2013 WL 364012 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 30, 2013) (lawyers covered by Michigan Collection Practices Act, Pennsylvania debt collection statute applies to lawyers, but exempts activities "in connection with the filing or service of pleadings or discovery or the prosecution of a lawsuit to reduce a debt to judgment."[154] Thus, attorneys are subject to the statute when they send dunning letters.[155] In addition, the exemption does not extend to a creditor that supplies incorrect information to the collection attorney.[156]

Even if law firms are exempt, the exemption may not apply when the claim is based on acts of a non-attorney collector employed by the firm.[157] Until it was amended in 2019,[158] California's debt collection statute excluded ""an attorney or counselor at law" from definition of "debt collector."[159] However, most courts held that, even though individual attorneys were excluded, the statute applied to law firms.[160] In addition, a section of the state Business and Professions Code dealing with attorney conduct and discipline requires attorneys to comply with the substantive obligations imposed on debt collectors, and imposes other specific requirements.[161]

Even without explicit statutory language, courts may find that acts taken in the course of litigation do not fall within the scope of the statute[162] or are protected by a litigation privilege.[163] The New York Court of Appeals has held that a New York City debt collection ordinance, as applied to attorneys' nonlegal debt collection activities, was not preempted by state regulation of attorneys.[164] It also held, however, that the ordinance violated the Commerce Clause to the extent that it regulated contracts formed entirely outside New York.

16.2.3.3.5 Repossessors

Some decisions hold that state debt collection statutes apply to repossession.[165] As the U.S. Supreme Court has observed, although not by Michigan Occupational Code); Misleh v. Timothy E. Baxter & Assoc., 2011 WL 1458006 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 15, 2011) (lawyer collecting on behalf of client is regulated person covered by Michigan Collection Practices Act, although is exempt from debt collection provisions of Michigan Occupational Code); Rewalt v. Draper & Goldberg, P.L.L.C., 2008 WL 2566957, at *5 (S.D. W. Va. June 24, 2008) (law firm may be debt collector within meaning of West Virginia Consumer Credit Protection Act's debt collection provisions; fact question whether law firm was collecting "indirectly" where demand letters were sent by "Riverside Tr. Co.," arguably alter ego of law firm, and required payment to be made to law firm); Ray v. Int'l Bank, Inc., 2005 WL 2305017 (D. Colo. Sept. 21, 2005) (complaint initiating foreclosure action is "initial communication" in attempt to collect debt, triggering notice requirement of state debt collection statute); Universal Bank v. Machnic (In re Machnic), 271 B.R. 789 (Bankr. S.D. W. Va. 2002) (attorneys not exempt from Consumer Credit Protection Act's debt collection provisions, even in their litigation activities, and creditor itself is liable for acts of its attorney). See generally § 4.7.3.3, supra (application of FDCPA to lawyers).

154 Fair Credit Extension Uniformity Act, 73 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 2270.3(3)(ii). See Glover v. Udren Law Offices, P.C., 139 A.3d 195, 200 (Pa. 2016) ("In the FCEUA, the Legislature sought directly to curtail abuses by these third parties—including attorneys, when their actions were taken in their capacities as debt collectors."). See also Salvati v. DeutscheBank Nat'l Trust Co., 575 Fed. Appx. 49 (3d Cir. 2014) (sending statutorily required pre-foreclosure notice is "in connection with" a lawsuit); Glover v. Fed. Deposit Ins. Corp., 698 F.3d 139 (3d Cir. 2012) (affirming dismissal of claim based on law firm's failure to dismiss foreclosure complaint once homeowner was no longer in default); Gigli v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2008 WL 3853295 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 14, 2008) (state debt collection statute's partial exemption for attorneys bars claim against debt buyer's attorneys for inclusion of false information in pleading, but not claim against debt buyer that supplied arguably false information to attorneys); Silva v. Mid-Atlantic Mgmt. Corp., 277 F. Supp. 2d 460 (E.D. Pa. 2003) (lawyers, who were debt collectors within meaning of FDCPA, not covered by state debt collection statute, as they did not use extra-judicial methods of collection, and Pennsylvania statute exempts litigation activities).

155 See Richburg v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 247 F.R.D. 457 (E.D. Pa. 2008) (attorney exemption inapplicable to lawyer's dunning letter which did not mention litigation). See also Fratz v. Goldman & Warshaw, P.C., 2012 WL 4931469 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 16, 2012) (attorneys' debt collection activities—here, submission of documents in arbitration proceedings—are not exempted). But cf. Salvati v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 575 Fed. Appx. 49 (3d Cir. 2014) (attorney representing lender in foreclosure action is covered by FCEUA's exception for lawyer "in connection with the filing or service of pleadings"; mailing of defective preforeclosure notice was not non-litigation collection activity, because notice is statutorily required step in foreclosure proceeding).

156 Pierce v. Calvary I, L.L.C., 2013 WL 6773632 (W.D. Pa. Dec. 30, 2013) (attorney exemption protected only the attorneys, not the debt buyer that furnished information to them and authorized suit on purchased debt); Gigli v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2008 WL 3853295 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 14, 2008).

157 Makreas v. Moore Law Group, A.P.C., 2012 WL 359710, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 2, 2012) (denying motion to dismiss).

158 2019 Cal. Stat. ch. 545 (S.B. 187).

159 Former Cal. Civ. Code § 1788.2(c). See, e.g., Gerber v. Citigroup, Inc., 2009 WL 248094 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 29, 2009) (Rosenthal Act's exemption for lawyers bars claim against individual lawyers), adopted, 2009 WL 2058576 (E.D. Cal. July 14, 2009); Lemieux v. Jensen, 2004 WL 302318 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 29, 2004) (attorneys excluded from definition of debt collector in Cal. Civil Code § 1788.2, but § 6077.5 requires them to comply with state debt collection law); Carney v. Rotkin, Schmerin & McIntyre, 254 Cal. Rptr. 478 (Cal. Ct. App. 1988) (attorney not debt collector within meaning of debt collection statute).

160 See, e.g., Gonzalez v. Law Office of Allen Robert King, 195 F. Supp. 3d 1118 (C.D. Cal. 2016) (dismissing claim against attorney, but allowing claim to go forward against law firm; firm's paralegal falsely told tenant that if he moved out by certain date, firm would not pursue eviction action; firm then went forward and obtained default judgment); Davis v. Hollins Law, 942 F. Supp. 2d 1004 (E.D. Cal. 2013); Huy Thanh Vo v. Nelson & Kennard, 931 F. Supp. 2d 1080 (E.D. Cal. 2013).

161 Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077.5 (West).

162 See, e.g., Duke v. Nachtigal, 2012 WL 195466 (D. Or. Jan. 19, 2012) (construing state debt collection statute not to apply to use of postjudgment execution procedures, even where debt is not owed).

163 See § 16.1.3, supra.

164 Eric M. Berman, P.C. v. City of New York, 25 N.Y.3d 684 (N.Y. 2015).

165 See Gable v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 2019 WL 5864329 (E.D. Wis. Nov. 8, 2019) (repossession indirectly assists creditor in collection of debts, so state debt collection statute applies); Soberanis v. City Title Loan, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1232437 (D.S.C. Apr. 3, 2017) (refusing to dismiss claim that repossession that breached peace was violation of state credit statute's prohibition of unconscionable debt collection conduct); Clark v. Par, Inc., 2015 WL 13781846 (C.D. Cal. July 22, 2015); Aviles v. Wayside Auto Body, Inc., 49 F. Supp. 3d 216, 235 (D. Conn. 2014) (allowing debtor and debtor's niece, who was present during repossession, to go to trial on claim that creditor was liable under state debt collection law for repossession agent's cursing and yelling during repossession; fact question whether repossession agent was creditor's agent); Shannon v. Windsor Equity Grp., Inc., 2014 WL 977899 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 12, 2014) (state debt collection statute, which defines "debt" enforcement of a security interest (via non-judicial mortgage foreclosure in the case that was before the Court) is a form of debt collection, even though it seeks payment of money through sale of the property, rather than directly from the debtor.[166] Michigan explicitly includes repossessors in the statutory definition of collection agencies.[167] In 2014, the state supreme court interpreted this statute, which at that time applied to persons directly or indirectly collecting debts, to cover entities that act as middlemen, contracting with lenders to farm out collection and repossession services to others.[168] However, the statute was amended in 2016 to exclude these middlemen.[169] Under South Carolina's debt collection statute, one of the factors in determining whether debt collection conduct is unconscionable is whether it involves taking or threatening to take possession of personal property without a present right to do so.[170]

On the other hand, courts interpreting the Florida, Maryland, Minnesota, North Carolina, and West Virginia debt collection statutes have held them inapplicable to repossessors hired by creditors.[171] Decisions are mixed as to whether California's Rosenthal Act applies to repossessors.[172]

The Uniform Commercial Code's repossession provisions do not provide a basis for considering the state debt collection statute displaced, as its explicit general rule is that it is to be supplemented by principles of other laws.[173] However, the West Virginia Supreme Court has held that repossession is governed only by the Uniform Commercial Code, not by the state debt collection statute.[174] Although the court did not make its rationale clear, it may have based its decision on the West Virginia definition of "claim" as an obligation of a consumer "to pay money."[175]

16.2.3.3.6 Child support collectors

Some states have special provisions covering private collectors of child support, or explicitly subjecting them to the provisions of general debt collection statutes.[176] Many of these statutes focus primarily on preventing collectors from taking to include "property" which is owed to another person, applies to company that offered skip tracing, repossession services, and remarketing); Hayes v. Find Track Locate, Inc., 60 F. Supp. 3d 1144 (D. Kan. 2014) (tracking and location company that arranges for repossession is a debt collector under state debt collection statute, which applies to those who enforce consumer transactions); Porter v. Wachovia Dealer Serv., Inc., 63 U.C.C. Rep. Serv. 2d 979 (D. Or. 2007) (applying state debt collection law to creditor that allegedly threatened repossession and made harassing phone calls); Lithia Motors, Inc. v. Yovan, 204 P.3d 120 (Or. Ct. App. 2009) (affirming $500 actual damages and $2000 punitive damages award against creditor that violated state debt collection statute by attempting wrongful repossession and threatening theft prosecution), vacated and remanded, 249 P.3d 1281 (Or. 2011) (remanding for reconsideration in light of state supreme court decision on standards for reducing punitive damages awards); Ledisco Fin. Serv. v. Viracola, 533 S.W.2d 951 (Tex. App. 1976) (consumer's duty to return credit card is part of the obligation arising out of the consumer credit transaction, so agent's repossession of it was covered by state debt collection statute); Kett v. Cmty. Credit Plan, Inc., 596 N.W.2d 786 (Wis. 1999) (state debt collection law applies to creditor's commencement of action to repossess collateral). But see Davis v. Toyota Motor Credit Corp., 251 F. Supp. 3d 925 (D. Md. 2017) (repossession is not debt collection, so Maryland's debt collection statute is inapplicable); Cooper v. Fulton Bank, 2017 WL 5478318, at *3–4 (D. Md. Nov. 15, 2017) (Maryland's debt collection statute does not apply to "mere repossession"); Khepera-Bey v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 2012 WL 1965444, at *9 (D. Md. May 30, 2012) (pro se case); Tucker v. Raw Recovery, Inc., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20162 (M.D.N.C. Oct. 28, 1998) (repossession company not covered by state debt collection law, because repossession of collateral is not collection of debt); Nichols v. Metro. Bank, 468 N.W.2d 84 (Minn. Ct. App. 1991) (collection agency statute does not cover repossession, so collector's bond is unavailable to plaintiff injured during repossession); Banks v. Paul White Chevrolet, Inc., 629 S.E.2d 792 (W. Va. 2006) (drawing distinction between repossession activities, which are governed only by U.C.C., and debt collection activities, which are governed by state debt collection law). But cf. Hulse v. Ocwen Fed. Bank, 195 F. Supp. 2d 1188 (D. Or. 2002) (foreclosing on deed of trust not covered by Oregon debt collection law, because not attempt to force debtors to pay).

166 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 1036–1037, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019). See § 16.2.3.3.9, infra (more detailed discussion of this decision).

167 Mich. Comp. L. § 339.901. See Alexander v. Blackhawk Recovery & Investigations, L.L.C., 731 F. Supp. 2d 674 (E.D. Mich. 2010) (consumer stated FDCPA and Michigan Occupational Code claims; repossession attempt with breach of peace, and failure to give statutorily required notices); Montgomery v. Huntington Bank, 2002 WL 31296642 (Mich. Ct. App. Oct. 11, 2002) (collectors and repossessors covered, but not creditors).

168 Badeen v. Par, Inc., 853 N.W.2d 303 (Mich. 2014).

169 Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 445.251(2).

170 Soberanis v. City Title Loan, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1232437 (D.S.C. Apr. 3, 2017) (also holding that this provision does not create an independent cause of action for improper repossession, but merely identifies improper repossession as a factor in determining unconscionability).

171 Davis v. Toyota Motor Credit Corp., 251 F. Supp. 3d 925 (D. Md. 2017) (repossession is not debt collection covered by Maryland Debt Collection Act); Khepera-Bey v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 2012 WL 1965444, at *9 (D. Md. May 30, 2012) (pro se); Seibel v. Soc'y Lease, Inc., 969 F. Supp. 713 (M.D. Fla. 1997); Nichols v. Metro. Bank, 468 N.W.2d 84 (Minn. Ct. App. 1991) (collection agency surety bond does not cover injuries resulting from unlawful repossession of automobile because repossession is not collection agency activity as defined by statute); Banks v. Paul White Chevrolet, Inc., 629 S.E.2d 792 (W. Va. 2006) (drawing distinction between repossession activities, which are governed only by U.C.C., and debt collection activities, which are governed by state debt collection law).

172 APPLIES: Shannon v. Windsor Equity Group, Inc., 2014 WL 977899 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 12, 2014) (state debt collection statute, which defines "debt" to include "property" that is owed to another person, applies to company that offered skip tracing, repossession services, and remarketing; non-debtor, who was harassed by skip tracer who incorrectly believed he possessed the encumbered car, stated claims pursuant to Rosenthal Act).

DOES NOT APPLY: Brooks v. Leon's Quality Adjusters, Inc., 2016 WL 4539967 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 30, 2016) (dismissing Rosenthal Act claim; repossessors not "regularly engaged" in collecting debts even if they sometimes gave debtors the option to pay and avoid repossession); Pflueger v. Auto Fin. Group, 1999 WL 33740813 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 26, 1999).

173 U.C.C. § 1-103(b); U.C.C. § 1-103 cmt. 3.

174 Banks v. Paul White Chevrolet, Inc., 629 S.E.2d 792 (W. Va. 2006).

175 W. Va. Code § 46A-2-122(b).

176 Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Maine, New York, North Dakota, Oregon, Texas, and West Virginia. These statutes are summarized at Appendix D, infra.

advantage of vulnerable obligees, but they may also set limits on debt collection tactics.

16.2.3.3.7 Out-of-state collectors

Some debt collection statutes apply to out-of-state debt collectors who collect debts from residents of the legislating states.[177] Consumers being dunned by an out-of-state collector may also be protected by the debt collection laws of the collector's home state.[178] Other state debt collection statutes, however, exclude interstate communications.[179]

16.2.3.3.8 Other specific entities

Other entities that have been found to be covered by a state's debt collection law include a for-profit "debt counselor,"[180] a claims recovery service that pursued subrogation claims for a medical benefits plan,[181] and a process server that went beyond its messenger role and sought to collect illegal fees for itself.[182]

Unless the statutory language is unusually narrow, a state debt collection statute should apply to entities that collect personal information about the debtor as part of the debt collection process. For example, Colorado's debt collection statute was held to cover a company that surreptitiously captured consumers' unlisted telephone numbers for creditors, even though most of its messages did not even mention the debt.[183]

A court held that an arbitration service provider did not meet the definition of a debt collector in California's debt collection statute.[184] The court might have ruled otherwise if the debtor's complaint had included more specific allegations about the undisclosed financial relationship between the arbitration provider and the debt collection firm that used it.[185] Another court held that the California debt collection statute's inclusion of "any person who composes and sells . . . forms, letters, and other media" did not extend to a company that provided an online payment service.[186] A federal court held that the Wisconsin debt collection statute did not make the seller of goods liable for the debt collection acts of the credit card lender to which the debt for the goods was owed, as the debt was owed to the lender, not the seller.[187]

177 LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, 601 F.3d 1185 (11th Cir. 2010) (out-of-state debt buyer that sent collection letter to Florida consumer was required to register as Florida collector because it solicited consumer accounts from creditor that did business in Florida); Grice v. VIM Holdings Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 6210891 (D. Mass. Dec. 8, 2017) (applying Mass. statute to out-of-state payday lender who sent email containing unlawful threats to Mass. consumer's Mass. employer); Weakley v. Redline Recovery Services, L.L.C., 723 F. Supp. 2d 1341 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (out-of-state collector who repeatedly contacted California consumer and his employer in California was subject to Rosenthal Act); Jomarron v. Nasco Enters., Inc., 2005 WL 2231863 (D. Conn. Aug. 4, 2005) (violation of Connecticut Collection Agency act; Texas collector, not licensed in Connecticut, dunned Connecticut consumer). But see Blackstone v. Sharma, 191 A.3d 1188 (Md. 2018) (substitute trustees of out-of-state trusts owning defaulted mortgages are not required to obtain Maryland collectors' licenses before initiating foreclosure; amendment was intended to clarify coverage of debt buyers, not to expand statute to cover real estate mortgages). But cf. Obenauf v. Frontier Fin. Group, Inc., 785 F. Supp. 2d 1188 (D.N.M. 2011) (license required only if debt being collected by out-of-state collector originated in New Mexico); Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Sheehan, 373 So. 2d 956 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1979) (Florida statute did not apply to deceptive call placed by collector in Michigan to debtor's mother in Rhode Island, falsely stating that Florida debtor's children had been in an accident as a means of procuring debtor's address). See generally § 16.2.2, supra (constitutionality of restrictions on out-of-state collection).

178 See Cushman v. GC Services, L.P., 657 F. Supp. 2d 834 (S.D. Tex. 2009) (consumer who was not Texas resident stated Texas Debt Collection Act Claim, where collector was Texas corporation and opened file on consumer, sent letters, and coordinated collection efforts from Texas), aff'd on other grounds, 397 Fed. Appx. 24 (5th Cir. 2010); Mlynek v. Household Fin. Corp., 2000 WL 1310666 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 13, 2000) (Florida Consumer Collection Practices Act protects out-of-state consumer being dunned by Florida collector). But see Elyazidi v. SunTrust Bank, 780 F.3d 227 (4th Cir. 2015) (denying Maryland debt collection claim, even though lender's counsel prepared documents at its Maryland office, where borrower was Virginia resident who incurred debt in Virginia, misrepresentations occurred in papers filed in Virginia, and any harm that ensued took place there); Hartman v. Meridian Fin. Services, 2001 WL 1823617 (W.D. Wis. Aug. 28, 2001) (allowing Wisconsin consumer to go forward with claims under Wisconsin but not North Carolina debt collection laws against North Carolina collector who mailed collection letters from that state). But cf. Edeh v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 748 F. Supp. 2d 1030 (D. Minn. 2010), aff'd, 413 Fed. Appx. 925 (8th Cir. 2011) (Rosenthal Act is meant to protect California consumers; no cause of action where employee of California company made improper calls from Arizona to consumer in Minnesota); Pollock v. Bay Area Credit Serv., L.L.C., 2009 WL 2475167 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 13, 2009) (Rosenthal Act does not cover California-based collector's calls from Georgia to Florida debtor).

179 Cadle Co. II, Inc. v. Wechsler, 2006 WL 2959698 (Mich. Ct. App. Oct. 17, 2006) (entity whose collection actions are limited to interstate communications need not obtain license). See also Scheetz v. PYOD, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3489715 (N.D. Ind. July 15, 2014) (interpreting state debt collection statute to apply only to entities with physical presence in state, so out-of-state debt buyers need not be licensed).

180 Page v. Performance Debt Resolution, 2013 WL 621197 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 30, 2013) ("debt negotiation" provider, which took payments from consumers and falsely promised to negotiate with creditors, was debt collector covered by FDCPA and Rosenthal Act), adopted, 2013 WL 621139 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 19, 2013); Yang v. DTS Fin. Group, 570 F. Supp. 2d 1257 (S.D. Cal. 2008) (debt collector within meaning of both FDCPA and Rosenthal Act).

181 Flores v. Rawlings Co., L.L.C., 177 P.3d 341 (Haw. 2008) (claims recovery service must register pursuant to Hawaii Collection Agency Act, which has broader coverage than FDCPA). But see Old Republic Ins. Co. v. Gordon, 137 A.3d 237 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 2016) (mortgage insurer, bringing subrogation action against defaulted borrower, was not collection agency subject to licensing requirements of collection agency act; collection of defaulted debts is merely incidental to its business as insurer).

182 Andrews v. S. Coast Legal Serv., Inc., 582 F. Supp. 2d 82 (D. Mass. 2008).

183 Udis v. Universal Communications Co., 56 P.3d 1177 (Colo. App. 2002).

184 Townsend v. Nat'l Arbitration Forum, Inc., 2012 WL 12736 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 4, 2012).

185 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements §§ 1.4.4.2, 12.6 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

186 Lindblom v. Santander Consumer, USA, Inc., 2015 WL 9481547 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 10, 2015) (company that designed and provided Speedpay service, which charged unauthorized fees that were mostly kicked back to lender, was not covered by Rosenthal Act).

187 Parent v. Home Depot, 2011 WL 2650725 (E.D. Wis. July 6, 2011), aff'd on other grounds, 694 F.3d 919 (7th Cir. 2012).

The state debt collection statute may impose liability upon employees of a debt collection company who violate the statute.[188] A nonprofit organization is not exempt from a debt collection statute that applies to any "person."[189]

16.2.3.3.9 Servicing, billing, and mortgage foreclosure; eviction

Some statutes exempt specific types of entities, such as banks, servicers, and billing companies.[190] If the statute does not include a specific exemption, mortgage servicers[191] and

188 See § 16.2.5.2.5, infra.

189 State ex rel. Miller v. Nat'l Farmers Org., 278 N.W.2d 905 (Iowa 1979) (nonprofit organization falls under debt collection chapter of Iowa Consumer Credit Code, but statute inapplicable to collection of membership dues because it was not credit transaction).

190 COLORADO: See, e.g., Scate v. Nationstar Mortgage, Inc., 2014 WL 7053940 (D. Colo. 2014) (Colorado exempts loan servicers whose principal business is servicing loans not in default, whether or not the subject loan was in default when servicing began); Schwartz v. Bank of Am., 2011 WL 1135001 (D. Colo. Mar. 28, 2011) (Colorado Fair Debt Collection Practices Act explicitly exempts entities whose principal business is lending and servicing of loans that are not in default, so national bank is exempt).

HAWAII: See, e.g., Klohs v. Wells Fargo Bank, 901 F. Supp. 2d 1253, 1265–1266 (D. Haw. 2012) (Hawaii collection statute explicitly exempts banks, so bank is exempt when acting as servicer).

ILLINOIS: See, e.g., Aribal v. GMAC Mortg., L.L.C., 2013 WL 3895282 (N.D. Ill. July 29, 2013) (fact issue whether assignee of mortgage, which claimed to be exempt "loan and finance" company, but whose website showed that it specialized in acquiring delinquent mortgages, was a collection agency covered by Illinois Collection Agency Act); Jeffries v. Dutton & Dutton, P.C., 2006 WL 1343629 (N.D. Ill. May 11, 2006) (Illinois statute exempts banks, lawyers, and persons under contract with creditor who contact debtors only in creditor's name); Bank of Am. v. Kulesza, 14 N.E.3d 684 (Ill. App. Ct. 2014) (Illinois exemption for banks and subsidiaries not limited to first-tier subsidiaries; mortgage servicer owned by subsidiary of bank was exempt); Aurora Loan Services, L.L.C. v. Kmiecik, 992 N.E.2d 125 (Ill. App. Ct. 2013) (loan servicer, which was wholly owned subsidiary of federally chartered bank, falls within Illinois Collection Agency Act's exemption for banks).

MARYLAND: See, e.g., Flowers v. Baltax 2017, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3501584 (D. Md. Aug. 1, 2019) (entity that purchased and sought to foreclose tax liens was not a required to be licensed as collection agency; interpreting dicta in Blackstone v. Sharma, 191 A.3d 1188 (Md. 2018), to exclude mortgage industry from state collection agency licensing statute).

MICHIGAN: See, e.g., Grimm v. Seterus, Inc., 2015 WL 9647544 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 14, 2015) (servicer falls into Michigan Occupational Code exception for banks and other businesses whose collection activities are related to a business other than debt collection), adopted, 2016 WL 67736 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 6, 2016); Polidori v. Bank of Am., 977 F. Supp. 2d 754 (E.D. Mich. 2013) (national bank that was collecting a mortgage debt that had been assigned to it falls within Michigan debt collection statute's exemption for nationally chartered bank that is collecting its own claims); Hewitt v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 3490668, at *12 (W.D. Mich. July 11, 2013) (Michigan Occupational Code's definition of collection agency exempts state or nationally chartered bank that is collecting in its own name); Fuller v. Exxon Mobil, M.C., 2009 WL 91707 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 14, 2009) (Michigan act's exception for conduct "specifically authorized by a regulatory board or officer" exempts national bank whose credit card agreements are regulated by federal OCC).

MINNESOTA: See, e.g., Carlson v. First Rev. Assurance, 359 F.3d 1015 (8th Cir. 2004) (Minnesota Collection Agency Act exempts businesses that administratively process payments; bank that picked up payments from post office box and credited them to agency's account not collection agency); Bohner v. LHR, Inc., 2011 WL 4472621 (D. Minn. Aug. 9, 2011) (Minnesota collection agency statute explicitly excludes banks collecting debts owed to themselves), adopted, 2011 WL 4460394 (D. Minn. Sept. 26, 2011).

NORTH CAROLINA: See, e.g., Williams v. HomeEq Servicing Corp., 646 S.E.2d 381 (N.C. Ct. App. 2007) (collection agency statute exempts banks and their subsidiaries, so this loan servicer, a bank subsidiary, is exempt).

WASHINGTON: See, e.g., Lamb v. HSC Real Estate, Inc., 2008 WL 467410 (E.D. Wash. Feb. 19, 2008) (Washington Collection Agency Act exempts "property management companies"; fact question whether collector here fits definition).

191 See, e.g., Miller v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, LP, 726 F.3d 717 (5th Cir. 2013) (mortgage servicers are covered by Texas Debt Collection Act, whether or not mortgage was in default when servicing began); Perry v. Stewart Title Co., 761 F.2d 237 (5th Cir. 1985) (Tex. law); Koepplinger v. Seturus, Inc., 2020 WL 2063416 (M.D.N.C. Apr. 29, 2020) (although mortgage servicer that solicited delinquent claims from only one source (Fannie Mae) did not meeting definition of "collection agency" in Collection Agency Act, it met definition of "debt collection" under state Debt Collection Act), adopted, 2018 WL 4401738 (M.D.N.C. Sept. 14, 2018); Rivera v. Bayview Loan Servicing, 2020 WL 1508328 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 30, 2020) (allowing consumer to proceed with state debt collection claim against servicer whose business model was to buy and seek to collect defaulted mortgages); Moody v. PennyMac Loan Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 7596261 (D.N.H. Nov. 12, 2019) (NH statute's definition of debt collector, which is broader than FDCPA's, covers servicer even if debt was not in default when servicing began); Knight v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 301 F. Supp. 3d 723 (E.D. Mich. 2018) (loan servicer meets Michigan Collection Practices Act's definition of "regulated person"); Winne v. Nat'l Collegiate Student Loan Trust 2005-1, 228 F. Supp. 3d 141 (D. Me. 2017) (loan servicer was debt collector; could be held vicariously liable for actions of collector it hired); Warwick v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 2016 WL 2997166 (C.D. Cal. May 23, 2016) (servicer that merged with original servicer at time when debt was in default was covered by Rosenthal Act, but not FDCPA); Porterfield v. JP Morgan Chase, 2014 WL 3587783, at *22 (W.D. Tex. July 21, 2014); Dubridge v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 2014 WL 1878770 (W.D. Mich. May 12, 2014) (loan servicer is "regulated person" covered by Michigan Regulation of Debt Collection Procedures Act); Tirabassi v. Chase Home Fin., L.L.C., 2015 WL 1402016 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 24, 2015); Martorella v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 931 F. Supp. 2d 1218 (S.D. Fla. 2013) (lender's and loan servicer's communications about mortgage debtor's liability to pay for force-placed insurance were within ambit of debt collection, as required for Florida debt collection statute claim); Glenn v. FNF Servicing, Inc., 2013 WL 4095524 (E.D.N.C. Aug. 13, 2013) (state debt collection statute applies to servicer seeking to collect on mortgage loan); O'Brien v. Quicken Loan Services, 2013 WL 2319248, at *11 (S.D. W. Va. May 28, 2013) (denying motion to dismiss claim that loan servicer that collected payments, imposed late charges, and reported to credit bureaus was debt collector); Patrick v. Teays Valley Trs., L.L.C., 2012 WL 5993163 (N.D. W. Va. Nov. 30, 2012) (substitute trustee was debt collector within meaning of West Virginia act, at least when it was trying to collect debt, not simply foreclose); Bentley v. Bank of Am., 773 F. Supp. 2d 1367 (S.D. Fla. 2011) (mortgage servicer not debt collector, but covered by provisions forbidding "any person" to engage in telephone harassment or assert right known not to exist); Mielke v. Bank of Am. Home Loans Servicing, 2011 WL 1464848 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 18, 2011) (servicer's letters concerning loan modification, which stated that loan was seriously in default and stated amount due, were billing or collection services for landlords,[192] homeowners associations,[193] or other providers[194] will likely be subject to the debt collection law. In these states, if the statute applies to creditors themselves, not just to third party collectors, it will also apply to a creditor that is foreclosing on a debt it originated.[195] Property services that lock out debtors and secure property in preparation for foreclosure may also be covered by state debt collection statutes.[196] A few states explicitly exempt some or all mortgages from the definition of debt, however, thus eliminating coverage of mortgage foreclosure and possibly mortgage servicing as well.[197]

Some courts hold that a foreclosure action that seeks only sale of the home, not payment of money, is not debt collection.[198]

"communication in connection with the collection of a debt," covered by Michigan Collection Practices Act); Gathing v. MERS, Inc., 2010 WL 889945 (W.D. Mich. Mar. 10, 2010) (denying summary judgment on Michigan Collection Practices Act and Michigan Occupational Code claims against holder and servicer of sub-prime mortgages; fact issues whether holder "took ownership" and what role it played; servicer described self as debt collector in correspondence with debtor); Thompson v. CIT Group/Consumer Fin., Inc., 2005 WL 2562606 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 11, 2005) (allowing claims to go forward against foreclosure management company that was overseeing foreclosure on behalf of creditor; at this early stage, court cannot say that company is not debt collector); Gann v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.L.P., 145 So. 3d 906 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2014) (loan servicer was a person, covered by section forbidding attempt to enforce right known not to exist); Lamell v. OneWest Bank, 485 S.W.3d 53 (Tex. App. Nov. 17, 2015) (servicers covered whether or not debt was in default when servicing began). See also Williams v. HomeEq Servicing Corp., 646 S.E.2d 381 (N.C. Ct. App. 2007) (mortgage servicer exempt from collection agency statute, but debtor stated claim under prohibited acts by debt collectors statute). Cf. Perez v. Saxon Mortg. Services, Inc., 2006 WL 2868938 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 6, 2006) (mortgage servicer may be liable under state debt collection statute for repeatedly contacting represented debtor; issue of fact whether it was exempted from licensing requirements as financial institution), vacated in part on other grounds, 2007 WL 430723 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 5, 2007).

But cf. Sheddy v. J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, 2013 WL 5450288 (N.D. Tex. Sept. 30, 2013) (Texas Debt Collection Act applies to mortgage servicers but provides that it does not prohibit "exercising or threatening to exercise a statutory or contractual right of seizure, repossession or sale that does not require court proceedings," including non-judicial foreclosure).

192 See, e.g., Sanz v. Fernandez, 633 F. Supp. 2d 1356 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (landlord services company required to register as debt collector). But cf. Ramsay v. Sawyer Prop. Mgmt. of Maryland, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6583892 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. Nov. 4, 2016) (unpublished) (property manager that negotiated leases, was listed on lease as lessor, collected rent, and sued in its own name after delinquencies was not debt collector; distinguishing cases of managers that have no relation to initial transaction and are hired for specific purposes that include debt collection). See generally § 16.2.3.1.1, supra (whether debts for rent fall within state debt collection statutes).

193 See, e.g., Manikan v. P. Ridge Neighborhood Homeowners Ass'n, 2018 WL 1536734 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 29, 2018) (homeowners' association, management company that regularly collected debts for association, and process server hired by management company are all subject to Rosenthal Act; association was trying to collect debt that had already been paid in full, and process server hired by management association broke into property, causing damage and frightening homeowners' family); Ellis v. Alessi Tr. Corp., 2012 WL 5986524 (D. Nev. Nov. 28, 2012) (fact issue whether company established to carry out foreclosures for law firm's homeowners' association clients was a "community manager," required by Nevada law to have a debt collection license). See generally § 16.2.3.1.1, supra (whether debts for homeowners association assessments fall within state debt collection statutes).

4 Leon v. Emergency Med. Group of Watsonville, 2016 WL 3773933 (Cal. Ct. App. July 11, 2016) (medical billing service was debt collector if bills were delinquent at time notices were sent; fact issue as to when bills became delinquent). But see Laccinole v. Twin Oaks Software Dev., Inc., 2014 WL 2440400 (D.R.I. May 30, 2014) (billing company that sent out reminder letters during grace period was not debt collector, as debts were not yet in default); Davis v. Prof'l Bus. Services, 712 P.2d 511 (Idaho 1985) (construing definition of "collection agency" not to encompass invoicing service, because it did no more than send bills and referred unpaid bills to collector).

195 See, e.g., Davis v. Wells Fargo Bank, 976 F. Supp. 2d 870 (S.D. Tex. 2013) (state debt collection statute applies to manipulative foreclosure practices by bank into which bank that originated the loan had merged), vacated in part on other grounds, 2014 WL 585403 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 14, 2014) (dismissing negligence and unjust enrichment claims of certain named plaintiffs); Woods v. Reverse Mortg. USA, Inc., 2017 WL 4399201 (S.D. W. Va. Sept. 29, 2017) (reverse mortgage lender is subject to debt collection provisions of West Virginia Consumer Credit Protection Act when collecting its own debt). But cf. Vaughan v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2017 WL 1498069 (W.D. Ark. Apr. 25, 2017) (state debt collection statute's repossession and foreclosure provisions inapplicable to mortgage lender, because its principal purpose is not enforcement of security interests).

196 Amelina v. Manufacturers' & Traders' Trust Co., 2016 WL 3982483 (S.D. Cal. July 21, 2016) (refusing to dismiss FDCPA and Rosenthal Act claims against servicer and property service; borrower sufficiently alleged that servicer used property service in effort to coerce payment; at time when borrowers had right to remain in house, property service viciously harassed borrower and children); Hayes v. Self-Help Credit Union, 2014 WL 4198412 (M.D.N.C. Aug. 22, 2014) (property preservation service was debt collector and collection agency covered by North Carolina statutes). But see Seghetti v. Flagstar Bank, 2016 WL 3753143 (D. Md. July 13, 2016) (before foreclosure was final, servicer sent in property preservation service that vandalized and stole personal property; no violation of Maryland act because this was not attempt to collect a debt).

197 See Stone v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 415 F. Supp. 3d 628 (E.D. Pa. 2019) (state debt collection statute does not apply to collection of purchase money mortgage, i.e., one taken by mortgagee other than seller to secure repayment of money advanced at time mortgagor acquires title and used to pay all or part of purchase price); Dehart v. HomeEq Servicing Corp., 2013 WL 12147768 (E.D. Pa. June 25, 2013) (even where claim under Pa. debt collection statute is based solely on collection of insurance, fees, and costs, if the obligation arises from purchase money mortgage it falls within exemption), aff'd, 679 Fed. Appx. 184 (3d Cir. 2017); Trunzo v. Citi Mortgage, 876 F. Supp. 2d 521 (W.D. Pa. 2012) (Pa. debt collection statute excludes purchase money mortgages, whether provided by seller of home or third-party lender); Pettaway v. Harmon Law Offices, P.C., 2005 WL 2365331 (D. Mass. Sept. 27, 2005) (allegation that form letters used by foreclosure attorneys overstated certain costs do not state claim under Massachusetts debt collection statute, which excludes first mortgages from definition of debt); Morris v. HomeEq Servicing Corp., 2010 WL 537745 (Mich. Ct. App. Feb. 16, 2010) (residential mortgage loans and servicers exempt from Michigan Collection Practices Act; issue is whether kind of transaction is "specifically authorized by law . . . administered by a regulatory board or officer" not whether specific misconduct is prohibited).

198 Barnes v. Routh, Crabtree, Olsen, P.C., 2016 WL 81799 (D. Or. Jan. 7, 2016) (foreclosure not covered by Oregon statute, which provides that compliance with FDCPA is compliance with state statute, and foreclosure is not debt collection under FDCPA); Moore v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2013 WL 3965313 (D. Or. Aug. 1, 2013) (foreclosure on deed of

However, in the absence of an explicit statutory exemption, most courts hold that foreclosure is a means of debt collection and is subject to the state debt collection statute.[199] A U.S. Supreme Court opinion strongly supports this view, interpreting the FDCPA's general definition of "debt collector" to encompass mortgage foreclosure:

> We have explained that a home loan is an obligation to pay money, and the purpose of a mortgage is to secure that obligation. . . . Foreclosure, in turn, is "the process in which property securing a mortgage is sold to pay off the loan balance due." . . . In other words, foreclosure is a means of collecting a debt. And a business pursuing nonjudicial foreclosures would, under the capacious language of the Act's primary definition, be one that "regularly collects or attempts to collect, directly or indirectly, debts."
>
> It is true that, as [the plaintiff] points out, nonjudicial foreclosure does not seek "a payment of money from the debtor" but rather from sale of the property itself. . . . But nothing in the primary definition requires that payment on a debt come "from a debtor." The statute speaks simply of the "collection of any debts . . . owed or due." . . . Moreover, the provision sweeps in both "direc[t]" and "indirec[t]" debt collection. Ibid. So, even if nonjudicial foreclosure were not a direct attempt to collect a debt, because it aims to collect on a consumer's obligation by way of enforcing a security interest, it would be an indirect attempt to collect a debt.[200]

While the Supreme Court's actual holding in the case turns on the effect of a more limiting sub-definition of "debt collector" that does not appear in many state debt collection statutes, its statement about the general meaning of debt collection should be highly persuasive to state courts.

Even if a court concludes that foreclosure is not a form of debt collection, it may apply the statute to a collector who seeks payment from the debtor or others, rather than merely enforcing the security interest.[201] Courts may distinguish letters that are "purely informational"—for example, describing foreclosure prevention and loan modification procedures—from those attempting to collect a debt.[202]

A number of decisions hold that California's debt collection statute does not apply to the foreclosure process.[203] trust is not debt collection, because it is not attempt to seek money); Hulse v. Ocwen Fed. Bank, 195 F. Supp. 2d 1188, 1206, 1211 (D. Or. 2002) (foreclosing on deed of trust is not state debt collection); Trent v. Mortg. Elec. Registration Sys., Inc., 2007 WL 2120262 (M.D. Fla. July 20, 2007) (mortgage foreclosure itself is not debt collection under state statute), aff'd on other grounds, 288 Fed. Appx. 571 (11th Cir. 2008); Burton v. Prince, 2019 WL 1064868 (Tex. App. Mar. 7, 2019) (filing of trustee's deeds and providing redemption letter were not debt collection). See also Tribeca Lending Corp. v. McCormick, 745 S.E.2d 493, 501 (W. Va. 2013) (eviction action that seeks only possession of premises is not debt collection).

---

199 See, e.g., Ademiluyi v. PennyMac Mortgage Inv. Trust Holdings I, 929 F. Supp. 2d 502 (D. Md. 2013) (mortgage foreclosure is debt collection); Brush v. Wells Fargo Bank, 911 F. Supp. 2d 445 (S.D. Tex. Nov. 29, 2012) (foreclosure is debt collection covered by Texas Debt Collection Act); Ray v. Int'l Bank, Inc., 2005 WL 2305017 (D. Colo. Sept. 21, 2005) (mortgage foreclosure is debt collection; allowing consumer to go forward with claim alleging failure to give notice required by state debt collection statute); Rey v. Acosta, 860 S.W.2d 654 (Tex. App. 1993) (wrongful acceleration of real estate note). Cf. Banko v. Quality Loan Serv. Co., 454 P.3d 1263 (Nev. 2019) (non-judicial foreclosure is debt collection, covered by Nevada Debt Collection Act, but businesses that conduct non-judicial foreclosures, who are extensively regulated under another statutory scheme, are not required to be licensed as debt collectors). But cf. Spoor v. PHH Mortg. Co., 2011 WL 883666 (N.D. W. Va. Mar. 11, 2011) (merely evaluating and acting on loan modification request is not debt collection within meaning of West Virginia statute).

200 Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P., ___U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 1036–1037, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019).

201 See, e.g., Aluia v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 2015 WL 3709368 (M.D. Fla. June 15, 2014) (attempt to collect deficiency after foreclosure is debt collection); Wells Fargo Bank v. Scarlett, 2013 WL 4401315 (D. Md. Aug. 14, 2013) (lender was collecting a debt, not foreclosing a mortgage, when it sought payment from co-grantee who was not a party to note or deed of trust); Gann v. BAC Home Loan Servicing, LP, 145 So. 3d 906 (Fla. App. 2014) (letter may serve dual purpose of demanding payment and enforcing security interest; statute applied to letter that demanded specific sum by specific date to prevent initiation of foreclosure); Gann v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.L.P., 145 So. 3d 906 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2014) (servicer that demanded sum certain to avoid foreclosure was seeking to collect "alleged debt"). But cf. LaCourse v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1565250 (D.N.H. Apr. 7, 2015) (foreclosure not debt collection where debtor had discharged personal liability on debt through bankruptcy).

202 Ellis v. JPMorgan Chase & Co., 752 Fed. Appx. 380 (9th Cir. 2018) (letters sent to mortgagors who had discharged debts in bankruptcy were purely informational); Pinson v. Albertelli Law Partners, L.L.C., 618 Fed. Appx. 551 (11th Cir. 2015) (Fla. law; letters stating reinstatement amount and warning that interest and fees would accumulate were attempt to collect a debt; letter requesting additional documents without naming sum was not); Walcker v. SN Commercial, L.L.C., 286 Fed. Appx. 455 (9th Cir. 2008) (informational letters from new servicer, advising borrower of transfer and offering repayment options, but not demanding payment, were not "in the collection of a claim" within meaning of Washington statute); Sellers v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1683613 (M.D. Fla. May 3, 2017) (monthly statements sent to borrower whose personal liability had been discharged in bankruptcy were an attempt to collect debt); Gilbert v. Deutsche Bank Trust Co. Americas, 2017 WL 1012981 (E.D.N.C. Mar. 14, 2017) (letters stating that defendant had taken over servicing, that interest rate was about to adjust, and that rate had adjusted were not attempts to collect debt); Leahey-Fernandez v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 159 F. Supp. 3d 1294 (M.D. Fla. 2016) (billing statements, sent to debtor after bankruptcy discharge, were an attempt to collect discharged debt); Nordwall v. PNC Mortg., 2015 WL 4095350 (M.D. Fla. July 7, 2014) (analyzing several letters sent to represented debtors, to determine which were informational and which were demands); Hubertise v. PNC Bank, 2015 WL 3948192 (Fla. Cir. Ct. Jan. 5, 2015) (letter inviting borrowers to foreclosure prevention workshop and providing contact information for questions was purely informational).

203 See, e.g., Santoro v. CTC Foreclosure Serv. Co., 12 Fed. Appx. 476 (9th Cir. 2001) (letters notifying homeowner of foreclosure sale and offering workout did not seek to collect the debt, so state debt collection statute does not apply); Greene v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2018 WL 6832092 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 28, 2018) (Rosenthal Act does not apply to non-judicial foreclosures; distinguishing cases in which servicer was seeking payment of money); Park v. U.S. Bank, 2011 WL 4102211 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 13, 2011) (foreclosure not debt collection; dismissing claim because consumer failed to allege actions outside the scope of

Most courts hold, however, that it applies to attempts through means other than foreclosure to collect the money owed on a mortgage debt,[204] such as harassing calls,[205] imposition of unauthorized fees,[206] misrepresentations,[207] and false threats to foreclose.[208] Prior to 2019, several courts had held that the California statute was entirely inapplicable to mortgage debts.[209] A 2019 statutory amendment, specifying that it was clarifying, rather than changing existing law, overruled these decisions by specifically providing that "debt" includes a mortgage debt.[210]

16.2.3.4 Persons Who Do Not Owe the Debt

Many courts have construed state debt collection statutes to apply to collection acts against a person who does not, in fact, owe the debt,[211] such as relatives of the the ordinary foreclosure process); Clark v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 732 F. Supp. 2d 1038 (E.D. Cal. 2010); Hamilton v. Bank of Blue Valley, 746 F. Supp. 2d 1160 (E.D. Cal. 2010); Gates v. Wachovia Mortg., 2010 WL 4025064 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 13, 2010) (telephone calls in connection with foreclosure not debt collection); Fullmer v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 2010 WL 2511178 (E.D. Cal. June 17, 2010) (statute does not apply to communications relating to non-judicial foreclosure); Saldate v. Wilshire Credit Corp., 711 F. Supp. 2d 1126 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 12, 2010) (foreclosure not debt collection; allegation of deceptive letters and phone calls by servicer fails to state claim); Champlaie v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 706 F. Supp. 2d 1029 (E.D. Cal. 2009); Keen v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing, Inc., 664 F. Supp. 2d 1086 (E.D. Cal. 2009); Razawi v. Fed. Deposit Ins. Corp., 2009 WL 2914120 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 29, 2009) (trustee engaged in non-judicial foreclosure is specifically exempted from Rosenthal Act by Cal. Civ. Code § 2924(b)); Connors v. Home Loan Corp., 2009 WL 1615989 (S.D. Cal. June 9, 2009) (Rosenthal debt collection act does not cover foreclosure). See also Jozinovich v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2010 WL 234895 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 14, 2010) (merely mailing notice of rescission did not convert residential mortgage into personal loan covered by Rosenthal Act).

204 See, e.g., Jordan v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2020 WL 425615 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 27, 2020) (mishandling of escrow and loan modification attempts were sufficiently "distinct from the foreclosure process" to support Rosenthal Act claim); London v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2018 WL 4214923 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 5, 2018) (borrowers sufficiently alleged debt collection activity in addition to foreclosure process: failure to credit timely payments, demands for sums already paid; and misleading statements about loan modification); Tirabassi v. Chase Home Fin., L.L.C., 2015 WL 1402016 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 24, 2015); Chao v. Aurora Loan Services, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6963098 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 13, 2011) (applicable to demand that debtor make series of payments to cure arrearage and avoid foreclosure); Osei v. Countrywide Home Loans, 692 F. Supp. 2d 1240 (E.D. Cal. 2010) (borrower stated Rosenthal Act claims against lender alleging unauthorized fees and threat to report false information); Herrera v. LCS Fin. Services Corp., 2009 WL 5062192 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 22, 2009) (borrower stated claim against lender and servicer of second mortgage, who demanded part of deficiency barred by California law); Yulaeva v. Greenpoint Mortgage Funding, Inc., 2009 WL 2880393 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 3, 2009) (allegedly false credit reporting was "squarely" connected to debt collection and only "incidentally" to foreclosure, so statute applies); In re Landry, 493 B.R. 541, 552–558 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. May 15, 2013) (Rosenthal Act's very specific and limited exception for trustees of deed of trust performing certain required actions does not create "implied free-ranging" exception for all acts of deed of trust trustee; lender and mortgage servicer are covered debt collectors); Davidson v. Seterus, Inc., 230 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441 (Cal. Ct. App. 2018) (Rosenthal Act applies to servicer seeking payment).

205 See, e.g., Amelina v. Manufacturers' & Traders' Trust Co., 2016 WL 3982483 (S.D. Cal. July 21, 2016) (borrowers stated FDCPA and Rosenthal Act claims against servicer and property service; sufficiently alleged that servicer caused property service to harass borrower and children in effort to coerce payment); Azzini v. Countrywide Home Loans, 2010 WL 962856 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 15, 2010) (mortgage loan is debt, and allegation of telephone harassment in efforts to collect mortgage states claim); Reyes v. Saxon Mortgage Services, Inc., 2009 WL 3738177 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 5, 2009) (harassing calls and automated calls to cell phone); Hurrey-Mayor v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., Inc., 2009 WL 3647632 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 4, 2009) (harassing calls and automated calls to cell phone).

206 Walters v. Fid. Mortg. of Cal., Inc., 730 F. Supp. 2d 1185 (E.D. Cal. 2010) (applicable to demands for unauthorized fees during loan servicing); Bledea v. IndyMac Fed. Bank, 2010 WL 715255 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 25, 2010) (allegations of threats to report false information and addition of unauthorized fees sufficiently state claim); Baldain v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing, Inc., 2010 WL 56143 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 5, 2010) (allegations that servicer misstated amount of debt, added unauthorized fees, and threatened to report false information state claim).

207 See, e.g., Schrupp v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 3753326 (E.D. Cal. July 13, 2016) (misleading and inconsistent statements by servicer that offered trial payment plan); Boessenecker v. J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, 2013 WL 3856242 (N.D. Cal. July 24, 2013) (Rosenthal Act applies to conflicting and inaccurate statements about amounts owed that lender made while servicing home mortgage loan); Reyes v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2011 WL 30759 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 3, 2011) (applies to misstatements in offer letter for allegedly sham "forbearance to modification" package); Gumbs v. Litton Loan Servicing, 2010 WL 1992199 (E.D. Cal. May 13, 2010) (allegations of deceptive phone calls and letters and other unlawful acts by servicer trying to collect debt state claim); Harvey G. Ottovich Revocable Living Trust v. Washington Mut., Inc., 2010 WL 3769459 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 22, 2010) (claim stated by allegations that lender "repeatedly obfuscated the truth with regard to the loan amounts and payments," thwarting efforts to pay off mortgage and prevent foreclosure).

208 See, e.g., Trant v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2012 WL 2871642 (S.D. Cal. July 12, 2012) (applies to unjustified threat of foreclosure); Frison v. Accredited Home Lenders, Inc., 2011 WL 1103468 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 25, 2011) (applies to false threat of foreclosure). See also Castellanos v. JPMorgan Chase & Co., 2009 WL 1833981 (S.D. Cal. June 23, 2009) (attempt to collect money by threat of foreclosure is debt collection, covered by Rosenthal Act, even though foreclosure is not). But cf. Bledea v. IndyMac Fed. Bank, 2010 WL 715255 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 25, 2010) (because foreclosure not debt collection, threat to foreclose did not violate Rosenthal Act, but other threats may do so).

209 See, e.g., Darrin v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 877087 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 7, 2013) (residential mortgage not debt within Rosenthal Act definition); Chernik v. Bank of Am. Home Loans, 2010 WL 3269797 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 18, 2010) (mortgage servicers are entirely excluded).

210 Cal. Civ. Code § 1788.2(f), as amended by 2019 Cal. Legis. Serv. Ch. 545 (S.B. 187).

211 See, e.g., McCaig v. Wells Fargo Bank, 788 F.3d 463 (5th Cir. 2015) (Tex. law; deceased mortgagor's son and daughter-in-law, who took over payments and entered into forbearance agreement, but neither assumed the debt nor occupied the property, had standing to sue; Texas statute provides cause of action for any person who suffers actual damage as a result of violation); Rudio v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 2018 WL 4772303 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 1, 2018) (FDCPA and Rosenthal act cover attempts to collect "alleged debt"; assignment of debt after it had been settled and paid); Hartley v. 21st Mortg. Corp., 2017 WL 4322430 (S.D. W. Va. Sept. 28, 2017) (consumer who received calls seeking to collect discharged debt was "allegedly obligated" and covered by state debt collection statute);

debtor[212] and victims of identity theft or mistaken identity.[213] Some of these rulings are based on statutory Masuda v. Citibank, 38 F. Supp. 3d 1130 (N.D. Cal. 2014) (non-debtor cell phone subscriber who received 300 robocalls, despite requests to stop, is a "person from whom a debtor collector seeks to collect a consumer debt which is . . . alleged to be due," so may bring Rosenthal Act claim); McGuire v. Jim Walter Homes, 2014 WL 5149725 (S.D. W. Va. Oct. 14, 2014) (even if bankruptcy discharge has eliminated personal liability for mortgage, borrowers will be protected by West Virginia debt collection statute if lender's calls and letters demanded payment); Shannon v. Windsor Equity Group, Inc., 2014 WL 977899 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 12, 2014) (non-debtor, harassed by skip tracer who incorrectly believed he possessed the encumbered car, had standing to sue for Rosenthal Act and FDCPA violations); Redmond v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 941 F. Supp. 2d 694 (E.D.N.C. 2013) (tenants being harassed for landlord's delinquent mortgage); Ashley v. Gen. Elec. Capital Corp., 2013 WL 6133562 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 21, 2013) (cell phone subscriber who received numerous calls after informing creditor it had wrong number had standing to sue for violation of Florida Creditors' Collection Practices Act); Fisher v. T.C.I., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7150 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 19, 2000) (consumer stated claim under Illinois Collection Agency Act). But see Graham v. Star USA Credit Union, 2018 WL 4854665 (S.D. W. Va. Oct. 5, 2018) (car loan signed only by driver's credit-worthy father; driver was not a consumer because she was not personally obligated on the loan); McNeely v. Wells Fargo Bank, 115 F. Supp. 3d 779 (S.D. W. Va. 2015) (borrower's ex-husband, who resided in home, which had been awarded to him at divorce, and was required by divorce decree to pay mortgage, was not covered by West Virginia statute because he was not personally liable for the debt secured by the mortgage); Harrison v. PNC Bank, 2015 WL 2171632 (S.D. W. Va. May 8, 2015) (borrower whose personal liability on home loan was discharged in bankruptcy was not a consumer within meaning of West Virginia statute); Smith v. MarkOne Fin., L.L.C., 2015 WL 419005 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 2, 2015) (51 robocalls to debtor's landlord, who had been listed as reference, would not violate statute because landlord was neither obligated nor allegedly obligated on debt, but calls here violated statute because landlord was family member). But cf. Boster v. LiveWell Fin., Inc., 2019 WL 1344726 (S.D. W. Va. Mar. 25, 2019) (dismissing remainderman's debt collection claims against creditor and servicer because their communications never alleged that he was obligated to pay his late mother's reverse mortgage loan, upon which they were foreclosing; remainderman was neither obligated nor allegedly obligated to pay back reverse mortgage obtained by holder of life interest; he signed deed of trust as "non-borrowing resident" and did not sign note; all debt collection correspondence was directed to estate of now-deceased life tenant); Hanshaw v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2015 WL 5345439 (S.D. W. Va. Sept. 11, 2015) (state debt collection statute inapplicable where homeowners had been discharged from personal liability on mortgage loan, and servicer's contacts with them did not seek to recover the debt or assert that they were personally obligated to repay it); Condon v. Global Credit & Collection Corp., 2010 WL 5071014 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 7, 2010) ("vaguely threatening" phone call, with failure to identify self, received by debtor's lawyer; not clear whether call was intended for lawyer or client, but lawyer, who is neither obligated nor allegedly obligated, has no standing to sue under FDCPA or Florida statute); Jenkins v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 2009 WL 3157399 (W.D.N.C. Sept. 28, 2009) (North Carolina statute does not protect non-debtor who received numerous wrong-number calls from collector; applies only to debtors, who must have some connection to debt). See generally § 4.4, supra.

212 See, e.g., Aviles v. Wayside Auto Body, 49 F. Supp. 3d 216 (D. Conn. 2014) (Connecticut statute provides right of action to any person harmed by creditor's abusive practices to collect a debt, so nondebtor family member at whom creditor screamed and swore during repossession attempt can bring suit); Brush v. Wells Fargo Bank, 911 F. Supp. 2d 445 (S.D. Tex. 2012) (mortgagor's nonobligated husband has standing if improper collection conduct, here harassing calls, is directed against him); Mosley v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2011 WL 2477685 (Conn. Super. Ct. May 23, 2011) (nondebtor father receiving harassing calls seeking to collect debt of similarly-named debtor son); Walter v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1666869 (E.D. Pa. May 2, 2011) (nonobligated spouse), order entered by 2011 WL 1694432 (E.D. Pa. May 2, 2011); Croye v. GreenPoint Mortgage Funding, Inc., 740 F. Supp. 2d 788 (S.D. W. Va. 2010) (nonobligated spouse who received improper phone calls covered by statute if he can show he was "allegedly obligated"); Caton v. Green Tree Servicing, 2008 WL 222352 (N.D. W. Va. Jan. 25, 2008) (granting summary judgment to debtor's nondebtor mother who received letters falsely stating she was liable on debt); Barth v. First Consumer Credit, Inc., 2008 WL 5003026 (Mich. Ct. App. Nov. 25, 2008) (debtor's nondebtor wife suffered injury or loss as result of violation, so stated claim for debt collection harassment); Campbell v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 616 S.W.2d 373 (Tex. App. 1981) (debtor's mother protected). See also Myers v. Americollect, Inc., 194 F. Supp. 3d 839 (E.D. Wis. 2016) (parent of minor patient stated claim against collector and hospital that sent bill and dunning letter to child instead of financially responsible parent). But see McCaskill v. Navient Solutions, Inc., 178 F. Supp. 3d 1281 (M.D. Fla. 2016) (mother of student loan debtor had no standing to sue for violation of Florida's statute's telephone harassment provisions, because she was not obligated or allegedly obligated on the debt); McNeely v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2015 WL 4506556 (S.D. W. Va. July 24, 2015) (ex-husband, who was required by divorce decree to make payments on wife's mortgage, and had been attempting to negotiate a modification, was not covered by West Virginia statute because he was not personally liable on the mortgage). But cf. Weller v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2017 WL 3581099 (N.D. W. Va. Aug. 18, 2017) (widow who did not sign mortgage loan note cannot bring claim under state debt collection statute regarding collection attempts and loan modification efforts for that loan, but if she entered into loan modification agreement she may be consumer as to it).

213 See, e.g., Adkins v. Credit Acceptance Corp., 2016 WL 7451619 (S.D. W. Va. Dec. 28, 2016) (consumer who denied owing alleged debt can bring suit under state debt collection statute against creditor that repeatedly demanded that she pay it, but she must plead that whoever incurred the debt did so for personal, family, or household purposes); Juarez v. Citibank, 2016 WL 4547914 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 1, 2016) (recipient of numerous wrong-number robocalls, continuing after collector was informed of mistake, was a debtor covered by Rosenthal Act, because creditor sought to collect from him); Scott v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 139 F. Supp. 3d 956 (S.D. Iowa 2015) (non-debtor whose wages were garnished stated federal and Illinois claims against debt buyer); Halsten v. Target Nat'l Bank, 2013 WL 3804844 (M.D. Fla. July 19, 2013) (Florida statute that forbids attempts to collect debt known not to be legitimate "clearly contemplates that person who owes no debt will have a cause of action"; here, person being dunned for credit card debt of unknown person); Fini v. Dish Network, L.L.C., 955 F. Supp. 2d 1288 (M.D. Fla. 2013) (cell phone owner had standing to bring Florida debt collection claim as person "allegedly obligated"; repeated autodialed calls seeking to collect debt of unrelated third party who had given plaintiff's cell number as contact when initiating TV service); Basich v. Patenaude & Felix, APC, 2013 WL 1755484 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 24, 2013) (nondebtor with same first name and SSN that differed by one digit from that of judgment debtor); Guillen v. Bank of Am., 2011 WL 4071996 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 31, 2011) (identity theft victim); Desmond v. Accounts Receivable Mgt., Inc., 72 So. 3d 179 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2011) (automated calls to nondebtor, here person with name similar to credit card debtor, with no method to call back and point out mistake, states claim for "conduct that can reasonably be expected to abuse or harass" persons called by mistake). But see Fisher v. Eastern Air Lines, Inc., 517 F. Supp. 672 (M.D.N.C. 1981) (statute that applies to person who "has incurred debt or alleged debt" requires that alleged debtor have some connection to underlying debt; not shown where collector directed efforts at wrong person). See generally § 16.2.3.1.3 (whether debt incurred by identity language that includes alleged debts, however, and courts may find these statutes inapplicable to a collector who reaches a non-debtor, but does not claim that the non-debtor owes the debt.[214]

16.2.4 State Debt Collection Statutes' Protections

16.2.4.1 General Standards

The substantive prohibitions of many state debt collection statutes are modeled on the FDCPA, and interpretations of the FDCPA may be persuasive.[215] Many courts apply the FDCPA's "least sophisticated consumer" standard in interpreting state debt collection statutes.[216] In some states, violation of the FDCPA is a per se violation of the state act.[217]

On the other hand, some states vary from FDCPA substantive standards in significant ways. The state statute's prohibitions may be narrower than the FDCPA's,[218] or the thief is incurred for consumer purposes), § 16.2.4.4.7 (liability for dunning non-debtor), infra.

214 See, e.g., Teague v. Mary Jane M. Elliot, PC, 2015 WL 400969 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 28, 2015) (nondebtor husband has no standing to sue for collection efforts directed solely at wife); Ballard v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 5963068, at *10–11 (S.D. W. Va. Nov. 7, 2013) (deceased debtor's son does not have claim under state debt collection statute, where creditor claimed only that estate was liable), aff'd, 578 Fed. Appx. 226 (4th Cir. 2014); Prophet v. Myers, 2009 WL 1437799 (S.D. Tex. May 21, 2009) (non-debtor does not have standing to raise claims arising from letter to same-named son at son's address; no abusive conduct directed to plaintiff); Sanchez v. Client Services, Inc., 520 F. Supp. 2d 1149 (N.D. Cal. 2007) (daughter who answered phone for non-English-speaking mother had no standing because she neither owed nor was alleged to owe debt, nor was she person from whom defendant was trying to collect); Belin v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 2006 WL 1992410 (M.D. Fla. July 14, 2006) (Florida debt collection statute allows only debtors and alleged debtors to sue, not consumer's non-debtor mother and girlfriend who answered calls). See also Young v. EOSCCA, 800 S.E.2d 224 (W. Va. 2017) (non-debtor who received wrong-number calls intended for someone named Jim (not called party's name) was not consumer; "allegedly obligated" refers only to debt alleged to be owed by person being dunned).

215 Farrin v. Northstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2016 WL 6407841 (D. N.H. Oct. 16, 2016) (applying FDCPA criteria to New Hampshire claim; noting similarity of statutes and lack of New Hampshire case law); Liu v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2010 WL 1994190 (S.D. Tex. May 17, 2010) (Texas Debt Collection Act is modeled on FDCPA and should be similarly construed; here, evaluating claim of bona fide error); Hartman v. Meridian Fin. Services, 191 F. Supp. 2d 1031, 1049–1050 (W.D. Wis. 2002) (relying on FDCPA to hold that use of false name in letter violated Wisconsin Consumer Act); In re Hathcock, 437 B.R. 696 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2010) (giving great weight to FDCPA interpretations; letter that did not overshadow validation notice in violation of FDCPA did not violate Florida debt collection statute). See also McMullen v. McHughes Law Firm, 454 S.W.3d 200 (Ark. 2015) (where neither party briefed the question whether Arkansas Fair Debt Collection Act standards are the same as FDCPA, court will assume that they are).

216 Bloodworth v. United Credit Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 1453520 (E.D. Wis. Apr. 12, 2016) (applying unsophisticated consumer standard to both FDCPA and Wisconsin Consumer Act claims; issue whether consumer would perceive language as a threat); Rivernider v. Brough, 2013 WL 5353748 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 24, 2013) (unsophisticated consumer standard for both FDCPA and FCCPA, but letter would not lead tenant of condo to believe that she was liable for owner's delinquent assessments); Zengerle v. Dynia & Assoc., 2013 WL 5172763 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 13, 2013) (unsophisticated consumer standard for Michigan Debt Collection Procedures Act claim); Langley v. Weinstein & Riley, P.S., 2013 WL 2951057 (S.D. Tex. June 14, 2013) (unsophisticated consumer standard for both FDCPA and TDCA; granting summary judgment for consumer because letter would lead unsophisticated consumer to believe that oral dispute was sufficient to trigger cessation of collection activity under FDCPA); Chao v. Aurora Loan Services, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6963098 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 13, 2011); Miranda v. Law Office of D. Scott Carruthers, 2011 WL 2037556 (E.D. Cal. May 23, 2011) ("notice of pending court proceedings" would deceive least sophisticated consumer into believing that suit had already been filed); McKeown v. Mary Jane M. Elliot, P.C., 2007 WL 4326825 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 10, 2007) (Michigan criteria for misleading or deceptive communications similar to FDCPA: least sophisticated consumer); In re Cheaves, 439 B.R. 220 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2010) (unsophisticated consumer standard same for FDCPA and Florida debt collection statute, but letter here would not deceive unsophisticated consumer into thinking it was from attorney). See also Flood v. Mercantile Adjustment Bureau, L.L.C., 176 P.3d 769 (Colo. 2008) (where language of Colorado statute's notice provisions tracks that of FDCPA, least sophisticated consumer standard applies). Cf. Forsyth Mun. Hosp. v. Contreras, 421 S.E.2d 167 (N.C. Ct. App. 1992) (assuming without deciding that "least sophisticated consumer" standard would be applied in cases under state debt collection statute, but finding no deception). But see Van Westrienen v. Americontinental Collection Corp., 94 F. Supp. 2d 1087 (D. Or. 2000) (Oregon debt collection statute does not use "least sophisticated debtor" standard; technically correct statements which would mislead unsophisticated debtor violate FDCPA but not state statute).

217 McDermott v. Marcus, Errico, Emmer & Brooks, PC, 773 F.3d 109 (1st Cir. 2014) (violation of FDCPA violates Massachusetts debt collection statute, and is per se UDAP violation); Strouse v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 956 F. Supp. 2d 627 (E.D. Pa. 2013) (FDCPA violation is per se violation of state debt collection act; here sending letters to home of identity theft victim's parents, where victim did not reside, after being told to communicate only with her attorney); Osei v. Countrywide Home Loans, 692 F. Supp. 2d 1240 (E.D. Cal. 2010) (violation of FDCPA, here threat to report false information, is per se violation of Rosenthal Act); Day v. Am. Home Mortgage Servicing, Inc., 2010 WL 2231988 (E.D. Cal. June 3, 2010) (contact with consumer, known to be represented, did not violate Rosenthal Act's own prohibition, which applies only if collector has been informed in writing, but because Rosenthal Act also requires compliance with FDCPA, consumer still stated Rosenthal Act claim); Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., P.C., 2006 WL 43770 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 3, 2006) (violation of FDCPA also violates state debt collection act, but consumer must show "ascertainable damages" to recover); Harding v. Regent, 347 F. Supp. 2d 334 (N.D. Tex. 2004) (violations of FDCPA may constitute acts "prohibited by law" and therefore violate Texas debt collection statute). But see Ortiz v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2010 WL 547910 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 12, 2010) (violation of FDCPA is not per se violation of Florida statute).

218 See, e.g., Aluia v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 2015 WL 3709368 (M.D. Fla. June 15, 2014) (FDCPA violation, here improper venue, has no counterpart in Florida statute); Dennis v. Reg'l Adjustment Bureau, Inc., 2010 WL 3359369 (S.D. Fla. July 7, 2010) (Florida statute does not require collector to identify self unless requested by consumer); Beeders v. Gulf Coast Collection Bureau, Inc., 2010 WL 2696404 (M.D. Fla. July 6, 2010) (unlike FDCPA, Florida statute requires collector to identify self only if requested by debtor), aff'd, 432 Fed. Appx. 918 (11th Cir. 2011); Malowney v. Bush/Ross, 2009 WL 3806161 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 12, 2009) (unlike FDCPA, Florida act forbids only threats of legally impossible actions, not actions never intended to be taken); Reese v. JPMorgan Chase & Co., 686 F. Supp. 2d 1291 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (provision of Florida statute forbidding attempt to collect illegitimate debt or exercise non-existent right requires showing of state may impose liability for acts that the FDCPA does not forbid.[219]

16.2.4.2 Privacy Protections

16.2.4.2.1 Introduction

Some debt collection statutes protect privacy by prohibiting undue publicity of a consumer's debt. A statute that prohibited placing language "calculated to embarrass the debtor" on an envelope was violated when the word "debtor" appeared at the top of the window in an envelope, because that word is "loaded with unpleasant associations."[220] Some states prohibit disclosure of information "affecting the debtor's reputation."[221] Courts may require proof that the disclosure actually affected or was likely to affect the consumer's reputation.[222]

State privacy laws are another source or protection for debtors.[223] For example, state privacy statutes may regulate the use of medical or other confidential information in debt collection or litigation.[224]

16.2.4.2.2 Credit reporting

Reporting false or disputed information about the debt or the debtor's creditworthiness to a third party such as a credit bureau may violate the state debt collection statute.[225] However, state actual knowledge); Mateti v. Activa Fin., L.L.C., 2009 WL 2507423 (D. Md. Aug. 14, 2009) (Maryland statute, unlike FDCPA, does not impose strict liability; must show actual knowledge that information was false or right alleged non-existent), Pollock v. Bay Area Credit Serv., L.L.C., 2009 WL 2475167 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 13, 2009) (Florida standard for deception narrower than FDCPA); Citibank v. MacDonald, 2017 WL 2812923 (Cal. Ct. App. June 29, 2017) (unpublished) (Cal. Civ. Code § 1788.15, which forbids going forward with action knowing that service has not been made, clearly includes knowledge requirement, while FDCPA does not; allegation of sewer service states claim for violation of § 1788.17, making FDCPA violations per se Rosenthal Act violations, but not for violation of § 1788.15); Schauer v. Morse Operations, Inc., 5 So. 3d 2 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2009) (must show that lender had actual knowledge that sums not owed).

219 See, e.g., Hapin v. Arrow Fin. Services, 428 F. Supp. 2d 1057, 1062 n.3 (N.D. Cal. 2006) (California Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Act claims may survive even if all FDCPA claims fail). See also § 16.1.2, supra.

220 Hansen v. Cent. Adjustment Bureau, Inc., 348 So. 2d 608, 609 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1977). See also Garcia v. Creditors Specialty Services, Inc., 2016 WL 3345459 (N.D. Cal. June 16, 2016) (Rosenthal Act forbids written communications that convey information meant to be seen by third party and intended to embarrass the debtor; finding plausible inference of intent where window envelope that revealed the words "Creditors' Specialty Services" and "settlement offer" with a red dollar sign was placed in mailbox to which entire household had access); Keasey v. Judgment Enforcement Law Firm, P.L.L.C., 2014 WL 1744268 (W.D Mich. Apr. 30, 2014) ("Judgment Enforcement Law Firm" visible in return address disclosed a debt in violation of FDCPA, Michigan Occupational Code, and Michigan Collection Practices Act).

221 See Waddell v. Capital Accounts, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5792865 (W.D. W. Va. Nov. 5, 2019) (threats to call employer about disputed debt violated state law provision forbidding "the accusation or threat to accuse any person of . . . any conduct which, if true, would tend to disgrace such person or in way subject him to ridicule or the contempt of society"); Rumpf v. Quorum Fed. Credit Union, 2018 WL 6271597 (W.D. Wis. Nov. 30, 2018) (creditor's statement in appellate brief that debts were primarily for gambling may violate this provision; statement will be protected by litigation privilege only if it is relevant to issue whether debt was for consumer purposes); Berg v. Merchants Ass'n Collection Div., 586 F. Supp. 2d 1336 (S.D. Fla. 2008) (debt collection message on answering machine, overheard by neighbor and girlfriend, affected reputation); Laughlin v. Household Bank, Ltd., 969 So. 2d 509 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2007) (telling employer that consumer has committed "credit card fraud" affected reputation); Heard v. Mathis, 344 So. 2d 651 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1977). See also Caton v. Green Tree Servicing, 2008 WL 222352 (N.D. W. Va. Jan. 25, 2008) (lender's call to landowner, on whose land manufactured home was located, violated prohibition on communications that "tend to disgrace" consumer).

222 See, e.g., Meyer v. Navient Solutions, L.L.C., 2019 WL 2303126 (E.D. Wis. May 30, 2019) (calls to delinquent borrowers' relatives, stating that servicer needed up-to-date contact information in order to provide "important updates," did not violate prohibition against disclosing information affecting customer's reputation; calls disclosed only existence of loan, not delinquency); Weber v. Great Lanes Educ. Loan Serv., 2013 WL 3943507 (W.D. Wis. July 30, 2013) (fact that student has taken out student loans and owes repayment is not stain on one's reputation; disclosure to debtor's mother that debtor owes student loan is not violation). See also Niven v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 2008 WL 4190961 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 10, 2008) (message left on office answering machine and picked up by debtor's assistant; fact issue whether message would affect reputation).

223 See § 16.8.3, infra.

224 See, e.g., In re Ortiz, 430 B.R. 523 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 2010) (specific healthcare privacy statute overrides common law litigation privilege). See also In re Helfman, 2020 WL 2790437 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. May 29, 2020) (affirming licensing board's sanctions against psychologist who divulged confidential patient information to collection attorneys he employed to collect delinquent accounts). See generally § 16.8.3, infra.

225 O'Brien v. Quicken Loan Services, 2013 WL 2319248, at *11 (S.D. W. Va. May 28, 2013) (claim adequately pleaded by allegations that defendant reported an alleged delinquency that was created by failing to credit timely payments and imposing of unauthorized late charges); Bledea v. IndyMac Fed. Bank, 2010 WL 715255 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 25, 2010); Champlaie v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 706 F. Supp. 2d 1029 (E.D. Cal. 2009) (threat to report false information violates Rosenthal Act); Welch v. Target Nat'l Bank, 2009 WL 1659708 (M.D. Fla. June 15, 2009) (continuing to report debt known to be discharged in bankruptcy was "backdoor method" of collection; consumer stated claim under Florida debt collection statute); Johnson v. MBNA Am. Bank, 2006 WL 618077 (M.D.N.C. Mar. 9, 2006) (question of fact whether creditor committed unfair act in violation of state debt collection law by dunning widow for late husband's secret credit card debt and reporting it to credit bureaus, when it knew or should have known widow might not be liable); Akalwadi v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, 336 F. Supp. 2d 492, 511 (D. Md. 2004) (fact question whether reporting same debt twice, with arguably incorrect amount, was knowing or reckless); Spencer v. Hendersen-Webb, Inc., 81 F. Supp. 2d 582 (D. Md. 1999) (denying cross-motions for summary judgment). See also Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 489 F. Supp. 2d 1140 (S.D. Cal. 2007) (threat to report stale debt, or implication that it had already been reported, was deceptive); Schafer v. Fed. Services Corp., 875 S.W.2d 455 (Tex. App. 1994) (prohibition against reporting disputed debt applies where consumer does not dispute amount, but disputes whether purported creditor owns debt). But see In re Pultz, 400 B.R. 185 (Bankr. D. Md. June 13, 2008) (false credit reporting does not violate Md. Code Ann., Com. Law § 14-202(5), which forbids disclosure or threat of disclosure of information affecting debtor's reputation to third person who does not have legitimate business need for information). But cf. Gamby v. Equifax Info. Services, L.L.C., 2010 statutory claims based on conduct that the Fair Credit Reporting Act regulates, including certain actions relating to furnishing of information to credit reporting agencies, may fall within a preemption provision of that Act.[226] The analysis of the Act's preemption provisions is highly technical and is addressed in detail in National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.[227]

16.2.4.2.3 Workplace calls

Employer contacts are prohibited by some state debt collection statutes.[228] Many state debt collection statutes also prohibit calls to the debtor at work, usually if the debtor has requested that such calls cease or the collector knows that the employer prohibits such calls.[229] Some statutes prohibit calls to the debtor at work unless the collector has tried unsuccessfully to reach the debtor at home.[230]

16.2.4.2.4 Third-party contacts

Contacts with family members and other third parties are considered unfair and abusive under many state debt collection statutes.[231] For example, a creditor who discussed the consumers' debt with relatives while obtaining location information

WL 46946 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 7, 2010) (false report not shown; where consumer's nonliability for credit card debt, which resulted from unauthorized use by family member, became clear only at trial, statement was "true when made").

226 15 U.S.C. § 1681t. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 10.7 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

227 National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 10.4 (qualified immunity), § 10.7 (preemption) (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

228 See, e.g., Weakley v. Redline Recovery Services, L.L.C., 723 F. Supp. 2d 1341 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (denying motion to dismiss claim against collector who, despite having two current phone numbers for debtor-Marine, spoke with his superiors, discussed debt, and described debtor as dishonest); Sanchez v. Client Services, Inc., 520 F. Supp. 2d 1149 (N.D. Cal. 2007) (fact issue whether messages on workplace answering machine revealed debt collection purpose); Stinson v. GC Services, L.P., 2008 WL 2328210 (S.D. Tex. June 4, 2008) (allegation that collector called human resources department and tried to garnish wages without conforming to Texas procedural requirements states claim under Texas debt collection statute); Me. Stat. tit. 32, § 11,012; Laughlin v. Household Bank, Ltd., 969 So. 2d 509 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2007) (call to supervisor stating that consumer was guilty of credit card fraud; consumer alleged that this caused loss of job). See also Heath v. Avco Fin. Services, 587 N.W.2d 457 (Wis. 1998) (finance company's call to employer in which it identified itself would violate state debt collection statute regardless of whether message it left was for employer or debtor to return call). But cf. Gill v. Kostroff, 82 F. Supp. 2d 1354 (M.D. Fla. 2000) (sending wage garnishment order to employer was not impermissible communication, even though default judgment on which it was based was later vacated by consent); Kohler v. Ford Motor Credit Co. 462 N.Y.S.2d 297 (N.Y. App. Div. 1983) (allegation that creditor visited debtor at job, and "caused a disturbance and caused him extreme embarrassment, relative to his employer" did not state cause of action under statute prohibiting contacting employer or threatening to do so); Assoc. Fin. Services Co. v. Hornik, 336 N.W.2d 395 (Wis. Ct. App. 1983) (where statute prohibited employer contacts, except, inter alia, to verify earnings, consumer must prove contact was not to verify earnings). See generally §§ 5.6, 15.3, 15.5, supra.

229 Robinson v. Managed Accounts Receivable, Corp., 654 F. Supp. 2d 1051 (C.D. Cal. 2009) (calls to military base where debtor known to be in active service; creditor knew workplace calls were forbidden; debtor stated claim for punitive damages); First N. Am. Nat'l Bank v. Superior Court, 2005 WL 67123 (Cal. Ct. App. Jan. 13, 2005); Hill v. Navy Fed. Credit Union, 2010 WL 2764698 (Conn. Super. Ct. June 2, 2010) (allegation that creditor called workplace after being informed it was inconvenient states claim; need not allege that employer forbade calls); City Fin. Co. v. Boykin, 358 S.E.2d 83 (N.C. Ct. App. 1987) (creditor violated state debt collection statute by continuing to phone consumer at work despite consumer's request to cease and provision of neighbor's phone number where he received messages). But cf. Johnson v. Nat'l Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2010 WL 1992636 (E.D. Cal. May 14, 2010) (allegation of workplace calls insufficient without allegation that consumer notified caller in writing that calls were forbidden), adopted, 2010 WL 2303320 (E.D. Cal. June 7, 2010); Caton v. Green Tree Servicing, 2008 WL 222352 (N.D. W. Va. Jan. 25, 2008) (calling workplace and asking co-worker to tell consumer to call certain number about "a business matter" did not violate West Virginia ban on employer contacts); Sigala v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2007 WL 642955 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 22, 2007) (workplace calls forbidden only if collector knows or should know of work rule forbidding them, or debtor requests in writing that contact not be made; here, rule not enforced if calls less than three minutes, and collector did not know of rule).

230 Clark v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2005 WL 1586862 (D. Or. June 30, 2005) (calls to workplace permitted where phone log showed unsuccessful attempts to reach consumers at home, even though collector did not leave message on home answering machine; call in which collector identified self to receptionist as "with QCI" did not reveal debt collection purpose); Van Westrienen v. Americontinental Collection Corp., 94 F. Supp. 2d 1087 (D. Or. 2000) (single call to consumer at work violated Oregon Unfair Debt Collection Practices Act, which requires that collector first make reasonable efforts to contact debtor at home; consumer's home phone number was listed); In re Castro, 2008 WL 4820526 (Bankr. E.D. N.C. Nov. 5, 2008) (finding that workplace calls violated automatic stay; noting that calls violated N.C. Gen. Stat. § 58-70-100(4), which forbids workplace calls if collector can reach consumer during non-working hours).

231 See, e.g., Baldwin v. Monterey Fin. Services, Inc., 2016 WL 5723734 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 30, 2016) (denying creditor's motion for summary judgment on claim that creditor revealed that debtor owed debt by calling debtor's reference and stating that call was from company's "review department" and that debtor should "call today to resolve this outstanding matter," but granting summary judgment as to a second call that was less specific); Smith v. MarkOne Fin., L.L.C., 2015 WL 419005 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 2, 2015) (contacts with family members forbidden, but contacts with landlord, whom debtor had listed as reference, were not); Poitevint v. United Recovery Sys., L.P., 899 F. Supp. 2d 1230 (N.D. Fla. 2012) (fact issue whether number, content, and timing of calls to debtor and family member showed intent to harass); Branco v. Credit Collection Services, Inc., 2011 WL 3684503 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2011) (leaving debt collection message for debtor message on family answering machine that several family members used violates state debt collection law); Valero v. Bryant, LaFayette & Assoc., 2011 WL 1438436 (E.D. Cal. Apr. 14, 2011) (abusive call to debtor's seriously ill father); Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Services, Inc., 2011 WL 3176453 (S.D. Cal. July 26, 2011) (refusing to dismiss claim that service of collection action complaint on debtor's father violated state debt collection statute); Puttner v. Debt Consultants of Am., 2009 WL 1604570 (S.D. Cal. June 4, 2009) (allegations of repeated calls to family members, harassment calls sufficient to state claim). But see N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 358-C:3(IV)(a) (allowing calls to person residing with debtor and reasonably believed to be family member over the age of 18). But cf. Brooks v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2013 WL 1010455 (D. Md. Mar. 13, 2013) (call to household answering machine not sufficient violated a state prohibition against third party contacts except to locate the consumers.[232] It may be actionable simply to provide in a contract that the consumer waives the right to be free from third party contacts.[233]

16.2.4.3 Abusive Collection Activities

16.2.4.3.1 Telephone harassment

Abusive debt collection conduct is proscribed by many state debt collection statutes. Many decisions have applied this prohibition to telephone harassment. Particular violations include:

- Excessively repeated calls or other contacts,[234] which may include missed or unanswered calls.[235] to state claim in absence of allegation that any third party actually received information).

232 Pub. Fin. Co. v. Van Blaricome, 324 N.W.2d 716 (Iowa 1982). See also McKibben v. Collection Prof'l Services, 2010 WL 2025319 (E.D. Cal. May 18, 2010) (contact with debtor's daughter and debtor's church, revealing existence of debt); Berg v. Merchants Ass'n Collection Div., 586 F. Supp. 2d 1336 (S.D. Fla. 2008) (Florida statute forbids disclosure to non-household members with no legitimate need for information, if disclosure affects reputation; sufficiently alleged here where debt collection message on home answering machine overheard by neighbor and girlfriend); Dowling v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2005 WL 2675010 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 20, 2005) (consumer raised fact issues regarding conversation with non-debtor daughter who answered phone, and call to neighbor at another address); Sec. Marine Bank v. Larson, 291 N.W.2d 662 (Wis. Ct. App. 1980) (bank employee's gratuitous statements to debtor's relatives that debtor was in default and dying of cancer, and his uninvited entry into relative's home and refusal to leave, violated state debt collection statute). But see Segal v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, 2006 WL 449176 (M.D. Fla. 2006) (sending sealed letter to consumer at stepson's address not prohibited third party contact); Flood v. Mercantile Adjustment Bureau, L.L.C., 176 P.3d 769 (Colo. 2008) (disclosure of debt information to third-party mailing service that printed and sent collection letters was de minimis and unlikely to harm debtors, so did not violate ban on third-party communications).

233 See U.S. Life Credit Corp. v. Wilson, 301 S.E.2d 169 (W. Va. 1982) (clause unconscionable).

234 See, e.g., N.L. by Mother Lemos v. Credit One Bank, 2018 WL 5880796 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 8, 2018), aff'd, 960 F.3d 1164 (9th Cir. 2020) (denying defendant's motion for summary judgment on claim that 785 calls in one month to non-debtor, a 10-year old child, was violation); Soria v. U.S. Bank, 2019 WL 8167925, at *11 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 25, 2019) (denying creditor's motion for summary judgment; fact question whether 232 calls over seven-month period shows intent to harass); Miller v. Ginny's, Inc., 2017 WL 6398302 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 16, 2017) (if daily calls continued after request to stop, they would violate provisions of Florida statute forbidding harassing calls, and assertion of right known not to exist); Juarez v. Citibank, 2016 WL 4547914 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 1, 2016) (three calls per day for forty-two days, most after being informed that collector had wrong number); Tinsley v. OneWest Bank, 2014 WL 3700456 (S.D. W. Va. July 24, 2014) (five calls in six days may be abusive where debtor repeatedly asked collector to stop calling); Priscoff v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 2013 WL 3776589 (S.D. Ohio July 16, 2013) (fact question whether 300 calls demonstrates intent to harass sufficient to be violation of state debt collection statute); Cole v. U.S. Bank, 2011 WL 3651029 (S.D. Tex. Aug. 17, 2011) (numerous rude and abusive calls, including four in one day, resulting in physical illness); Stewart v. Xrimz, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1002207 (M.D. Pa. Mar. 18, 2011) (frequent calls and text messages with foul language and impersonation of law enforcement officer); Stuart v. AR Res., 2011 WL 904167 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 16, 2011) (unreasonably frequent calls with profanity and misrepresentations), later decision at 2011 WL 904202 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 16, 2011) (denying motions to dismiss statutory claims; dismissing common law invasion of privacy claim); Rucker v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2011 WL 25300 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 5, 2011) (fact question whether eighty calls in about a year were harassing); Oppenheim v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 695 F. Supp. 2d 1303 (M.D. Fla. 2010) (thirty or forty "belligerent" phone calls sufficient to state claim), aff'd on other grounds, 627 F.3d 833 (11th Cir. 2010); McKibben v. Collection Prof'l Services, 2010 WL 2025319 (E.D. Cal. May 18, 2010) (allegation of "constant and continuous" calls sufficient to state claim); Reyes v. Saxon Mortg. Services, Inc., 2009 WL 3738177 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 5, 2009) (harassing calls and automated calls to cell phone); Hurrey-Mayor v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., Inc., 2009 WL 3647632 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 4, 2009) (harassing calls and automated calls to cell phone); Robinson v. Managed Accounts Receivable, Corp., 654 F. Supp. 2d 1051 (C.D. Cal. 2009) (repeated calls, including false threats, to military base where calls were forbidden; debtor stated claim for punitive damages); Pollock v. Bay Area Credit Serv., L.L.C., 2009 WL 2475167 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 13, 2009) (fact issue whether 187 calls to cell phone, ten leaving prerecorded message, were harassment); Panahiasl v. Gurney, 2007 WL 738642 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 8, 2007) (repeated abusive phone calls violate state debt collection statute); Rouse v. Law Offices of Rory Clark, 465 F. Supp. 2d 1031 (S.D. Cal. 2006) (calls and other collection action continued after plaintiff repeatedly furnished proof he was judgment debtor's similarly-named non-debtor son); Baker v. Citibank, 13 F. Supp. 2d 1037 (S.D. Cal. 1998) (overruling motion to dismiss suit alleging frequent telephone calls in violation of state debt collection practices statute); First N. Am. Nat'l Bank v. Superior Court, 2005 WL 67123 (Cal. Ct. App. Jan. 13, 2005) (fact question whether eighty contacts in 230 days unreasonable); Armata v. Target Corp., 99 N.E.3d 788 (Mass. 2018) (rejecting creditor's contention that calls initiated by predictive dialer are not subject to Massachusetts regulation's limit of two calls per week). But see Caudell v. Fin. Credit Network, Inc., 2011 WL 1377643 (E.D. Cal. Apr. 12, 2011) (daily calls not violation); Gates v. Wachovia Mortg., 2010 WL 4025064 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 13, 2010) (allegation that calls continued after written request to stop insufficient to state Rosenthal Act claim; must allege that calls were threatening, harassing, obscene, or deceptive). But cf. Daley v. Bono, 420 F. Supp. 3d 1247 (M.D. Fla. 2019) (four to eight letters over period of two or more years to debtor's attorney not harassing); Medley v. Dish Network, L.L.C., 2018 WL 4092120 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 27, 2018) (six telephone calls and five routine billing notices over five months not excessive), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 958 F.3d 1063 (11th Cir. 2020); Valentine & Kebartas, Inc. v. Lenahan, 801 S.E.2d 431 (W. Va. 2017) (250 phone calls—up to six per day—during eight month period are not sufficient to support claim for harassing calls); Cesaire v. Med. Services, Inc., 2016 WL 6910257, at *8–9 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 23, 2016) (fifteen calls per month, some of which were unanswered, not a violation absent other oppressive conduct); Branco v. Credit Collection Services, Inc., 2011 WL 3684503 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2011) (fourteen calls not harassment; no evidence of pattern or content); Arteaga v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 733 F. Supp. 2d 1218 (E.D. Cal. 2010) (eighteen calls, most of which were not answered, over five months not violation); Dennis v. Reg'l Adjustment Bureau, Inc., 2010 WL 3359369 (S.D. Fla. July 7, 2010) (six calls to cell phone over four-month period insufficient); Wolfe v. GC Services L.P., 2009 WL 230637 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 30, 2009) (claim fails because debtor, who was receiving calls from more than one collector, failed to produce phone records showing that defendant made offending calls); Norris v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2019 WL 2022531 (Cal. Ct. App. May 8, 2019) (unpublished) (daily robocalls do not violate Rosenthal Act); Schauer v. Morse Operations, Inc., 5 So. 3d 2 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2009) (seven calls in six months, one stating that co-signer would be "in big trouble," insufficient as matter of law to state claim).

235 Brown v. Flagstar Bancorp, Inc., 2014 WL 408821 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 3, 2014) (unanswered calls may "communicate" within the meaning of

- Calls at unusual or inconvenient times;[236] and
- Profane or abusive language.[237]

Some state debt collection statutes require a showing of intent to harass or that the frequency of the calls would reasonably be expected to harass the debtor.[238] In a Florida case involving more than 100 collection calls about a disputed debt, the jury considered whether the activity violated a statute that prohibited "willfully communicating with a debtor or any member of his family with such frequency as can reasonably be expected to harass the debtor or his family." The jury was instructed to weigh the following factors:

- The frequency and abrasiveness of the contacts;
- The legitimacy of the collector's claim;
- The legitimacy of the consumer's excuse for not paying;
- The evidence of the harassing purpose of the contact; and
- Whether the calls continued after passage of a reasonable time for persuading, exchanging information, and negotiating.[239]

FCCPA provisions forbidding telephone harassment and communication with represented debtors); Pruden v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2014 WL 2142155 (D.N.H. May 23, 2014) (one month of daily hang-up calls was sufficient to support claim for telephone harassment); Bresko v. M. & T. Bank Corp., 2013 WL 5328241 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 23, 2013) (unanswered call is communication covered by Florida statute if collector's number shows up on caller ID); Neu v. Genpact Services, L.L.C., 2013 WL 1773822 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 25, 2013) (fact issue as to intent to harass; 150 calls to home and cell phone, none answered); Clements v. HSBC Auto Fin., Inc., 2011 WL 2976558 (S.D. W. Va. July 21, 2011) (intent to harass sufficiently shown; over 800 autodialed calls to represented consumers; most calls unanswered); Armata v. Target Corp., 99 N.E.3d 788 (Mass. 2018) (unanswered calls are communications subject to Massachusetts regulation's limit of two calls per week, even if caller does not leave voicemail message). See also Enis v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 1721961 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 22, 2013) (genuine issue of fact as to harassing phone calls: 110 calls, thirty-one answered); Krapf v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2010 WL 2025323 (C.D. Cal. May 21, 2010) (fact question whether four to eight calls per day violated prohibition against causing telephone to ring repeatedly to annoy called party, but where debtor answered only two calls there was not violation of prohibition against unreasonably frequent communication). But cf. Cesaire v. Med. Services, Inc., 2016 WL 6910257, at *9 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 23, 2016) (absent other oppressive conduct, large volume of unanswered calls merely represents legitimate persistent attempt to reach consumer).

236 See, e.g., Brooks v. Suncoast Schs. F.C.U., 2012 WL 6059199 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 6, 2012) (very frequent calls, some outside permitted hours); Thompson v. Chase Bank, 2010 WL 1329061 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 30, 2010) (calls on Easter and Mother's Day sufficient to support claim for calls at unusual or inconvenient times); Gilroy v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 632 F. Supp. 2d 132 (D.N.H. 2009) (evidence sufficient that calls came from defendant and were harassing; need not show time and content of each call; here about 200 late evening calls, up to three per night, to older woman who had told creditor she went to bed at eight and could not pay at present), later decision at 2009 WL 2169858 (D.N.H. July 21, 2009) (denying creditor's motion for new trial); Hamilton v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 502 A.2d 1057 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1986) (upholding $10,001 award for repeated and late night phone calls despite request to stop).

237 See, e.g., Summers v. Merchants and Med. Credit Corp., 2013 WL 1507529 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 12, 2013) (fact issue whether calling consumer a liar is, without more, harassment); Stewart v. Xrimz, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1002207 (M.D. Pa. Mar. 18, 2011) (frequent calls and text messages with foul language and impersonation of law enforcement officer); Stuart v. AR Res., 2011 WL 904167 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 16, 2011) (unreasonably frequent calls with profanity and misrepresentations), later decision at 2011 WL 904202 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 16, 2011) (denying motions to dismiss statutory claims); Sasscer v. Donnelly, 2010 WL 2195797 (M.D. Pa. May 27, 2010) (frequent calls, profane language, arguably false threats); Iruegas v. Diversified Adjustment Serv., Inc., 2010 WL 1171088 (W.D. Tex. Mar. 22, 2010) (profane language, threat to report debt after debtor stated it was not his); Casey v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2010 WL 415310 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 29, 2010) (fact question whether collector used abusive language or refused to identify self upon request); Guajardo v. GC Services, L.P., 2009 WL 3715603 (S.D. Tex. Nov. 3, 2009) (fact issue whether number and content of calls offensive enough to be violations); Islam v. Option One Mortgage Co., 432 F. Supp. 2d 181 (D. Mass. 2006) (offensive language, here racial epithets directed to consumer who had already paid); Laughlin v. Household Bank, Ltd., 969 So. 2d 509 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2007) (abusive language; calls continuing after being informed that consumer was represented); Williams v. HomeEq Servicing Corp., 646 S.E.2d 381 (N.C. Ct. App. 2007) (telephone harassment sufficiently alleged where calls were very frequent, and "rude and abrasive"); Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002) (affirming $5 million in compensatory damages where creditor threatened older identity theft victim with jail, used rude and obscene language, and refused to believe her denials even when reiterated by sheriff), vacated on other grounds, 2003 Tex. LEXIS 50 (Apr. 24, 2003) (vacating decision pursuant to parties' settlement). But see Assoc. Fin. Services Co. v. Hornik, 336 N.W.2d 395 (Wis. Ct. App. 1983) (sixty-nine calls over nineteen months not unreasonably frequent where debtor was continuously late in paying monthly installment and content of calls was generally not abusive; statement "God damn it Walt, what are we going to do about this?" exhibited use of colloquialism to express personal concern and was not obscene).

238 Romero v. Dep't Stores Nat'l Bank, 725 Fed. Appx. 537 (9th Cir. 2018) (Cal. law) (numerous robocalls to cell phone, continuing after revocation of consent to call); Krapf v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2010 WL 2025323 (C.D. Cal. May 21, 2010) (180 calls in a month may violate prohibition against calls with such frequency as to be unreasonable and to constitute harassment); Sanchez v. Client Services, Inc., 520 F. Supp. 2d 1149 (N.D. Cal. 2007) (number and pattern of calls showed intent to harass); Akalwadi v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, 336 F. Supp. 2d 492 (D. Md. 2004) (fact question whether this number and pattern of calls violated statute's prohibition of acts "reasonably expected to abuse or harass"); Joseph v. J.J. Mac Intyre Companies, L.L.C., 238 F. Supp. 2d 1158 (N.D. Cal. 2002) (whether collector's 200 calls over nine months was actionable harassment or annoyance under California debt collection statute, which prohibits causing phone to ring repeatedly to annoy the person called and communicating with such frequency as to be unreasonable and to constitute harassment, turns on volume of calls and repeat calls after request to stop; fact that collector was collecting on seventeen debts irrelevant), later op. at 281 F. Supp. 2d 1156 (N.D. Cal. 2003) (calls outside statute of limitations period relevant to determine whether pattern exists); Williams v. HomeEq Servicing Corp., 646 S.E.2d 381 (N.C. Ct. App. 2007) (whether phone calls were made "with such frequency as to be unreasonable or to constitute harassment" is generally jury question; depends on frequency and abrasiveness of calls, legitimacy of creditor's claim).

239 Story v. J.M. Fields, Inc., 343 So. 2d 675 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1977) (reversing court's directed verdict for defendant). See also Harrington v. Roundpoint Mortg. Servicing Corp., ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2017 WL 5952875 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 30, 2017) (applying these factors and holding that 23 calls a month for a year did not constitute harassment, where debt was legitimate, debtor answered only one call, and callers were always polite); Ortiz v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2010 WL 547910 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 12, 2010) (fact question whether this number and pattern of autodialed calls shows intent to harass); Nicholas v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2010 WL 503071 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 8, 2010) (fact question whether fifty-eight calls in eighty-two days were "reasonably Intent to harass may be inferred from the number of calls.[240] Continuing calls after the debtor has requested that they stop is also evidence of intent to harass.[241] A Wisconsin decision interpreted its prohibition of conduct likely to threaten or harass a debtor as creating an objective, "reasonable person" standard.[242]

One court has held that language that is merely harsh and insulting does not violate a statute that prohibits "grossly abusive" language.[243] But where a statute forbade "fighting words," that is, words likely to incite an immediate breach of the peace, use of the words "liar," "deadbeat" and "dishonest" during a phone call violated the statute.[244] The statutory definition of harassment is generally broader than the "highly offensive" or "extreme and outrageous" standard needed to support tort claims.[245]

16.2.4.3.2 Threatening or filing unfounded criminal charges

Threatening or filing unfounded criminal charges violates a state debt collection statute.[246] Even if the debtor is, in fact, guilty of a crime, threatening or filing criminal charges may violate the debt collection statute if it is for the purpose of collecting a civil debt.[247] expected to harass"); Scott v. Florida Health Sciences Ctr., Inc., 2008 WL 4613083 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 16, 2008) (nineteen phone calls to collect debt known to have been already paid by insurer may be considered harassing); Segal v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, 2006 WL 449176 (M.D. Fla. 2006) (fact question as to number and content of phone calls, whether calls would abuse or harass consumer); Desmond v. Accounts Receivable Mgt., Inc., 72 So. 3d 179 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2011) (automated calls to non-debtor, here person with name similar to credit card debtor, with no method to call back and point out mistake, states claim for "conduct that can reasonably be expected to abuse or harass"). See also Poitevint v. United Recovery Sys., L.P., 899 F. Supp. 2d 1230 (N.D. Fla. 2012) (fact issue whether number, content, and timing of calls to debtor and family member showed intent to harass).

---

240 Soria v. U.S. Bank, 2019 WL 8167925, at *11 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 25, 2019) (232 calls over seven-month period; " A reasonable juror could infer an intent to harass based on the sheer number of collection calls."); Brooks v. Suncoast Schs. FCU, 2012 WL 6059199 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 6, 2012) (multiple calls per day, five days a week, for four months, to several phone numbers, sufficient to show intent to harass); Duncan v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2011 WL 5359698 (S.D. W. Va. Nov. 4, 2011) (intent to annoy, abuse, oppress, or threaten, as required by state debt collection statute, may be inferred from number of calls; here calls continued after request to cease direct contact with represented debtor, and one caller was rude); Brandt v. IC Sys., Inc., 2010 WL 582051 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 19, 2010) (intent to harass must be alleged; may be shown by number and pattern of calls). But see Robinson v. Wells Fargo Bank, 576 Fed. Appx. 358 (5th Cir. 2014) (Tex. law; call volume alone not sufficient to show intent to harass; must show calls at inappropriate hours, with threats, or with bad language, or workplace calls after being forbidden to call workplace); Lardner v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 17 F. Supp. 3d 1215 (S.D. Fla. 2014) (volume of calls alone not sufficient; must show that calls continued after debtor and collector communicated to convey information about the debt, negotiate, or tell collector not to call).

241 N.L. by Mother Lemos v. Credit One Bank, 2018 WL 5880796 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 8, 2018), aff'd, 960 F.3d 1164 (9th Cir. 2020).

242 Sec. Marine Bank v. Larson, 291 N.W.2d 662 (Wis. Ct. App. 1980). See generally § 6.2.4, supra (federal statute uses unsophisticated consumer test).

243 Dick v. Mercantile-Safe Dep. & Trust Co., 492 A.2d 674 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1985) (threats to use lawful procedures to collect debt, inquiries about marital status within context of case, remarks "damn airplane" and "give a damn," and references to purchaser being liar did not meet "grossly abusive" standard, which requires flagrant or great abuse). See also Seals v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 2002 WL 32099632 (N.D. W. Va. Aug. 29, 2002) (rude attitude, statement that "I know now what I'm dealing with," and suggestion that borrower go to work at McDonalds insufficient allegations of "abusive language"), aff'd, 53 Fed. Appx. 286 (4th Cir. 2002).

244 Tim O'Neill Chevrolet v. Forristall, 551 N.W.2d 611 (Iowa 1996).

245 Sprogis v. Suntrust Bank, 2013 WL 2456090 (M.D. Fla. June 6, 2013) (allegation that calls were "constant," "made several times per day," and sufficient to cause emotional distress states claim under state debt collection statute, but not for intrusion on seclusion); Kleiman v. Equable Ascent, 2013 WL 49754 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 3, 2013) (not inconsistent to hold that consumer has stated claim for FDCPA and RFDCPA violations but not invasion of privacy; phone calls sometimes twice a day for arguably time-barred debt, no allegation of the content of the calls or whether they were answered); Ramsour v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2012 WL 6004230 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 30, 2012) (summary judgment for consumer on FDCPA and RFDCPA, genuine fact issue as to intrusion on seclusion; persistent calls to elderly person, known to be represented); Oppenheim v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 695 F. Supp. 2d 1303 (M.D. Fla. 2010) (thirty or forty "belligerent" phone calls sufficient to state claim for FDCPA and Florida debt collection act violations, but not invasion of privacy), aff'd on other grounds, 627 F.3d 833 (11th Cir. 2010). See generally Ch. 15, supra (standards for tort claims).

246 Alonso v. Blackstone Fin. Group, L.L.C., 962 F. Supp. 2d 1188 (E.D. Cal. 2013) (collector misrepresented self as law enforcement officer, and told debtor she would be arrested at work next day); Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002) (affirming award of $5 million in compensatory damages where creditor threatened older woman with jail for not making manufactured home payments that she did not actually owe), vacated on other grounds, 2003 Tex. LEXIS 50 (Apr. 24, 2003) (vacating decision pursuant to parties' settlement); Peters v. Quinney, 2001 WL 1627650 (Tex. App. Dec. 20, 2001) (upholding $26,584 verdict under Texas debt collection statute against lender who swore out false criminal complaint after being advised by county attorney that matter was probably civil); Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc. v. Gonzalez, 528 S.W.2d 314 (Tex. App. 1975) ($3500 awarded for profane and abusive language, misrepresentations as to involvement of attorney, false threats of criminal charges, and accusations of fraud). See also Vine v. PLS Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 456031, at *15–16 (W.D. Tex. Jan. 16, 2018) (denying collector's motion for summary judgment on claim that it wrongfully threatened criminal prosecution on post-dated payday loan checks by referring them to district attorney's office; fact that collector did not communicate threat directly to debtor is irrelevant where collector knew that district attorney's office would threaten arrest); Lensch v. Armada Corp., 795 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (W.D. Wash. 2011) (provision of Washington statute allowing collector to warn of criminal prosecution in NSF check notices was preempted by FDCPA ban of false threats where criminal prosecution was time-barred).

247 Brown v. Oaklawn Bank, 718 S.W.2d 678 (Tex. 1986). See also Commonwealth v. Tucker, 142 A.2d 786 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1958) (collector committed crime by filing criminal charges for purpose of coercing payment of debt); § 15.6, supra, 16.5.3, infra. But see Garcia v. Nueces County Employees Credit Union, 2008 WL 4938271 (Tex. App. Nov. 20, 2008) (filing criminal charges did not violate Texas debt collection act where borrower's actions—selling encumbered car to innocent purchaser without seeking lender's contractually required permission or informing purchaser of lien—were crimes). But cf. Hatcher v. Budget Rent-a-Car, 617 F.2d 91 (5th Cir. 1980) (not violation

16.2.4.3.3 Contacting represented debtors

The debt collection statutes of a number of states, including California,[248] Colorado,[249] Florida,[250] North Carolina,[251] Pennsylvania,[252] Washington,[253] and West Virginia,[254] include explicit prohibitions against contacting represented debtors. West Virginia's prohibition has been upheld against a challenge that it was unconstitutionally vague.[255] Courts have also held that federal banking law does not preempt such a prohibition,[256] although the West Virginia Supreme Court held that the Higher Education Act did preempt it.[257] The West Virginia statute, which formerly required only that the lawyer's identity be "readily ascertainable," now prohibits contact with a represented debtor only if the debtor gives the collector written or electronic notice that states that the attorney represents the debtor with respect to the specific debt of Texas debt collection statute to report true facts to prosecutor, even if prosecutor then filed unfounded charges).

248 Cal. Civ. Code § 1788.14(c). See Huizar v. Mandarich Law Group, 2013 WL 4209050 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 14, 2013) (robocalls to cell phones of debtor and non-debtor continued after being told of representation); Ramsour v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2012 WL 6004230 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 30, 2012) (persistent calls to elderly person, known to be represented); Day v. Am. Home Mortgage Servicing, Inc., 2010 WL 2231988 (E.D. Cal. June 3, 2010); Sam v. Am. Home Mortgage Servicing, Inc., 2010 WL 761228 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 3, 2010) (letter from Mortgage Litigation Consultants stating that consumers had retained named attorney, but not signed by attorney, was sufficient to notify creditor that consumers were represented; contacts with consumers thereafter violated Rosenthal Act); Moya v. Chase Cardmember Serv., 661 F. Supp. 2d 1129 (N.D. Cal. 2009) (fact issue whether letter sent to represented consumer was permissible statement of account or forbidden collection letter); Castellanos v. JPMorgan Chase & Co., 2009 WL 1833981 (S.D. Cal. June 23, 2009) (account statements permissible, but other calls and letters to represented debtors violated Rosenthal Act); Yee v. Ventus Capital Services, 2006 WL 1310463 (N.D. Cal. May 12, 2006) (denying summary judgment on claim that collector contacted represented debtor). But cf. Thompson v. Chase Bank, 2010 WL 1329061 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 30, 2010) (no violation where debtors sent dispute of debt and attorney contact information only to defunct bank that had originated their loan, which had been assigned to defendant months earlier); Offril v. J.C. Penny Co., 2009 WL 69344 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 9, 2009) (no showing that collector actually knew of representation; creditor's knowledge not imputed to collector).

249 Colo. Rev. Stat. § 5-16-105(1)(b). See Cross v. Receivables Mgmt. Solutions, 2006 WL 446083 (D. Colo. Feb. 21, 2006) (refusing to dismiss claim that collector violated state debt collection law by sending verification notice to represented debtor).

250 Fla. Stat. § 559.72(18). See Nordwall v. PNC Mortg., 2015 WL 4095350 (M.D. Fla. July 7, 2014) (letter requesting that collector communicate with law firm was sufficient to put collector on notice that debtor was represented, even though it was signed by paralegal, where letterhead included names and addresses of attorneys); Brooks v. Suncoast Schs. F.C.U., 2012 WL 6059199 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 6, 2012) (barrage of calls continued after creditor was informed of representation); Patten v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1706889 (M.D. Fla. May 5, 2011) (letter to represented borrower not "for informational purposes only" where it included a payment coupon and the words "due immediately"); Bacelli v. MFP, Inc., 729 F. Supp. 2d 1328 (M.D. Fla. 2010) (must show actual knowledge that consumer was represented; dismissing claim against collector, but allowing claim to go forward against creditor who sent debt to collector without telling collector it had received notice from consumer's bankruptcy counsel); Cavanaugh v. HBSC Card Services, Inc., 2010 WL 3746260 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 22, 2010) (creditor may be liable where its collector contacted represented consumer, but collector itself is not liable if creditor failed to notify it that consumer was represented); Brazier v. Law Offices of Mitchell N. Kay, P.C., 2009 WL 764161 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 19, 2009) (fact issue whether letter addressed to consumer care of consumer's lawyer was communication with consumer to which FDCPA and CCPA "least sophisticated consumer" standard applied); Laughlin v. Household Bank, Ltd., 969 So. 2d 509 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2007) (abusive phone calls after being informed debtor was represented). But cf. Daley v. Bono, 420 F. Supp. 3d 1247 (M.D. Fla. 2019) (no violation where letters were sent only to debtor's attorney).

251 N.C. Gen. Stat. § 75-55(3). See In re Pryor, 479 B.R. 694 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 2012) (National Bank Act and implementing regulations do not preempt North Carolina law forbidding contact with debtor known to be represented).

252 73 Pa. Stat. § 2270.4(b)(1)(vi). See Baldwin v. Monterey Fin. Services, Inc., 2016 WL 5723734 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 30, 2016) (must show that caller had actual knowledge that consumer was represented).

253 Wash. Rev. Code § 19.16.250(12). See Graves v. Quick Collect, 2011 WL 2474280 (W.D. Wash. June 20, 2011) (fact question whether letter was sent to debtors or to their attorney).

254 W. Va. Code § 46A-2-128(e). See Parks v. Round Point Mortg. Servicing Corp., 2019 WL 1519303 (S.D. W. Va. Apr. 8, 2019) (unanswered phone calls to debtor, after being properly notified of representation, violated this section); Patrick v. PHH Mortg. Corp., 937 F. Supp. 2d 773 (N.D. W. Va. 2013) (contact with represented consumers sufficiently alleged); Lenhart v. Everbank, 2013 WL 5745602 (S.D. W. Va. Oct. 23, 2013) (West Virginia provision forbidding contact with consumer known to be represented not preempted by HOLA); Petty v. Countrywide Home Loans, 2013 WL 1837932, at *13 (S.D. W. Va. May 1, 2013) (denying motion to dismiss; complaint need not state name of the attorney who was representing the debtor); Adams v. Chrysler Fin. Co., 2013 WL 1385407 (S.D. W. Va. Apr. 3, 2013) (fact issue as to when consumers were first represented); Shaffer v. HSBC Nevada, 2013 WL 209483 (S.D. W. Va. Jan. 17, 2013) (fact issues whether debtor provided name and contact information, or whether contact information was easily ascertainable if debtor provided name); Croye v. GreenPoint Mortgage Funding, Inc., 740 F. Supp. 2d 788 (S.D. W. Va. 2010) (contacts with represented debtor and non-obligated spouse); Clements v. HSBC Auto Fin., Inc., 2010 WL 4281697 (S.D. W. Va. Oct. 19, 2010) (attorney's address was "readily ascertainable" where consumers provided correct telephone number; contact with represented consumers violated West Virginia act); Stover v. Fingerhut Direct Mktg., Inc., 2010 WL 1050426 (W.D. W. Va. Mar. 17, 2010) (unanswered phone call can be communication, within meaning of provision forbidding contact with represented debtor). But cf. White v. Ally Fin., Inc., 2013 WL 1857266 (S.D. W. Va. May 2, 2013) (not violation for collector to contact consumer regarding debt owed by late husband's estate, where it knew only that she had been represented in an individual bankruptcy).

255 Stover v. Fingerhut Direct Mktg., Inc., 709 F. Supp. 2d 473 (S.D. W. Va. 2009) (provision of West Virginia statute forbidding contact if it "appears that" consumer is represented and attorney's contact information is known or "can be easily ascertained" not unconstitutionally vague).

256 See, e.g., Tinsley v. OneWest Bank, 2014 WL 3700456 (S.D. W. Va. July 24, 2014). See generally § 16.1.2, supra.

257 Adams v. Pa. Higher Educ. Assistance Agency, 787 S.E.2d 583 (W. Va. 2016) (HEA preempts state law forbidding contact with represented debtor, but not provisions forbidding assertion of a right known not to exist or collection of a debt known to be invalid).

and includes the attorney's name, address, and telephone number.[258]

Sending a represented debtor copies of correspondence with the debtor's attorney about reaffirmation options in bankruptcy violates this type of prohibition.[259] Even without an explicit statutory prohibition, it can amount to harassment if a collector continues to contact a debtor after being told that the debtor is represented and that the collector should call the debtor's attorney.[260]

16.2.4.4 Unfair and Deceptive Debt Collection Activities

16.2.4.4.1 Introduction

Deceptive debt collection tactics have been the subject of frequent decisions under state debt collection statutes. Courts often draw on the standards developed under the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, and UDAP statutes when applying these provisions.[261]

16.2.4.4.2 Deception regarding the existence or amount of a debt

False or misleading statements about the amount of a debt are deceptive.[262] Collecting or seeking to collect amounts that are not actually owed is a violation.[263] For example, it is a violation to:

258 W. Va. Code 46A-2-128(e). See Waugh v. Elan Fin. Serv., 2018 WL 2976430 (S.D. W. Va. June 13, 2018) (amended statute will not be applied retroactively); Casto v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 2018 WL 265586 (S.D. W. Va. Jan. 6, 2018) (genuine issues of fact where calls made during sixteen day period between postmark date of notice letter and recording of letter in defendant's file); Huffman v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 2017 WL 2177351 (S.D. W. Va. May 17, 2017) (declining to dismiss; noting presumption that properly mailed letter will arrive); Biser v. Manufacturers' & Traders Trust Co., 211 F. Supp. 3d 845 (S.D. W. Va. Sept. 29, 2016) (amended statute applies prospectively only).

259 See Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. O'Brien, 178 F.3d 962 (8th Cir. 1999) (sending copy of reaffirmation proposal to debtor who was represented by counsel violated state debt collection statute); Greenwood Trust Co. v. Smith, 212 B.R. 599 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 1997) (federal bankruptcy law did not preempt section of Iowa Consumer Credit Code which forbade creditor contact with debtor known to be represented by counsel; sending "informational copy" of proposed reaffirmation agreement to debtor was violation); In re Montsko, 1997 WL 699817 (Bankr. S.D. Iowa Jan. 14, 1997); In re Smith, 1997 WL 697951 (Bankr. S.D. Iowa 1997); In re Lenahan, 1997 WL 697947 (Bankr. S.D. Iowa 1997). See also Fisher v. Am. Gen. Fin. Co., 2002 WL 31760189 (4th Cir. Dec. 11, 2002) (violation of West Virginia statute, but actual damages not shown). But cf. Mitchell Rubenstein & Assoc., 857 F.3d 939 (D.C. Cir. 2017) (letter sent to lawyer at client's address; claim fails because this appears to be computer error, and lawyer had procedures in place to prevent errors).

260 Porter v. Wachovia Dealer Services, Inc., 2007 WL 2693370 (D. Or. Sept. 12, 2007) (fact question whether calls to debtor, after he told creditor to deal with his attorney, were harassment).

261 See §§ 7.2, 16.2.4.1, supra (incorporation of FDCPA standards by state debt collection statutes), § 16.3.4, infra (UDAP statutes' standards as applied to debt collection); National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library (UDAP statutes' general definitions of deception).

262 See, e.g., Stapp v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 1313160 (E.D. Tex. Feb. 28, 2013) (series of highly inconsistent statements and letters concerning loan amount, arrearage, and payment amounts misrepresented amount of debt), adopted, 2013 WL 1309735 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 28, 2013); Seldon v. Home Loan Services, Inc., 647 F. Supp. 2d 451 (E.D. Pa. 2009) (borrowers stated claim against mortgage servicer: misstatements about amount of debt, false promises about repayment plan, threats to take improper non-judicial action, alleged plan to take home in preference to collecting debt); Jefferies v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 543 F. Supp. 2d 368 (E.D. Pa. 2008) (denying subprime lender's motion for summary judgment on claim that its incomplete or inaccurate disclosures gave "false impression of the character, amount" of debt in violation of state debt collection statute); In re Davis, 377 B.R. 827 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 2007) (misrepresentation of amount of debt violates state debt collection act). But cf. Thompson v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 1022 (5th Cir. 2015) (false statements about status of loan modification efforts were not misrepresentations of character or amount of the debt; communications about modification of a loan do not relate to its collection, so state debt collection statute is inapplicable); Miller v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 726 F.3d 717 (5th Cir. 2013) (Texas law) (misrepresentation that foreclosure would be delayed while servicer considered homeowners' loan modification application was not misrepresentation of character or amount of debt); Verdin v. Fed. Nat'l Mortgage Ass'n, 2013 WL 4126785 (5th Cir. Aug. 15, 2013) (Tex. law; refusal to provide payoff quote is not an affirmative misrepresentation of the amount of the debt, so not a violation of state debt collection statute); McMullen v. Synchrony Bank, et al., 2018 WL 443763 (D.D.C. Jan. 11, 2018) (credit issuer's billing statement, which included allegedly unauthorized sum billed by merchant, was not deceptive where statement included instructions for dispute procedure, and bank provided dispute form in response to oral complaint by consumer); Himes v. Client Services, Inc., 990 F. Supp. 2d 59 (D.N.H. 2014) (response to debt validation request not misleading, where attached account statement showed that amount demanded had increased because of interest and late fees); Heflin v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2013 WL 4532666 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 1, 2013) (failure to keep promises made during loan modification negotiations not misrepresentation of character, amount, or extent of debt); Stewart v. Steel Creek Homeowners' Ass'n, 816 S.E.2d 268 (N.C. Ct. App. July 3, 2018) (misstating amount of annual assessment in demand letter did not violate North Carolina statute, which forbids only misstating amount of debt in legal proceeding); Reynolds v. Southwestern Bell Tel., L.P., 2006 WL 1791606 (Tex. App. June 29, 2006) (letter did not misrepresent character, extent, or amount of debt where it stated that "records show" debt, but acknowledged it was disputed and invited consumer to provide further information).

263 Conteh v. Shamrock Cmty. Ass'n, Inc., 648 Fed. Appx. 377 (4th Cir. 2016) (seeking excessive amount in writ of execution would violate Maryland statute, unless it was mathematical or typographical error); Thompkins v. Key Health Med. Solutions, Inc., 2015 WL 1292228 (M.D.N.C. Mar. 23, 2015) (refusing to dismiss claims against lender that paid medical providers their customary charges, then sought to recover twice this amount from patients' personal injury recoveries), adopted, 2015 WL 3902340 (M.D.N.C. June 24, 2015); Glenn v. FNF Servicing, Inc., 2013 WL 4095524 (E.D.N.C. Aug. 13, 2013) (servicer persistently attempted to collect on behalf of bankrupt lender, which had purported to refinance but never paid off original loan); Basich v. Patenaude & Felix, APC, 2013 WL 1755484 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 24, 2013) (levying the wrong bank account, here that of non-debtor with same first name and similar SSN, is a false representation to collect a debt and may also be an unconscionable means); Cuevas v. BAC Home Loan Servicing, L.P., 2012 WL 4339063 (S.D. Tex. Sept. 19, 2012) (servicer demanded specific sum for property taxes; when borrower timely tendered that amount, servicer refused it and foreclosed); Sasscer v. Donnelly, 2010 WL 2195797 (M.D. Pa. May 27, 2010) (arguably false threats and demands for excessive amounts); Bledea v. IndyMac Fed. Bank, 2010 WL 715255 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 25, 2010) (demand for unauthorized sums); Champlaie v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 706 F. Supp. 2d 1029 (E.D. Cal. 2009) (demanding sums not due); Baker v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 2009 WL 1810336 (N.D. Tex. June 24, 2009) (fact question whether certain checks had been received and not credited; if they had, collection notices sent thereafter were false and violated Texas statute); Gigli v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2008 WL 3853295 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 14, 2008) (no evidence that debt existed or was owned by assignee); Barrows v. Petri & Stocking, S.C., 2008 WL 3540405 (W.D. Wis. Aug. 13, 2008) (garnishment summons served on consumer's bank included claim for disbursements exceeding statutorily permitted amount and was per se violation of Wisconsin act); Cross v. Receivables Mgmt. Solutions, 2006 WL 446083 (D. Colo. Feb. 21, 2006) (dunning for and reporting old credit card debt, which debt buyer could not or would not verify, was unfair and unconscionable in violation of Colorado debt collection statute); Edstrom v. All Services & Processing, 2005 WL 645920 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 22, 2005) (issue of fact whether certain fees, although authorized by rules of homeowners association, were actually incurred and reasonable); Semper v. JBC Legal Group, 2005 WL 2172377 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 6, 2005) (purchaser of NSF checks demanded damages to which it was not entitled; Washington bad check statute allowed them only to seller, not assignee); Sandlin v. Shapiro & Fishman, 919 F. Supp. 1564 (M.D. Fla. 1996) (state statute which forbade attempt to collect debt which was not "legitimate" applied to charge imposed for verifying debt when that charge was prepayment penalty not permitted by contract); Pickering v. Coast Ctr. for Orthopedic Arthroscopic Surgery & Treatment, 2009 WL 932629 (Cal. Ct. App. Apr. 8, 2009) (affirming $150,000 damages; healthcare creditor, attempting to collect grossly excessive amount directly from insured patient, made numerous false statements); Tallahassee Title Co. v. Dean, 411 So. 2d 204 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1982) (escrow agent violated state debt collection statute by paying disputed insurance premium to insurer, over home seller's protest, out of proceeds of sale of home); Fireside Bank v. Askins, 460 P.3d 157, 163 (Wash. 2020) (attempting, through writs of garnishment, to collect more than is owed violates state debt collection statute). See also Pannell v. Green Tree Serv., L.L.C., 2014 WL 3361984 (S.D. W. Va. July 8, 2014) (refusing to dismiss claim that creditor violated state debt collection statute by misrepresenting that debt was in arrears; although this type of misrepresentation is not specifically prohibited, it falls within general prohibitions of abusive, fraudulent, and unfair tactics); Eaton v. Citibank, 2010 WL 936555 (M.D. Pa. Mar. 15, 2010) (fact issue whether card agreement offered by creditor, which permitted it to accept check marked "paid in full" and continue collection efforts, was actual agreement between parties). But see Patrick v. Teays Valley Trs., L.L.C., 2012 WL 5993163 (N.D. W. Va. Nov. 30, 2012) (law firm and substitute trustee did not violate W. Va. debt collection law by foreclosing on home when borrower was not in default, as they have no duty to investigate amount or validity of the debt). But cf. Marchese v. J.P. Morgan ChaseBank, 917 F. Supp. 452 (D. Md. 2013) (pursuing foreclosure without having obtained proper signatures and notarization not a violation of prohibition against attempting to collect a debt when there is no right to do so); Hill v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 1645553 (D. Md. Apr. 16, 2013) (truthful but legally insufficient affidavits not enough to support claim where debt buyer reasonably believed debt was valid); CybrCollect v. N.D. Dep't of Fin. Insts., 703 N.W.2d 285 (N.D. 2005) (debiting consumers' accounts for returned check fee, without written authorization, in violation of Automatic Clearinghouse rules, did not violate North Dakota collection agency statute, where notice by signs at point of sale was sufficient to comply with EFTA).

- Dun the consumer for attorney fees,[264] collection fees,[265]

264 Waugh v. Elan Fin. Serv., 2018 WL 2976430 (S.D. W. Va. June 13, 2018) (statement that balance "may include" attorney fees violated West Virginia statute because fees not permitted); Baker v. Citibank, 13 F. Supp. 2d 1037 (S.D. Cal. 1998) (false threats to file suit and false representation that attorney fees would be added to debt stated claim under state debt collection practices statute); In re Saldivar, 2013 WL 2452699 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. June 5, 2013) (attorney fees not authorized by Texas law governing home equity loans); Universal Bank v. Machnic (In re Machnic), 271 B.R. 789 (Bankr. S.D. W. Va. 2002) (seeking collection attorney fees in addition to debt violates W. Va. Consumer Credit Protection Act's prohibition against collecting or attempting to collect debt collector's fee from debtor); Ai v. Frank Huff Agency, Ltd., 607 P.2d 1304 (Haw. 1980) (contract that provided for illegally excessive charge and pyramided attorney fees on attorney fees violated state debt collection statute that prohibited collection agency from recovering illegal charges); I.F.C. Personal Money Managers, Inc. v. Vadney, 508 N.Y.S.2d 845 (N.Y. Super. Ct. 1986) (threats to collect attorney fees not provided by contract or statute was violation); Davis Lake Cmty. Ass'n v. Feldmann, 530 S.E.2d 865 (N.C. Ct. App. 2000) (demand for attorney fees not owed would be violation); Evergreen Collectors v. Holt, 803 P.2d 10 (Wash. Ct. App. 1991) (attempt to collect $200 attorney fees after dropping excessive claim for insurance premium violated state debt collection statute). But cf. Memmott v. OneWest Bank, 2011 WL 1560985 (D. Or. Feb. 9, 2011) (seeking fees not a violation where deed of trust authorized them), adopted, 2011 WL 1559298 (D. Or. Apr. 25, 2011). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 6 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (state restrictions on creditor's recovery of attorney fees).

265 Seeger v. AFNI, Inc., 548 F.3d 1107 (7th Cir. 2008) (attempts by collector that owned debt to collect collection fee violated Wisconsin statute where contract allowed fee only if original creditor hired third-party collector); Commonwealth of Pa. v. Think Fin., 2016 WL 183289 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 14, 2016) (demand for fees authorized by credit agreement but forbidden by state law); Patrick v. PHH Mortg. Corp., 937 F. Supp. 2d 773 (N.D. W. Va. 2013) (after modification agreement was recorded and homeowners made all required payments, mortgage company falsely claimed homeowners were in default, dunned for sums not due, threatened foreclosure, and foreclosed), later decision, 998 F. Supp. 2d 478 (N.D. W. Va. 2014) (genuine issues of fact as to threats and misrepresentations); Elmore v. Northeast Fla. Credit Bur., Inc., 2011 WL 4480419 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 27, 2011) (threat to begin "long and costly asset search" violated Florida statute, where collector admitted knowing that it would be illegal to charge debtor for this search); Acik v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 640 F. Supp. 2d 1019 (N.D. Ill. 2009) (Illinois statute allows collection fees "expressly authorized" by agreement creating debt; provision for "all costs and fees, including attorney fees" did not expressly authorize collector's contingency fee); Adams v. A & S Collection Assoc., Inc., 2007 WL 2206936 (D. Conn. July 30, 2007) (awarding punitive damages against collector who sought to evade restriction on fees added by collector by contractually requiring creditor to add 49% collection fee and 18% interest to accounts sent for collection); Patzka v. Viterbo College, 917 F. Supp. 654 (W.D. Wis. 1996) (collection fee was not permitted by Wisconsin Consumer Act). See also Hansen v. Ticket Track, Inc., 213 F.R.D. 412 (W.D. Wash. 2003) (allowing class action to proceed against collector for pay parking lots that added illegal collection fee to its demands). Cf. Firstcollect, Inc. v. Armstrong, 976 S.W.2d 294 (Tex. App. 1998) (affirming class certification order in suit claiming that collection agency's addition of 32% collection fee violated Texas debt collection statute); Banks v. Paul White Chevrolet, Inc., 629 S.E.2d 792 (W. Va. 2006) (fact question whether motor vehicle seller's agent, who collected late payment plus $300 fee after default but before end of right to cure period, was debt collector or repossessor; if collector, fee violated debt collection statute, if repossessor, fee late fees,[266] or other fees[267] that are not actually owed;

- Seek amounts to which the creditor is not yet entitled—such as court costs for a suit that has not yet been filed;[268]
- Dun or sue a consumer for a debt that has already been paid,[269] that the consumer never incurred,[270] that has been might be permitted by U.C.C.). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 6.6 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (state restrictions on addition of collection fees to debt).

266 Capozio v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2017 WL 5157532 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 7, 2017) (misapplication of payments, resulting in unauthorized late fees, would violate Pennsylvania debt collection and UDAP statutes).

267 Sanders v. LoanCare, L.L.C., 2019 WL 441964 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 1, 2019) (refusing to dismiss claim that servicer violated state debt collection statute by charging convenience fee for making online payment during grace period without contractual authorization); Lindblom v. Santander Consumer, USA, Inc., 2018 WL 500347 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 22, 2018) (denying creditor's motion for summary judgment on claim that speedpay fee for service that allowed payments to be immediately credited violated FDCPA, and therefore also violated Rosenthal Act, where it was charged by service provider but mostly kicked back to lender, and was not authorized by contract or state law); Muhammed v. PNC Bank, 2016 WL 815289 (S.D. W. Va. Feb. 29, 2016) (speedpay fee, for service that allowed payments to be immediately credited, was "incidental to" obligation, and thus subject to West Virginia prohibition against collecting any fee incidental to principal obligation unless expressly authorized by statute or contract), later decision 2016 WL 5843477 (S.D. W. Va. Oct. 4, 2016) (denying class certification because named plaintiff not West Virginia resident); Enis v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 1721961 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 22, 2013) (debtor stated claim for misstatement of amount of debt against creditor that imposed late fees after refusing to credit timely payments); Walters v. Fid. Mortg. of Cal., Inc., 730 F. Supp. 2d 1185 (E.D. Cal. 2010) (mortgage servicer's demands for unlawful fees); Osei v. Countrywide Home Loans, 692 F. Supp. 2d 1240 (E.D. Cal. 2010) (demand for unauthorized fees); Baldain v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing, Inc., 2010 WL 56143 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 5, 2010) (allegations that servicer misstated amount of debt, added unauthorized fees, and threatened to report false information state claim); Jessamey v. Norfolk Fin. Corp., 2006 WL 1211029 (Mass. App. Ct. Apr. 28, 2006) (fact question whether process server, who misrepresented self as constable, was using execution to coerce constable's fees to which he was not entitled).

268 See, e.g., Neptune v. Whetstone Partners, L.L.C., 34 F. Supp. 3d 1247 (S.D. Fla. 2014) (denying motion to dismiss claim that numerous automated "reminder" calls before payments were due, and continuing after requests to stop, amounted to attempt to collect payments before they were due, in violation of state debt collection statute's prohibition against asserting the existence of a right that did not exist); In re Melchor, 2011 WL 1600570 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Apr. 27, 2011) (demanding sum certain for attorney fees, for which it had not sought required approval from Bankruptcy Court); Wiginton v. Pac. Credit Corp., 634 P.2d 111 (Haw. Ct. App. 1981) (collection agency's demand deceptively included probable legal expenses, in violation of statute prohibiting claim for attorney fees and costs until suit was filed); Int'l Bureau of Fraud Control, Ltd. v. Clayton, 544 N.E.2d 416 (Ill. App. Ct. 1989) (collection agency could collect $10 pursuant to statute for each NSF check it collected, but could not collect "costs and expenses" provided by same statute until those were awarded in judgment); Allstate Lien & Recovery Corp. v. Stansbury, 126 A.3d 40 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 2015) (inclusion of lien enforcement costs, for a sale that had not yet occurred, in amount demanded to redeem car violated Maryland's lien statute and debt collection act). See also Eads v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 538 F. Supp. 2d 981 (W.D. Tex. 2008) (attempt to collect unauthorized filing fee may be misrepresentation, and threat to take action that cannot legally be taken).

269 Rudio v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 2018 WL 4772303 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 1, 2018) (debt had been settled and paid); Henry v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, Inc., 2018 WL 3130422 (S.D. W. Va. June 25, 2018) (lender, which had received fire insurance proceeds for destroyed home, sufficient to pay off mortgage, refused to apply them to mortgage and continued to threaten foreclosure and eviction); Hall v. Equifax Info. Services, L.L.C., 204 F. Supp. 3d (E.D. Pa. 2016) (after patient and hospital agreed to settle bill out of patient's personal injury recovery, patient paid agreed-upon sum and was told that balance was zero; hospital then sent debt to collection); Watkins v. Wells-Fargo Bank, 2011 WL 777895 (S.D. W. Va. Feb. 28, 2011) (trying to collect debt that had been voided pursuant to settlement agreement); Fetters v. Paragon Way, Inc., 2010 WL 5174989 (M.D. Pa. Dec. 15, 2010) (dunning former debtor for debt that had been settled violates state debt collection statute); Eichmann v. Mann Bracken, L.L.C., 689 F. Supp. 2d 1094 (W.D. Wis. 2010) (knowingly filing baseless claim for debt known not to be owed may violate state debt collection statute); Scott v. Fla. Health Sciences Ctr., Inc., 2008 WL 4613083 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 16, 2008) (repeated phone calls to collect debt known to have been paid in full by insurer). See also Summers v. Merchants and Med. Credit Corp., 2013 WL 1507529 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 12, 2013) (continuing to badger consumer after she had settled with original creditor); Donnachie v. Frank S. Falzone & Assoc., P.P.L.C., 2010 WL 3191891 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 11, 2010) (knowingly supplying false information to collector, here that settled debt was still owing). But see McCartney v. Citifinancial Auto Credit, Inc., 2010 WL 5834802 (E.D. Tex. Dec. 14, 2010) (seeking to collect debt that had already been paid pursuant to settlement agreement stated claim only for breach of contract, not violation of Texas debt collection statute), adopted, 2011 WL 675386 (E.D. Tex. Feb. 16, 2011).

270 Williams v. Educ. Credit Mgt., Corp., 88 F. Supp. 3d 1338, 1343 (M.D. Fla. 2015) (mistaken identity; attempts to collect from person with same name and dissimilar identifying information; plaintiff stated claim for attempting to collect debt known not to be legitimate); Bromfield v. HSBC Bank, 2014 WL 183895 (D. Or. Jan. 13, 2014) (denying motion to dismiss claim that creditor violated state debt collection statute by debiting account for credit card charges made by thief, after consumer had reported theft); Alonso v. Blackstone Fin. Group, L.L.C., 962 F. Supp. 2d 1188 (E.D. Cal. 2013) (false threats to garnish non-debtor ex-husband's wages and to cause consumer's arrest); Redmond v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 941 F. Supp. 2d 694 (E.D.N.C. 2013) (North Carolina statute protected non-debtor tenants being harassed for landlord's delinquent mortgage); Huizar v. Mandarich Law Group, 2013 WL 4209050 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 14, 2013) (robocalls to cell phones of debtor and non-debtor); Halsten v. Target Nat'l Bank, 2013 WL 3804844 (M.D. Fla. July 19, 2013) (person being dunned for credit card debt of unknown person has claim under Florida debt collection statute); Martinez v. Commercial Recovery Sys., Inc., 2013 WL 2237571 (M.D. Fla. May 21, 2013) (threat to take actions it could not legally take, including real estate lien and garnishment of non-debtor spouse's wages); Brignola v. Home Properties, L.L.C., 2013 WL 1795336 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 26, 2013) (refusing to dismiss claim that collector violated state debt collection statute by misrepresenting that non-debtor son was liable for deceased father's debt); Basich v. Patenaude & Felix, APC, 2013 WL 1755484 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 24, 2013) (levying on bank account of non-debtor with same first name and SSN that differed by one digit from that of judgment debtor); Fini v. Dish Network, L.L.C., 955 F. Supp. 2d 1288 (M.D. Fla. 2013) (repeated autodialed calls seeking to collect debt of unrelated third party who had given plaintiff's cell number as contact when initiating television service); Guillen v. Bank of Am., 2011 WL 4071996 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 31, 2011) (debt sent to aggressive collection and reported to CRAs despite proof of identity theft); Walter v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1666869 (E.D. Pa. May 2, 2011) (non-obligated spouse), order entered by 2011 WL 1694432 (E.D. Pa. May 2, 2011); Stuart v. AR Res., 2011 WL 904167 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 16, 2011) (misrepresenting liability for family member's debt), later decision 2011 WL 904202 (E.D. Pa.

released,[271] or that has been discharged in bankruptcy;[272]

- Dun a consumer for an illegal loan, such as a payday loan made in a jurisdiction that outlaws them;[273]
- Represent that a consumer will owe a deficiency after foreclosure when the jurisdiction bars deficiency judgments;[274]
- Seek late fees or other fees in excess of statutory limits;[275]
- Demand interest beyond that authorized by the agreement or by statute;[276]
- Represent that a mortgage loan delinquency had been cured or the obligation modified, but then foreclosing;[277] or

Mar. 16, 2011) (denying motions to dismiss statutory claims; dismissing common law invasion of privacy claim); Valdez v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.L.P., 2010 WL 4643272 (S.D. Tex. Nov. 16, 2010) (allowing identity theft victim to proceed with claim that persistent attempts to collect, after receiving proof of identity theft, was misrepresentation about debt); Stewart v. Alonzo, 2009 WL 174938 (S.D. Tex. Jan. 28, 2009) (false representations sufficiently alleged: dunning letters for debt consumer never contracted for and did not owe); Caton v. Green Tree Servicing, 2008 WL 222352 (N.D. W. Va. Jan. 25, 2008) (granting summary judgment to debtor's non-debtor mother, who received letters falsely stating she was liable on debt); Johnson v. MBNA Am. Bank, 2006 WL 618077 (M.D.N.C. Mar. 9, 2006) (fact question whether creditor violated state debt collection law by dunning widow for late husband's secret credit card debt and reporting it to credit bureaus, when it knew or should have known widow might not be liable). See also Iruegas v. Diversified Adjustment Serv., Inc., 2010 WL 1171088 (W.D. Tex. Mar. 22, 2010) (threat to report debt, after debtor stated it was not his). But cf. Rivernider v. Brough, 2013 WL 5353748 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 24, 2013) (letter to tenant of condo would not lead unsophisticated consumer to believe that she was obligated to pay owner's delinquent assessments); White v. Ally Fin., Inc., 2013 WL 1857266 (S.D. W. Va. May 2, 2013) (letter addressed to "estate of" deceased borrower would not lead reasonable widow/administrator to believe she was personally liable); Gill v. Kostroff, 82 F. Supp. 2d 1354 (M.D. Fla. 2000) (attempts to collect debt from identity theft victim did not violate state debt collection law where plaintiff did not establish that creditor or its attorney knew debt was false).

271 Owens-Benniefield v. Nationstar Mortgage, L.L.C., 258 F. Supp. 3d 1300 (M.D. Fla. June 15, 2017) (refusing to dismiss claim under state debt collection statute against servicer that had been party to deed-in-lieu-of-foreclosure transaction, yet continued to dun former homeowner, and assigned debt to another servicer). See also Vanderbilt Mortgage & Fin., Inc. v. Flores, 746 F. Supp. 2d 819 (S.D. Tex. 2010) (issue whether lender's broadly worded release of fraudulent mechanics' liens on third parties' land also discharged borrowers; if so, continued collection efforts misrepresented the status of debt, in violation of Texas Debt Collection Act).

272 Leahey-Fernandez v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 159 F. Supp. 3d 1294 (M.D. Fla. 2016); Farrin v. Northstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2016 WL 6407841 (D. N.H. Oct. 16, 2016) (collection attempts against debtor who had discharged debt in bankruptcy, stated intention to surrender property, and consented to foreclosure). But cf. Helman v. Bank of Am., ___ Fed. Appx. ___, 2017 WL 1350728 (11th Cir. Apr. 12, 2017) (Fla. law; concluding that mortgage lender's postbankruptcy monthly billing statements made it so clear that consumer was not personally obligated that even the least sophisticated consumer would not be deceived).

273 See, e.g., In re McClendon, 2012 WL 5387677 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. Nov. 2, 2012) (if construction loan was usurious, attempt to collect would be attempt to collect interest not due; here, fact issue whether lender made statutorily required determination of borrower's ability to pay high rate-spread loan); In re Delbert Services Corp. (Mass. Comm'r of Banks Apr. 4, 2013), available at www.mass.gov (ordering Massachusetts-licensed debt collector to discontinue collection efforts for payday loans that were illegally made to Massachusetts residents).

274 Boles v. Moss Codilis, L.L.P., 2011 WL 2618791 (W.D. Tex. July 1, 2011) (misrepresenting that Texas homeowners could be liable for deficiency after foreclosure of home equity loan); Alborzian v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 185 Cal. Rptr. 3d 84 (Cal. App. 2015) (reversing dismissal of claim that creditor acted deceptively where its letters seeking to collect deficiency after foreclosure sale implied that the claim was legally enforceable, when state law prohibited suit on such a claim). See also O'Neill v. Country Motors, Inc., 2015 WL 8779594 (D. Conn. Dec. 15, 2015) (sale of repossessed car without notice and accounting required by statute may have resulted in demand for more than was owed for deficiency, a misrepresentation of the amount of debt).

275 Acosta v. Credit Bureau of Napa County, 2015 WL 1943244 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 29, 2015) (imposing processing fee for consumer debt, when additional fees were permitted only for commercial debts); Friday v. United Dominion Realty Trust, Inc., 575 S.E.2d 532 (N.C. Ct. App. 2003) (claiming late charges in excess of legal limit violated debt collection and UDAP statutes, but notice of actual past-due rent sent from landlord to tenant did not constitute unfair and deceptive trade practice). See also Mejia v. Marauder Corp., 2007 WL 806486 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 15, 2007) (assignee of NSF check for payday loan demanded fee explicitly forbidden by payday loan statute).

276 Ben-Davies v. Blibaum & Assoc., 421 F. Supp. 3d 94 (D. Md. 2019) (demand for postjudgment interest in excess of legally permissible rate); Lannan v. Levy & White, 186 F. Supp. 3d 77 (D. Mass. 2016) (charging prejudgment interest calculated from date services provided, instead of later date when demand was first made); Moscona v. California Bus. Bur., 2011 WL 5085522 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 25, 2011) (demanding unauthorized interest; payment agreement authorized interest on delinquent debt, but collector demanded interest for period in which debt was not yet delinquent); Quesenberry v. Alliant Law Group, P.C., 2010 WL 1189457 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 5, 2010) (communication seeking to collect interest not authorized by agreement sent to consumer's lawyer), adopted, 2010 WL 1189481 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 24, 2010).

277 Watson v. Citimortgage, Inc., 814 F. Supp. 2d 726 (E.D. Tex. 2011) (lender falsely stated that loan was being modified and foreclosure postponed, while going ahead with foreclosure); Warden v. PHH Mortg. Corp., 2010 WL 3720128 (N.D. W. Va. Sept. 16, 2010) (consumers stated claim where lender stated that payment of specified sum would bring loan current, accepted that sum, then foreclosed); Gomez v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2010 WL 2900351 (N.D. Tex. July 21, 2010) (borrower stated claim against mortgagee bank that told borrower she need not make payments during negotiations, that modification was pre-approved, and that estranged husband need not sign, then denied modification and foreclosed because husband had not signed); McCauley v. Ocwen Fed. Bank, 2010 WL 760438 (D. Minn. Feb. 26, 2010) (denying motion to dismiss claim under state debt collection law against servicer that failed to abide by forbearance agreement, failed to credit payments, and foreclosed on home); Burnette v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2010 WL 1026968 (E.D. Tex. Feb. 16, 2010) (lender promised to postpone foreclosure if borrower, who sought loan modification, provided certain documents; borrower complied, but lender foreclosed), adopted, 2010 WL 1026969 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 17, 2010); Waterfield Mortg. Co. v. Rodriguez, 929 S.W.2d 641 (Tex. App. 1996) (upholding award of $7402.61 actual and $15,000 exemplary damages and $7500 attorney fees against mortgage lender that violated state debt collection statute that prohibited misrepresenting the character, extent, or amount of a debt by misleading the consumers to believe that they had cured their delinquency, thereby stopping a foreclosure on their home, where the lender had routinely accepted late payments for years and then rushed through a foreclosure and eviction). See also Stoler v. PennyMac Loan Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5106417 (S.D. W. Va. Oct.11, 2019) (proceeding to foreclosure during time when servicer said it would consider modification request may be unfair); Hanson v. Amerihome Mortg. Co., 2017 WL 6626328 (S.D. W. Va. Dec. 28, 2017) (refusing to dismiss claim that servicer violated state debt collection statute by scheduling foreclosure sale despite representing to homeowners that their loss mitigation process was still ongoing, and failing to advise them of their right to appeal a of assistance). But see Chavez v. Wells Fargo Bank, 578 Fed.

- Demand that a borrower pay premiums for insurance that was force-placed without justification.[278]

A false statement may violate the state debt collection statute even if it is communicated to someone other than the debtor—for example, when a creditor communicates false information to a debt collector.[279]

Some states require some showing of knowledge or reason to know that the amount is not owed.[280] For example, Florida courts hold that seeking amounts that are not owed or asserting a right that does not exist is a violation only if the collector has actual knowledge to the contrary.[281] Maryland takes the same approach, but Maryland decisions are clearer in recognizing that reckless disregard is sufficient.[282] This knowledge

Appx. 345 (5th Cir. 2014) (statements about loan modification do not concern "the character, extent or amount of a consumer debt"; bank's assurances "not to worry" about qualifying for the modification were not affirmative misrepresentations sufficient to support claim for false or misleading statements).

278 Treece v. J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, 2014 WL 7661506 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 31, 2014) (force-placing insurance that was not required by the mortgage); Martorella v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 931 F. Supp. 2d 1218 (S.D. Fla. 2013) (attempts to collect for force-placed insurance continued after lender was shown proof of insurance); Henderson v. Wells Fargo Bank, 974 F. Supp. 2d 993 (N.D. Tex. 2013) (charges for force-placed insurance following wrongful rejection of borrower's chosen insurance). See also Tielke v. Bank of Am., 581 Fed. Appx. 408 (5th Cir. 2014) (Tex. law; fact issue whether insurance was force-placed at time when borrowers had acceptable insurance)

279 Anderson v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 2016 WL 1594424 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 21, 2016) (statute forbidding false statement in effort to collect a debt does not require that statement be made to debtor; debtor stated a claim where Verizon, after investigating claim of identity theft, told her she did not owe the debt, then sent debt to collection; false statement to collector would support claim). See also Bacelli v. MFP, Inc., 729 F. Supp. 2d 1328 (M.D. Fla. 2010) (allowing claim to go forward against creditor who sent debt to collector without telling collector it had received notice from consumer's bankruptcy counsel); Cavanaugh v. HBSC Card Services, Inc., 2010 WL 3746260 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 22, 2010) (creditor may be liable where its collector contacted represented consumer, but collector itself is not liable if creditor failed to notify it that consumer was represented). See also Vine v. PLS Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 456031 (W.D. Tex. Jan. 16, 2018) (consumer can maintain claim under state debt collection statute against collector for threatening criminal prosecution on post-dated payday loan checks, even though collector did not threaten her directly, but referred the checks to district attorney's office with knowledge that it would threaten arrest). But see Fireside Bank v. Askins, 430 P.3d 1145 (Wash. Ct. App. 2018) (communications between attorneys, here arguably incorrect accounting, are not communications attempting to collect debt covered by Washington Collection Agency Act), rev'd, 460 P.3d 157 (Wash. 2020) (reversing Court of Appeals ruling that debtors had not used proper procedural vehicle to raise their claims, on ground that this issue had not been preserved for appeal; creditor's use of garnishments to collect more than was due violated state debt collection statute; no comment on whether communications between attorneys might also have been violation).

280 See, e.g., Baylor v. Mitchell, Rubenstein & Assoc., 857 F.3d 939 (D.D.C. 2017) (actual knowledge not shown; confusion over amount of interest was at worst negligent, and sending letter to attorney to client's address was result of computer error); Canham v. Fair Collections and Outsourcing, Inc., 2014 WL 3952902 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 13, 2014) (collector who verified amount with creditor after debtor's dispute not liable for attempting to collect unauthorized amounts; no further duty to investigate); Scheunemann v. J.C. Christenson & Assoc., Inc., 802 F. Supp. 2d 981(E.D. Wis. 2011) (for claim of false threat of legal action, must show actual knowledge or reason to know that right asserted did not exist; not sufficiently alleged here).

281 See, e.g., Medley v. Dish Network, L.L.C., 958 F.3d 1063 (11th Cir. 2020) (Fla. law; fact issue whether collector actually knew that debt had been discharged in bankruptcy and that debtor was represented by counsel); Gause v. Med. Bus. Consultants, Inc., 424 F. Supp. 3d 1175 (M.D. Fla. 2019) (collector's statement that it would assume debt was valid if debtor did not telephone immediately was assertion of right it knew did not exist, because FDCPA allows debtor 30 days to dispute debt); Sellers v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1683613 (M.D. Fla. May 3, 2017) (borrower sufficiently alleged actual knowledge of bankruptcy discharge); Prescott v. Seterus, Inc., 2016 WL 4257517 (S.D. Fla. July 7 2016) (charging estimated attorney fees that consumer had not agreed to pay does not violate Florida debt collection statute unless collector knew the fees were not owed; not shown here where collector misconstrued clause's silence about estimated fees); Goodin v. Bank of Am., 114 F. Supp. 3d 1197 (M.D. Fla. 2015) (actual knowledge shown where bank proceeded with foreclosure, after being told by debtors, their attorney, and the bankruptcy trustee that the funds needed to bring mortgage current were being held in the court registry, and would be paid out as soon as bank filed transfer-of-servicing form); Martorella v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 931 F. Supp. 2d 1218 (S.D. Fla. 2013) (actual knowledge sufficiently alleged where attempts to collect for force-placed insurance continued after lender was shown proof of insurance); Fini v. Dish Network, L.L.C., 955 F. Supp. 2d 1288 (M.D. Fla. 2013) (fact issue as to actual knowledge; calls to non-debtor continued for three months after creditor was notified of wrong number); Bacelli v. MFP, Inc., 729 F. Supp. 2d 1328 (M.D. Fla. 2010) (allowing claim under Florida statute to proceed against creditor that sent claim to collector after receiving notice of bankruptcy, but dismissing claim against collector); Reese v. JPMorgan Chase & Co., 686 F. Supp. 2d 1291 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (consumer must plead facts showing that creditor knew that amount claimed was not owed); Malowney v. Bush/Ross, 2009 WL 3806161 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 12, 2009) (where Florida law would permit foreclosure for small delinquency on condo assessments, false threat not shown; must show legal impossibility, not just lack of intent to take threatened action); Gannon v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 2075244 (S.D. Fla. July 13, 2009) (collector could reasonably believe that debt was owed; did not know of creditor's alleged failure to credit large payment); Cole v. LoBello Painting, Inc., 2007 WL 2330860 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 14, 2007) (painter's filing of claim for hotly disputed debt not violation of prohibition against assertion of right with actual knowledge it does not exist); Cooper v. Litton Loan Servicing (In re Cooper), 253 B.R. 286 (Bankr. N.D. Fla. 2000) (lawyer who relies in good faith on information given by creditor not liable); Schauer v. Morse Operations, Inc., 5 So. 3d 2 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2009) (must show that lender had actual knowledge that sums not owed; claim fails where allegedly forged paperwork lender received from car dealer appeared to be in order); Williams v. Streeps Music Co., 333 So. 2d 65 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1976) (attempts to collect paid-off debt violate state debt collection statute only if defendant knew, rather than should have known, that debt was not owed).

282 Olson v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 578 Fed. Appx. 248 (4th Cir. 2014) (Md. law; must show knowledge or reckless disregard, but neither shown here; fact that debt buyer lost at trial not sufficient to show it knew or should have known action was meritless when filed); Brooks v. Cama Self Directed IRA, L.L.C., 2019 WL 418412, at *11 (D. Md. Jan. 31, 2019) (finding allegations of knowledge or reckless disregard sufficient where defendant charged more than note's interest rate limit and past demands had sought lower rate); Peckey v. Bank of Am., 2015 WL 1622967 (D. Md. Apr. 10, 2015) (genuine issue as to reckless disregard, where collector continued collection efforts without investigating paperwork that consumer had faxed that showed that debt had been settled); Allen v. Bank of Am., 933 F. Supp. 2d 716 (D. Md. 2013) (homeowners stated claim against servicer for attempting to collect sums requirement applies only to mistakes of fact; it does not protect against errors of law.[283]

The Oregon Supreme Court has held that its statute's prohibition against attempting or threatening to enforce a right that does not exist refers only to the means of enforcing a debt, and not to the existence of the debt itself.[284] Thus, filing suit to collect a claimed debt that does not exist does not violate that prohibition. However, the court noted that other sections of the debt collection act prohibit misrepresenting that a debt may be increased by fees and attempting to collect unauthorized interest or charges.[285] In addition, it noted that the state UDAP statute applies to a suit that seeks to enforce a debt that does not exist.

16.2.4.4.3 Deception regarding collection remedies and in collection suits

A creditor or collector violates a state debt collection statute by threatening to take actions that it does not intend to take or that are not authorized by law.[286] For example, it is deceptive to:

known not to be owed; fact issue whether servicer knew or recklessly disregarded evidence that payments had been misapplied); Bradshaw v. Hilco Receivables, L.L.C., 765 F. Supp. 2d 719 (D. Md. 2011) (collection attempts by unlicensed collector were assertion of right known not to exist; reckless disregard is sufficient to satisfy knowledge requirement); Stovall v. SunTrust Mortgage, Inc., 2011 WL 2011 WL 4402680 (D. Md. Sept. 20, 2011) (must show actual knowledge or reckless disregard); Mateti v. Activa Fin., L.L.C., 2009 WL 2507423 (D. Md. Aug. 14, 2009) (Maryland statute does not impose strict liability; must show actual knowledge or reckless disregard that interest rate claimed by debt seller was incorrect); Kouabo v. Chevy Chase Bank, 336 F. Supp. 2d 471, 475 (D. Md. 2004) (filing suit against debtor who was current on payments violates state debt collection statute if collector knew or recklessly disregarded true facts); Spencer v. Hendersen-Webb, Inc., 81 F. Supp. 2d 582 (D. Md. 1999) (reckless disregard sufficient). See also Conteh v. Shamrock Cmty. Ass'n, Inc., 648 Fed. Appx. 377 (4th Cir. 2016) (Md. law; mathematical or typographical error not sufficient; fact issue here whether excessive demand resulted from error, or from addition of unauthorized fee); Hawkins v. Regional Mgmt., Inc., 2018 WL 480766 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. Jan. 19, 2018) (dismissing claim because consumer failed to allege actual or constructive knowledge that charges were unauthorized). Cf. Powell v. Palisades XVI, L.L.C., 782 F.3d 119 (4th Cir. 2015) (reckless disregard not shown where debt buyer could have reasonably believed it was authorized to collect); Keysar-Bomar v. Alba Law Group, P.A., 2016 WL 2866797 (D. Md. May 17, 2016) (actual knowledge not shown even though lender was violating federal banking law by seeking to enforce due on sale clause against widow who inherited the property, where firm relied on lender's statement that loan was in default); Peete-Bey v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 131 F. Supp. 3d 422 (D. Md. 2015) (actual knowledge or reckless disregard not shown; defunct trade school had falsified attendance records to conceal dropout rate, but student loan debtor failed to show that her records had been falsified and that collector knew or disregarded this); Alston v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2013 WL 4501325 (D. Md. Aug. 21, 2013) (knowledge not shown; debt buyer acknowledged that debt was not valid, but no evidence it communicated this to defendant collector).

283 Long v. Pendrick Capital Partners II, L.L.C., 374 F. Supp. 3d 515, 538 (D. Md. 2019); Cooke v. Carrington Mortg. Services, 2019 WL 3241128 (D. Md. July 18, 2019); Brooks v. Cama Self Directed IRA, L.L.C., 2019 WL 418412, at *11 (D. Md. Jan. 31, 2019); Ben-Davies v. Blibaum & Assoc., 421 F. Supp. 3d 94 (D. Md. 2019) (demand for unauthorized interest was an error of law).

284 Porter v. Hill, 838 P.2d 45 (Or. 1992) (filing suit on non-existent debt not violation of debt collection statute's prohibition against attempting to enforce "right or remedy" that does not exist, as those terms refer to methods of collection, not to existence of debt). See also Lyon v. Chase Bank, 656 F.3d 877, 883–884 (9th Cir. 2011) (Or. law) (Oregon debt collection statute does not prohibit attempts to collect non-existent debt, but does prohibit attempting to collect a debt and reporting it to credit reporting agencies after failing to comply with Fair Credit Billing Act obligation to respond to billing dispute); Arnett v. Bank of Am., 874 F. Supp. 2d 1021 (D. Or. 2012) (attempting to collect debt that does not exist is not a violation); Memmott v. OneWest Bank, 2011 WL 1560985 (D. Or. Feb. 9, 2011) (debt collector may file suit on alleged debt; not violation even if debt does not exist), adopted, 2011 WL 1559298 (D. Or. Apr. 25, 2011); Pro Car Care, Inc. v. Johnson, 118 P.3d 815 (Or. Ct. App. 2005) (demand letter threatening civil action did not violate statute, even if sum demanded was excessive; civil action is proper method of determining existence and amount of debt); Hedrick v. Spear, 907 P.2d 1123 (Or. Ct. App. 1995) (filing collection suit that included improper interest and other charges did not violate Oregon debt collection statute).

285 Porter v. Hill, 838 P.2d 45 (Or. 1992). See also Thomas v. U.S. Bank, 2007 WL 764312 (D. Or. Mar. 8, 2007) (demand for unauthorized fee violated Oregon debt collection statute).

286 Patrick v. PHH Mortg. Corp., 937 F. Supp. 2d 773 (N.D. W. Va. 2013) (after loan modification was recorded and homeowners made all required payments, lender falsely alleged default, threatened foreclosure, and foreclosed), defendant's motion for summary judgment denied, 998 F. Supp. 2d 478 (N.D. W. Va. 2014) (fact question whether lender had right to foreclose where it had told homeowners that their loan modification agreement would be effective on a certain date); Broughton v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis, L.P.A., 2011 WL 1211461 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 31, 2011) (threat to impose lien on Florida consumer's home violated FCCPA, because Florida's broad homestead exemption made lien "a legal impossibility"); Cox v. Hilco Receivables, L.L.C., 726 F. Supp. 2d 659 (N.D. Tex. 2010) (denying motion to dismiss claim that debt buyer violated state debt collection statute by misrepresenting that debt was owed to it when former version of state retail installment sales law required any holder of debt to be licensed); Sasscer v. Donnelly, 2010 WL 2195797 (M.D. Pa. May 27, 2010) (arguably false threats); Renteria v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2009 WL 2754988 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 27, 2009) (threats of garnishment and real estate seizure that may not be legally possible); Robinson v. Managed Accounts Receivable, Corp., 654 F. Supp. 2d 1051 (C.D. Cal. 2009) (workplace calls with false threats); Mulinix v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2008 WL 2001747 (S.D. Cal. May 8, 2008) (fact issue whether debt buyer who dismissed suit on eve of trial and never presented evidence that it owned debt was threatening to take action that legally could not be taken or harassing debtor); Eads v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 538 F. Supp. 2d 981 (W.D. Tex. 2008) (attempt to collect unauthorized fee may be misrepresentation and threat to take action that cannot legally be taken); Valero v. Bryant, LaFayette & Assoc., L.L.P., 2011 WL 1438436 (E.D. Cal. Apr. 14, 2011) (false statement that collector had file of personal information on debtor which it would sell at public auction if debtor did not pay within twenty-four hours); Adams v. CIR. Law Offices L.L.P., 2007 WL 2481550 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 29, 2007) (false threat of suit); Brincks v. Taylor, 2002 WL 63024 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 8, 2002) (phone call misstating creditor's ability to obtain wage garnishment and lien on home may be violation of state debt collection statute); In re Garza, 605 B.R. 817 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2019) (threat to sell car, which had been repossessed in willful violation of automatic stay, was threat to do act specifically prohibited by law); CA Partners v. Spears, 274 S.W.3d 51 (Tex. App. 2008) (holder of deed of trust knowingly misrepresented that it had lien on personal as well as real property); Kirk v. Credit Acceptance Corp., 829 N.W.2d 522 (Wis. Ct. App. 2013) (seeking a deficiency, even though claim was barred because repossession breached contract). See also Lensch v. Armada Corp., 795 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (W.D. Wash. 2011) (provision of Washington statute allowing collector to warn of criminal prosecution in NSF check notices was preempted by FDCPA ban of false threats where criminal prosecution was time-barred); In re Navy Fed. Credit Union, Administrative Proceeding, File No. 2016-CFPB-0024, Consent

- Misrepresent the imminence of suit[287] or other collection remedies;[288]
- Misrepresent that the collector will invoke legal remedies that it does not intend to invoke, for example because the debt is too small or because the debt is not in default;[289]
- Proceed with a foreclosure or other creditor's remedy without having sent notices or taken other preliminary steps required by law;[290]

Order (CFPB Oct. 11, 2016), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov (misrepresenting consequences of default and falsely threatening to garnish wages and contact military debtors' commanding officers are deceptive practices); First N. Am. Nat'l Bank v. Superior Court, 2005 WL 67123 (Cal. Ct. App. Jan. 13, 2005) (threat that consumers would lose all defenses if creditor assigned debt). But cf. Hoffman v. Transworld Systems, Inc., 2018 WL 5734641 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 2, 2018) (provision of collection agency act forbidding threat to take unauthorized action is not violated by actually taking such action), aff'd in relevant part, 806 Fed. Appx. 549 (9th Cir. 2020); Faiella v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 589096 (D.N.H. Feb. 14, 2017) (not sufficient to allege actions "that no reasonable servicer or holder would take;" must specify unlawful actions or actions defendant in regular course of business does not take); Jelencovich v. Dodge Enters., Inc., 2009 WL 4899405 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 14, 2009) (postjudgment demand that described creditor remedies, but did not mention exemptions, not deceptive where clerk of court was required to attach claim of exemption forms to writs of garnishment); Brusewitz v. Law Offices of Gerald Moore & Assoc., 2006 WL 3337361 (W.D. Wis. Nov. 15, 2006) (no misrepresentation shown where attorney frequently followed through on taking cases to arbitration, even though he did not do so in this case); Lozano v. Am. Express Travel Related Services, Inc., 2002 WL 31968994 (D. Or. Dec. 6, 2002) (threat to review account is not prohibited representation that assignment of debt will cause debtor to lose defenses or be subject to harsh collection tactics). See generally §§ 7.2.1, 7.2.4, 7.2.5, 7.2.10, 7.3.5, supra.

287 Summers v. Merchants and Med. Credit Corp., 2013 WL 1507529 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 12, 2013) (denying motion to dismiss claim that collector violated state debt collection statute by threatening referral to attorney within 24 hours and telling debtor that settlement with creditor was not valid); Gifford v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2011 WL 3476803 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 8, 2011) (reasonable fact-finder could conclude that letter was false threat of imminent litigation); Wright v. Asset Acceptance Corp., 2000 WL 33216031 (S.D. Ohio Dec. 30, 1999) (denying collector's motion for summary judgment; threat to sue debtor could be misrepresentation of imminence of suit if collector did not own debt). See also McMullen v. JPMorgan ChaseBank, 2018 WL 5880767 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 29, 2018) (unsophisticated consumer could have interpreted letter as threat of litigation: after borrowers reported that identity thief had withdrawn funds from their home equity line, lender sent loan modification package which stated that if they provided all required materials lender would not initiate foreclosure); Martin v. Trott Law, P.C., 198 F. Supp. 3d 794 (E.D. Mich. 2016) (fact issue whether letter's language concerning reinstatement would lead unsophisticated consumer to believe sheriff's sale had been scheduled, when foreclosure had not yet taken place); Bloodworth v. United Credit Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 1453520 (E.D. Wis. Apr. 12, 2016) (issue whether unsophisticated consumer would read "consider other methods of enforcing collection" as a threat of litigation where letter also demanded payment within five days and stated that no further delay would be tolerated). But cf. Winans v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 2018 WL 3942073 (M.D.N.C. Aug.16, 2018) (false threat not sufficiently alleged: advice to call your attorney if you do not intend to pay in full, unchecked boxes for employment verified and assets located, statement that "we seldom resort to litigation . . . if a claim is timely paid"); Bliese v. Credit Bureau of Ukiah, Inc., 2013 WL 1694952 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 18, 2013) (threats of litigation and garnishment not false where collector had sought and received authorization to sue, and garnishment would result from successful action; lapse of time not probative of falsity where parties were attempting to negotiate a settlement); Lefkowitz v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 361 N.Y.S. 930 (N.Y. App. Div. 1974) (letter that merely stated that collector would recommend referral to attorney is not false representation that legal action is imminent), aff'd, 343 N.E.2d 771 (N.Y. 1974) (affirming appellate division decision, but encouraging attorney general to file new more carefully developed enforcement proceeding).

288 Askew v. HRFC, L.L.C., 810 F.3d 263 (4th Cir. 2016) (Md. law; collector falsely told debtor that it had filed a replevin warrant and made a report to the Registry of Motor Vehicles); Koepplinger v. Seterus, Inc., 2018 WL 4055268 (M.D.N.C. Aug. 28, 2018) (refusing to dismiss claim that servicer violated debt collection statute by falsely stating that it would accelerate if full payment not received by specified date), adopted, 2018 WL 4401738 (M.D.N.C. Sept. 14, 2018); Cezair v. J.P. Morgan, Chase Bank, 2014 WL 4295048 (D. Md. Aug. 29, 2014) (refusing to dismiss claim that foreclosure trustee violated state debt collection statute by sending notice stating that foreclosure sale could occur 14 days earlier than allowed by law).

289 McCaig v. Wells Fargo Bank, 788 F.3d 463 (5th Cir. 2015) (Tex. law; threat to foreclose when consumers were current on payments required by forbearance agreement is actionable under state debt collection statute); Suarez v. Camden Prop. Trust, 2019 WL 34233427 (E.D. N.C. July 29, 2019) (collection letter stated that $65 debt would be sent to collection if not paid within 30 days; creditor did not refer balances if less than $100 or less than 60 days old).

290 Dionne v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 2016 WL 3264344 (D.N.H. June 14, 2016) (violating RESPA by conducting foreclosure sale prior to acting on consumers' completed loss mitigation application); Johnson v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2014 WL 4852027 (E.D. Wis. Sept. 29, 2014) (consumers stated claim for harassment if debt buyer initiated foreclosure without giving required notices of assignment and right to cure); Dina v. Cuda & Assoc., 950 F. Supp. 2d 396 (D. Conn. 2013) (use of bank execution, which was invalid because of failure to follow Connecticut procedure, violated both FDCPA and Connecticut Creditors' Collection Practices Act); Davis v. Hunt, Leibert, Jacobson, P.C., 2014 WL 5798585 (D. Conn. Nov. 7, 2014) (refusing to dismiss claim that collection firm violated state debt collection statute by demanding that family vacate home, without advising them that it had not obtained the court order necessary to give it the right to possession); Brush v. Wells Fargo Bank, 911 F. Supp. 2d 445 (S.D. Tex. Nov. 29, 2012) (serious noncompliance with foreclosure procedure sufficient to support a claim; here, total failure to send required notices); Biggers v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 767 F. Supp. 2d 725 (N.D. Tex. 2011) (denying motion to dismiss claim that servicer violated state debt collection statute by threatening foreclosure before it had been assigned the deed of trust or had sent proper notice of default); Rey v. Acosta, 860 S.W.2d 654 (Tex. App. 1993) (wrongful acceleration of real estate note without statutorily required notice and grace period violates state debt collection act); Dixon v. Brooks, 604 S.W.2d 330 (Tex. App. 1980) (deed seller's threat to terminate contract without providing statutorily required notice violates prohibition against threats to take action prohibited by law). But see Merrill v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 745 Fed. Appx. 844 (11th Cir. 2018) (provision of statutorily-required 30-day notice that debt has been assigned is not condition precedent to collection, so collector that pursued collection before 30-day period expired did not violate state debt collection statute's prohibition against threatening to enforce debt known not to be legitimate); Crowley v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 2015 WL 6872896 (D. Md. Nov. 9, 2015) (no claim for errors of process or procedure in collection of valid defaulted debt); Crowley v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 2015 WL 6872896 (D. Md. Nov. 9, 2015) (lender's foreclosure activity was not attempt to collect a debt without the right to do so, even though it had violated state pre-foreclosure notice requirements); Beal v. Wyndham Vacation Resorts, Inc., 956 F. Supp. 2d 962 (W.D. Wis. 2013) (proper remedy for suing on timeshare contract without providing proper notices and attaching copy of contract is dismissal of the lawsuit, not additional Wisconsin

- Represent falsely that collection procedures such as a foreclosure sale have been or will be cancelled or postponed,[291] or that the creditor or collector will take or has taken other steps that will help the debtor;[292]
- File a false certification of service of process;[293]
- Make false statements in pleadings;[294] or Consumer Act remedy for attempting to enforce a right that did not exist); Security Fin. v. Kirsch, 926 N.W.2d 167 (Wis. 2019) (failure to provide statutorily-required notice of right to cure entitles debtor to dismissal of suit but does not extinguish creditor's right to enforce the debt, so collection attempts do not violate prohibition against attempting to enforce a right that does not exist).

291 See, e.g., Miller v. BAC Home Loans, 726 F.3d 717, 723–724 (5th Cir. 2013) (Tex. law; misrepresentation that servicer would consider homeowners' loan modification application before foreclosing); Moorer v. Always Towing & Recovery, Inc., 2018 WL 4233005 (E.D. Wis. Sept. 5, 2018) (consumer was told that specified payment would bring loan current and stop repossession; she timely made each payment demanded but collector repossessed; consumer stated claims for debt collection act violations and conversion); Davis v. Hunt Leibert Jacobson, P.C., 2014 WL 5798585 (D. Conn. Nov. 7, 2014) (dismissing foreclosure pursuant to agreement, then reopening it without proper notice and ordering family to move out); McFarland v. Wells Fargo Bank, 19 F. Supp. 3d 663 (S.D. W. Va. 2014) (bank informed borrower he had been approved for loan modification and signed agreement, but then refused to honor it); Porterfield v. JP Morgan Chase, 2014 WL 3587783, at *23 (W.D. Tex. July 21, 2014) (foreclosing after agreeing not to may violate state debt collection statute); Ward v. G. Reynolds Sims and Assoc., 2013 WL 364012 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 30, 2013) (attorney's false statement that he had released garnishment, which caused debtor to not contest it, violates Michigan Collection Practices Act); May v. Wells Fargo Home Mortgage, 2013 WL 2984795, at *4 (N.D. Tex. June 17, 2013) (false affirmative statement as to whether a foreclosure is scheduled is actionable misrepresentation); Petty v. Countrywide Home Loans, 2013 WL 1837932, at *13 (S.D. W. Va. May 1, 2013) (borrowers stated claim against creditor and servicer who misrepresented that that borrowers qualified for loan modification, told them to stop making payments, and misrepresented that lender would not foreclose). See also Stoler v. PennyMac Loan Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5106417 (S.D. W. Va. Oct. 11, 2019) (proceeding to foreclosure during time when servicer said it would consider modification request may be unfair); Hall v. Equifax Info. Services, L.L.C., 204 F. Supp. 3d (E.D. Pa. 2016) (after patient and hospital agreed to settle bill out of patient's personal injury and patient paid the agreed-upon sum and was told that balance was zero, hospital sent debt to collection); Overholt v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2011 WL 4862525 (E.D. Tex. Sept. 2, 2011) (consumers stated claims under state debt collection statute against lender that, in violation of loan modification contract, refused to accept payments, and carried on with foreclosure and eviction after assuring consumer that foreclosure was error and would be rescinded), adopted, 2011 WL 4862706 (E.D. Tex. Oct. 13, 2011). But see Kruse v. Bank of New York Mellon, 936 F. Supp. 2d 790 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 1, 2013) (claim based on false oral statement that foreclosure has been postponed is barred by statute of frauds). But cf. Chavez v. Wells Fargo Bank, 578 Fed. Appx. 345 (5th Cir. 2014) (Texas law) (bank's assurances "not to worry" about qualifying for loan modification were not "affirmative misrepresentations" sufficient to support claim for false or misleading statements); Verdin v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 540 Fed. Appx. 253 (5th Cir. 2013) (Tex. law; creditor's statement that homeowner should not "worry about the foreclosure" is not a statement that it will forgo foreclosure, so not a violation of state debt collection statute); Miller v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 726 F.3d 717 (5th Cir. 2013) (Texas law) (misrepresentation that foreclosure would be delayed while servicer considered homeowners' loan modification application was not misrepresentation of character or amount of debt); Rabe v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2013 WL 5458068 (E.D. Tex. Sept. 30, 2013) (false statements that foreclosure would be postponed not actionable misrepresentations about the character, extent or amount of the debt). See generally § 16.2.4.4.2, supra (deception regarding existence or amount of a debt).

292 Vine v. PLS Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 456031 (W.D. Tex. Jan. 16, 2018) (lender sent bounced checks to county diversion program that threatened arrest, even though payday borrowers had been told that post-dated checks would not be used to threaten or pursue criminal charges); Corvello v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 3995909 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 29, 2016) (Rosenthal Act violation shown if lender's communications would mislead unsophisticated consumer into believing she would receive a loan modification if she completed trial payments, or be notified if she would not, when lender did not intend, or did not have the administrative ability, to do this); Weiner v. Ocwen Fin. Corp., 2015 WL 4599427 (E.D. Cal. July 29, 2015) (attorney, who had no authority to settle, negotiated a payment plan; statement that collection activity would cease if timely payments were made was deceptive); Ranson v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 1077093 (S.D. W. Va. Mar. 14 2013) (lender told borrower to stop making payments while loan modification was underway, then, months later, denied modification on grounds known to lender from the beginning); Reyelts v. Cross, 968 F. Supp. 2d 835 (N.D. Tex. 2013) (homeowners stated claim for false representations to collect a debt; roofing contractor promised to handle all the paperwork for homeowners' insurance claim, failed to do so, then dunned and sued homeowners after insurer denied claim), aff'd, 566 Fed. Appx. 316 (5th Cir. 2014). See also Moss v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 2016 WL 4077719 (D. Md. Aug. 1, 2016) (consumer paid substantial sum to reinstate mortgage, believing she would then owe only the agreed-upon monthly payments; lender then demanded corporate advances and attorney fees; if reinstatement agreement waived these prior expenses, demand violated the Maryland statute); McNeely v. Wells Fargo Bank, 115 F. Supp. 3d 779 (S.D. W. Va. 2015) (letter that misstated terms of modification agreement raised fact question as to deceptive or misleading conduct).

293 See, e.g. Picard v. ABC Legal Services, Inc., 2015 WL 3465832 (N.D. Cal. June 1, 2015) (alleged sewer service); Ansari v. Elec. Document Processing, Inc., 2013 WL 4547621 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 29, 2013); Holmes v. Elec. Document Processing, Inc., 966 F. Supp. 2d 925 (N.D. Cal. 2013) (false service of process violates Rosenthal Act; claim not barred by litigation privilege); Johnson v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2012 WL 4483916 (E.D.N.C. Sept. 27, 2012) (alleged sewer service); Engelen v. Erin Capital Mgmt., 2011 WL 3844587 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 30, 2011) (claim that default judgment and garnishment were obtained by false affidavit of service alleges extrinsic fraud on the state court, not error by the state court itself, so claims under state debt collection statute not barred by Rooker-Feldman rule); Scott v. Kelkris Assoc., Inc., 2010 WL 4393274 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 29, 2010) (allowing plaintiff to proceed with claim under state debt collection statute that default judgment and garnishment were obtained by sewer service; fact issues whether creditor knew that service was made at address where consumer did not reside).

294 See, e.g., Eager v. Credit Bureau Collection Services, Inc., 2013 WL 5719224 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 18, 2013) (false statement that certain claims had been assigned to its client); Berg v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore, L.L.C., 2009 WL 901011 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2009) (inaccuracies and inconsistencies in statements of amounts due in complaint and affidavit would confuse unsophisticated consumer and make it more difficult to challenge amounts); Harrington v. CACV of Colorado, L.L.C., 508 F. Supp. 2d 128 (D. Mass. 2007) (filing action in wrong venue, and knowingly false statements to obtain default judgment sufficient to state UDAP claim for violation of Massachusetts debt collection regulations); In re Eastman, 419 B.R. 711 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 2009) (filing suit on discharged debt and carrying on after learning that debt was discharged; false statements in course of lawsuit violated Texas debt collection statute). See also Montgomery v. Midland Credit Mgmt.,

- Sue or threaten suit on a time-barred debt,[295] or on a debt that the collector knows to be legally invalid for other reasons.[296]

Consumers stated a claim under Oregon's unlawful debt collection practices act against a utility company that terminated or threatened to terminate service to residential customers, when it knew or should have known they had legislative protection from such termination.[297]

16.2.4.4.4 Deception regarding the identity of the collector or the owner of the debt

It is deceptive and a violation of a state debt collection statute to:

- Misrepresent or conceal the identity of the creditor or collector;[298]

Inc., 2014 WL 3563198 (E.D. Pa. June 19, 2014) (debt buyer's employee filed affidavit, without reviewing documents that would have alerted her to identity theft); Dina v. Cuda & Assoc., 950 F. Supp. 2d 396 (D. Conn. 2013) (service of expired bank account execution on bank was deceptive debt collection tactic even though bank rather than consumer was misled). But cf. Lembach v. Bierman, 528 Fed. Appx. 297 (4th Cir. 2013) (Md. law; robosigned signature on foreclosure affidavit is not an attempt to enforce a right with knowledge that the right does not exist, where underlying debt is valid). See generally § 16.1.3, supra (whether litigation activities are privileged).

295 See Shadow v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 2018 WL 4357980 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 13, 2018) (refusing to dismiss claim that collection letter seeking payment of time-barred debt was deceptive, despite small print stating that creditor would not sue on it, and because it did not warn that time-barred debt would be revived by a written acknowledgement, which might occur if consumer accepted installment payment option); Herkert v. MRC Receivables Corp., 655 F. Supp. 2d 870 (N.D. Ill. 2009) (filing suit on time-barred debts is violation); Richburg v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 247 F.R.D. 457 (E.D. Pa. 2008) (collector can be liable for filing suit on time-barred debt, even if its attorney is protected by attorney exemption; fact issue here as to bona fide error); Klewer v. Calvary Inv., 2002 WL 2018830 (W.D. Wis. Jan. 30, 2002) (debt buyer's attempt to collect time-barred debt was attempt to enforce right that it should have known did not exist). See also Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 489 F. Supp. 2d 1140 (S.D. Cal. 2007) (threat to report stale debt, or implication that it had already been reported, was deceptive). See also Cal. Civ. Code § 1788.14(d) (prohibiting written communications to collect time-barred debts without specified disclosures); Me. Stat. tit. 32, §§ 11013(7), 11013(8) (prohibiting collectors from bringing collection actions on time-barred debts); W. Va. Code § 46A-2-128(f) (requiring debt collector to make a disclosure in the initial written communication with the debtor if the debt is time-barred). But see Thomas v. U.S. Bank, 2007 WL 764312 (D. Or. Mar. 8, 2007) (suing or threatening to sue on time-barred debt does not violate Oregon debt collection statute). But cf. Garrison v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 233 F. Supp. 3d 1282 (M.D. Fla. 2017) (attempt to collect debt that was partially time-barred, which did not include threat of lawsuit, does not violate Florida statute); Dittig v. Elevate Recoveries, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4447818 (W.D. Pa. Aug. 24, 2016) (FDCPA and Pa. claims fail because dunning letters did not threaten litigation); Reed v. AFNI, Inc., 2011 WL 112430 (D. Utah Jan. 13, 2011) (refusing to hold that attempt to collect time-barred debt violates UDAP statute); McCorriston v. LWT, Inc., 536 F. Supp. 2d 1268 (M.D. Fla. 2008) (statute requires actual knowledge that debt was time-barred); FIA Card Services v. Gachiengu, 571 F. Supp. 2d 799 (S.D. Tex. Aug. 14, 2008) (bona fide error defense available where action was time-barred, but statute of limitations question was subject of split among federal circuits). See generally § 7.2.5, supra.

296 Lyon v. Chase Bank, 656 F.3d 877 (9th Cir. 2011) (creditor who continued collection attempts while refusing to provide explanation required by FDCPA and Fair Credit Billing Act as a condition of continued collection activity violated Oregon debt collection act provision forbidding attempts to enforce a remedy known not to exist); Hererra v. LCS Fin. Services Corp., 274 F.R.D. 666 (N.D. Cal. 2011) (certifying class in Rosenthal Act action alleging that collector routinely sought to collect deficiencies that were barred by California statute); Liu v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2010 WL 1994190 (S.D. Tex. May 17, 2010) (collector sued identity theft victim after it knew she did not owe debt); Marketic v. U.S. Bank, 436 F. Supp. 2d 842 (N.D. Tex. 2006) (allegation that assignee sought to foreclose on home equity loan that was prohibited by Texas constitution states claim under Texas Debt Collection Act); Kim v. Riscuity, Inc., 2006 WL 2192121 (N.D. Ill. July 31, 2006) (refusing to dismiss claim under state debt collection law against debt buyer for suing on contracts it knew were illegal under Illinois health club law); Losure v. Capital One Services, Inc., 2006 WL 166520 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 23, 2006) (declining to dismiss claim under Florida debt collection statute; allegation that collector "knew or should have known" that debt had been settled is sufficient); Kirk v. Credit Acceptance Corp., 829 N.W.2d 522 (Wis. Ct. App. 2013) (seeking a deficiency, where claim was barred because repossession breached contract).

297 Isom v. Portland Gen. Elec. Co., 677 P.2d 59 (Or. Ct. App. 1984) (utility disregarded customers' rights under partial payment, medical certification, and low-income energy assistance rules).

298 Burns v. Ross, Stuart & Dawson, Inc., 2016 WL 7013007 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 1, 2016) (creditor and letter provider created false impression of third party involvement; pre-collection letters send on letterhead of letter provider, instructing consumer to pay creditor); Moss v. Barton, 2016 WL 1441146 (E.D. Mo. Apr. 8, 2016) (fact issue whether assignment of debt to attorney was partial or complete; if complete, attorney violated FDCPA by suing in name of original creditor); Thomas v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2013 WL 4517175 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 12, 2013) (form complaint that failed to identify original creditor, and affirmatively alleged that debt buyer was the creditor who sold goods or extended credit, violated both FDCPA and RFDCPA); Alonso v. Blackstone Fin. Group, L.L.C., 962 F. Supp. 2d 1188 (E.D. Cal. 2013) (collector misrepresented self as law enforcement officer and told debtor she would be arrested); Martinez v. Commercial Recovery Sys., Inc., 2013 WL 2237571 (M.D. Fla. May 21, 2013) (creditor misrepresented self as sheriff's deputy); Henggeler v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 2012 WL 2855104 (D. Neb. July 5, 2012) (denying motion to dismiss claim that collectors' use of name of fictitious entity violated state debt collection statute). Pippert v. Niece, 518 F. Supp. 2d 1265 (D. Or. 2007) (collector for former landlord failed to properly identify self and entity for which it was collecting); Hosseinzadeh v. M.R.S. Assoc., Inc., 387 F. Supp. 2d 1104 (C.D. Cal. 2005) (message on answering machine failed to meaningfully disclose collector's identity in violation of state debt collection statute); Hartman v. Meridian Fin. Services, 191 F. Supp. 2d 1031, 1049–1050 (W.D. Wis. 2002) (use of false name violates Wisconsin debt collection statute); Joseph v. J.J. MacIntyre Companies, L.L.C., 238 F. Supp. 2d 1158 (N.D. Cal. 2002) (collector's use of alias states claim). But cf. DuHart v. LRAA Collections, 652 Fed. Appx. 483 (8th Cir. 2016) (use of "dba" name for initial billing, and variation on official name in pre-collection letter, not sufficient to subject creditor to false name exception of FDCPA and Arkansas Fair Debt Collection Act); Trent v. Mortg. Elec. Registration Sys., Inc., 288 Fed. Appx. 571 (11th Cir. 2008) (foreclosure notice that described MERS as "creditor" not deceptive, because MERS had legal right to foreclose); Hayes v. Asset Acceptance, 2014 WL 1767106 (S.D. Fla. May 2, 2014) (answering machine messages cannot violate FCCPA provision forbidding "refusal" to identify self, because consumer never requested identification); Beeders v. Gulf Coast Collection Bureau, Inc., 2010 WL 2696404 (M.D. Fla. July 6, 2010) (although autodialed calls with failure to identify self violated FDCPA, they do not

se a misleading name;[299]

ssert the rights of the owner of a debt without actually wning it;[300] lisrepresent the involvement of an attorney;[301] or

- Use dunning forms that simulate legal process or create the impression of government affiliation.[302] olate Florida statute, which requires collector to identify self only if quested by debtor), aff'd, 432 Fed. Appx. 918 (11th Cir. 2011); Glover Client Services, Inc., 2007 WL 2902209 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 2, 2007) ollector's blocking caller ID was neither deceptive statement, nor mmunicating without disclosing its identity).

lair v. Supportkids, Inc., 2003 WL 21799933 (N.D. Ill. July 25, 2003) llowing claim to go forward against CEO and board chairman who rsonally participated in choosing deceptive company name "Child upport Enforcement"); Pittenger v. Collection Agency Licensing ureau, 25 Cal. Rptr. 324 (Cal. Ct. App. 1962). But cf. Forsyth Mem'l osp. v. Contreras, 421 S.E.2d 167 (N.C. Ct. App. 1992) (debt collec- n letter mailed on letterhead of hospital holding company's attorney d not violate state debt collection law by failing to reveal relation- ip between hospital and hospital holding company or by suggesting at patient's debt to hospital had been turned over to independent bill ollector).

ndsay v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt., 2016 WL 1169957 (D. Md. Mar. 24,)16) (incorrect identification of owner of debt in collection action as assertion of rights known not to exist, as collector would not be ntitled to enforce debt on behalf of party that did not own it); Young Unifund CCR Partners, 2014 WL 4698646 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 22, 2014) enying motion to dismiss FDCPA and state debt collection claims; ing suit without proper assignment of the debt may falsely imply at collector has legal right to collect); Thomas v. Urban P'ship Bank,)13 WL 1788522 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 26, 2013) (homeowner stated Illinois ollection Act claim against servicer that sought to collect for bank hich allegedly did not own the loan); Brooks v. Midland Credit Mgmt., c., 2013 WL 1010455 (D. Md. Mar. 13, 2013) (consumer stated claim r asserting right known not to exist: debt buyer knew that it did not vn debt and was not authorized to add certain interest); DiCesari v. sset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2012 WL 4108944 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 18, 2012) ebt buyer sued, knowing it had no legal proof of ownership of debt). e also Wilson v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 2013 WL 5273328, at *10 J.D. Tex. Sept. 18, 2013) (if servicer lacked authority to appoint sub- itute trustee, then foreclosure action violated provisions forbidding lse threat to seize property or take actions forbidden by law). But cf. lson v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 578 Fed. Appx. 248 (4th Cir. 2014) ebt buyer's inability to prove ownership and existence of debt in col- ction suit does not violate Maryland debt collection statute in absence evidence that debt buyer did not own the debt or that debt- [illegible]

Mitchell, Rubenstein, & Assoc., 55 F. Supp. 3d 43 (D.D.C. 2014) (letter on law firm letterhead, stating firm had "been instructed to review" debt for possible legal action, but had not yet done so, did not misrepresent attorney involvement), later op. aff'd, 857 F.3d 939 (D.C Cir. 2017) (affirming summary judgment against consumer on other claims under D.C. debt collection law). But cf. Jones v. Dufek, 830 F.3d 523 (D.C. Cir. 2016) (letter did not misrepresent attorney involvement; demand for payment was on law firm letterhead, but with disclaimer immediately below the signature stating that no attorney had personally reviewed the account); In re Cheaves, 439 B.R. 220 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2010) (letter would not deceive unsophisticated consumer into thinking it was from attorney).

302 See Miranda v. Law Office of D. Scott Carruthers, 2011 WL 2037556 (E.D. Cal. May 23, 2011) ("notice of pending court proceedings" would deceive least sophisticated consumer into believing that lawsuit had already been filed); N. Star Capital Acquisitions, L.L.C. v. Krig, 611 F. Supp. 2d 1324 (M.D. Fla. 2009) (fact question whether proposed stipulated judgment served with complaint was deceptive); Mullinix v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2008 WL 2001747 (S.D. Cal. May 8, 2008) (fact issue whether "assignee of . . . Navy Defending Democracy" was false assertion of government affiliation or mere quotation of slogan that debtor chose to place on credit card); Barker v. Tomlinson, 2006 WL 1679645 (M.D. Fla. June 7, 2006) (affirming $10,000 punitive damage award where collector falsely claimed to be pre-trial diversion program and misrepresented that arrest warrant was imminent); Gradisher v. Check Enforcement Unit, 210 F. Supp. 2d 907 (W.D. Mich. 2002) (private collector working with sheriff's office, but paid by merchants, violated Michigan Collection Practices act by sending notices on official stationary describing possible criminal penalties, when sheriff's office had not yet seen case and rarely prosecuted such cases); Steiner & Munach, P.A. v. Williams, 334 So. 2d 39 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1976) (unfiled complaint, or statement of claim, that threatened future filing simulated process, giving false impression of authorization by government or attorney); Tester v. Nat'l Credit Exch., Inc., 299 So. 2d 46 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1974) (use of document labeled "Final Demand Before Suit" with legal caption and language and type style similar to summons states claim for simulating process). See also Hayes v. Self-Help

idation notices and documentation uirements echo the FDCPA's requirement of a validation f the state statute does not require such a notice, ; or obscuring the consumer's validation rights PA is likely a violation of a general prohibition the state statute.[304] Some states require credi- the debtor specific documentation of the debt

rongful garnishment

garnishing an account containing only exempt benefits violates the Iowa Fair Debt Collection and the unconscionable debt collection pro- Iowa Consumer Credit Code.[306] Garnishing a servicemember's bank account without filing the affidavit required by the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act violated the Washington Collection Agency Act.[307] A bank's freezing of a customer's account to force them to pay their consumer debt to another bank may be a state debt collection violation.[308] Obtaining a default judgment and garnishing wages without proper notice violated the Washington collection agency and UDAP statutes.[309]

16.2.4.4.7 Other unfair or deceptive tactics

Filing suit in an improper venue violates a state debt collection statute.[310] A collector whose dunning letter referred consumers to a website containing egregious misrepresentations violated the Oregon Unfair Debt Collection Practices Act.[311] A collector or creditor violates a state debt collection statute by:

- Dunning HMO subscribers for medical bills covered by their HMO, in violation of state insurance law or the governing contract;[312] hnson v. CFS II, Inc., 2013 WL 1809081 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 28, ing on California's incorporation of FDCPA's validation .irement; where creditor knew that first letter, with correct of dispute rights, went to wrong address, second, correctly- letter, which did not provide required notice, was "initial ood v. Mercantile Adjustment Bureau, L.L.C., 176 P.3d 769 8) (confusing and contradictory language obscured state- verification rights). See also Maloney v. Alliance Collection Inc., 2018 WL 5816375 (E.D. Wis. Nov. 6, 2018) (sending ition notices within 30 days could confuse debtor as to time disputing debt). But see Himes v. Client Services, Inc., 2013 153 (D.N.H. Apr. 22, 2013) (New Hampshire debt collection es not include a validation requirement). But cf. Coburn v. Assoc., Inc., 2015 WL 6473606 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 29, 2015) oes not require collector to validate debt that has already been n though collector continued to report it delinquent for two r payment).

---

Martin v. Butler & Hosch, P.A., 2014 WL 3593622 (M.D. Fla. 2014) (statement that debt "will be assumed to be valid" if con- oes not dispute within thirty days violated both FDCPA and 2010 WL 4053794 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 14, 2010) (consumer stated claim for unconscionable debt collection practices; garnishment, without prior investigation, of account containing Social Security and refusal to return garnished funds upon being told of exemption). But see Gates v. MTCA Group, Inc., 93 F. Supp. 3d 1182 (S.D. Cal. 2015) (garnishment of bank account containing Social Security benefits not unfair or a deceptive threat of unlawful action where collection attorney followed state procedure, and debtor then used that procedure to exempt the funds, but collector's oral misstatements regarding debtor's rights might be violations of FDCPA and state debt collection law); Lange v. CIR. Law Offices, 2010 WL 2524089 (S.D. Cal. June 22, 2010) (garnishing bank account that contained Social Security did not violate California's Rosenthal Act; creditor had no duty to investigate before garnishment). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions §§ 14.3, 14.5.4 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc .org/library (protection of Social Security benefits and other exempt

- Freezing electronic access to all of the debtor's accounts and disabling certain electronic services when a debtor became delinquent on a credit card account;[313]
- Misrepresenting the legal status of an obligation, for example by representing a disputed debt as undisputed;[314] or
- Making misleading statements about the effect the consumer's payment will have.[315]

16.2.4.5 Unlicensed Collection Activity

Some courts hold that a consumer does not have a direct private cause of action against a collection agency for operating without a license required by state law.[316] However, a collection agency's threat to take action that it cannot legally take because of its lack of a license may be actionable under the state debt collection law as a deceptive tactic.[317] A threat of suit by an attorney who is not licensed in the jurisdiction is also deceptive.[318] In addition, a violation of a state law requiring collectors to be licensed may provide the basis for injunctive relief,[319] and may also be the basis of an FDCPA[320] or UDAP

(hospital violated state debt collection, UDAP, and racketeering statutes by placing lien against HMO subscriber's personal injury recovery, in violation of contracts which required hospital to accept HMO payment and hold subscribers harmless).

313 In re Navy Fed. Credit Union, Administrative Proceeding, File No. 2016-CFPB-0024, Consent Order (CFPB Oct. 11, 2016), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov.

314 See, e.g., Stallings v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2013 WL 4417424 (E.D. Tex. Aug. 14, 2013) (series of contradictory letters about status of loan modification, some sent after house had been sold in foreclosure, were false representations of status of debt and deceptive means to collect), aff'd, 611 Fed. Appx. 215 (5th Cir. 2015); Summers v. Merchants and Med. Credit Corp., 2013 WL 1507529 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 12, 2013) (denying motion to dismiss claim that collector violated state debt collection statute by misrepresenting to debtor that her settlement with creditor was not valid); Johnson v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2012 WL 4483916 (E.D.N.C. Sept. 27, 2012) (denying collector's motion for judgment on pleadings; law firm's false statement that judgment had been entered against consumer would violate state debt collection law); Harding v. Regent, 347 F. Supp. 2d 334 (N.D. Tex. 2004) (letter that treated disputed debt as undisputed may violate Texas Debt Collection Act). See also Herrera v. LCS Fin. Services Corp., 2009 WL 5062192 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 22, 2009) (least sophisticated consumer would be confused by second mortgage lender's statement that she "must" pay deficiency after foreclosure, when California law barred suit on deficiency).

315 Moorer v. Always Towing & Recovery, Inc., 2018 WL 4233005 (E.D. Wis. Sept. 5, 2018) (consumer was told that specified payment would bring loan current and stop repossession; she timely made each payment demanded but collector repossessed; consumer stated claims for debt collection act violations and conversion); Solomon v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 2013 WL 5000069 (E.D. Tex. Aug. 15, 2013) (false oral assurances as to loan modification not sufficient, but sending borrowers a copy of unsigned agreement and accepting reduced payments could support claim for deceptive means of collecting the additional payments); Cuevas v. BAC Home Loan Servicing, L.P., 2012 WL 4339063 (S.D. Tex. Sept. 19, 2012) (servicer demanded specific sum for property taxes; when borrower timely tendered that amount, servicer refused it and foreclosed); Chao v. Aurora Loan Services, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6963098 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 13, 2011) (refusing to dismiss claim that servicer's letter, which asked for payments to cure arrearage but then stated that the payment would not cure it, was so misleading that it violated state debt collection statute).

316 See, e.g., Velez v. Health Revenue Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1476144 (M.D.N.C. Apr. 24, 2017) (stating in dicta that there appears to be no private cause of action for collector's failure to register as required by state debt collection statute); Galvan v. NCO Fin. Systems, Inc., 2016 WL 792009 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 1, 2016) (finding private right of action for harassment but not for unlicensed practice); Matute v. Main St. Acquisition Corp., 2012 WL 4513420 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 2, 2012); Paris v. Steinberg & Steinberg, 828 F. Supp. 2d 1212 (W.D. Wash. 2011); Trent v. Mortgage Elec. Registration Sys., Inc., 2007 WL 2120262 (M.D. Fla. July 20, 2007) (no private right of action for failure to register as out-of-state collection agency), aff'd, 288 Fed. Appx. 571 (11th Cir. 2008); Hoskin v. Plaquemines Parish Gov't, 743 So. 2d 736 (La. Ct. App. 1999) (no private cause of action under Louisiana debt collection licensing law).

317 See, e.g., Collins v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 991 F. Supp. 2d 1195 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 28, 2013) (garnishment action brought by unregistered debt buyer was threat to take action that could not legally be taken); Bradshaw v. Hilco Receivables, L.L.C., 765 F. Supp. 2d 719 (D. Md. 2011) (collection attempt by unlicensed collector was assertion of right known not to exist, a violation of the Maryland debt collection statute). See also Goray v. CCR Unifund Partners, 2007 WL 4260017 (D. Haw. Dec. 4, 2007) (attempt to collect by unregistered agency violated state debt collection statute); LVNV Funding v. Finch, 207 A.3d 202 (Md. 2019) (judgments obtained by unlicensed collector will support UDAP and debt collection claims for asserting right known not to exist). But cf. ValleCastro v. Tobin, 2015 WL 6478412 (D. Conn. Oct. 27, 2015) (unlicensed collector's statement that account "may be reviewed for possible legal action" did not threaten lawsuit or other action that could not legally be taken); Conner v. BCC Fin. Mgmt. Services, Inc., 489 F. Supp. 2d 1358 (S.D. Fla. 2007) (consumer has no private cause of action for collection agency's faults in registration procedure and cannot frame claim as assertion of legal right while knowing that right does not exist).

318 In re Belile, 209 B.R. 658 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1997) (letter which threatened immediate suit, although no employee of collector was admitted in Pennsylvania, threatened action which could not be taken and violated former state debt collection regulation).

319 See, e.g., Cooper v. Ellis, Crosby, & Assoc., 2007 WL 1322380 (D. Conn. May 2, 2007) (granting injunction against further collection activity in Connecticut unless collector becomes properly licensed); Shelton v. Wilson (In re Wilson), 311 B.R. 566 (D. Or. 2004) (affirming bankruptcy court's issuance of injunction against unlicensed collector), aff'd, 185 Fed. Appx. 696 (9th Cir. 2006); Cavalry SPC I, L.L.C. v. Morrisey, 752 S.E.2d 356 (W. Va. 2013) (affirming grant of attorney general's motion for temporary injunction forbidding debt buyer from collecting debts acquired before it obtained license). See also Bray v. Cadle Co., 2010 WL 4053794 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 14, 2010) (denying motion to dismiss claim for injunction requiring debt buyer to post bond as required by state statute; fact that bond was posted after consumer sued did not moot claim); Purco Fleet Services, Inc. v. Idaho State Dep't of Fin., 90 P.3d 346 (Idaho 2004) (reinstating state agency's cease and desist order against unlicensed collector).

320 LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, 601 F.3d 1185 (11th Cir. 2010) (fact issue whether letter from collector not registered in Florida was threat of litigation; if so, it threatened action that could not legally be taken and was FDCPA violation); Buhler v. BCG Equities, L.L.C., 2020 WL 888733 (D. Utah Feb. 24, 2020) (denying motion for judgment on pleadings on claim that out-of-state debt buyer that sues or threatens suit in Utah without registering as collection agency violates Utah debt collection statute); Alexander v. Absolute Resolutions Corp., 2019 WL 1938891 (W.D. Ark. May 1, 2019) (allowing FDCPA claim to go forward against retroactively licensed collector that was unlicensed at time it filed suit; Arkansas statute allows unlicensed agency, upon payment of $10,000 penalty, to receive retroactive license, and provides that this penalty is the only consequence of and remedy for unlicensed practice; court construes this provision to apply only to claim.[321] Some state lending laws may require an assignee of a loan to have a state lending license in order to collect more than the legal rate of interest.[322]

A consumer might also be able to have a judgment declared void if it was obtained by an entity that was required to, but did not, have a license. However, the highest court in Maryland[323] and the Illinois Supreme Court[324] held that a judgment obtained by a collector that should have, but did not have, a license was merely voidable, not void. The court reasoned that violation of a statutory licensure requirement could not deprive a court of jurisdiction that was conferred by the state constitution. The result might be different where a judgment is entered by a court of limited jurisdiction.

16.2.5 State Debt Collection Statutes' Remedies

16.2.5.1 Is There a Private Cause of Action?

The remedies provided by state debt collection statutes vary widely. Some statutes explicitly authorize private actions. Where the statute is silent as to consumer remedies, some courts have implied a private cause of action to enforce penalties imposed by state agency); Smith v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 894 F. Supp. 2d 1045 (E.D. Tenn. 2012) (threatening or taking steps without a required license is FDCPA violation); Fiorenzano v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2562415 (D.R.I. June 29, 2012) (filing of lawsuit by debt buyer that had failed to register as required by Rhode Island law was sufficient to support FDCPA claim); Bradshaw v. Hilco Receivables, L.L.C., 765 F. Supp. 2d 719 (D. Md. 2011) (collection attempt by unlicensed collector was assertion of right known not to exist); Hauk v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 749 F. Supp. 2d 358 (D. Md. 2010); Goray v. CCR Unifund Partners, 2007 WL 4260017 (D. Haw. Dec. 4, 2007) (unregistered agency's attempt to collect violated FDCPA and state debt collection statute); Cooper v. Ellis, Crosby, & Assoc., 2007 WL 1322380 (D. Conn. May 2, 2007) (lack of state-required license is FDCPA violation); Keli v. Universal Fid. Corp., 1997 WL 33820142 (D. Haw. Feb. 25, 1997) (engaging in collection activities without state-required license is FDCPA violation); Russey v. Rankin, 911 F. Supp. 1449, 1459 (D.N.M. 1995) (unlicensed debt collection activity is FDCPA violation); Sibley v. Firstcollect, Inc., 913 F. Supp. 469 (M.D. La. 1995) (engaging in debt collection without license was "tak[ing] action that cannot legally be taken" and was FDCPA violation); Carrigan v. Cent. Adjustment Bureau, Inc., 494 F. Supp. 827, 502 F. Supp. 468 (N.D. Ga. 1980). But see Wade v. Reg'l Credit Ass'n, 87 F.3d 1098 (9th Cir. 1996) (violation of Idaho debt collection law's licensure requirement is not per se FDCPA violation, and this notice did not make any misstatements or threaten any particular action); Berg v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore, L.L.C., 2009 WL 901011 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2009) (denying FDCPA claim; filing suit is not "transacting business," so debt buyer need not obtain state license); Taylor v. Quall, 471 F. Supp. 2d 1053 (C.D. Cal. 2007) (violation of California law requiring registration of business name is not FDCPA violation). But cf. Klein v. Credico, Inc., 922 F.3d 393 (8th Cir. 2019) (fact that one of collection letter's three signatories was not registered to collect debts in Minnesota is not FDCPA violation where other two and collection agency were); Baham v. Bayview Loan Servicing, 2020 WL 1324992 (D. Nev. Mar. 20, 2020) (violation of Nevada licensing statute is not, without more, FDCPA violation); Watson v. ARC Mgmt. Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 6460220 (E.D. Tenn. Dec. 18, 2017) (Tennessee law allows agency to retroactively cure violation by obtaining license); Estate of Caruso v. Fin. Recoveries, 2017 WL 2704088 (D. N.J. June 22, 2017) (failure to file bond required by state law is not per se FDCPA violation; noting that state law provides no private right of action for this violation); Skinner v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 876 F. Supp. 2d 473 (D.N.J. 2012) (unlicensed collection can support FDCPA claim for threat to take action not permitted by law, but letter here—a settlement offer—did not threaten to take any action); Lucero v. Bur. of Collection Recovery, Inc., 2012 WL 681797 (D.N.M. Feb. 28, 2012) (rejecting FDCPA claim against debt collector that had a license, but allegedly committed acts that could have justified license revocation; it did not make misrepresentations to debtor about its compliance with licensing requirements); Pescatrice v. Elite Recovery Serv., Inc., 2007 WL 1192441 (S.D. Fla. Apr. 23, 2007) (faults in collection agency registration not per se FDCPA violations); Thibodeau v. Credit Adjustment Bureau, 2006 WL 3498159 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 4, 2006) (unregistered collector's threat to report debt to credit bureau was not threat of legal action, so was not FDCPA violation). See generally §§ 7.2.5, 8.3.6, supra.

321 See, e.g., Gray v. Suttell & Assoc., 2016 WL 409706 (E.D. Wash. Feb. 2, 2016) (unlicensed practice is unfair pursuant to Wash. UDAP statute; injury requirement satisfied if debtor's income was garnished pursuant to order illegally obtained by unlicensed collector); Moritz v. Daniel N. Gordon, P.C., 2012 WL 222955 (W.D. Wash. Jan. 25, 2012) (allowing debtor to file amended complaint alleging that unlicensed collection activity was UDAP violation; debtor's payment of postage to dispute debt satisfies UDAP statute's injury requirement); Bradshaw v. Hilco Receivables, L.L.C., 765 F. Supp. 2d 719 (D. Md. 2011) (collection attempt by unlicensed collector was assertion of right known not to exist, a UDAP violation); Hauk v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 749 F. Supp. 2d 358 (D. Md. 2010) (allowing UDAP claim to proceed against collector that filed collection suit without being licensed in the state); Russey v. Rankin, 911 F. Supp. 1449, 1459–1450 (D.N.M. 1995) (unlicensed debt collection activity is UDAP violation; violations met UDAP statute's requirement that they be "knowing" where attorney designed system of form letters, even though he did not approve sending of each letter). Cf. Sambor v. Omnia Credit Services, Inc., 183 F. Supp. 2d 1234 (D. Haw. 2002) (failure to register was per se UDAP violation, but denying UDAP claim because of failure to show actual damages); Cach, L.L.C. v. Echols, 506 S.W.3d 217 (Ark. 2016) (affirming grant of class certification in action alleging that unlicensed collection is UDAP violation). But see Hrivnak v. NCO Portfolio Mgmt., 994 F. Supp. 2d 889 (N.D. Ohio 2014) (collector's failure to register fictitious name is not UDAP violation). But cf. Wensley v. First Nat'l Bank, 874 F. Supp. 2d 957 (D. Nev. 2012) (foreclosing on deed of trust does not require license to do business in Nevada, so not violation of UDAP prohibition of engaging in a business without a required license); Paris v. Steinberg & Steinberg, 828 F. Supp. 2d 1212 (W.D. Wash. 2011) (unlicensed collection activity not UDAP violation in absence of showing of injury). See generally § 16.3, infra (application of UDAP statutes to debt collection abuses).

322 See, e.g., Mellish v. CACH, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1472405 (W.D. Penn. Mar. 26, 2020) (lender that was licensed to make loans at more than the statutory rate sold loan to debt buyer that was not licensed to do so; buyer's attempt to collect sums to which it was not entitled violated FDCPA and Pennsylvania statutes). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Credit Regulation § 3.11.7.2 (whether assignee must be licensed), § 7.8.5.1 (remedies for creditor's nonlicensure) (3d ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

323 LVNV Funding v. Finch, 207 A.3d 202 (Md. 2019).

324 LVNV Funding, L.L.C. v. Trice, 32 N.E.3d 553 (Ill. 2015). Accord Johnson v. Pushpin Holdings, 821 F.3d 871 (7th Cir. 2016) (failure to register under Illinois Collection Agency Act does not invalidate judgments that debt collector obtained).

the statute,[325] but others have refused to do so.[326] In Arizona, at least one court has implied a private remedy,[327] but other courts disagree.[328] Whether or not there is a private cause of action under the state debt collection statute itself, a violation may be actionable under a general state consumer protection statute that prohibits unfair and deceptive acts and practices.[329]

In Connecticut, the legislature amended the state debt collection statute in 2007 to provide a private cause of action for statutory damages, actual damages, and attorney fees.[330] This amendment legislatively overruled a series of cases that had found no private cause of action under the statute.[331] Even before the amendment, however, many decisions recognized that a UDAP claim could be based on a violation of the debt collection statute.[332]

Certain violations of state debt collection laws may amount to threats to take illegal action, which may be actionable as 325 Kim v. Riscuity, Inc., 2006 WL 2192121 (N.D. Ill. July 31, 2006) (implying private right of action under Illinois statute); Trull v. G.C. Services, Inc., 961 F. Supp. 1199 (N.D. Ill. 1997) (implied private cause of action exists under Illinois Collection Agency Act, but consumer failed to show required actual damages); Czap v. Credit Bureau of Santa Clara Valley, 86 Cal. Rptr. 417, 420 (Cal. Ct. App. 1970) (violation of collection agency act is actionable as it is intended to benefit public even though it does not provide an explicit private cause of action); Sherman v. Field Clinic & Collection Accounts Terminal, 392 N.E.2d 154 (Ill. App. Ct. 1979) (inferring private right of action from state collection statute that provides administrative and criminal penalties, but does not indicate that these are were exclusive sanctions). See also Barr v. NCB Mgmt. Services, Inc., 711 S.E.2d 577 (W. Va. 2011) (West Virginia statute provides private remedy against collector who violates statute; remedy provision refers only to creditor, but remedial statute must be liberally construed, and substantive prohibitions apply to collectors as well as creditors). But see Skinner v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 319320 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 8, 2018) (no implied private right of action for violation of Illinois Collection Agency Act; predicting that Illinois courts will overrule decision that implied private right of action); Eul v. Transworld Systems, 2017 WL 1178537 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 2017) (same). But cf. McCabe v. Crawford & Co., 272 F. Supp. 2d 736 (N.D. Ill. 2003) (questioning whether Illinois Collection Agency Act provides private right of action).

326 Merril v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 745 Fed. Appx. 844 (11th Cir. 2018) (Florida statute that provided right of action for violations of specified section did not provide right of action for violation of later-enacted section imposing notice requirements for assigned debts); Conboy v. AT&T Corp., 241 F.3d 242 (2d Cir. 2001) (no private cause of action for violation of New York debt collection statute, and its prohibitions cannot be enforced via UDAP statute); Rodolakis v. Safety Ins. Co., 327 F. Supp. 3d 274 (D. Mass. 2018) (Massachusetts debt collection statute does not provide private right of action); Ayres v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 5849472 (D. Utah Nov. 8, 2018) (Utah Collection Agency Act does not confer private right of action); Schmidt v. Synergentic Communications, Inc., 2015 WL 248635 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 20, 2015) (list of violations for which Florida statute provides private right of action is exclusive, and does not include failure to provide certain notices, or unregistered collection); Valle v. First Nat'l Collection Bur., Inc., 252 F. Supp. 3d 1332 (S.D. Fla. 2017) (Florida statute that provides private right of action for violations of specified sections provides no right of action for violation of later-added section requiring notice of assignment); Edeh v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 748 F. Supp. 2d 1030 (D. Minn. 2010) (no private right of action under Minnesota debt collection statute), aff'd on other grounds, 413 Fed. Appx. 925 (8th Cir. 2011); Ishaq v. Wachovia Mortg., 2010 WL 1380386 (D. Mass. Apr. 2, 2010) (no private cause of action to enforce regulations adopted under state debt collection statute); Thomas v. Commercial Recovery Sys., Inc., 2008 WL 5246296 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 16, 2008) (Fla. Stat. § 559.77 provides private right of action only for prohibited practices listed in § 559.72; refusing to imply private right of action for violating notice requirements in another section of statute); Hunter v. Washington Mut. Bank, 2008 WL 4206604 (E.D. Tenn. Sept. 10, 2008) (no private right of action for violation of Tennessee Collection Services Act); Ramos v. CACH, L.L.C., 183 So. 3d 1149 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2015) (where Florida statute explicitly provides private right of action for violation of the prohibited practices section, Fla. Stat. § 559.72, private right of action for violation of later-enacted § 559.715 setting standards for assignment of debt cannot be implied); Capital One Bank v. Taylor, 873 N.W.2d 551 (Iowa Ct. App. 2015) (unreported) (no private right of action for violation of section requiring out-of-state collector to notify attorney general before collecting debt in Iowa); Varela v. Investors Ins. Holding Corp., 615 N.E.2d 218 (N.Y. 1993) (no private cause of action for violation of Gen. Bus. Law art. 29-H, which regulates debt collection practices). See also Baldwin v. Monterey Fin. Services, Inc., 2016 WL 5723734 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 30, 2016) (Pa. debt collection statute is enforceable only through UDAP statute); Trant v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2012 WL 2871642 (S.D. Cal. July 12, 2012) (refusing to allow negligence per se claim for violation of state debt collection statute that includes an explicit private remedy); McNichols v. Moore Law Group, 2012 WL 667760 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 28, 2012) (refusing to allow tort in se claim where state debt collection statute provides explicit private cause of action); Glazer v. Chase Home Fin., L.L.C., 2013 WL 7869273 (Ohio App. Dec. 19, 2013) (unpublished) (consumer cannot bring suit pursuant to Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1319.12 (West), which regulates suits on assigned debts, because it does not explicitly provide for private cause of action). See generally § 16.2.4.5, supra (private cause of action for violation of licensure requirement).

327 Kost v. Scott Lowery Law Office, PC, 2014 WL 3368467 (D. Ariz. July 10, 2014) (implying private right of action for violation of statute forbidding unlicensed debt collection; noting that no Arizona court has spoken on this issue, but that Arizona standard for implying private right of action is more liberal than federal standard).

328 Warren v. LJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 2012 WL 4903588 (D. Ariz. Mar. 26, 2013) (no private right of action for violation of Collection Agency Act); Sparlin v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2012 WL 527486 (D. Ariz. Feb. 17, 2012) (same); Rolle v. Law Office of Samuel Streeter, P.L.L.C., 2010 WL 729022 (D. Ariz. Mar. 2, 2010) (Arizona statute requiring licensed collectors to act fairly and honestly did not confer private right of action against unlicensed collector; where Arizona statute providing private right of action for criminal conduct was unconstitutionally overbroad, no private right of action for extortion); Grismore v. RJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 2009 WL 806627 (D. Ariz. Mar. 26, 2009) (no private right of action for violation of Ariz. Admin. Code regulating collection agencies).

329 See § 16.3.6, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 3.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

330 Conn. Gen. Stat. § 36a-648.

331 See, e.g., Jones v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 755 F. Supp. 2d 393 (D. Conn. 2010) (no private right of action for violations occurring before July 1, 2007, the effective date of the amendment); Holtman v. Citifinancial Mortgage Co. Inc., 2006 WL 1699589 (D. Conn. June 19, 2006) (no private right of action under state debt collection law, although some violations may support UDAP or negligence claims); Krutchkoff v. Fleet Bank, 960 F. Supp. 541 (D. Conn. 1996) (state debt collection statute does not provide for private remedy).

332 See, e.g., Bruce v. Home Depot, U.S.A., 308 F. Supp. 2d 72 (D. Conn. 2004); Pabon v. Recko, 122 F. Supp. 2d 311 (D. Conn. 2000) (no private right of action under collection agency statute, but agency misconduct that violates public policy, here violation of banking regulations, is actionable under Connecticut Unfair Trade Practices Act).

FDCPA violations.[333] In Maine, which is exempt from the substantive provisions, but not the remedies, of the FDCPA, a violation of the state debt collection law can be asserted as an FDCPA violation.[334]

Some state debt collection statutes explicitly provide that a violation is a violation of the state UDAP statute, and some courts also imply this remedy. Nonetheless, claims alleging clear violations of the debt collection statute may fail because they do not meet UDAP criteria. For example, the UDAP statute may afford a private cause of action only to a consumer who suffers a loss of money or property,[335] and some courts have required UDAP plaintiffs to show reliance.[336] Other UDAP statutes exclude attorneys, other professionals, or specified entities such as banks.[337] Even if a state debt collection statute applies to a defendant and provides that a violation is a UDAP violation, a UDAP claim may not be available if the defendant is exempted from the UDAP statute.[338] Since many state UDAP statutes do not apply to non-consumer transactions, the consumer may also have to show that the underlying transaction was incurred for consumer purposes.[339]

16.2.5.2 Relief Available

16.2.5.2.1 Actual damages

When a private cause of action is available, it universally allows the consumer to recover actual damages.[340] Damages may be awarded for the reasonably foreseeable harm caused by the violation regardless of whether the defendant intended to cause injury.[341] Actual damages may include payments the debtor made in response to harassment or a false threat[342] and expenses incurred in defending against an unfounded collection action.[343]

Symptoms of stress may be compensable,[344] and the court may not require the claimant to establish that a physical injury

333 See §§ 7.2.5, 16.2.4.5, supra. But see Voris v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 494 F. Supp. 2d 1156 (S.D. Cal. 2007) (violation of state debt collection law, here provision prescribing type size for notices, not per se FDCPA violation); Luna v. Alliance One Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2006 WL 357823 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 16, 2006) (failure to include notice required by state debt collection statute but not by FDCPA is not FDCPA violation).

334 Maxwell v. Arrow Fin. Services, 2004 WL 719278 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2004).

335 See § 16.3.8, infra. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.4.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

336 See § 16.3.8, infra. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2.12 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

337 See § 16.3.3.4, infra. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 2.2.1, 2.3.3, 2.3.9, 2.3.11 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

338 See, e.g., Hawkins v. Kilberg, 165 F. Supp. 3d 386 (D. Md. 2016) (where UDAP statute exempts attorneys, UDAP claim cannot be asserted even though debt collection statute applies to attorneys and provides that any violation is a UDAP violation).

339 See, e.g., Aldaya v. Encore Capital Group, Inc., 2017 WL 1055961 (D. Haw. Mar. 20, 2017).

340 See, e.g., Sweetland v. Stevens & James, Inc., 563 F. Supp. 2d 300 (D. Me. 2008) (statutory remedies of FDCPA and Maine statute are identical; here, $2500 actual and $250 statutory damages for two offensive phone calls to debtor who was recovering from heart attack); Heib v. Arches Fin., 2008 WL 4601602 (E.D. Wash. Oct. 14, 2008) ($157,900 damages for vicious and persistent telephone harassment of disabled older debtors whose only income was SSI); In re Naffis, 2019 WL 470199 (Bankr. D. Md. Feb. 6, 2019) (servicer coerced debtor into post-petition consolidation that made loans non-dischargeable, at time when debtor had been pursuing adversary proceeding seeking hardship discharge; loss of this cause of action is actual damages if debtor can show he would have prevailed).

341 Brown v. Oaklawn Bank, 718 S.W.2d 678, 680–681 (Tex. 1986) (plaintiffs are entitled to damages for harm that is reasonably foreseeable, regardless of whether defendant intended to injure them).

342 See, e.g., Alonso v. Blackstone Fin. Group, L.L.C., 962 F. Supp. 2d 1188 (E.D. Cal. 2013) (payment made in response to false threat of arrest is actual damages).

343 Crawley v. CACH, L.L.C., 2019 WL 6841803 (W.D. Pa. Dec. 16, 2019) (attorney fees incurred to defend against unauthorized collection attempt are ascertainable loss, sufficient to support Pennsylvania debt collection act claim); Dawson v. Genesis Credit Mgmt., L.L.C., 2017 WL 5668073 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 27, 2017) (must show direct connection between statutory violation—here demand for unauthorized amounts—and damage; lost time and attorney fees incurred in investigating existence of alleged debt are sufficient); Jarzyna v. Home Prop., L.P., 2015 WL 4385299 (E.D. Pa. July 17, 2015) (cost of hiring a lawyer to dispute illegal charge is actual damages); Lowe v. Elite Recovery Solutions, L.L.P., 2008 WL 324777 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 5, 2008) (actual damages include attorney fees incurred in defending against collection action by debt buyer); Monahan Loan Services, Inc. v. Janssen, 349 N.W.2d 752 (Iowa 1984) (consumers could recover as actual damages under debt collection statute their attorney fees in obtaining dismissal of suit unlawfully filed in distant forum). See also Peters v. Quinney, 2001 WL 1627650 (Tex. App. Dec. 20, 2001) (actual damages include cost of expunging record of unfounded criminal charges filed by lender). Cf. Herkert v. MRC Receivables Corp., 655 F. Supp. 2d 870 (N.D. Ill. 2009) (filing of time-barred actions; consumer's attorney fees not actual damages, but appearance fee, which consumer must pay before defending against claim, is).

344 McCaig v. Wells Fargo Bank, 788 F.3d 463, 474–475 (5th Cir. 2015) (Tex. law; affirming award of mental anguish damages under Texas debt collection statute); Croft v. ALD, L.L.C., 2017 WL 762255 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 23, 2017) (calculating damages after default by payday lender who made unauthorized withdrawals from consumer's account; awarding emotional distress damages, in an amount less than requested, and trebling them); Kowalski v. Seterus, Inc., 2017 WL 79949 (D. Me. Jan. 9, 2017) (Maine UCCC allows emotional distress damages; here servicer violated settlement agreement by dunning for deficiency it had waived, and threatening to take consumer's current home); Peckey v. Bank of Am., 2015 WL 1622967 (D. Md. Apr. 10, 2015) (emotional distress and damage to credit rating are actual damages); Alonso v. Blackstone Fin. Group, L.L.C., 962 F. Supp. 2d 1188 (E.D. Cal. 2013) (fact issues as to emotional distress; consumer testified that she suffered flare-up of preexisting condition, but did not seek medical help because she had been taught how to deal with them); Fini v. Dish Network, L.L.C., 955 F. Supp. 2d 1288 (M.D. Fla. 2013) (emotional distress supports claim for actual damages under Florida statute); Vanderbilt Mortgage & Fin., Inc. v. Flores, 746 F. Supp. 2d 819 (S.D. Tex. 2010) (where statute gives right to recover for harassment and abuse, injury is likely to be "essentially mental and subjective); Fausto v. Credigy Services Corp., 598 F. Supp. 2d 1049 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 17, 2009) (fact issues as to emotional distress damages for FDCPA and Rosenthal Act violations); Rodriquez v. Florida First Fin. Group, Inc., 2009 WL 535980 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 3, 2009) ($1000 emotional distress damages for false threats of arrest, leading to panic attacks for which consumer neither sought medical occurred.[345] Some courts require emotional distress damages to meet the criteria for the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress,[346] but others recognize that state debt collection statutes are designed to go beyond common law tort rules and do not impose such a requirement.[347] The consumer should take care to establish a causal link between the violation and the symptoms of emotional distress, especially where there are other potential causes.[348]

16.2.5.2.2 Statutory damages

Some state debt collection statutes provide for statutory damages.[349] Under some of these statutes, actual damages are not a prerequisite to recovering such statutory damages.[350] treatment nor missed work); Sweetland v. Stevens & James, Inc., 563 F. Supp. 2d 300 (D. Me. 2008) ($2500 emotional distress damages for two offensive calls to debtor recovering from heart attack); Sweetland v. Stevens & James, Inc., 563 F. Supp. 2d 300 (D. Me. 2008) ($2500 emotional distress damages for two frightening and abusive calls to vulnerable older consumer; no evidence of medical expenses or long-term injury); Myers v. LHR, Inc., 543 F. Supp. 2d 1215 (S.D. Cal. 2008) ($90,000 compensatory damages for "continuous, systematic and outrageous" harassment for debt not owed; consumer presented evidence of damage to her credit, and medical expenses for physical effects of stress); Heib v. Arches Fin., 2008 WL 4601602 (E.D. Wash. Oct. 14, 2008) ($75,000 per plaintiff for emotional distress; vicious telephone harassment, which caused health problems for older debtors); Fisher v. T.C.I., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7150 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 19, 2000) ("distress, indignation and loss of time" alleges sufficient injury to state claim under Illinois Collection Agency Act); In re Davis, 377 B.R. 827 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 2007) (actual damages may include mental anguish); Steiner & Munach, P.A. v. Williams, 334 So. 2d 39 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1976); Williams v. HomeEq Servicing Corp., 646 S.E.2d 381 (N.C. Ct. App. 2007) (emotional distress resulting from telephone harassment is actual damages); Monroe v. Frank, 936 S.W.2d 654 (Tex. App. 1996) (mental anguish damages available); Ledisco Fin. Serv. v. Viracola, 533 S.W.2d 951 (Tex. App. 1976); Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc. v. Gonzalez, 528 S.W.2d 314 (Tex. App. 1975) ($3500 awarded for profane and abusive language, misrepresentations as to involvement of attorney, false threats of criminal charges, and accusations of fraud). See also Creditors Protective Ass'n v. Britt, 648 P.2d 414 (Or. Ct. App. 1982) (emotional distress sufficient to show injury and actual damage); Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002) (affirming compensatory damage award of $5 million where plaintiff suffered emotional and physical symptoms due to defendant's abusive collection tactics), vacated on other grounds, 2003 Tex. LEXIS 50 (Apr. 24, 2003) (vacating decision pursuant to parties' settlement); § 2.5, supra. But cf. Guthrie v. J.D. Enter. & Fin. Services, 2013 WL 2244337 (S.D. Cal. May 21, 2013) (denying emotional distress damages where only evidence was debtor's testimony that he suffered sleeplessness, pessimism, restlessness, anxiety, worry and irritability); Lowe v. Elite Recovery Solutions, L.L.P., 2008 WL 324777 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 5, 2008) (denying emotional distress damages where consumer alleged only "transitory" symptoms: stress, worry, feelings of helplessness, loss of sleep); Montgomery v. Florida First Fin. Group, Inc., 2008 WL 3540374 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 12, 2008) (denying actual damages for emotional distress, because consumers' testimony of sleeplessness and fear was insufficient to show severe distress); Costa v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, 634 F. Supp. 2d 1069 (E.D. Cal. 2007) (no recovery for emotional distress where collector's conduct did not rise to level of "extreme and outrageous" and where plaintiff could not demonstrate suffering extreme emotional distress); Jackson Law Office, P.C. v. Chappell, 37 S.W.3d 15 (Tex. App. 2000) (no recovery, under debt collection or UDAP statutes, for mental anguish and related physical symptoms, where consumer alleged neither pecuniary loss, nor damage to credit reputation). See generally § 15.2.6, supra (recovery of emotional distress damages on various collection claims).

345 See, e.g., McCaig v. Wells Fargo Bank, 788 F.3d 463 (5th Cir. 2015) (Tex. law; affirming emotional distress damages of $75,000 per plaintiff for egregious mishandling of mortgage); Crider v. Pacific Acquisitions & Assoc., 2015 WL 6689391 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 3, 2015) (FDCPA and Rosenthal Act claims; $5000 emotional distress damages where conduct was such as would be expected to cause distress: repeated workplace calls, threats to visit workplace and contact supervisor); Campbell v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 616 S.W.2d 373 (Tex. App. 1981) (physical injury unnecessary to recover for emotional distress caused by violation).

346 See, e.g., Branco v. Credit Collection Services, Inc., 2011 WL 3684503 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2011) (plaintiff seeking emotional distress damages under state debt collection law must establish elements of intentional infliction of emotional distress). See also Sherrell v. L&P Fin. Adjusters, Inc., 2018 WL 3753359 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 8, 2018) (emotional distress will support claim for actual damages only if distress is severe; not shown here where distress resulted from single collection letter). See generally § 15.2, supra.

347 See, e.g., Fausto v. Credigy Services Corp., 598 F. Supp. 2d 1049 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 17, 2009) (emotional distress damages need not meet criteria for intentional infliction of emotional distress; may be shown by medical or non-expert testimony, corroboration not needed if "circumstances make it obvious that a reasonable person would suffer significant emotional harm").

348 Ross v. Fed. Deposit Ins. Corp., 625 F.3d 808 (4th Cir. 2010) (affirming summary judgment for defendant on North Carolina debt collection act claim because consumer failed to establish that debt collection harassment was proximate cause of her emotional distress); Fisher v. Am. Gen. Fin. Co., 2002 WL 31760189 (4th Cir. Dec. 11, 2002) (denying claim under West Virginia debt collection statute because consumer failed to show that emotional distress was caused by violation); Searcy v. Citimortgage, Inc., 733 Fed. Appx. 735 (5th Cir. Apr. 25, 2018) (Tex. law; denying emotional distress damages because borrowers did not show that cause of their emotional distress was letter that falsely stated that no foreclosure sale would occur for 30 days, as opposed to foreclosure itself); Ugarte v. Sunset Constr., Inc., 2008 WL 4723600 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 21, 2008) (denying emotional distress damages; consumer was being treated for depression and failed to show that debt collection misconduct worsened her condition); Ross v. Washington Mut. Bank, 566 F. Supp. 2d 468 (E.D.N.C. 2008) (debt collection harassment not shown to be proximate cause of emotional distress and physical symptoms where debtor had other serious problems during relevant period).

349 Heib v. Arches Fin., 2008 WL 4601602 (E.D. Wash. Oct. 14, 2008) ($1000 statutory damages against both collector and law firm); McGraw v. Discover Fin. Services, 2005 WL 1785259 (S.D. W. Va. July 26, 2005) (West Virginia debt collection statutory penalties of $100 to $1000 adjusted for inflation; $300 to $3700 in 2005); In re Machnic, 271 B.R. 789 (Bankr. S.D. W. Va. 2002) (awarding statutory damages); Harris v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 338 So. 2d 196 (Fla. 1976) (statutory damages do not violate Fourteenth Amendment proscription against taking property without due process, by analogy to liquidated damages); Monahan Loan Services, Inc. v. Janssen, 349 N.W.2d 752 (Iowa 1984) (construing cross-references in debt collection practices law to allow statutory damages for any prohibited act, here venue abuse). Cf. Harrington v. Nat'l Enter. Sys., Inc., 2010 WL 890176 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 9, 2010) (Texas debt collection act authorizes statutory damages only for failure to register, refusing to correct inaccuracies in credit file, or threat of false reporting; not shown here).

350 Barnett v. Creditors' Specialty Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 1629090 (W.D.N.C. Apr. 16, 2013) (awarding statutory damages even though consumer failed to prove actual damages); Townsend v. Nat'l Arbitration Forum,

Other state debt collection statutes, however, require a showing of actual injury or damages as a precondition of any action, whether for statutory damages or otherwise.[351]

Courts may be willing to award both FDCPA statutory damages and statutory damages under a state debt collection statute for the same acts.[352] However, some state debt collection statutes allow statutory damages only if the consumer does not recover statutory damages under the FDCPA.[353]

Inc., 2012 WL 12736, at *9–10 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 4, 2012); Carrigan v. Cent. Adjustment Bureau, 502 F. Supp. 468 (N.D. Ga. 1980) (awarding $500 minimum statutory damages in absence of actual damage); Dattilio v. HSBC Bank, 2012 WL 695458 (Conn. Super. Ct. Feb. 1, 2012) (need not show actual damages; must show "harm," but annoyance, worry, etc. are sufficient); Laughlin v. Household Bank, Ltd., 969 So. 2d 509 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2007) (if violations of statute shown, actual damages not required); Tester v. Nat'l Credit Exch., Inc., 299 So. 2d 46 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1974) (no allegation of actual damage necessary to state cause of action); Pub. Fin. Co. v. Van Blaricome, 324 N.W.2d 716 (Iowa 1982) (actual damages not prerequisite to statutory damages); Simmons v. Kross, Lieberman & Stone, Inc., 746 S.E.2d 311 (N.C. Ct. App. 2013) (actual damages not required for statutory damages pursuant to collection agency act; distinguishing cases imposing this requirement for debt collection act claim); Marauder Corp. v. Beall, 301 S.W.3d 817 (Tex. App. 2009) (consumer was successful, and thus entitled to statutory damages, where she obtained injunction against collector, but failed to show actual damages); Vanderbilt Mortgage & Fin. Co. v. Cole, 740 S.E.2d 562 (W. Va. 2013) (actual damages not required for award of statutory damages pursuant to WVCCPA).

351 Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 789 F.3d 168 (3d Cir. 2015) (because violations of Pennsylvania Fair Credit Extension Uniformity Act are remedied by action pursuant to UDAP statute, plaintiff must satisfy UDAP requirements, including showing of ascertainable loss); Whatley v. AHF Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2012 WL 7159707 (E.D. Tex. Dec. 17, 2012) (must show actual damages resulting from the violation), adopted in part by 2013 WL 617050 (E.D. Tex. Feb. 19, 2013); In re McCrary, 2011 WL 3566279 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 15, 2011) (remanding to Bankruptcy Court to determine whether consumers suffered damages from false statements that violated Michigan Collection Practices Act); Hauk v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 749 F. Supp. 2d 358 (D. Md. 2010) (damaged credit, emotional distress, and attorney fees incurred by defendants to defend collection suits wrongfully filed by unlicensed collector are sufficient damage to support Maryland Debt Collection Act and UDAP claims); Johnson v. MBNA Am. Bank, 2006 WL 618077 (M.D.N.C. Mar. 9, 2006) (damaged credit and emotional distress sufficient to show actual damages); Davis v. Suran, 1998 WL 378420 (N.D. Ill. July 1, 1998) (pleading nominal damages of $1 per letter does not satisfy state debt collection statute's requirement of actual damages); Trull v. G.C. Services, Inc., 961 F. Supp. 1199 (N.D. Ill. 1997) (Illinois Collection Agency Act requires showing of actual damages); Borysewicz v. Target Nat'l Bank, 2011 WL 6989859 (Conn. Super. Ct. Dec. 15, 2011) (interpreting "harm" in state debt collection statute to require more than deprivation of a right); Williams v. HomeEq Servicing Corp., 646 S.E.2d 381 (N.C. Ct. App. 2007) (allegations of emotional distress sufficient to meet injury requirement for debt collection act claim); Davis Lake Cmty. Ass'n v. Feldmann, 530 S.E.2d 865 (N.C. Ct. App. 2000) (emotional distress and injury to credit rating satisfy requirement); Creditors Protective Ass'n v. Britt, 648 P.2d 414 (Or. Ct. App. 1982) (emotional distress was injury sufficient to sustain award of statutory damages); Elston v. Resolution Services, Inc., 950 S.W.2d 180 (Tex. App. 1997) (proof of actual damages is prerequisite to recovery of statutory damages); Rusk County Elec. Co-op., Inc. v. Flanagan, 538 S.W.2d 498 (Tex. App. 1976); Hilke v. Short, 343 N.W.2d 829 (Wis. Ct. App. 1983) (absence of proof of pecuniary or emotional injury requires dismissal of claim for statutory damages under debt collection provisions of Wisconsin Consumer Act). See generally § 16.3.8, infra (similar requirements under state UDAP statutes).

352 See, e.g., Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055 (9th Cir. 2011) (where collector's deceptive letter violated both FDCPA and California's Rosenthal Act, statutory damages could be awarded pursuant to each act); Waddell v. Capital Accounts, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5792865 (W.D. W. Va. Nov. 5, 2019) (consumer who recovered under FDCPA may also recover under West Virginia statute that allows statutory damages for each violation); Leto v. World Recovery Serv., L.L.C., 2015 WL 1897060 (W.D.N.C. Apr. 27, 2015) (awarding $1000 FDCPA damages and $1000 per violation in North Carolina Debt Collection Act damages for attempts to collect discharged debt); Barnett v. Creditors' Specialty Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 1629090 (W.D.N.C. Apr. 16, 2013) (awarding statutory damages under both FDCPA and North Carolina debt collection statute for same acts); Gamboa v. Carruthers, 2010 WL 4823671 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 19, 2010) (awarding maximum statutory damages pursuant to FDCPA and Florida statute; $1000 per statute for deceptive and harassing collection letters); Silva v. Jason Head, P.L.C., 2010 WL 4593704 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 4, 2010) (where conduct violates both FDCPA and Rosenthal Act, consumer may recover one award of up to $1000 statutory damages under each act); Ugarte v. Sunset Constr., Inc., 2008 WL 4723600 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 21, 2008) (awarding statutory damages under both FDCPA and Florida statute, where collector's demand for attorney fees to which it was not entitled violated both statutes); Clark v. Universal Debt Solutions, Inc., 2007 WL 2386581 (D. Haw. Aug. 16, 2007) (statutory damages pursuant to both FDCPA and state statute, in addition to actual damages); In re Baie, 2011 WL 1257148 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. Mar. 30, 2011) (awarding $2000 per violation of North Carolina debt collection act, plus $1000 statutory and $10,000 actual damages for FDCPA violation against collector who impersonated county law enforcement officer and made harassing calls). Cf. Hunter v. Oasis Fin. Solutions, L.L.C., 2010 WL 6210035 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 21, 2010) (award of maximum statutory damages under both FDCPA and Rosenthal Act not double recovery, where collector violated provisions of Rosenthal Act not found in FDCPA), adopted, 2011 WL 997375 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 21, 2011). But see Napier v. Titan Mgmt. Services, 2008 WL 2949274 (N.D. Cal. July 25, 2008) (provision of Rosenthal Act making FDCPA violation per se violation does not entitle consumer to second award of statutory damages for FDCPA violation; consumer also failed to show that collector knew she was older consumer, so damages not multiplied pursuant to Cal. Civ. Code § 3345(b)). But cf. Abby v. Paige, 2013 WL 141145, at *10 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 11, 2013) (declining to make a second award of "additional damages" under state debt collection law), aff'd, 553 Fed. Appx. 970 (11th Cir. 2014).

353 COLORADO: Colo. Rev. Stat. § 5-16-113(7). See Georgopulous v. PPM Capital, Inc., 2019 WL 6065617 (D. Colo. Oct. 21, 2019) (Colorado statute forbids recovery by consumer who has recovered on "like claims" under FDCPA; denying recovery where state and federal claims relied on same facts), adopted, 2019 WL 6053333 (D. Colo. Nov. 15, 2019); Artesaga v. Vero Beach Fin. Group, Inc., 2015 WL 3799579 (D. Colo. June 17, 2015) (awarding statutory damages pursuant to both FDCPA and certain provisions of Colorado statute was permissible because FDCPA has no provisions analogous to Colorado provisions); Peterson-Hooks v. First Integral Recovery, Inc., 2013 WL 2295449 (D. Colo. May 24, 2013) (Colorado debt collection act forbids recovery if debtor has already recovered pursuant to "like provisions" of FDCPA, but debtor who shows violation of non-overlapping provisions may recover statutory damages under both).

PENNSYLVANIA: Pa. Stat. tit. 73, § 2270.5 (remedies under FDCPA and state debt collection statute are not cumulative).

WISCONSIN: Assoc. Fin. Serv. Co. of Wis. v. Hornik, 336 N.W.2d 395, 400 (Wis. 1983) (interpreting Wisconsin Consumer Act, which

In some states, statutory damages may be awarded per violation.[354] Some Florida decisions adopt this position,[355] but others disagree.[356] Often the court has discretion to select the appropriate amount of statutory damages within a range.[357] Some indicia of wrongdoing, such as knowledge or willfulness, may be required.[358]

16.2.5.2.3 Punitive damages

Some debt collection statutes authorize punitive damages.[359] These statutes may be interpreted to require the elements necessary to establish punitive damages under the common law.[360] When debt collection statutes are silent about the availability of punitive damages, some courts look to common law to determine whether punitive damages are available.[361] includes the debt collection statute, not to allow statutory damages under both state debt collection statute and FDCPA).

354 See, e.g., Leto v. World Recovery Serv., L.L.C., 2015 WL 1897060 (W.D.N.C. Apr. 27, 2015); Clements v. HSBC Auto Fin., Inc., 2011 WL 2976558 (S.D. W. Va. July 21, 2011) ($204,000 penalties for over 800 autodialed calls); Clements v. HSBC Auto Fin., Inc., 2010 WL 4281697 (S.D. W. Va. Oct. 19, 2010) (statute allows statutory penalty for each violation; question whether this could add up to unconstitutionally excessive amount not ripe for decision); Stover v. Fingerhut Direct Mktg., Inc., 2010 WL 1050426 (W.D. W. Va. Mar. 17, 2010) (statute allows one penalty for each violation); Maxwell v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2009 WL 3293871 (S.D. W. Va. Oct. 9, 2009) (one penalty per act); Gilroy v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 632 F. Supp. 2d 132 (D.N.H. 2009) (awarding $200 statutory damages for each of 200 harassing late-evening calls to older debtor), later decision at 2009 WL 2169858 (D.N.H. July 21, 2009) (denying creditor's motion for new trial). Cf. Knott v. HSBC Card Services, Inc., 2010 WL 3522105 (N.D. W. Va. Sept. 8, 2010) (one penalty per act, even if it violates more than one section of statute); Lowe v. Elite Recovery Solutions, L.L.P., 2008 WL 324777 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 5, 2008) (FDCPA allows only one award of statutory damages per action, but Rosenthal act allows damages against "any debt collector"; awarding $1000 Rosenthal Act statutory damages against each defendant). But see Marseglia v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 750 F. Supp. 2d 1171 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (denying per-violation statutory damages; reading FDCPA restriction on multiple statutory damages (discussed in § 11.9.8.3, supra) into California debt collection statute; ignoring provision of Cal. Civ. Code § 1788.32 that state remedies are cumulative and in addition to remedies under other laws); Pub. Fin. Co. v. Van Blaricome, 324 N.W.2d 716 (Iowa 1982) (statutory damages are limited to one recovery per action); Assoc. Fin. Services Co. v. Hornik, 336 N.W.2d 395 (Wis. Ct. App. 1983) (stating in dicta that statutory damages limited to one award per suit).

355 Lehr v. Secure Capital Mgmt., Inc., 2014 WL 5810487 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 7, 2014) (awarding $5000 statutory damages, $1000 for violation of each of five sections of Florida debt collection statute).

356 Arianas v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 54 F. Supp. 3d 1308 (M.D. Fla. 2014) ($1000 per action, not per violation); Tacoronte v. Tate & Kirlin Assoc., 2013 WL 5970720 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 8, 2013) ($1000 per action); Peters v. Collision Clinics Int'l, Inc., 404 So. 2d 116 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1981) (statute does not authorize multiple statutory damages for multiple violations).

357 See, e.g., McKibben v. Collection Prof'l Services, 2010 WL 2025319 (E.D. Cal. May 18, 2010) (maximum statutory damages not appropriate where some claims failed, and conduct not egregious; awarding $400 for FDCPA and $400 for Rosenthal Act violation); Rodriquez v. Florida First Fin. Group, Inc., 2009 WL 535980 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 3, 2009) (awarding maximum statutory damages $1000 for FDCPA plus $1000 for Florida Creditors Collection Practices Act violations against collector with history of similar misconduct).

358 See, e.g., Molina v. Creditors Specialty Services, Inc., 2010 WL 235042 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 21, 2010) (must show willful and knowing violation; here, awarding maximum $1000 statutory damages for harassing calls and false threats).

359 Goodin v. Bank of Am., 114 F. Supp. 3d 1197 (M.D. Fla. 2015) (affirming $100,000 punitive damages where bank stonewalled attempts to correct problem, and its lack of procedure for bankruptcy matters led to filing of foreclosure at time when it knew that the necessary funds were in the court registry and would be paid as soon as it filed a form); Rodriquez v. Florida First Fin. Group, Inc., 2009 WL 535980 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 3, 2009) ($2500 punitive damages for willful and malicious false threats by collector with history of similar misconduct); Adams v. A & S Collection Assoc., Inc., 2007 WL 2206936 (D. Conn. July 30, 2007) (awarding $10,000 punitive damages against collector who tried to evade restriction on fees added by collector by contractually requiring creditor to add 49% collection fee and 18% interest to accounts sent for collection); Montgomery v. Florida First Fin. Group, Inc., 2008 WL 3540374 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 12, 2008) ($1000 punitive damages for false threats of arrest by collector who had history of prior misconduct); Lauderback v. Master Collectors, Inc., 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21817 (D. Or. Oct. 22, 1991) (upholding constitutionality of Oregon punitive damage provision); Waterfield Mortg. Co. v. Rodriguez, 929 S.W.2d 641 (Tex. App. 1996) (upholding punitive damages of $15,000 where lender violated Texas debt collection statute by foreclosing and selling family home despite full tender of arrearage on loan). But see Varnardo v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 43 F. Supp. 2d 985 (N.D. Cal. 2014) (finding punitive damages unavailable under Rosenthal Act); Bruesewitz v. Law Offices of Gerald Moore & Assoc., 2006 WL 3337361 (W.D. Wis. Nov. 15, 2006) (punitive damages not available for violation of debt collection provisions of Wisconsin Consumer Act); Cilento v. B.I. Credit Co., 424 F. Supp. 1 (D. Md. 1977) (statutory provision for "damages proximately caused" does not permit punitive damages).

360 See, e.g., Van Westrienen v. Americontinental Collection Corp., 94 F. Supp. 2d 1087, 1108 (D. Or. 2000) (looking to general punitive damages statute where debt collection statute authorized punitive damages, but was silent about standards; collector's deceptive website, other misrepresentations, and obnoxious debt collection style were sufficient to require submission of punitive damages issue to jury). See also Ugarte v. Sunset Constr., Inc., 2008 WL 4723600 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 21, 2008) (denying punitive damages because malicious intent not shown; creditor demanded attorney fees in mistaken belief that debt was commercial, and failed to withdraw demand upon learning it was consumer); Barker v. Tomlinson, 2006 WL 1679645 (M.D. Fla. June 7, 2006) (punitive damages may be awarded under debt collection statute if conduct is wanton, malicious, or gross and outrageous; affirming $10,000 award where collector misrepresented self as pre-trial diversion program and claimed to have arrest warrant); Tallahassee Title Co. v. Dean, 411 So. 2d 204 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1982) (required malice not shown); Story v. J.M. Fields, Inc., 343 So. 2d 675 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1977) (repeated telephone calls did not support punitive damages if language was not invective); Steiner & Munach, P.A. v. Williams, 334 So. 2d 39 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1976) (reversing $12,000 punitive damages verdict because evidence failed to show wanton, malicious, gross, or outrageous conduct). Cf. Wilson v. Edenfield, 968 F. Supp. 681 (M.D. Fla. 1997) (claim for punitive damages under state debt collection statute may be filed only with leave of court after finding reasonable basis for claim). See generally Appx. D, infra.

361 Gunkel v. Secure One, Inc., 2006 WL 3524479 (E.D. Tenn. Dec. 6, 2006) (allowing claim for punitive damages to go forward; reasonable jury could find reckless conduct if seller overcharged consumer

Courts may decline to award punitive damages against a corporation for its employee's acts unless the plaintiff shows authorization, recklessness, or ratification by the corporation, or shows that the employee was a manager and was acting within the scope of their employment.[362] There are constitutional limits on the amount of a punitive damage award, and a number of states have enacted statutory limits.[363]

16.2.5.2.4 Attorney fees

Some collection statutes provide for an award of the consumer's attorney fees in order to make assertion of claims under the statute economically feasible.[364] However, some of these statutes, unlike the FDCPA, provide for fee awards to the prevailing party, which could be either the consumer or the debt collector.[365]

16.2.5.2.5 Other relief under state debt collection statutes

Injunctive and declaratory relief may be available under state debt collection statutes.[366] Washington's Collection Agency Act provides that a licensee that commits one of the practices prohibited by the statute is forever barred from recovering any interest, fees, or other charges on the claim, but is limited to the amount of the original claim.[367] Class actions are typically allowed.[368] Courts may impose individual liability on collection agency employees who participate in a violation[369] then hired collector); Sherman v. Field Clinic & Collection Accounts Terminal, 392 N.E.2d 154 (Ill. App. Ct. 1979).

362 Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002), vacated on other grounds, 2003 Tex. LEXIS 50 (Apr. 24, 2003) (vacating decision pursuant to parties' settlement). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Automobile Fraud § 8.10.5 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

363 See, e.g., Lithia Medford LM, Inc. v. Yovan, 295 P.3d 642 (Or. Ct. App. 2012) (reversing order of remittitur; $100,000 punitive damages in case with $500 actual damages is not unconstitutionally excessive in light of defendant car dealer's reprehensible debt collection acts, consumer's financial vulnerability, defendant's ability to pay, and the need for deterrence). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Automobile Fraud §§ 8.10.6, 8.11 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

364 See McCaig v. Wells Fargo Bank, 788 F.3d 463 (5th Cir. 2015) (Tex. law; affirming award of $156,725 in attorney fees); Panahiasl v. Gurney, 2007 WL 738642 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 8, 2007) (awarding costs and attorney fees pursuant to state and federal debt collection statutes); Thompson v. CIT Group/Consumer Fin., Inc., 2005 WL 2562606 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 11, 2005) (applying federal lodestar analysis to fees under Florida act); Hartman v. Meridian Fin. Services, 191 F. Supp. 2d 1031, 1050–1051 (W.D. Wis. 2002) (costs and attorney fees available under Wisconsin Consumer Act); Akins v. Enterprise Rent-A-Car Co., 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448 (Cal. Ct. App. 2000) (where plaintiff prevailed on one state debt collection claim and on related tort claim, but lost on another state debt collection claim, trial court acted within its discretion in awarding fees without requiring counsel to allocate time among various claims); Conley v. Greenwood Trust Co., 923 P.2d 307 (Colo. App. 1996) (consumer could recover attorney fees under Colorado U.C.C.C. provision forbidding unconscionable debt collection conduct); Salzgeber, D.D.S., P.A. v. Kelly, 826 So. 2d 366 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2002) (upholding attorney fee award in Florida Collection Act case based on lodestar that exceeded 40% cap in contingent fee agreement between consumer and lawyer where it is "public policy enforcement" case); City Fin. Co. v. Boykin, 358 S.E.2d 83 (N.C. Ct. App. 1987) (attorney fees should be awarded to consumer for defending against creditor claims in order to protect consumer's judgment under statute for $500 damages and $850 attorney fees); Marauder Corp. v. Beall, 301 S.W.3d 817 (Tex. App. 2009) (consumer was successful, and entitled to attorney fees, where she obtained injunction against unbonded collector, even though she failed to show actual damages); Monroe v. Frank, 936 S.W.2d 654 (Tex. App. 1996) (consumer could recover attorney fees under Texas debt collection act); Vanderbilt Mortgage & Fin. Co. v. Cole, 740 S.E.2d 562 (W. Va. 2013) (awarding prevailing party attorney fees, but reducing lodestar amount, where mobile home borrower prevailed on debt collection claims but lost eviction action); Cmty. Credit Plan, Inc. v. Johnson, 586 N.W.2d 77 (Wis. Ct. App. 1998) (consumers were prevailing parties and entitled to fees under Wisconsin Consumer Act where creditor voluntarily dismissed replevin actions after they sued to reopen default judgments). But cf. Barnett v. Creditors' Specialty Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 1629090 (W.D.N.C. Apr. 16, 2013) (must show actual damages in order to obtain attorney fees for violation of North Carolina collection agency statute). See generally Appx. D, infra.

365 See Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, 2006 WL 2460796 (9th Cir. Aug. 24, 2006) (Or. law; affirming denial of attorney fees; court below sufficiently discussed statutory criteria); Alcorn v. Perry, 2018 WL 1788075 (D. Or. Mar. 12, 2018) (Oregon statute makes prevailing party fees discretionary; declining to award fees against unsuccessful consumer because claims were neither bad faith nor meritless, and fee award could discourage bringing of valid claims), adopted, 2019 WL 1786813 (D. Or. Apr. 13, 2018); Sanchez v. Thomas, Thomas, Wichterman & Assoc., L.L.C., 2012 WL 683532 (D. Colo. Mar. 2, 2012) (noting that consumer may have abandoned state debt collection act claim, leaving only FDCPA claim, in order to avoid risk of "prevailing party" fees, but declining to condition abandonment on payment of defense fees incurred to date); Thomas v. U.S. Bank, 2008 WL 974734 (D. Or. Apr. 8, 2008) (award of prevailing party fees discretionary; awarding defense fees under both state debt collection statute and UDAP statute where consumer's claim "objectively unreasonable"; UDAP statute has since been amended to allow fees to prevailing defendant only if suit was objectively unreasonable), aff'd, 325 Fed. Appx. 592 (9th Cir. 2009); Hooper v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc., 2005 WL 2297062 (D. Or. Sept. 20, 2005) (unsuccessful claim against collector's employee was "objectively reasonable," and award of attorney fees could discourage assertion of good faith claims). See also § 16.2.5.3, infra (defense fees for frivolous claims).

366 See § 16.7, infra.

367 Wash. Rev. Code § 19.16.450.

368 See, e.g., Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055 (9th Cir. 2011) (amendment to Rosenthal act, § 1788.18, making collectors subject to remedies of § 1692k of FDCPA, authorizes class actions); Jordan v. Commonwealth Fin. Sys., Inc., 237 F.R.D. 132 (E.D. Pa. 2006) (certifying class for FDCPA and state debt collection act claims arising from collection letters); Fuller v. Becker & Poliakoff, P.A. 197 F.R.D. 697 (M.D. Fla. 2000) (allowing class action under FDCPA and Florida Consumer Collection Practices Act to go forward, with allegations that collector threatened lawsuit, attorney fees, and costs, which were neither intended nor legally possible); Tenuto v. Transworld Sys., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14344 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 29, 2000) (splitting class action into subclasses; subclass members who received letters within four years have claims under Pennsylvania statute, even though FDCPA claims are time-barred).

369 See, e.g., Henggeler v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 2012 WL 2855104 (D. Neb. July 5, 2012) (state debt collection statute applies to attorneys who were actively involved in their firm's debt collection activities); Weakley v. Redline Recovery Services, L.L.C., 723 F. Supp. 2d 1341 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (individual employees of collector, who made improper calls to workplace, were debt collectors subject to Rosenthal Act); Bray v. Cadle Co., 2010 WL 4053794 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 14, 2010) (employee of debt buyer, who actively participated in id on corporate officers, shareholders, or directors who par-ipate in the corporation's wrongdoing.[370]

Some courts hold that a consumer sued by a collector to cover a debt may assert as a defense the collector's failure to ıtain a required license.[371] In case of a willful violation of the est Virginia statute with respect to an unsecured debt, the urt may, in its discretion, cancel the debt.[372]

16.2.5.3 Defenses

Collectors may attempt to have a state debt collection practices claim dismissed by claiming that a judgment on the underlying debt is res judicata or that the debtor gave up their rights in a settlement agreement with the collector. Courts have usually rejected these arguments.[373] The fact that the underlying debt is valid is not a defense to a claim that the collector violated a state debt collection statute.[374] The economic loss rule does not bar claims under state debt collection statutes.[375]

Some state debt collection statutes require the consumer to prove that the violation was willful,[376] or allow collectors a "bona fide error" defense.[377] A 2010 U.S. Supreme Court debt collection, was third-party debt collector covered by Texas Debt Collection Act); Robinson v. Managed Accounts Receivable Corp., 654 F. Supp. 2d 1051, 1060 n.8 (C.D. Cal. 2009). See also Fuller v. Pac. Med. Collections, Inc., 891 P.2d 300 (Haw. Ct. App. 1995) (employees of collection agency may be liable under UDAP statute for violations of debt collection statute, depending on their level of personal involvement). But see Campion v. Credit Bureau Services, Inc., 2000 WL 33255504 (E.D. Wash. Sept. 19, 2000) (employees of licensed collector are exempt by statute).

) See, e.g., Commonwealth of Pa. by Shapiro v. Think Fin., Inc., 2019 WL 6217376 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 20, 2019) (individual principal who has some degree of control over collection activity can be liable under state debt collection statute); London v. Gums, 2014 WL 546914 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 10, 2014) (owners of creditor-bail bond company and collection agency liable for misconduct of their employees; but owner of creditor not liable for misconduct of collector's employees; good discussion of agency and vicarious liability). See, e.g., Alonso v. Blackstone Fin. Group, L.L.C., 962 F. Supp. 2d 1188 (E.D. Cal. 2013) (consumer stated claim against director who was actively involved in day-to-day operation of collection agency); Bray v. Cadle Co., 2010 WL 4053794 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 14, 2010) (owner of debt buyer, who actively participated in debt collection, was third party debt collector covered by Texas Debt Collection Act); Mejia v. Marauder Corp., 2007 WL 806486 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 15, 2007) (fact question whether officer/director of corporate debt collector was debt collector); Chan v. N. Am. Collectors, Inc., 2006 WL 778642 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 24, 2006) (allegation that individual defendants were joint venturers, officers, directors, or employees of collection agency and set, approved, or directed its practices sufficient to support vicarious liability); Blair v. Supportkids, Inc., 2003 WL 21799933 (N.D. Ill. July 25, 2003) (allowing claim to go forward against CEO and board chairman who personally participated in choosing deceptive company name, but not regarding simulated process, where no evidence that CEO wrote or caused use of deceptive forms). See also Fuller v. Pac. Med. Collections, Inc., 891 P.2d 300 (Haw. Ct. App. 1995) (officers of collection agency may be liable under UDAP statute for violations of debt collection statute, depending on their level of personal involvement). But cf. Semper v. JBC Legal Group, 2005 WL 2172377 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 6, 2005) (corporate officer not involved in collection activities not liable for corporation's violations of Washington collection agency statute).

See § 7.2.5, 16.2.4.5, supra; National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 3 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Credit Regulation § 7.8.5 (3d ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (remedies for creditor's nonlicensure).

W. Va. Code § 46A-5-105. See Bailey v. Branch Banking and Trust Co., 2011 WL 2517253 (S.D. W. Va. June 23, 2011) (denying creditor's counterclaim for the amount of the debt, because debt may be voided if consumer prevails on claims alleging willful violation); CashCall, Inc. v. Morrisey, 2014 WL 2404300, at *10 (W. Va. May 30, 2014) (unpublished) (affirming cancellation of debtors' unsecured debts where creditor engaged in debt collection harassment). But cf. Biser v. Manufacturers' & Traders Trust Co., 211 F. Supp. 3d 845 (S.D. W. Va. Sept. 29, 2016) (provision allowing cancellation of debt for willful violation makes exception for debt secured by security interest, here real estate mortgage); Pannell v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3361984 (S.D. W. Va. July 18 2014) (provision authorizing loan cancellation does not apply to secured debts).

373 Sprinkle v. SB&C Ltd., 472 F. Supp. 2d 1235 (W.D. Wash. 2006) (state action, which held military pay not automatically exempt under Washington law, not res judicata or claim preclusion as to claims that creditor's violation of Servicemembers Civil Relief Act violated FDCPA, Washington Collection Agency Act, and UDAP statute); Cameron v. Safeway Fin. Corp., Clearinghouse No. 36,953 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1984) (debtor's claim under state debt collection practices statute not barred by res judicata after default in debt action); Wagner v. Strickland, 908 So. 2d 549 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2005) (state debt collection statute claim and common law tort claims not compulsory counterclaims in action to collect debt, so not barred by res judicata). See also Wiginton v. Pac. Credit Corp., 634 P.2d 111 (Haw. Ct. App. 1981) (question of fact whether release of creditor and its assigns released assignee collection agency). But see Green v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 828 A.2d 821 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 2003) (consent judgment in deficiency action was res judicata as to common law and statutory claims arising from repossession and sale procedure, as these were compulsory counterclaims). But cf. Pederson v. Allied Credit Cos., 2002 WL 1732572 (Wash. Ct. App. July 26, 2002) (res judicata barred Wash. UDAP and collection agency act claims that attacked fees awarded in prior state judgment on underlying check). See generally § 12.6, supra.

374 Cooke v. Carrington Mortg. Services, 2019 WL 3241128, at *6 (D. Md. July 18, 2019).

375 McCaig v. Wells Fargo Bank, 788 F.3d 463, 474–475 (5th Cir. 2015) (Tex. law).

376 See, e.g., Baylor v. Mitchell, Rubenstein & Assoc., 857 F.3d 939 (D.D.C. 2017) (concluding that collector's acts did not meet willfulness requirement of D.C. collection practices law).

377 See Marchisio v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 919 F.3d 1288 (11th Cir. 2019) (Fla. law; two-step procedure: has collector actually implemented a procedure to avoid errors, and is it reasonably adapted to avoid the specific error at issue; fact question here whether procedures were reasonably adapted); Soria v. U.S. Bank, 2019 WL 8167925, at *11 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 25, 2019) (sheer number of calls, 232 over seven-month period, suggests lack of a reasonable procedure to avoid harassment); Adkins v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2019 WL 1562124 (S.D. W. Va. Apr. 10, 2019) (unintentional error defense fails where debt buyer's legal department knew of legislative change requiring specific language about time-barred debts, but failed to adequately communicate with marketing; even if mistake was unintentional, procedure to avoid errors was inadequate); Grey v. Suttell & Assoc., 2019 WL 96225 (E.D. Wash. Jan. 3, 2019) (good faith defense protects unlicensed debt collector, because application of the statute to passive debt buyers was unclear); In re Thomas, 2018 WL 4323927 (S.D. W. Va. Sept. 10, 2018) (construing West Virginia's unintentional mistake defense and requirement for procedure to avoid error to require same showing as FDCPA bona fide error defense; defense fails because defendant produced no evidence of procedure to avoid errors); Bell v. Northland Group, 2018 WL 1792368 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 16, 2018) (denying summary judgment; fact issue whether collector who relied on incorrect information from creditor failed to implement a procedure designed to prevent a violation); Currier v. PDL Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 712887 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 23, 2017) (fact issue as to adequacy of error-prevention procedures); Frankowski v. Nathanson, 2016 WL 7337247 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 19, 2016) (fact issue whether collection firm had adequate procedures to prevent error, here premature filing of lawsuit during grace period provided by bad check law); Long v. Nationwide Legal File and Serve, Inc., 2013 WL 5219053 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 17, 2013) (general quality control not enough; defendant fails to allege any system to prevent error alleged here—deliberate falsification by its process server); Ansari v. Elec. Document Processing, Inc., 2013 WL 4547621 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 29, 2013) (bona fide error defense not sufficiently alleged; failed to show procedure designed to prevent the specific kind of error alleged here: deliberate falsification by process server); Basich v. Patenaude & Felix, APC, 2013 WL 1755484 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 24, 2013) (fact issue as to bona fide error defense; law firm levied bank account of non-debtor with same first name and SSN that differed by one digit from that of judgment debtor, after skip-tracing service concluded that her name was judgment debtor's alias); Pasquale v. Law Offices of Nelson and Kennard, 940 F. Supp. 2d 1151 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 15, 2013) (bona fide error shown; detailed description of training, testing, scripts and supervision); Fini v. Dish Network, L.L.C., 955 F. Supp. 2d 1288 (M.D. Fla. 2013) (fact issue whether creditor had procedure to prevent the specific error alleged here—calls to non-debtor resulting from debtor's provision of wrong number to creditor); Santos v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2012 WL 3985527 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 11, 2012) (no bona fide error, where law firm offered no explanation of how it obtained default judgment, with bank account execution and wage garnishment, at a time when it had agreed to payment plan and debtor was current); Walter v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1666869 (E.D. Pa. May 2, 2011) (fact issue whether dunning cardholder's spouse was bona fide error), order entered by 2011 WL 1694432 (E.D. Pa. May 2, 2011); Liu v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2010 WL 1994190 S.D. Tex. May 17, 2010) (debt buyer failed to inform counsel when it learned that debt was result of identity theft; issues whether error was clerical, and whether error prevention procedure was adequate); Clements v. HSBC Auto Fin., Inc., 2010 WL 4281697 (S.D. W. Va. Oct. 19, 2010) (bona fide error defense fails; no showing of procedure to catch problem, if person who takes contact information for debtor's attorney fails to pass it on to collector); MFP, Inc., 729 F Supp. 2d 1328 (M.D. Fla. 2010) (fact issues as to bona fide error, where creditor sent claim to collector after receiving notice of bankruptcy); Herkert v. MRC Receivables Corp., 655 F. Supp. 2d 870 (N.D. Ill. 2009) (declining to reach question whether error of law may be bona fide, because procedures to avoid filing of time-barred claims were inadequate); Berg v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore, L.L.C., 2009 WL 901011 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2009) (computer error resulted in confusing and inaccurate statements of amounts due, but defense fails because no showing of reasonable procedure to prevent error); Niven v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 2008 WL 4190961 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 10, 2008) (message left on office answering machine and picked up by debtor's assistant; fact issue as to bona fide error); Ruthenberg v. Bureaus, Inc., 2008 WL 3979507 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 25, 2008) (sending one non-abusive letter after request to cease communication on disputed debt was clerical error; no violation); Sigala v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2007 WL 642955 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 22, 2007) (bona fide error defense where collector had procedure to place hold on workplace calls if informed of rule forbidding them); Navarro v. Eskanos & Adler, 2007 WL 549904 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 20, 2007) (bona fide error sufficiently alleged where law firm sent one letter after consumer requested no further contact; had procedure to prevent this but someone erred); Krutchkoff v. Fleet Bank, 960 F. Supp. 541 (D. Conn. 1996) (no violation where innocent clerical errors were corrected and caused no damage); Chrysler Fin. Co. v. Bergstrom, 703 N.W.2d 415 (Iowa 2005) (using postal service directory reasonably adapted to avoid suing in wrong county); CA Partners v. Spears, 274 S.W.3d 51 (Tex. App. 2008) (bona fide error not shown; no procedure to prevent errors, and experienced debt buyer should have known that real estate foreclosure did not give rights to personal property); Cent. Adjustment Bureau Inc. v. Gonzalez, 528 S.W.2d 314 (Tex. App. 1975) (collection agencies' multiple attempts to collect debt from wrong person not clearly bona fide error). Cf. Kett v. Cmty. Credit Plan, Inc., 596 N.W.2d 786 (Wis. 1999), aff'g 586 N.W.2d 68 (Wis. Ct. App. 1998) (rejecting creditor's argument, based on general principles rather than a statutory bona fide error defense, that employee's ignorance of venue requirements was a defense; company engaging in consumer credit transactions should be "intimately familiar" with them, and statute clearly placed risk of error on creditor). See generally § 12.2, supra (similar provision of FDCPA).

decision holds that the comparable bona fide error provision of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act does not excuse errors based on mistaken legal interpretations of the FDCPA.[378] Prior to the Supreme Court's ruling, some courts interpreted state debt collection statutes' bona fide error provisions to apply to errors of law,[379] but decisions after 2010 are likely to give weight to the Supreme Court's view. A state statute's "computation error" defense will protect only errors in calculating the amount of an authorized fee, not the charging of an unauthorized fee.[380]

California recognizes an unclean hands defense, allowing a creditor to defend on the grounds that consumer never intended to pay.[381] California also provides a safe harbor for collectors who correct an error within fifteen days of being notified.[382]

A few statutes allow the collector to recover its attorney fees from a consumer who brings a frivolous or ill-founded 378 Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich, L.P.A., 559 U.S. 573, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010). See §§ 12.2.2, 12.2.3, supra.

379 See, e.g., FIA Card Services v. Gachiengu, 571 F. Supp. 2d 799 (S.D. Tex. 2008) (bona fide error defense available where action was time-barred, but statute of limitations question was subject of split among federal circuits); Richburg v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 247 F.R.D. 457 (E.D. Pa. 2008) (bona fide error defense may apply to mistake of law; fact issue where law firm that developed fifty-state chart erred as to Pennsylvania statute of limitations). Cf. Herkert v. MRC Receivables Corp., 655 F. Supp. 2d 870 (N.D. Ill. 2009) (declining to reach question whether error of law may be bona fide, because procedures to avoid filing of time-barred claims were inadequate).

380 Pruden v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2014 WL 2142155 (D.N.H. May 23, 2014).

381 Cal. Civ. Code § 1788.30(g). See Mejia v. Marauder Corp., 2007 WL 806486 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 15, 2007) (unclean hands defense not shown; fact that consumer was heavily in debt when he filed bankruptcy seven months after payday loan not probative of his state of mind on date of loan).

382 Cal. Civ. Code § 1788.30(d). See Afewerki v. Anaya Law Group, 868 F.3d 771 (9th Cir. 2017) (defense is available where FDCPA violation is basis for Rosenthal Act claim; section making FDCPA violations per se Rosenthal Act violations did not eliminate this defense); Timlick v. Nat'l Enterprise Systems, Inc., 247 Cal. Rptr. 3d 575 (Cal. Ct. App. 2019) (this defense was not impliedly repealed by amendment making FDCPA remedies available for violations, and violation of type-size requirement was cured when collector sent revised collection letter within 15 days after complaint was served, but picking off named plaintiff this way does not defeat class action).

private action,[383] and some provide for prevailing party fees.[384] Some collection agencies carry insurance to protect themselves from liability.[385]

16.3 General State Consumer Protection Statutes Prohibiting Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices (UDAP)

16.3.1 Nature and Advantages of a UDAP Claim

Every state has passed at least one law protecting consumers from deceptive sales practices.[386] These statutes, most of which were passed in the late 1960s and early 1970s, are typically referred to as "Little FTC Acts," "Consumer Protection Acts," or "UDAP" (unfair and deceptive acts and practices) statutes. They are often interpreted to prohibit unfair or deceptive practices by debt collectors.

UDAP statutes offer various advantages over other debt collection claims. They generally cover creditors as well as collectors. Most have attractive remedies such as treble damages, statutory damages, and attorney fees. In addition, the state UDAP statute may include broader prohibitions against unfair and deceptive conduct than the state debt collection statute. Many offer a longer statute of limitations than the FDCPA.[387]

UDAP statutes usually have more relaxed proof requirements than tort claims. Although there are exceptions,[388] UDAP statutes generally do not require proof that the defendant acted knowingly or intentionally.[389]

On the other hand, the coverage of some UDAP statutes is patchy. Some exclude certain types of creditors such as banks or utility companies.[390] Some UDAP statutes also have special preconditions to suit or create special statutory defenses.[391]

Most UDAP statutes prohibit both deception and unfair or unconscionable practices.[392] However, a few prohibit only deceptive practices, so are not well-suited to challenge non-deceptive abuse such as telephone harassment and invasion of privacy.[393] Some states also require a showing that the consumer relied on the collector's wrongful acts,[394] a 383 See Lacayo v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2020 WL 2488377 (S.D. Fla. Apr. 13, 2020) (comparing FDCPA and Florida standards: denying FDCPA fees because defendant failed to show that consumers knew claims were frivolous or brought for purposes of harassment; denying Florida fees because court simply dismissed complaint as "shotgun pleading" without finding that claims failed to raise justiciable controversy), aff'd, ___ Fed. Appx. ___, 2021 WL 71791 (11th Cir. Jan. 8, 2021); Scroggin v. Credit Bur. of Jonesboro, Inc., 973 F. Supp. 2d 961 (E.D. Ark. 2013) (consumer who proved violations, but was awarded zero damages, was not prevailing party; awarding lodestar attorney fees for bad faith action, where consumer had boasted on the web how he set up collector and sought to maximize costs and attorney fees), aff'd, 576 Fed. Appx. 632 (8th Cir. 2014); Lee v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2013 WL 754053 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 27, 2013) (requiring pro se plaintiff to pay defense fees for bad faith debt collection claims), later decision 2013 WL 2151680 (S.D. Tex. May 16, 2013) (denying reconsideration and setting amount of fees); O'Connor v. Check Rite, 973 F. Supp. 1010 (D. Colo. 1997) (granting attorney fees to debt collector under Colorado debt collection law where consumer, an attorney, should have known his action was substantially frivolous and groundless); Kass Shuler, P.A. v. Borchard, 120 So. 3d 165 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2013) (affirming award of fees; unsuccessful FDCPA and FCCPA claims were unsupported in law and brought in bad faith for purpose of harassment). See also Perry v. Stewart Title Co., 761 F.2d 237 (5th Cir. 1985) (Tex. law; court should consider on remand whether it was inequitable or unreasonable for creditor to collect contractual attorney fees for defending statutory debt collection abuse claim). But cf. Kennedy v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2012 WL 4343295 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 20, 2012) (denying attorney fees for time-barred Rosenthal Act claim; bad faith not shown where consumer made reasonable argument for equitable estoppel); Wilson v. Transworld Sys., 2003 WL 21488206 (M.D. Fla. June 10, 2003) (denying attorney fees; summary judgment for defendant not sufficient to show that suit "failed to raise a justiciable issue of law or fact"); Lee v. Am. Agencies, 2013 WL 3353895 (Cal. Ct. App. July 2, 2013) (good faith standard is subjective; denying fees where debtor had at least one colorable claim); Heard v. Mathis, 344 So. 2d 651 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1977) (consumer's failure to prove one of three elements of statutory provision did not mean consumer's suit was ill-founded); Creditors Protective Ass'n v. Britt, 648 P.2d 414 (Or. Ct. App. 1982) (dismissed counterclaim not frivolous); Assoc. Fin. Services Co. v. Hornik, 336 N.W.2d 395 (Wis. Ct. App. 1983) (counterclaim and defense not frivolous where statute not extensively interpreted by courts). See generally § 12.10.1, supra.

384 See § 16.2.5.2.4, supra.

385 See § 2.8, supra.

386 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices Appx. A (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library (citing and summarizing each state's UDAP statute).

387 See § 16.1.1, supra. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

388 See, e.g., Goshon v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2016 WL 742873 (D. Kan. Feb. 24, 2016) (granting summary judgment for collector; no liability under Kan. UDAP statute, which court interprets as requiring "reason to know," where demand for amount not owed was a mistake), later op. at 2016 WL 1069048 (D. Kan. Mar. 17, 2016) (granting summary judgment to creditor on same ground).

389 National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 4.2.4, 4.2.5 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

390 See § 16.3.3.1, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 2.2.1, 2.3.2, 2.3.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

391 See § 16.3.8, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.4 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

392 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 4.2 to 4.4 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Protection in the States: A 50-State Evaluation of Unfair and Deceptive Practices Laws (Mar. 2018), available at www.nclc.org.

393 See, e.g., Mascoll v. Strumpf, 2006 WL 2795175 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 26, 2006) (UDAP statute confers private right of action for debt collection violations only where consumer was deceived; not shown here where creditor continued collection action after learning of identity theft).

394 See, e.g., Bainbridge v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1178047, at *22–24 (M.D. Pa. Mar. 30, 2017) (denying claim where consumers did not rely on collection attorney's false statement to court that they were delinquent); Ali v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 2017 WL 1163924 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 29, 2017) (justifiable reliance and ascertainable loss shown; various fees plus double payment of taxes and insurance after consumer acted in reliance on servicer's misstatements about modification); Hall v. Equifax Info. Services, 204 F. Supp. 3d showing that can be difficult when the gist of the claim is unfair practices.[395]

In a number of states, a violation of the FDCPA or a state debt collection statute is a per se violation of the UDAP statute.[396] However, state UDAP statutes can go beyond the FDCPA and prohibit acts that the federal statute does not.[397] At least two states have promulgated detailed debt collection regulations under their UDAP statutes, applicable to both creditors and collection agencies.[398]

A UDAP judgment for debt collection harassment may represent a "willful and malicious injury" that is nondischargeable in bankruptcy.[399]

16.3.2 Validity and Interpretation of State UDAP Statutes in the Debt Collection Context

Many courts have held that UDAP statutes do not unconstitutionally impinge on the First Amendment's protection of speech.[400] The Noerr-Pennington doctrine, which bars antitrust liability for petitions to the government, does not protect a collector from UDAP liability for unfair and deceptive prelitigation collection activity.[401]

In construing the scope, substantive prohibitions, and remedies of a UDAP statute, it is important to remember that UDAP statutes are to be liberally construed.[402] Decisions holding that debt collection abuses violate the FTC Act's prohibition of unfair or deceptive acts or practices[403] are particularly relevant to the interpretation of the substantive prohibitions of state UDAP statutes[404] and are cited throughout this chapter. The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's determinations that certain debt collection practices are unfair, deceptive, or abusive should be entitled to similar weight.[405]

16.3.3 UDAP Coverage of Debt Collection Activities

16.3.3.1 Generally

The typical UDAP statute has a broad initial scope section, covering "trade or commerce" or "consumer transactions," but then goes on to exempt certain sellers or types of transactions. Many UDAP statutes do not mention debt collection specifically, so courts must construe these general terms to determine whether debt collection is covered. If the UDAP statute in the debtor's home state does not cover the debt collection activity in question, the consumer should explore whether a claim can be made under the law of the collector's home state.[406]

Some UDAP statutes exempt heavily-regulated entities or certain acts by such entities.[407] A federal court held, however, that a collection agency's licensure was insufficient for it to fall within this exemption in Nebraska's UDAP statute.[408]

A UDAP statute's scope may exceed that of a state debt collection statute.[409] Unless one of the statutes explicitly provides to the contrary,[410] the existence of a state debt collection law does not prevent application of a more general UDAP statute to a collector.[411]

807 (E.D. Pa. 2016) (justifiable reliance and ascertainable loss shown; accident victim agreed to pay specified amount out of tort settlement; hospital accepted that amount then dunned and reported debt resulting in increased interest rates and costs to dispute debt with credit bureau). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2.12 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

395 See, e.g., Warren v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 693121 (W.D. Pa. Feb. 22, 2016) (severe harassment leading to serious health effects; claim fails because no showing of justifiable reliance).

396 See § 16.3.6, infra. See also National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 3.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

397 Harrington v. CACV of Colorado, L.L.C., 508 F. Supp. 2d 128, 137 (D. Mass. 2007); Hage v. Gen. Serv. Bureau, 2002 WL 1796575 (D. Neb. Aug. 5, 2002) (Neb. UDAP statute not inconsistent with FDCPA and not preempted). See also § 16.1.2, supra.

398 940 Mass. Code Regs. §§ 7.01 to 7.10 (1979); 3 Vt. Code R. § 3-2-103:CP 104 (comprehensive debt collection regulations, apparently modeled after National Consumer Law Center, Model Consumer Credit Act (1974)).

399 See, e.g., Siemer v. Nangle (In re Nangle), 274 F.3d 481 (8th Cir. 2001). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 18.5.4.2.1 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

400 National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.9.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

401 DirecTV, Inc. v. Cephas, 294 F. Supp. 2d 760 (M.D.N.C. 2003); Pepper v. Routh Crabtree, APC, 219 P.3d 1017 (Alaska 2009).

402 See, e.g., In re Western Acceptance Corp., 788 P.2d 214 (Idaho 1990). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 3.1.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

403 15 U.S.C. § 45(a)(1).

404 See, e.g., Gilmore v. Account Mgmt., Inc., 2009 WL 4826953 (11th Cir. Dec. 16, 2009).

405 See § 16.3.7, infra.

406 See § 16.3.3.5, infra.

407 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.3.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

408 Hage v. Gen. Serv. Bur., 306 F. Supp. 2d 883, 889 (D. Neb. 2003).

409 Magness v. Walled Lake Credit Bur., L.L.C., 2013 WL 1311093 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 1, 2013) (collection of debt that is outside state debt collection law's scope can violate state UDAP statute).

410 See, e.g., Johnson v. MBNA Am. Bank, 2006 WL 618077 (M.D.N.C. Mar. 9, 2006) (by statute, UDAP violations by debt collectors are limited to acts specified in debt collection statute); DirecTV, Inc. v. Cephas, 294 F. Supp. 2d 760 (M.D.N.C. 2003) (if state debt collection law covers activity then there is no separate UDAP liability).

411 Thomas v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2006 WL 2438346, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 17, 2006).

Collection Is in Trade or mmerce

. that cover "trade or commerce" are genercover debt collection.[412] Pennsylvania[413] and i have held that debt collection activities are nerce" even where this term is defined as the offering for sale, or distribution of services,
:r things of value. Courts have reached the same result in interpreting similar language in the Florida,[415] South Carolina,[416] and Connecticut[417] UDAP statutes.

16.3.3.3 Coverage Under Statutes Requiring a "Consumer Transaction" or Acts in Connection with the Sale of Merchandise

A number of UDAP statutes apply only to "consumer transactions"—typically defined as those for personal, family, or household use.[418] Many courts recognize that, as long as the underlying transaction is a "consumer transaction," the UDAP statute applies to all phases of the transaction, including collection.[419] Likewise, debt collection is in connection with the sale of merchandise where the underlying transaction arose from such a sale.[420] The Missouri Supreme Court holds that a loan transaction lasts until the last service is performed or the loan is paid off, so any misconduct that occurs in the course ese Law Group, 2010 WL 2698819 (W.D. Wash. July 7, atic inflation of garnishment fees is in trade or commerce it occurs in litigation); Hage v. Gen. Serv. Bur., 306 F.

. 889 (D. Neb. 2003) (holding that UDAP statute, which s "in the conduct of any trade or commerce," applies to on; rejecting argument that UDAP statute is limited to ations); Asch v. Teller, Levit & Silvertrust, P.C., 2003 WL
*6 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2003) (Ill. DTPA), Pabon v. Recko, 2d 311 (D. Conn. 2000) (creditor's collection of its own ade or commerce); Brown v. C.I.L., Inc., 1996 WL 164294
or. I. 1996); Russey v. Rankin, 911 F. Supp. 1449 (D.N.M. ring New Mexico UDAP statute, which has trade or comrement, to debt collection by third party); Wagner v. Am.
Corp., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10287 (D. Conn. Dec. 30, party collector covered even though debtor entered into ion with it); In re Scrimpsher, 17 B.R. 999 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. r's collection of bad check is part of its business, trade, or or furnishing of service); State v. O'Neill Investigations, 2d 520 (Alaska 1980) (state UDAP statute, which covers mmerce, applies to debt collection agencies despite another llection agency statute); In re Western Acceptance Corp., 14 (Idaho 1990) (third party collection of dishonored check ıy goods or services is in trade or commerce); People v.
Sys., Corp., 585 N.E.2d 51 (Ill. 1991) (private agency color government entity covered by UDAP statute); Davis
y. Ass'n v. Feldman, 530 S.E.2d 865 (N.C. Ct. App. 2000) ners association's collection of assessments is in trade or e); Franks v. Sykes, 600 S.W.3d 908 (Tenn. 2020) (confining
First Am. Nat'l Bank, 93

415 Schauer v. GMAC, 819 So. 2d 809 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2002) (debt collection harassment of car loan co-signer was in trade or commerce). See also Williams v. Edelman, 408 F. Supp. 2d 1261 (S.D. Fla. 2005) (UDAP statute covers collection of condo fees, even though consumers did not enter into transaction with collector). But see Acosta v. Gustino, 2012 WL 4052245 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 13, 2012) (homeowners association was not engaged in trade or commerce in exercising legal remedies to collect debt).

416 In re Daniel, 137 B.R. 884 (D.S.C. 1992) (repossession of manufactured home).

417 Pabon v. Recko, 122 F. Supp. 2d 311 (D. Conn. 2000).

418 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 2.1.8, 2.4.5.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

419 Wess v. Storey, 2009 WL 2835371 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 1, 2009) (where underlying transaction is consumer transaction, UDAP statute covers attorney collector even though debt had been assigned to entity that is exempt from UDAP statute); Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783, 809 (S.D. Ohio 2006); Blevins v. Hudson & Keyse ler the original loan agreement vicer is "in connection with"

JDAP statute.[421] A few courts, rs do not fall within the UDAP nsumer has not entered into a [22] or because collection is too ction.[423] Another issue is that a requirement of a sale or lease r transaction," so they may not hat did not arise from a sale or itors, Collectors, and d

me state debt collection laws,[425] er creditors themselves, not just [26] The UDAP statute may proditor liable not only for its own r those of the collectors it hires.
gument that a creditor is respon-law for its debt collection agen-
l Fair Debt Collection Practices right to control the collection esponsible as if the agency were

.3d 263 (Mo. 2018) (applying statute to onway v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 438 S.W.3d ices, Inc., 2011 WL 2971085 (S.D. Miss.

te inapplicable to collector because con-ase goods or services from it); State ex rel.

an employee.[428] Ratification of the collector's acts may also make the creditor liable.[429] Creditors may also be responsible under the state UDAP statute for hiring collectors known to engage in harassing debt collection methods.[430] An individual employee of a debt collection agency may also be liable under the UDAP statute.[431]

A UDAP statute may apply to collection of types of debts that are excluded from FDCPA coverage.[432] For example, a UDAP statute that applies to "trade or commerce" may apply to collection of tort debts.[433] A UDAP statute is likely to apply to a company that purchases dishonored checks for collection, as long as the underlying transaction falls within the statute's scope.[434]

Most UDAP statutes apply to credit transactions.[435] However, the Texas UDAP statute does not apply to loans that are not used to purchase goods or services.[436] Other UDAP statutes exempt 428 Douyon v. NY Med. Health Care, P.C., 894 F. Supp. 2d 245 (E.D.N.Y. 2012) (creditor is liable for acts of collection agent committed within actual or apparent scope of authority); Knapp v. Am. Gen. Fin., 111 F. Supp. 2d 758 (S.D. W. Va. Aug. 16, 2000). But cf. Lowe v. Surpas Res. Corp., 253 F. Supp. 2d 1209 (D. Kan. 2003) (bank not vicariously liable for actions of collector who was independent contractor); Stephens v. Omni Ins. Co., 159 P.3d 10, 26 (Wash. Ct. App. 2007) (creditor not liable where collector was independent contractor and it did not review collector's letters), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Panag v. Farmers Ins. Co., 204 P.3d 885 (Wash. 2009).

429 National Consumer Law Center, Automobile Fraud § 10.4.3 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.9.2.5 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

430 See Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., P.C., 2002 WL 31618443 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 6, 2002) (creditor liable under Pa. UDAP statute and debt collection statute for hiring collectors known to engage in harassing debt collection methods).

certain creditors such as banks,[437] certain vendors such as utility companies,[438] or certain types of debts.[439] The Sixth Circuit held that, since the Ohio UDAP statute is inapplicable to certain entities such as banks when they originate credit obligations, it is also inapplicable to third party collectors when they are collecting those debts, as long as the exempt entity still owns the obligation.[440] A court held that a process server fell within the Connecticut UDAP statute's exemption for transactions or actions permitted by other law, even if the process server utilized a method of service that was not permitted by law.[441]

Even if a UDAP statute generally covers debt collection, restrictions may be embedded in particular substantive prohibitions. For example, a court refused to apply a UDAP statute prohibiting representations that "goods or services have characteristics . . . they do not have" to debt collection, because the collectors were not offering goods or services to the debtors.[442]

Courts in some states have held collection attorneys' activities subject to the state UDAP statute.[443] However, in some states the UDAP statute explicitly exempts attorneys,[444] or 2018 WL 456031 (W.D. Tex. Jan. 16, 2018) (loan broker provides services and is subject to UDAP statute even if lender is not). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 2.2.1.2, 2.2.1.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

437 Lewis v. ACB Bus. Services, Inc., 135 F.3d 389 (6th Cir. 1998) (credit card company was not "supplier" within meaning of Ohio Consumer Sales Practices Act, and thus was not covered by Act's restrictions on choice of forum); King v. Cashland, Inc., 2000 WL 1232768 (Ohio Ct. App. Sept. 1, 2000) (payday lender was exempt from state UDAP statute as "dealer in intangibles," so its collection activities were not covered). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.2.1.4 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

438 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.3.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

439 Wright v. Linebarger Googan Blair & Sampson, 782 F. Supp. 2d 593 (W.D. Tenn. 2011) (UDAP statute inapplicable to collection of delinquent property taxes); Reno v. Supportkids, Inc., 2004 WL 828150 (D. Minn. Apr. 13, 2004) (child support not covered because not in connection with sale); Friday v. United Dominion Realty Trust, Inc., 575 S.E.2d 532 (N.C. Ct. App. 2003) (court judgment does not constitute covered "debt" under state debt collection or UDAP statutes, so landlord not liable for demanding $45 for attorney fees, when fee was actually for eviction court costs); Teel v. Panarella, 16 Pa. D. & C.4th 271 (Pa. Ct. Com. Pl. 1993) (local wage taxes not debt under former UDAP debt collection regulation; note that regulation has been replaced by statute, Pa. Stat. tit. 73, § 2270.3, that does cover third party collection of local tax debts). See also Alger v. Ganick, O'Brien & Sarin, 35 F. Supp. 2d 148 (D. Mass. 1999) (declining supplemental jurisdiction over UDAP debt collection claim because of questions whether it applies to defendant, a state-created student loan guarantee corporation).

440 Wise v. Zwicker & Assoc., 780 F.3d 710 (6th Cir. 2015) (UDAP statute does not apply to credit card lender, nor to its attorney collectors where exempt lender still owns obligation). See also Clark v. Lender Processing Serv., Inc., 562 Fed. Appx. 460 (6th Cir. 2014) (attorney who represents financial institution that is exempt from Ohio UDAP statute is also exempt); Gionis v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, 405 F. Supp. 2d 856, 869 (S.D. Ohio 2005) (credit card lender is exempt from Ohio UDAP statute, so third party collector of its debt is not covered), aff'd on other grounds, 2007 WL 1654357 (6th Cir. June 6, 2007).

441 Garcia v. Fry, ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2016 WL 2944517 (D. Conn. May 12, 2016).

442 State of Minn. ex rel. Hatch v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2006 WL 1388453 (Minn. Dist. Ct. Apr. 13, 2006). See also Thinesen v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2005 WL 2346991 (D. Minn. Sept. 26, 2005) (defendant's collection activities are not similar to substantive prohibitions in Minnesota Deceptive Trade Practices Act, so no violation).

443 Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168, 180 n.4 (3d Cir. 2015) ("While [defendant] is correct that attorneys are exempt from liability under the [UDAP statute] if the alleged misconduct concerns the adequacy of their legal representation, attorneys engaged in debt collection—considered an "act of trade or commerce" within the definition of the UTPCPL—are not"); Hagy v. Demers & Adams, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6091797 (S.D. Ohio Dec. 7, 2011) (UDAP statute applies to misrepresentation made to debtor in course of lawsuit that creditor would not attempt to collect any deficiency); Machles v. McCabe, Weisberg & Conway, P.C., 2017 WL 5172516 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 7, 2017) (attorney is exempt from UDAP statute only when practicing law, not when engaging in debt collection, here by filing foreclosure complaint); Blevins v. Hudson & Keyse, Inc., 395 F. Supp. 2d 655, 661 (S.D. Ohio 2004) (collection attorneys are covered by Ohio UDAP statute, and coverage does not invade state supreme court's province to regulate practice of law); Blevins v. Hudson & Keyse, Inc., 395 F. Supp. 2d 662 (S.D. Ohio 2004) (there is no litigation privilege that protects collection attorneys from liability under Ohio UDAP statute); Daniels v. Baritz, 2003 WL 21027238 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 30, 2003) (attorney's debt collection activities are covered even if sufficiency of legal representation is not); Edwards v. McCormick, 136 F. Supp. 2d 795 (S.D. Ohio 2001) (attorney collecting debts for health care provider was "supplier" covered by Ohio Consumer Sales Practices Act); Smith v. Short Term Loans, L.L.C., 2001 WL 127303 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 9, 2001) (consumer stated claim against attorney who sent out dunning letters on his own letterhead, leading unsophisticated consumer to think third party was involved); Campos v. Brooksbank, 120 F. Supp. 2d 1271 (D.N.M. 2000) (alleged misconduct of creditor's lawyer subject to New Mexico Unfair Practices Act; exemption for actions or transactions permitted under laws administered by regulatory body did not apply where acts complained of, i.e., filing false affidavit and abusing discovery, were not permitted by rules of professional conduct); Rachoza v. Gallas & Schultz, 1998 WL 171280 (D. Kan. Mar. 23, 1998) (attorneys may be liable under Kansas Consumer Protection Act for same actions which would subject creditor or another debt collector to liability); Pepper v. Routh Crabtree, APC, 219 P.3d 1017 (Alaska 2009). See also Seyfarth v. Reese Law Group, 2010 WL 2698819 (W.D. Wash. July 7, 2010) (systematic inflation of garnishment fees is in trade or commerce even though it occurs in litigation); Andrews & Lawrence Prof. Services, L.L.C. v. Mills, 223 A.3d 947 (Md. 2020) (UDAP statute's professional services exemption does not apply to lawyer who engages in debt collection activity that requires collection agency license or which would be prohibited under state debt collection act); Brow v. Stanton, 429 N.E.2d 60 (Mass. App. Ct. 1981) (applying attorney general's debt collection rule, which explicitly covers attorneys collecting for creditors). But see O'Connor v. Nantucket Bank, 992 F. Supp. 2d 24 (D. Mass. 2014) (non-client can make UDAP claim against attorney only if the attorney was acting in a business context vis-à-vis the non-client; debt collection does not qualify); Genschork v. Suttell & Hammer, 2013 WL 6118678 (E.D. Wash. Nov. 21, 2013) (after judgment was vacated and case dismissed, attorneys obtained garnishment order by misrepresenting that judgment was valid; debt collection claim fails because it arose from attorney's "competence or strategy," not the entrepreneurial aspects of practice). But cf. Schroyer v. Frankel, 197 F.3d 1170 (6th Cir. 1999) (Ohio UDAP statute applies to debt collection, but debt collection was incidental to defendant attorney's law practice, not regular and usual part of his business, so he was not covered).

444 See, e.g., Culver v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2005 WL 5621875 (E.D.N.C. June 28, 2005) (statutory exemption for members of learned courts have held that the state supreme court's regulation of the practice of law displaces the UDAP statute.[445] In other states, courts draw a distinction between the professional aspects of an attorney's practice, to which the UDAP statute does not apply, and the commercial aspects, to which the statute applies.[446] In these states, the UDAP statute will likely apply to some, but not all, of a collection attorney's activities.[447] The litigation privilege may also be an obstacle when the claim involves an attorney's litigation activities.[448] But even when a state statute exempts attorneys, the creditor on whose behalf an attorney pursues collection may be vicariously liable for the attorney's unfair or deceptive practices.[449]

16.3.3.5 What Consumers Are Protected?

A UDAP statute may protect out-of-state residents,[450] although some UDAP statutes are limited to acts that occur in the state.[451] Some courts have applied their UDAP statutes to actions that occur outside the state, but that affect state residents.[452] Some state UDAP statutes protect businesses as well as consumers, but others protect only consumers.[453]

A consumer who was dunned for a credit card debt incurred by an identity thief was allowed to pursue a claim under the Tennessee UDAP statute.[454] The court held that the use of the consumer's identity to enter into the transaction was sufficient to make him a "consumer" as defined by the statute. It also held that the creditor, having treated the consumer as the actual debtor, could not now argue the contrary. Several other decisions apply the state UDAP statute to debt collection against a non-debtor.[455] On the other hand, some courts have held that the state UDAP statute does not apply where the creditor or collector is harassing someone who has not actually entered into a transaction with it.[456] professions excludes collection attorneys even if they are not licensed in jurisdiction); Bennett & DeLoney, P.C. v. State ex rel. McDaniel, 388 S.W.3d 12 (Ark. 2012). See also Andrews & Lawrence Prof. Services, L.L.C. v. Mills, 223 A.3d 947 (Md. 2020) (UDAP statute exempts professional services of lawyer, but this exemption does not protect lawyer who engages in debt collection activity for which state debt collector licensing statute requires license, or which that statute prohibits); Davis Lake Cmty. Ass'n v. Feldman, 530 S.E.2d 865 (N.C. Ct. App. 2000) (contrasting coverage of creditor's own collection activities with exemption for attorneys as members of learned profession).

445 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.3.9 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

446 Id.

447 UDAP statute inapplicable: Glover v. Udren Law Offices, P.C., 92 A.3d 24 (Pa. Super. Ct. 2014) (attorney's actions in connection with filing of foreclosure complaint amount to practicing law and are exempt from UDAP statute), rev'd in part on other grounds, 139 A.3d 195 (Pa. 2016) (reversing dismissal of claims under state lending law); Gray v. Suttell & Assoc., 2012 WL 1067962 (E.D. Wash. Mar. 28, 2012) (filing petitions for attorney fees in collection actions is professional rather than entrepreneurial and is not in trade or commerce); Wright v. Linebarger Googan Blair & Sampson, 782 F. Supp. 2d 593 (W.D. Tenn. 2011) (post-filing demand letter is practice of law to which UDAP statute is inapplicable); Collins v. Sparacio, 2003 WL 21254256 (N.D. Ill. May 30, 2003) (UDAP statute inapplicable to attorney's filing of collection suit; this is practice of law); Evanauskas v. Strumpf, 2001 WL 777477 (D. Conn. June 27, 2001) (Connecticut UDAP statute applies only to commercial aspects of legal practice; no cause of action against lawyer who sent improper dunning letter on behalf of client-creditor); Campion v. Credit Bureau Services, 2000 WL 33255504 (E.D. Wash. Sept. 19, 2000) (lawyer who failed to follow proper garnishment procedure when collecting debt for client not liable under Washington UDAP statute, which covers only entrepreneurial aspects of law practice); Suffield Dev. Assoc. v. Nat'l Loan Investors, L.P., 802 A.2d 44 (Conn. App. Ct. 2002) (party may not sue opponent's attorney under Connecticut UDAP statute, which applies only to "entrepreneurial aspects" of law practice, not to "the representation of a client in a legal capacity"); Carter v. Suttell & Assoc., 2011 WL 396038 (Wash. Ct. App. Jan. 13, 2011) (unpublished) (collection attorney's garnishment of judgment debtor's bank account is professional, not entrepreneurial, so UDAP statute is inapplicable); Medialdea v. Law Office of Evan L. Loeefler P.L.L.C., 2009 WL 1767185 (W.D. Wash. June 19, 2009) (collection attorney's misrepresentation about fees in motion to court not in trade or commerce).

UDAP statute applies: Seyfarth v. Reese Law Group, 2010 WL 2698819 (W.D. Wash. July 7, 2010) (inflation of garnishment fee beyond maximum allowed by law may be entrepreneurial, so covered by UDAP statute).

See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.3.9 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

448 See § 6.2.7, supra.

449 Andrews & Lawrence Prof. Services, L.L.C. v. Mills, 223 A.3d 947, 967–971 (Md. 2020).

450 Davis v. Suran, 1998 WL 378420 (N.D. Ill. July 1, 1998) (territorial reach of Wisconsin Consumer Act is not statutorily limited to Wisconsin residents; in absence of conflict of law, court is obliged to apply local state law to pendent statutory claims).

451 Padilla v. Payco Gen. Am. Credits, Inc., 161 F. Supp. 2d 264 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (no cause of action under New York UDAP statute and debt collection provisions that cover acts "in this state," where acts complained of took place in Massachusetts).

452 See, e.g., Yu v. Signet Bank, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304 (Cal. Ct. App. 1999) (applying California UDAP statute to out-of-state creditor's practice of filing suit in Virginia against California debtors). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.2.11 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

453 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.4.5.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

454 Wolfe v. MBNA Am. Bank, 485 F. Supp. 2d 874 (W.D. Tenn. 2007).

455 See Heard v. Bonneville Billing & Collections, 2000 WL 825721 (10th Cir. June 26, 2000) (Utah law); Reid v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2016 WL 247571 (D. Utah Jan. 20, 2016); Singleton v. Montgomery Ward Credit Corp., 2000 WL 1810012 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 11, 2000).

456 Wright v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 227 F. Supp. 3d 1207 (D. Kan. 2016) (recipient of wrong-number debt collection calls is not consumer under UDAP statute where collector never claimed that he owed debt); Hayes v. Find Track Locate, Inc., 60 F. Supp. 3d 1144 (D. Kan. 2014) (relatives who were not obligated on contract, but were contacted by collector to learn whereabouts of collateral, did not enter into a consumer transaction, so do not have standing under UDAP statute); DirecTV v. Shea, 2003 WL 23200250 (W.D. Mich. May 21, 2003) (one of series of seven related cases) (debtor who allegedly pirated television signals cannot assert UDAP claim for cable television company's collection acts); DirecTV, Inc. v. Karpinsky, 269 F. Supp. 2d 918 (E.D. Mich. 2003) (UDAP statute did not apply to collection activities against person who had not entered into transaction, but was falsely accused of intercepting satellite transmissions), vacated in part on other grounds, 274 F. Supp. 2d 918 (E.D. Mich. 2003); Walker v. Gallegos, 167 F. Supp. 2d 1105 (D. Ariz. 2001) (Arizona UDAP statute would apply to loan for purchase of manufactured home, but repossession from occupant who was not party

Occasionally consumers have made UDAP claims against debt collectors they hired to collect debts. For example, one UDAP statute was applied to protect a spouse who was misled about the fee of a collection agency that was hired to collect child support from the other spouse.[457]

16.3.3.6 State-by-State Survey of UDAP Statute's Coverage of Debt Collection

The following is a state-by-state summary of each state UDAP statute's coverage of debt collection.

Alabama: Alabama courts have not addressed the question whether the UDAP statute covers debt collection. In light of the statute's broad definition of "trade or commerce,"[458] its broad prohibition of unconscionable, false, misleading, or deceptive acts,[459] and the general rule that UDAP statutes are to be interpreted liberally, it is likely that Alabama courts will conclude that post-sale acts such as debt collection are covered.

Alaska: Alaska's UDAP statute applies to acts and practices in "trade or commerce."[460] The Alaska Supreme Court has ruled that the state UDAP statute covers debt collection.[461]

Arizona: There has not been a dispositive ruling as to whether Arizona's UDAP statute covers debt collection, but the statutory language, which requires only that a prohibited practice be "in connection with" the sale of merchandise,[462] is clearly broad enough to cover debt collection. Despite this broad definition, in Walker v. Gallegos,[463] a federal district court held that the UDAP statute did not cover repossession of a manufactured home from an occupant who was not a party to the contract, because it was too attenuated from the underlying sale of merchandise. It is an open question whether Arizona courts will apply this ruling to debt collection, or even follow it as to repossession.[464] Arizona's UDAP statute formerly prohibited only deceptive acts, not unfair or unconscionable acts, and so was less than ideal for addressing non-deceptive debt collection abuse. However, in 2013, it was amended to add a prohibition of any "unfair act or practice."[465]

Arkansas: Ark. Code § 4-88-107(a)(10), prohibits "any other unconscionable, false, or deceptive act or practice in business, commerce, or trade." While Arkansas courts have not ruled on the question, nothing in the statute excludes post-sale acts such as debt collection from the definition of "business, commerce, or trade." The Arkansas Supreme Court has, however, held that the UDAP statute is inapplicable to the practice of law by attorneys, including attorney collectors.[466]

California: The California Unfair Competition Law applies to debt collection.[467] California's other UDAP statute, the Consumers Legal Remedies Act, covers "transactions," broadly defined to include not only the making but also the performance of the agreement,[468] and courts have applied it to debt collection.[469]

Colorado: Colorado's UDAP statute prohibits certain practices that occur "in the course of such person's business, vocation, or occupation."[470] Although the courts have not specifically addressed coverage of debt collection, this language is clearly broad enough to cover post-sale acts,[471] so it is likely that debt collection is covered. The UDAP statute's application to abusive debt collection was significantly enhanced by a 2019 amendment adding a prohibition of knowing or reckless unfair or unconscionable acts or practices.[472] to contract not covered because too remote from underlying sale); Beecy v. Pucciarelli, 441 N.E.2d 1035 (Mass. 1982) (unobligated consumer who was erroneously subject of debt collection was not protected by UDAP statute since consumer did not purchase goods or services from collector; goods or services requirement has since been removed from statute); Cady v. Marcella, 729 N.E.2d 1125 (Mass. App. Ct. 2000) (no UDAP claim against creditor who seized half of consumers' modular home to collect debt owed by contractor installing home, as consumers had not engaged in trade or commerce with creditor); SWA, Inc. v. Straka, 2003 WL 21434637 (Ohio Ct. App. June 19, 2003); Dodeka, L.L.C. v. Garcia, 2011 WL 4825893 (Tex. App. Oct. 12, 2011) (person who was twice sued for debt she did not owe not covered by Texas UDAP statute because she never acquired or sought to acquire goods or services).

---

457 Ulberg v. Seattle Bonded, Inc., 626 P.2d 522 (Wash. Ct. App. 1981).

458 Ala. Code § 8-19-3(8).

459 Ala. Code § 8-19-5(27).

460 Alaska Stat. § 45.50.471(a).

461 State v. O'Neill Investigations, 609 P.2d 520 (Alaska 1980). See also Merdes & Merdes, P.C. v. Leisnoi, Inc., 410 P.3d 398, 411–412 (Alaska 2017) (where transaction begins as provision of services governed by UDAP statute, UDAP statute applies to later stages, including consumer's attempt to recover overpayment for those services); Cozzetti v. Madrid, 2017 WL 6395736 (Alaska Dec. 13, 2017) (unpublished) ("in connection with" the sale means about or relating to the sale; it encompasses post-sale acts such as misrepresentation in eviction complaint that manufactured home buyer was a mere renter); Alaska Tr., L.L.C. v. Ambridge, 372 P.3d 207, 226 (Alaska 2016) (applying UDAP statute to debt collection violations in course of non-judicial foreclosure where consumer also pleaded FDCPA claims; even though UDAP statute does not encompass real property transactions, FDCPA violations are UDAP violations); Pepper v. Routh Crabtree, APC, 219 P.3d 1017 (Alaska 2009) (applying UDAP statute to attorney debt collector). But cf. Alaska Tr., L.L.C. v. Bachmeier, 332 P.3d 1 (Alaska 2014) (UDAP statute does not apply to real estate transactions, so does not cover real estate foreclosure).

462 Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1522(A).

463 167 F. Supp. 2d 1105, 1107 (D. Ariz. 2001).

464 See Pete v. U.S. Bank, 2009 WL 532611 (Ariz. Ct. App. Mar. 3, 2009) (upholding default judgment against lender for wrongful repossession without addressing UDAP scope issues).

465 Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1522(A).

466 Bennett & DeLoney, P.C. v. State ex rel. McDaniel, 388 S.W.3d 12 (Ark. 2012).

467 Barquis v. Merchants Collection Ass'n, 496 P.2d 817 (Cal. 1972); Yu v. Signet Bank/Virginia, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304 (App. 1999). See, e.g., People v. Persolve, L.L.C., 160 Cal. Rptr. 3d 841 (Cal. Ct. App. 2013) (applying Unfair Competition Law to debt collection; litigation privilege does not bar claim).

468 Cal. Civil Code § 1761(e) (West).

469 See, e.g., Hood v. Santa Barbara Bank & Trust, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 369 (Cal. Ct. App. 2007) (reversing judgment on pleadings for creditor in case raising CLRA and other claims regarding tactics for collecting defaulted refund anticipation loans).

470 Colo. Rev. Stat. § 6-1-105(1).

471 Showpiece Homes Corp. v. Assurance Co. of Am., 38 P.3d 47 (Colo. 2001) (UDAP statute applies to insurer's post-sale unfair or bad faith conduct).

472 Colo. Rev. Stat. § 6-1-105(1)(kkk), as amended effective July 1, 2020.

Connecticut: The state UDAP statute broadly prohibits unfair or deceptive acts or practices "in the conduct of any trade or commerce,"[473] and a number of decisions have applied it to post-sale acts such as debt collection.[474]

Delaware: Del. Code Ann. tit. 6, § 2513 prohibits deception "in connection with the sale, lease, or advertisement of any merchandise." This language is broad enough to encompass post-sale acts, and one decision, while not a debt collection case, has so held.[475]

District of Columbia: Post-sale acts such as debt collection appear to be covered under D.C.'s UDAP statute. In a case closely analogous to debt collection, the D.C. Court of Appeals reversed summary judgment for a mortgage company that had misrepresented the payoff amount on a loan.[476] The D.C. Circuit has, however, held the statute inapplicable to debt collection on the theory that it is not sufficiently connected to the supply side of the transaction, and the collector does not meet the definition of "merchant" in its own right.[477]

Florida: Florida prohibits unfair or deceptive acts or practices "in the conduct of any trade or commerce."[478] "Trade or commerce" is broadly defined as "advertising, soliciting, providing, offering, or distributing, whether by sale, rental, or otherwise, of any good or service, or any property, whether tangible or intangible, or any other article, commodity or thing of value, wherever situated."[479] Some Florida courts have held that harassing collection efforts fall within this broad definition.[480] However, other courts have disagreed, on the theory that debt collection activities do not involve advertising, soliciting, providing, offering, or distributing anything.[481]

Georgia: Ga. Code Ann. § 10-1-393 prohibits unfair or deceptive acts "in the conduct" of consumer transactions. This broad language does not confine its scope to the initial sale. In Garner v. Academy Collection Service, Inc.,[482] a federal court held that collection activities were covered under the state UDAP statute "because they involved the sale and purchase of a service—the extension of credit and the associated administration and collection of the debt—for Plaintiff's personal or household purposes."

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. § 480-2 forbids unfair or deceptive acts in trade or commerce. Trade or commerce is not defined, so there is no basis for narrowing its scope to exclude debt collection, and Hawaii courts have applied the statute to post-sale acts such as debt collection.[483]

473 Conn. Gen. Stat. § 42-110b(a).

474 See, e.g., Pabon v. Recko, 122 F. Supp. 2d 311 (D. Conn. 2000) (creditor's collection of its own debts is in trade or commerce).

475 Lony v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 821 F. Supp. 956 (D. Del. 1993). But cf. Ayers v. Quillen, 2004 WL 1965866 (Del. Super. Ct. June 30, 2004) (statute does not apply to post-sale practices, but ads viewed soon after sale were in connection with the sale); Norman Gershman's Things to Wear, Inc. v. Mercedes-Benz of N. Am., Inc., 558 A.2d 1066 (Del. Super. Ct. 1989) (statute inapplicable to post-sale misrepresentations dealing with car repair).

476 Osbourne v. Capital City Mortg. Corp., 667 A.2d 1321 (D.C. 1995).

477 Baylor v. Mitchell Rubenstein & Assoc., 857 F.3d 939 (D.C. Cir. 2017). See also Osinubepi-Alao v. Plainview Fin. Serv., Ltd., 44 F. Supp. 3d 84 (D.D.C. 2014) (D.C. UDAP statute applies to seller of consumer debt, but not to debt buyer that attempts to collect debt and does not extend additional credit to debtor); Busby v. Capital One, 772 F. Supp. 2d 268 (D.D.C. 2011) (D.C. UDAP law does not apply to mortgage loan servicer, because it did not hold itself out as supplying any goods or services to homeowner; mistakenly inserting element of privity of contract into District's UDAP law, which requires only that UDAP claim arise out of consumer-merchant relationship, not that defendant must have entered into such relationship directly with consumer); Edmond v. Am. Educ. Services, 2010 WL 4269129 (D.D.C. Oct. 28, 2010) (D.C. UDAP law does not cover student loan servicing).

478 Fla. Stat. § 501.204(1).

479 Fla. Stat. § 501.203(8).

480 Nazario v. Prof'l Account Services, Inc., 2017 WL 1179917 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 30, 2017) (while legitimate debt collection may not be within scope of "trade or commerce," illegal or unscrupulous debt collection is); N. Star Capital Acquisitions, L.L.C. v. Krig, 611 F. Supp. 2d 1324 (M.D. Fla. 2009) (banks and their attorney debt collectors who sent proposed confession of judgment along with service of complaint are subject to Florida's UDAP statute and not immune under Florida's litigation privilege); Losure v. Capital One Services, Inc., 2006 WL 166520 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 23, 2006) (harassment by debt collector is in trade or commerce); Schauer v. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp., 819 So. 2d 809, 812 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2002). See also Williams v. Edelman, 408 F. Supp. 2d 1261 (S.D. Fla. 2005).

481 See, e.g., Mendez v. JFK Med. Ctr. L.P., 2018 WL 6448384 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 19, 2019) (UDAP statute does not apply to debt collection activities); Schaefer v. Seattle Serv. Bur., Inc., 2015 WL 9031511 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 16, 2015) (pre-suit demand letter by subrogee of other driver's insurance company is not in trade or commerce); Economakis v. Butler & Hosch, P.A., 2014 WL 820623 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 3, 2014) (pre-suit demand letter is not in trade or commerce); Acosta v. James A. Gustino, P.A., 2012 WL 4052245 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 13, 2012) (sending demand letters and other debt collection efforts does not involve advertising, soliciting, providing, offering, or distributing property, so is not in trade or commerce); Kelly v. Palmer, Reifler, & Assoc., P.A., 681 F. Supp. 2d 1356, 1373–1377 (S.D. Fla. 2010). See also Cornette v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 280 F. Supp. 3d 1362, 1373–1374 (S.D. Fla. 2017); Benjamin v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2013 WL 1891284 (S.D. Fla. May 6, 2013) (mortgage servicer that seeks to enforce note is not acting in trade or commerce); Law Office of David J. Stern, P.A. v. State, 83 So. 3d 847 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2011) (law firm's preparation of forgeries and fraudulent documents for clients in foreclosure cases is not acting in trade or commerce); State ex rel. Attorney Gen. v. Shapiro & Fishman, L.L.P., 59 So. 3d 353 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2011) (foreclosure firm's pursuit of legal remedies not in trade or commerce); City of Cars, Inc. v. Simms, 526 So. 2d 119 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App 1988) (repossession not covered under version of statute that was limited to consumer transactions; statute now applies to "trade or commerce").

482 2005 WL 643680 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 11, 2005). Accord Carlisle v. Nat'l Commercial Services, Inc., 2017 WL 1075088, at *7 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 22, 2017), adopted, 2017 WL 1049454 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 20, 2017); Beeler v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 2016 WL 4136513, at *13 (M.D. Ga. Aug. 1, 2016) (applies to debt collection as long as debt was incurred in consumer transaction); 1st Nationwide Collection Agency, Inc. v. Werner, 654 S.E.2d 428 (Ga. Ct. App. 2007).

483 See, e.g., King v. Int'l Data Services, 2002 WL 32345923 (D. Haw. Aug. 5, 2002) (denying plaintiff's motion for summary judgment on UDAP claim against debt collector, but allowing issue to go to trial); Ai v. Frank Huff Agency, Ltd., 607 P.2d 1304 (Haw. 1980) (violation of debt collection agency law is per se UDAP claim); Wiginton v. Pac. Credit Corp., 634 P.2d 111 (Haw. Ct. App. 1981) (upholding trial court's injunction against debt collection agency). But cf. Hungate v. Law Office of David B. Rosen, 391 P.3d 1 (Haw. 2017) (stating that defendant need not have provided goods and services to plaintiff in order to be liable under UDAP statute, but holding that allowing homeowner to assert UDAP claim against foreclosure attorney, other

Idaho: The Idaho UDAP statute applies to acts and practices "in the conduct of any trade or commerce,"[484] and defines "trade or commerce" to include collection of debts arising out of the sale, lease, or distribution of goods or services.[485] It also provides that an unconscionable act is a violation whether it occurs "before during, or after the transaction."[486] The Idaho Supreme Court has ruled that collection of debts that arise from sales of goods and services falls within the UDAP statute's definition of "trade or commerce."[487]

Illinois: The definition of "trade" and "commerce" at 815 Ill. Comp. Stat. § 505/1(f) focuses primarily on the initial sale, but is broad enough to cover post-sale matters such as debt collection. In addition, the statute includes substantive prohibitions of certain debt collection practices that would be meaningless if the statute did not cover debt collection.[488] The Illinois Supreme Court held in People ex rel. Daley v. Datacom Systems Corp.,[489] that collection of a debt fell within the definition.

Indiana: Indiana's UDAP statute applies to "consumer transactions," explicitly defined to include the collection of, or attempt to collect, a debt by a debt collector.[490] "Debt collector" is defined the same as the FDCPA definition, except that Indiana excludes any attorney who is admitted to practice in Indiana and is acting within the course and scope of the person's practice as an attorney.[491] The statute also defines any violation of the FDCPA as a violation,[492] but it denies the right to bring a private cause of action for this violation.[493]

Iowa: The Iowa UDAP statute applies broadly to acts or practices "in connection with" the lease, sale, or advertisement of any merchandise.[494] "Merchandise" is also broadly defined.[495] The state supreme court has applied Iowa's statute to post-sale collection.[496] Debt collectors are not excluded from the private cause of action that Iowa added to its UDAP statute in 2009.

Kansas: Kan. Stat. § 50-624(l) defines "supplier" to include those who enforce consumer transactions, and the state supreme court has held that this definition encompasses independent debt collectors.[497] The application of the statute to debt collection is particularly clear since Kan. Stat. § 50-627(a) provides that an unconscionable act is a violation whether it occurs before, during, or after the transaction. The underlying transaction may have to be a consumer transaction as defined by the statute.[498]

Kentucky: In Hamilton v. York,[499] a federal district court found the Kentucky UDAP statute applicable to false statements a creditor made in an attempt to collect a debt. However, intermediate appellate and federal decisions in Kentucky depart from the clear weight of nationwide authority and hold that a UDAP plaintiff must be in privity with the defendant.[500] Federal court decisions have applied these rulings to hold that a consumer cannot assert a UDAP claim against a third-party debt collector.[501]

Louisiana: Louisiana prohibits unfair or deceptive acts and practices as long as they are "in the conduct of any trade or commerce."[502] The state defines "trade" or "commerce" very broadly as "advertising, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of any services and any property, corporeal or incorporeal, immovable or movable, and any other article, commodity, or than for "patently illegal activities," would interfere too much with his duties toward the mortgage holder; declining to address effect of 2012 amendments to foreclosure statute on these issues).

484 Idaho Code Ann. § 48-603.

485 Idaho Code Ann. § 48-602(2).

486 Idaho Code Ann. § 48-603C(1).

487 In re Western Acceptance Corp., 788 P.2d 214 (Idaho 1990) (third party collection of dishonored check used to buy goods or services is in trade or commerce). See also Carroll v. Wilson McColl & Rasmussen, 2010 WL 1904779 (D. Idaho May 11, 2010) (statute covers collection of balance transfer debt that arose from use of credit card to purchase goods and services).

488 815 Ill. Comp. Stat. §§ 505/2H, 505/2I.

489 585 N.E.2d 51 (Ill. 1991). See also Fleischer v. Acceslex Inst., 2018 WL 4489583 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 19, 2018) (applying UDAP statute to student loan servicer and collector); Thrasher-Lyon v. Ill. Farmers Ins. Co., 861 F. Supp. 2d 898, 909 (N.D. Ill. 2012); Thomas v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2006 WL 2438346 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 17, 2006) (collector's letter seeking information from debtors' employer is in trade or commerce, even if it does not seek money); Brown v. C.I.L., Inc., 1996 WL 164294 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 1, 1996); Garland v. Mobil Oil Co., 340 F. Supp. 1095, 1099 (N.D. Ill. 1972).

490 Ind. Code § 24-5-0.5-2(1)(C).

491 Ind. Code § 24-5-0.5-2(13) (incorporating definition of debt collection in 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)).

492 Ind. Code § 24-5-0.5-3(b)(20).

493 Ind. Code § 24-5-0.5-4(a), (b).

494 Iowa Code § 714.16(2)(a).

495 Iowa Code § 714.16(1)(i) ("any objects, wares, goods, commodities, intangibles, securities, bonds, debentures, stocks, real estate or services").

496 State ex rel. Miller v. Cutty's Des Moines Camping Club, Inc., 694 N.W.2d 518 (Iowa 2005).

497 State v. Midwest Serv. Bur., Inc., 623 P.2d 1343 (Kan. 1981) (independent debt collector is "supplier" as defined by UDAP statute, which includes those who enforce consumer transactions). Accord Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Services, Inc., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1249 (D. Kan. 2003); Griffin v. Sec. Pac. Auto. Fin. Services Corp., 995 F. Supp. 1266 (D. Kan. 1998) (Kansas Consumer Protection Act applies to debt collection activities of creditor or its agent). See also Hayes v. Find Track Locate, Inc., 60 F. Supp. 3d 1144 (D. Kan. 2014) (company that locates collateral and arranges for its repossession is engaged in enforcing consumer transactions, even though debtor did not enter into consumer transaction with it, but UDAP statute does not apply to non-parties that company contacted in effort to locate collateral); Bethea v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2010 WL 4868180 (D. Kan. Nov. 23, 2010) (UDAP statute covers negotiation of forbearance agreement to resolve collection of debt arising from consumer transaction).

498 See, e.g., Kalebaugh v. Cohen, McNeile & Pappas, P.C., 76 F. Supp. 3d 1251, 1259–1260 (D. Kan. 2015) (UDAP statute inapplicable to collection of debt originated by exempt lender); State ex rel. Miller v. Midwest Serv. Bur. of Topeka, Inc., 623 P.3d 1343 (Kan. 1981).

499 987 F. Supp. 953, 958 (E.D. Ky. 1997).

500 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2.20.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

501 Tallon v. Lloyd & McDaniel, 497 F. Supp. 2d 847 (W.D. Ky. 2007); Todd v. Capital One Fin. Corp., 2007 WL 3306097 (W.D. Ky. Nov. 6, 2007).

502 La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 51:1405(A).

thing of value wherever situated. . . ."[503] Although the courts have not addressed whether the UDAP statute covers debt collection, wrongful repossession appears to be covered,[504] so it is likely that courts will apply the same reasoning to debt collection.

Maine: Maine broadly defines "trade" and "commerce" to include "the advertising, offering for sale, sale or distribution of any services and any property, tangible, or intangible, real, personal or mixed, and any other article, commodity, or thing of value. . . ."[505] An unfair or deceptive act or practice is a violation as long as it is committed "in the conduct of any trade or commerce."[506] While there are no reported decisions applying the statute to debt collection, in Newcombe v. Mooers[507] a trial court found that improper repossession violated the statute.

Maryland: Md. Code Ann., Com. Law § 13-301(14)(iii) explicitly makes a violation of the state debt collection law a UDAP violation. Another part of the UDAP statute, Md. Code Ann., Com. Law § 13-303(5), provides that a person may not engage in any unfair, abusive, or deceptive trade practice in the collection of consumer debts. The state's highest court holds that the statute is intended to protect consumers from, inter alia, unfair and deceptive practices in the collection of consumer debts.[508] The UDAP statute exempts the "professional services of . . . a lawyer."[509] However, if a lawyer engages in debt collection activity for which the state debt collector licensing statute requires a license, or which that statute prohibits, the UDAP statute applies to the lawyer.[510] In addition, even when a collection attorney's activities are exempt, the exemption does not extend to the attorney's client.[511]

Massachusetts: The statute prohibits unfair and deceptive acts and practice "in the conduct of any trade or commerce,"[512] which is broadly defined.[513] The state's highest court has had no difficulty applying this broad statute to debt collection.[514] In addition, the attorney general has adopted a debt collection regulation under the statute.[515]

Michigan: Michigan's UDAP statute, Mich. Comp. Laws § 445.903, prohibits unfair, unconscionable, or deceptive acts that occur "in the conduct of trade or commerce." "Trade or commerce" is broadly defined as "the conduct of a business providing goods, property, or service primarily for personal, family, or household purposes and includes the advertising, solicitation, offering for sale or rent, sale, lease, or distribution of a service or property, tangible or intangible, real, personal, or mixed, or any other article, or a business opportunity."[516] This language is broad enough to cover debt collection, and, in DIRECTV, Inc. v. Cavanaugh,[517] a district court allowed a UDAP claim to go to trial based on the collection activities of a vendor of satellite TV service. Another question, however, is the effect of the Michigan statutes that license and regulate debt collectors.[518] Michigan courts have construed the UDAP statute's exemption for regulated industries extremely broadly,[519] and it is conceivable that courts could find that even debt collectors are exempt.

Minnesota: The scope section of Minnesota's Prevention of Consumer Fraud Act requires that the unlawful practice must be "in connection with the sale of any merchandise."[520] The broad language "in connection with" would appear to cover post-sale acts such as debt collection as long as the transaction is in "trade or commerce" and involves "merchandise."[521] Nonetheless, although their rationale is not strong, several courts have construed this or other language in the statute to exclude post-sale acts.[522] Several decisions also hold that 503 La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 51:1402(10).

504 See Slayton v. Davis, 901 So. 2d 1246 (La. Ct. App. 2005) (upholding finding of unfair act where defendant wrongfully repossessed plaintiff's car); Pelican Point Operations, L.L.C. v. Carroll Childers Co., 807 So. 2d 1171 (La. Ct. App. 2002) (upholding award of attorney fees under UDAP statute where defendant wrongfully repossessed plaintiff's property); Bryant v. Sears Consumer Fin. Corp., 617 So. 2d 1191 (La. Ct. App. 1993) (Louisiana's UDAP statute applies to wrongful repossession).

505 Me. Rev. Stat. tit. 5, § 206(3).

506 Me. Rev. Stat. tit. 5, § 207.

507 2000 WL 33675662 (Me. Super. Ct. Oct. 13, 2000).

508 Andrews & Lawrence Prof. Services, L.L.C. v. Mills, 223 A.3d 947, 950 (Md. 2020). See also Scull v. Groover, Christie & Merritt, P.C., 76 A.3d 1186 (Md. 2013) (applying statute to medical billing practices; rejecting contention that these practices fall within exemption for professional services).

509 Md. Code Ann., Comm. Law § 13-104(1).

510 Andrews & Lawrence Prof. Services, L.L.C. v. Mills, 223 A.3d 947 (Md. 2020). Earlier federal court decisions had held the statute inapplicable to attorneys who filed writs of garnishment seeking excess postjudgment interest and to a law firm that made calls to the consumer's workplace. Ben-Davies v. Blibaum & Assoc., P.A., 421 F. Supp. 3d 94 (D. Md. 2019); Hawkins v. Kilberg, 165 F. Supp. 3d 386 (D. Md. 2016).

511 Id.

512 Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 93A, § 2(a).

513 Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 93A, § 1(b) ("the advertising, the offering for sale, rent or lease, the sale rent, lease or distribution of any services and any property, tangible or intangible, real, personal, or mixed, . . . and any other article, commodity, or thing of value wherever situate").

514 See, e.g., Kattar v. Demoulas, 739 N.E.2d 246, 257–258 (Mass. 2000); Schubach v. Household Fin. Co., 376 N.E.2d 140 (Mass. 1978). But cf. Beecy v. Pucciarelli, 441 N.E.2d 1035 (Mass. 1982) (unobligated consumer who was erroneously subject of debt collection was not protected by UDAP statute since consumer did not purchase goods or services from collector; goods or services requirement has since been removed from statute).

515 940 Mass. Code Regs. §§ 7.01 to 7.10.

516 Mich. Comp. Laws § 445.902(g).

517 321 F. Supp. 2d 825 (E.D. Mich. 2003). But cf. Rodriguez v. Due Process of Mich., Inc., 2008 WL 4449651, at *10 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 30, 2008) (UDAP statute does not apply to process servers who executed postjudgment execution, as they were not engaged in providing goods, property, or services to plaintiff).

518 Mich. Comp. Laws §§ 339.901 to 339.920 and 445.251 to 445.258.

519 Liss v. Lewiston-Richards, Inc., 732 N.W.2d 514 (Mich. 2007). See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.3.3.3.2 (9th ed. 2016).

520 Minn. Stat. § 325F.69.

521 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.2.2.1.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

522 See Thinesen v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2005 WL 2346991 (D. Minn. Sept. 26, 2005) (dismissing claims under Minn. Stat. § 325F.69, subdiv. 1, because there was insufficient relationship between sale of goods and attempts, six years later, to collect on check that buyer had used to Minnesota's Deceptive Trade Practices Act[521] and its Unlawful Trade Practices Act[524] do not apply to debt collection.

Mississippi: Mississippi's UDAP statute prohibits unfair and deceptive practices as long as they are "in or affecting" commerce.[525] The statute defines "trade or commerce" broadly to include "advertising, offering for sale, or distribution of any services and any property, tangible or intangible, real, personal or mixed, and any other article, commodity, or thing of value wherever situated."[526] However, one court held that the statute's private cause of action, which extends only to a person who "purchases or leases goods or services . . . and thereby suffers" a loss, is inapplicable to claims against a debt collector that did not itself provide goods or services to the consumer.[527] In any event, Mississippi's UDAP statute is extremely weak in many other respects, so is unlikely to provide a helpful remedy for deceptive or abusive debt collection tactics.

Missouri: A prohibited practice must be "in connection with the sale or advertisement of any merchandise in trade or commerce."[528] In 2018, the Missouri Supreme Court held that this language encompasses a third-party debt collector's attempts to enforce an alleged debt for dental services.[529] This conclusion is particularly clear, since the statute also provides that an unfair or deceptive practice is a violation "whether committed before, during or after the sale."[530]

A Missouri UDAP regulation declares it an unfair practice to threaten or file a civil suit on a consumer debt that is time-barred, that has been discharged in bankruptcy or declared void by a court, or that is fully satisfied.[531]

Montana: The Supreme Court of Montana held that the state's UDAP statute applies to "consumer loans by banks in the lending and collecting of such loans."[532]

Nebraska: The Nebraska Consumer Protection Act statute applies to acts "in the conduct of any trade or commerce."[533] A federal court has ruled that the statute applies to debt collection.[534] The court rejected arguments that the statute should be confined to antitrust issues and that debt collectors were exempt because they were subject to the licensing provisions of the state debt collection law.

Nevada: Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.0915 prohibits deceptive trade practices in the course of the defendant's "business or occupation"—terms broad enough to include post-sale matters such as debt collection. Several of the substantive prohibitions, such as "us[ing] coercion, duress or intimidation in a transaction,"[535] "knowingly misrepresent[ing] the legal rights, obligations or remedies of a party to a transaction,"[536] and "knowingly mak[ing] any other false representation in a transaction"[537] would be applicable to abusive debt collection. A series of federal district court decisions[538] hold that the entire UDAP statute is limited to sales of goods and services, so does not apply to debt collection. However, this view has no support in the statute, which prohibits such practices as caller ID blocking, misrepresentation and non-disclosure in connection with investments, misrepresentation of the rights of the parties to a transaction, fraud in land installment contract sales, and many other topics that are inconsistent with a restriction of the entire statute to sales of goods and services.[539] The statute's limitation of certain prohibitions to sales of goods of services, while prohibiting knowingly taking advantage of a person's illiteracy, infirmity, or incapacity,[540] knowingly misrepresenting the rights of the parties to a transaction,[541] conducting a pay for them); Baribeau v. Orthopedic Surgeons, Ltd., 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23426 (D. Minn. Feb. 18, 1997) (collection too attenuated from sale to be covered by Consumer Fraud Act).

523 Maneval v. Jon R. Hawks, Ltd., 1999 WL 33911242 (D. Minn. Oct. 13, 1999) (dismissing claim under Minn. Stat. § 325D.44, because debt collection is not similar to the Act's list of prohibited conduct); State ex rel. Swanson v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2009 WL 1046869 (Minn. Ct. App. Apr. 21, 2009) (Minn. Deceptive Trade Practices Act, Minn. Stat. §§ 325D.43 to 325D.48, does not apply to debt collection).

524 Thinesen v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2005 WL 2346991 (D. Minn. Sept. 26, 2005) (dismissing claims under Minn. Stat. § 325D.11 subdiv. 1 because defendant's collection letters do not make representations regarding goods or services so are not similar to statute's list of prohibited activities).

525 Miss. Code Ann. § 75-24-5(1).

526 Miss. Code Ann. § 75-24-3(b).

527 Lockey v. CMRE Fin. Services, Inc., 2011 WL 2971085 (S.D. Miss. July 20, 2011).

528 Mo. Rev. Stat. § 407.020(1).

529 Jackson v. Barton, 548 S.W.3d 263 (Mo. 2018). See also Conway v. Citimortgage, Inc., 438 S.W.3d 410 (Mo. 2014) (party's right to collect loan is part of credit transaction and is therefore "in connection with" loan).

530 Mo. Rev. Stat. § 407.020(1).

531 Mo. Code Regs. Ann. tit. 15, § 60-8.100.

532 Baird v. Norwest Bank, 843 P.2d 327, 334 (Mont. 1992). See also Jacobson v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 371 P.3d 397, 409–410 (Mont. 2016) (applying UDAP statute to collection and non-judicial foreclosure of mortgage loan); Curtis v. Citibank, 261 P.3d 1059 (Mont. 2011) (reversing decision that FCRA preempted UDAP claim against bank for referring debt to collection agency when it knew that consumer did not owe it); Entriken v. Motor Coach Fed. Credit Union, 845 P.2d 93 (Mont. 1992) (affirming UDAP treble damage award for wrongful repossession).

533 Neb. Rev. Stat. § 59-1602.

534 Hage v. Gen. Serv. Bur., 306 F. Supp. 2d 883 (D. Neb. 2003) (declining to grant defendant's motion for summary judgment because although defendant collection agency was generally regulated, its specific acts were not). See also Henggeler v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 2012 WL 2855104 (D. Neb. July 5, 2012) (applying state UDAP statute to deceptive debt collection by collection firm and creditor).

535 Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.0923(4).

536 Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.092(8). But see Carter v. Richland Holdings, Inc., 2018 WL 4566667 (D. Nev. Sept. 24, 2018) (mistakenly reading this prohibition to apply only to defendant who is original party to transaction, not to debt buyers or collection attorneys who misrepresent debtor's rights).

537 Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.0915(15).

538 Carter v. Richland Holdings, Inc., 2018 WL 4566667 (D. Nev. Sept. 24, 2018) (prohibition against making false representations in transaction is inapplicable to debt buyer and collection attorney who did not enter into transaction with debtor); Marshall v. CBE Grp., Inc., 2018 WL 1567852 (D. Nev. Mar. 30, 2018); Gage v. Cox Commc'ns, Inc., 2017 WL 1536219 (D. Nev. Apr. 27, 2017); Peatrowsky v. Persolve, 2014 WL 1215061 (D. Nev. Mar. 24, 2014).

539 Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.0918(4) (caller ID blocking), § 598.092(5) (investment opportunities), § 598.092(6) (investment fees), § 598.0923(5) (land contracts).

540 Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.092(14).

541 Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.092(8).

business or occupation without a required license,[542] and using coercion, duress, or intimidation in a transaction,[543] without limiting these prohibitions to sales of goods or services, is a strong indication that these more general prohibitions are not so limited. The fact that the statute defines wrongful repossession as an unfair act[544] should be sufficient in itself to establish that the statute applies to post-sale enforcement of the obligation.

New Hampshire: New Hampshire's UDAP statute broadly defines unfair and deceptive practices[545] and trade or commerce,[546] and there is no statutory exemption for post-sale acts. An unpublished state supreme court decision affirms a UDAP judgment against a car dealer for its collection practices, without mentioning any concerns about the scope of the statute.[547]

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 56:8-2 prohibits unlawful acts "in connection with the sale or advertisement of any merchandise or real estate, or with the subsequent performance of" the defendant. This broad language easily covers debt collection, and some courts have so ruled.[548] However, a number of decisions, some based on dicta in a non-germane state supreme court decision,[549] hold that debt collectors fall outside the statute's scope because they are not selling merchandise.[550]

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 57-12-2(C) defines "trade or commerce" to include "distribution" of "any property," "any services," or "any thing of value." Construing this language in light of N.M. Stat. Ann. § 57-12-2(D), which defines "unfair or deceptive trade practice" to include false or misleading statements "in connection with . . . the collection of debts," it is clear that that the statute applies to debt collection, and a number of cases have so ruled.[551] The private cause of action[552] is also not limited in a way that would exclude debt collection.

New York: N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 349(a) prohibits deception "in the conduct of any business, trade or commerce." This language is broad enough to include debt collection and other post-sale acts, and a number of courts have applied the statute to debt collection.[553] In addition, a practice that is a normal part of the collector's business meets the requirement imposed by New York courts that the defendant's acts be shown to have a broader impact on consumers at large.[554] The weakness of New York's UDAP statute, however, is that it only prohibits deception, not unfair practices, so a number of cases have refused to apply it to non-deceptive debt collection harassment.[555] Courts also hold that a violation of the state debt collection law, for which there is no private cause of action, cannot be framed as a UDAP violation.[556] Nonetheless, a free-standing claim of

542 Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.0923(1).

543 Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.0923(4).

544 Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.092(10).

545 N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 358-A:2.

546 N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 358-A:1(II).

547 Rowe v. Condodemetraky, 2017 WL 1367208 (N.H. Feb. 15, 2017). See also Harris Wayside Furn. Co. v. Idearc Media Corp., 2007 WL 1847313 (D.N.H. June 25, 2007) (applying UDAP statute to debt collection).

548 Pollitt v. DRS Towing, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1466378, at *4 n.5 (D.N.J. Apr. 18, 2011) (statute applies to purchasers of defaulted debt); Whittingham v. Amended Mortgage Elec. Registration Services, Inc., 2007 WL 1456196, at *7–8 (D.N.J. May 15, 2007) (imposition of unjustified charges on mortgage loan). See also Manahawkin Convalescent v. O'Neill, 85 A.2d 947, 962 (N.J. 2014) (noting that nursing home's billing and collection functions likely do not fall within "learned professional" exception to UDAP statute, without otherwise addressing coverage of debt collection activity).

549 Gennari v. Weichert Co. Realtors, 691 A.2d 350, 365 (N.J. 1997) (stating in dicta that "the misrepresentation has to be one which is material to the transaction . . . made to induce the buyer to make the purchase"; case did not involve post-sale activities or examine the provision extending the statute to "subsequent performance").

550 Chulsky v. Hudson Law Offices, 777 F. Supp. 2d 823 (D.N.J. Mar. 22, 2011) (UDAP statute does not apply to debt buyers); Nicholls v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2010 WL 1257738 (D.N.J. Mar. 29, 2010) (giving insufficient weight to broad "in connection with" language and construing statute to require that unlawful act induce consumer to enter into transaction); Boyko v. Am. Int'l Group, Inc., 2009 WL 5194431 (D.N.J. Dec. 23, 2009) (debt collection on behalf of person who sold merchandise is not sale of merchandise, so UDAP statute inapplicable); Joe Hand Promotions, Inc. v. Mills, 567 F. Supp. 2d 719, 723–724 (D.N.J. 2008) (collection activities are not "in connection with" underlying transaction); Depolink Court Reporting & Litig. Support Services v. Rochman, 64 A.3d 579 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2013); Hoffman v. Encore Capital Group, Inc., 2008 WL 5245306 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. Dec. 18, 2008) (affirming dismissal of claim regarding debt buyer's collection activities, on ground that it did not sell anything or induce consumers to incur any obligation).

551 Campos v. Brooksbank, 120 F. Supp. 2d 1271 (D.N.M. 2000) (refusing to dismiss UDAP claim against attorney for unfair collection practices); Russey v. Rankin, 911 F. Supp. 1449 (D.N.M. 1995) (awarding treble damages where attorney sent false and misleading letter to debtors); Page & Wirtz Const. Co. v. Solomon, 794 P.2d 349, 353 (N.M. 1990) (phone call might have been covered by state UDAP statute if it "was an attempt to collect a debt").

552 N.M. Stat. Ann.§ 57-12-10.

553 See Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163 (E.D.N.Y. 2013); Rozier v. Fin. Recovery Sys., Inc., 2011 WL 2295116 (E.D.N.Y. June 7, 2011) (refusing to dismiss claim regarding deceptive debt collection letter); Boyd v. J.E. Robert Co., 2010 WL 5772892 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2010), adopted, 2011 WL 477547 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 2, 2011); Serin v. Northern Leasing Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 7823216 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 18, 2009) (filing of frivolous lawsuits); Cyphers v. Litton Loan Servicing, L.L.P., 503 F. Supp. 2d 547 (N.D.N.Y. 2007) (denying defendant's motion for summary judgment on plaintiff's UDAP suit for unfair debt collection practices); Fontana v. C. Barry & Assoc., 2007 WL 2580490 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 4, 2007) (awarding attorney fees to plaintiffs in successful UDAP suit for unfair debt collection practices); In re Scrimpsher, 17 B.R. 999 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1982) (seller's collection of bad check is part of its business, trade, or commerce or furnishing of service); Midland Funding, L.L.C. v. Giraldo, 961 N.Y.S.2d 743 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2013). See also Erdman v. HSBC Auto Fin., 2011 WL 3420849 (W.D.N.Y. Aug. 4, 2011) (refusing to dismiss UDAP claim against auto financing entity that dishonestly induced car buyer to settle his debt, but then sold balance of obligation to third parties).

554 Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163 (E.D.N.Y. 2013); Rozier v. Fin. Recovery Sys., Inc., 2011 WL 2295116 (E.D.N.Y. June 7, 2011) (deceptive letter mailed to many debtors). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.4.3.6 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

555 See, e.g., Mascoll v. Strumpf, 2006 WL 2795175 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 26, 2006) (no private right of action under state debt collection statute, and UDAP statute confers private right of action for debt collection violations only where consumer was deceived; not shown here where creditor continued collection action after learning of identity theft).

556 Conboy v. AT&T Corp., 241 F.3d 242, 257–258 (2d Cir. 2001).

deceptive debt collection is actionable under the UDAP statute, even if it overlaps with a possible violation of the debt collection statute.[557] Any other interpretation would be contrary to the UDAP statute's explicit statement that it "shall apply to all deceptive acts or practices declared unlawful, whether or not subject to any other law of this state."[558]

North Carolina: A portion of North Carolina's UDAP statute explicitly addresses debt collection.[559] If the debt collection provisions apply to the activity, however, then the consumer cannot make a separate claim under the general provisions of the UDAP statute.[560]

North Dakota: Although North Dakota courts have not addressed the question, it is reasonable to conclude that the statute applies to post-sale acts since they would occur "in connection with the sale . . . of any merchandise."[561] "Merchandise" is broadly defined as "any objects, wares, goods, commodities, intangibles, real estate, charitable contributions, or services."[562]

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1345.02(A) provides that unfair or deceptive acts are UDAP violations whether they occur before, during, or after the transaction. In 2016, the state supreme court held that the UDAP statute applies to a debt buyer and the law firm it hired to collect a debt, including their litigation activity.[563] The court held that the debt buyer and the collection firm met the statute's definition of "supplier" because their efforts to obtain payment from the debtor amounted to solicitation of a consumer transaction. It also rejected the defendants' argument that, since the transaction creating the debt—a credit card debt between the consumer and a bank—is exempt from the UDAP statute, then a non-bank's collection of that debt is also exempt. The court distinguished a 2013 decision[564] that had held the UDAP statute inapplicable to mortgage servicers. Many earlier decisions also hold that the statute applies to debt collection.[565]

Oklahoma: A number of federal district court decisions hold that the UDAP statute does not apply to debt collection and other post-sale acts.[566] These decisions appear to be inconsistent with Okla. Stat. tit. 15, § 752(13), which says that a prohibited deceptive trade practice "may occur before, during, or after a consumer transaction is entered into." In 2011, the legislature resolved the question by amending the UDAP statute to prohibit two specific practices on the part of debt collectors.[567] These prohibitions would be meaningless if the statute did not apply to debt collection. However, one decision mistakenly construes the amendment to subject debt collectors to the UDAP statute only if they commit the two specifically prohibited practices.[568] This view is untenable, because the specific prohibitions can apply to a debt collector only if the collector falls within the statute's general scope requirements. In 2017, the Oklahoma Supreme Court applied the statute to a creditor's post-sale collection activities, including false statements about whether it had received the debtor's payments, 557 Nick's Garage v. Progressive Cas. Ins. Co., 875 F.3d 107 (2d Cir. 2017) (N.Y. law) (UDAP claim is viable where plaintiff makes free-standing claim of deceptiveness even if it overlaps with a possible claim under another statute that is not independently actionable); Samms v. Abrams, Fensterman, Fensterman, Eisman, Formato, Ferrara & Wolf, L.L.P., 163 F. Supp. 3d 109 (S.D.N.Y. 2016) (demand for unauthorized fees violated UDAP statute; claim not barred by fact that this conduct was also forbidden by debt collection statute that provides no private remedy).

558 N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 349(g) (McKinney).

559 N.C. Gen. Stat. §§ 75-50 to 75-56. See Eley v. Mid/East Acceptance Corp., 614 S.E.2d 555 (N.C. Ct. App. 2005) (applying UDAP statute to repossession).

560 N.C. Gen. Stat. § 75-50(3). See DirecTV, Inc. v. Cephas, 294 F. Supp. 2d 760 (M.D.N.C. 2003) (exclusive remedy provision of debt collection act does not bar UDAP claim arising from collection of an obligation, here payment for alleged signal theft, that is not debt covered by debt collection statute).

561 N.D. Cent. Code § 51-15-02.

562 N.D. Cent. Code § 51-15-01(3).

563 Taylor v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 72 N.E.3d 573 (Ohio 2016). See also Carlo v. Midwest Recovery Sys., L.L.C., 2018 WL 5267163 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 23, 2018) (UDAP statute applies to debt buyer even if it has no direct contact with consumer, but merely reports debt to credit reporting agency). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.2.2.1.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library (further discussion of Ohio issues).

564 Anderson v. Barclay's Capital Real Estate, Inc., 989 N.E.2d 997 (Ohio 2013) (mortgage servicing is not consumer transaction but is incidental to mortgage lending, which is exempt; also holding that mortgage servicer is not "supplier" as defined by UDAP statute because it does not affect or solicit consumer transactions).

565 See, e.g., Turner v. Lerner, Sampson & Rothfuss, 776 F. Supp. 2d 498 (N.D. Ohio 2011) (applies to law firm's deceptive institution of foreclosure suit); Hagy v. Demers & Adams, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6091797 (S.D. Ohio Dec. 7, 2011); Edwards v. Velocity Invs., L.L.C., 2011 WL 4007394 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 8, 2011) (UDAP statute applies to attorney debt collectors); Midland Funding L.L.C. v. Brent, 644 F. Supp. 2d 961 (N.D. Ohio 2009), as modified by 2009 WL 3086560 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 23, 2009); Evans v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 574 F. Supp. 2d 808, 817 (S.D. Ohio 2008); Delawder v. Platinum Fin. Services Corp., 443 F. Supp. 2d 942 (S.D. Ohio 2005) (denying motion to dismiss UDAP claim against collection firm); Havens-Tobias v. Eagle, 2003 WL 1601461 (Ohio Ct. App. Mar. 28, 2003); Celebrezze v. United Research, Inc., 482 N.E.2d 1260 (Ohio Ct. App. 1984); Santiago v. S.S. Kresge Co., 2 Ohio Op. 3d 54 (Ohio C.P. Cuyahoga Cty. 1976); Liggins v. May Co., 337 N.E.2d 816 (Ohio Ct. Com. Pl. 1975). See also Couto v. Gibson, Inc., 1992 WL 37800 (Ohio Ct. App. Feb. 26, 1992) (post-sale settlement practices).

566 Oklahoma ex rel. Bd. of Regents of U. of Oklahoma v. Greer, 205 F. Supp. 2d 1273 (W.D. Okla. 2001) (state UDAP statute does not apply to debt collectors); Melvin v. Credit Collections, Inc., 2001 WL 34047943 (W.D. Okla. Apr. 5, 2001); Melvin v. Nationwide Debt Recovery, 2000 WL 33950122 (W.D. Okla. Aug. 24, 2000). See also Terry v. Nuvell Credit Corp., 2007 WL 2746919 (W.D. Okla. Sept. 20, 2007) (unlawful repossession does not constitute consumer transaction within meaning of act).

567 Okla. Stat. tit. 15, § 753(31), (32).

568 Walkabout v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2015 WL 2345308 (W.D. Okla. May 14, 2015) (grafting onto statute limiting statement from pre-amendment case; holding, without support in the statutory language, that it applies to debt collectors only when they violate one of two new specific prohibitions). See also Denton v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 6721643, at *8–9 (N.D. Okla. Mar. 14, 2019) (holding statute inapplicable to debt collection; noting this amendment in footnote, but failing to consider its implications for scope of statute).

and obstruction of the debtor's attempts to catch up and avoid repossession.[569]

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 646.607(1) specifically prohibits unconscionable tactics in "collection or enforcement of an obligation." The state supreme court has held that this prohibition applies to third-party collectors, even though the consumer is not their "customer."[570] However, the statute does not provide a private cause of action to enforce this prohibition.[571] On the other hand, Or. Rev. Stat. § 646.639, part of the UDAP statute, prohibits certain specific unlawful debt collection practices and is subject to a separate private cause of action.[572]

Pennsylvania: Pennsylvania's UDAP statute applies to trade or commerce, defined broadly.[573] A number of decisions have held that the statute applies to debt collection.[574] The state debt collection statute provides that a debt collector's violation of any of its provisions constitutes a violation of the UDAP statute.[575]

Rhode Island: R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-13.1-2 prohibits unfair or deceptive acts or practices "in the conduct of any trade or commerce." "Trade or commerce" is broadly defined by R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-13.1-1(5) to include "the advertising, offering for sale, sale, or distribution of any services and any property, tangible or intangible, real personal, or mixed, and any other article, commodity, or thing of value." These terms are broad enough to cover post-sale practices such as debt collection. The only issue is the extremely broad interpretation that Rhode Island courts have given to the statutory exemption for regulated industries at R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-13.1-4.[576] Since Rhode Island has a debt collection practices statute that requires debt collectors to register, and imposes a number of restrictions on their practices,[577] it is conceivable that courts might find that the existence of this statute exempts debt collectors from the UDAP statute. However, since the debt collection practices statute does not apply to creditors collecting their own debts, the debt collection practices statute would not be a basis to exempt them.

South Carolina: South Carolina's UDAP statute applies to practices "in the conduct of any trade or commerce,"[578] a term that is broadly defined.[579] Debt collection appears to be covered by the statute, and several courts have applied the statute to debt collection.[580]

South Dakota: S.D. Codified Laws § 37-24-6(1) prohibits deceptive acts "in connection with the sale . . . of any merchandise." The term "merchandise" is broadly defined.[581] Although South Dakota courts have not addressed the issue, the broad language "in connection with" would appear to cover post-sale acts such as debt collection as long as the transaction involves "merchandise."

Tennessee: The Tennessee Supreme Court has held that the state UDAP statute, which prohibits unfair or deceptive acts "affecting" the conduct of any trade or commerce,[582] applies to debt collection as long as the underlying transaction falls within the statute's scope.[583] The court distinguished its earlier decision, Pursell v. First American National Bank,[584] which held that a repossession dispute did not fall within the UDAP statute's definition of "trade" or "commerce," as confined to its particular facts.

Texas: Tex. Bus. & Com. Code § 17.45(6), defining trade or commerce, is broad enough to include post-sale acts such as debt collection. However, the underlying debt must fall within the statute's scope, so the statute does not apply to collection of a debt that arises from a credit transaction that is not connected to the purchase of goods or services.[585] The statute's 569 Green Tree Servicing L.L.C. v. Dalke, 405 P.3d 676 (Okla. 2017). See also Hurt v. Vanderbilt Mortg. & Fin., Inc., 2019 WL 3069437 (W.D. Okla. July 12, 2019) (refusing to dismiss claim based on collection of debt arising from credit sale of manufactured home). But cf. Denton v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 6721643 (N.D. Okla. Mar. 14, 2019) (holding statute inapplicable to debt collection, without citing Green Tree).

570 Gordon v. Rosenblum, 393 P.3d 1122 (Or. 2017). Accord Russell v. Ray Klein, Inc., 2019 WL 6137455 (D. Or. Nov. 19, 2019) (UDAP statute applies to debt buyer and its in-house attorney who issued garnishment to debtor's employer that sought unauthorized attorney fee).

571 Or. Rev. Stat. § 646.638(1) (creating private cause of action only for violation of § 646.608, not § 646.607). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 12.2.1 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

572 Or. Rev. Stat. § 646.641. See also Or. Rev. Stat. § 646.607(6) (collection practice that is unlawful under Or. Rev. Stat. § 646.639 is UDAP violation).

573 73 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 201-2(3) (West).

574 See, e.g., Trunzo v. Citi Mortgage, 876 F. Supp. 2d 521 (W.D. Pa. 2012) (UDAP statute applies to assignee's collection efforts); Daniels v. Baritz, 2003 WL 21027238, at *5 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 30, 2003); Flores v. Shapiro & Kreisman, 246 F. Supp. 2d 427 (E.D. Pa. 2002); Pennsylvania Bankers Ass'n v. Commonwealth, 427 A.2d 730 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 1981); Pennsylvania Retailers Ass'n v. Lazin, 426 A.2d 712 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 1981).

575 73 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 2270.5 (West). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 3.2.6 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

576 See, e.g., Chavers v. Fleet Bank, 844 A.2d 666 (R.I. 2004). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.3.3.3.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

577 R.I. Gen. Laws §§ 19-14.9-1 through 19-14.9-14.

578 S.C. Code Ann. § 39-5-20.

579 S.C. Code Ann. § 39-5-10(b).

580 Beattie v. Nations Credit Fin. Services Corp., 69 Fed. Appx. 585 (4th Cir. 2003) (UDAP statute applies to defendant that pursued collection and foreclosure on an account that had been satisfied; exemption for transactions permitted under laws administered by regulatory body inapplicable since no state agency had approved this practice); Craig v. Andrew Aaron & Assoc., Inc., 947 F. Supp. 208 (D.S.C. 1996) (refusing to grant summary judgment to collector on UDAP claim involving harassing collection calls); In re Daniel, 137 B.R. 884 (D.S.C. 1992).

581 S.D. Codified Laws § 37-24-1(7).

582 Tenn. Code Ann. § 47-18-104(a).

583 Franks v. Sykes, 600 S.W.3d 908, 915 (Tenn. 2020).

584 937 S.W.2d 838 (Tenn. 1996).

585 See, e.g., Marquez v. Fed. Nat'l Mortgage Ass'n, 2011 WL 3714623, at *4 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 23, 2011) (UDAP statute is limited to goods and services and does not apply to collection of mortgage loan); Henry v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2011 WL 2261166 (E.D. Tex. May 10, 2011) (UDAP statute inapplicable to collection of debt arising from loan), adopted, 2011 WL 2214007 (E.D. Tex. June 7, 2011); Cushman v. GC Services, L.P., 657 F. Supp. 2d 834 (S.D. Tex. 2009) (UDAP statute inapplicable to credit card, so does not cover collection of credit card debt), aff'd, 397 Fed. Appx. 24 (5th Cir. 2010); Mitchell v. Chase Home Fin., L.L.C., 2008 WL 623395 (N.D. Tex. Mar. 4, 2008) (UDAP statute, which is prohibitions against deception and unconscionability are also broad. In EMC Mortgage Corp. v. Jones, a Texas appellate court upheld an award for damages based in part on a UDAP claim for unreasonable collection practices.[586]

Utah: Utah Code Ann. §§ 13-11-4(1) and 13-11-5(1) define deceptive and unconscionable acts or practices as violations whether they occur before, during, or after the transaction. The statute also defines a "supplier" subject to the statute to include a person who "enforces consumer transactions."[587] A Tenth Circuit decision holds that the statute covers debt collection.[588]

Vermont: Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9, § 2453 broadly prohibits unfair or deceptive acts or practices "in commerce." There is no language in the statute that would limit "commerce" to exclude post-sale acts. Further, Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9, § 2451a(a) broadly defines "consumer" as "any person who purchases, leases, contracts for, or otherwise agrees to pay consideration for" goods or services. The language "agrees to pay consideration for" also suggests coverage of post-sale collection practices. The private cause of action set forth at Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9, § 2461(b) is not limited in any way that would preclude suit based on post-sale acts. In addition, the Vermont Attorney General has adopted regulations under the UDAP statute regarding debt collection practices.[589]

Virginia: Virginia courts have not ruled on the question whether the UDAP statute applies to debt collection. The statute's prohibitions apply to acts "in connection with" a consumer transaction,[590] which would seem to cover post-sale matters such as debt collection. However, the exclusion at Va. Code § 59.1-199(C) for aspects of consumer transactions that are regulated by the federal Consumer Credit Protection Act could be construed to exempt debt collectors who are subject to the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, which is a subchapter of the CCPA. Even in that case, the statute would still apply to collection activities by the original creditor, since the FDCPA does not apply when the original creditor is collecting its own debt in its own name.[591]

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code §§ 19.86.010(2) and 19.86.010(3), which define "trade," "commerce," and "asset" broadly, are clearly broad enough to include post-sale acts, and neither the section prohibiting unfair and deceptive acts, nor the section creating a private cause of action, is worded in a way that would exclude post-sale acts. The state supreme court has held the statute applicable to collection activities.[592] The state debt collection statute also provides that a violation of it constitutes a violation of the UDAP statute.[593]

West Virginia: Both the state UDAP statute and a set of specific debt collection protections[594] are part of the West Virginia Consumer Credit and Protection Act. The state supreme court has held that these protections apply regardless of whether a creditor is collecting its own debt or is using an independent collection agency.[595]

Wisconsin: One of Wisconsin's UDAP statutes, Wis. Stat. Ann. § 100.18, only forbids false advertising (although it defines advertising quite broadly).[596] A second UDAP statute, Wis. Stat. Ann. § 100.20, applies to "business and trade," which is clearly broad enough to include debt collection. However, a private cause of action is available only if the defendant violated one of the specific UDAP regulations, and none of the UDAP regulations target debt collection practices. As a result, section 100.20 is not usually of use to consumers in debt collection matters.

Wyoming: Under Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 40-12-105(a), a deceptive act need only be "in connection with" a consumer transaction, and the private cause of action is not worded in a way that would exclude post-sale acts.[597] However, Wyoming courts have not yet addressed this question.

16.3.4 Deceptive Debt Collection Activities

Numerous collection activities have been found to be "deceptive" under state UDAP statutes, including:

- Sending consumers dunning letters that appear to have been issued by the government;[598] limited to goods and services, does not cover collection of home mortgage debt).

586 252 S.W.3d 857 (Tex. App. 2008). See also Flenniken v. Longview Bank & Trust Co., 661 S.W.2d 705 (Tex. 1984) (applies to foreclosure); Kheir v. Progressive County Mut. Ins. Co., 2006 WL 1594031 (Tex. App. June 13, 2006) (upholding UDAP damages award for wrongful repossession); Nelson v. Schanzer, 788 S.W.2d 81 (Tex. App. 1990) (UDAP statute applies to moving and storage company hired by sheriff to move evicted tenant's belongings, because underlying transaction was consumer transaction).

587 Utah Code Ann. § 13-11-3(6) (West).

588 Heard v. Bonneville Billing & Collections, 216 F.3d 1087 (10th Cir. 2000) (Utah law) (debt collector's practice was deceptive and unconscionable in violation of Utah Code Ann. §§ 13-11-4 and 13-11-5). Accord Sexton v. Poulsen & Skousen P.C., 372 F. Supp. 3d 1307 (D. Utah 2019); Reid v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2016 WL 247571 (D. Utah Jan. 20, 2016); Martinez v. Johnson, 2013 WL 1031363 (D. Utah Mar. 14, 2013) (applies to attorney collector); Brown v. Constantino, 2009 WL 3617692 (D. Utah Oct. 27, 2009) (UDAP statute applies to attorney collector). See also Naranjo v. Cherrington Firm, L.L.C., 285 F. Supp. 3d 1242, 1246 (D. Utah 2018) (application of UDAP statute to debt collection is not displaced by FDCPA).

589 Vt. Consumer Protection Rules, Vt. Admin. Code 3-2-103:CP104.

590 Va. Code Ann. § 59.1-200.

591 See § 4.8.1, supra.

592 Panag v. Farmers Ins. Co., 204 P.3d 885 (Wash. 2009) (UDAP statute applies to attempts by collection agency for other driver's insurance company to collect subrogated debt from alleged tortfeasor); Evergreen Collectors v. Holt, 803 P.2d 10, 14 (Wash. Ct. App. 1991) (violation of collection agency act is per se UDAP violation).

593 Wash. Rev. Code § 19.16.440.

594 W. Va. Code §§ 46A-2-122 to 46A-2-129a.

595 Thomas v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 266 S.E.2d 905 (W. Va. 1980). See also State ex rel. McGraw v. Telecheck Services, Inc., 582 S.E.2d 885, 897 n.20 (W. Va. 2003).

596 Scheunemann v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 802 F. Supp. 2d 981 (E.D. Wis. 2011) (section 100.18 applies only to sales promotions, not debt collection).

597 Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 40-12-108.

598 State v. O'Neill Investigations, Inc., 609 P.2d 520 (Alaska 1980) (false threats of suit, arrest and credit reports; simulated legal documents); Thomas v. Sun Furniture Co., 399 N.E.2d 567 (Ohio Ct. App. 1978) ("Notice of Court Action to Collect Debt" designed to be sent after

- Misrepresenting the imminence of suit;[599]
- Falsely implying that a referral to an attorney had occurred or would occur;[600]
- Deceptively implying that an obligation is already fixed beyond reasonable dispute and that immediate payment is the only reasonable course of action;[601]
- Threatening to enforce illegal or unenforceable contracts;[602]
- False threats of criminal prosecution;[603]
- Threatening to invoke criminal or civil penalties for dishonored checks under inapplicable statutes;[604]
- Exaggerating the creditor's contractual or legal remedies;[605] judgment was simulated process when sent prior to suit); Liggins v. May Co., 373 N.E.2d 404 (Ohio Ct. Com. Pl. 1977). See also §§ 7.2.9, 7.2.13, 16.2.4.4, supra.

599 Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Services, Inc., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1249 (D. Kan. 2003) (denying collector's motion for summary judgment; representing that debtor would be summoned to court in twenty-four hours was unconscionable); Wright v. Asset Acceptance Corp., 2000 WL 33216031 (S.D. Ohio Dec. 30, 1999) (threat to sue debtor could be misrepresentation of imminence of suit if collector did not own debt); Russey v. Rankin, 911 F. Supp. 1449 (D.N.M. 1995) (statement that agency could file suit within thirty days was deceptive where agency was not licensed in New Mexico and its usual practice of taking assignments of debts and suing on them was forbidden by New Mexico law; attorney's violations were "knowing" where he designed form letters, even though he did not approve sending of each letter); Wagner v. Am. Nat'l Educ. Corp., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10287 (D. Conn. Dec. 30, 1983) (misrepresenting meaning of "final" demand letters may be UDAP violation); In re Belile, 209 B.R. 658 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1997) (letter threatening referral to collection agency's legal department falsely implied imminent legal action, in violation of UDAP statute, because agency's lawyer was not admitted in consumer's home state and had not affiliated with local lawyer); State v. O'Neill Investigations, Inc., 609 P.2d 520 (Alaska 1980) (false threats of suit, arrest and credit reports; simulated legal documents); Liggins v. May Co., 373 N.E.2d 404 (Ohio Ct. Com. Pl. 1977). See also Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Check Investors, Inc., 502 F.3d 159 (3d Cir. 2007) (affirming judgment under FTC Act and FDCPA against collector who threatened consumers who wrote dishonored checks but never in fact prosecuted); Trans World Accounts, Inc. v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 594 F.2d 212 (9th Cir. 1979) (threat of suit unfair and deceptive under FTC Act); In re Capax, Inc., 91 F.T.C. 1048 (F.T.C. 1978), aff'd per curiam, 607 F.2d 493 (D.C. Cir. 1979) ("exhaust every legal avenue" and "all possible legal means"; flat rate collector lacked authority from creditors to sue). But cf. Madonna v. Academy Collection Serv., Inc., 1997 WL 530101 (D. Conn. Aug. 12, 1997) (threat of legal action was not deceptive where creditor sometimes sued under similar circumstances and litigation had not been ruled out though probability of suit was low). See generally §§ 7.2.2, 7.2.4, 7.2.5, 7.2.10, 7.3, 7.3.5, supra.

600 Spicer v. Lenahan, 2004 WL 3112554 (D. Conn. Sept. 14, 2004) (attorney violated UDAP statute by allowing collector to use his letterhead); Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Services, Inc., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1249 (D. Kan. 2003) (denying collector's motion for summary judgment; misrepresenting that attorney had considered specific actions and was ready to take them was unconscionable); Smith v. Short Term Loans, L.L.C., 2001 WL 127303 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 9, 2001) (consumers stated claim against in-house attorney who sent out collection letters on his letterhead, leading unsophisticated consumer to think third party was involved); Irwin v. Mascott, 112 F. Supp. 2d 937 (N.D. Cal. 2000) (misrepresentation of attorney involvement violates California Unfair Competition Law); Russey v. Rankin, 911 F. Supp. 1449 (D.N.M. 1995) (collection agency and attorney liable under state UDAP statute for sending letter falsely purporting to be from attorney); Bennett v. Tri-State Collection Serv., 1976 WL 38806 (Ohio Ct. Com. Pleas Aug. 24, 1976). But cf. Waters v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 2011 WL 1344452 (D. Mass. Mar. 4, 2011) (Mag. recommendation) (collector's threat to refer matter to attorney was truthful), adopted, 2011 WL 1344544 (D. Mass. Mar. 22, 2011).

601 Panag v. Farmers Ins. Co., 204 P.3d 885 (Wash. 2009) (driver's obligation to pay a motor vehicle tort claim). See generally §§ 7.2.5, 7.3, supra.

602 CFPB v. NDG Fin. Corp., 2016 WL 7188792, at *13 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 2, 2016) (refusing to dismiss claim that representing to consumers that they owed repayment of loans that were actually void under state's usury and lender licensing laws is unfair practice); CFPB v. CashCall, Inc., 2016 WL 4820635 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 31, 2016) (granting CFPB's motion for summary judgment on claim that defendant's conduct in servicing and collecting loans that were void or unenforceable was deceptive because it created impression that loans were enforceable and that borrowers were obligated to repay them); O'Rourke v. Lahda, 2000 WL 1624833 (Conn. Super. Ct. Sept. 22, 2000) (fact question whether state UDAP statute violated by attempt to foreclose mortgage that was unenforceable because lender and broker were unlicensed); Peel v. Credit Acceptance Corp., 408 S.W.3d 191 (Mo. Ct. App. 2013) (upholding punitive damage award against assignee of retail installment contract that continued to demand payment and threaten to disable vehicle, even though debt was void and FTC holder notice made assignee liable for dealer's fraud). See also Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783, 810 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (filing debt collection suits while lacking legal authority because of failure to comply with state fictitious name laws or obtain valid assignment of debt). But cf. DuFour v. Be L.L.C., 291 F.R.D. 413 (N.D. Cal. 2013) (unknowingly seeking collection on contracts that are voidable rather than void is not UDAP violation); Lalande Air & Water Corp. v. Pratt, 795 A.2d 1233 (Vt. 2002) (manufactured home park's attempt to collect rent, to which it believed itself entitled, not oppressive enough to be unfair practice, where Commissioner had denied full amount of rent increase, but decision was on appeal, and statute was being challenged as unconstitutional).

603 See, e.g., Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Services, Inc., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1249 (D. Kan. 2003); DirecTV, Inc. v. Cephas, 294 F. Supp. 2d 760 (M.D.N.C. 2003); Brown v. C.I.L., Inc., 1996 WL 164294 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 1, 1996); Tex. Bus. & Comm. Code § 17.46(b)(28)(B).

604 See, e.g., Jones v. Kunin, 2000 WL 34402017 (S.D. Ill. May 1, 2000) (payday lender threatened to seek damages under civil bad check statute, which did not apply to postdated checks known to be bad when written); Irwin v. Mascott, 112 F. Supp. 2d 937 (N.D. Cal. 2000) (collector of NSF checks sought damages under statute aimed at shoplifters and under civil bad check law without following required procedure); Hartke v. Illinois Payday Loans, Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14937 (C.D. Ill. Sept. 13, 1999) (payday lender's reference to "statutory penalties, attorney fees and costs" was misleading enough to state claim under Illinois Consumer Fraud Act, where Illinois bad check statute inapplicable to postdated checks which payee knew were bad when written); Turner v. E-Z Check Cashing, 35 F. Supp. 2d 1042, 1051 (M.D. Tenn. 1999) (threat to prosecute under bad check law, which was inapplicable to postdated checks which payee knew to be bad when written, violated Tennessee Consumer Protection Act); Hamilton v. York, 987 F. Supp. 953 (E.D. Ky. 1997) (threatening criminal prosecution under bad check laws, where "check cashing" transaction was really usurious loan). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 8 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (criminal and civil penalties for dishonored checks).

605 Davis v. Hunt, Leibert, Jacobson, P.C., 2014 WL 5798585, at *7 (D. Conn. Nov. 7, 2014) (refusing to dismiss claim that collection firm violated state UDAP statute by demanding that family vacate home, without advising them that it had not obtained the court order necessary to give it the right to possession); Harrington v. CACV of Colorado, L.L.C., 508 F. Supp. 2d 128 (D. Mass. 2007) (denying motion to dismiss claim that collector took action that could not legally be taken by filing suit in distant forum and without having registered as foreign

- Misrepresenting that ownership of a debt had been transferred to the collector;[606]
- Making false statements in documents filed in court;[607]
- Collecting or demanding an amount greater than actually owed;[608] corporation); Spicer v. Lenahan, 2004 WL 3112554 (D. Conn. Sept. 14, 2004) (misrepresenting that simple collection action was "federal matter"); Calabrese v. CSC Holdings, Inc., 283 F. Supp. 2d 797 (E.D.N.Y. 2003) (accusing consumer of stealing cable program, and representing that ordering or possessing decoder can be basis of civil claim); Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Services, Inc., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1249 (D. Kan. 2003) (denying collector's motion for summary judgment; threat to prosecute debtor criminally and put lien on everything he owned was unconscionable); Gervais v. O'Connell, Harris & Assoc., 297 F. Supp. 2d 435 (D. Conn. 2003) (misrepresenting that debtor had made token payment that restarted statute of limitations was CUTPA violation); Littledove v. JBC & Assoc., 2001 WL 42199 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 11, 2001) (allowing California § 17200 class action to go forward against large volume collector whose form letters allegedly threatened loss of driver's license and excessive fees, not permitted by California law); Edwards v. McCormick, 136 F. Supp. 2d 795 (S.D. Ohio 2001) (threat to foreclose, when foreclosure was forbidden by statute, was UDAP violation); Tenuto v. Transworld Sys., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14344 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 29, 2000) (allowing class action under Pennsylvania UDAP statute to go forward with allegations that creditor threatened garnishment, which Pennsylvania law forbids in most consumer cases); Dixon v. Brooks, 604 S.W.2d 330 (Tex. App. 1980) (seller under contract for deed threatened to terminate contract without providing statutorily required notice); Evergreen Collectors v. Holt, 803 P.2d 10 (Wash. Ct. App. 1991) (threatening to collect attorney fees, when not entitled to them, is violation of collection agency law and therefore also UDAP violation). See also Tomlinson v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3873754, at *3 (D. Kan. Sept. 5, 2017) (noting in dicta that asserting that creditor can garnish wages that are exempt is violation of UDAP statute); Clarkson v. DeCaceres, 105 B.R. 266 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1989) (landlord's sale of tenant's property without any legal right to do so was false representation of character of debt and that action could be taken); Cais v. Citizens Sav. Bank, 2001 WL 1200870 (Conn. Super. Ct. Sept. 17, 2001) (allegation that bank brought foreclosure in effort to coerce payment of sums not yet due stated UDAP claim for CUTPA violation as well as abuse of process); Peel v. Credit Acceptance Corp., 408 S.W.3d 191 (Mo. Ct. App. 2013) (upholding punitive damage award against assignee of retail installment contract that continued to demand payment and threaten to disable vehicle even though debt was void and FTC holder notice made assignee liable for dealer's fraud); Leal v. Furniture Barn, Inc., 571 S.W.2d 864 (Tex. 1978) (threats to retain funds in layaway account, contrary to contract, were deceptive); CFPB, Prohibition of Unfair, Deceptive, or Abusive Acts or Practices in the Collection of Consumer Debts, CFPB Bulletin 2013-07 (July 13, 2013), available at http://files.consumerfinance.gov (threats of actions that are not intended or that collector does not have authorization to pursue are examples of unfair, deceptive, or abusive practices). But cf. Smith v. Butler & Assoc. (In re Smith), 2008 WL 4148923 (Bankr. D. Kan. Aug. 29, 2008) (where UDAP statute requires willfulness or knowledge, attempting to collect debt not UDAP violation where collector was unaware of bankruptcy stay). See generally § 7.4.1, supra.

606 Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (denying motion to dismiss claim that misrepresentation of ownership of debt and licensure was deceptive); Wright v. Asset Acceptance Corp., 2000 WL 33216031 (S.D. Ohio Dec. 30, 1999) (denial of summary judgment); Communications Sys., Inc. v. Ceruzzi, 2002 WL 207557 (Conn. Super. Ct. Jan. 17, 2002) (collector, who was not current holder of note, claimed that it was, and began sending invoices; fraudulent nondisclosure sufficiently alleged). See also Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783, 810 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (filing debt collection suits while lacking legal authority because of failure to comply with state fictitious name laws or obtain valid assignment of debt). But cf. Trent v. Mortgage Elec. Registration Sys., Inc., 2007 WL 2120262 (M.D. Fla. July 20, 2007) (not deceptive to identify foreclosure plaintiff, which was merely nominee for note holder, as creditor), aff'd, 288 Fed. Appx. 571 (11th Cir. 2008).

607 Morales v. Kavulich & Assoc., 294 F. Supp. 3d 193 (S.D.N.Y. 2018) (false statement in bank account garnishment notice that consumer was judgment debtor violates UDAP statute); Guzman v. Mel S. Harris & Assoc., 2018 WL 1665252, at *12 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 22, 2018) (allowing consumer to proceed to trial on claim that collector violated UDAP statute by submitting false affidavits of service and of merit); Maxwell v. St. Francis Health Ctr., 2017 WL 4037732 (D. Kan. Sept. 13, 2017) (refusing to dismiss claim that defendants committed deceptive act by filing false affidavits re whether debtor was in military, but holding that this act did not rise to level of unconscionability); Winslow v. Forster & Garbus, L.L.P., 2017 WL 6375744, at *13 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 13, 2017) (falsely stating in complaint that plaintiff was original creditor); DeWan v. Seideman, 2017 WL 6048816 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 5, 2017) (allowing debtor to amend complaint to allege that creditor committed deceptive practice by falsely stating in collection action that it was authorized to do business in New York); Reynolds v. Credit Mgmt. Services, Inc., 2016 WL 756469 (D. Neb. Feb. 25, 2016) (UDAP liability is fact question where collector's attorney filed wage garnishment affidavit stating that she had good reason to believe and did believe that debtor was not head of household who would be entitled to protection of greater amount of his wages from garnishment; collector may have had policy of filing such affidavits without any knowledge of facts); Osborn v. J.R.S.-I., Inc., 949 F. Supp. 2d 807 (N.D. Ill. 2013) (refusing to dismiss claim that collector committed unfair act by submitting affidavit to court stating that debt buyer's employee was familiar with the facts and that identity theft victim owed the debt, when debt buyer had acquired only a list of debts with minimal information); Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (misrepresentation of ownership of debt and licensure); Sykes v. Mel Harris & Assoc., 757 F. Supp. 2d 413 (S.D.N.Y. 2010) (refusing to dismiss claim that collection firm violated UDAP statute by filing robosigned affidavits of merit that falsely claimed personal knowledge); Midland Funding L.L.C. v. Brent, 644 F. Supp. 2d 961 (N.D. Ohio 2009), as modified by 2009 WL 3086560 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 23, 2009) (filing affidavit in collection suit that falsely stated that it was based on personal knowledge is UDAP violation); Midland Funding, L.L.C. v. Giraldo, 961 N.Y.S.2d 743 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2013) (filing collection suit containing false allegations of liability is deceptive); Estrada v. Mendoza, 275 P.3d 1024 (Utah Ct. App. 2012) (reversing judgment for payday lenders that misrepresented amounts due when they obtained writs of garnishment from small claims court; claim not barred by debtors' failure to file objections in small claims court). But see McCarthy v. WPB Partners, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4014581 (D.N.H. July 26, 2016) (lender not engaged in trade or commerce in its communications with bankruptcy court, so UDAP statute inapplicable). But cf. Healy v. BWW Law Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 281997 (D. Md. Jan. 23, 2017) (collection firm's filing of robosigned foreclosure complaint did not amount to attempting to enforce right with knowledge that right did not exist, because robosigning affected only manner of collecting debt, not right to do so).

608 Sanchez v. Ehrlich, 2018 WL 2084147 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 29, 2018) (demanding rent not owed); Scott v. Greenberg, 2017 WL 1214441 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2017) (collection firm's repeated filing of fraudulent collection actions); Douyon v. NY Med. Health Care, P.C., 894 F. Supp. 2d 245 (E.D.N.Y. 2012) (demanding interest that is not owed is UDAP violation; fact that parties could have agreed that debt would bear interest is no defense); Adams v. A. & S. Collection Assoc., Inc., 2007 WL 2206936 (D. Conn. July 30, 2007) (recommending award of $10,000 punitive damages on UDAP claim where collector required creditor to

- Misstating the amount owed;[609]
- Representing or implying that a non-debtor is responsible for a debt;[610]
- Falsely promising that a lump-sum payment will settle the entire debt;[611]
- Impersonating a law enforcement officer;[612]
- Sending simulated telegrams;[613]
- Misrepresenting that a call to a stated telephone number would reach the creditor, when calls were actually routed to a debt collector;[614]
- Repeatedly re-reporting a disputed debt as undisputed;[615] add illegal 49% collection fee and 18% interest to claims before sending them to collection), adopted, 2007 WL 9747652 (D. Conn. Aug. 30, 2007); Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783, 810 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (suing for attorney fees to which creditor was not entitled, and attempting to recover court costs in absence of valid judgment); Garner v. Academy Collection Serv., 2005 WL 643680 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 11, 2005) (allowing plaintiff to proceed on claim that defendant attempted to collect debt that had been paid); Williams v. Edelman, 408 F. Supp. 2d 1261 (S.D. Fla. 2005) (allowing plaintiff to proceed on claim that defendants attempted to collect condo fees that she did not owe); Hage v. Gen. Serv. Bureau, 2002 WL 1796575 (D. Neb. Aug. 5, 2002) (collecting postjudgment costs and collection attorney fees prejudgment in violation of Neb. law stated claim under Neb. UDAP statute); Ballard v. Equifax Check Services, Inc., 27 F. Supp. 2d 1201 (E.D. Cal. 1998) (UDAP violation to attempt to collect $20 bad check fee that was not authorized by contract or law), summary judgment for class granted by 158 F. Supp. 2d 1163 (E.D. Cal. 2001); Garland v. Mobil Oil Co., 340 F. Supp. 1095 (N.D. Ill. 1972) (threatening to assess monthly service charge on past due accounts, when in fact none was charged, violates Illinois UDAP statute); Jungkurth v. Eastern Fin. Services, Inc., 74 B.R. 323 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987); People v. Datacom Sys. Corp., 585 N.E.2d 51 (Ill. 1991); Panag v. Farmers Ins. Co., 204 P.3d 885 (Wash. 2009) (demanding full amount of insured's loss from alleged tortfeasor even though insurer had concluded she was only 40% liable is UDAP violation). See also Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Check Enforcement, 2005 WL 1677480 (D.N.J. July 18, 2005) (collector violated FTC Act by inflating amount of dishonored check claim), aff'd, 502 F.3d 159 (3d Cir. 2007); Estrada v. Mendoza, 275 P.3d 1024 (Utah Ct. App. 2012) (allowing consumers to proceed on claim that payday lenders obtained garnishments for more than amounts owed; these claims are not collateral attacks on the underlying judgments); CFPB, Prohibition of Unfair, Deceptive, or Abusive Acts or Practices in the Collection of Consumer Debts, CFPB Bulletin 2013-07 (July 13, 2013), available at http://files.consumerfinance.gov (collecting debts, interest, fees, or charges not authorized by the agreement or permitted by law and misrepresenting character, amount, or legal status of a debt are examples of unfair, deceptive, or abusive practices). But cf. Goshon v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2016 WL 742873 (D. Kan. Feb. 24, 2016) (granting summary judgment for collector; no liability under Kan. UDAP statute's general prohibition of deception, which court interprets as requiring "reason to know," where demand for amount not owed was mistake), later op. at 2016 WL 1069048 (D. Kan. Mar. 17, 2016) (granting summary judgment to creditor on same ground); Ianelli v. U.S. Bank, 996 A.2d 722 (Vt. 2010) (bank did not violate UDAP statute by representing to debtor's mother that it would repurchase debt from collection agency if she paid $150, when both were unaware that debtor had independently agreed to resolve the same debt by paying $200 to collection agency). See generally §§ 7.2.2, 8.4, supra, § 16.3.5, infra (collecting amounts that are not owed as unfair practice).

609 Bowen v. Ditech Fin. L.L.C., 2017 WL 4183081, at *20 (D. Me. Sept. 20, 2017); Marchese v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 917 F. Supp. 2d 452 (D. Md. 2013) (refusing to dismiss claim that servicer violated UDAP statute by misstating amount needed to reinstate mortgage loan).

610 Heard v. Bonneville Billing & Collections, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 14625 (10th Cir. June 26, 2000); Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2017 WL 4387351 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 3, 2017) (granting summary judgment against creditor that filed suit on time-barred debt that consumer did not owe, and took a default judgment in violation of bankruptcy stay); Gallegos v. LVNV, 169 F. Supp. 3d 1235 (D. Utah 2016) (finding that collector acted deceptively by filing suit twice; it filed second suit and obtained default judgment even though it knew at that point that it had sued the wrong person); Reid v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2016 WL 247571 (D. Utah Jan. 20, 2016) (garnishing identity theft victim's wages, after informing her employer without any basis that she was also known by judgment debtor's name, may violate state UDAP statute); Grimaldi v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 1050549 (M.D. Pa. Mar. 14, 2013) (refusing to dismiss claim that lender violated UDAP statute by misrepresenting that widow owed husband's debt, thereby inducing her to make a payment); Donnachie v. Frank S. Falzone & Assoc., P.P.L.C., 2010 WL 3191891 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 11, 2010); Wolfe v. MBNA Am. Bank, 485 F. Supp. 2d 874 (W.D. Tenn. 2007) (issuing card without verification and pursuing victim after being informed of theft were unfair acts); Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783, 810 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (routine practice of suing spouses, without obtaining any information suggesting they were liable, is violation). See also Curtis v. Citibank, 261 P.3d 1059 (Mont. 2011) (reversing decision that FCRA preempted UDAP claim against bank for referring debt to collection agency when it knew that consumer did not owe it). But cf. Lowe v. Surpas Res. Corp., 253 F. Supp. 2d 1209 (D. Kan. 2003) (bank not liable for misrepresenting that consumer owed debt, where this was communicated only to collectors, not to consumer); Beecy v. Pucciarelli, 441 N.E.2d 1035 (Mass. 1982) (unobligated consumer was not protected by UDAP statute since consumer did not purchase goods or services from collector; goods or services requirement has since been removed from statute).

611 Erdman v. HSBC Auto Fin., 2011 WL 3420849 (W.D.N.Y. Aug. 4, 2011); Gervais v. O'Connell, Harris & Assoc., 297 F. Supp. 2d 435 (D. Conn. 2003). See also Dorr v. Sacred Heart Hosp., 597 N.W.2d 462 (Wis. Ct. App. 1999) (hospital violated UDAP statute by representing that it would accept HMO payments in full satisfaction of hospital bills, but then trying to recover from patient's tort recovery); CFPB, Prohibition of Unfair, Deceptive, or Abusive Acts or Practices in the Collection of Consumer Debts, CFPB Bulletin 2013-07 (July 13, 2013), available at http://files.consumerfinance.gov (misrepresentation that a debt will be forgiven if a settlement offer is accepted is an example of an unfair, deceptive, or abusive practice).

612 Boyce v. Attorney's Dispatch Serv., 1999 WL 33495605 (S.D. Ohio Apr. 27, 1999). See also Douyon v. NY Med. Health Care, P.C., 894 F. Supp. 2d 245, 265–266 (E.D.N.Y. 2012) (fact question whether displaying badge would lead reasonable consumer to believe that collection agent was associated with law enforcement, and whether collector's statement that he was sending "inspector" to consumer's home was deceptive); CFPB, Prohibition of Unfair, Deceptive, or Abusive Acts or Practices in the Collection of Consumer Debts, CFPB Bulletin 2013-07 (July 13, 2013), available at http://files.consumerfinance.gov (misrepresentation that communication is from government or government-affiliated entity is example of unfair, deceptive, or abusive practice).

613 In re Scrimpsher, 17 B.R. 999 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1982).

614 Wood v. Capital One Services, L.L.C., 718 F. Supp. 2d 286 (N.D.N.Y. 2010).

615 Turner v. Gene Dencker Buick-Pontiac, Inc., 623 N.W.2d 151 (Wis. Ct. App. 2000) (applying specific prohibition in statute). But cf. Herbert v. Monterey Fin. Services, 2001 WL 1266299 (D. Conn. Sept. 28, 2001) (collector ceased reporting disputed debt after being told of its error); Oak Hill Inv. Co. v. Jablonski, 605 N.E.2d 998 (Ohio Ct. App. 1992) (landlord's report of debt to credit bureau not consumer transaction; note that landlords themselves are not subject to Ohio UDAP statute).

- Disguising usurious lending as a "check cashing service," failing to disclose the interest rate, and threatening to prosecute debtors under NSF check laws;[616] and
- Attempting to collect a debt barred by the statute of limitations,[617] at least if the collector threatens a lawsuit.[618]

A lender that made refund anticipation loans committed a fraudulent and unfair practice in violation of the state UDAP statute by obtaining consumers' authorizations to withhold the loan proceeds in order to pay other alleged debts, without first informing consumers that there was a claim of debt against them.[619]

Many of the deceptive acts listed in this section are also found to be unfair, as discussed in the next section.

16.3.5 Unfair and Unconscionable Debt Collection Activities Under UDAP Statutes

Many, but not all,[620] state UDAP statutes prohibit "unfair" or "unconscionable" as well as deceptive acts. Courts have held the following debt collection activities to be actionable under these statutes:

- Filing suit in a forum far from the consumer's residence or from where the contract was signed;[621]
- Attempting to collect a debt that has been paid;[622]
- Collecting or attempting to collect an amount, a charge, or attorney fees that are not owed or before they are due[623] (an

See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 10.7 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library (FCRA preemption issues).

616 Hamilton v. York, 987 F. Supp. 953 (E.D. Ky. 1997). See also Hartke v. Illinois Payday Loans, Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14937 (C.D. Ill. Sept. 15, 1999) (UDAP violation where payday lender referred to inapplicable penalty provisions of civil bad check law); Boyce v. Attorney's Dispatch Serv., 1999 WL 33495605 (S.D. Ohio Apr. 27, 1999) (collector for payday lender impersonated law enforcement officer and threatened criminal prosecution); Turner v. E-Z Check Cashing, 35 F. Supp. 2d 1042 (M.D. Tenn. 1999) (threat to prosecute under bad check law, inapplicable to postdated checks which payee knew to be bad when written). See also Brown v. C.I.L., Inc., 1996 WL 164294 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 1, 1996).

617 Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2017 WL 4387351 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 3, 2017) (granting summary judgment against creditor that filed suit on time-barred debt that consumer did not owe, and took default judgment in violation of bankruptcy stay); Commonwealth by Fisher v. Richard A. Cole, M.D., Inc., 709 A.2d 994 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 1998). See also Gervais v. O'Connell, Harris & Assoc., 297 F. Supp. 2d 435 (D. Conn. 2003) (misrepresenting that debtor had made token payment that restarted statute of limitations was UDAP violation).

618 Taylor v. Unifund Corp., 2001 WL 1035717 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 31, 2001) (fact question whether dunning letter threatened time-barred action).

619 People v. JTH Tax, Inc., 151 Cal. Rptr. 3d 728 (Cal. Ct. App. 2013) (UCL and CLRA).

620 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 4.3, 4.4 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

621 Harrington v. CACV of Colorado, L.L.C., 508 F. Supp. 2d 128, 138–139 (D. Mass. 2007) (denying collector's motion to dismiss); Yu v. Signet Bank/Virginia, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304 (Cal. Ct. App. 1999); Schubach v. Household Fin. Corp., 376 N.E.2d 140 (Mass. 1976); Celebrezze v. United Research, Inc., 482 N.E.2d 1260 (Ohio Ct. App. 1984); Santiago v. S.C. Kresge Co., 2 Ohio Op. 3d 54 (Ct. Com. Pl. 1978). See also Spiegel, Inc. v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 540 F.2d 287 (7th Cir. 1976) (upholding FTC decision that practice of suing in distant venue is unfair); Aguchak v. Montgomery Ward Co., 520 P.2d 1352 (Alaska 1974) (summons from distant forum violated due process by failing to inform consumer that appearance could be written). But cf. Rodolakis v. Safety Ins. Co., 327 F. Supp. 3d 274 (D. Mass. 2018) (filing suit in county where defendant consumer did not live is not unfair practice; no discussion of rationale); Vargas v. Allied Fin. Co., 545 S.W.2d 231 (Tex. App. 1977) (filing suits in distant forums not proscribed by state UDAP statute; statute was subsequently amended to prohibit this practice). See generally §§ 10 2.4.3, 16.2.4.4, supra.

622 Edwards v. Velocity Invs., L.L.C., 2011 WL 4007394 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 8, 2011) (issuing wage garnishment for debt that has been satisfied is UDAP violation); Garner v. Academy Collection Serv., 2005 WL 643680 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 11, 2005) (allowing plaintiff to proceed on claim that defendant attempted to collect debt that had been paid); Chiverton v. Fed. Fin. Group, Inc., 399 F. Supp. 2d 96 (D. Conn. 2005) (awarding $7500 in punitive damages where collector repeatedly called debtor at work to collect debt that had been paid, without informing debtor of right to dispute debt). See also Connecticut Light & Power Co. v. Clark, 1996 Conn. Super. LEXIS 1299 (Conn. Super. Ct. May 16, 1996) (denying motion to strike claim that creditor violated UDAP statute by suing on debt it knew consumer did not owe; single incident sufficient).

623 Russell v. Ray Klein, Inc., 2019 WL 6137455 (D. Or. Nov. 19, 2019) (interpreting state statute to allow attorney fee to be charged only if outside counsel prepares writ of garnishment; refusing to dismiss claim that deduction of fee for in-house counsel's work is violation of UDAP statute); Nance v. Citimortgage, Inc., 2014 WL 3882081 (M.D.N.C. Aug. 7, 2014) (refusing to dismiss claim that creditor committed unfair and deceptive acts by making harassing calls for a debt that was not delinquent and for attorney fees and late fees that were not owed, and by wrongfully force-placing insurance and initiating foreclosure); Wenner v. Bank of Am., 637 F. Supp. 2d 944 (D. Kan. June 12, 2009) (refusing to dismiss claim that bank violated UDAP statute by failing to stop auto-pay deductions when consumers closed their account, failing to investigate their dispute of resulting charges, demanding payment, and sending claim to debt collectors); Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783, 810 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (suing for attorney fees to which creditor was not entitled, and attempting to recover court costs in absence of valid judgment); Patzka v. Viterbo College, 917 F. Supp. 654 (W.D. Wis. 1996) (collection fee not permitted by Wisconsin Consumer Act); Newman v. CheckRite California, Inc., 912 F. Supp. 1354 (E.D. Cal. 1995) (demand for "legal notice" and other fees violated California law where collector misrepresented fees as necessary to avoid lawsuit, but lawsuit was in fact highly unlikely; "service charge" also unlawful where it was based on agency's own costs, not "commercially reasonable incidental damages"); Smith v. Keycorp Mortgage Inc., 151 B.R. 870 (N.D. Ill. 1993) (attempt to collect late charges not allowed because of debtor's bankruptcy reorganization); In re Hill, 213 B.R. 934 (Bankr. D. Md. 1996) (creditor violated Maryland Consumer Protection Act by charging twice for prepaid interest and failing to disclose what it had done), aff'd, 213 B.R. 943 (D. Md. 1997); Cais v. Citizens Sav. Bank, 2001 WL 1200870 (Sept. 17, 2001) (allegation that bank brought foreclosure in effort to coerce payment of sums not yet due stated UDAP claim); Dist. Cablevision Ltd. v. Bassin, 828 A.2d 714 (D.C. 2003) (collecting late fees in violation of common law was UDAP violation); Case v. Ameritech Services, 2004 WL 73524 (Ill. Cir. Ct. Jan. 15, 2004) (denial of motion to dismiss) (failure to establish system for customers to dispute charges, and sending disputed debts to one collection agency after another, may be unfair); Talbert v. Mauney, 343 S.E.2d 5 (N.C. Ct. App. 1986) (improperly demanding full payment of loan when credit agreement allowed installment payments, and then slandering borrower's abuse that is also often found to be deceptive);[624]

- Attempting to obtain collection fees in excess of actual expenses;[625]
- Dunning a consumer for an illegal loan, such as a payday loan made in a jurisdiction that outlaws them;[626]
- Attempting to collect from a person that the collector knows or should know is not obligated;[627]
- Inducing a person to pay her deceased mother's debt by telling her that her mother would not be able to rest in peace while the debt was outstanding;[628]
- Initiating or threatening time-barred lawsuits;[629]
- Threatening criminal prosecution without cause;[630]
- Excessive calls[631] or personal visits;[632]
- Contacting the debtor's employer or unobligated third parties;[633] credit reputation, violates statute prohibiting unfair coercion to collect debts); Evergreen Collectors v. Holt, 803 P.2d 10 (Wash. Ct. App. 1991) (threatening to collect attorney fees when not entitled to them violates collection agency law and therefore also UDAP statute). See also Harris Wayside Furn. Co. v. Idearc Media Corp., 2007 WL 1847313 (D.N.H. June 25, 2007) (restricting future services as way of coercing payment of charges that had been forgiven as part of settlement); Hart v. GMAC Mortgage Co. (In re Hart), 246 B.R. 709 (D. Mass. 2000) (creditor misapplied debtor's mortgage payment and proceeded with foreclosure after becoming aware that the debtor had complied with his payment obligations under a forbearance agreement). But cf. Swartz v. UST Corp., 2001 WL 1809798 (Dec. 13, 2002) (bank admitted its mistake and restored misapplied funds, with small payment for borrower's trouble; other basis existed for foreclosure); Wornat Dev. Corp. v. Vakalis, 529 N.E.2d 1329 (Mass. 1988) (suit for full amount of note, without deduction for foreclosed real estate valued at over $68,000, not UDAP violation because consumer could assert deduction as defense); Havens-Tobias v. Eagle, 2003 WL 1601461 (Ohio Ct. App. Mar. 28, 2003) (filing collection suit not unfair where attorney did not know of debtor's possible defenses). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 6.7.5 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library (UDAP claims regarding loan modification attempts).

624 See § 16.3.4, supra.

625 Ballard v. Equifax Check Services, Inc., 158 F. Supp. 2d 1163 (E.D. Cal. 2001) (creditor attempted to apportion all its collection costs to accounts successfully collected); Bondanza v. Peninsula Hosp. & Med. Ctr., 590 P.2d 22 (Cal. 1979). See also In re Western Acceptance Corp., 788 P.2d 214, 217–218 (Idaho 1990) (concurring opinion) (charging exorbitant collection charges for NSF checks).

626 See, e.g., In re Delbert Services Corp. (Mass. Comm'r of Banks Apr. 4, 2013), available at www.mass.gov (ordering Massachusetts-licensed debt collector to discontinue collection efforts for payday loans that were illegally made to Massachusetts residents). See also § 16.3.4, supra (threatening to enforce illegal or unenforceable contract as deceptive practice).

627 Heard v. Bonneville Billing & Collections, 2000 WL 825721 (10th Cir. June 26, 2000); Wolfe v. MBNA Am. Bank, 485 F. Supp. 2d 874 (W.D. Tenn. 2007) (refusing to dismiss claim that creditor violated UDAP statute by declaring account delinquent without investigating whether identity theft victim was actually liable, reporting delinquency to credit bureaus, and turning account over to debt collector); Losure v. Capital One Services, Inc., 2006 WL 166520 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 23, 2006) (claim stated by allegation that collector intentionally attempted to collect debt that did not exist). But see Gallegos v. LVNV, 169 F. Supp. 3d 1235 (D. Utah 2016) (finding that collector acted deceptively but not unconscionably by filing suit twice; it filed second suit and obtained default judgment even though it knew at that point that it had sued the wrong person). But cf. Goshon v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2016 WL 742873 (D. Kan. Feb. 24, 2016) (granting summary judgment for collector; no liability under Kan. UDAP statute's general prohibition of deception, which court interprets as requiring "reason to know," where demand for amount not owed was a mistake), later op. at 2016 WL 1069048 (D. Kan. Mar. 17, 2016) (granting summary judgment to creditor on same ground). See generally § 16.3.4, supra (misrepresentation that non-debtor is responsible for debt as deceptive practice).

628 Isla Fin. Services v. Sablan, 6 N. Mar. I. 338 (N. Mar. I. Dec. 14, 2001).

629 Janti v. Encore Capital Group, Inc., 2010 WL 3058260 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 3, 2010); Taylor v. Unifund Corp., 2001 WL 1035717 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 31, 2001) (fact question whether dunning letter threatened time-barred suit); N.M. Code R. §§ 12.2.12.1 to 12.2.12.11 (LexisNexis). See also § 16.3.4, supra (threatening suit on time-barred debt as deceptive practice).

630 Clodfelter v. United Processing, Inc., 2008 WL 4225557 (C.D. Ill. Sept. 12, 2008) (awarding $100,000 in emotional distress damages and $250,000 in punitive damages against collector that threatened criminal prosecution); Chiverton v. Fed. Fin. Group, Inc., 399 F. Supp. 2d 96 (D. Conn. 2005) (awarding $7500 punitive damages where collector threatened criminal prosecution); Calabrese v. CSC Holdings, Inc., 2004 WL 3186787 (E.D.N.Y. July 19, 2004) (allowing consumers to proceed on claim that defendants violated UDAP statute by accusing them of stealing cable programming without any definitive proof and telling them that mere possession of decoder can be basis for civil claim); Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Services, Inc., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1249 (D. Kan. 2003) (accusing debtor of committing crime and threatening to place lien on all his property may be UDAP violation); Turner v. E-Z Check Cashing, 35 F. Supp. 2d 1042, 1051 (M.D. Tenn. 1999) (threat to prosecute under inapplicable bad check law); Hamilton v. York, 987 F. Supp. 953 (E.D. Ky. 1997) (threatening criminal prosecution under bad check laws, where "check cashing" transaction was really usurious loan); Brown v. C.I.L., Inc., 1996 WL 164294 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 1, 1996); Demelash v. Ross Stores, Inc., 20 P.3d 447 (Wash. Ct. App. 2001) (knowingly filing misleading criminal complaint may be UDAP violation). See also § 16.3.4, supra (false threats of criminal prosecution as deceptive practice).

631 Bruce v. Home Depot, 308 F. Supp. 2d 72 (D. Conn. 2004) (harassing calls over four-month period). See also Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Check Investors, Inc., 502 F.3d 159 (3d Cir. 2007) (affirming judgment under FTC Act against collector who used "saturation phoning" and abusive language to collect dishonored checks). But cf. Whittum v. Acceptance Now, 2019 WL 4781846 (D. Nev. Sept. 30, 2019) (prohibition against repeated sales solicitations does not apply to repeat debt collection calls); Fleece v. Recovery Zone Unltd., Inc., 2005 WL 8161379 (S.D. Ohio Apr. 8, 2005) (five calls not undue frequency); Harris v. Am. Gen. Fin., Inc., 2005 WL 1593673 (D. Kan. July 6, 2005) (allegation of seventeen calls in a week insufficient where debtors did not provide evidence of substance of calls); Udell v. Kansas Counselors, Inc., 313 F. Supp. 2d 1135, 1145–1146 (D. Kan. 2004) (not UDAP violation to contact debtors on accounts newly placed for collection, despite their earlier letter asking collector to cease communication).

632 Harrington v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., 2019 WL 4750140 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 30, 2019) (refusing to dismiss claim that repeat personal visits to debtor's home were unfair practice).

633 Fisher v. Quality Hyundai Motor Fin. Co., 2002 WL 47968 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 8, 2002) (contacts with co-workers would violate specific provision of Illinois UDAP statute that prohibits contact with employer about obligation; harassment of debtor and calls to co-workers and relatives would also violate general UDAP prohibitions); Tillquist v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 714 F. Supp. 607 (D. Conn. 1989) (discussion of debt with debtor's children violated state banking agency regulations now found at Conn. Agency Regs. §§ 36a-647-2 to 36a-647-7, prohibiting such calls); State v. O'Neill Investigations, Inc., 609 P.2d

- Repeatedly calling a debtor at work and threatening to contact his supervisor;[634]
- Using rude and abusive language;[635]
- Including in a consumer credit contract a provision waiving the consumer's statutory right to be free of third party collection contacts;[636]
- Contacting a consumer known to be represented by an attorney;[637]
- Taking or threatening to take illegal acts to collect a debt;[638]
- Making misrepresentations to a court;[639]
- Improper repossession;[640]
- Obtaining private financial information through deception and trickery;[641]
- Seizing exempt property[642] or wrongfully garnishing wages;[643] and
- Arranging for a consumer to deposit her paycheck directly into an account from which it would be transferred to the lender and causing her to sign a waiver of her Electronic Funds Transfer Act right to cancel the transfer, where the EFTA forbids such a waiver.[644]

A parallel claim alleging deception will often be appropriate for these same acts.[645]

On the other hand, a court held that a debt seller did not commit an unfair act under the state UDAP statute when it sold a debt without doing due diligence, which would have revealed that the debt buyer was a disbarred attorney who lacked a debt collector's license.[646]

16.3.6 Violation of Another Debt Collection Statute or Regulation As UDAP Violation

In a number of states, a violation of another debt collection statute—the FDCPA, a state debt collection statute, or another law or regulation dealing with collection—is a per se UDAP violation.[647] The UDAP statute itself,[648] or a UDAP

520, 536 (Alaska 1980) (harassment of debtors by calls to their relatives or employers is UDAP violation); Bennett v. Tri-State Collection Serv., 1976 WL 38806 (Ohio Ct. Com. Pl. Aug. 24, 1976). See also CFPB, Prohibition of Unfair, Deceptive, or Abusive Acts or Practices in the Collection of Consumer Debts, CFPB Bulletin 2013-07 (July 13, 2013), available at http://files.consumerfinance.gov (revealing debt to consumer's employer or coworkers is example of unfair, deceptive, or abusive practice). See generally §§ 5.6, 16.2.4.2, supra.

634 Chiverton v. Fed. Fin. Group, Inc., 399 F. Supp. 2d 96 (D. Conn. 2005) (awarding $7500 in UDAP punitive damages). See also Tillquist v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 714 F. Supp. 607 (D. Conn. 1989) (awarding debtor $500 punitive damages and attorney fees for, inter alia, calling debtor at place of employment after he asked collector to stop). See also In re Navy Fed. Credit Union, Administrative Proceeding, File No. 2016-CFPB-0024, Consent Order (CFPB Oct. 11, 2016), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov (false threats to contact military debtor's commanding officer are deceptive).

635 Chiverton v. Fed. Fin. Group, Inc., 399 F. Supp. 2d 96 (D. Conn. 2005) (abuse included being called "liar" and "old and senile"). See also Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Check Investors, Inc., 502 F.3d 159 (3d Cir. 2007) (affirming judgment under FTC Act against collector who used "saturation phoning" and abusive language to collect dishonored checks).

636 U.S. Life Corp. v. Wilson, 301 S.E.2d 169 (W. Va. 1982).

637 Duarte v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2018 WL 3427910 (N.D. Ill. July 16, 2018) (refusing to dismiss claim that creditor violated UDAP statute's unfairness prohibition by switching debt collectors in order to undermine consumer's right to force collector to communicate solely with her attorney); Spicer v. Lenahan, 2004 WL 3112554 (D. Conn. Sept. 14, 2004); Hager v. Am. Gen. Fin., Inc., 37 F. Supp. 2d 778 (S.D. W. Va. 1999) (denying summary judgment for lender on claim that it was unconscionable, in violation of specific statutory prohibition, for creditor to contact debtors about past-due account after they retained attorney); Tillquist v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 714 F. Supp. 607 (D. Conn. 1989) (debtor entitled to $500 punitive damages and attorney fees for contact with debtor known to be represented by lawyer); Brow v. Stanton, 429 N.E.2d 60 (Mass. App. Ct. 1981) (state regulations prohibit contacting represented consumer and apply to creditor's attorney). But see Gros v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2008 WL 4671717 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 20, 2008) (single call to represented debtor does not meet definition of unfairness). See generally § 5.5, supra.

638 Clarkson v. DeCaceres, 105 B.R. 266 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1989) (landlord's illegal sale of tenant's property); State v. Grogan, 628 P.2d 570 (Alaska 1981) (aircraft repairmen's vandalizing of repaired aircraft); Ekl v. Knecht, 585 N.E.2d 156 (Ill. App. Ct. 1991) (plumber's practice of employing wrongful threats to undo work and to cut off water to collect his fees). See generally § 6.2.7, supra (misrepresentations to court as deceptive practice).

639 Osborn v. J.R.S.-I., Inc., 949 F. Supp. 2d 807 (N.D. Ill. 2013) (refusing to dismiss claim that collector committed unfair act in violation of state UDAP statute by submitting affidavit to court stating that debt buyer's employee was familiar with the facts and that identity theft victim owed the debt, when debt buyer had acquired only a list of debts with minimal information); Harrington v. CACV of Colorado, L.L.C., 508 F. Supp. 2d 128, 139–140 (D. Mass. 2007) (denial of motion to dismiss) (lying to court may be unconscionable and misleading representation).

640 See National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 13.4.3 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

641 Commonwealth v. Source One Assoc., Inc., 763 N.E.2d 42 (Mass. 2002). See also Ralston v. Zats, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16377 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 7, 2000) (approving settlement of class action raising UDAP and other claims against collector who obtained debtors' financial information by falsely claiming to be conducting survey).

642 Marengo v. First Massachusetts Bank, 152 F. Supp. 2d 92 (D. Mass. 2001) (consumers stated Mass. UDAP claim against bank that set off account containing only exempt Social Security and SSI funds); Petersen v. State Employees Credit Union (In re Kitrell), 115 B.R. 873 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1990). But cf. Parker v. Wetsch & Abbott, P.L.C., 2006 WL 4846042 (S.D. Iowa July 11, 2006) (no violation to issue garnishment against exempt funds where creditor's attorney had reasonable basis to believe account also contained nonexempt funds).

643 Smith v. Collection Tech., Inc., 2016 WL 1169529 (S.D. W. Va. Mar. 22, 2016) (refusing to dismiss claim that collector violated UDAP statute by garnishing student loan debtor's wages instead of performing its duty to assist him in rehabilitating the loan).

644 Cobb v. Monarch Fin. Corp., 913 F. Supp. 1164 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (violation of Illinois Consumer Fraud Act).

645 See § 16.3.4, supra.

646 Cacares v. Jackson, 2011 WL 99003 (D. Mass. Jan. 11, 2011).

647 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 3.2.7 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

648 CALIFORNIA: Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. See, e.g., Del Campo v. AM Corrective Counseling Serv., Inc., 718 F. Supp. 2d 1116 (N.D. Cal. 2010); Ballard v. Equifax Check Services, Inc., 27 F. Supp. 2d 1201 (E.D. Cal. 1998) (practices forbidden by FDCPA violate Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200), summary judgment for class granted by 158 F. Supp. 2d 1163 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 17, 2001).

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA: D.C. Code § 28-3905(k)(1).

regulation,[649] may explicitly provide that a violation of another law is a UDAP violation. Or the state debt collection statute may state that a violation is a UDAP violation.[650]

Other states reach the same conclusion as a matter of judicial interpretation.[651] Persuading a court that a violation of another consumer protection statute or rule is a UDAP violation is easiest under the almost forty state unfair and deceptive acts and practices statutes that prohibit "unfair" and/or "unconscionable" practices.[652] In states where the UDAP statute prohibits only "deceptive" practices, a potential argument is that is deceptive for a creditor to make false threats that it will utilize remedies that are outlawed.[653] The collector's acts may also amount to implicit representations that a debt is valid.[654]

Even if a violation of the FDCPA is not a per se UDAP violation, cases decided under the FDCPA, the Federal Trade Commission Act, and the Consumer Financial Protection Act, which prohibits unfair, deceptive, and abusive acts or practices in connection with transactions with consumers for consumer financial products or services,[655] may be persuasive when a court is deciding what collection activities are unfair or deceptive under state UDAP statutes.[656] Interpretations of a state debt collection statute may also be persuasive.[657] Other sources, such as federal regulations governing servicing and NEVADA: Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.0923. But cf. Peatrowsky v. Persolve, 2014 WL 1215061 (D. Nev. Mar. 24, 2014) (calls to collect credit card debt that violate FDCPA do not violate UDAP statute's prohibition of knowingly violating a statute relating to sale or lease of goods or services).

But see Tex. Bus. & Com. Code § 17.43 (West). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 3.2.7.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

649 MASSACHUSETTS: Massachusetts Consumer Prot. Regulations, 940 Mass. Reg. § 3.16. See, e.g., Masciarelli v. Richard J. Boudreau & Assoc., L.L.C., 529 F. Supp. 2d 183 (D. Mass. 2007); Harrington v. CACV of Colorado, L.L.C., 508 F. Supp. 2d 128, 137 (D. Mass. 2007); Martin v. Sands, 62 F. Supp. 2d 196 (D. Mass. 1999); In re Schwartz, 2011 WL 1331963 (Bankr. D. Mass. Apr. 7, 2011) (private remedy for violation of Massachusetts collection agency act is UDAP claim, but debtor must comply with UDAP statute's demand letter requirement); Baldassari v. Pub. Fin. Trust, 337 N.E.2d 701 (Mass. 1975). Cf. McDermott v. Marcus, Errico, Emmer & Brooks, P.C., 775 F.3d 109 (1st Cir. 2014) (Mass. law) (regulation cannot expand UDAP liability, but violation of FDCPA is per se violation of Mass. UDAP statute). See also McKusker v. Ocwen Loan Services, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4529986 (D. Mass. July 27, 2015) (violation of provision of debt collection statute forbidding contact with represented consumer is sufficient to support UDAP claim).

MISSOURI: 15 Mo. Code Regs. Ann. § 60-8.090.

650 See, e.g., Dicesari v. Asset Acceptance L.L.C., 2012 WL 4108944, at *4 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 18, 2012); Keli v. Universal Fid. Corp., 1997 WL 33820142 (D. Haw. Feb. 25, 1997) (applying statutory provision that violation of debt collection statute is actionable under UDAP statute); Sprinkle v. SB&C Ltd., 472 F. Supp. 2d 1235 (W.D. Wash. 2006); In re Klein, 2010 WL 2680334 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. June 29, 2010); Ai v. Frank Huff Agency, Ltd., 607 P.2d 1304 (Haw. 1980); Tex. Fin. Code § 392.404; Evergreen Collectors v. Holt, 803 P.2d 10 (Wash. Ct. App. 1991). See generally Appx. D, infra.

651 See, e.g., Hagy v. Demers & Adams, L.L.C., 2013 WL 434053 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 5, 2013); Becker v. Montgomery, Lunch, 2003 WL 23335929 (N.D. Ohio Feb. 26, 2003) (FDCPA violations are UDAP violations); Bradley v. Fairbanks Capital Corp., 2003 WL 21011801 (N.D. Ill. May 5, 2003); Hansen v. Ticket Track, Inc., 280 F. Supp. 2d 1196 (W.D. Wash. 2003); Irwin v. Mascott, 112 F. Supp. 2d 937 (N.D. Cal. 2000); D.A.N. Joint Venture III, L.P. v. Armstrong, 2007 WL 634457 (Ohio Ct. App. Mar. 2, 2007). Cf. Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783, 810 n.45 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (declining to decide whether all FDCPA violations are UDAP violations; these are). But see Conboy v. AT&T Corp., 241 F.3d 242 (2d Cir. 2001) (violation of N.Y. debt collection statute is not N.Y. UDAP violation); McLaughlin v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 971 F. Supp. 2d 796 (N.D. Ill. 2013) (dismissing claim on ground that UDAP statute does not list violation of collection agency act as per se violation); Mascoll v. Strumpf, 2006 WL 2795175 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 26, 2006) (UDAP statute does not confer private right of action for violation of debt collection statute; it does confer private right of action for deceptive acts, but not shown here where creditor continued collection action after learning of identity theft); Johnson v. MBNA Am. Bank, 2006 WL 618077 (M.D.N.C. Mar. 9, 2006) (denying UDAP claim where unfair and deceptive conduct occurred during debt collection; state debt collection statute is exclusive remedy); Lamb v. M&M Assoc., 1998 WL 34288694 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 1, 1998) (failure to include verification notice required by FDCPA is not UDAP violation). But cf. King v. Int'l Data Services, 2002 WL 32345923 (D. Haw. Aug. 5, 2002) (noting that violation of state debt collection statute is, by statute, a violation of UDAP statute, but questioning whether FDCPA violation is necessarily a UDAP violation); Lamb v. M&M Assoc., Inc., 1998 WL 34288694 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 1, 1998) (not all FDCPA violations are UDAP violations; violation of verification notice requirements is not, but others may be); Perperas v. United Recovery Sys., Inc., 1997 WL 136326 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 13, 1997) (Illinois UDAP statute does not incorporate FDCPA even though it states that it is to be construed in light of FTC Act). See generally § 16.2.5.1, supra; National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 3.2.7.3.4, 3.2.7.4 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

652 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 3.2.7.3.6, 3.2.7.4.1 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

653 See § 16.3.4, supra; National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 3.2.7.4.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

654 See, e.g., Cohen v. JP Morgan Chase & Co., 498 F.3d 111, 126–127 (2d Cir. 2007) (N.Y. law; inclusion of illegal fee on closing statement may be UDAP violation; consumer may reasonably assume that all fees charged by respected financial institution are lawful), on remand, 608 F. Supp. 2d 330 (E.D.N.Y. 2009) (if fee violated RESPA, then collecting it, even with proper disclosure, would be "misleading" within meaning of UDAP statute).

655 12 U.S.C. § 5531(a). See § 16.3.7, infra.

656 See Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783, 810 n.45 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (finding FDCPA violation to be UDAP violation in this case, but declining to adopt general rule); Celebrezze v. United Research, 482 N.E.2d 1261 (Ohio Ct. App. 1984) (decisions under FTC Act are persuasive). But cf. Berrios v. Sprint Corp., 1998 WL 199842 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 16, 1998) (standard under state UDAP statute is whether reasonable consumer would have been misled by defendant's conduct, rather than FDCPA's "least sophisticated consumer" standard; UDAP claim also requires proof of injury due to reliance on deception). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 3.4.5 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

657 DirecTV, Inc. v. Cephas, 294 F. Supp. 2d 760 (M.D.N.C. 2003) (standards of state debt collection act relevant to question of whether misstatements in demand letter alleging theft of signals—not debt under North Carolina law—were unfair and deceptive within meaning of UDAP statute; dismissing debt collection count, allowing UDAP count to go forward). See also § 16.2, supra.

collection of student loans, may serve as standards for determining whether a practice is a UDAP violation.[658]

Even where the state debt collection statute explicitly states that a violation is a UDAP violation, courts may interpret the statutes to require plaintiffs to meet the scope requirements of the UDAP statute,[659] and possibly also any injury precondition[660] or pre-suit notice requirement.[661]

Whether a violation of the licensing or registration requirements of a state debt collection statute results in a UDAP violation is discussed in § 16.2.4.5, supra.

16.3.7 CFPB Examples of Unfair, Deceptive, or Abusive Debt Collection Practices; Rulemaking

The 2010 Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act[662] gives the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) the authority to write rules to prevent unfair, deceptive, and abusive practices in connection with consumer financial services and products.[663] While consumers do not have a private right of action to enforce any rules the CFPB issues under this general rulemaking authority,[664] courts are likely to give the CFPB's rules and interpretations significant weight when interpreting similar language in state UDAP statutes.

A July 10, 2013, CFPB bulletin on collection of consumer debts describes general standards as to unfair, deceptive, or abusive practices,[665] the bulletin provides a non-exhaustive list of ten examples of conduct related to the collection of consumer debts that could constitute an unfair, deceptive, or abusive practice:

- Collecting debts, interest, fees, or charges not authorized by the agreement or permitted by law;
- Failing to timely post payments and then charging late fees;
- Taking property without the legal right to do so;
- Revealing the consumer debt to the consumer's employer or co-workers;
- Misrepresenting the character, amount, or legal status of a debt;
- Misrepresenting that a communication is from an attorney;
- Misrepresenting that a communication is from the government or an entity affiliated with the government;
- Misrepresenting whether information will be reported to a reporting agency;
- Misrepresenting that a debt will be forgiven if a settlement offer is accepted; or
- Threatening actions that are not intended or where the person does not have authorization to pursue, including false threats of lawsuits, arrest, prosecution, or imprisonment.

A December 16, 2015, CFPB bulletin on in-person collection of consumer debt warns creditors, debt buyers, and third-party collectors that in-person debt collection visits, such as collection attempts to collect at a consumer's home or place

658 See Fleischer v. Acceslex Inst., 2018 WL 4489583 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 19, 2018) (refusing to dismiss claim that failing to inform debtor about important changes to his student loan account and to respond to communications, in violation of federal student loan regulations, was unfair practice).

659 See, e.g., Cole v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 737943 (W.D.N.C. Feb. 23, 2016) (UDAP requirements satisfied: lender bank's activities affect commerce and borrower relied on bank's misstatements as to payoff amount); Sailola v. Municipal Serv. Bur., 2014 WL 3389395 (D. Haw. July 9, 2014) (collection of fine and criminal court fees not covered, because underlying transaction not for consumer purpose); Porter v. Countrywide Home Loans, 2014 WL 4450043 (D.N.H. Sept. 10, 2014) (exception for regulated financial institution); Brush v. Wells Fargo Bank, 911 F. Supp. 2d 445, 476–477 (S.D. Tex. 2012); Cushman v. GC Services, L.P., 657 F. Supp. 2d 834 (S.D. Tex. 2009) (individual who alleges UDAP violation pursuant to tie-in provision that makes violation of Texas Debt Collection Act a UDAP violation must still show status as a consumer, e.g., that she acquired or sought to acquire goods or services), aff'd, 397 Fed. Appx. 24 (5th Cir. 2010).

660 See Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168 (3d Cir. 2015) (Pa. law; consumer who brings UDAP claim based on state debt collection statute that provides that a violation is a UDAP violation must meet UDAP statute's ascertainable loss requirement); Levy-Tatum v. Navient, 2016 WL 75231 (E.D. Pa. Jan.7, 2016) (dismissing UDAP claim for violation of state debt collection statute, on theory that only viable claim of ascertainable loss, reduction in debtor's credit limit, is preempted by FCRA); Hall v. Equifax Info. Services, L.L.C., 204 F. Supp. 3d (E.D. Pa. 2016) (reliance shown when patient paid settlement amount in belief that hospital would then cease collection efforts; after patient paid the agreed-upon sum and was told that balance was zero, hospital sent debt to collection); Walkup v. Santander Bank, 147 F. Supp. 349 (E.D. Pa. 2015) (justifiable reliance not shown where sub-servicer's statement that consumers must miss payments to qualify for mortgage loan modification program was true, even though sub-servicer also knew that consumers were not eligible for the program); Cortelessa v. Udren Law Offices, PC, 2016 WL 4554539 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 1, 2016) (reliance shown where borrowers paid the unauthorized fees and overcharges); Cole v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 737943 (W.D. N.C. Feb. 23, 2016) (loss shown if consumer sold house quickly for less than it was worth, in reliance on bank's misrepresentations); Baltierra v. Orlans Associates, PC, 2015 WL 5836047 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 7, 2015) (must show either actual damage or that money was collected by a method forbidden by the act); Biggers v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 767 F. Supp. 2d 725 (N.D. Tex. 2011) (violation of state debt collection statute is, by statute, a UDAP violation, but for the UDAP claim debtor must show damages); Kern v. Lehigh Valley Hosp., 108 A.3d 1281 (Pa. Super. Ct. 2015) (UDAP claim based on creditor's violation of state debt collection statute must meet UDAP statute's requirements, including ascertainable loss and justifiable reliance). See generally § 16.3.8, infra.

661 See O'Connor v. Nantucket Bank, 992 F. Supp. 2d 24 (D. Mass. 2014) (claim against bank fails because required pre-suit notice not sent); In re Schwartz, 2011 WL 1331963 (Bankr. D. Mass. Apr. 7, 2011) (private remedy for violation of Massachusetts collection agency act is UDAP claim, but debtor must comply with UDAP statute's demand letter requirement).

662 Pub. L. No. 111-203, 124 Stat. 1376 (July 21, 2010).

663 12 U.S.C. § 5531. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law Ch. 3 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

664 National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 3.7 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

665 CFPB, Prohibition of Unfair, Deceptive, or Abusive Acts or Practices in the Collection of Consumer Debts, CFPB Bulletin 2013-07 (July 13, 2013), available at http://files.consumerfinance.gov.

of employment, may constitute unfair acts or practices.[666] A July 31, 2017, CFPB compliance bulletin on phone pay fees lists examples of conduct related to phone pay fees that may constitute unfair, deceptive, or abusive acts or practices (UDAAPs).[667] This may involve:

- Failing to disclose the prices of all available phone pay fees when different phone pay options carry materially different fees;
- Failing to disclose that a phone pay fee would be added to a consumer's payment, which could create the misimpression that there was no service fee; or
- Lack of employee monitoring or service provider oversight, which may lead to misrepresentations or failure to disclose available options and fees.[668]

In two separate Federal Register notices, in November 2020 and January 2021, the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau published Regulation F under the FDCPA to regulate third-party debt collectors.[669] Regulation F, effective November 30, 2021, deals with a number of topics other than those addressed by the CFPB guidance bulletins, including deceptive, unfair and abusive practices, and practices involving the frequency of communications, use of email and text messages, and validation of debts.

16.3.8 UDAP Remedies for Debt Collection Violations

All UDAP statutes provide a private cause of action for at least actual damages resulting from a violation.[670] Relief may include return of funds wrongfully collected.[671] Emotional distress damages are recoverable in many jurisdictions.[672]

Many UDAP statutes provide for multiple or punitive damages[673] and reasonable attorney fees[674] in successful consumer actions. Some statutes allow consumers to obtain 666 CFPB, In Person Collection of Consumer Debt, CFPB Bulletin 2015-07 (Dec. 16, 2015), available at https://library.nclc.org.

667 CFPB, Phone Pay Fees, CFPB Bulletin 2017-01 (July 31, 2017), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov.

668 CFPB, Phone Pay Fees, CFPB Bulletin 2017-01 (July 31, 2017), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov.

669 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 (Nov. 30, 2020); 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 (Jan. 19, 2021).

670 National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 12.2, 12.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

671 Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Services, Inc., 2011 WL 5025152 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 21, 2011) (certifying class action on UDAP claim; where class is defined as those who received deceptive collection letter, court can award as restitution the amounts they paid in response, without individual proof of reliance); Irwin v. Mascott, 112 F. Supp. 2d 937 (N.D. Cal. 2000) (California Unfair Business Practices Act entitles consumers to restitution of any funds acquired as result of illegal practices, with prejudgment interest). Cf. Palmer v. Stassinos, 348 F. Supp. 2d 1070, 1088–1089 (N.D. Cal. 2004) (restitution is available under § 17200, but only to extent plaintiffs made payments; not shown here). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 12.2, 12.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

672 See, e.g., Gervais v. O'Connell, Harris & Assoc., 297 F. Supp. 2d 435 (D. Conn. 2003) (awarding $1500 for emotional and mental distress); In re Belile, 209 B.R. 658 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1997) (awarding $100 per letter for emotional distress); Bank of New Orleans & Trust Co. v. Phillips, 415 So. 2d 973 (La. Ct. App. 1982) (actual damages include damages for humiliation and mental anguish); Ausley v. Bishop, 515 S.E.2d 72 (N.C. Ct. App. 1999) (emotional distress damages recoverable for UDAP violation, where distress resulted in hospital visit); Whitaker v. M.T. Auto., Inc., 855 N.E.2d 825 (Ohio 2006) (emotional distress damages may be recovered; Editor's Note: after this decision, legislature amended Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1345.09 (West) to cap non-economic damages). See also Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Services, Inc., 2003 WL 21058289 (D. Kan. Apr. 21, 2003) (consumer who suffered emotional and intangible injuries was "aggrieved" by abusive debt collection). But see Wenrich v. Robert E. Cole, P.C., 2001 WL 4994 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 22, 2000) (emotional distress damages not available under state UDAP statute or former debt collection regulations); Ashley v. Edwards, 626 S.W.2d 107 (Tex. App. 1981). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 12.3.3.9 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

673 See Siemer v. Nangle (In re Nangle), 274 F.3d 481 (8th Cir. 2001) (punitive damages available under Illinois UDAP statute for debt collector's willful and wanton misconduct); Clodfelter v. United Processing, Inc., 2008 WL 4225557 (C.D. Ill. Sept. 12, 2008) (awarding $100,000 in emotional distress damages and $250,000 in punitive damages against collector that threatened criminal prosecution); Adams v. A. & S. Collection Assoc., Inc., 2007 WL 2206936 (D. Conn. July 30, 2007) (recommending award of $10,000 punitive damages on UDAP claim where collector required creditor to add illegal 49% collection fee and 18% interest to claims before sending them to collection), adopted, 2007 WL 9747652 (D. Conn. Aug. 30, 2007); Cooper v. Ellis Crosby & Assoc., 2007 WL 1322380 (D. Conn. May 2, 2007) (awarding $5000 punitive damage award on UDAP claim against unlicensed collector who threatened to arrest payday loan borrower and contact her employer); Chiverton v. Fed. Fin. Group, Inc., 399 F. Supp. 2d 96 (D. Conn. 2005) (awarding $7500 punitive damages to each of two plaintiffs for debt collection violations); Spicer v. Lenahan, 2004 WL 3112554 (D. Conn. Sept. 14, 2004) (awarding $5000 punitive damages for collection violations); Gervais v. O'Connell, Harris & Assoc., 297 F. Supp. 2d 435 (D. Conn. 2003) (awarding $4000 actual and $8000 punitive damages); Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Services, Inc., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1249 (D. Kan. 2003) (debtor entitled to special statutory damage award as disabled person); Boyce v. Attorney's Dispatch Serv., 1999 WL 33495605 (S.D. Ohio Apr. 27, 1999) (allowing punitive damages under common law for "egregious" violations of Ohio UDAP statute); Dist. Cablevision Ltd. v. Bassin, 828 A.2d 714 (D.C. 2003) (awarding treble damages for collection of illegal late charges; no need to show egregious conduct or malice). See also Lowe v. Surpas Res. Corp., 253 F. Supp. 2d 1209 (D. Kan. 2003) (debtor may be entitled to enhanced statutory damages as older person). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 12.4 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

674 See, e.g., Cooper v. Ellis Crosby & Assoc., 2007 WL 1322380 (D. Conn. May 2, 2007) (awarding fees at $350/hour); Hanner v. Classic Auto Body, Inc., 406 N.E.2d 686 (Mass. App. Ct. 1980) (increasing $25 attorney fee award for 38.25 hours of work to $250 to avoid heroic sacrifice inconsistent with spirit of consumer protection act); Evergreen Collectors v. Holt, 803 P.2d 10 (Wash. Ct. App. 1991) (consumers entitled to reasonable attorney fee under UDAP statute for defending their judgment on appeal). Cf. Chevy Chase Bank v. McCamant, 512 S.E.2d 217 (W. Va. 1998) (attorney fee award discretionary under state UDAP statute). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 12.8 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

injunctive relief.[675] UDAP class actions are allowed in most jurisdictions.[676]

Most UDAP statutes require a showing of that a violation injured the consumer in some way, and some require a loss of money or property as a precondition of suit.[677] A number of courts have applied these requirements even where the claim is that the defendant violated a state debt collection statute that provides that a violation is a UDAP violation.[678] In states that merely require the consumer to be "aggrieved," it may be sufficient to show that the collection activities imposed a burden or obligation on the consumer.[679]

Emotional distress will meet the injury requirement in a number of states.[680] In other states, the loss must be of money or property, or must be "pecuniary," so a debtor who has 675 See, e.g., Palmer v. Stassinos, 348 F. Supp. 2d 1070, 1087–1088 (N.D. Cal. 2004) (allowing plaintiffs to proceed with claim for injunctive relief); Asch v. Teller, Levit & Silvertrust, P.C., 2003 WL 22232801, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2003) (Ill. DTPA); Irwin v. Mascott, 112 F. Supp. 2d 937 (N.D. Cal. 2000) (California § 17200 allows declaratory and injunctive relief; provision for injunction not preempted by FDCPA); Newman v. CheckRite California, Inc., 912 F. Supp. 1354 (E.D. Cal. 1995) (California § 7200 provides for injunction against unfair and deceptive debt collection activities); Hennessey v. Connecticut Valley Fitness Ctrs., 2001 WL 1199840 (Conn. Super. Ct. Sept. 12, 2001) (CUTPA allows injunctive relief). But see Zanni v. Lippold, 119 F.R.D. 32 (C.D. Ill. 1988) (refusing to find private injunctions authorized despite statutory authorization of any other appropriate relief because that construction would make superfluous requirement that private litigants give notice of suit to attorney general). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 12.6 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

676 See, e.g., Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Services, Inc., 2011 WL 5025152 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 21, 2011) (certifying class action on UDAP claim; where class is defined as those who received deceptive collection letter, court can award as restitution the amounts they paid in response, without individual proof of reliance); Zanni v. Lippold, 119 F.R.D. 32 (C.D. Ill. 1988); Firstcollect, Inc. v. Armstrong, 976 S.W.2d 294 (Tex. App. 1998) (affirming class certification order in suit claiming that collection agency's addition of 32% collection fee violated Texas debt collection statute). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 12.5 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

677 See, e.g., Veach v. Sheeks, 316 F.3d 690 (7th Cir. 2003) (Ind. law; denying UDAP claim where misstatement of amount of debt did not cause pecuniary loss to debtor who did not incur attorney fees or pay any of disputed judgment); Dawson v. Genesis Credit Mgmt., L.L.C., 2017 WL 5668073 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 27, 2017) (must show direct connection between statutory violation—here demand for unauthorized amounts—and damage; lost time and attorney fees incurred in investigating the existence of the alleged debt are sufficient); Humphreys v. Budget Rent-a-Car Systems, 2017 WL 6497285 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 19, 2017) (loss of sleep insufficient where UDAP statute requires loss of money or property); Lannan v. Levy & White, 186 F. Supp. 3d 77 (D. Mass. 2016) (including unauthorized amounts in small claims complaints is likely to have negative impact, so meets injury requirement); Cortellessa v. Udren Law Offices P.C., 2016 WL 4554539 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 2, 2016) (paying tax overcharges demanded by mortgage servicer meets UDAP statute's requirement of ascertainable loss of money or property); Conteh v. Shamrock Cmty. Ass'n, Inc., 2015 WL 5177752 (D. Md. Sept. 3, 2015) (dismissing UDAP claim; plaintiffs who paid only the lesser amount that they agreed that they owed failed to show reliance on collector's exaggeration of amount owed); McLaughlin v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 971 F. Supp. 2d 796 (N.D. Ill. 2013) (dismissing UDAP claim where only alleged damages were annoyance and loss of time); Goray v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2007 WL 4260017 (D. Haw. Dec. 4, 2007) (collector's lack of licensure did not cause damage to consumer, so no UDAP claim); Gervais v. Riddle & Assoc., P.C., 479 F. Supp. 2d 270 (D. Conn. 2007) (collector's false threat of litigation not sufficient in and of itself to meet ascertainable loss requirement of Connecticut UDAP statute); Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., P.C., 2006 WL 43770 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 3, 2006); Sambor v. Omnia Credit Services, Inc., 183 F. Supp. 2d 1234 (D. Haw. 2002) (denying summary judgment where actual damages not shown); Gonzalez v. Old Kent Mortgage Co., 2000 WL 1469313 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 19, 2000) (consumer failed to state UDAP claim for unfair debt collection, because she failed to allege ascertainable loss); Berrios v. Sprint Corp., 1998 WL 199842 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 16, 1998) (UDAP claim requires proof of injury due to reliance on deception); Davis v. Suran, 1998 WL 378420 (N.D. Ill. July 1, 1998) (pleading nominal damages of $1 per letter insufficient to satisfy UDAP requirement that actual damages be pleaded); Flores v. Rawlings Co., L.L.C., 177 P.3d 341 (Haw. 2008) (consumer suffered no injury as result of collector's lack of licensure, so cannot maintain UDAP claim); Hedrick v. Spear, 907 P.2d 1123 (Or. Ct. App. 1995) (reversing UDAP recovery for collection violations where consumer did not show ascertainable loss of money or property); Dernier v. Mortgage Network, Inc., 87 A.3d 465 (Vt. 2013) (must show either reliance on a deceptive statement in purchasing goods or services, or damages or injury resulting from the act; neither shown here where assignee's letter asserting right to enforce mortgage was sent long after borrowers contracted for mortgage, and borrowers showed no damage resulting from letter). But see Singleton v. Montgomery Ward Credit Corp., 2000 WL 1810012 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 11, 2000) (consumer who alleges intentional violation of Illinois Consumer Fraud Act need not allege actual damages; may recover nominal damages). But cf. Bruce v. Home Depot, 308 F.Supp. 2d 72 (D. Conn. 2004) (plaintiff need not show ascertainable loss for collection harassment if suffered loss due to other aspects of transaction). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.4.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

678 See, e.g., Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168, 180–181 (3d Cir. 2015) (Pa. UDAP claim based on violation of state debt collection statute must plead ascertainable loss of money or property and causation); Keenan v. Wells Fargo Bank, 246 F. Supp. 3d 518 (D. Mass. 2017) (although violation of state debt collection statute is per se UDAP violation, plaintiff must meet UDAP statute's injury requirement; not met here, because allegations that defendant's contact with represented debtor caused emotional distress and pecuniary losses such as copying and mailing charges are too vague); Baldwin v. Monterey Fin. Services, Inc., 2017 WL 4767696 M.D. Pa. Oct. 20, 2017) (claims of abusive phone calls and third party contacts, in violation of state debt collection statute, fail because no showing of ascertainable loss of money or property as required by UDAP statute). Cf. Yelin v. Swartz, 790 F. Supp. 2d 331 (E.D. Pa. 2011) (UDAP action based on violation of state debt collection act requires showing of loss of money or property, but allegation of "actual damages" is sufficient in pleadings; even if consumer never paid disputed debt, he may have suffered other pecuniary losses).

679 Lowe v. Surpas Res. Corp., 253 F. Supp. 2d 1209 (D. Kan. 2003) (consumer was aggrieved by having to obtain assistance of third parties to respond to collection calls, even though she herself did not hear the calls). See also Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Services, Inc., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1249 (D. Kan. 2003) (consumer who suffered emotional and intangible injuries was "aggrieved").

680 See, e.g., Douyon v. NY Med. Health Care, P.C., 894 F. Supp. 2d 245, 264–265 (E.D.N.Y. 2012); Davis Lake Cmty. Ass'n v. Feldman, 530 S.E.2d 865 (N.C. Ct. App. 2000) (injury to credit reputation and emotional distress meet injury requirement). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.4.2.8.1 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

suffered only emotional distress may have difficulty making a UDAP claim.[681] Even in these states, however, the loss of money or property may be small in amount,[682] and it may not be necessary to prove the exact amount.[683] Costs incurred to investigate or defend against inaccurate debt claims may satisfy the requirement.[684]

In a few statutes the UDAP plaintiff must show that the action affects the public interest,[685] but most courts have no trouble concluding that deceptive or abusive debt collection practices, unless they are very specific to the individual plaintiff, meet this requirement.[686] Some UDAP statutes also require notice to the defendant a certain number of days prior to suit,[687] and many courts require the plaintiff to plead a UDAP claim with at least some level of particularity.[688] While intent is generally not a prerequisite for UDAP liability, some states require a showing of intent for certain violations or 681 See, e.g., Poulin v. Thomas Agency, 746 F. Supp. 2d 200, 206 (D. Me. 2010) (mental distress insufficient). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.4.2.8.1 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

682 Moritz v. Daniel M. Gordon, P.C., 895 F. Supp. 2d 1097 (W.D. Wash. 2012) (must show some pecuniary damage, but minimal amount will suffice; here, price of sending a certified letter). But cf. Poulin v. Thomas Agency, 746 F. Supp. 2d 200 (D. Me. 2010) (possible monetary losses due to reduced credit score are too speculative). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.4.2.7 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

683 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.4.2.6 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

684 Schore v. Renton Collections, Inc., 2018 WL 2018417 (W.D. Wash. May 1, 2018) (cost of hiring an attorney to figure out whether anything was owed after consumer was dunned for already-paid debt satisfied the damages requirement of the UDAP statute); Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (time spent and costs incurred to defend against lawsuits in which debt buyers misrepresented ownership of debt meet injury requirement); Panag v. Farmers Ins. Co., 204 P.3d 885 (Wash. 2009) (requirement of injury to business or property satisfied where plaintiffs spent time and money to consult attorney and investigate whether defendant had made damaging credit reports). See also Hauk v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 749 F. Supp. 2d 358 (D. Md. 2010) (damaged credit, emotional distress, and attorney fees incurred by defendants to defend collection suits wrongfully filed by unlicensed collector are sufficient damage to support UDAP claim). Cf. Wiginton v. Pac. Credit Corp., 634 P.2d 111 (Haw. Ct. App. 1981) (consumer must prove damages to recover under UDAP statute for debt collection violations; fact question whether transportation costs to consult with attorney were caused by debt collection violation). But see Weir v. Med. Data Sys., Inc., 2018 WL 1532853 (S.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2018) (consumer's costs for gas to and from her attorney's office, loss of work time to meet with attorney, and phone minutes to reply to collector's letter and discuss case with her attorney do not satisfy requirement to show pecuniary loss); Holland v. Draper, 2013 WL 1914388 (W.D. Wash. May 8, 2013) (costs of defending a collection action or filing a UDAP claim not pecuniary damages for purposes of UDAP requirement); Poulin v. Thomas Agency, 746 F. Supp. 2d 200, 206 (D. Me. 2010) (holding that expense of retaining attorney after UDAP defendant asserted false claim of debt is not ascertainable loss; failing to distinguish between these fees and those incurred in affirmative UDAP suit). But cf. Brooks v. Cama Self Directed IRA, L.L.C., 2019 WL 418412, at *11 (D. Md. Jan. 31, 2019) (dismissing claim in absence of evidence that defendant's misrepresentations about interest and late fees substantially induced plaintiffs, who had defaulted on their mortgage, to incur costs to defend against foreclosure);. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.4.2.8.7 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library (whether debts and litigation expenses meet UDAP statutes' injury requirements).

685 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.4.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

686 Gilmore v. Account Mgmt., Inc., 2009 WL 4826953 (11th Cir. Dec. 16, 2009) (where debt collector is part of consumer credit and debt collection industry, its abuses have potential to harm general public so are actionable as Georgia UDAP violations); Sanchez v. Ehrlich, 2018 WL 2084147 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 29, 2018) (denying motion to dismiss UDAP claim where plaintiff alleged pattern of commencing housing court proceedings against tenants for rent they did not owe); Scott v. Greenberg, 2017 WL 1214441, at *17–18 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2017) (allegation of generic misrepresentations in connection with thousands of debt collection lawsuits is sufficient); Mayfield v. Asta Funding, Inc., 95 F. Supp. 3d 685 (S.D.N.Y. 2015) (fraudulent wage garnishments are consumer-oriented and affect the public interest, even if the false statements are directed to employers and courts rather than directly to debtors); Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163 (E.D.N.Y. July 24, 2013) (practices that are a normal part of collector's business meet N.Y. requirement of impact on consumers at large); Moritz v. Daniel N. Gordon, P.C., 895 F. Supp. 2d 1097, 1114 (W.D. Wash. 2012) (proof that unlicensed collector attempted to collect debts from others may be sufficient); Boyd v. J.E. Robert Co., 2010 WL 5772892 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2010) (practice of demanding and collecting improper fees for resolution of municipal liens from large segment of the population affects public interest so is actionable under N.Y. UDAP statute), adopted, 2011 WL 477547 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 2, 2011); Garner v. Academy Collection Serv., 2005 WL 643680 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 11, 2005) (denial of motion to dismiss) (deceptive collection tactics for alleged credit card debt affect public interest); Hage v. Gen. Serv. Bur., 306 F. Supp. 2d 883, 889 (D. Neb. 2003) (finding public interest requirement satisfied where plaintiffs filed debt collection case as class action and alleged widespread effects); Stephens v. Omni Ins. Co., 159 P.3d 10, 24–25 (Wash. Ct. App. 2007) (deceptive debt collection notices meet public impact test because of potential for repetition), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Panag v. Farmers Ins. Co., 204 P.3d 885 (Wash. 2009). But cf. Campbell v. MBI Assoc., Inc., 98 F. Supp. 3d 568 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2015) (no UDAP claim for "conduct unique to the parties," here mistakenly sending letter directly to represented consumer; but inclusion of unauthorized fee in form letter affects all consumers, and will support a claim; Karp v. Siegel, 1998 WL 314769 (S.D.N.Y. June 12, 1998) (no UDAP claim where debt collection misdeeds were fact-specific and did not have broader impact on consumers at large).

687 Padilla v. Payco Gen. Am. Credits, 161 F. Supp. 2d 264 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (no cause of action under Mass. UDAP statute where consumer failed to send thirty-day demand letter before filing suit); In re Schwartz, 2011 WL 1331963 (Bankr. D. Mass. Apr. 7, 2011) (private remedy for violation of Massachusetts collection agency act is UDAP claim, but debtor must comply with UDAP statute's demand letter requirement). But cf. Mace v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 109 F.3d 338 (7th Cir. 1997) (Wisconsin UDAP statute requires notice to defendant thirty days before commencing class action, but this requirement is procedural and therefore inapplicable in federal class action); Hernandez v. Vanderbilt Mortgage & Fin., Inc., 2010 WL 2598368 (S.D. Tex. June 24, 2010) (UDAP statute's pre-suit notice requirement inapplicable where complaint seeks remedies only under state debt collection statute, even though complaint notes that violations are also UDAP violations). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.4.4 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

688 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.6.5 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

for enhanced damages, or make the defendant's good faith a defense.[689] Whether a litigation privilege affects a UDAP or other statutory claim is discussed at § 16.1.3, supra.

16.4 State Credit Repair Organization Statutes

16.4.1 Overview

Most states have passed statutes to deal with abuses by credit repair organizations.[690] These statutes, often termed the state Credit Services Organization Act, offer strong remedies and have the potential of applying to certain debt collection activities. They typically follow the federal Credit Repair Organizations Act[691] closely in some respects, but differ in significant ways, often imposing additional requirements such as registration and bonding.

State credit repair organization statutes are discussed in detail in NCLC's Fair Credit Reporting Ch. 17 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

16.4.2 Scope

Like the federal Credit Repair Organizations Act, all or nearly all state credit repair statutes apply to organizations that offer to improve an individual's credit rating in return for the payment of money or other valuable consideration. This language should be interpreted consistently with the federal statute to encompass debt collectors who represent to debtors that payment will improve their credit records.[692]

In addition, most state credit repair statutes cover organizations that assist or offer to assist consumers in obtaining extensions of credit. These statutes may cover debt collectors who offer to assist the consumer in obtaining credit to pay the debt. They would also cover creditors who make such offers, provided the creditor does not fall within a specific exemption.[693] The assistance must be offered or provided in return for the payment of money or other valuable consideration, but the collector's receipt of the proceeds of the extension of credit may meet this requirement.[694]

State credit repair laws typically exempt non-profit organizations, licensed real estate brokers and attorneys when acting within the scope of their licenses, broker-dealers registered with the SEC or the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC), consumer reporting agencies, credit unions, banks and other lenders authorized under federal or state law, and lenders approved by HUD for participation in federal mortgage insurance.[695] A smaller number of state credit repair laws exempt debt collectors, debt adjusters, mortgage brokers, accountants, holders of other licenses, or other entities.

16.4.3 Substantive Prohibitions

Debt collectors that fall under state credit repair statutes are likely to have made no attempt to comply with the statute's substantive requirements. Typical requirements of state credit repair statutes include:

- Registration and bonding;
- Disclosures to the consumer about rights available under the FCRA;
- Written contracts with specified provisions, including a description of the services to be provided;
- A prohibition against charging the consumer for a referral to a retail seller who will, or may, extend credit to the consumer on the same terms as those available to the general public; or
- A three- or five-day right to cancel any contract for services.

Most, like the federal statute, also prohibit certain misrepresentations and deceptive acts. A number of state statutes explicitly prohibit waivers of the statutory protections.

Some state credit repair statutes, like the federal statute, prohibit organizations from accepting payment from the buyer before performing services. Many allow advance payment once the organization has posted a bond, however.

16.4.4 Private Remedies

Almost all state credit repair statutes provide a private right of action to consumers. Some do so both by making a violation actionable under the state UDAP statute and by creating a special cause of action.

The special causes of action offered by state credit repair laws are often broader than those authorized by the state UDAP statute or the state debt collection practices statute. Usually the statutes that create special causes of action authorize punitive damages and attorney fees. Many, like the federal statute,[696] set as minimum damages the total amount paid by 689 See, e.g., Watkins v. Peterson Enters., 57 F. Supp. 2d 1102 (E.D. Wash. 1999) (collector established good faith defense to UDAP liability). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 4.2.4, 4.2.6, 12.4.2.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

690 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 15.3, Appx. H (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

691 15 U.S.C. §§ 1679 to 1679j. See § 14.9, infra (summary of debt collection applications of federal Act). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

692 See § 14.9.2, supra (decisions under federal Credit Repair Organizations Act).

693 See Brown v. Mortgagestar, Inc., 194 F. Supp. 2d 473 (S.D. W. Va. 2002) (state credit services organizations act would apply to entity that brokered loan, but this defendant was exempt as lender regulated by state and approved by HUD for participation in mortgage insurance program).

694 See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.2.2 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

695 See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 17.3.3, Appx. H (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

696 15 U.S.C. § 1679g(a)(1)(B).

the consumer.[697] A few set a dollar amount, such as $1000, as minimum damages.

16.5 Unauthorized or Unethical Practice of Law by Creditors, Lawyers, and Collection Agencies

16.5.1 Unauthorized Practice of Law by Creditors

Every state has laws restricting the practice of law to licensed lawyers. While most unauthorized practice of law cases in the debt collection context have involved unauthorized practice of law by collection agencies, some cases have involved creditors.

Many jurisdictions do not allow a corporate creditor's officer or employee to represent the creditor in court unless they are authorized to practice law in that jurisdiction.[698] Courts will closely scrutinize assignments of debts to individuals, especially if they are owners or managers of the corporation, to determine whether the assignment is a subterfuge to permit unauthorized practice.[699]

16.5.2 Unauthorized Practice of Law by Collection Agencies

States have taken very different positions as to what activities of a collection agency constitute unauthorized practice of law.[700] Alabama considers demands for payment that do not threaten suit not to constitute the practice of law.[701] Rhode Island prohibited any debt collection activities by third parties unless they were admitted to practice in the state, but this restriction was found to be an unconstitutional burden on interstate commerce.[702]

Some states prohibit a contingent fee collector from filing suit in its own name.[703] A collection agency may be engaging in the unauthorized practice of law if it has a contingent fee arrangement with a creditor and hires and controls the attorney filing suit.[704] However, a collection agency may avoid a finding 697 See, e.g., Barker v. Allegra Corp. (In re Barker), 251 B.R. 250 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2000) (amount paid must be awarded regardless of amount of actual damages).

698 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 3 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

699 See, e.g., In re Reed, 532 B.R. 82 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2015) (key issue is whether assignee is officer or employee of creditor corporation; conduct here was suspicious but not sufficient to require dismissal); Zapata v. McHugh, 893 N.W.2d 720 (Neb. 2017) (assignee of business entity that may sue only by licensed attorney stands in shoes of assignor, and thus may sue only by licensed attorney; noting that this rule "protects the public from irresponsible behavior by lay advocates"). See also Iowa Supreme Court Commission on the Unauthorized Practice of Law v. Sullins, 893 N.W.2d 864 (Iowa 2017) (articulating criteria for subterfuge assignments; here disbarred attorney was practicing law when he took assignment of debt from person who owed him money and sued in his own name; lawyer here was representing assignor as well as himself).

700 See generally Annot., Operations of Collection Agency As Unauthorized Practice of Law, 27 A.L.R.3d 1152 (1969); In re Morales, 151 A.3d 333 (Vt. 2016) (overview of Vermont law defining practice of law).

701 Porter v. Alabama Ass'n of Credit Executives, 338 So. 2d 812 (Ala. 1976).

702 Nat'l Revenue Corp. v. Violet, 807 F.2d 285 (1st Cir. 1986).

703 Conn. Gen. Stat. § 36a-805(a)(3) (collection agency may not "receive assignments as a third party of claims for the purpose of collection or institute suit thereon in any court"); Iowa Supreme Court Comm'n on Unauthorized Practice of Law v. A-1 Assoc., 623 N.W.2d 803 (Iowa 2001) (company that took assignments, sued in small claims court, then kept agreed percentage and forwarded rest to creditor was rendering legal services for profit "under the guise of trying its own case"); N.Y. Judiciary Law § 489 (McKinney) (forbidding collector from taking assignment of debt for purposes of filing suit); Roberts v. LaConey, 650 S.E.2d 474 (S.C. 2007) (purported assignee engaged in unauthorized practice where it paid nothing for assignment, would receive nothing unless successful, and must split proceeds 1/3 to "assignee" and 2/3 to creditor); State v. Isner, 285 S.E.2d 641 (W. Va. 1981) (collection agency may not sue on debt assigned to it for collection). See also Withers v. Eveland, 988 F. Supp. 942 (E.D. Va. 1997) (under Virginia law, non-lawyer was not authorized to file suit to collect debt owed by another, so threat to sue violated FDCPA as it was a threat to take action that cannot legally be taken or is not intended to be taken); State v. Hunt, 880 P.2d 96 (Wash. Ct. App. 1994) (affirming conviction of non-lawyer on charge of operating unlicensed collection agency; he took assignments of debts and brought pro se suits, some naming original creditor as plaintiff). But see Green Tree Servicing L.L.C. v. Sanders, 2006 WL 2033668 (Ky. Ct. App. July 21, 2006) (debt collector to whom debt assigned for purposes of collection may sue in its own name; distinguishing cases in which non-assignee collector prepared legal papers for creditor); Idaho Code § 26-2243 (permit holder shall have property right in any account assigned to it for collection; provided, however, no right herein granted shall authorize such permit holder to engage in practice of law). But cf. In re UPL Advisory Op. No. 2001-1, 591 S.E.2d 822 (Ga. 2004) (if suit on assigned debt is in creditor's interest, i.e., if creditor gets paid only if agency wins, this is unauthorized practice; if creditor makes "actual and legal transfer of all interest in the account" then collector is lawfully representing itself); Hauge Assoc., Inc. v. McGriff, 666 N.W.2d 151 (Iowa 2003) (collection agency to which debt was assigned for collection could sue as real party in interest if represented by Iowa attorney); Asset Acceptance Corp. v. Robinson, 625 N.W.2d 804 (Mich. Ct. App. 2001) (successor creditor, who purchased debt outright, was not collection agency as defined by Mich. Comp. Laws § 339.901(b), and thus did not violate Mich. Comp. Laws § 339.915a, nor engage in unauthorized practice of law, when it sued on purchased debt in its own name).

704 See, e.g., Kolker v. Duke City Collection Agency, 750 F. Supp. 468 (D.N.M. 1990); J.H. Marshall & Assoc. v. Burleson, 313 A.2d 587 (D.C. 1973); Bump v. Barnett, 16 N.W.2d 579 (Iowa 1944); State ex rel. Norvell v. Credit Bureau, 514 P.2d 40 (N.M. 1973); State ex rel. State Bar of Wis. v. Bonded Collections, 154 N.W.2d 250 (Wis. 1967). See also Brees v. Sweet, 2011 WL 3687610 (Wash. Ct. App. Aug. 23, 2011) (non-lawyer cannot act pro se to collect a judgment assigned to him unless assignment is absolute and supported by consideration). Cf. Collection Ctr., Inc. v. State ex rel. Collection Agency Bd., 809 P.2d 278 (Wyo. 1991) (collection agency not permitted to advertise that it offered legal services since agency was prohibited by statute from rendering legal services; agency may advertise that it would accept assignment of debts and proceed as party in interest on those debts). But cf. Lewis v. ACB Bus. Services, Inc., 135 F.3d 389 (6th Cir. 1998) (Ohio law) (consumer failed to state claim for unauthorized practice of law in absence of evidence that collector rather than creditor had hired and would pay attorney); Asset Acceptance Corp. v. Robinson, 625 N.W.2d 804 (Mich. Ct. App. 2001) (assignee did not engage in unauthorized practice where it purchased debts outright).

of unauthorized practice of law if it obtains written authority from the creditor to forward the creditor's accounts to an attorney for collection and does not interfere in the attorney-client relationship between the creditor and lawyer.[705]

Some states have statutes permitting collection agencies to file debt collection suits, and some courts have given effect to these statutes.[706] However, courts may hold that it is their inherent or constitutional right—not the legislature's—to determine policy regarding the practice of law,[707] so may not view these statutes as controlling. An intermediate appellate court in Arizona, relying on the absence of a prohibition in the state debt collection statutes and some state regulations that regulated the manner of filing suit, concluded that a debt collector could take assignments of debts and file suit on them in its own name.[708]

The West Virginia Supreme Court narrowly construed a statute allowing non-lawyers to appear for others in a magistrate's court to avoid constitutional questions, holding that it did not permit a collection agency to represent a creditor.[709] The South Carolina Supreme Court held that third party managers hired by condominium or homeowners' associations engaged in unauthorized practice when they appeared in court, filed judgments in court, prepared and filed lien documents, and advertised that they could perform these services.[710]

California courts have ruled that an individual to whom a debt has been assigned may bring a pro se suit on the debt, as long as the assignment is absolute, even if the proceeds of the suit will be split with the assignor.[711] Another California decision holds that a corporation does not engage in unauthorized practice of law when its in-house counsel files collection actions on behalf of a related corporation, a debt buyer.[712]

Some courts hold that collection agency letters threatening legal action constitute unauthorized practice of law.[713] Unauthorized practice of law may also occur when a collection

705 See, e.g., Eager v. Credit Bur. Collection Services, Inc., 2013 WL 5719224 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 18, 2013) (collector did not engage in unauthorized practice when it retained law firm to sue on debt where agreement with creditor authorized it to do so); State ex rel. Porter v. Alabama Ass'n of Credit Executives, 338 So. 2d 812 (Ala. 1976). See also Asset Acceptance Corp. v. Robinson, 625 N.W.2d 804 (Mich. Ct. App. 2001) (reciting similar Michigan statutory provisions); Patterson v. Pritchard, 2011 WL 3371545 (Tex. App. Aug. 4, 2011) (construing contract with non-lawyer not to require unauthorized practice, so it is not illegal). Cf. Jones v. Vest, 2000 WL 33797103 (E.D. Va. Nov. 7, 2000) (collector engaged in unauthorized practice of law and violated FDCPA by retaining attorney and filing garnishment summons when its collection services agreement with creditor was no longer in force).

706 COLORADO: Colo. Rev. Stat. § 5-16-125(3). See People v. Adams, 243 P.3d 256 (Colo. 2010) (affirming criminal conviction for unauthorized practice; claims may be assigned and assignees may sue, but assignment not shown here; non-lawyer who filed claims in bankruptcies, and split recovery 50/50 with creditor, was "acting in a representative capacity" and thus practicing law); Thibodeaux v. Creditors Serv., Inc., 551 P.2d 714 (Colo. 1976) (construing earlier version of predecessor to this statute, to allow collectors to bring suit on assigned claims).

OHIO: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1319.12(C) (West). See Capital One Bank v. Reese, 2015 WL 5728642, at *12 (Ohio Ct. App. Sept. 30, 2015) (unpublished) (collection agency did not engage in unauthorized practice where it forwarded case to collection firm but suit was filed in name of creditor, even though firm's records listed agency as client); Recovery Sys., Ltd. v. Coburn, 2008 WL 4801641 (Ohio Ct. App. Nov. 4, 2008) (fact issue whether assignment complied with statute); Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (unauthorized practice where agency sued on debt that had not been assigned to it in compliance with Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1319.12(C) (West) procedure);.

OREGON: Or. Rev. Stat. § 697.045. Cf. Messmer v. Carter, 578 P.2d 788 (Or. 1978) (construing former statute to allow licensed collectors to bring suit on claims assigned to them; declining to reach constitutional questions).

TENNESSEE: Tenn. Code Ann. § 62-20-124 (agency may take assignment of debts and sue in own name if licensed attorney appears for it; statute establishes procedural requirements for suits on assigned debts). See Dickerson v. CBET, Inc., 2016 WL 7799578 (E.D. Tenn. Mar. 14, 2016) (collection agency, acting as agent for creditor, may retain counsel to represent it in collection action; agency's non-lawyer employee, who prepared paperwork, did not engage in unauthorized practice, because lawyer read and approved his work before signing it).

707 See, e.g., Merco Constr. Eng'rs, Inc. v. Mun. Ct. for Long Beach Judicial Dist., 581 P.2d 636 (Cal. 1978) (invalidating statute that extended right of lay person to represent corporations beyond cases in small claims courts). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.3.9.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

708 Cruz v. Lusk Collection Agency, 580 P.2d 1210 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1978) (giving effect to statute allowing collectors to bring suit on assigned debts).

709 State v. Isner, 285 S.E.2d 641 (W. Va. 1981).

710 Rogers, Townsend & Thomas, P.C. v. Peck, 797 S.E.2d 396 (S.C. 2017).

711 Fink v. Shemtov, 148 Cal. Rptr. 3d 570 (Cal. Ct. App. 2012) (non-lawyer assignee, who agreed to sue on debt and split recovery with assignor, was not engaged in unauthorized practice when he sued pro se in his own name; assignment was valid; key issue is degree of control that assignor can exercise over the litigation). See also LeDoux v. Credit Research Corp., 125 Cal. Rptr. 166 (Cal. Ct. App. 1977) (reaching similar conclusion under former state statute; not unauthorized practice for collection agency to which claim had been assigned to bring suit through its attorney and split the proceeds with the assignor).

712 McMinn v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 867335 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 2, 2015) (state law does not prohibit representation of creditor by in-house counsel of related corporation).

713 Withers v. Eveland, 988 F. Supp. 942 (E.D. Va. 1997) (under Virginia law, non-lawyer was not authorized to file suit to collect debt owed by another, so non-lawyer collector who threatened to sue violated FDCPA); State ex rel. Porter v. Alabama Ass'n of Credit Executives, 338 So. 2d 812 (Ala. 1976) (letters threatening legal action constitute unauthorized practice of law). But cf. Porter v. Dunn & Bradstreet, 352 F. Supp. 1226 (N.D. Ala. 1972) (notices stating that claimant will "take steps to enforce collection" or will "forward this account to an attorney" do not fall outside sphere of activity preserved for lawyers and do not threaten legal action), aff'd mem. 472 F.2d 1049 (5th Cir. 1973); State ex rel. Norvell v. Credit Bureau, 514 P.2d 40 (N.M. 1973) (letters warning of effects of adverse judgment, sent prior to suit, were permissible); Chevy Chase Bank v. McCamant, 512 S.E.2d 217 (W. Va. 1998) (interpreting West Virginia debt collection law, which prohibits a debt collector that is not an attorney licensed in West Virginia from sending letters on an attorney's letterhead to West Virginia debtors, not to prohibit out-of-state attorney from sending dunning letter to state resident on behalf of out-of-state creditor). See generally § 16.5.3, infra.

agency offers legal advice to a debtor or a creditor,[714] prepares pleadings[715] or garnishment or attachment forms,[716] or assists an attorney in collecting an account.[717] The activity of a loan servicer may also cross the line into unauthorized practice if it goes beyond demanding payment or advising the borrower that the lender intends to foreclose.[718] Some bar associations and bar committees have issued advisory opinions defining activities of collection agencies or creditors that may constitute unauthorized practice of law.[719]

Low-income consumers who lack access to competent legal representation may seek advice from self-styled foreclosure consultants, paralegals, or other non-lawyers. These entities are often held to have engaged in unauthorized practice.[720] Bankruptcy petition preparers may go beyond their legitimate document preparation work and offer legal advice—sometimes disastrously wrong—to petitioners. Courts can enjoin this unauthorized practice, require disgorgement of fees, and in some cases seek criminal prosecution.[721] Such acts are also UDAP violations.[722] Credit counseling programs, debt

714 See Patrick v. Teays Valley Trs., L.L.C., 2012 WL 5993163 (N.D. W. Va. Nov. 30, 2012) (allowing debtors to proceed with claim that owner of trustee company violated state debt collection statute's prohibition against unlicensed practice of law by discussing legal matters with them); Florida Bar v. Florida First Fin. Services Group, Inc., 695 So. 2d 275 (Fla. 1997) (issuing permanent injunction against agency and individuals; unauthorized practice of law for non-lawyer collection agency employees to hold themselves out as lawyers and advise debtors as to the legal consequences of their actions); Pisarello v. Administrator's Serv. Corp., 464 So. 2d 917 (La. Ct. App. 1985) (collection agency precluded from giving advice regarding statute of limitations running on claims because it would constitute practice of law); Roberts v. LaConey, 650 S.E.2d 474 (S.C. 2007) (unauthorized practice shown where collector's letter to debtor included legal opinion as to individual liability for corporate debts, and threats of possible legal consequences); Crain v. Unauthorized Practice of Law Comm. of the Supreme Court of Texas, 11 S.W.3d 328 (Tex. App. 1999) (non-lawyer debt collector engaged in unauthorized practice of law by offering advice on filing of liens). Cf. In re Dunklin, 2006 WL 2806234 (Bankr. D.N.J. Sept. 27, 2006) (out-of-state firm, not admitted to practice in N.J., filed proof of claim including "bankruptcy fee"; proof of claim was administrative act, not practice of law; fee was closer question, not reached because fee request withdrawn). But see Unauthorized Practice of Law Comm. v. Paul Mason & Assoc., 46 F.3d 469 (5th Cir. 1995) (Tex. law; not unauthorized practice of law where Creditors Bankruptcy Service, acting as creditors' agent, filed proofs of claim, monitored progress of bankruptcies, attended creditors' meetings, contacted debtors' lawyers to discuss reaffirmation, and filled out reaffirmation forms; if state law on unauthorized practice was inconsistent with this holding, it was preempted by bankruptcy law) But cf. Laccinole v. Assad, 2016 WL 868511 (D. R.I. Mar. 7, 2016) (process server did not engage in unauthorized practice when he pointed to creditor's phone number and told debtor to call her if he wanted to negotiate out-of-court settlement); Metz v. HCSC-Credit & Collections, 1985 WL 3368 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 29, 1985) (threat to recommend suit to creditor not threat to engage in unauthorized practice of law as it involved no knowledge of law beyond that possessed by average person); LoPresti, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 4, 1992) (FDCPA does not prohibit collection agencies from counseling their clients to litigate against consumers).

715 See Sanz v. Fernandez, 633 F. Supp. 2d 1356 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (landlord services company prepared and filed eviction complaint); Barbanti v. Quality Loan Serv. Co., 2007 WL 26775 (E.D. Wash. Jan. 3, 2007) (unauthorized practice of law where non-lawyer employee of mortgage servicer signed declaration of foreclosure); Cleveland Metro Bar Ass'n. v. Wooten, 10 N.E.3d 703 (Ohio 2014) (non-attorney debt collector engaged in unauthorized practice by preparing pleadings and filing small-claims actions for payday lenders); Cleveland Metro Bar Ass'n. v. McGinnis, 998 N.E.2d 474 (Ohio 2013) (using the words law or "law office" in advertising by non-lawyer; preparing and filing pleadings); Roberts v. LaConey, 650 S.E.2d 474 (S.C. 2007) (purported assignee of judgment engaged in unauthorized practice of law by filing pleadings); Crain v. Unauthorized Practice of Law Comm. of the Supreme Court of Texas, 11 S.W.3d 328 (Tex. App. 1999) (non-lawyer debt collector engaged in unauthorized practice of law by filing lien affidavits for mechanics' liens and supplying legal forms).

716 Blair v. Supportkids, Inc., 222 F. Supp. 2d 1038 (N.D. Ill. 2002) (unauthorized practice for private child support collector to send document that purported to be income withholding notice to obligor's employer); Marchant v. U.S. Collections, West, Inc., 12 F. Supp. 2d 1001 (D. Ariz. 1998) (non-lawyer employee of collection agency who signed application for writ of garnishment was engaged in unauthorized practice of law and violated FDCPA); State v. Milliman, 802 N.W.2d 776 (Minn. Ct. App. 2011) (non-attorney collector engaged in unauthorized practice when he prepared and served garnishment forms, even though creditor had given him power of attorney); Crain v. Unauthorized Practice of Law Comm. of the Supreme Court of Texas, 11 S.W.3d 328 (Tex. App. 1999) (non-lawyer debt collector engaged in unauthorized practice of law by filing lien affidavits for mechanics' liens). But see Mitchell v. J&M Sec., L.L.C., ___ S.W.3d ___, 2019 WL 5382515 (Mo. Ct. App. Oct. 22, 2019) (filling in blanks on garnishment forms, along with interrogatory form required by court rule, and filing them, does not require legal skill or knowledge and is not practice of law). But cf. Cruson v. A.A.A.A., Inc., 2007 WL 2363475 (Wash. Ct. App. Aug. 20, 2007) (non-lawyer did not commit unauthorized practice by filling out garnishment forms for attorney to review and sign).

717 State ex rel. Porter v. Alabama Ass'n of Credit Executives, 338 So. 2d 812 (Ala. 1976) (affirming injunction prohibiting agency from accepting employment from any attorney to recover amounts owed to another).

718 Barbanti v. Quality Loan Serv. Co., 2007 WL 26775 (E.D. Wash. Jan. 3, 2007) (issuing declaration of forfeiture as preliminary step in non-judicial foreclosure is practice of law). But cf. Wells Fargo Bank v. New Orleanian Ltd. P'ship, 855 So. 2d 388 (La. Ct. App. 2003) (servicer not engaged in unauthorized practice where it did not provide legal advice, file suit in its own name, threaten that it (as opposed to lender) would take legal action, or secure attorney for lender in exchange for percentage of amounts recovered).

719 See, e.g., Opinion 245, 6 Ariz. B.J. 39 (Dec. 1970); In re UPL Advisory Op. 2003-1, 623 S.E.2d 464 (Ga. 2005) (mediation company and its non-lawyer owner, who represented consumers in negotiations with creditors' lawyers, who had already filed suit, were engaged in unauthorized practice of law; firm located prospective customers by searching court records); In re UPL Advisory Op. No. 2001-1, 591 S.E.2d 822 (Ga. 2004) (if suit on assigned debt is in creditor's interest, i.e., if creditor gets paid only if agency wins, this is unauthorized practice; if creditor makes "actual and legal transfer of all interest in the account" then collector is lawfully representing itself); New York County Lawyer's Assoc. Op. Nos. 510, 555, 1968 N.Y. Co. Y.B. 258 (1980).

720 See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law Ch. 10 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (regulation of debt relief services); National Consumer Law Center, Home Foreclosures Chs. 15, 16 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 9.4.2, 9.4.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

721 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 16.6 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

722 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 13.6 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library;

settlement companies, and debt elimination scams are discussed in NCLC's Federal Deception Law Ch. 10 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

16.5.3 Unethical Practice of Law by Lawyers Engaging in Debt Collection

The collection activities of a lawyer may be unethical. Examples of collection activities for which attorneys have been sanctioned include:

- Allowing collection employees to act in the attorney's name;[723]
- Routinely signing pleadings and other documents prepared by attorneys not licensed to practice in the state;[724]
- Designing a dunning letter simulating legal process for use by a collection agency;[725]
- Filing false affidavits, obtained by a debt buyer when it purchased the debts, that implied that bank officers had personal knowledge about specific debtors' debts, without having reviewed them;[726]
- Threatening actions that the attorney does not have authority to take or does not intend to take;[727]
- Giving legal advice to an unrepresented debtor;[728]
- Threatening criminal prosecution in an attempt to collect a debt for a client;[729]
- Filing suit in the name of the collection agency rather than in the name of the true creditor;[730]
- Permitting a collection agency client to obtain a judgment against a party for a debt that was not owed;[731]
- Attempting to collect the same debt twice, by dunning an estate for a debt which the testator had paid in full while alive, and refusing to cooperate with the estate's attorney's efforts to clarify the problem;[732]
- Repeatedly dunning or suing non-debtors with names or Social Security numbers similar to those of debtors, and carrying on after being made aware of the problem;[733]
- Allowing a non-lawyer, who failed to provide required disclosures, to negotiate reaffirmation agreements with debtors;[734] and
- Staging a media event under the guise of serving a writ of execution on a judgment debtor.[735]

National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 16.6 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

723 In re Hastert, Cal. State Bar Op./04-0-10070 (Dec. 11, 2006) (reprimanding collection lawyer; allowing collection employee to file complaints and default judgments without supervision was aiding unauthorized practice), available at http://members.calbar.ca.gov; In re Wall, 73 N.E.3d 170 (Ind. 2017) (imposing 30-day suspension on local lawyer who enabled unauthorized practice by out-of-state foreclosure rescue firm; firm's paralegals did all the work; warning that court takes this practice very seriously, and could impose heavier sanctions, but this lawyer's misconduct, though "quite ill-advised" was well-intentioned); Kentucky Bar Ass'n v. Tiller, 641 S.W.2d 421 (Ky. 1982); In re DeVinny, 255 N.W.2d 832 (Minn. 1977) (publicly censuring attorney who lent his name to collection agency's letterhead and failed to authorize or personally supervise court proceedings brought by collection agency in his name); In re Lenahan, 824 N.Y.S.2d 826 (N.Y. App. Div. 2006) (two-year suspension for lending name to collection agency); In re Scheck, 574 N.Y.S.2d 372 (N.Y. App. Div. 1991) (allowing collection employees to act in lawyer's name and violate FDCPA was considered in one-year suspension of lawyer for violating N.Y. Code of Professional Responsibility); N.Y. Ethic Op. No. 813 (N.Y. State Bar Assoc. May 7, 2007) (lawyer should not use law firm letterhead for debt collection letters sent by debt collectors without meaningful involvement and legal supervision), available at https://nysba.org. See also United States v. Cent. Adjustment Bureau, Inc., 667 F. Supp. 370 (N.D. Tex. 1986) (such behavior unethical and proscribed by FDCPA), aff'd as modified on other grounds, 823 F.2d 880 (5th Cir. 1987); ABA Formal Op. 469 (Nov. 12, 2014), available at www.americanbar.org (prosecutor who provides official letterhead to debt collector for use in sending letters threatening dishonored check prosecution, when no lawyer from prosecutor's office has reviewed letter or case file to determine if prosecution is warranted, violates Model Rule 8.4(c) by falsely implying that prosecutor has determined that check transaction is prosecutable, and Model Rule 5.5(a) by aiding and abetting collection agency's unauthorized practice of law). See also N.J. Advisory Comm. on Professional Ethics Op. 506 (Oct. 1982), available at http://njlaw.rutgers.edu. Cf. In re Disciplinary Action Against McCray, 755 N.W.2d 835 (N.D. 2008) (six-month suspension for misconduct in course of credit repair scam; attorney responsible for unauthorized practice and fraud by non-lawyer leased employees who sent out form dispute letters containing false statements).

724 In re DuBre, 656 S.E.2d 343 (S.C. 2007) (public reprimand); In re Wall, 73 N.E.3d 170 (Ind. 2017) (pleadings prepared by paralegals at out-of-state foreclosure rescue firm).

725 In re Dows, 209 N.W. 627 (Minn. 1926).

726 People v. Standley, 2015 WL 4944101 (Colo. July 30, 2015).

727 See ABA Comm. on Ethics & Pro. Resp., Informal Op. C-734 (1964).

728 Model Rules of Pro. Conduct r. 4.3 (Am. Bar Ass'n 1983), available at https://www.americanbar.org; Maru, State Bar of Texas Op. 380 (1975), available at https://www.legalethicstexas.com ("a collection letter sent to an unrepresented party may not contain a detailed explanation of the legal consequences of nonpayment, for such would constitute advising the party of the law").

729 Comm. on Prof'l Ethics & Conduct v. Michelson, 345 N.W.2d 112 (Iowa 1984). See also Roberts v. LaConey, 650 S.E.2d 474 (S.C. 2007) (threat of arrest, made by collector engaged in unauthorized practice, was "inappropriate" and would violate rules of professional conduct if made by licensed lawyer). See generally §§ 7.2.4.1, 15.6, 16.2.4.5, supra.

730 Kolker v. Sanchez, 1991 WL 11691589 (D.N.M. Dec. 10, 1991) (finding violations of New Mexico UDAP statute and FDCPA; rejecting attorney's preemption defense based on state supreme court's exclusive regulation of lawyer conduct, because attorney violated state court's standards as well).

731 Kentucky Bar Ass'n v. Banks, 769 S.W.2d 760 (Ky. 1989).

732 Hanzelik v. Bd. of Prof'l Responsibility of the Supreme Court, 380 S.W.3d 669 (Tenn. 2012) (thirty-day suspension; problem originated from haphazard recordkeeping).

733 In re Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 981 N.Y.S.2d 100 (N.Y. App. Div. 2014) (censuring large volume collection firm and senior partner for conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice, and conduct adversely reflecting on fitness as a lawyer).

734 In re Carlos, 227 B.R. 535 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1998) (sanctioning attorney who violated Cal. Rule of Professional Conduct 1-300(A) by willfully aiding unauthorized practice of law; attorney allowed non-lawyer, who failed to provide disclosures required by bankruptcy law, to negotiate reaffirmation agreements).

735 Whitehead v. Food Max of Mississippi, Inc., 332 F.3d 796 (5th Cir. 2003) (affirming Rule 11 sanctions; timing and highly dramatic manner of serving writ of execution were sufficient to show improper purpose).

Lawyers whose collection letters misrepresent their authority to sue where they are not admitted to practice may run afoul of unauthorized practice rules and state UDAP statutes.[736] The California Supreme Court refused to allow contractual attorney fees for activities constituting the unauthorized practice of law, i.e., making demands, preparing for arbitration, and negotiating a settlement, which were carried out in California by lawyers not admitted to practice there.[737]

Intermingling the activities of a collection agency and an attorney may violate professional standards.[738] A court held that a New Jersey statute barring professional corporations from engaging in side businesses prevents a law firm from buying and suing on defaulted debts.[739] The South Carolina Supreme Court publicly reprimanded an inexperienced lawyer for his involvement with a collection agency that paid him a monthly fee and provided him with an office for his private practice. The agency hired, fired, and supervised a staff of telephone collectors, who used the lawyer's name while repeatedly and egregiously violating the state debt collection statute and the FDCPA.[740] A lawyer who fails to properly supervise non-lawyer employees will be responsible for their unauthorized practice or other misconduct.[741]

In a number of states, the legislature has specifically prohibited collection activities by judges and law enforcement officials.[742] A New York statute allows an injured party to seek treble damages against any attorney who is guilty of deceit or collusion with intent to deceive the court or any party.[743] This statute can be applied to practices such as falsely assuring a debtor that they did not have to respond to a summons as long as they made payments, then taking a default judgment and failing to credit them for the payments made.[744]

736 See, e.g., Bencosme v. Stillman Law Offices, L.L.C., 2018 WL 4539224 (D.N.J. Sept. 27, 2018) (declining to dismiss; noting unresolved issues whether dunning letter, which did not threaten lawsuit, on letterhead of Massachusetts firm not licensed to practice in New Jersey, misrepresented attorney involvement or constituted unauthorized practice); Newman v. CheckRite California, Inc., 912 F. Supp. 1354 (E.D. Cal. 1995) (threat to file suit "NOW" deceptive, where collectors' lawyers were neither admitted in California nor associated with local counsel). See also Russey v. Rankin, 911 F. Supp. 1449 (D.N.M. 1995) (statement that agency could file suit within thirty days was deceptive where agency was not licensed to operate in New Mexico, and its usual practice of taking assignments of debts and suing on them was forbidden by New Mexico law; UDAP violations were "knowing" where attorney designed system of form letters, even though he did not approve sending of each letter); Florida Bar v. Moran, 273 So. 2d 390 (Fla. 1973) (attorney commits unauthorized practice through use of a business card that falsely suggests that she is licensed in state); In re Charges of Unprofessional Conduct in Panel File No. 39302, 884 N.W.2d 661 (Minn. 2016) (privately reprimanding Colorado-licensed attorney, who engaged in telephone negotiations with Minnesota attorney, seeking to settle Minnesota family members' debt to Minnesota condo association; negotiating settlement is clearly practice of law; noting that result would be different if lawyer negotiated with out-of-state attorney on behalf of in-state client).

737 Birbrower, Montalbano, Condon & Frank, P.C. v. Superior Court, 949 P.2d 1 (Cal. 1998). But cf. Olson v. Cohen, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003) (denying injunctive relief and disgorgement of fees on equitable grounds against law firm that had incorporated but failed to register as corporation; purpose of incorporation is to obtain tax advantages and limit personal liability, not to protect consumers).

738 See Cleveland Bar Ass'n v. Nosan, 840 N.E.2d 1073 (Ohio 2006) (sanctioning lawyer for aiding unauthorized practice of law and splitting fees with non-lawyer; debt counseling company provided lawyer with office space, advertising, and support services; non-lawyer intake worker advised consumers whether to choose payment plan or bankruptcy and designed payment plans; lawyer's name used on all documents and fees split with debt counseling company). But see State ex rel. State Bar Ass'n v. Israel, 25 P.3d 909 (Okla. 2001) (lawyer who represented mothers in child support matters was part-owner of agency that helped them collect; not improper, provided that interest was properly disclosed, interests of obligee and collector were not in conflict, agency handled only "ministerial" aspects of collection, legal services were subject of separate contract with law firm, and funds were properly accounted for).

739 Chulsky v. Hudson Law Offices, 777 F. Supp. 2d 823 (D.N.J. 2011) (concluding that law firm may violate FDCPA by representing that it has authority to enforce a debt that it acquired as part of illegal side business of debt-buying).

740 In re Zenner, 560 S.E.2d 406 (S.C. 2002).

741 In re Allegro Law, L.L.C., 2010 WL 2712256 (Bankr. M.D. Ala. July 6, 2010) (describing business plan of deceptive debt settlement service; lawyer recruited clients and allowed his name to be used, but all work was done by non-lawyers; lawyer was deceiving consumers, and non-lawyers were engaged in unauthorized practice); In re Lustig, 2001 Ariz. LEXIS 160 (Ariz. Sept. 7, 2001) (non-lawyer employees held selves out as lawyers, and assisted in "dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice"; attorney publicly censured); In re Suspended Member of the Arizona Bar, Klahr, 2002 Ariz. LEXIS 71 (Ariz. May 1, 2002) (allowing office manager to make threatening calls to collect debts); People v. Standley, 2015 WL 4944101 (Colo. July 30, 2015) (allowing non-lawyer employee to threaten garnishment where there was no judgment to support it, in a state where attorney was not licensed to practice); Cincinnati Bar Ass'n v. Fernandez, 119 N.E.3d 377 (Ohio 2018) (indefinitely suspending attorney who accepted referrals from debt settlement provider and unquestioningly accepted fees provider collected while providing no services to clients).

742 See, e.g., Ind. Code Ann. § 25-11-1-11 (judges and law enforcement officials); Mont. Code Ann. § 3-1-602 (justices of peace); Tex. Gov't Code § 27.006 (justices of peace). See also Hill v. Priority Fin. Services, 2001 WL 1155152 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 28, 2001) (deputy prosecutor who served as counsel to debt collector and brought debt collection suits violated state statute forbidding law enforcement officers to engage in business of debt collection); In re Fuselier, 837 So. 2d 1257 (La. 2003) (suspending judge for "abandoning his role as neutral arbiter" and "creating an appearance of impropriety" by, inter alia, his bad check collection program for local merchants); Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Willard, 788 So. 2d 736 (Miss. 2001) (removing judge from office for misconduct, including improper use of criminal process to collect civil debt); Disciplinary Counsel v. Medley, 819 N.E.2d 273 (Ohio 2004) (judge violated judicial canons where small claims defendant who failed to pay default judgment was arrested on bench warrant, with bail set at amount of debt, which was then forwarded to creditor; running free collection service showed predisposition in favor of creditors and disregard for law governing collection of judgments). See generally §§ 8.1, 16.4, supra.

743 N.Y. Judiciary Law § 487.

744 Scott v. Greenberg, 2017 WL 1214441 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2017).

16.5.4 Attorneys' Unethical Practices When Collecting Their Own Fees

Lawyers may also violate legal ethics when attempting to collect their own fees. Lawyers have been sanctioned for debt collection harassment,[745] for revealing client secrets in the course of a fee dispute,[746] and for taking a claimed fee out of funds held for a client.[747] A lawyer's retainer agreement which called for a 1% per month late fee, plus costs and attorney fees if collection efforts were required, was held unenforceable because it was unfair and violated the rules of professional conduct.[748] A client stated a claim for negligence, malicious prosecution, and UDAP violations against a lawyer who swore out a bad check complaint against her, and then neglected to tell the authorities when she covered the check, resulting in her arrest.[749]

745 In re Suspended Member of the Arizona Bar, Klahr, 2002 Ariz. LEXIS 71 (May 1, 2002) (allowing office manager to make threatening phone calls to collect debt, verbally abusing and threatening to sue client who took business to another attorney, requiring client to sign release to get back half of unearned retainer when whole amount was owed); Iowa Supreme Ct. Disciplinary Bd. v. Powell, 726 N.W.2d 397 (Iowa 2007) (six-month suspension for debt collection misconduct: finance charges added without prior agreement, collection harassment, misstatements of tax law when threatening to report forgiven debts to IRS, real estate lien in violation of state law); In re Vaughan, 368 P.3d 1088 (Kan. 2016) (sanctioning attorney for lack of diligence and billing misconduct; attorney refused to file settlement agreement until client paid disputed bill); In re Simpson, 959 So. 2d 836 (La. 2007) (excessive fee and harassing litigation; lawyer negotiated 1/3 contingent fee in case involving multi-million dollar estate, at time when he knew contingency no longer existed, and vigorously prosecuted meritless defamation action against heir who challenged fee); In re Boydell, 760 So. 2d 326 (La. 2000) (three-year suspension for lawyer who viciously harassed client in dispute over fee which lawyer had improperly calculated and disbursed to self); State ex rel. Counsel for Discipline, Nebraska Supreme Court v. Sipple, 660 N.W.2d 502 (Neb. 2003) (two-year suspension for "campaign of intimidation"). See also In re Odo, 375 P.3d 320 (Kan. 2016) (attorney violated client disclosure, conflict of interest, and action adverse to client rules: provided litigation loan without advising client of need for independent advice, then after client changed attorneys, took action adverse to client in seeking apportionment of settlement); Ratcliff v. Boydell, 674 So. 2d 272 (La. Ct. App. 1996).

746 Gaylor v. Hobdy, 2003 WL 23024802 (Cal. Ct. App. Dec. 30, 2003) (client stated claim for breach of fiduciary duty against former counsel who disclosed privileged information in course of lawsuit over fees; attorney self-defense exception did not apply, where subject of communication was not relevant to issues in suit); In re Huffman, 983 P.2d 534 (Or. 1999) (lawyer's angry letter to client's new lawyer, threatening criminal prosecution over matters which first lawyer could only have learned about while representing client, violated rules forbidding disclosure of client secrets and threatening criminal prosecution to gain advantage in civil matter).

747 People v. Hassan, 45 P.3d 1283 (Colo. 2002) (attorney withheld funds from settlements, incorrectly believing that clients owed him for previous legal services; if knowing, this conduct would require disbarment; lawyer suspended where evidence of deplorable management and accounting skills suggested negligence); People v. Gray, 35 P.3d 611 (Colo. 2001) (attorney's lien statute must be strictly construed; attorney who claimed lien but did not follow procedures and simply disbursed disputed fee to self publicly censured); In re Bernstein, 774 A.2d 309 (D.C. 2001) (lawyer suspended for taking $9000 fee out of $30,000 workers' compensation award after Workers' Compensation Commission rejected fee above $6000); In re Hailey, 792 N.E.2d 851 (Ind. 2003) (attorney took excessive fee off top of structured personal injury settlement, leaving insufficient funds to pay accrued medical expenses; client suffered dunning from medical providers; attorney publicly reprimanded); Iowa Supreme Court Disciplinary Bd. v. Lubinus, 869 N.W.2d 546 (Iowa 2015) (thirty-day suspension of attorney who withdrew his fee from trust fund before it was fully earned; attorney had self-reported the problem and cleaned up his accounting and cash-handling procedures to prevent recurrence); Matter of Buckner, 421 P.3d 226 (Kansas 2018) (disbarring attorney who kept a portion of a settlement to which he was not entitled). See also Attorney Grievance Comm'n of Maryland v. Seiden, 818 A.2d 1108 (Md. 2003) (taking fee out of escrow account without following proper court procedure not "theft or misappropriation" sufficient to justify disbarment, but did justify suspension); State ex rel. State Bar Ass'n v. Israel, 25 P.3d 909 (Okla. 2001) (lawyer who was also part owner of collection agency that collected child support continued to prosecute contempt action against slow-paying obligor after he was requested to withdraw; lawyer publicly censured); In re Disciplinary Proceedings against Marks, 665 N.W.2d 836 (Wis. 2003) (attorney suspended for misrepresenting to insurance company that he had lien on client's settlement funds; attorney had been discharged by client).

748 Lustig v. Horn, 732 N.E.2d 613 (Ill. App. Ct. 2000). See also In re Burton, 442 B.R. 421 (Bankr. W.D.N.C. 2009) (sanctioning attorney for, inter alia, improper fee practices in bankruptcy cases); In re Suspended Member of the Arizona Bar, Klahr, 2002 Ariz. LEXIS 71 (May 1, 2002) (inclusion of non-refundable retainer provisions in contracts, refusing to return unearned retainers); People v. Feather, 180 P.3d 437 (Colo. 2007) (fee was unreasonable, because neither consistent with fee agreement, nor related to amount of work performed); In re Hefron, 771 N.E.2d 1157 (Ind. 2002) (attorney suspended for misconduct in fee negotiation; agreed to hourly fee, then discovered that substantial recovery could be had with little effort, and refused to go forward until clients agreed to contingent fee); In re Taylor, 741 N.E.2d 1239 (Ind. 2001) (suspending attorney who required penniless disabled client to sign over her interest in marital home to him; value of home exceeded amount owed; fees greatly exceeded initial estimate, and lawyer did not warn her of escalating fees); Iowa Supreme Ct. Disciplinary Bd. v. Powell, 726 N.W.2d 397 (Iowa 2007) (six-month suspension for improper debt collection conduct, including adding finance charges without prior agreement and providing in fee agreement that client had only ten days to challenge bills and that she must indemnify lawyer if she brought complaint that was resolved favorably to him); In re Charges of Unprofessional Conduct in Panel Case No. 44387 (Minn. 2019) 932 N.W.2d 310 (Minn. 2019) (privately admonishing attorney who refused to turn over deed and abstract of title to client he had represented in real estate matter, who owed fees; attorney's lien statute does not supersede rule of professional conduct requiring attorney to turn over property belonging to client when representation terminates); State ex rel. Counsel for Discipline of Nebraska Supreme Ct. v. Wintroub, 765 N.W.2d 482 (Neb. 2009) (suspended lawyer's misconduct included refusal to return any part of "non-refundable" retainer, after clients dismissed him before he had done significant work); In re Conduct of Campbell, 202 P.3d 871 (Or. 2009) (late fee exceeded statutory rate of interest, and there was no written agreement for higher rate); Long v. Ethics and Disciplinary Comm. of the Utah Supreme Court, 256 P.3d 206 (Utah 2011) (reprimanding attorney for charging excessive fees, and bringing frivolous action in attempt to collect); Cotton v. Kronenberg, 44 P.3d 878 (Wash. Ct. App. 2002) (fee agreement that violated Rules of Professional Responsibility and breached fiduciary duty was unenforceable and void; may also be UDAP violation if impact on public interest can be shown).

749 Papadoupolos v. Josem, 2002 WL 194494 (Jan. 11, 2002).

An attorney's fee agreements must be fair and reasonable. As the New Jersey Supreme Court observed:

> A retainer agreement between a lawyer and a client is not an ordinary contract subject to the rules of the marketplace. It is a contract that must conform to the Rules of Professional Conduct that guide lawyers in their dealings with prospective clients. A lawyer stands in a fiduciary relationship with a prospective client and must act within the ethical constraints commanded by professional standards of responsibility. A retainer agreement must be fair and understandable, and the fee arrangement must be reasonable. The oral assurances that the attorney gives the client should not be different from the written words in the retainer agreement. Those general principles are key to the resolution of this appeal.[750]

A lawyer was publicly reprimanded and required to give a full refund to a client who withdrew from his debt pooling program. His non-refundable retainer contract allowed him to debit her bank account for $500 per month up to $1500. The client withdrew at a time when the lawyer had sent a few form letters and "done nothing to advance the goals of the representation."[751]

16.5.5 Remedies

16.5.5.1 Remedies for Unauthorized Practice of Law

Courts are divided as to what remedies are available to consumers affected by a collection agency's or creditor's unauthorized practice of law. Most suits involving these issues are brought by bar associations or state attorneys general. Several courts have held that a consumer sued by a collection agency has no implied private right of action under a statute prohibiting unauthorized practice of law, because the statute was designed to protect the creditor, not the consumer.[752]

Some courts, however, have allowed class action suits by consumers to enjoin debt collectors' unauthorized practice of law.[753] Pennsylvania's unauthorized practice statute[754] provides a private right of action for injunction and attorney fees, and also makes a violation a UDAP violation.[755] A Kansas statute makes unlicensed practice a UDAP violation.[756] An Ohio statute allows a private right of action for unauthorized practice, but only if the state supreme court has made a finding that the defendant committed such a practice.[757] Common law claims for unauthorized practice are barred in Ohio by the state supreme court's exclusive jurisdiction over the practice of law.[758] Tennessee law provides a private right of action for persons who suffer loss of money or property as a result of violation of the unauthorized practice of law statute.[759] Violation of this statute may also support a negligence per se claim.[760]

A federal court decision from Illinois allows a debtor a private right of action for damages against a collection agency that engages in the unauthorized practice of law while attempting to collect a debt.[761] But a later Illinois Supreme Court decision, involving borrowers who sued their lender for having engaged in the unauthorized practice of law by preparing loan documents and charging a fee for this service, holds that only an injunction, not damages, is available.[762] Judgments obtained by unauthorized practice of law may be void.[763] 750 Balducci v. Cige, 223 A.3d 1229 (N.J. 2020) (invalidating fee agreement; attorney verbally assured clients that they would owe nothing if they did not prevail, but written agreement required them to pay an hourly rate). See also Moore v. Bd. of Prof'l Responsibility of the Supreme Court of Tenn., 576 S.W.3d 341 (Tenn. 2019) (making agreement for, and attempting to collect, unreasonable fee violates rules of professional responsibility; affirming public censure of attorney who required personal injury plaintiff to agree that if she refused settlement offer that attorney regarded as reasonable, she would be liable for contingent fee based on settlement offer).

---

751 In re Sinnott, 845 A.2d 373 (Vt. 2004). See also In re Disciplinary Action Against McCray, 755 N.W.2d 835 (N.D. 2008) (fee for "credit repair" was excessive where lawyer did no work; form dispute letters purporting to be signed by clients and containing false representations were sent out by non-lawyer leased employees).

752 Fontell v. Hassett, 2011 WL 4632579 (D. Md. Oct. 3, 2011) (Maryland law provides no civil remedy for unauthorized practice of law); Reliable Collection Agency, Ltd. v. Cole, 584 P.2d 107 (Haw. 1978); Watson v. Auto Advisors, Inc., 822 N.E.2d 1017 (Ind. Ct. App. 2005); Miami Valley Hosp. v. Combs, 695 N.E.2d 308 (Ohio Ct. App. 1997) (no private right of action under statute forbidding unauthorized practice of law, so it cannot be raised as defense or counterclaim to hospital's collection action); Linder v. Ins. Claims Consultants, Inc., 560 S.E.2d 612 (S.C. 2002) (no private right of action for unauthorized practice of law). See also Hambrick v. GMAC Mortgage Co., 634 S.E.2d 5 (S.C. Ct. App. 2006) (no private right of action for money damages for unauthorized practice of law).

753 See, e.g., Pennington, Benson & Elliot v. Harris, Clearinghouse No. 19,953 (Ariz. Super. Ct. 1976) (Clearinghouse materials include pleadings and memoranda); J.H. Marshall & Assoc. v. Burleson, 313 A.2d 587 (D.C. 1973); Emmert v. Am. Creditmen's Serv. Ass'n, Pov. L. Rep. ¶ 15,510 (Pa. Ct. Com. Pl.) (consent decree).

754 42 Pa. Cons. Stat. § 2524(c).

755 See Srein v. Nat'l Legal Research Group, 2002 WL 31819638 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 16, 2002); Haymond v. Lundy, 2001 WL 15956 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 5, 2001) (plaintiff must meet all usual requirements of UDAP statute, so case must involve transaction for personal, family, or household purposes).

756 Kan. Stat. Ann. § 50-6,142(b), (c).

757 Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 4705.07 (West). See Greenspan v. Third Fed. Sav. & Loan, 912 N.E.2d 567 (Ohio 2009) (stating in dicta that statutory cause of action will not conflict with state supreme court's exclusive jurisdiction over practice of law, because claim must be based on state supreme court finding).

758 Greenspan v. Third Fed. Sav. & Loan, 912 N.E.2d 567 (Ohio 2009).

759 Tenn. Code Ann. § 23-3-112. See In re Elrod, 2017 WL 5499714 (E.D. Tenn. Nov. 14, 2017) (consumer stated claim against foreclosure consultant who advised him not to pay the $1000 requested by lender to bring mortgage current; noting that causation is the weakest point in this claim).

760 In re Elrod, 2017 WL 5499714 (E.D. Tenn. Nov. 14, 2017).

761 Blair v. Supportkids, Inc., 222 F. Supp. 2d 1038 (N.D. Ill. 2002) (private right of action if person falsely holds self out as attorney or acts negligently; child support obligors stated claim against non-lawyer private collector who sent purported income withholding notices to obligors' employers).

762 King v. First Capital Fin. Services Corp., 828 N.E.2d 1155 (Ill. 2005).

763 See, e.g., Bennie v. Triangle Ranch Co., 216 P. 718 (Colo. 1923); Remole Soil Serv., Inc. v. Benson, 215 N.E.2d 678 (Ill. App. Ct. 1966); Colton

The FTC staff considers unauthorized practice of law (as determined by state law) by a debt collector to violate the provision of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA) prohibiting "unfair" practices.[764] Adopting this position, a federal court held that a non-lawyer's application for writ of garnishment, which was unauthorized practice of law under Arizona's broad definition, was both a threat to take action which could not be taken, and a false representation that the employee was a lawyer, in violation of the FDCPA.[765] Under this theory, unauthorized practice of law may also violate the state's UDAP or debt collection statute.[766]

16.5.5.2 Remedies for Ethical Violations

Some courts have held that a violation of an ethical rule, particularly by an adverse party's attorney, does not, in and of itself, give rise to a private cause of action.[767] Some even hold that violation of an ethical rule cannot be used as an element of a cause of action, for example, by establishing the standard of care for a negligence claim[768] or by showing outrageous conduct for a claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress.[769]

On the other hand, a Washington decision allows an attorney's violation of an ethical rule to serve as evidence of breach of fiduciary duty.[770] A breach of ethical rules may also be relevant in determining whether the attorney has committed another tort such as abuse of process.[771] A New York statute makes any attorney who has engaged in "any deceit or collusion, or consents to any deceit or collusion, with intent to deceive the court or any party," guilty of a misdemeanor and liable for damages.[772]

The Tenth Circuit, in an unpublished opinion, has held that a debtor lacks standing to challenge a collection attorney's unethical splitting of his fee with the collection agency that hired him.[773] The attorney collected the fee from the debtor

v. Oshrin, 278 N.Y.S. 146 (N.Y. Super. Ct. 1934). See also Chulsky v. Hudson Law Offices, 777 F. Supp. 2d 823 (D.N.J. 2011) (debt is unenforceable if it is owned by a law firm that is engaging in a side business of debt-buying, which is illegal for a professional corporation). Cf. Watson v. Auto Advisors, Inc., 822 N.E.2d 1017 (Ind. Ct. App. 2005) (judgment is voidable, not void, so must be appealed rather than attacked in separate suit). But cf. Jones v. Brooks, 97 A.3d 97 (D.C. 2014) (landlord's non-lawyer daughter, who had power of attorney and letter of authorization from landlord, violated rule against unauthorized practice when she sued former tenant, but because there is no evidence that bench trial was unfair, judgment will not be vacated); Kelly Adjustment Co. v. Boyd, 342 A.2d 361 (D.C. 1975) (declining to void judgments obtained prior to decision that suits by collectors were unauthorized practice of law).

764 See § 8.1, supra.

765 Marchant v. U.S. Collections, West, Inc., 12 F. Supp. 2d 1001 (D. Ariz. 1998). See also Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (collection agency's unauthorized practice of law—filing suits on claims that had not been properly assigned to it—constituted action that could not legally be taken and violated FDCPA); Withers v. Eveland, 988 F. Supp. 942 (E.D. Va. 1997) (under Virginia law, non-lawyer was not authorized to file suit to collect debt owed by another; non-lawyer collector who threatened to sue violated FDCPA by threatening to take action that cannot legally be taken or is not intended to be taken). But see Anderson v. Gamache & Myers, P.C., 2007 WL 1577610 (E.D. Mo. May 31, 2007) (allegation of unauthorized practice, here assisting "mediation service" in unauthorized practice, is matter for state courts, not cognizable under FDCPA); Reade-Alvarez v. Eltman, Eltman & Cooper, 369 F. Supp. 2d 353 (E.D.N.Y. 2005) (agency's unauthorized practice of law, here causing law firm to send out form letters without actual attorney involvement, not cognizable under FDCPA).

766 Patrick v. Teays Valley Trs., L.L.C., 2012 WL 5993163 (N.D. W. Va. Nov. 30, 2012) (borrowers stated claim that owner of trustee company, who was not authorized to practice law in West Virginia, violated state debt collection statute by discussing legal matters with them); Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (collection agency's unauthorized practice of law—filing suits on claims that had not been properly assigned to it—constituted action that could not legally be taken and violated UDAP statute); Kolker v. Sanchez, 1991 WL 11691589 (D.N.M. Dec. 10, 1991); Campbell v. Asbury Auto., Inc., 381 S.W.3d 21 (Ark. 2011) (separation of powers does not bar legislature from punishing unauthorized practice by non-lawyers; unauthorized practice may be UDAP violation; shown here where car dealer charged document preparation fee for drafting motor vehicle installment contracts). See also Steinbach v. Credigy Receivables, Inc., 2006 WL 782477 (E.D. Ky. Mar. 27, 2006) (allowing consumer to go forward with claim for money damages pursuant to Kentucky statute allowing cause of action for violation of statute; unauthorized practice is crime in Kentucky).

767 Ross v. Creel Printing & Publishing Co., 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787 (Cal. Ct. App. 2002) (suit by debtor against creditor's attorney; no private right of action for breach of attorney discipline rule); Noble v. Marshall, 579 A.2d 574 (Conn. Ct. App. 1990) (violation of ethics rule against unreasonable fee does not give rise to cause of action and cannot be basis for UDAP claim); Green v. Morgan Props., 73 A.3d 478, 494 (N.J. 2013) (non-client cannot sue opposing party's attorney for fee-sharing); Baxt v. Liloia, 714 A.2d 271 (N.J. 1998) (adverse party cannot sue attorney for breach of ethical rules).

768 Malone v. Abraham, Watkins, Nichols & Friend, 2004 WL 1120005, at *5 (Tex. App. May 20, 2004) (suit by former clients against attorneys for disclosing confidential information; violations of ethical rules do not give rise to private cause of action, so not enforceable through negligence claim).

769 Ross v. Creel Printing & Publishing Co., 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787 (Cal. Ct. App. 2002) (suit by debtor against creditor's attorney). But see Kinnamon v. Staitman & Snyder, 136 Cal. Rptr. 321 (Cal. Ct. App. 1977) (violation of ethical rule can establish outrageous conduct for purposes of intentional infliction of emotional distress claim).

770 Cotton v. Kronenberg, 44 P.3d 878 (Wash. Ct. App. 2002) (suit by former client against attorney; violation of professional rules cannot be used as evidence of malpractice but may be considered in claim of breach of fiduciary duty; deceptive negotiation and collection of fee may be UDAP violation).

771 Baxt v. Liloia, 714 A.2d 271, 277 (N.J. 1998) (violation of ethical rule, standing alone, does not create cause of action, but courts may refer to the rules in determining whether a duty to a third party exists or in measuring the minimum standard of care). See also Ratcliff v. Boydell, 674 So 2d 272 (La. Ct. App. 1996) (allowing tort action for breach of legal ethics where lawyer disbursed to his firm disputed fee he should have known was excessive, and engaged in various kinds of harassment when client sued him).

772 N.Y. Jud. L. § 487. See Sykes v. Mel Harris & Assoc., L.L.C., 757 F. Supp. 2d 413 (S.D.N.Y. 2010) (refusing to dismiss debtor's claim under this statute against collection firm that filed robosigned affidavits of merit that falsely claimed personal knowledge).

773 Heard v. Bonneville Billing & Collections, 216 F.3d 1087 (10th Cir. June 26, 2000) (consumer does not have standing to raise UDAP and FDCPA claims challenging collection attorney's splitting of his fee with collection agency in violation of ethical rules, where consumer did as part of the judgment, and the amount was set by statute. The court stated that it would find standing only if the debtor claimed that the fee itself was too high. This decision, however, fails to take into account the deception inherent in claiming an amount as an attorney fee when a substantial portion of the payment is actually for some other purpose. Another court certified a class in an action alleging that attorney fees were wrongfully charged to borrowers because the fees were unethically split with non-lawyer entities,[774] but at trial the class failed to prove that fee-splitting in violation of ethical rules had actually occurred.[775]

16.6 State Criminal Statutes

A debt collector's misconduct may be so extreme that it violates state criminal statutes or local criminal ordinances. Local criminal law may prohibit telephone abuse, unauthorized practice of law, larceny by trick, or simulation of official documents.[776] Courts have convicted debt collectors of extortion and other crimes, even though the debts were legally due.[777]

Criminal statutes may not provide a private right of action.[778] However, some states have statutes that allow a civil recovery for anyone damaged by a criminal act.[779] not claim that fee itself was too high). Accord Haymond v. Bonneville Billing & Collections, Inc., 89 P.3d 171 (Utah 2004) (affirming dismissal of all claims based on unethical fee-splitting by collection attorney; finding no standing where amount of fee is within legal limits).

774 Mazzei v. Money Store, 288 F.R.D. 45 (S.D.N.Y. 2012).

775 Mazzei v. Money Store, 308 F.R.D. 92 (S.D.N.Y. 2015), aff'd, 656 Fed. Appx. 558 (2d Cir. 2016).

776 People v. Globe Jewelers, 291 N.Y.S. 362 (N.Y. App. Div. 1936) (convicting collectors for simulating legal process). Cf. People v. Horvath, 2005 WL 287536 (Cal. Ct. App. Jan. 27, 2005) (private collector's use of logo cut and pasted from real district attorney's check restitution program brochure is not counterfeiting of "official seal" because letterhead logo is not required by law to be affixed to documents, but may be crime of simulated process).

777 See, e.g., Page v. Runnels, 2006 WL 2925690 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 12, 2006) (California's "claim of right" defense not applicable to acts of violence while attempting to collect unliquidated and disputed debt); Cobbs v. State, 417 N.E.2d 310 (Ind. 1981) (debt collector, who used gun on victim who denied owing debt, convicted of robbery); State v. Ross, 573 N.W.2d 906 (Iowa 1998); People v. Maranian, 102 N.W.2d 568 (Mich. 1960) (even though debt may be valid and enforceable, use of malicious threats of injury to debtor's person, loved ones, or property to exact payments is criminal); Pierce v. State, 218 S.W.3d 211 (Tex. App. 2007) (affirming conviction; "a creditor who collects on a debt by the use of force can commit the offense of robbery"); State v. Richards, 167 P. 47 (Wash. 1917).

778 See, e.g., DirecTV, Inc. v. Karpinsky, 274 F. Supp. 2d 918 (E.D. Mich. 2003) (no private right of action under federal extortion statute), vacated in part on other grounds, 274 F. Supp. 2d 918 (E.D. Mich. 2003). See generally § 15.7.5, supra (whether there is private cause of action for extortion).

779 See, e.g., Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 2307.60 (West). See also Steinbach v. Credigy Receivables, Inc., 2006 WL 782477 (E.D. Ky. Mar. 27, 2006) (allowing consumer to go forward with claim for money damages pursuant to Kentucky statute allowing cause of action for violation of any statute, here unauthorized practice of law). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law Ch. 8 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (state RICO and similar statutes).

16.7 Enjoining Abusive Debt Collection Practices

Injunctive relief is available in most states to persons suffering or about to suffer irreparable injury for which there is no adequate remedy at law. Class relief is more likely to be available through injunction than through damage actions because damage actions are more likely to involve individual issues.

The Supreme Court of California has held that injunctive relief is available to a consumer class that alleged statutory venue violations or abuse of process by a collection agency.[780] The court premised its holding on the inadequacy of other legal relief for "a mass abuse of process"[781] and noted that:

> [A]n effective remedy is particularly necessary under the present allegations for several reasons. First, we recognize that the "pattern or practice" of knowingly filing actions in distant counties in order to gain unconscionable advantage is not a unique or isolated practice, but instead has been identified in both the legal literature and in public hearings, as a widespread and common abuse in the debt collection field. . . . Second, the widespread misuse of the courts in this manner contributes to the undermining of confidence in the judiciary by reinforcing the unfortunate image of courts as "distant" entities, available only to wealthy or large interests—an image evidently subscribed to by a significant proportion of our citizenry. . . . Under these conditions, courts have a strong interest in ensuring that abuses of the legal process by collection agencies are not perpetuated.[782]

A number of other courts have granted injunctive relief against debt collection abuses.[783]

780 Barquis v. Merchants Collection Ass'n, 496 P.2d 817 (Cal. 1972). Accord Yu v. Signet Bank, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304 (Cal. Ct. App. 1999) (reversing grant of summary judgment against plaintiffs on claim for injunctive relief and restitution against company that filed collection suits in distant state).

781 Barquis v. Merchants Collection Ass'n, 496 P.2d 817, 820 (Cal. 1972).

782 Id. at 826 (footnotes omitted).

783 London v. Gums, 2014 WL 546914, at *7 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 10, 2014) (granting permanent injunction, as authorized by state debt collection statute, against debt collection harassment by bail bondsman); Bray v. Cadle Co., 2010 WL 4053794 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 14, 2010) (refusing to dismiss claim for injunction requiring debt buyer to post bond as required by state statute; fact that it posted bond after consumer sued did not moot claim for injunction); Sanz v. Fernandez, 633 F. Supp. 2d 1356 (S.D. Fla. July 7, 2009) (tenants stated claim for injunctive and declaratory relief against unregistered collector); Berg v. Merchants Ass'n Collection Div., 586 F. Supp. 2d 1336 (S.D. Fla. 2008) (Florida statute, unlike FDCPA, authorizes injunctive relief for private litigants); Wiginton v. Pac. Credit Corp., 634 P.2d 111 (Haw. Ct. App. 1981); Marauder Corp. v. Beall, 301 S.W.3d 817 (Tex. App. 2009) (consumer need not show irreparable harm where debt collection act authorizes injunction to prevent or restrain violation, here failure to post bond); CA Partners v. Spears, 274 S.W.3d 51 (Tex. App. 2008) (debt buyer enjoined from collection activity until it posts bond required by collection agency act, and registers its assumed name). But see Klewer v. Cavalry Invs., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3379 (W.D. Wis. Jan. 18,

The Maine Supreme Court affirmed a protection from harassment order, arising from an arguably lawful repossession, noting that "the performance of a lawful act in an inappropriate manner can be harassment."[784] The South Dakota Supreme Court considered "a history of using inappropriate collection practices" for a disputed debt in finding a pattern of conduct sufficient to support an anti-stalking order.[785]

Injunctive relief may also be available for unauthorized practice of law[786] and violations of state statutes prohibiting unfair and deceptive acts and practices.[787] Many states' UDAP statutes explicitly authorize injunctive relief or include a general authorization of equitable relief.[788] Attorneys general have obtained a number of injunctions against unfair and deceptive collection practices.[789] Most courts do not allow injunctive relief under the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, but many allow declaratory relief.[790]

16.8 Other State Limitations on Debt Collection

16.8.1 State Laws Governing Specific Businesses

State law governing specific businesses may provide relief for abusive debt collection. For example, when a California funeral director transported a widow to a bank instead of the cemetery, and made a loud scene when tellers refused to cash her check, this was not only false imprisonment, but also a breach of the implied covenant to provide a dignified burial service.[791] Collection of debts for most types of utility service is governed by specific state laws and regulations.[792]

16.8.2 Usury Laws

A collection agency may be liable for statutory penalties for usury.[793] Usury laws are discussed in detail in NCLC's Consumer Credit Regulation (3d ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. Several cases have held, however, that state laws that require licensure before collection of interest above a certain rate do not require debt buyers to be licensed, as long as the rate was legal for the originating creditor.[794]

16.8.3 Privacy Laws

State laws and regulations protecting privacy may protect consumers from misuse of information by creditors and collectors.[795] These statutes and regulations may protect privacy in general, or specific kinds of information, such as banking, health care, or receipt of public benefits.[796] Privacy laws are 2002) (no provision for injunctive or declaratory relief for violation of Wisconsin Consumer Act). But cf. Martinez v. Scott, 2011 WL 3566970 (S.D. Tex. Aug. 12, 2011) (although Texas Debt Collection Act does not require showing of irreparable harm, must show imminent harm and lack of adequate remedy at law; not shown here where no showing that suit in wrong venue was likely to recur, or that remedies of FDCPA and Texas act were inadequate). See generally § 16.2.4.5, supra (injunctive relief against unlicensed collection activity).

784 Cates v. Donahue, 916 A.2d 941 (Me. 2007).

785 White v. Bain, 752 N.W.2d 203 (S.D. 2008).

786 See § 16.5, supra.

787 See, e.g., Murphy v. McNamara, 416 A.2d 170 (Conn. Super. Ct. 1979); Santiago v. S.S. Kresge Co., 2 Ohio Op. 3d 54 (Ohio Ct. Com. Pl. 1978). See also Klewer v. Cavalry Ins., L.L.C., 2002 WL 1058753 (W.D. Wis. May 17, 2002) (permanently enjoining actions to collect time-barred debt, which violated Wis. Consumer Act). See generally § 16.3.8, supra.

788 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 12.6 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

789 See, e.g., People ex rel. Daley v. Datacom Sys. Corp., 585 N.E.2d 51 (Ill. 1991) (state's attorney may seek injunctive relief under UDAP statute by alleging that acts violated Collection Agency Act); Commonwealth v. Source One Assoc., Inc., 763 N.E.2d 42 (Mass. 2002) (affirming permanent injunction against information brokers who obtained confidential banking information by impersonating customers and other subterfuge in violation of Massachusetts banking and privacy statutes and FTC rule); People ex rel. Spitzer v. Applied Card Sys., Inc., 805 N.Y.S.2d 175 (N.Y. App. Div. 2005) (affirming order enjoining subprime credit card issuer from deceptive acts and debt collection violations, including rude and obscene language, persistent calling after requests to cease, misrepresentation of identity, and unauthorized debits from consumers' accounts); Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C. v. Morrissey, 752 S.E.2d 356 (W. Va. 2013) (affirming grant of attorney general's motion for temporary injunction forbidding debt buyer from collecting debts acquired before it obtained license).

790 See § 11.12, supra.

791 Wilson v. Houston Funeral Home, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 169 (Cal. Ct. App. 1996).

792 See National Consumer Law Center, Access to Utility Service Chs. 2, 5, 6, 13, 14 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

793 Lupo v. Equity Collection Serv., 808 S.W.2d 122 (Tex. App. 1991) (attempt to collect twice authorized interest makes collection agency liable to borrower for statutory penalties for usury).

794 Olvera v. Blitt & Gaines, P.C., 431 F.3d 285 (7th Cir. 2005); Niemiec v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2006 WL 1763643 (N.D. Ind. June 27, 2006). See also Rainey v. Nat'l Check Bur., Inc., 849 N.E.2d 776 (Ind. Ct. App. 2006) (licensure requirement applies only if assignee is both in business of taking assignments and undertaking direct collection of payments). But see Walters v. PDI Mgmt. Services, 2004 WL 2137513 (S.D. Ind. June 14, 2004), modifying 2004 WL 1622217 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 6, 2004) (licensure may be required if assignee is in business of taking assignments of such loans and directly collects payments). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Credit Regulation §§ 3.11.7.2, 8.11.1 (3d ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

795 See, e.g., Mass. Gen. Laws. ch. 214, § 1B (providing cause of action for "unreasonable, substantial or serious interference with privacy"); Davis v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 36 F. Supp. 3d 217 (D. Mass. 2014) (fact issue whether 60 calls, by predictive dialer to non-debtor's cellphone, violated this statute).

796 See, e.g., Commonwealth v. Source One Assoc., Inc., 763 N.E.2d 42 (Mass. 2002) (consumers' financial information protected by privacy statute, banking statutes and FTC rule). See also § 16.2.4.2.1, supra.

discussed in detail in NCLC's Fair Credit Reporting Ch. 18 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

16.8.4 State Loan Broker Laws

Sometimes a collector will encourage the debtor to take out a loan—particularly a home equity loan—to pay the debt in question. The collector may even refer the debtor to a specific lender, or act as a go-between, for example by setting up a three-way call with the debtor, the lender, and the collector. In this situation, the collector may be violating state laws that require loan brokers to be licensed. The definitions and exemptions in these statutes vary widely, however, so the specific statutory language should be parsed carefully. Mortgage broker laws are listed in NCLC's Mortgage Lending Appx. A (3d ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library, and are discussed in Mortgage Lending Ch. 7 (3d ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library. State credit repair organization laws may also apply in this scenario.[797]

797 See § 16.4, supra; National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting Ch. 17 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

16.8.5 State Laws Regulating Telemarketing, Autodialing, and Artificial Voice Messages

Most states have laws regulating telemarketing.[798] These laws may, however, apply only to solicitations for the sale of goods or services, not to debt collection.[799]

In addition, many states have laws similar to the federal Telephone Consumer Protection Act[800] that restrict the use of autodialers and artificial voice messages. These laws may apply to at least some debt collection situations.

16.8.6 State Garnishment Laws

Laws allowing creditors to obtain court orders garnishing judgment debtors' wages or other property create a significant potential for misuse and abuse. Some states, recognizing this, provide specific statutory remedies when debtors are subjected to wrongful garnishment.[801]

798 See § 16.4, supra; National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law Appx. D (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

799 See, e.g., Jenkins v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 2009 WL 3157399 (W.D.N.C. Sept. 28, 2009).

800 47 U.S.C. § 227. See § 14.3.2, supra; National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law Ch. 6 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

801 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 14.2.1.6 (remedies for wrongful wage garnishment), § 12.6.6 (remedies for wrongful bank account garnishment) (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

Appendix A Text of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act

A.1 Cross-Reference Table of Public Law 95–109 Section Numbers with 15 U.S.C. Section Numbers

The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, as currently codified at 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692–1692p, is reprinted in this appendix. Because many cases, articles, and the Federal Trade Commission refer to the Public Law 95–109 section numbers, the following table is provided. The Public Law 95–109 section numbers are also in brackets following each heading of the Act reprinted in this appendix.

Codified Heading at 15 U.S.C.	Treatise Section	Public Law Section	U.S.C. Section
Congressional findings and declaration of purpose	§ 3.1	§ 802	§ 1692
Definitions	Ch. 4	§ 803	§ 1692a
Acquisition of location information	§ 5.2	§ 804	§ 1692b
Communication in connection with debt collection	Ch. 5	§ 805	§ 1692c
Harassment or abuse	Ch. 6	§ 806	§ 1692d
False or misleading representations	Ch. 7	§ 807	§ 1692e
Unfair practices	Ch. 8	§ 808	§ 1692f
Validation of debts	Ch. 9	§ 809	§ 1692g
Multiple debts	§ 10.2	§ 810	§ 1692h
Legal actions by debt collectors	§ 10.3	§ 811	§ 1692*i*
Furnishing certain deceptive forms	§ 10.4	§ 812	§ 1692j
Civil liability	Chs. 11, 12	§ 813	§ 1692k
Administrative enforcement	§§ 3.2.1.1, 3.4.2.5, 3.4.4	§ 814	§ 1692*l*
Reports to Congress by the Commission	§ 3.4.4.1	§ 815	§ 1692m
Relation to State laws	§ 11.16	§ 816	§ 1692n
Exemption for State regulation	§§ 3.1, 3.4.4.2	§ 817	§ 1692o
Exception for certain bad check enforcement programs operated by private entities.	§ 4.8.11	§ 818	§ 1692p

A.2 Fair Debt Collection Practices Act

15 U.S.C. §§ 1692–1692p; Pub. L. No. 95–109, 91 Stat. 874 (Sept. 20, 1977); Pub. L. No. 95–473, 92 Stat. 1466 (Oct. 17, 1978); Pub. L. No. 95–630, 92 Stat. 3680 (Nov. 10, 1978); Pub. L. No. 98–443, 98 Stat. 1708 (Oct. 4, 1984); Pub. L. No. 99–361, 100 Stat. 768 (July 9, 1986); Pub. L. No. 101–73, 103 Stat. 440 (Aug. 9, 1989); Pub. L. No. 102–242, 105 Stat. 2301 (Dec. 19, 1991); Pub. L. No. 102–550, 106 Stat. 4082 (Oct. 28, 1992); Pub. L. No. 104–88, 109 Stat. 949 (Dec. 29, 1995); Pub. L. No. 104–208, 110 Stat. 3009–425 (Sept. 30, 1996); Pub. L. No. 109–351, tit. VIII, §§ 801(a)(2), 802(a)–(c), 120 Stat. 2006 (Oct. 13, 2006); Pub. L. No. 111–203, tit. X, § 1089(1)–(4), 124 Stat. 2092 (July 21, 2010).[1]

15 U.S.C. § 1692. Congressional findings and declaration of purpose [FDCPA § 802]

(a) There is abundant evidence of the use of abusive, deceptive, and unfair debt collection practices by many debt collectors. Abusive debt collection practices contribute to the number of personal bankruptcies, to marital instability, to the loss of jobs, and to invasions of individual privacy.

(b) Existing laws and procedures for redressing these injuries are inadequate to protect consumers.

(c) Means other than misrepresentation or other abusive debt collection practices are available for the effective collection of debts.

1 A note in 15 U.S.C. § 1601 cites section 801 of Pub. L. 95–109, 91 Stat. 874 (Sept. 20, 1977) which provided: "This title [enacting subchapter V of this chapter, section 1692 et seq. of this title] may be cited as the 'Fair Debt Collection Practices Act.'" A note in 15 U.S.C. § 1692 cites section 818 of Pub. L. 95–109, which provided: "This title [this subchapter] takes effect upon the expiration of six months after the date of its enactment [Sept. 20, 1977], but section 809 [section 1692g of this title] shall apply only with respect to debts for which the initial attempt to collect occurs after such effective date."

(d) Abusive debt collection practices are carried on to a substantial extent in interstate commerce and through means and instrumentalities of such commerce. Even where abusive debt collection practices are purely intrastate in character, they nevertheless directly affect interstate commerce.

(e) It is the purpose of this subchapter to eliminate abusive debt collection practices by debt collectors, to insure that those debt collectors who refrain from using abusive debt collection practices are not competitively disadvantaged, and to promote consistent State action to protect consumers against debt collection abuses.

15 U.S.C. § 1692a. Definitions [FDCPA § 803]

As used in this subchapter—

(1) The term "Bureau" means the Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection.

(2) The term "communication" means the conveying of information regarding a debt directly or indirectly to any person through any medium.

(3) The term "consumer" means any natural person obligated or allegedly obligated to pay any debt.

(4) The term "creditor" means any person who offers or extends credit creating a debt or to whom a debt is owed, but such term does not include any person to the extent that he receives an assignment or transfer of a debt in default solely for the purpose of facilitating collection of such debt for another.

(5) The term "debt" means any obligation or alleged obligation of a consumer to pay money arising out of a transaction in which the money, property, insurance, or services which are the subject of the transaction are primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, whether or not such obligation has been reduced to judgment.

(6) The term "debt collector" means any person who uses any instrumentality of interstate commerce or the mails in any business the principal purpose of which is the collection of any debts, or who regularly collects or attempts to collect, directly or indirectly, debts owed or due or asserted to be owed or due another. Notwithstanding the exclusion provided by clause (F) of the last sentence of this paragraph, the term includes any creditor who, in the process of collecting his own debts, uses any name other than his own which would indicate that a third person is collecting or attempting to collect such debts. For the purpose of section 1692f(6) of this title, such term also includes any person who uses any instrumentality of interstate commerce or the mails in any business the principal purpose of which is the enforcement of security interests. The term does not include—

(A) any officer or employee of a creditor while, in the name of the creditor, collecting debts for such creditor;

(B) any person while acting as a debt collector for another person, both of whom are related by common ownership or affiliated by corporate control, if the person acting as a debt collector does so only for persons to whom it is so related or affiliated and if the principal business of such person is not the collection of debts;

(C) any officer or employee of the United States or any State to the extent that collecting or attempting to collect any debt is in the performance of his official duties;

(D) any person while serving or attempting to serve legal process on any other person in connection with the judicial enforcement of any debt;

(E) any nonprofit organization which, at the request of consumers, performs bona fide consumer credit counseling and assists consumers in the liquidation of their debts by receiving payments from such consumers and distributing such amounts to creditors; and

(F) any person collecting or attempting to collect any debt owed or due or asserted to be owed or due another to the extent such activity (i) is incidental to a bona fide fiduciary obligation or a bona fide escrow arrangement; (ii) concerns a debt which was originated by such person; (iii) concerns a debt which was not in default at the time it was obtained by such person; or (iv) concerns a debt obtained by such person as a secured party in a commercial credit transaction involving the creditor.

(G) Redesignated (F).[2]

(7) The term "location information" means a consumer's place of abode and his telephone number at such place, or his place of employment.

(8) The term "State" means any State, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or any political subdivision of any of the foregoing.

[Pub. L. No. 111–203, tit. X, § 1089(2), 124 Stat. 2092 (July 21, 2010)]

15 U.S.C. § 1692b. Acquisition of location information [FDCPA § 804]

Any debt collector communicating with any person other than the consumer for the purpose of acquiring location information about the consumer shall—

(1) identify himself, state that he is confirming or correcting location information concerning the consumer, and, only if expressly requested, identify his employer;

(2) not state that such consumer owes any debt;

(3) not communicate with any such person more than once unless requested to do so by such person or unless the debt collector reasonably believes that the earlier response of such person is erroneous or incomplete and that such person now has correct or complete location information;

(4) not communicate by post card;

(5) not use any language or symbol on any envelope or in the contents of any communication effected by the mails or telegram that indicates that the debt collector is in the debt collection business or that the communication relates to the collection of a debt; and

(6) after the debt collector knows the consumer is represented by an attorney with regard to the subject debt and has knowledge of, or can readily ascertain, such attorney's name and address, not communicate with any person other than that attorney, unless the attorney fails to respond within a reasonable period of time to communication from the debt collector.

15 U.S.C. § 1692c. Communication in connection with debt collection [FDCPA § 805]

(a) Communication with the consumer generally

Without the prior consent of the consumer given directly to the debt collector or the express permission of a court of competent jurisdiction, a debt collector may not communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt—

(1) at any unusual time or place or a time or place known or which should be known to be inconvenient to the consumer. In the absence of knowledge of circumstances to the contrary, a debt collector shall assume that the convenient time for communicating with a consumer is after 8 o'clock antemeridian and before 9 o'clock postmeridian, local time at the consumer's location;

(2) if the debt collector knows the consumer is represented by an attorney with respect to such debt and has knowledge of, or can readily ascertain, such attorney's name and address, unless the attorney fails to respond within a reasonable period of time to a communication from the debt collector or unless the attorney consents to direct communication with the consumer; or

(3) at the consumer's place of employment if the debt collector knows or has reason to know that the consumer's employer prohibits the consumer from receiving such communication.

2 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6)(E), (F), (G) amended by Pub. L. No. 99–361, 100 Stat. 768 (July 9, 1986). See § 3.4.2, supra.

(b) Communication with third parties
Except as provided in section 1692b of this title, without the prior consent of the consumer given directly to the debt collector, or the express permission of a court of competent jurisdiction, or as reasonably necessary to effectuate a postjudgment judicial remedy, a debt collector may not communicate, in connection with the collection of any debt, with any person other than the consumer, his attorney, a consumer reporting agency if otherwise permitted by law, the creditor, the attorney of the creditor, or the attorney of the debt collector.

(c) Ceasing communication
If a consumer notifies a debt collector in writing that the consumer refuses to pay a debt or that the consumer wishes the debt collector to cease further communication with the consumer, the debt collector shall not communicate further with the consumer with respect to such debt, except—

(1) to advise the consumer that the debt collector's further efforts are being terminated;

(2) to notify the consumer that the debt collector or creditor may invoke specified remedies which are ordinarily invoked by such debt collector or creditor; or

(3) where applicable, to notify the consumer that the debt collector or creditor intends to invoke a specified remedy.

If such notice from the consumer is made by mail, notification shall be complete upon receipt.

(d) "Consumer" defined
For the purpose of this section, the term "consumer" includes the consumer's spouse, parent (if the consumer is a minor), guardian, executor, or administrator.

15 U.S.C. § 1692d. Harassment or abuse [FDCPA § 806]

A debt collector may not engage in any conduct the natural consequence of which is to harass, oppress, or abuse any person in connection with the collection of a debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

(1) The use or threat of use of violence or other criminal means to harm the physical person, reputation, or property of any person.

(2) The use of obscene or profane language or language the natural consequence of which is to abuse the hearer or reader.

(3) The publication of a list of consumers who allegedly refuse to pay debts, except to a consumer reporting agency or to persons meeting the requirements of section 1681a(f) or 1681b(3) of this title.

(4) The advertisement for sale of any debt to coerce payment of the debt.

(5) Causing a telephone to ring or engaging any person in telephone conversation repeatedly or continuously with intent to annoy, abuse, or harass any person at the called number.

(6) Except as provided in section 1692b of this title, the placement of telephone calls without meaningful disclosure of the caller's identity.

15 U.S.C. § 1692e. False or misleading representations [FDCPA § 807]

A debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

(1) The false representation or implication that the debt collector is vouched for, bonded by, or affiliated with the United States or any State, including the use of any badge, uniform, or facsimile thereof.

(2) The false representation of—

(A) the character, amount, or legal status of any debt; or

(B) any services rendered or compensation which may be lawfully received by any debt collector for the collection of a debt.

(3) The false representation or implication that any individual is an attorney or that any communication is from an attorney.

(4) The representation or implication that nonpayment of any debt will result in the arrest or imprisonment of any person or the seizure, garnishment, attachment, or sale of any property or wages of any person unless such action is lawful and the debt collector or creditor intends to take such action.

(5) The threat to take any action that cannot legally be taken or that is not intended to be taken.

(6) The false representation or implication that a sale, referral, or other transfer of any interest in a debt shall cause the consumer to—

(A) lose any claim or defense to payment of the debt; or

(B) become subject to any practice prohibited by this subchapter.

(7) The false representation or implication that the consumer committed any crime or other conduct in order to disgrace the consumer.

(8) Communicating or threatening to communicate to any person credit information which is known or which should be known to be false, including the failure to communicate that a disputed debt is disputed.

(9) The use or distribution of any written communication which simulates or is falsely represented to be a document authorized, issued, or approved by any court, official, or agency of the United States or any State, or which creates a false impression as to its source, authorization, or approval.

(10) The use of any false representation or deceptive means to collect or attempt to collect any debt or to obtain information concerning a consumer.

(11) The failure to disclose in the initial written communication with the consumer and, in addition, if the initial communication with the consumer is oral, in that initial oral communication, that the debt collector is attempting to collect a debt and that any information obtained will be used for that purpose, and the failure to disclose in subsequent communications that the communication is from a debt collector, except that this paragraph shall not apply to a formal pleading made in connection with a legal action.[3]

(12) The false representation or implication that accounts have been turned over to innocent purchasers for value.

(13) The false representation or implication that documents are legal process.

(14) The use of any business, company, or organization name other than the true name of the debt collector's business, company, or organization.

(15) The false representation or implication that documents are not legal process forms or do not require action by the consumer.

(16) The false representation or implication that a debt collector operates or is employed by a consumer reporting agency as defined by section 1681a(f) of this title.

15 U.S.C. § 1692f. Unfair practices [FDCPA § 808]

A debt collector may not use unfair or unconscionable means to collect or attempt to collect any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

(1) The collection of any amount (including any interest, fee, charge, or expense incidental to the principal obligation) unless such amount is expressly authorized by the agreement creating the debt or permitted by law.

(2) The acceptance by a debt collector from any person of a check or other payment instrument postdated by more than five days unless such person is notified in writing of the debt collector's intent to deposit such check or instrument not more than ten nor less than three business days prior to such deposit.

3 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(11) amended by Pub. L. No. 104–208, § 2305, 110 Stat. 3009 (Sept. 30, 1996). See § 3.4.2, supra.

(3) The solicitation by a debt collector of any postdated check or other postdated payment instrument for the purpose of threatening or instituting criminal prosecution.
(4) Depositing or threatening to deposit any postdated check or other postdated payment instrument prior to the date on such check or instrument.
(5) Causing charges to be made to any person for communications by concealment of the true purpose of the communication. Such charges include, but are not limited to, collect telephone calls and telegram fees.
(6) Taking or threatening to take any nonjudicial action to effect dispossession or disablement of property if—
(A) there is no present right to possession of the property claimed as collateral through an enforceable security interest;
(B) there is no present intention to take possession of the property; or
(C) the property is exempt by law from such dispossession or disablement.
(7) Communicating with a consumer regarding a debt by post card.
(8) Using any language or symbol, other than the debt collector's address, on any envelope when communicating with a consumer by use of the mails or by telegram, except that a debt collector may use his business name if such name does not indicate that he is in the debt collection business.

15 U.S.C. § 1692g. Validation of debts [FDCPA § 809]

(a) Notice of debt; contents
Within five days after the initial communication with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt, a debt collector shall, unless the following information is contained in the initial communication or the consumer has paid the debt, send the consumer a written notice containing—
(1) the amount of the debt;
(2) the name of the creditor to whom the debt is owed;
(3) a statement that unless the consumer, within thirty days after receipt of the notice, disputes the validity of the debt, or any portion thereof, the debt will be assumed to be valid by the debt collector;
(4) a statement that if the consumer notifies the debt collector in writing within the thirty-day period that the debt, or any portion thereof, is disputed, the debt collector will obtain verification of the debt or a copy of a judgment against the consumer and a copy of such verification or judgment will be mailed to the consumer by the debt collector; and
(5) a statement that, upon the consumer's written request within the thirty-day period, the debt collector will provide the consumer with the name and address of the original creditor, if different from the current creditor.

(b) Disputed debts
If the consumer notifies the debt collector in writing within the thirty-day period described in subsection (a) of this section that the debt, or any portion thereof, is disputed, or that the consumer requests the name and address of the original creditor, the debt collector shall cease collection of the debt, or any disputed portion thereof, until the debt collector obtains verification of the debt or a copy of a judgment, or the name and address of the original creditor, and a copy of such verification or judgment, or name and address of the original creditor, is mailed to the consumer by the debt collector. Collection activities and communications that do not otherwise violate this subchapter may continue during the 30-day period referred to in subsection (a) of this section unless the consumer has notified the debt collector in writing that the debt, or any portion of the debt, is disputed or that the consumer requests the name and address of the original creditor. Any collection activities and communication during the 30-day period may not overshadow or be inconsistent with the disclosure of the consumer's right to dispute the debt or request the name and address of the original creditor.

(c) Admission of liability
The failure of a consumer to dispute the validity of a debt under this section may not be construed by any court as an admission of liability by the consumer.

(d) Legal pleadings
A communication in the form of a formal pleading in a civil action shall not be treated as an initial communication for purposes of subsection (a) of this section.

(e) Notice provisions
The sending or delivery of any form or notice which does not relate to the collection of a debt and is expressly required by the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, title V of Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act [15 U.S.C. § 6801 et seq.], or any provision of Federal or State law relating to notice of data security breach or privacy, or any regulation prescribed under any such provision of law, shall not be treated as an initial communication in connection with debt collection for purposes of this section.

[Pub. L. No. 109–351, tit. VIII, § 802(a)–(c), 120 Stat. 2006 (Oct. 13, 2006)]

15 U.S.C. § 1692h. Multiple debts [FDCPA § 810]

If any consumer owes multiple debts and makes any single payment to any debt collector with respect to such debts, such debt collector may not apply such payment to any debt which is disputed by the consumer and, where applicable, shall apply such payment in accordance with the consumer's directions.

15 U.S.C. § 1692*i*. Legal actions by debt collectors [FDCPA § 811]

(a) Venue
Any debt collector who brings any legal action on a debt against any consumer shall—
(1) in the case of an action to enforce an interest in real property securing the consumer's obligation, bring such action only in a judicial district or similar legal entity in which such real property is located; or
(2) in the case of an action not described in paragraph (1), bring such action only in the judicial district or similar legal entity—
(A) in which such consumer signed the contract sued upon; or
(B) in which such consumer resides at the commencement of the action.

(b) Authorization of actions
Nothing in this subchapter shall be construed to authorize the bringing of legal actions by debt collectors.

15 U.S.C. § 1692j. Furnishing certain deceptive forms [FDCPA § 812]

(a) It is unlawful to design, compile, and furnish any form knowing that such form would be used to create the false belief in a consumer that a person other than the creditor of such consumer is participating in the collection of or in an attempt to collect a debt such consumer allegedly owes such creditor, when in fact such person is not so participating.

(b) Any person who violates this section shall be liable to the same extent and in the same manner as a debt collector is liable under section 1692k of this title for failure to comply with a provision of this subchapter.

15 U.S.C. § 1692k. Civil liability [FDCPA § 813]

(a) Amount of damages
Except as otherwise provided by this section, any debt collector who fails to comply with any provision of this subchapter with respect to any person is liable to such person in an amount equal to the sum of—

(1) any actual damage sustained by such person as a result of such failure;

(2) (A) in the case of any action by an individual, such additional damages as the court may allow, but not exceeding $1,000; or

(B) in the case of a class action, (i) such amount for each named plaintiff as could be recovered under subparagraph (A), and (ii) such amount as the court may allow for all other class members, without regard to a minimum individual recovery, not to exceed the lesser of $500,000 or 1 per centum of the net worth of the debt collector; and

(3) in the case of any successful action to enforce the foregoing liability, the costs of the action, together with a reasonable attorney's fee as determined by the court. On a finding by the court that an action under this section was brought in bad faith and for the purpose of harassment, the court may award to the defendant attorney's fees reasonable in relation to the work expended and costs.

(b) Factors considered by court

In determining the amount of liability in any action under subsection (a) of this section, the court shall consider, among other relevant factors—

(1) in any individual action under subsection (a)(2)(A), the frequency and persistence of noncompliance by the debt collector, the nature of such noncompliance, and the extent to which such noncompliance was intentional; or

(2) in any class action under subsection (a)(2)(B) of this section of this section, the frequency and persistence of noncompliance by the debt collector, the nature of such noncompliance, the resources of the debt collector, the number of persons adversely affected, and the extent to which the debt collector's noncompliance was intentional.

(c) Intent

A debt collector may not be held liable in any action brought under this subchapter if the debt collector shows by a preponderance of evidence that the violation was not intentional and resulted from a bona fide error notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adapted to avoid any such error.

(d) Jurisdiction

An action to enforce any liability created by this subchapter may be brought in any appropriate United States district court without regard to the amount in controversy, or in any other court of competent jurisdiction, within one year from the date on which the violation occurs.

(e) Advisory opinions of Bureau

No provision of this section imposing any liability shall apply to any act done or omitted in good faith in conformity with any advisory opinion of the Bureau, notwithstanding that after such act or omission has occurred, such opinion is amended, rescinded, or determined by judicial or other authority to be invalid for any reason.

[Pub. L. No. 111–203, tit. X, § 1089(1), 124 Stat. 2092 (July 21, 2010)]

15 U.S.C. § 1692*l*. Administrative enforcement [FDCPA § 814]

(a) Federal Trade Commission

The Federal Trade Commission shall be authorized to enforce compliance with this title, except to the extent that enforcement of the requirements imposed under this title is specifically committed to another Government agency under any of paragraphs (1) through (5) of subsection (b), subject to subtitle B of the Consumer Financial Protection Act of 2010. For purpose of the exercise by the Federal Trade Commission of its functions and powers under the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 41 et seq.), a violation of this title shall be deemed an unfair or deceptive act or practice in violation of that Act. All of the functions and powers of the Federal Trade Commission under the Federal Trade Commission Act are available to the Federal Trade Commission to enforce compliance by any person with this title, irrespective of whether that person is engaged in commerce or meets any other jurisdictional tests under the Federal Trade Commission Act, including the power to enforce the provisions of this title, in the same manner as if the violation had been a violation of a Federal Trade Commission trade regulation rule.

(b) Applicable provisions of law[4]

Subject to subtitle B of the Consumer Financial Protection Act of 2010, compliance with any requirements imposed under this subchapter shall be enforced under—

(1) section 8 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act [12 U.S.C. § 1818], by the appropriate Federal banking agency, as defined in section 3(q) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1813(q)), with respect to—

(A) national banks, Federal savings associations, and Federal branches and Federal agencies of foreign banks;

(B) member banks of the Federal Reserve System (other than national banks), branches and agencies of foreign banks (other than Federal branches, Federal agencies, and insured State branches of foreign banks), commercial lending companies owned or controlled by foreign banks, and organizations operating under section 25 or 25A of the Federal Reserve Act; and

(C) banks and State savings associations insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (other than members of the Federal Reserve System), and insured State branches of foreign banks;

(2) the Federal Credit Union Act [12 U.S.C. §§ 1751 et seq.], by the National Credit Union Administration with respect to any Federal credit union;

(3) subtitle IV of Title 49, by the Secretary of Transportation with respect to all carriers subject to the jurisdiction of the Surface Transportation Board;

(4) the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 [part A of subtitle VII of Title 49], by the Secretary of Transportation with respect to any air carrier or any foreign air carrier subject to that Act; and

(5) the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921 [7 U.S.C. § 181 et seq.] (except as provided in section 406 of that Act [7 U.S.C. §§ 226, 227]), by the Secretary of Agriculture with respect to any activities subject to that Act; and

(6) subtitle E of the Consumer Financial Protection Act of 2010, by the Bureau, with respect to any person subject to this title.

The terms used in paragraph (1) that are not defined in this subchapter or otherwise defined in section 3(s) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1813(s)) shall have the meaning given to them in section 1(b) of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3101).

(c) Agency powers

For the purpose of the exercise by any agency referred to in subsection (b) of this section of its powers under any Act referred to in that subsection, a violation of any requirement imposed under this subchapter shall be deemed to be a violation of a requirement imposed under that Act. In addition to its powers under any provision of law specifically referred to in subsection (b) of this section, each of the agencies referred to in that subsection may exercise, for the purpose of enforcing compliance with any requirement imposed under this subchapter any other authority conferred on it by law, except as provided in subsection (d) of this section.

(d) Rules and regulations

Except as provided in section 1029(a) of the Consumer Financial Protection Act of 2010 [12 U.S.C. § 5519(a)], the Bureau may prescribe rules with respect to the collection of debts by debt collectors, as defined in this title.

[Pub. L. No. 111–203, tit. X, § 1089(3), (4), 124 Stat. 2092 (July 21, 2010)]

4 15 U.S.C. § 1692*l amended by* Pub. L. No. 95–473, § 3(b), 92 Stat. 1466 (Oct. 17, 1978); Pub. L. No. 95–630, Title V, § 501, 92 Stat. 3680 (Nov. 10, 1978); Pub. L. No. 98–443, § 9n, 98 Stat. 1708 (Oct. 4, 1984); Pub. L. No. 101–73, Title VII, § 744(n), 103 Stat. 440 (Aug. 9, 1989); Pub. L. No. 102–242, Title II, § 212(e), 105 Stat. 2301 (Dec. 19, 1991); Pub. L. No. 102–550, Title XVI, § 1604(a)(8), 106 Stat. 4082 (Oct. 28, 1992); Pub. L. No. 104–88, Title III, § 316, 109 Stat. 949 (Dec. 29, 1995).

15 U.S.C. § 1692m. Reports to Congress by the Bureau; views of other Federal agencies [FDCPA § 815]

(a) Not later than one year after the effective date of this subchapter and at one-year intervals thereafter, the Bureau shall make reports to the Congress concerning the administration of its functions under this subchapter, including such recommendations as the Bureau deems necessary or appropriate. In addition, each report of the Bureau shall include its assessment of the extent to which compliance with this subchapter is being achieved and a summary of the enforcement actions taken by the Bureau under section 1692*l* of this title.

(b) In the exercise of its functions under this subchapter, the Bureau may obtain upon request the views of any other Federal agency which exercises enforcement functions under section 1692*l* of this title.

[Pub. L. No. 111–203, tit. X, § 1089(I), 124 Stat. 2092 (July 21, 2010)]

15 U.S.C. § 1692n. Relation to State laws [FDCPA § 816]

This subchapter does not annul, alter, or affect, or exempt any person subject to the provisions of this subchapter from complying with the laws of any State with respect to debt collection practices, except to the extent that those laws are inconsistent with any provision of this subchapter, and then only to the extent of the inconsistency. For purposes of this section, a State law is not inconsistent with this subchapter if the protection such law affords any consumer is greater than the protection provided by this subchapter.

15 U.S.C. § 1692o. Exemption for State regulation [FDCPA § 817]

The Bureau shall by regulation exempt from the requirements of this subchapter any class of debt collection practices within any State if the Bureau determines that under the law of that State that class of debt collection practices is subject to requirements substantially similar to those imposed by this subchapter, and that there is adequate provision for enforcement.

[Pub. L. No. 111–203, tit. X, § 1089(I), 124 Stat. 2092 (July 21, 2010)]

15 U.S.C. § 1692p. Exception for certain bad check enforcement programs operated by private entities [FDCPA § 818]

(a) In general—

(1) Treatment of certain private entities

Subject to paragraph (2), a private entity shall be excluded from the definition of a debt collector, pursuant to the exception provided in section 1692a(6) of this title, with respect to the operation by the entity of a program described in paragraph (2)(A) under a contract described in paragraph (2)(B).

(2) Conditions of applicability

Paragraph (1) shall apply if—

(A) a State or district attorney establishes, within the jurisdiction of such State or district attorney and with respect to alleged bad check violations that do not involve a check described in subsection (b) of this section, a pretrial diversion program for alleged bad check offenders who agree to participate voluntarily in such program to avoid criminal prosecution;

(B) a private entity, that is subject to an administrative support services contract with a State or district attorney and operates under the direction, supervision, and control of such State or district attorney, operates the pretrial diversion program described in subparagraph (A); and

(C) in the course of performing duties delegated to it by a State or district attorney under the contract, the private entity referred to in subparagraph (B)—

(i) complies with the penal laws of the State;

(ii) conforms with the terms of the contract and directives of the State or district attorney;

(iii) does not exercise independent prosecutorial discretion;

(iv) contacts any alleged offender referred to in subparagraph (A) for purposes of participating in a program referred to in such paragraph—

(I) only as a result of any determination by the State or district attorney that probable cause of a bad check violation under State penal law exists, and that contact with the alleged offender for purposes of participation in the program is appropriate; and

(II) the alleged offender has failed to pay the bad check after demand for payment, pursuant to State law, is made for payment of the check amount;

(v) includes as part of an initial written communication with an alleged offender a clear and conspicuous statement that—

(I) the alleged offender may dispute the validity of any alleged bad check violation;

(II) where the alleged offender knows, or has reasonable cause to believe, that the alleged bad check violation is the result of theft or forgery of the check, identity theft, or other fraud that is not the result of the conduct of the alleged offender, the alleged offender may file a crime report with the appropriate law enforcement agency; and

(III) if the alleged offender notifies the private entity or the district attorney in writing, not later than 30 days after being contacted for the first time pursuant to clause (iv), that there is a dispute pursuant to this subsection, before further restitution efforts are pursued, the district attorney or an employee of the district attorney authorized to make such a determination makes a determination that there is probable cause to believe that a crime has been committed; and

(vi) charges only fees in connection with services under the contract that have been authorized by the contract with the State or district attorney.

(b) Certain checks excluded

A check is described in this subsection if the check involves, or is subsequently found to involve—

(1) a postdated check presented in connection with a payday loan, or other similar transaction, where the payee of the check knew that the issuer had insufficient funds at the time the check was made, drawn, or delivered;

(2) a stop payment order where the issuer acted in good faith and with reasonable cause in stopping payment on the check;

(3) a check dishonored because of an adjustment to the issuer's account by the financial institution holding such account without providing notice to the person at the time the check was made, drawn, or delivered;

(4) a check for partial payment of a debt where the payee had previously accepted partial payment for such debt;

(5) a check issued by a person who was not competent, or was not of legal age, to enter into a legal contractual obligation at the time the check was made, drawn, or delivered; or

(6) a check issued to pay an obligation arising from a transaction that was illegal in the jurisdiction of the State or district attorney at the time the check was made, drawn, or delivered.

(c) Definitions

For purposes of this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) State or district attorney

The term "State or district attorney" means the chief elected or appointed prosecuting attorney in a district, county (as defined in section 2 of title 1, United States Code), municipality, or comparable jurisdiction, including State attorneys general who act as chief elected or appointed prosecuting attorneys in a district, county (as so defined), municipality or comparable jurisdiction, who may be referred to by a variety of titles such as district attorneys, prosecuting attorneys, commonwealth's attorneys, solicitors, county attorneys, and state's attorneys, and who are responsible for the prosecution of State crimes and violations of jurisdiction-specific local ordinances.

(2) Check

The term "check" has the same meaning as in section 5002(6) of Title 12.[5]

(3) Bad check violation

The term "bad check violation" means a violation of the applicable State criminal law relating to the writing of dishonored checks.

[Pub. L. No. 109–352, tit. VIII, § 801(a)(2), 120 Stat. 2004 (Oct. 13, 2006)]

A.3 Senate Report No. 95–382 on the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act

[Editor's Note.[6]]

Report of the Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs
U.S. Senate
Aug. 2, 1977

[Page 1]

The Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H.R. 5294) to amend the Consumer Credit Protection Act to prohibit abuses by debt collectors, having considered same, reports favorably thereon with an amendment and recommends that the bill as amended do pass.

History of the Legislation

On May 12 and 13, 1977, the Consumer Affairs Subcommittee held hearings on four bills to regulate debt collection practices: S. 656, introduced by Senator Biden; S. 918, introduced by Senator Riegle; S. 1130, introduced by Senator Garn for himself and Senators Schmitt and Tower; and H.R. 5294, passed by the House of Representatives on April 4, 1977. After these hearings and before markup by the committee, Senator Riegle offered a composite bill, designated Committee Print No. 1, as a substitute for S. 918.

The Committee met in open markup sessions on June 30 and July 26, 1977, and approved Committee Print No. 1, with amendments, by voice vote. The committee substituted the text of its bill for that of H.R. 5294, which is herewith reported without objection.

Nature and Purpose of the Bill

This legislation would add a new title to the Consumer Credit Protection Act entitled the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act. Its purpose is to protect consumers from a host of unfair, harassing, and deceptive debt collection practices without imposing unnecessary [Page 2] restrictions on ethical debt collectors. This bill was strongly supported by consumer groups, labor unions, State and Federal law enforcement officials, and by both national organizations which represent the debt collection profession, the American Collectors Association and Associated Credit Bureaus.

Need for This Legislation

The committee has found that debt collection abuse by third party debt collectors is a widespread and serious national problem. Collection abuse takes many forms, including obscene or profane language, threats of violence, telephone calls at unreasonable hours, misrepresentation of a consumer's legal rights, disclosing a consumer's personal affairs to friends, neighbors, or an employer, obtaining information about a consumer through false pretense, impersonating public officials and attorneys, and simulating legal process.

Debt collection by third parties is a substantial business which touches the lives of many Americans. There are more than 5,000 collection agencies across the country, each averaging 8 employees. Last year, more than $5 billion in debts were turned over to collection agencies. One trade association which represents approximately half of the Nation's independent collectors states that in 1976 its members contacted 8 million consumers.

Hearings before the Consumer Affairs Subcommittee revealed that independent debt collectors are the prime source of egregious collection practices. While unscrupulous debt collectors comprise only a small segment of the industry, the suffering and anguish which they regularly inflict is substantial. Unlike creditors, who generally are restrained by the desire to protect their good will when collecting past due accounts, independent collectors are likely to have no future contact with the consumer and often are unconcerned with the consumer's opinion of them. Collection agencies generally operate on a 50-percent commission, and this has too often created the incentive to collect by any means.

The primary reason why debt collection abuse is so widespread is the lack of meaningful legislation on the State level. While debt collection agencies have existed for decades, there are 13 States, with 40 million citizens, that have no debt collection laws. These States are Alabama, Delaware, Georgia, Kansas, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Ohio, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, South Carolina, and South Dakota. Another 11 States (Alaska, Arkansas, Indiana, Louisiana, Nebraska, New Jersey, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Utah, Virginia and Wyoming), with another 40 million citizens, have laws which in the committee's opinion provide little or no effective protection. Thus, 80 million Americans, nearly 40 percent of our population, have no meaningful protection from debt collection abuse.

While 37 States and the District of Columbia do have laws regulating debt collectors, only a small number are comprehensive statutes which provide a civil remedy. As an example of ineffective State laws, of the 16 states which regulate by debt collection boards, 12 require by law that a majority of the board be comprised of debt collectors.

The Committee has found that collection abuse has grown from a State problem to a national problem. The use of WATS lines by debt collectors has led to a dramatic increase in interstate collections. State [Page 3] law enforcement officials have pointed to this development as a prime reason why federal legislation is necessary, because State officials are unable to act against unscrupulous debt collectors who harass consumers from another State.

One of the most frequent fallacies concerning debt collection legislation is the contention that the primary beneficiaries are "deadbeats." In fact, however, there is universal agreement among scholars, law enforcement officials, and even debt collectors that the number of persons who willfully refuse to pay just debts is miniscule. Prof. David Caplovitz, the foremost authority on debtors in default, testified that after years of research he has found that only 4 percent of all defaulting debtors fit the

---

5 (6) Check

The term "check"—

(A) means a draft, payable on demand and drawn on or payable through or at an office of a bank, whether or not negotiable, that is handled for forward collection or return, including a substitute check and a traveler's check; and

(B) does not include a noncash item or an item payable in a medium other than United States dollars.

12 U.S.C. § 5002 (6).

6 § 3.4.2, supra, describes the legislative history for the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, and the key place of Senate Report No. 95–382 in that process.

description of "deadbeat." This conclusion is supported by the National Commission on Consumer Finance which found that creditors list the willful refusal to pay as an extremely infrequent reason for default.

The Commission's findings are echoed in all major studies: the vast majority of consumers who obtain credit fully intend to repay their debts. When default occurs, it is nearly always due to an unforeseen event such as unemployment, overextension, serious illness, or marital difficulties or divorce.

The committee believes that the serious and widespread abuses in this area and the inadequacy of existing State and Federal laws make this legislation necessary and appropriate.

Explanation of the Legislation

Scope of the act

This bill applies only to debts contracted by consumers for personal, family, or household purposes; it has no application to the collection of commercial accounts.

The committee intends the term "debt collector," subject to the exclusions discussed below, to cover all third persons who regularly collect debts for others. The primary persons intended to be covered are independent debt collectors. The requirement that debt collection be done "regularly" would exclude a person who collects a debt for another in an isolated instance, but would include those who collect for others in the regular course of business. The definition would include "reciprocal collections" whereby one creditor regularly collects delinquent debts for another pursuant to a reciprocal service agreement, unless otherwise excluded by the act.

The term debt collector is not intended to include the following: "in house" collectors for creditors so long as they use the creditor's true business name when collecting; Government officials, such as marshals and sheriffs, while in the conduct of their official duties; process servers; nonprofit consumer credit counseling services which assist consumers by apportioning the consumer's income among his creditors pursuant to a prior arrangement; and attorneys-at-law while acting in that capacity. One subsidiary or affiliate which collects debts for another subsidiary or affiliate is not a "debt collector" so long as the collecting affiliate collects only for other related entities and its principal business is not debt collection.

Finally, the committee does not intend the definition to cover the activities of trust departments, escrow companies, or other bona fide fiduciaries; the collection of debts, such as mortgages and student loans, by persons who originated such loans; mortgage service com- [Page 4] panies and others who service outstanding debts for others, so long as the debts were not in default when taken for servicing; and the collection of debts owed to a creditor when the collector is holding the receivable account as collateral for commercial credit extended to the creditor.

Obtaining location information

While this legislation strongly protects the consumer's right to privacy by prohibiting a debt collector from communicating the consumer's personal affairs to third persons, the committee also recognizes the debt collector's legitimate need to seek the whereabouts of missing debtors. Accordingly, this bill permits debt collectors to contact third persons for the purpose of obtaining the consumer's location. In seeking this information, however, the debt collector must observe certain guidelines: he may not state that the consumer owes a debt nor contact third persons more than once unless necessary to obtain complete information. In addition, a debt collector may not place language or symbols on mail to third persons indicating that the mail relates to debt collection nor continue to contact third parties after learning the name and address of the consumer's attorney, unless the attorney fails to respond to the debt collector's communications.

Prohibited practices

This legislation expressly prohibits a host of harassing, deceptive, and unfair debt collection practices. These include: threats of violence; obscene language; the publishing of "shame lists;" harassing or anonymous telephone calls; impersonating a government official or attorney; misrepresenting the consumer's legal rights; simulating court process; obtaining information under false pretenses; collecting more than is legally owing; and misusing postdated checks. In addition to these specific prohibitions, this bill prohibits in general terms any harassing, unfair, or deceptive collection practice. This will enable the courts, where appropriate, to proscribe other improper conduct which is not specifically addressed.

In addition, this legislation adopts an extremely important protection recommended by the National Commission on Consumer Finance and already the law in 15 States: it prohibits disclosing the consumer's personal affairs to third persons. Other than to obtain location information, a debt collector may not contact third persons such as a consumer's friends, neighbors, relatives, or employer. Such contacts are not legitimate collection practices and result in serious invasions of privacy, as well as the loss of jobs.

Validation of debts

Another significant feature of this legislation is its provision requiring the validation of debts. After initially contacting a consumer, a debt collector must send him or her written notice stating the name of the creditor and the amount owed. If the consumer disputes the validity of the debt within 30 days, the debt collector must cease collection until he sends the consumer verification.

This provision will eliminate the recurring problem of debt collectors dunning the wrong person or attempting to collect debts which the consumer has already paid. Since the current practice of most debt collectors is to send similar information to consumers, this provision will not result in additional expense or paperwork. [Page 5]

Legal actions by debt collectors

This legislation also addresses the problem of "forum abuse," an unfair practice in which debt collectors file suit against consumers in courts which are so distant or inconvenient that consumers are unable to appear. As a result, the debt collector obtains a default judgment and the consumer is denied his day in court.

In response to this practice, the bill adopts the "fair venue standards" developed by the Federal Trade Commission. A debt collector who files suit must do so either where the consumer resides or where the underlying contract was signed. When an action is against real property, it must be brought where such property is located.

More than 1,000 collection agencies in all 50 States have already voluntarily agreed to follow these standards. The Commission reports that this standard is effective in curtailing forum abuse without unreasonably restricting debt collectors.

Furnishing deceptive forms

Another common collection abuse is known colloquially as "flatrating." A "flat-rater" is one who sells to creditors a set of dunning letters bearing the letter-head of the flat-rater's collection agency and exhorting the debtor to pay the creditor at once. The creditor sends these letters to his debtors, giving the impression that a third party debt collector is collecting the debt. In fact, however, the flat-rater is not in the business of debt collection, but merely sells dunning letters.

This bill prohibits the practice of flat-rating because of its inherently deceptive nature. The prohibition on furnishing such forms does not apply, however, to printers and custom stationery sellers who innocently print or sell such forms without knowledge of their intended use.

Civil liability

The committee views this legislation as primarily self-enforcing; consumers who have been subjected to collection abuses will be enforcing compliance.

Online with updates at www.nclc.org/library

A debt collector who violates the act is liable for any actual damages he caused as well as any additional damages the court deems appropriate, not exceeding $1,000. In assessing damages, the court must take into account the nature of the violation, the degree of willfulness, and the debt collector's persistence. A debt collector has no liability, however, if he violates the act in any manner, including with regard to the act's coverage, when such violation is unintentional and occurred despite procedures designed to avoid such violations. A debt collector also has no liability if he relied in good faith on an advisory opinion issued by the Federal Trade Commission.

As in all other Federal consumer protection legislation, a consumer who obtains judgment on his behalf is entitled to attorney's fees and costs. In order to protect debt collectors from nuisance lawsuits, if the court finds that an action was brought by a consumer in bad faith and for harassment, the court may award the debt collector reasonable attorney's fees and costs.

Administrative enforcement

This legislation is enforced administratively primarily by the Federal Trade Commission. If a depository institution subject to regulation by another Federal agency engages in debt collection, administrative enforcement authority is lodged with that agency. [Page 6]

All enforcement agencies are authorized to utilize all their functions and powers to enforce compliance. The Federal Trade Commission is authorized to treat violations of the act as violations of a trade regulation rule, which empowers the Commission to obtain restraining orders and seek fines in federal district court.

Because the committee regards this as comprehensive legislation which fully addresses the problem of collection abuses, the administrative agencies charged with enforcement are specifically prohibited from issuing additional rules or regulations applicable to persons covered by this legislation.

Relation to State law

The Committee believes that this law ought not to foreclose the States from enacting or enforcing their own laws regarding debt collection. Accordingly, this legislation annuls only "inconsistent" State laws, with stronger State laws not regarded as inconsistent. In addition, States with substantially similar laws may be exempted from the act's requirements (but not its remedies) by applying to the Federal Trade Commission.

Cost of This Legislation

Enactment of this legislation will result in no new or additional costs to the Federal Government. The Congressional Budget Office analysis of this bill is contained in the following letter:

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
U.S. CONGRESS,
Washington, D.C., July 27, 1977.

HON. WILLIAM PROXMIRE,
Chairman, Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs,
U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Pursuant to section 403 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the Congressional Budget Office has reviewed H.R. 5294, a bill to amend the Consumer Credit Protection Act to prohibit abusive practices by debt collectors, as ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, July 26, 1977.

Based on this review, it appears that no additional cost to the Government would be incurred as a result of enactment of this bill.

Sincerely,

Alice M. Rivlin, Director.

Changes in Existing Law

In the opinion of the Committee, it is necessary to dispense with the requirements of subsection 4 of Rule XXIX of the Standing Rules of the Senate in order to expedite the business of the Senate. [Page 7]

Section-by-Section Summary

Section 801. Short title.—The act may be cited as the "Fair Debt Collection Practices Act."

Section 802. Findings and purpose.—The Congress finds that collection abuses by independent debt collectors are serious and widespread and that existing State laws are inadequate to curb these abuses. The purpose of the title is to eliminate abusive practices, not disadvantage ethical debt collectors, and promote consistent state action.

Section 803. Definitions.—The term "debt collector" is defined to include all third parties who regularly collect consumer debts for others, except for the following persons: "in house" collectors for creditors; affiliates collecting for one another, providing that collection is not the principal business of the affiliate; Government officials collecting in their official capacities; process servers; bona fide consumer credit counseling services; and attorneys-at-law. The term also does not include trust companies and other bona fide fiduciaries; persons collecting loans which they originated; persons who service debts for others; and persons holding receivables as collateral for commercial credit transactions.

Section 804. Acquisition of location information.—When contacting third persons to establish a consumer's whereabouts, a debt collector may not: state that the consumer owes a debt; contact the third person more than once unless reasonably necessary; or use language symbols on mail indicating that it pertains to debt collection. A debt collector may not contact a third person if the debt collector knows that the consumer is represented by an attorney and has the attorney's name and address.

Section 805. Communication in connection with debt collection.—Without the consumer's consent, a debt collector may not (a) contact a consumer at any unusual or inconvenient time or place (8 a.m. to 9 p.m. is considered convenient); (b) contact a consumer if he is represented by an attorney; or (c) call a consumer at work if the debt collector knows the consumer's employer prohibits such calls.

There is a general prohibition on contacting any third parties (other than to obtain location information) except for: the consumer's attorney; a credit reporting agency; the creditor; the creditor's or debt collector's attorney; or any other person to the extent necessary to effectuate a post-judgment judicial remedy.

If a consumer notifies a debt collector in writing that he refuses to pay a debt or wishes the debt collector to cease further contacts, the debt collector must cease communications except to notify the consumer of the debt collector's or creditor's possible further actions.

Section 806. Harassment or abuse.—A debt collector is prohibited from engaging in any conduct the natural consequence of which is to harass, oppress or abuse any person. The following enumerated practices are violations: threats of violence; use of profane or obscene language; publishing "shame lists"; repeated telephone calls intended [Page 8] to annoy or harass; and making telephone calls without disclosing the caller's identity.

Section 807. False or misleading representations.—A debt collector is prohibited from using any false, deceptive or misleading representations to collect debts. The following enumerated practices are violations: misrepresenting that a debt collector is a government official; misrepresenting the amount or nature of a debt; impersonating an attorney; misrepresenting that a consumer will be arrested or his property seized; misrepresenting a consumer's legal rights; deliberately communicating false credit information; utilizing bogus legal documents; and misrepresenting a collection agency as a credit bureau.

Section 808. Unfair practices.—A debt collector is prohibited from using any unfair or unconscionable means to collect debts. The following enumerated practices are violations: collecting amounts in excess of the debt or interest owed; causing charges for communications to be billed to a consumer; repossessing property if there is no valid security interest or if it is exempt by law from repossession; communicating information about a debt by postcard; and using symbols on envelopes indicating that the contents pertain to debt collection.

Section 809. Validation of debts.—Within 5 days after contacting a consumer, the debt collector must in writing notify the consumer of the amount of the debt and the name of the creditor and advise the consumer of the debt collector's duty to verify the debt if it is disputed. If a consumer disputes a debt within 30 days, the debt collector must stop collection until verification is sent to the consumer.

Section 810. Multiple debts.—A debt collector is prohibited from applying payments to disputed debts and, where applicable, must apply payments in accordance with the consumer's directions.

Section 811. Legal actions by debt collectors.—Actions on real property are required to be brought in the judicial district in which the property is located. In personal actions, suits must be brought either where the contract was signed or where the consumer resides.

Section 812. Furnishing certain deceptive forms.—It is made unlawful to compile, design, and furnish forms knowing that they will be used to create the false impression that a third person is collecting a debt.

Section 813. Civil liability.—A debt collector who violates the Act is liable for actual damages plus costs and reasonable attorney's fees. The court may award additional damages of up to $1,000 in individual actions, and in class actions, up to $500,000 or 1 percent of the debt collector's net worth, whichever is less.

Two defenses are provided: good faith reliance on an F.T.C. advisory opinion; and bona fide error notwithstanding procedures to avoid the error. Where a court finds that a suit was brought by a consumer in bad faith and for harassment, the court may award reasonable attorney's fees to the defendant.

Jurisdiction for actions is conferred on U.S. district and state courts; there is a 1 year statute of limitations.

Section 814. Administrative enforcement.—The Act is administratively enforced by the F.T.C. and the Federal bank regulatory agencies. The agencies are empowered to use all their functions and powers to enforce compliance. The agencies are prohibited from promulgating any additional rules or regulations pertaining to debt collectors.

[Page 9]

Section 815. Reports to Congress by the Commission.—The F.T.C. shall provide annual reports to Congress on the Act's effectiveness and administrative enforcement.

Section 816. Relation to State laws.—The act annuls state laws only if inconsistent; a state law is not inconsistent if it provides greater protection than this title.

Section 817. Exemption for State regulation.—The F.T.C. may exempt from the Act any collection practices within any State if subject to substantially similar requirements.

Section 818. Effective date.—The act is effective 6 months from enactment.

Additional Views of Messrs. Schmitt, Garn and Tower

It is our view that the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act is an unwarranted Federal intrusion into an area best left to the States. Although we recognize that some debt collectors employ unconscionable practices in collecting debts, we do not feel that the hearings in either the House or Senate subcommittees produced substantial evidence that there is a serious national problem which justifies such detailed Federal regulation of the operation of the business of collecting debts. A far better approach is that contained in S. 1130 which would preserve the States' prerogative of providing a mechanism for the resolution of disputes between debtors and creditors while correcting identified abuses in irresponsible debt collectors operating in interstate commerce. According to an American Bar Association committee, 33 States have already adopted debt collection practices regulation and others are moving in that direction.

Of particular concern to us is the impact that the proliferation of Federal consumer credit regulation is having on small business and on the cost and availability of credit to the consumer. A Federal Fair Debt Collection Practice Act will be one more regulatory burden on small business, the cost of which will be borne by the consumer.

Although we would not take the approach chosen by the majority of the committee, the committee report is a vast improvement over H.R. 5294 passed by the House. We are pleased that the committee included in its final version of the bill many provisions contained in S. 1130. Most important, it dropped the $100 minimum civil penalty provision which courts have construed as requiring the award of the penalty and attorneys fees when a violation of the Act has been established.

This should go a long way in avoiding the type of nuisance suits so prevalent under the Truth in Lending Act.

Harrison Schmitt.
Jake Garn.
John Tower.

Online with updates at www.nclc.org/library

Appendix B CFPB Regulations and Interpretations

B.1 Regulation F

B.1.1 Introduction; Regulation F Table

Effective November 30, 2021, the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) significantly expanded its Regulation F, 12 C.F.R. § 1006, to set out extensive rules relating to the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA). Those rules were released in the Federal Register in two parts—one appearing on November 30, 2020[1] and the other on January 19, 2021.[2] Regulation F also includes Supplement I, the Official Interpretations. In addition, supplemental information found in those two Federal Register notices is helpful in understanding both the Regulation and its Official Interpretations. The November 30, 2020, and January 19, 2021, notices, as well as other documents related to this rulemaking are available as Primary Sources included with this treatise.

Regulation F, prior to those extensive additions, set out procedures for state application for exemptions from the Act,[3] that were previously codified at 12 C.F.R. §§ 1006.1 to 1006.8. These procedures have been amended and relocated to 12 C.F.R. § 1006.108 and Appendix A to Part 1006.[4]

On April 22, 2021, the CFPB also issued Interim Final Rules on Debt Collection Practices in Connection With the Global COVID–19 Pandemic (Regulation F).[5] The rule took effect on May 3, 2021 and is codified at 12 C.F.R. §1006.9. The Rule was temporary, and only applied during the effective period of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's Temporary Halt in Residential Evictions to Prevent the Further Spread of COVID–19. That order is no longer in effect, and thus this rule provision is also no longer in effect.[6]

Regulation F and its Official Interpretations are reprinted at Appx. B.1.2, infra. For the reader's convenience, Official Interpretations are integrated with corresponding regulation provisions, instead of placed at the end of the regulation, as found, for example, in the Code of Federal Regulations. In addition, the CFPB maintains a website with debt collection regulations and official interpretations at https://www.consumerfinance.gov. This website shows current, historical, and future (if there are regulations that have not yet taken effect) views of Regulation F.

Below is a Regulation F Table indicating corresponding treatise sections where a regulation provision is discussed. The table also shows, where applicable, FDCPA provisions corresponding to a regulation provision—using both the Act numbering and the United States Code numbering.

Regulation F Table

Reg. F Section	Treatise Section	Act Section	U.S.C. Section
1006.1(a), Authority	§ 3.4.4	814(d)	1692*l*(d)
1006.1(b), Purpose	§ 3.1	802	1692
1006.1(c), Coverage	§ 4.8.12	803(6)	1692a(6)
1006.2, Definitions	Ch. 4	803	1692a
§1006.2(b), Attempt to communicate	§ 4.2	n/a	n/a
§1006.2(d) Communicate or communication	§ 4.2	803(2)	1692a(2)
§1006.2(j) Limited-content message	§ 4.9	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.6, Communications in connection with debt collection	§§ 5.3 to 5.9	805	1692c
§ 1006.6(a). Definition (including deceased consumer)	§ 5.3.1	805(d)	1692c(d)
§1006.6(b)(1), Prohibitions regarding unusual or inconvenient times or places.	§ 5.4	805(a)(1)	1692c(a)(1)
§1006.6(b)(2), Prohibitions regarding consumer represented by an attorney.	§ 5.5	805(a)(2)	1692c(a)(2)
§1006.6(b)(3), Prohibitions regarding consumer's place of employment	§ 5.6	805(a)(3)	1692c(a)(3)
§ 1006(c), Communications with a consumer—after refusal to pay or cease communication notice	§ 5.8	805(c)	1692c(c)
1006.6(d), Communications with third parties—	§ 5.7	805(b)	1692c(b)
1006.6(e), Opt-out notice for electronic communications or attempts to communicate	§ 5.9	n/a	n/a
§1006.9, Debt collection practices in connection with the global COVID-19 pandemic	§ 7.4.11.2	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.10, Acquisition of location information	§ 5.2	804	1692b
§ 1006.14, Harassing, oppressive, or abusive conduct	Ch. 6	806	1692d

1 Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 (Nov. 30, 2020).

2 Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 (Jan. 19, 2021).

3 The CFPB has authority under 15 U.S.C. § 1692o to regulate the exemption of states from FDCPA requirements. See § 3.4.2.4, supra.

4 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,893–76,895 (Nov. 30, 2020).

5 Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163 (April 22, 2021). See § 7.4.11.2, supra.

6 Debt Collection Practices (Regulation F), 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163 (April 22, 2021). See § 7.4.11.2, supra.

Reg. F Section	Treatise Section	Act Section	U.S.C. Section
§ 1006.14(b), Repeated or continuous telephone calls or telephone conversations	§ 6.7.2	806(5)	1692d(5)
§ 1006.14(h), Prohibited communication media	§ 6.9	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.18, False, deceptive, or misleading representations or means	Ch. 7	807	1692e
§ 1006.18(d), Social media	§ 7.4.2	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.18(e), Disclosures required	§ 7.4.11	807(11)	1692e(11)
§ 1006.18(f), Assumed names	§ 7.4.14	807(14)	1692e(14)
§ 1006.22, Unfair or unconscionable means	Ch. 8	808	1692f
§ 1006.22(f)(3), Restrictions on use of certain media (emails sent to employer email addresses)	§ 8.10	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.22(f)(4), Restrictions on use of certain media (social media)	§ 8.11	n/a	n/a
§1006.22(g), Safe harbor for certain emails and text messages relating to the collection of a debt	§ 8.9	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.26, Collection of time-barred debts	§ 7.4.9	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.30(a), Required actions prior to furnishing information	§ 8.12	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.30(b), Prohibition on the sale, transfer for consideration, or placement for collection of certain debts	§ 8.13	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.30(c), Multiple debts	§ 10.2	810	1692h
§ 1006.30(d), Legal actions by debt collectors	§ 10.3	811	1692i
§ 1006.30(e), Furnishing certain deceptive forms	§ 10.4	812	1692j
§ 1006.34, Notice for validation of debts	Ch. 9	809	1692g
§ 1006.34(a)(3), Itemization date	§ 9.4.2	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.34(c), Validation information	§ 9.4	809(a)	1692g(a)
§ 1006.34(d)(2), Safe harbor	§ 9.5.2	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.34(d)(3), Optional disclosures	§ 9.6	809(a)	1692g(a)
§ 1006.34(d)(4), Validation notices delivered electronically.	§ 9.5.3	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.34(e), Translation into other languages	§ 9.5.4	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.38, Disputes and requests for original-creditor information	§ 9.10, 9.11	809(b)	1692g(b)
§ 1006.42, Sending required disclosures	§ 9.3	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.100, Record retention	§ 11.5.4.3	n/a	n/a
§ 1006.104, Relation to State laws	§ 11.16.1	816	1692n
§ 1006.108, Exemption for State regulation	§ 3.4.4	817	1692o
Appendix A to Part 1006—Procedures for State Application for Exemption from the Provisions of the Act	§ 3.4.4	817	1692o
Appendix B to Part 1006—Model Forms. B-1 Model Form for Validation Notice	§ 9.5.2	n/a	n/a
Appendix C to Part 1006—Issuance of Advisory Opinions	§ 3.4.4.3	813(e)	1692k(e)

B.1.2 Regulation F and Its Official Interpretations

Regulation F, 12 C.F.R. pt. 1006, is reprinted below with its Official Interpretations integrated with corresponding regulation provisions. The regulation is effective November 30, 2021, and includes provisions announced by 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 (Nov. 30, 2020), 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 (Jan. 19, 2021), and 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163 (April 22, 2021). For more detail, see Appx. B.1.1, supra.

§ 1006.1 Authority, purpose, and coverage.

(a) Authority. This part, known as Regulation F, is issued by the Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection pursuant to sections 814(d) and 817 of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA or Act), 15 U.S.C. 1692*l*(d), 1692o; title X of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (Dodd-Frank Act), 12 U.S.C. 5481 et seq.; and paragraph (b)(1) of section 104 of the Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act (E-SIGN Act), 15 U.S.C. 7004.

(b) Purpose. This part carries out the purposes of the FDCPA, which include eliminating abusive debt collection practices by debt collectors, ensuring that debt collectors who refrain from using abusive debt collection practices are not competitively disadvantaged, and promoting consistent State action to protect consumers against debt collection abuses. This part also prescribes requirements to ensure that certain features of debt collection are disclosed fully, accurately, and effectively to consumers in a manner that permits consumers to understand the costs benefits, and risks associated with debt collection, in light of the fact and circumstances. Finally, this part imposes record retention requirements to enable the Bureau to administer and carry out the purposes o the FDCPA, the Dodd-Frank Act, and this part, as well as to prevent evasions thereof. The record retention requirements also will facilitate supervision of debt collectors and the assessment and detection of risks to consumers.

(c) Coverage.

(1) Except as provided in § 1006.108 and appendix A of this part regarding applications for State exemptions from the FDCPA, this part applies to debt collectors, as defined in § 1006.2(i), other than a person excluded from coverage by section 1029(a) of the Consumer Financial Protection Act of 2010, title X of the Dodd-Frank Act (12 U.S.C. 5519(a)).

(2) Section 1006.34(c)(2)(iii) and (3)(iv) applies to debt collectors only when they are collecting debt related to a consumer financial product or service as defined in § 1006.2(f).

§ 1006.2 Definitions.

For purposes of this part, the following definitions apply:

(a) Act or FDCPA means the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (15 U.S.C. 1692 et seq.).

(b) Attempt to communicate means any act to initiate a communication or other contact about a debt with any person through any medium, including by soliciting a response from such person. An attempt to communicate includes leaving a limited-content message, as defined in paragraph (j) of this section.

Official interpretation of 2(b) Attempt to communicate.

1. Examples. Section 1006.2(b) defines an attempt to communicate as any act to initiate a communication or other contact about a debt with any person through any medium, including by soliciting a response from such person. An act to initiate a communication or other contact about a debt is an attempt to communicate regardless of whether the attempt, if successful, would be a communication that conveys information regarding a debt directly or indirectly to any person. For example:

i. Assume that a debt collector places a telephone call to a person about a debt. Regardless of whether the debt collector reaches the person, the debt collector has attempted to communicate with the person.

ii. Assume that a debt collector places a telephone call to a person about a debt and leaves a voicemail message. Regardless of whether the voicemail message consists solely of a limited-content message or includes content that conveys, directly or indirectly, information about a debt, the debt collector has attempted to communicate with the person.

(c) Bureau means the Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection.

(d) Communicate or communication means the conveying of information regarding a debt directly or indirectly to any person through any medium.

Official interpretation of 2(d) Communicate or communication.

1. Any medium. Section 1006.2(d) provides, in relevant part, that a communication can occur through any medium. Any medium includes any oral, written, electronic, or other medium. For example, a communication may occur in person or by telephone, audio recording, paper document, mail, email, text message, social media, or other electronic media.

2. Information regarding a debt. Section 1006.2(d) provides, in relevant part, that a communication means conveying information regarding a debt. A debt collector does not convey information regarding a debt directly or indirectly to any person if the debt collector leaves only a limited-content message, as defined in § 1006.2(j). A debt collector who provides marketing or advertising that does not contain information about a specific debt or debts has not communicated under § 1006.2(d), even if the debt collector transmits the marketing or advertising message to a consumer, because the debt collector has not conveyed information regarding a debt.

(e) Consumer means any natural person, whether living or deceased, obligated or allegedly obligated to pay any debt. For purposes of § 1006.6, the term consumer includes the persons described in § 1006.6(a).

(f) Consumer financial product or service has the same meaning given to it in section 1002(5) of the Dodd-Frank Act (12 U.S.C. 5481(5)).

(g) Creditor means any person who offers or extends credit creating a debt or to whom a debt is owed. The term creditor does not, however, include any person to the extent that such person receives an assignment or transfer of a debt in default solely to facilitate collection of the debt for another.

(h) Debt means any obligation or alleged obligation of a consumer to pay money arising out of a transaction in which the money, property, insurance, or services that are the subject of the transaction are primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, whether or not the obligation has been reduced to judgment.

Official interpretation of 2(h) Debt.

1. Consumer. Section 1006.2(h) defines debt to mean, in part, any obligation or alleged obligation of a consumer to pay money arising out of a transaction. Section 1006.2(e), in turn, defines consumer to mean any natural person obligated or allegedly obligated to pay any debt. Only natural persons, therefore, can incur debts as defined in § 1006.2(h).

(i)

(1) Debt collector means any person who uses any instrumentality of interstate commerce or mail in any business the principal purpose of which is the collection of debts, or who regularly collects or attempts to collect, directly or indirectly, debts owed or due, or asserted to be owed or due, to another. Notwithstanding paragraph (i)(2)(vi) of this section, the term debt collector includes any creditor that, in the process of collecting its own debts, uses any name other than its own that would indicate that a third person is collecting or attempting to collect such debts. For purposes of § 1006.22(e), the term also includes any person who uses any instrumentality of interstate commerce or mail in any business the principal purpose of which is the enforcement of security interests.

Official interpretation of 2(i) Debt collector.

1. In general. Section 1006.2(i) provides, in part, that a debt collector is any person who uses any instrumentality of interstate commerce or mail in any business the principal purpose of which is the collection of debts, or who regularly collects or attempts to collect, directly or indirectly, debts owed or due, or asserted to be owed or due, to another. A person who collects or attempts to collect defaulted debts that the person has purchased, but who does not collect or attempt to collect, directly or indirectly, debts owed or due, or asserted to be owed or due, to another, and who does not have a business the principal purpose of which is the collection of debts, is not a debt collector as defined in § 1006.2(i).

(2) The term debt collector excludes:

(i) Any officer or employee of a creditor while the officer or employee is collecting debts for the creditor in the creditor's name;

(ii) Any person while acting as a debt collector for another person if:

(A) The person acting as a debt collector does so only for persons with whom the person acting as a debt collector is related by common ownership or affiliated by corporate control; and

(B) The principal business of the person acting as a debt collector is not the collection of debts;

(iii) Any officer or employee of the United States or any State to the extent that collecting or attempting to collect any debt is in the performance of the officer's or employee's official duties;

(iv) Any person while serving or attempting to serve legal process on any other person in connection with the judicial enforcement of any debt;

(v) Any nonprofit organization that, at the request of consumers, performs bona fide consumer credit counseling and assists consumers in liquidating their debts by receiving payment from such consumers and distributing such amounts to creditors;

(vi) Any person collecting or attempting to collect any debt owed or due, or asserted to be owed or due to another, to the extent such debt collection activity:

(A) Is incidental to a bona fide fiduciary obligation or a bona fide escrow arrangement;

(B) Concerns a debt that such person originated;

(C) Concerns a debt that was not in default at the time such person obtained it; or

(D) Concerns a debt that such person obtained as a secured party in a commercial credit transaction involving the creditor; and

(vii) A private entity, to the extent such private entity is operating a bad check enforcement program that complies with section 818 of the Act.

(j) Limited-content message means a voicemail message for a consumer that includes all of the content described in paragraph (j)(1) of this section, that may include any of the content described in paragraph (j)(2) of this section, and that includes no other content.

Official interpretation of 2(j) Limited-content message.

1. In general. Section 1006.2(j) provides that a limited-content message is a voicemail message for a consumer that includes all of the content described in § 1006.2(j)(1), that may include any of the content described in § 1006.2(j)(2), and that includes no other content. Any other message is not a limited-content message. If a voicemail message includes content other than the specific items described in § 1006.2(j)(1) and (2), and such other content directly or indirectly conveys any information about a debt, the message is a communication, as defined in § 1006.2(d). For example, a voicemail message that includes a statement that the message is from a debt collector and a request to speak to a particular consumer is not a limited-content message because it includes more than the required or permitted content.

2. Message for a consumer. Section 1006.2(j) provides, in part, that a limited-content message is a voicemail message for a consumer. A message knowingly left for a third party is not a limited-content message because it is not for a consumer. For example, assume that a debt collector has a telephone number that the debt collector knows belongs to the consumer's friend. A voicemail message left after calling that number is not a limited-content message, even if the message includes no more than the content described in § 1006.2(j)(1) and (2) because the debt collector knowingly left the message for someone other than the consumer. Other provisions of this part may, in certain circumstances, restrict a debt collector from leaving a limited-content message or otherwise attempting to communicate with a consumer. See §§ 1006.6(b) and (c) and 1006.22(f) and their related commentary for further guidance regarding when a debt collector is prohibited from attempting to communicate with a consumer.

3. Meaningful disclosure of identity. A debt collector who leaves only a limited-content message for a consumer does not violate § 1006.14(g)'s requirement to meaningfully disclose the caller's identity with respect to that voicemail message.

(1) Required content. A limited-content message is a voicemail message for a consumer that includes:

Official interpretation of 2(j)(1) Required content.

1. Example. The following example illustrates a limited-content message that includes only the content described in § 1006.2(j)(1): This is Robin Smith calling from ABC Inc. Please contact me or Jim Johnson at 1-800-555-1212.

(i) A business name for the debt collector that does not indicate that the debt collector is in the debt collection business;

(ii) A request that the consumer reply to the message;

(iii) The name or names of one or more natural persons whom the consumer can contact to reply to the debt collector; and

(iv) A telephone number or numbers that the consumer can use to reply to the debt collector.

(2) Optional content. In addition to the content described in paragraph (j)(1) of this section, a limited-content message may include one or more of the following:

Official interpretation of 2(j)(2) Optional content.

1. In general. Section 1006.2(j)(2)(iv) provides that a limited-content message may include a statement that, if the consumer replies, the consumer may speak to any of the company's representatives or associates. A message that includes a more detailed description of the representative or associate group is not a limited-content message. For example, a reference to an agent with the credit card receivables group is not a limited-content message because it includes more than a statement that the consumer's reply may be answered by a representative or associate.

2. Example. The following example illustrates a limited-content message that includes the content described in both § 1006.2(j)(1) and (2): Hi, this is Robin Smith calling from ABC Inc. It is 4:15 p.m. on Wednesday, September 1. Please contact me or any of our representatives at 1-800-555-1212 today until 6:00 p.m. Eastern time, or any weekday from 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Eastern time.

(i) A salutation;

(ii) The date and time of the message;

(iii) Suggested dates and times for the consumer to reply to the message; and

(iv) A statement that if the consumer replies, the consumer may speak to any of the company's representatives or associates.

(k) Person includes natural persons, corporations, companies, associations, firms, partnerships, societies, and joint stock companies.

(l) State means any State, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or any political subdivision of any of the foregoing.

§ 1006.6 Communications in connection with debt collection.

(a) Definition. For purposes of this section, the term consumer includes:

(1) The consumer's spouse;

Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(a)(1).

1. Spouse. Section 1006.6(a)(1) provides that, for purposes of § 1006.6, the term consumer includes a consumer's spouse. The surviving spouse of a deceased consumer is a spouse as that term is used in § 1006.6(a)(1).

(2) The consumer's parent, if the consumer is a minor;

Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(a)(2).

1. Parent. Section 1006.6(a)(2) provides that, for purposes of § 1006.6, the term consumer includes a consumer's parent, if the consumer is a minor. A parent of a deceased minor consumer is a parent as that term is used in § 1006.6(a)(2).

(3) The consumer's legal guardian;

(4) The executor or administrator of the consumer's estate, if the consumer is deceased; and

Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(a)(4).

1. Personal representative. Section 1006.6(a)(4) provides that, for purposes of § 1006.6, the term consumer includes the executor or administrator of the consumer's estate, if the consumer is deceased. The terms executor or administrator include the personal representative of the consumer's estate. A personal representative is any person who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate. Persons with such authority may include personal representatives under the informal probate and summary administration procedures of many States, persons appointed as universal successors, persons who sign declarations or affidavits to effectuate the transfer of estate assets, and persons who dispose of the deceased consumer's financial assets or other assets of monetary value extrajudicially.

(5) A confirmed successor in interest, as defined in Regulation X, 12 CFR 1024.31, or Regulation Z, 12 CFR 1026.2(a)(27)(ii).

(b) Communications with a consumer—

(1) Prohibitions regarding unusual or inconvenient times or places. Except as provided in paragraph (b)(4) of this section, a debt collector must not communicate or attempt to communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt:

Official interpretation of 6(b)(1) Prohibitions regarding unusual or inconvenient times or places.

1. Designation of inconvenience. Section 1006.6(b)(1) prohibits a debt collector from, among other things, communicating or attempting to communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt at a time or place that the debt collector knows or should know is inconvenient to the consumer, unless an exception in § 1006.6(b)(4) applies. For example, a debt collector knows or should know that a time or place is inconvenient to a consumer if the consumer uses the word inconvenient to notify the debt collector. In addition, depending on the facts and circumstances, the debt collector knows or should know that a time or place is inconvenient even if the consumer does not specifically state to the debt collector that a time or place is inconvenient. The debt collector may ask follow-up questions regarding whether a time or place is convenient to clarify statements by the consumer. For example:

i. Assume that a creditor places a debt for collection with a debt collector. To facilitate collection of the debt, the creditor provides the debt collector a file that includes recent notes stating that the consumer cannot be disturbed on Tuesdays and Thursdays through the end of the calendar year. Based on these facts, the debt collector knows or should know that Tuesdays and Thursdays through the end of the calendar year are inconvenient to the consumer. Unless the consumer informs the debt collector that those times are no longer inconvenient, § 1006.6(b)(1)(i) prohibits the debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with the consumer on those days through the end of the calendar year.

ii. Assume that a debt collector calls a consumer. The consumer answers the call but states I am busy or I cannot talk now. The debt collector asks the consumer when would be a convenient time. The consumer responds, on weekdays, except from 3:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. The debt collector asks the consumer whether there would be a convenient time on weekends. The consumer responds no. Based on these facts, the debt collector knows or should know that the time period between 3:00 p.m. and 5:00 p.m. on weekdays, and all times on weekends, are inconvenient to the consumer. Thereafter, unless the consumer informs the debt collector that those times are no longer inconvenient, § 1006.6(b)(1)(i) prohibits the debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with the consumer at those times.

iii. Assume that a consumer tells a debt collector not to communicate with the consumer at a particular place, such as the consumer's home. The debt collector asks whether the consumer intends to prohibit the debt collector from communicating with the consumer through all media associated with the consumer's home, including, for example, mail. Absent such additional information, the debt collector knows or should know that communications to the consumer at home, including mail to the consumer's home address and calls to the consumer's home landline telephone number, are inconvenient. Thereafter, unless the consumer informs the debt collector that the place is no longer inconvenient, § 1006.6(b)(1)(ii) prohibits the debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with the consumer at the consumer's home. See comment 6(b)(1)(ii)-1 for additional guidance regarding communications or attempts to communicate at an inconvenient place.

2. Consumer-initiated communication. If a consumer initiates a communication with a debt collector at a time or from a place that the consumer previously designated as inconvenient, the debt collector may respond once at that time or place through the same medium of communication used by the consumer. (For more on medium of communication, see § 1006.14(h) and its associated commentary.) After that response, § 1006.6(b)(1) prohibits the debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate further with the consumer at that time or place until the consumer conveys that the time or place is no longer inconvenient, unless an exception in § 1006.6(b)(4) applies. For example:

i. Assume the same facts as in comment 6(b)(1)-1.ii, except that, after the consumer tells the debt collector that weekdays from 3:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. and weekends are inconvenient, the consumer sends an email message to the debt collector at 3:30 p.m. on Wednesday. Based on these facts, § 1006.6(b)(1)(i) does not prohibit the debt collector from responding once by email message before 5:00 p.m. on that day. Unless the consumer informs the debt collector that those times are no longer inconvenient, § 1006.6(b)(1)(i) prohibits the debt collector from future communications or attempts to communicate with the consumer on weekdays between 3:00 p.m. and 5:00 p.m. and on weekends. Additionally, if the consumer responds to the debt collector's email message, the debt collector may continue to respond once to each consumer-initiated email message before 5:00 p.m. on that day.

ii. Assume the same facts as in comment 6(b)(1)-1.iii, except that, after the consumer tells the debt collector not to communicate with the consumer at home, the consumer calls the debt collector from the consumer's home landline telephone number. Based on these facts, § 1006.6(b)(1)(ii) does not prohibit the debt collector from responding once by communicating with the consumer on that telephone call. Unless the consumer informs the debt collector that the place is no longer inconvenient, § 1006.6(b)(1)(ii) prohibits the debt collector from future communications or attempts to communicate with the consumer at home.

iii. Assume that a consumer tells a debt collector that all communications to the consumer on Friday every week are inconvenient to the consumer. On a Friday, the consumer visits the debt collector's website and uses the debt collector's mobile application. Based on these facts, while the consumer navigates the website or uses the mobile application, § 1006.6(b)(1)(i) does not prohibit the debt collector from conveying information to the consumer about the debt through the website or mobile application. Once the consumer stops navigating the website or using the mobile application, however, § 1006.6(b)(1)(i) prohibits the debt collector from further communications or attempts to communicate on that day. And unless the consumer informs the debt collector that those times are no longer inconvenient, § 1006.6(b)(1)(i) prohibits the debt collector from future communications or attempts to communicate with the consumer on Fridays.

iv. Assume the same facts as in comment 6(b)(1)-2.iii, except that after the consumer visits the debt collector's website and uses the debt collector's mobile application, the consumer sends an email message to the debt collector at 8:30 p.m. on Friday. Based on these facts, § 1006.6(b)(1)(i) does not prohibit the debt collector from responding once, such as by sending an automated email message reply generated in response to the consumer's email message. Unless the consumer informs the debt collector that those times are no longer inconvenient, § 1006.6(b)(1)(i) prohibits the debt collector from future communications or attempts to communicate with the consumer on Fridays.

(i) At any unusual time, or at a time that the debt collector knows or should know is inconvenient to the consumer. In the absence of the debt collector's knowledge of circumstances to the contrary, a time before 8:00 a.m. and after 9:00 p.m. local time at the consumer's location is inconvenient; or Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(b)(1)(i).

1. Time of electronic communication. Section 1006.6(b)(1)(i) prohibits a debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate, including through electronic communication media, at any unusual time, or at a time that the debt collector knows or should know is inconvenient to the consumer. For purposes of determining the time of an electronic communication, such as an email or text message, under § 1006.6(b)(1)(i), an electronic communication occurs when the debt collector sends it, not, for example, when the consumer receives or views it.

2. Consumer's location. Under § 1006.6(b)(1)(i), in the absence of a debt collector's knowledge of circumstances to the contrary, an inconvenient time for communicating with a consumer is before 8:00 a.m. and after 9:00 p.m. local time at the consumer's location. If a debt collector has conflicting or ambiguous information regarding a consumer's location, then, in the absence of knowledge of circumstances to the contrary, the debt collector complies with § 1006.6(b)(1)(i) if the debt collector communicates or attempts to communicate with the consumer at a time that would be convenient in all of the locations at which the debt collector's information indicates the consumer might be located. The following examples, which assume that the debt collector has no information about times the consumer considers inconvenient or other information about the consumer's location, illustrate the rule.

i. Assume that a debt collector's information indicates that a consumer has a mobile telephone number with an area code associated with the Eastern time zone and a residential address in the Pacific time zone. The convenient times to communicate with the consumer are after 11:00 a.m. Eastern time (8:00 a.m. Pacific time) and before 9:00 p.m. Eastern time (6:00 p.m. Pacific time).

ii. Assume that a debt collector's information indicates that a consumer has a mobile telephone number with an area code associated with the Eastern time zone and a landline telephone number with an area code associated with the Mountain time zone. The convenient times to communicate with the consumer are after 10:00 a.m. Eastern time (8:00 a.m. Mountain time) and before 9:00 p.m. Eastern time (7:00 p.m. Mountain time).

(ii) At any unusual place, or at a place that the debt collector knows or should know is inconvenient to the consumer.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(b)(1)(ii).

1. Communications or attempts to communicate at unusual or inconvenient places. Section 1006.6(b)(1)(ii) prohibits a debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt at any unusual place, or at a place that the debt collector knows or should know is inconvenient to the consumer. Some communication media, such as mailing addresses and landline telephone numbers, are associated with a place. Pursuant to § 1006.6(b)(1)(ii), a debt collector must not communicate or attempt to communicate with a consumer through media associated with an unusual place, or with a place that the debt collector knows or should know is inconvenient to the consumer. Other communication media, such as email addresses and mobile telephone numbers, are not associated with a place. Section 1006.6(b)(1)(ii) does not prohibit a debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with a consumer through such media unless the debt collector knows that the consumer is at an unusual place, or at a place that the debt collector knows or should know is inconvenient to the consumer. For example:

i. Assume the same facts as in comment 6(b)(1)-1.iii. Unless the debt collector knows that the consumer is at home, a telephone call to the consumer's mobile telephone number or an electronic communication, including, for example, an email message or a text message to the consumer's mobile telephone, does not violate § 1006.6(b)(1)(ii) even if the consumer receives or views the communication while at home.

(2) Prohibitions regarding consumer represented by an attorney. Except as provided in paragraph (b)(4) of this section, a debt collector must not communicate or attempt to communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt if the debt collector knows the consumer is represented by an attorney with respect to such debt and knows, or can readily ascertain, the attorney's name and address, unless the attorney:

Official interpretation of 6(b)(2) Prohibitions regarding consumer represented by an attorney.

1. Consumer-initiated communications. A consumer-initiated communication from a consumer represented by an attorney constitutes the consumer's prior consent to that communication under § 1006.6(b)(4)(i); therefore, a debt collector may respond to that consumer-initiated communication. However, the consumer's act of initiating the communication does not negate the debt collector's knowledge that the consumer is represented by an attorney and does not revoke the protections afforded the consumer under § 1006.6(b)(2). After the debt collector's response, the debt collector must not communicate or attempt to communicate further with the consumer unless the debt collector knows the consumer is not represented by an attorney with respect to the debt, either based on information from the consumer or the consumer's attorney, or unless an exception under § 1006.6(b)(2)(i) or (ii) or § 1006.6(b)(4) applies.

(i) Fails to respond within a reasonable period of time to a communication from the debt collector; or

(ii) Consents to the debt collector's direct communication with the consumer.

(3) Prohibitions regarding consumer's place of employment. Except as provided in paragraph (b)(4) of this section, a debt collector must not communicate or attempt to communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt at the consumer's place of employment, if the debt collector knows or has reason to know that the consumer's employer prohibits the consumer from receiving such communication.

Official interpretation of 6(b)(3) Prohibitions regarding consumer's place of employment.

1. Communications at consumer's place of employment. Section 1006.6(b)(3) prohibits a debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt at the consumer's place of employment, if the debt collector knows or has reason to know that the consumer's employer prohibits the consumer from receiving such communication. A debt collector knows or has reason to know that a consumer's employer prohibits the consumer from receiving such communication if, for example, the consumer tells the debt collector that the consumer cannot take personal calls at work. The debt collector may ask follow-up questions regarding the employer's prohibitions or limitations on contacting the consumer at the place of employment or clarify statements by the consumer.

2. Employer-provided email. For special rules regarding employer-provided email addresses, see § 1006.22(f)(3) and its associated commentary.

(4) Exceptions. The prohibitions in paragraphs (b)(1) through (3) of this section do not apply when a debt collector communicates or attempts to communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt with:

(i) The prior consent of the consumer, given directly to the debt collector during a communication that does not violate paragraphs (b)(1) through (3) of this section; or

Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(b)(4)(i).

1. Prior consent—in general. Section 1006.6(b)(4)(i) provides, in part, that the prohibitions in § 1006.6(b)(1) through (3) on a debt collector communicating or attempting to communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt do not apply if the debt collector communicates or attempts to communicate with the prior consent of the consumer. If the debt collector learns during a communication that the debt collector is communicating with the consumer at an inconvenient time or place, for example, the debt collector may ask the consumer during that communication what time or place would be convenient. However, § 1006.6(b)(4)(i) prohibits the debt collector from asking the consumer to consent to the continuation of that inconvenient communication.

2. Directly to the debt collector. Section 1006.6(b)(4)(i) requires the prior consent of the consumer to be given directly to the debt collector. For example, a debt collector cannot rely on the prior consent of the consumer given to a creditor or to a previous debt collector.

(ii) The express permission of a court of competent jurisdiction.

(c) Communications with a consumer—after refusal to pay or cease communication notice

(1) Prohibition. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(2) of this section, if a consumer notifies a debt collector in writing that the consumer refuses to pay a debt or that the consumer wants the debt collector to cease further communication with the consumer, the debt collector must not communicate or attempt to communicate further with the consumer with respect to such debt.

Official interpretation of 6(c)(1) Prohibitions.

1. Notification complete upon receipt. If, pursuant to § 1006.6(c)(1), a consumer notifies a debt collector in writing or electronically using a medium of electronic communication through which a debt collector accepts electronic communications from consumers that the consumer either refuses to pay a debt or wants the debt collector to cease further communication with the consumer, notification is complete upon the debt collector's receipt of that information. The following example illustrates the rule.

i. Assume that on August 3, a consumer places in the mail a written notification to a debt collector that the consumer either refuses to pay a debt or wants the debt collector to cease further communication with the consumer pursuant to § 1006.6(c)(1). On August 4, the debt collector sends the consumer an email message. The debt collector receives the consumer's written notification on August 6. Because the consumer's notification is complete upon the debt collector's receipt of that information on August 6, the debt collector's email message communication on August 4 does not violate § 1006.6(c)(1).

2. Interpretation of the E-SIGN Act. Comment 6(c)(1)-1 constitutes the Bureau's interpretation of section 101 of the E-SIGN Act as applied to FDCPA section 805(c). Under this interpretation, section 101(a) of the E-SIGN Act enables a consumer to satisfy the requirement in FDCPA section 805(c) that the consumer's notification of the debt collector be in writing through an electronic request. Further, because the consumer may only satisfy the writing requirement using a medium of electronic communication through which a debt collector accepts electronic communications from consumers, section 101(b) of the E-SIGN Act is not contravened.

(2) Exceptions. The prohibition in paragraph (c)(1) of this section does not apply when a debt collector communicates or attempts to communicate further with a consumer with respect to such debt:

Official interpretation of 6(c)(2) Exceptions.

1. Written early intervention notice for mortgage servicers. The Bureau has interpreted the written early intervention notice required by 12 CFR 1024.39(d)(3) to fall within the exceptions to the cease communication provision in FDCPA section 805(c)(2) and (3). See 12 CFR 1024.39(d)(3), its commentary, and the Bureau's 2016 FDCPA Interpretive Rule (81 FR 71977 (Oct. 19, 2016)).

2. Other mortgage servicing rule provisions. Notwithstanding a consumer's cease communication request pursuant to § 1006.6(c)(1), a mortgage servicer who is subject to the FDCPA with respect to a mortgage loan is not liable under the FDCPA for complying with certain servicing rule provisions, including requirements to provide a consumer with disclosures regarding the forced placement of hazard insurance as required by 12 CFR 1024.37, a disclosure regarding an adjustable-rate mortgage's initial interest rate adjustment as required by 12 CFR 1026.20(d), and a periodic statement for each billing cycle as required by 12 CFR 1026.41. See CFPB Bulletin 2013-12 (Oct. 15, 2013) providing implementation guidance for certain mortgage servicing rules.

(i) To advise the consumer that the debt collector's further efforts are being terminated;

(ii) To notify the consumer that the debt collector or creditor may invoke specified remedies that the debt collector or creditor ordinarily invokes; or

(iii) Where applicable, to notify the consumer that the debt collector or creditor intends to invoke a specified remedy.

(d) Communications with third parties—

(1) Prohibitions. Except as provided in paragraph (d)(2) of this section, a debt collector must not communicate, in connection with the collection of any debt, with any person other than:

(i) The consumer;

(ii) The consumer's attorney;

(iii) A consumer reporting agency, if otherwise permitted by law;

(iv) The creditor;

(v) The creditor's attorney; or

(vi) The debt collector's attorney.

(2) Exceptions. The prohibition in paragraph (d)(1) of this section does not apply when a debt collector communicates, in connection with the collection of any debt, with a person:

Official interpretation of 6(d)(2) Exceptions.

1. Prior consent. See the commentary to § 1006.6(b)(4)(i) for guidance concerning a consumer giving prior consent directly to a debt collector.

(i) For the purpose of acquiring location information, as provided in § 1006.10;

(ii) With the prior consent of the consumer given directly to the debt collector;

(iii) With the express permission of a court of competent jurisdiction; or

(iv) As reasonably necessary to effectuate a postjudgment judicial remedy.

(3) Reasonable procedures for email and text message communications. A debt collector maintains procedures that are reasonably adapted, for purposes of FDCPA section 813(c), to avoid a bona fide error in sending an email or text message communication that would result in a violation of paragraph (d)(1) of this section if those procedures include steps to reasonably confirm and document that:

(i) The debt collector communicated with the consumer by sending an email to an email address described in paragraph (d)(4) of this section or a text message to a telephone number described in paragraph (d)(5) of this section; and

(ii) The debt collector did not communicate with the consumer by sending an email to an email address or a text message to a telephone number that the debt collector knows has led to a disclosure prohibited by paragraph (d)(1) of this section.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(d)(3)(ii).

1. Knowledge of prohibited disclosure. For purposes of § 1006.6(d)(3)(ii), a debt collector knows that sending an email to an email address or a text message to a telephone number has led to a disclosure prohibited by § 1006.6(d)(1) if any person has informed the debt collector of that fact.

(4) Procedures for email addresses. For purposes of paragraph (d)(3)(i) of this section, a debt collector may send an email to an email address if:

(i) Procedures based on communication between the consumer and the debt collector.

(A) The consumer used the email address to communicate with the debt collector about the debt and the consumer has not since opted out of communications to that email address; or

(B) The debt collector has received directly from the consumer prior consent to use the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt and the consumer has not withdrawn that consent; or Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(d)(4)(i)(B).

1. Prior consent—in general. Section 1006.6(d)(4)(i)(B) provides that, for purposes of § 1006.6(d)(3)(i), a debt collector may send an email to an email address if, among other things, the debt collector has received directly from the consumer prior consent to use the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt. For purposes of § 1006.6(d)(4)(i)(B), a consumer may provide consent directly to a debt collector through any medium of communication, such as in writing, electronically, or orally.

2. Prior consent—consumer-provided email address. If a consumer provides an email address to a debt collector (including on the debt collector's website or online portal), the debt collector may treat the consumer as having consented directly to the debt collector's use of the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt for purposes of § 1006.6(d)(4)(i)(B) if the debt collector discloses clearly and conspicuously that the debt collector may use the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt.

(ii) Procedures based on communication by the creditor.

(A) A creditor obtained the email address from the consumer;

(B) The creditor used the email address to communicate with the consumer about the account and the consumer did not ask the creditor to stop using it;

Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(d)(4)(ii)(B).

1. Communications about the account. Section 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(B) provides that, for purposes of § 1006.6(d)(3)(i), a debt collector may send an email to an email address if, among other things, the creditor used the email address to communicate with the consumer about the account giving rise to the debt. For purposes of § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(B), communications about the account include, for example, required disclosures, bills, invoices, periodic statements, payment reminders, and payment confirmations. Communications about the account do not include, for example, marketing or advertising materials unrelated to the consumer's account.

(C) Before the debt collector used the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt, the creditor sent the consumer a written or electronic notice, to an address the creditor obtained from the consumer and used to communicate with the consumer about the account, that clearly and conspicuously disclosed:

Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(d)(4)(ii)(C).

1. Clear and conspicuous. Clear and conspicuous means readily understandable. In the case of written and electronic disclosures, the location and type size also must be readily noticeable and legible to consumers, although no minimum type size is mandated.

2. Sample language. Section 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(C) provides that, for purposes of § 1006.6(d)(3)(i), a debt collector may send an email to an email address if, among other things, the creditor sent the consumer a written or electronic notice that clearly and conspicuously disclosed that the debt would be transferred to the debt collector; that the debt collector might use the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt; that, if others have access to this email address, then it is possible they may see the emails; instructions for a reasonable and simple method by which the consumer could opt out of such communications; and the date by which the debt collector or creditor must receive the consumer's request to opt out.

i. When a creditor sends the notice in writing, the creditor may use, but is not required to use, the following language to satisfy § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(C): We are transferring your account to ABC debt collector, and we are providing ABC debt collector with the following email address for you: [email address]. ABC debt collector may use this email address to communicate with you about the debt. If others have access to this email address, then it is possible they may see the emails. If you would like to opt out of communications by ABC debt collector to [email address], please fill out the enclosed form and return it in the enclosed envelope so that we receive it by [date].

ii. When a creditor sends the notice electronically, the creditor may use, but is not required to use, the following language to satisfy § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(C): We are transferring your account to ABC debt collector, and we are providing ABC debt collector with the following email address for you: [email address]. ABC debt collector may use this email address to communicate with you about the debt. If others have access to this email address, then it is possible they may see the emails. If you would like to opt out of communications by ABC debt collector to [email address], please click here by [date].

3. Combined notice. A notice provided by the creditor under § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(C) may be contained in a larger communication that conveys other information, as long as the notice is clear and conspicuous.

(1) That the debt has been or will be transferred to the debt collector;

Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(1).

1. Identification of the debt collector. Under § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(1), the notice must clearly and conspicuously disclose, among other things, that the debt has been or will be transferred to the debt collector. To satisfy this requirement, the notice must identify the name of the specific debt collector to which the debt has been or will be transferred.

(2) The email address and the fact that the debt collector might use the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt;

(3) That, if others have access to the email address, then it is possible they may see the emails;

(4) Instructions for a reasonable and simple method by which the consumer could opt out of such communications; and

Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(4).

1. Reasonable and simple method to opt out. Under § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(4), the notice must clearly and conspicuously disclose instructions for a reasonable and simple method by which the consumer can opt out of the debt collector's use of the email address to communicate about the debt. The following examples illustrate the rule.

i. When the creditor sends the notice in writing, reasonable and simple methods for opting out include providing a reply form and a pre-addressed envelope together with the opt-out notice. Requiring a consumer to call or write to obtain a form for opting out, rather than including the form with the opt-out notice, does not meet the requirement to provide a reasonable and simple method for opting out.

ii. When the creditor sends the notice electronically, reasonable and simple methods for opting out include providing an electronic means to opt out, such as a hyperlink, or allowing the consumer to opt out by replying to the communication with the word stop. Requiring a consumer who receives the opt-out notice electronically to opt out by postal mail, telephone, or visiting a website without providing a link does not meet the requirement to provide a reasonable and simple method for opting out.

(5) The date by which the debt collector or the creditor must receive the consumer's request to opt out, which must be at least 35 days after the date the notice is sent;

Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(5).

1. Recipient of opt-out request. Under § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(5), the notice must clearly and conspicuously disclose the date by which a debt collector or creditor must receive a consumer's request to opt out, which must be at least 35 days after the date the notice is sent. The notice may instruct the consumer to respond to the debt collector or to the creditor but not to both.

(D) The opt-out period provided under paragraph (d)(4)(ii)(C)(5) of this section has expired and the consumer has not opted out; and Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(d)(4)(ii)(D).

1. Effect of opt-out request after expiration of opt-out period. If a consumer requests after the expiration of the opt-out period that the debt collector not communicate using the email address identified in the opt-out notice, such as by returning the notice or opting out under § 1006.6(e), § 1006.14(h)(1) prohibits the debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with the consumer using that email address. If the consumer requests after the expiration of the opt-out period that the debt collector not communicate with the consumer by email, § 1006.14(h)(1) prohibits the debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with the consumer by email, including by using the specific email address identified in the notice. For more on prohibited communication media and certain exceptions, see § 1006.14(h) and its associated commentary. If after the expiration of the opt-out period the consumer notifies the debt collector in writing or electronically using a medium of electronic communication through which a debt collector accepts electronic communications from consumers that the consumer refuses to pay the debt or wants the debt collector to cease further communication with the consumer, § 1006.6(c)(1) prohibits the debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with the consumer with respect to the debt, subject to the exceptions in § 1006.6(c)(2). For more on communications with a consumer after refusal to pay or a cease communication notice, see § 1006.6(c) and its associated commentary.

2. Scope of opt-out request. In the absence of evidence that the consumer refuses to pay the debt or wants the debt collector to cease all communication with the consumer, a consumer's request under § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(D) to opt out of a debt collector's use of a particular email address to communicate with the consumer by email does not constitute a notification to cease further communication with respect to the debt under § 1006.6(c)(1).

(E) The email address has a domain name that is available for use by the general public, unless the debt collector knows the address is provided by the consumer's employer.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(d)(4)(ii)(E).

1. Domain name available for use by the general public. Under § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(E), the domain name of an email address is available for use by the general public when multiple members of the general public are permitted to use the same domain name, whether for free or through a paid subscription. Such a name does not include one that is reserved for use by specific registrants, such as a domain name branded for use by a particular commercial entity (e.g., john.doe@springsidemortgage.com) or reserved for particular types of institutions (e.g., john.doe@agency.gov, john.doe@university.edu, or john.doe@nonprofit.org).

2. Knowledge of employer-provided email address. For purposes of § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(E), a debt collector knows that an email address is provided by the consumer's employer if any person has informed the debt collector that the address is employer provided. However, § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(E) does not require a debt collector to conduct a manual review of consumer accounts to determine whether an email address might be employer provided.

(iii) Procedures based on communication by the prior debt collector.

Official interpretation of 6(d)(4)(iii) Procedures based on communication by the prior debt collector.

1. Immediately prior debt collector. Section 1006.6(d)(4)(iii) provides that, for purposes of § 1006.6(d)(3)(i), a debt collector may send an email to an email address if, among other things, the immediately prior debt collector used the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt. For purposes of § 1006.6(d)(4)(iii), the immediately prior debt collector is the debt collector immediately preceding the current debt collector. For example, if ABC debt collector returns a debt to the creditor and the creditor places the debt with XYZ debt collector, ABC debt collector is the immediately prior debt collector for purposes of § 1006.6(d)(4)(iii).

2. Examples. The following examples illustrate the rule.

i. After obtaining a consumer's email address in accordance with the procedures in § 1006.6(d)(4)(i) or (ii), ABC debt collector communicates with the consumer about the debt using that email address and the consumer does not opt out. ABC debt collector returns the debt to the creditor, who places it with XYZ debt collector. XYZ debt collector communicates with the consumer about the debt using the email address obtained by ABC debt collector. Assuming that the requirements of § 1006.6(d)(3)(ii) are satisfied, XYZ debt collector may have a bona fide error defense to civil liability for any unintentional third-party disclosure that occurs during that communication because a prior debt collector (i.e., ABC debt collector) obtained the email address in accordance with the procedures in § 1006.6(d)(4)(i) or (ii), the immediately prior debt collector (i.e., ABC debt collector) used the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt, and the consumer did not opt out of such communications by ABC debt collector.

ii. After obtaining a consumer's email address in accordance with the procedures in § 1006.6(d)(4)(i) or (ii), ABC debt collector communicates with the consumer about the debt using that email address and the consumer does not opt out. ABC debt collector returns the debt to the creditor, who places it with EFG debt collector. EFG debt collector communicates with the consumer about the debt using the email address obtained by ABC debt collector, and the consumer does not opt out. EFG debt collector returns the debt to the creditor, who places it with XYZ debt collector. XYZ debt collector communicates with the consumer about the debt using the email address obtained by ABC debt collector and used by EFG debt collector. Assuming that the requirements of § 1006.6(d)(3)(ii) are satisfied, XYZ debt collector may have a bona fide error defense to civil liability for any unintentional third-party disclosure that occurs during that communication because a prior debt collector (i.e., ABC debt collector) obtained the email address in accordance with the procedures in § 1006.6(d)(4)(i) or (ii), the immediately prior debt collector (i.e., EFG debt collector) used the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt, and the consumer did not opt out of such communications by EFG debt collector.

iii. After obtaining a consumer's email address in accordance with the procedures in § 1006.6(d)(4)(i) or (ii), ABC debt collector communicates with the consumer about the debt using that email address and the consumer does not opt out. ABC debt collector returns the debt to the creditor, who places it with EFG debt collector, who chooses not to communicate with the consumer by email. EFG debt collector returns the debt to the creditor, who places it with XYZ debt collector. XYZ debt collector communicates with the consumer about the debt using the email address obtained by ABC debt collector. Section 1006.6(d)(4)(iii) does not provide XYZ debt collector with a bona fide error defense to civil liability for any unintentional third-party disclosure that occurs during that communication because the immediately prior debt collector (i.e., EFG debt collector) did not use the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt.

(A) Any prior debt collector obtained the email address in accordance with paragraph (d)(4)(i) or (ii) of this section;

(B) The immediately prior debt collector used the email address to communicate with the consumer about the debt; and

(C) The consumer did not opt out of such communications.

(5) Procedures for telephone numbers for text messages. For purposes of paragraph (d)(3)(i) of this section, a debt collector may send a text message to a telephone number if:

Official interpretation of 6(d)(5) Procedures for telephone numbers for text messages.

1. Complete and accurate database. Section 1006.6(d)(5)(i) and (ii) provides that, for purposes of § 1006.6(d)(3)(i), a debt collector may send a text message to a telephone number if, among other things, the debt collector confirms, using a complete and accurate database, that the telephone number has not been reassigned from the consumer to another user. For purposes of § 1006.6(d)(5)(i) and (ii), the database established by the FCC in In re Advanced Methods to Target & Eliminate Unlawful Robocalls (33 FCC Rcd. 12024 (Dec. 12, 2018)) qualifies as a complete and accurate database, as does any commercially available database that is substantially similar in terms of completeness and accuracy to the FCC's database.

(i) The consumer used the telephone number to communicate with the debt collector about the debt by text message, the consumer has not since opted out of text message communications to that telephone number, and within the past 60 days either:

Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(d)(5)(i).

1. Response to telephone call by consumer. Section 1006.6(d)(5)(i) provides that, for purposes of § 1006.6(d)(3)(i), a debt collector may send a text message to a telephone number if, among other things, the consumer used the telephone number to communicate by text message with the debt collector about the debt. Section 1006.6(d)(5)(i) does not apply if the consumer used the telephone number to communicate only by telephone call with the debt collector about the debt.

(A) The consumer sent the text message described in paragraph (d)(5)(i) of this section or a new text message to the debt collector from that telephone number; or

(B) The debt collector confirmed, using a complete and accurate database, that the telephone number has not been reassigned from the consumer to another user since the date of the consumer's most recent text message to the debt collector from that telephone number; or

(ii) The debt collector received directly from the consumer prior consent to use the telephone number to communicate with the consumer about the debt by text message, the consumer has not since withdrawn that consent, and within the past 60 days the debt collector either:

Official interpretation of Paragraph 6(d)(5)(ii).

1. Prior consent. See comment 6(d)(4)(i)(B)-1 for guidance concerning how a consumer may provide prior consent directly to a debt collector. See comment 6(d)(4)(i)(B)-2 for guidance concerning when a debt collector may treat a consumer who provides a telephone number for text messages as having consented directly to the debt collector.

(A) Obtained the prior consent described in paragraph (d)(5)(ii) of this section or renewed consent from the consumer; or

(B) Confirmed, using a complete and accurate database, that the telephone number has not been reassigned from the consumer to another user since the date of the consumer's most recent consent to use that telephone number to communicate about the debt by text message.

(e) Opt-out notice for electronic communications or attempts to communicate. A debt collector who communicates or attempts to communicate with a consumer electronically in connection with the collection of a debt using a specific email address, telephone number for text messages, or other electronic-medium address must include in such communication or attempt to communicate a clear and conspicuous statement describing a reasonable and simple method by which the consumer can opt out of further electronic communications or attempts to communicate by the debt collector to that address or telephone number. The debt collector may not require, directly or indirectly, that the consumer, in order to opt out, pay any fee to the debt collector or provide any information other than the consumer's opt-out preferences and the email address, telephone number for text messages, or other electronic-medium address subject to the opt-out request.

Official interpretation of 6(e) Opt-out notice for electronic communications or attempts to communicate.

1. In general. Section 1006.6(e) requires a debt collector who communicates or attempts to communicate with a consumer electronically in connection with the collection of a debt using a specific email address, telephone number for text messages, or other electronic-medium address to include in such communication or attempt to communicate a clear and conspicuous statement describing a reasonable and simple method by which the consumer can opt out of further electronic communications or attempts to communicate by the debt collector to that address or telephone number. See comment 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)-1 for guidance on the meaning of clear and conspicuous. See comment 6(d)(4)(ii)(C)(4)-1 for guidance on the meaning of reasonable and simple. The following examples illustrate the rule.

i. Assume that a debt collector sends a text message to a consumer's mobile telephone number. The text message includes the following instruction: Reply STOP to stop texts to this telephone number. Assuming that it is readily noticeable and legible to consumers, this instruction constitutes a clear and conspicuous statement describing a reasonable and simple method to opt out of receiving further text messages from the debt collector to that telephone number consistent with § 1006.6(e). No minimum type size is mandated.

ii. Assume that a debt collector sends the consumer an email that includes a hyperlink labeled: Click here to opt out of further emails to this email address. Assuming that it is readily noticeable and legible to consumers, this instruction constitutes a clear and conspicuous statement describing a reasonable and simple method to opt out of receiving further emails from the debt collector to that email address consistent with § 1006.6(e). No minimum type size is mandated.

iii. Assume that a debt collector sends the consumer an email that includes instructions in a textual format explaining that the consumer may opt out of receiving further email communications from the debt collector to that email address by replying with the word stop in the subject line. Assuming that it is readily noticeable and legible to consumers, this instruction constitutes a clear and conspicuous statement describing a reasonable and simple method to opt out of receiving further emails from the debt collector to that email address consistent with § 1006.6(e). No minimum type size is mandated.

§ 1006.9 Debt Collection Practices in Connection with the Global COVID-19 Pandemic

(a) Purpose and coverage.[7] The purpose of this subpart is to eliminate certain abusive debt collection practices by debt collectors related to the global COVID-19 pandemic, to ensure that debt collectors who refrain from using such abusive debt collection practices are not competitively disadvantaged, and to promote consistent State action to protect consumers against such debt collection abuses. This subpart applies to debt collectors, as defined in FDCPA section 803(6), 15 U.S.C. 1692(a)(6), other than a person excluded from coverage by section 1029(a) of the Consumer Financial Protection Act of 2010, title X of the Dodd-Frank Act, 12 U.S.C. 5519(a).

(b) Definitions. For purposes of this subpart, the following definitions apply:

(1) The terms consumer, debt, and debt collector have the same meaning given to them in FDCPA section 803, 15 U.S.C. 1692a.

(2) The term CDC Order means the order issued by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention titled Temporary Halt in Residential Evictions to Prevent the Further Spread of COVID–19 (86 FR 16731 (Mar. 31, 2021)), as extended by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

(3) The term eviction notice means the earliest of any written notice that the laws of any State, locality, territory, or tribal area require to be provided to a consumer before an eviction action against the consumer may be filed.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 9(b)(3).

1. Examples. Section 1006.9(b)(3) defines eviction notice as the earliest of any written notice that the laws of any State, locality, territory, or tribal area require to be provided to a consumer before an eviction action against the consumer may be filed. The term eviction notice includes, for example, notices to quit, notices to pay rent or quit, and notices to terminate tenancy.

(c) Prohibitions. During the effective period of the CDC Order, a debt collector collecting a debt in any jurisdiction in which the CDC Order applies must not, in connection with the collection of that debt:

(1) File an eviction action for non-payment of rent against a consumer to whom the CDC Order reasonably might apply without disclosing to that consumer clearly and conspicuously in writing, on the date that the debt collector provides the consumer with an eviction notice or, if no eviction notice is required by applicable law, on the date that the eviction action is filed, that the consumer may be eligible for temporary protection from eviction under the CDC Order; or Official interpretation of Paragraph 9(c)(1).

1. Eviction action for non-payment of rent. Section 1006.9(c)(1) provides that, during the effective period of the CDC Order, a debt collector collecting a debt in any jurisdiction in which the CDC Order applies must not file an eviction action for non-payment of rent against a consumer to whom the CDC Order reasonably might apply without making the disclosure described in § 1006.9(c)(1). A debt collector does not file an eviction action for non-payment of rent if the debt collector files the eviction action based solely on the consumer engaging in one or more of the following actions: criminal activity while on the premises; threatening the health or safety of other residents; damaging or posing an immediate and significant risk of damage to property; violating any applicable building code, health ordinance, or similar regulation relating to health and safety; or violating any other contractual obligation, other than the timely payment of rent or similar housing-related payment (including non-payment or late payment of fees, penalties, or interest).

2. Reasonably might apply. Section 1006.9(c)(1) requires a debt collector to provide the disclosure described in § 1006.9(c)(1) to any consumer to whom the CDC Order reasonably might apply. A consumer to whom the CDC Order reasonably might apply is a consumer who reasonably might be eligible to be a covered person as defined in the CDC Order. A consumer is not reasonably eligible to be a covered person if the debt collector has knowledge that a consumer is not eligible for protection under the CDC Order. However, nothing in § 1006.9(c)(1) prohibits a debt collector from providing the disclosure to a consumer even if the consumer might not reasonably be eligible to be a covered person. A debt collector therefore may comply with the requirement to provide the disclosure to any consumer to whom the CDC Order reasonably might apply by, for example, providing the disclosure to each consumer against whom the debt collector files an eviction action for non-payment of rent. A debt collector does not violate FDCPA sections 807 (15 U.S.C. 1692e) or 808 (15 U.S.C. 1692f) merely because the debt collector provides the disclosure to consumers as described in this comment 9(c)(1)–2 even if the consumer is not reasonably eligible to be a covered person.

3. Provision of disclosure. Section 1006.9(c)(1) requires a debt collector to disclose to the consumer, on the date that the debt collector provides the consumer with an eviction notice or, if no eviction notice is required by applicable law, on the date that the eviction action is filed, that the consumer may be eligible for temporary protection from eviction under the CDC Order. A debt collector may satisfy this requirement by, for example, delivering the disclosure to the address that is the subject of eviction proceedings; the debt collector is not required to ensure that the consumer actually receives the disclosure. A debt collector may, but is not required to, provide the disclosure at the same time that the debt collector provides the consumer with any eviction notice or serves the consumer with any eviction action. For example, a debt collector may, but is not required to, include the disclosure in an envelope either on or with the eviction notice or in the same mailing in which the debt collector serves the consumer with an eviction action.

4. Frequency of disclosure. Section 1006.9(c)(1) does not require a debt collector to provide the disclosure described in § 1006.9(c)(1) more than once. However, nothing in § 1006.9(c)(1) prohibits a debt collector from providing the disclosure more than once, such as in each subsequent communication with the 7 Section 1006.9 took effect on May 3, 2021, as a temporary rule, applying only during the effective period of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's Temporary Halt in Residential Evictions to Prevent the Further Spread of COVID-19. That order is no longer in effect and thus this rule provision also is no longer in effect. See § 7.4.11.2, supra.

consumer. In addition, a debt collector does not violate FDCPA sections 807 (15 U.S.C. 1692e) or 808 (15 U.S.C. 1692f) merely because the debt collector provides the disclosure more than once.

5. Sample language. Section 1006.9(c)(1) requires a debt collector to disclose that the consumer may be eligible for temporary protection from eviction under the CDC Order.

i. A debt collector may use, but is not required to use, the following language to satisfy § 1006.9(c)(1): "Because of the global COVID-19 pandemic, you may be eligible for temporary protection from eviction under Federal law. Learn the steps you should take now: visit www.cfpb.gov/eviction or call a housing counselor at 800-569-4287." A debt collector does not violate FDCPA sections 807 (15 U.S.C. 1692e) or 808 (15 U.S.C. 1692f) merely because the debt collector provides the sample language in this comment 9(c)(1)–5.i to a consumer in a jurisdiction in which the CDC Order does not apply.

ii. Alternatively, a debt collector may use, but is not required to use, the following language to satisfy § 1006.9(c)(1): "Because of the global COVID-19 pandemic, you may be eligible for temporary protection from eviction under the laws of your State, territory, locality, or tribal area, or under Federal law. Learn the steps you should take now: visit www.cfpb.gov/eviction or call a housing counselor at 800-569-4287." A debt collector does not violate FDCPA sections 807 (15 U.S.C. 1692e) or 808 (15 U.S.C. 1692f) merely because the debt collector provides the sample language in this comment 9(c)(1)–5.ii to a consumer in a jurisdiction in which only the CDC Order applies or in which the CDC Order does not apply.

6. Clear and conspicuous. A debt collector must provide the disclosure described in § 1006.9(c)(1) clearly and conspicuously in writing. Clear and conspicuous means readily understandable. The location and type size also must be readily noticeable and legible to consumers, although no minimum type size is mandated.

(2) Falsely represent or imply to a consumer that the consumer is ineligible for temporary protection from eviction under the CDC Order.

§ 1006.10 Acquisition of location information.

(a) Definition. The term location information means a consumer's:

Official interpretation of 10(a) Definition.

1. Location information about deceased consumers. If a consumer obligated or allegedly obligated to pay any debt is deceased, location information includes the information described in § 1006.10(a) for a person who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate, as described in § 1006.6(a)(4) and its associated commentary.

(1) Place of abode and telephone number at such place; or
(2) Place of employment.

(b) Form and content of location communications. A debt collector communicating with a person other than the consumer for the purpose of acquiring location information must:

(1) Identify himself or herself individually by name, state that he or she is confirming or correcting the consumer's location information, and, only if expressly requested, identify his or her employer;
(2) Not state that the consumer owes any debt;

Official interpretation of Paragraph 10(b)(2).

1. Executors, administrators, or personal representatives of a deceased consumer's estate. Section 1006.10(b)(2) prohibits a debt collector who is communicating with any person other than the consumer for the purpose of acquiring location information about the consumer from stating that the consumer owes any debt. If the consumer obligated or allegedly obligated to pay the debt is deceased, and the debt collector is attempting to locate the person who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate, the debt collector does not violate § 1006.10(b)(2) by stating that the debt collector is seeking to identify and locate the person who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate. The debt collector may also state that the debt collector is seeking to identify and locate the person handling the financial affairs of the deceased consumer. For more on executors, administrators, and personal representatives, see § 1006.6(a)(4) and its associated commentary.

(3) Not communicate by postcard;
(4) Not use any language or symbol on any envelope or in the contents of any communication by mail indicating that the debt collector is in the debt collection business or that the communication relates to the collection of a debt; and
(5) After the debt collector knows the consumer is represented by an attorney with regard to the subject debt and has knowledge of, or can readily ascertain, such attorney's name and address, not communicate with any person other than that attorney, unless the attorney fails to respond to the debt collector's communication within a reasonable period of time.

(c) Frequency of location communications. In addition to complying with § 1006.14(b)(1), a debt collector communicating with any person other than the consumer for the purpose of acquiring location information about the consumer must not communicate more than once with such person unless requested to do so by such person, or unless the debt collector reasonably believes that the earlier response of such person is erroneous or incomplete and that such person now has correct or complete location information.

§ 1006.14 Harassing, oppressive, or abusive conduct.

(a) In general. A debt collector must not engage in any conduct the natural consequence of which is to harass, oppress, or abuse any person in connection with the collection of a debt, including, but not limited to, the conduct described in paragraphs (b) through (h) of this section.

Official interpretation of 14(a) In general.

1. General prohibition. Section 1006.14(a), which implements FDCPA section 806 (15 U.S.C. 1692d), sets forth a general standard that prohibits a debt collector from engaging in any conduct the natural consequence of which is to harass, oppress, or abuse any person in connection with the collection of a debt. The general prohibition covers the specific conduct described in § 1006.14(b) through (h), as well as any conduct by the debt collector that is not specifically prohibited by § 1006.14(b) through (h) but the natural consequence of which is to harass, oppress, or abuse any person in connection with the collection of a debt. Such conduct can occur regardless of the communication media the debt collector uses, including in-person interactions, telephone calls, audio recordings, paper documents, mail, email, text messages, social media, or other electronic media, even if not specifically addressed by § 1006.14(b) through (h). The following example illustrates the rule.

i. Assume that, in connection with the collection of a debt, a debt collector sends a consumer numerous, unsolicited text messages per day for several consecutive days. The consumer does not respond. Assume further that the debt collector does not communicate or attempt to communicate with the consumer using any other communication medium and that, by sending the text messages, the debt collector has not violated § 1006.14(b) through (h). Even though the debt collector's conduct does not violate any specific prohibition under § 1006.14(b) through (h), it is likely that the natural consequence of the debt collector's text messages is to harass, oppress, or abuse the person receiving the text messages: when such natural consequence occurs, the debt collector has violated § 1006.14(a) and FDCPA section 806.

2. Cumulative effect of conduct. Whether a debt collector's conduct violates the general standard in § 1006.14(a) may depend on the cumulative effect of the debt collector's conduct through any communication medium the debt collector uses, including in-person interactions, telephone calls, audio recordings, paper documents, mail, email, text messages, social media, or other electronic media. Depending on the facts and circumstances, conduct that on its own would violate neither the general prohibition in § 1006.14(a), nor any specific prohibition in § 1006.14(b) through (h), nonetheless may violate § 1006.14(a) when such conduct is evaluated cumulatively with other conduct. The following example illustrates the rule as applied to a debt collector who uses multiple communication media to communicate or attempt to communicate with a person.

i. Assume that a debt collector places seven unanswered telephone calls within seven consecutive days to a consumer in connection with the collection of a debt. During this same period, the debt collector also sends multiple additional unsolicited emails about the debt to the consumer. The consumer does not respond. The frequency of the debt collector's telephone calls during the seven-day period does not exceed the telephone call frequencies described in § 1006.14(b)(2)(i), so the debt collector is presumed to comply with § 1006.14(b)(1). Assume further that no evidence is offered to rebut the presumption of compliance, such that the debt collector complies with § 1006.14(b)(1). Also assume that, for purposes of this illustrative example only, the frequency of the debt collector's emails alone does not violate § 1006.14(a). It nevertheless is likely that the cumulative effect of the debt collector's telephone calls and emails is harassment; when such natural consequence occurs, the debt collector has violated § 1006.14(a) and FDCPA section 806.

(b) Repeated or continuous telephone calls or telephone conversations—

Official interpretation of 14(b) Repeated or continuous telephone calls or telephone conversations.

1. Placing telephone calls repeatedly or continuously. Section 1006.14(b) prohibits a debt collector from, in connection with the collection of a debt, placing telephone calls or engaging any person in telephone conversation repeatedly or continuously with intent to annoy, abuse, or harass any person at the called number, and it describes when a debt collector is presumed to have complied with or violated that prohibition. For purposes of § 1006.14(b)(1) through (4), placing a telephone call includes conveying a ringless voicemail but does not include sending an electronic message (e.g., a text message or an email) that may be received on a mobile telephone.

(1) In general. In connection with the collection of a debt, a debt collector must not place telephone calls or engage any person in telephone conversation repeatedly or continuously with intent to annoy, abuse, or harass any person at the called number.

Official interpretation of 14(b)(1) In general.

1. Effect of compliance. A debt collector who complies with § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5) (15 U.S.C. 1692d(5) complies with § 1006.14(a) and FDCPA section 806 (15 U.S.C. 1692d) solely with respect to the frequency of its telephone calls. The debt collector nevertheless could violate § 1006.14(a) and FDCPA section 806 if the natural consequence of another aspect of the debt collector's telephone calls, unrelated to frequency, is to harass, oppress, or abuse any person in connection with the collection of a debt. See also comment 14(a)-2 regarding the cumulative effect of the debt collector's conduct.

2. Example. Assume that a debt collector communicates or attempts to communicate with a consumer about a particular debt only by telephone. The debt collector does not exceed either of the telephone call frequencies described in § 1006.14(b)(2)(i). Under § 1006.14(b)(2)(i), the debt collector is presumed to comply with § 1006.14(b)(1). Assume, further, that no evidence is offered to rebut that presumption of compliance. Pursuant to § 1006.14(b)(1), the debt collector complies with § 1006.14(a) and FDCPA section 806, but only with respect to the frequency of its telephone calls. Assume, however, that one of the debt collector's telephone calls results in the debt collector leaving a voicemail that contains obscene language. Even though the debt collector does not violate § 1006.14(a) and FDCPA section 806 based solely on the frequency of the telephone calls, the debt collector's obscene voicemail would violate § 1006.14(a) and (d) and FDCPA section 806 and 806(2) (15 U.S.C. 1692, 1692d(2)).

(2) Telephone call frequencies; presumptions of compliance and violation.

(i) Subject to the exclusions in paragraph (b)(3) of this section, a debt collector is presumed to comply with paragraph (b)(1) of this section and FDCPA section 806(5) (15 U.S.C. 1692d(5)) if the debt collector places a telephone call to a particular person in connection with the collection of a particular debt neither:

Official interpretation of Paragraph 14(b)(2)(i).

1. Presumption of compliance; examples. Section 1006.14(b)(2)(i) provides that a debt collector is presumed to comply with § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5) (15 U.S.C. 1692d(5)) if the debt collector places a telephone call to a particular person in connection with the collection of a particular debt neither: more than seven times within seven consecutive days (§ 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(A)); nor within a period of seven consecutive days after having had a telephone conversation with the person in connection with the collection of such debt (§ 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(B)). For the presumption of compliance to apply, the debt collector's telephone call frequencies must not exceed either prong of § 1006.14(b)(2)(i). The telephone call frequencies are subject to the exclusions in § 1006.14(b)(3). In addition, for purposes of § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(B), the date of the telephone conversation is the first day of the seven-consecutive-day period. The following examples illustrate the rule.

i. On Wednesday, April 1, a debt collector first attempts to communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of a credit card debt by placing a telephone call and leaving a limited-content message. Between Thursday, April 2, and Tuesday, April 7, the debt collector places six more telephone calls to the consumer about the debt, all of which go unanswered. As of Tuesday, April 7, the debt collector has placed seven telephone calls to the consumer in connection with the collection of the credit card debt within the period of seven consecutive days that started on Wednesday, April 1. Assume the debt collector does not place any additional telephone calls about the debt until Wednesday, April 8. Under § 1006.14(b)(2)(i), the debt collector is presumed to comply with § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5).

ii. On Thursday, August 13, a consumer places a telephone call to, and initiates a telephone conversation with, a debt collector regarding a particular debt. Assume that the debt collector does not place a telephone call to the consumer in connection with the collection of that debt again prior to Thursday, August 20. The debt collector is presumed to comply with § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5).

iii. On Tuesday, October 6, a debt collector first attempts to communicate with a particular third party for the purpose of acquiring location information about a consumer by placing a telephone call to that third party. The call is unanswered. The debt collector places up to six more unanswered telephone calls to that third party for the purpose of acquiring location information about the consumer through Monday, October 12. The debt collector is presumed to comply with § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5). See § 1006.10(c) for further guidance concerning when a debt collector is prohibited from communicating with a person other than the consumer for the purpose of acquiring location information.

2. Factors to rebut the presumption of compliance. To rebut the presumption of compliance, it must be proven that a debt collector who did not place a telephone call in excess of either of the telephone call frequencies described in § 1006.14(b)(2)(i) nevertheless placed a telephone call or engaged a person in telephone conversation repeatedly or continuously with intent to annoy, abuse, or harass any person at the called number. For purposes of determining whether the presumption of compliance has been rebutted, it is assumed that debt collectors intend the natural consequence of their actions. Comments 14(b)(2)(i)-2.i through .iv provide a non-exhaustive list of factors that may rebut the presumption of compliance. The factors may be considered either individually or in combination with one another (or other non-specified factors). The factors may be viewed in light of any other relevant facts and circumstances and therefore may apply to varying degrees. Factors that may rebut the presumption of compliance include:

i. The frequency and pattern of telephone calls the debt collector places to a person, including the intervals between them. The considerations relevant to this factor include whether the debt collector placed telephone calls to a person in rapid succession (e.g., two unanswered telephone calls to the same telephone number within five minutes) or in a highly concentrated manner (e.g., seven telephone calls to the same telephone number within one day). For example, assume the same facts as in comment 14(b)(2)(i)-1.i, except assume that, after the debt collector placed the first telephone call to the consumer about the credit card debt on Wednesday, April 1, the debt collector placed six additional telephone calls to the consumer about that debt on Friday, April 3. Under § 1006.14(b)(2)(i), the debt collector is presumed to comply with § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5), but the high concentration of telephone calls on Friday, April 3, is a factor that may rebut the presumption of compliance.

ii. The frequency and pattern of any voicemails that the debt collector leaves for a person, including the intervals between them. The considerations relevant to this factor include whether the debt collector left voicemails for a person in rapid succession (e.g., two voicemails within five minutes left at the same telephone number) or in a highly concentrated manner (e.g., seven voicemails left at the same telephone number within one day).

iii. The content of a person's prior communications with the debt collector. Among the considerations relevant to this factor are whether the person previously informed the debt collector, for example, that the person did not wish to be contacted again about the particular debt, that the person was refusing to pay the particular debt, or that the person did not owe the particular debt. This factor also includes a consumer's cease communication notification described in § 1006.6(c) and a consumer's request under § 1006.14(h) that the debt collector not use telephone calls to communicate or attempt to communicate with the consumer. The amount of time elapsed since any such prior communications also may be relevant to this factor.

iv. The debt collector's conduct in prior communications or attempts to communicate with the person. Among the considerations relevant to this factor are whether, during a prior communication or attempt to communicate with a person, the debt collector, for example, used obscene, profane, or otherwise abusive language (see § 1006.14(d)), used or threatened to use violence or other criminal means to harm the person (see § 1006.14(c)), or called at an inconvenient time or place (see § 1006.6(b)(1)). The amount of time elapsed since any such prior communications or attempts to communicate also may be relevant to this factor.

3. Misdirected telephone calls. Section 1006.14(b)(2)(i) provides that a debt collector is presumed to comply with § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5) (15 U.S.C. 1692d(5)) if the debt collector's telephone call frequencies do not exceed the telephone call frequencies described in § 1006.14(b)(2)(i). If, within a period of seven consecutive days, a debt collector attempts to communicate with a particular person by placing telephone calls to a particular telephone number, and the debt collector then learns that the telephone number is not that person's number, the telephone calls that the debt collector made to that number are not considered to have been telephone calls placed to that person during that seven-consecutive-day period for purposes of § 1006.14(b)(2)(i). For example:

i. Assume that a debt collector first attempts to communicate with a consumer on Monday, and again on Wednesday, by placing one unanswered telephone call to a particular telephone number on each of those days. On Thursday, the debt collector learns that the telephone number belongs to someone else and that the consumer does not answer telephone calls to that number. For purposes of § 1006.14(b)(2)(i), the debt collector has not yet placed any telephone calls to that consumer during that seven-consecutive-day period.

(A) More than seven times within seven consecutive days; nor

(B) Within a period of seven consecutive days after having had a telephone conversation with the person in connection with the collection of such debt. The date of the telephone conversation is the first day of the seven-consecutive-day period.

(ii) Subject to the exclusions in paragraph (b)(3) of this section, a debt collector is presumed to violate paragraph (b)(1) of this section and FDCPA section 806(5) if the debt collector places a telephone call to a particular person in connection with the collection of a particular debt in excess of either of the telephone call frequencies described in paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 14(b)(2)(ii).

1. Presumption of a violation; examples. Section 1006.14(b)(2)(ii) provides that a debt collector is presumed to violate § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5) (15 U.S.C. 1692d(5)) if the debt collector places a telephone call to a particular person in connection with the collection of a particular debt in excess of either of the telephone call frequencies described in § 1006.14(b)(2)(i). The telephone call frequencies are subject to the exclusions in § 1006.14(b)(3). The following examples illustrate the rule.

i. On Wednesday, April 1, a debt collector first attempts to communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of a mortgage debt by placing a telephone call and leaving a limited-content message. On each of the next three business days (i.e., on Thursday, April 2, Friday, April 3, and Monday, April 6), the debt collector places two additional telephone calls to the consumer about the debt, all of which go unanswered. On Tuesday, April 7, the debt collector places an additional telephone call to the consumer about the debt. The debt collector has placed a total of eight telephone calls to the consumer about the debt during the seven-day period starting Wednesday, April 1. None of the calls was subject to the exclusions in § 1006.14(b)(3). The debt collector is presumed to violate § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5).

ii. On Tuesday, August 11, a debt collector first attempts to communicate with a consumer in connection with the collection of a credit card debt by placing a telephone call to the consumer that the consumer does not answer. On Friday, August 14, the debt collector again places a telephone call to the consumer and has a telephone conversation with the consumer in connection with the collection of the debt. Subject to the exclusions in § 1006.14(b)(3), the debt collector is presumed to violate § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5) if the debt collector places a telephone call to the consumer in connection with the collection of that debt again prior to Friday, August 21.

2. Factors to rebut the presumption of a violation. To rebut the presumption of a violation, it must be proven that a debt collector who placed telephone calls in excess of either of the frequencies described in § 1006.14(b)(2)(i) nevertheless did not place a telephone call or engage any person in telephone conversation repeatedly or continuously with intent to annoy, abuse, or harass any person at the called number. For purposes of determining whether the presumption of a violation has been rebutted, it is assumed that debt collectors intend the natural consequence of their actions. Comments 14(b)(2)(ii)-2.i through .iv provide a non-exhaustive list of factors that may rebut the presumption of a violation. The factors may be considered either individually or in combination with one another (or other non-specified factors). The factors may be viewed in light of any other relevant facts and circumstances and therefore may apply to varying degrees. Factors that may rebut the presumption of a violation include:

i. Whether a debt collector placed a telephone call to comply with, or as required by, applicable law. For example, assume the same facts as in comment 14(b)(2)(ii)-1.i, except assume that the debt collector placed the final telephone call of the seven-consecutive-day period to inform the consumer of available loss mitigation options in compliance with the Bureau's mortgage servicing rules under Regulation X, 12 CFR 1024.39(a). The debt collector's compliance with applicable law is a factor that may rebut the presumption of a violation.

ii. Whether a debt collector placed a telephone call that was directly related to active litigation involving the collection of a particular debt. For example, assume the same facts as in comment 14(b)(2)(ii)-1.ii, except assume that, after the debt collector and the consumer had a telephone conversation about the credit card debt on Friday, August 14, the debt collector placed another telephone call to the consumer before Friday, August 21, to complete a court-ordered communication with the consumer about the debt, or as part of negotiations to settle active debt collection litigation regarding the debt. The direct relationship between the additional telephone call and the active debt collection litigation is a factor that may rebut the presumption of a violation.

iii. Whether a debt collector placed a telephone call in response to a consumer's request for additional information when the exclusion in § 1006.14(b)(3)(i) for telephone calls made with the consumer's prior consent given directly to the debt collector did not apply. For example, assume the same facts as in comment 14(b)(2)(ii)-1.ii, except assume that, during the telephone conversation about the credit card debt on Friday, August 14, the consumer told the debt collector that the consumer would like more information about the amount of the debt but that the consumer could not talk at that moment. The consumer ended the telephone call before the debt collector could seek prior consent under § 1006.14(b)(3)(i) to call back with the requested information. The debt collector placed another telephone call to the consumer prior to Friday, August 21, to provide the requested information. The fact that the debt collector placed the additional telephone call in response to the consumer's request is a factor that may rebut the presumption of a violation.

iv. Whether a debt collector placed a telephone call to convey information to the consumer that, as shown through evidence, would provide the consumer with an opportunity to avoid a demonstrably negative effect relating to the collection of the particular debt, where the negative effect was not in the debt collector's control, and where time was of the essence. For example, in each of the following three scenarios, assume the same facts as in comment 14(b)(2)(ii)-1.ii, and also assume that:

A. During the telephone conversation about the credit card debt on Friday, August 14, the debt collector and the consumer engaged in a lengthy conversation regarding settlement terms, and, toward the end of the conversation, the telephone call dropped. The debt collector immediately placed an additional telephone call to the consumer to complete the conversation. The fact that the debt collector placed the telephone call to permit the debt collector and the consumer to complete the conversation about settlement terms, which provided the consumer an opportunity to avoid a demonstrably negative effect that was not in the debt collector's control (i.e., having to repeat a substantive conversation with a potentially different representative of the debt collector) and where time was of the essence (i.e., to prevent the delay of settlement negotiations by seven days) is a factor that may rebut the presumption of a violation.

B. The consumer previously entered into a payment plan with the debt collector regarding the credit card debt. The conditions for the payment plan were set by the creditor, and among those conditions is that only the creditor, in its sole discretion, may approve waivers of late fees. On Monday, August 17, the debt collector learned that the consumer's payment failed to process, and the applicable grace period was set to expire on Tuesday, August 18. The debt collector placed a telephone call to the consumer on Monday to remind the consumer that a late fee would be applied by the creditor for non-payment unless the consumer made the payment by the next day. The fact that the debt collector placed the telephone call to alert the consumer to the pending penalty, giving the consumer an opportunity to avoid a demonstrably negative effect that was not in the debt collector's control and where time was of the essence, is a factor that may rebut the presumption of a violation.

C. On Monday, August 17, the debt collector placed a telephone call to the consumer to offer the consumer a one-time only discount on the payment of the credit card debt. The debt collector stated that the offer would expire the next day when, in fact, the debt collector could have offered the same or a similar discount through the end of August. Because the negative effect on the consumer was in the debt collector's control, the discount offer is not a factor that may rebut the presumption of a violation.

(3) Certain telephone calls excluded from the telephone call frequencies. Telephone calls placed to a person do not count toward the telephone call frequencies described in paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section if they are:

(i) Placed with such person's prior consent given directly to the debt collector and within a period no longer than seven consecutive days after receiving the prior consent, with the date the debt collector receives prior consent counting as the first day of the seven-consecutive-day period;

Official interpretation of Paragraph 14(b)(3)(i).

1. Prior consent. Section 1006.14(b)(3)(i) excludes from the telephone call frequencies described in § 1006.14(b)(2) certain telephone calls placed to a person who gives prior consent. See § 1006.6(b)(4)(i) and its associated commentary for guidance about giving prior consent directly to a debt collector. Nothing in § 1006.14(b)(3)(i) regarding prior consent for telephone call frequencies permits a debt collector to communicate, or attempt to communicate, with a consumer as prohibited by §§ 1006.6(b) and 1006.14(h).

2. Duration of prior consent. For purposes of § 1006.14(b)(3)(i), if a person gives prior consent for additional telephone calls about a particular debt directly to a debt collector, any telephone calls that the debt collector thereafter places to the person about that particular debt do not count toward the telephone call frequencies described in § 1006.14(b)(2) for a period of up to seven consecutive days. A person's prior consent may expire before the conclusion of the seven-consecutive-day period. A person's prior consent expires when any of the following occurs: (1) the person consented to the additional telephone calls for a shorter time period and such time period has ended; (2) the person revokes such prior consent; or (3) the debt collector has a telephone conversation with the person regarding the particular debt.

3. Examples. The following examples illustrate how § 1006.14(b)(3)(i) applies:

i. On Friday, April 3, a debt collector places a telephone call to a consumer. During the ensuing telephone conversation in connection with the collection of a debt, the consumer tells the debt collector to call back on Monday. Absent an exception, under § 1006.14(b)(2)(ii), the debt collector would be presumed to violate § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5) (15 U.S.C. 1692d(5)) if the debt collector called the consumer on Monday, April 6, because the additional telephone call would exceed the frequency described in § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(B). Under § 1006.14(b)(3)(i), however, in the scenario described (and absent any other facts), the debt collector could, pursuant to the consumer's prior consent, place telephone calls to the consumer on Monday, April 6, and not lose a presumption of compliance with § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5).

ii. Assume the same facts as in the preceding example, except that the consumer does not specify a particular day the debt collector may call back. Assume further that, on Monday, April 6, the debt collector calls the consumer back and has a telephone conversation with the consumer. The exception in § 1006.14(b)(3)(i) does not apply to subsequent telephone calls placed by the debt collector to the consumer, absent additional prior consent from the consumer. For example, if the debt collector, without additional prior consent, placed a telephone call to the consumer on Wednesday, April 8, that telephone call would count toward the telephone call frequencies described in § 1006.14(b)(2), and, pursuant to § 1006.14(b)(2)(ii), the debt collector would be presumed to violate § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5).

iii. Between Monday, June 1, and Wednesday, June 3, a debt collector places three unanswered telephone calls to a consumer in connection with the collection of a debt. Also on Wednesday, June 3, the debt collector sends the consumer an email message in connection with the collection of the debt. The consumer responds by email on Thursday, June 4, requesting additional information about available repayment options related to the debt and writes, You can call me at 123-456-7891 to discuss the repayment options. The debt collector receives the consumer's prior consent by email on Thursday, June 4, and thereafter places eight unanswered telephone calls to the consumer between Monday, June 8, and Wednesday, June 10. Because the consumer provided prior consent directly to the debt collector, the exclusion in § 1006.14(b)(3)(i) applies to the eight telephone calls placed by the debt collector during the seven-consecutive-day period that began with receipt of the consumer's consent on Thursday, June 4. Those telephone calls therefore do not count toward the telephone call frequencies described in § 1006.14(b)(2)(i). However, any telephone calls placed by the debt collector after the end of the seven-day period (i.e., on or after Thursday, June 11) would count toward the telephone call frequencies described in § 1006.14(b)(2)(i), unless the consumer again gives prior consent directly to the debt collector.

(ii) Not connected to the dialed number; or Official interpretation of Paragraph 14(b)(3)(ii).

1. Unconnected telephone calls. Section 1006.14(b)(3)(ii) provides that telephone calls placed to a person do not count toward the telephone call frequencies described in § 1006.14(b)(2)(i) if they do not connect to the dialed number. A debt collector's telephone call does not connect to the dialed number if, for example, the debt collector receives a busy signal or an indication that the dialed number is not in service. Conversely, a telephone call placed to a person counts toward the telephone call frequencies described in § 1006.14(b)(2)(i) if it connects to the dialed number, unless an exclusion in § 1006.14(b)(3) applies. A debt collector's telephone call connects to the dialed number if, for example, the telephone call is answered, even if it subsequently drops; if the telephone call causes a telephone to ring at the dialed number but no one answers it; or if the telephone call is connected to a voicemail or other recorded message, even if it does not cause a telephone to ring and even if the debt collector is unable to leave a voicemail.

(iii) Placed to the persons described in § 1006.6(d)(1)(ii) through (vi).

(4) Definition. For purposes of this paragraph (b), particular debt means each of a consumer's debts in collection. However, in the case of student loan debts, the term particular debt means all student loan debts that a consumer owes or allegedly owes that were serviced under a single account number at the time the debts were obtained by a debt collector.

Official interpretation of 14(b)(4) Definition.

1. Particular debt. Section 1006.14(b)(2) establishes presumptions of compliance and violation with respect to § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5) (15 U.S.C. 1692d(5)) based on the frequency with which a debt collector places telephone calls to, or engages in telephone conversation with, a person in connection with the collection of a particular debt. Section 1006.14(b)(4) provides that, except in the case of student loan debt, the term particular debt means each of a consumer's debts in collection. For student loan debt, § 1006.14(b)(4) provides that the term particular debt means all student loan debts that a consumer owes or allegedly owes that were serviced under a single account number at the time the debts were obtained by a debt collector.

i. Placing a telephone call in connection with the collection of a particular debt. Under § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(A), if a debt collector places a telephone call to a person and initiates a conversation or leaves a voicemail about one particular debt, the debt collector counts the telephone call as a telephone call in connection with the collection of the particular debt, subject to the exclusions in § 1006.14(b)(3). If a debt collector places a telephone call to a person and initiates a conversation or leaves a voicemail about more than one particular debt, the debt collector counts the telephone call as a telephone call in connection with the collection of each such particular debt, subject to the exclusions in § 1006.14(b)(3). If a debt collector places a telephone call to a person but neither initiates a conversation about a particular debt nor leaves a voicemail that refers to a particular debt, or if the debt collector's telephone call is unanswered, the debt collector counts the telephone call as a telephone call in connection with the collection of at least one particular debt, unless an exclusion in § 1006.14(b)(3) applies.

ii. Engaging in a telephone conversation in connection with the collection of a particular debt. Under § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(B), if a debt collector and a person discuss one particular debt during a telephone conversation, the debt collector has engaged in a telephone conversation in connection with the collection of the particular debt, regardless of which party initiated the discussion about the particular debt, subject to the exclusions in § 1006.14(b)(3). If a debt collector and a person discuss more than one particular debt during a telephone conversation, the debt collector has engaged in a telephone conversation in connection with the collection of each such particular debt, regardless of which party initiated the discussion about the particular debts, subject to the exclusions in § 1006.14(b)(3). If no particular debt is discussed during a telephone conversation between a debt collector and a person, the debt collector counts the conversation as a telephone conversation in connection with the collection of at least one particular debt, unless an exclusion in § 1006.14(b)(3) applies.

2. Examples. The following examples illustrate the rule.

i. A debt collector is attempting to collect a medical debt and two credit card debts (denominated A and B for this example) from the same consumer. Under § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(A), a debt collector may count an unanswered telephone call as one telephone call placed toward any one particular debt, even if the debt collector intended to discuss more than one particular debt had the telephone call resulted in a telephone conversation. Therefore, if the debt collector, within a period of seven consecutive days, places a total of 21 unanswered telephone calls, seven of which the debt collector counted as unanswered telephone calls to the consumer in connection with the collection of the medical debt, seven of which the debt collector counted as unanswered telephone calls to the consumer in connection with the collection of credit card debt A, and seven of which the debt collector counted as unanswered telephone calls to the consumer in connection with the collection of credit card debt B, the debt collector is presumed to comply with § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5), even if, for example, the debt collector intended to discuss both credit card debt A and credit card debt B had any of the telephone calls with respect to the credit card debts resulted in a telephone conversation.

ii. A debt collector is attempting to collect a medical debt and a credit card debt from the same consumer. The debt collector places a telephone call to the consumer, intending to discuss both particular debts, but the consumer does not answer, and the telephone call goes to voicemail. The debt collector leaves a limited-content message, as defined in § 1006.2(j). Because the limited-content message does not specifically refer to any particular debt, under § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(A), a debt collector may count the voicemail as one telephone call placed toward either of the particular debts, even though the debt collector intended to discuss both particular debts if the telephone call had resulted in a telephone conversation.

iii. A debt collector is attempting to collect a medical debt and a credit card debt from the same consumer. On Monday, November 9, the debt collector places a telephone call to, and engages in a telephone conversation with, the consumer solely in connection with the collection of the medical debt. The debt collector does not place any telephone calls to the consumer in connection with the collection of the credit card debt. Regarding the medical debt, under § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(A) and (B) respectively, the debt collector has placed a telephone call to, and has and engaged in a telephone conversation with, the consumer in connection with the collection of the particular debt, unless an exclusion in § 1006.14(b)(3) applies. Regarding the credit card debt, under § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(A) and (B) respectively, the debt collector has neither placed a telephone call to, nor engaged in a telephone conversation with, the consumer in connection with the collection of the particular debt.

iv. Assume the same facts as in the preceding example, except that on Monday, November 9, the debt collector engages in a telephone conversation with the consumer in connection with the collection of both the medical debt and the credit card debt. Under § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(A) and (B) respectively, the debt collector has placed a telephone call to, and has engaged in a telephone conversation with, the consumer in connection with the collection of both the medical debt and the credit card debt, unless an exclusion in § 1006.14(b)(3) applies.

v. A debt collector is attempting to collect a medical debt and a credit card debt from the same consumer. Beginning on Monday, November 9, and through Wednesday, November 11, the debt collector places two unanswered telephone calls to the consumer which the debt collector counts as telephone calls in connection with the collection of the medical debt, and four unanswered telephone calls to the consumer which the debt collector counts as telephone calls in connection with the collection of the credit card debt. On Thursday, November 12, the debt collector places a telephone call to, and engages in a general telephone conversation with, the consumer, but the debt collector and the consumer do not discuss either particular debt. Under § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(A) and (B) respectively, the debt collector may count the November 12 telephone call and ensuing conversation toward either the medical debt or the credit card debt. For example, if the debt collector counts the November 12 telephone call and ensuing conversation toward the collection of only the medical debt, then, during this time period, the debt collector has placed three telephone calls and has had one conversation in connection with the collection of the medical debt, and has placed four telephone calls and has had no conversations in connection with the collection of the credit card debt.

vi. A debt collector is attempting to collect a medical debt and a credit card debt from the same consumer. On Monday, November 9, the debt collector places a telephone call to, and initiates a telephone conversation with, the consumer about the collection of the medical debt. The consumer states that the consumer does not want to discuss the medical debt, and instead initiates a discussion about the credit card debt. Under § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(A) and (B) respectively, the debt collector has both placed a telephone call to, and engaged in a telephone conversation with, the consumer in connection with the collection of the medical debt, even though the consumer was unwilling to engage in the discussion initiated by the debt collector regarding the medical debt. Under § 1006.14(b)(2)(i)(A) and (B) respectively, the debt collector has not placed a telephone call to the consumer in connection with the credit card debt, but the debt collector has engaged in a telephone conversation in connection with the collection of the credit card debt, even though the consumer, not the debt collector, initiated the discussion about the credit card debt.

vii. A debt collector is attempting to collect three student loan debts that were serviced under a single account number at the time that they were obtained by a debt collector and that are owed or allegedly owed by the same consumer. All three debts are treated as a single debt for purposes of § 1006.14(b)(2). The debt collector is presumed to comply with § 1006.14(b)(1) and FDCPA section 806(5) if the debt collector places seven or fewer telephone calls within seven consecutive days to the consumer in connection with the collection of the three student loan debts, and the debt collector does not place a telephone call within a period of seven consecutive days after having had a telephone conversation with the consumer in connection with the collection of any one of the three student loan debts, unless an exclusion in § 1006.14(b)(3) applies.

(c) Violence or other criminal means. In connection with the collection of a debt, a debt collector must not use or threaten to use violence or other criminal means to harm the physical person, reputation, or property of any person.

(d) Obscene or profane language. In connection with the collection of a debt, a debt collector must not use obscene or profane language, or language the natural consequence of which is to abuse the hearer or reader.

(e) Debtor's list. In connection with the collection of a debt, a debt collector must not publish a list of consumers who allegedly refuse to pay debts, except to a consumer reporting agency or to persons meeting the requirements of sections 603(f) or 604(a)(3) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681a(f) or 1681b(a)(3)).

(f) Coercive advertisements. In connection with the collection of a debt, a debt collector must not advertise for sale any debt to coerce payment of the debt.

(g) Meaningful disclosure of identity. In connection with the collection of a debt, a debt collector must not place telephone calls without meaningfully disclosing the caller's identity, except as provided in § 1006.10.

(h) Prohibited communication media—

(1) In general. In connection with the collection of any debt, a debt collector must not communicate or attempt to communicate with a person through a medium of communication if the person has requested that the debt collector not use that medium to communicate with the person.

Official interpretation of 14(h)(1) In general.

1. Communication media designations. Section 1006.14(h)(1) prohibits a debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with a person in connection with the collection of any debt through a medium of communication if the person has requested that the debt collector not use that medium to communicate with the person. The debt collector may ask follow-up questions regarding preferred communication media to clarify statements by the person. For examples of communication media, see comment 2(d) 1.

2. Specific address or telephone number. Within a medium of communication, a person may request that a debt collector not use a specific address or telephone number. For example, if a person has two mobile telephone numbers, the person may request that the debt collector not use one or both mobile telephone numbers.

3. Examples. The following examples illustrate the prohibition in § 1006.14(h)(1).

i. Assume that a person tells a debt collector to stop calling the person. Based on these facts, the person has requested that the debt collector not use telephone calls to communicate with the person and, thereafter, § 1006.14(h)(1) prohibits the debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with the person through telephone calls.

ii. Assume that, in response to receipt of either the opt-out procedures described in § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii) or the opt-out notice in § 1006.6(e), a consumer requests to opt out of receiving electronic communications from a debt collector at a particular email address or telephone number. Based on these facts, the consumer has requested that the debt collector not use that email address or telephone number to electronically communicate with the consumer for any debt and, thereafter, § 1006.14(h)(1) prohibits the debt collector from electronically communicating or attempting to communicate with the consumer through that email address or telephone number.

(2) Exceptions. Notwithstanding the prohibition in paragraph (h)(1) of this section:

Official interpretation of 14(h)(2) Exceptions.

1. Legally required communication media. Under § 1006.14(h)(2)(iii), if otherwise required by applicable law, a debt collector may communicate or attempt to communicate with a person in connection with the collection of any debt through a medium of communication that the person has requested the debt collector not use to communicate with the person. For example, assume that a debt collector who is also a mortgage servicer subject to the periodic statement requirement for residential mortgage loans under Regulation Z, 12 CFR 1026.41, is engaging in debt collection communications with a person about the person's residential mortgage loan. The person tells the debt collector to stop mailing letters to the person, and the person has not consented to receive statements electronically in accordance with 12 CFR 1026.41(c). Although the person has requested that the debt collector not use mail to communicate with the person, § 1006.14(h)(2)(iii) permits the debt collector to mail the person periodic statements, because the periodic statements are required by applicable law.

(i) If a person opts out of receiving electronic communications from a debt collector, a debt collector may send an electronic confirmation of the person's request to opt out, provided that the electronic confirmation contains no information other than a statement confirming the person's request and that the debt collector will honor it;

(ii) If a person initiates contact with a debt collector using a medium of communication that the person previously requested the debt collector not use, the debt collector may respond once through the same medium of communication used by the person; or

(iii) If otherwise required by applicable law, a debt collector may communicate or attempt to communicate with a person in connection with the collection of any debt through a medium of communication that the person has requested the debt collector not use to communicate with the person.

§ 1006.18 False, deceptive, or misleading representations or means.

(a) In general. A debt collector must not use any false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt, including, but not limited to, the conduct described in paragraphs (b) through (d) of this section.

(b) False, deceptive, or misleading representations.

(1) A debt collector must not falsely represent or imply that:

(i) The debt collector is vouched for, bonded by, or affiliated with the United States or any State, including through the use of any badge, uniform, or facsimile thereof.

(ii) The debt collector operates or is employed by a consumer reporting agency, as defined by section 603(f) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681a(f)).

(iii) Any individual is an attorney or that any communication is from an attorney.

(iv) The consumer committed any crime or other conduct in order to disgrace the consumer.

(v) A sale, referral, or other transfer of any interest in a debt causes or will cause the consumer to:

(A) Lose any claim or defense to payment of the debt; or

(B) Become subject to any practice prohibited by this part.

(vi) Accounts have been turned over to innocent purchasers for value.

(vii) Documents are legal process.

(viii) Documents are not legal process forms or do not require action by the consumer.

(2) A debt collector must not falsely represent:

(i) The character, amount, or legal status of any debt.

(ii) Any services rendered, or compensation that may be lawfully received, by any debt collector for the collection of a debt.

(3) A debt collector must not represent or imply that nonpayment of any debt will result in the arrest or imprisonment of any person or the seizure, garnishment, attachment, or sale of any property or wages of any person unless such action is lawful and the debt collector or creditor intends to take such action.

(c) False, deceptive, or misleading collection means. A debt collector must not:

(1) Threaten to take any action that cannot legally be taken or that is not intended to be taken.

(2) Communicate or threaten to communicate to any person credit information that the debt collector knows or should know is false, including the failure to communicate that a disputed debt is disputed.

(3) Use or distribute any written communication that simulates or that the debt collector falsely represents to be a document authorized, issued, or approved by any court, official, or agency of the United States or any State, or that creates a false impression about its source, authorization, or approval.

(4) Use any business, company, or organization name other than the true name of the debt collector's business, company, or organization.

(d) False representations or deceptive means. A debt collector must not use any false representation or deceptive means to collect or attempt to collect any debt or to obtain information concerning a consumer.

Official interpretation of 18(d) False representations or deceptive means.

1. Social media. Under § 1006.18(d), a debt collector may not use any false representation or deceptive means to collect any debt or to obtain information concerning a consumer. In the social media context, the following examples illustrate the rule:

i. Assume that a debt collector sends a private message, in connection with the collection of a debt, requesting to be added as one of the consumer's contacts on a social media platform marketed for social or professional networking purposes. A debt collector makes a false representation or implication if the debt collector does not disclose his or her identity as a debt collector in the request.

ii. Assume that a debt collector communicates privately with a friend or coworker of a consumer on a social media platform, for the purpose of acquiring location information about the consumer. Pursuant to § 1006.10(b)(1), the debt collector must identify himself or herself individually by name when communicating for the purpose of acquiring location information. To avoid violating § 1006.18(d), the debt collector must communicate using a profile that accurately identifies the debt collector's individual name. (But see § 1006.18(f) and its associated commentary regarding use of assumed names.) The debt collector also must comply with the other applicable requirements for obtaining location information in § 1006.10 (e.g., with respect to stating that the debt collector is confirming or correcting location information concerning the consumer and, only if expressly requested, identifying the name of the debt collector's employer), for communicating with third parties in § 1006.6(d)(1), and for communicating through social media in § 1006.22(f)(4).

(e) Disclosures required—

Official interpretation of 18(e) Disclosures required.

1. Communication. A limited-content message, as defined in § 1006.2(j), is not a communication, as that term is defined in § 1006.2(d). Thus, a debt collector who leaves only a limited-content message for a consumer need not make the disclosures required by § 1006.18(e)(1) and (2). However, if a debt collector leaves a voicemail message for a consumer that includes content in addition to the content described in § 1006.2(j)(1) and (2) and that directly or indirectly conveys any information regarding a debt, the voicemail message is a communication, and the debt collector is required to make the § 1006.18(e) disclosures. See the commentary to § 1006.2(d) and (j) for additional clarification regarding the definitions of communication and limited-content message.

(1) Initial communications. A debt collector must disclose in its initial communication with a consumer that the debt collector is attempting to collect a debt and that any information obtained will be used for that purpose. If the debt collector's initial communication with the consumer is oral, the debt collector must make the disclosure required by this paragraph again in its initial written communication with the consumer.

Official interpretation of 18(e)(1) Initial communications.

1. Example. A debt collector must make the disclosure required by § 1006.18(e)(1) in the debt collector's initial communication with a consumer, regardless of the medium of communication and regardless of whether the debt collector or the consumer initiated the communication. For example, assume that a debt collector who has not previously communicated with a consumer attempts to communicate with the consumer by leaving a limited-content message, as defined in § 1006.2(j). After listening to the debt collector's limited-content message, the consumer initiates a telephone call to, and communicates with, the debt collector. Pursuant to § 1006.18(e)(1), because the consumer-initiated call is the initial communication between the debt collector and the consumer, the debt collector must disclose to the consumer during that telephone call that the debt collector is attempting to collect a debt and that any information obtained will be used for that purpose.

(2) Subsequent communications. In each communication with the consumer subsequent to the communications described in paragraph (e)(1) of this section, the debt collector must disclose that the communication is from a debt collector.

(3) Exception. Disclosures under paragraphs (e)(1) and (2) of this section are not required in a formal pleading made in connection with a legal action.

(4) Translated disclosures. A debt collector must make the disclosures required by paragraphs (e)(1) and (2) of this section in the same language or languages used for the rest of the communication in which the debt collector conveyed the disclosures. Any translation of the disclosures a debt collector uses must be complete and accurate.

Official interpretation of 18(e)(4) Translated disclosures.

1. Example. Section 1006.18(e)(4) provides that a debt collector must make the disclosures required by § 1006.18(e)(1) and (2) in the same language or languages used for the rest of the communication in which the disclosures are conveyed. The following example illustrates the rule:

i. ABC debt collector is collecting a debt. ABC debt collector's initial communication with the consumer takes place in Spanish. Section 1006.18(e)(4) requires ABC debt collector to provide in Spanish the disclosure required by § 1006.18(e)(1). Thereafter, ABC debt collector has a communication with the consumer that takes place partly in English and partly in Spanish. During this communication, the debt collector must provide the disclosure required by § 1006.18(e)(2) in both English and Spanish.

(f) Assumed names. This section does not prohibit a debt collector's employee from using an assumed name when communicating or attempting to communicate with a person, provided that the employee uses the assumed name consistently and that the debt collector can readily identify any employee using an assumed name.

Official interpretation of 18(f) Assumed names.

1. Readily identifiable by the employer. Section 1006.18(f) provides, in part, that § 1006.18 does not prohibit a debt collector's employee from using an assumed name when communicating or attempting to communicate with a person, provided that the debt collector can readily identify any employee using an assumed name. A debt collector may use any method of managing assumed names that enables the debt collector to determine the true identity of any employee using an assumed name. For example, a debt collector may require an employee to use the same assumed name when communicating or attempting to communicate with any person and may prohibit any other employee from using the same assumed name.

§ 1006.22 Unfair or unconscionable means.

(a) In general. A debt collector must not use unfair or unconscionable means to collect or attempt to collect any debt, including, but not limited to, the conduct described in paragraphs (b) through (f) of this section.

(b) Collection of unauthorized amounts. A debt collector must not collect any amount unless such amount is expressly authorized by the agreement creating the debt or permitted by law. For purposes of this paragraph, the term any amount includes any interest, fee, charge, or expense incidental to the principal obligation.

(c) Postdated payment instruments. A debt collector must not:

(1) Accept from any person a check or other payment instrument postdated by more than five days unless such person is notified in writing of the debt collector's intent to deposit such check or instrument not more than ten, nor less than three, days (excluding legal public holidays identified in 5 U.S.C. 6103(a), Saturdays, and Sundays) prior to such deposit.

(2) Solicit any postdated check or other postdated payment instrument for the purpose of threatening or instituting criminal prosecution.
(3) Deposit or threaten to deposit any postdated check or other postdated payment instrument prior to the date on such check or instrument.

(d) Charges resulting from concealment of purpose. A debt collector must not cause charges to be made to any person for communications by concealment of the true purpose of the communication. Such charges include, but are not limited to, collect telephone calls and telegram fees.

(e) Nonjudicial action regarding property. A debt collector must not take or threaten to take any nonjudicial action to effect dispossession or disablement of property if:
(1) There is no present right to possession of the property claimed as collateral through an enforceable security interest;
(2) There is no present intention to take possession of the property; or
(3) The property is exempt by law from such dispossession or disablement.

(f) Restrictions on use of certain media. A debt collector must not:
(1) Communicate with a consumer regarding a debt by postcard.
(2) Use any language or symbol, other than the debt collector's address, on any envelope when communicating with a consumer by mail, except that a debt collector may use the debt collector's business name on an envelope if such name does not indicate that the debt collector is in the debt collection business.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 22(f)(2).

1. Language or symbol. Section 1006.22(f)(2) provides, in relevant part, that a debt collector must not use any language or symbol, other than the debt collector's address, on any envelope when communicating with a consumer by mail. For purposes of § 1006.22(f)(2), the phrase language or symbol does not include language and symbols that facilitate communications by mail, such as: the debtor's name and address; postage; language such as forwarding and address correction requested; and the United States Postal Service's Intelligent Mail barcode.

(3) Communicate or attempt to communicate with a consumer by sending an email to an email address that the debt collector knows is provided to the consumer by the consumer's employer, unless the email address is one described in § 1006.6(d)(4)(i) or (iii).

Official interpretation of Paragraph 22(f)(3).

1. Email addresses described in § 1006.6(d)(4). Section 1006.22(f)(3) generally prohibits a debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with a consumer by sending an email to an email address that the debt collector knows is provided to the consumer by the consumer's employer. The prohibition does not apply if the debt collector sends the email to an email address described in § 1006.6(d)(4)(i) or (iii), which specifically contemplate debt collectors sending emails to any email address—including an email address that a debt collector knows is employer provided—if the consumer has used the email address to communicate with the debt collector about a debt (§ 1006.6(d)(4)(i)(A)), has provided prior consent directly to the debt collector to use the email address (§ 1006.6(d)(4)(i)(B)), or has obtained the email address from a prior debt collector who satisfied either § 1006.6(d)(4)(i) or (ii). A debt collector who sends an email to an email address described in § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii) complies with the prohibition in § 1006.22(f)(3) because the procedures in § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii) do not permit debt collectors to send emails to email addresses that the debt collector knows are employer provided.

(4) Communicate or attempt to communicate with a person in connection with the collection of a debt through a social media platform if the communication or attempt to communicate is viewable by the general public or the person's social media contacts.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 22(f)(4).

1. Social media. Section 1006.22(f)(4) prohibits a debt collector from communicating or attempting to communicate with a person in connection with the collection of a debt through a social media platform if the communication or attempt to communicate is viewable by the general public or the person's social media contacts. For example, § 1006.22(f)(4) prohibits a debt collector from posting, in connection with the collection of a debt, any message for a person on a social media webpage if that webpage is viewable by the general public or the person's social media contacts. Section 1006.22(f)(4) does not prohibit a debt collector from sending a message to a person if the message is not viewable by the general public or the person's social media contacts. Section 1006.6(b) or § 1006.14(h) nonetheless may prohibit the debt collector from sending such a message, and a debt collector who communicates by sending such a message about the debt to the wrong person violates § 1006.6(d)(1). See also comment 18(d)-1 with respect to communications and attempts to communicate with consumers and third parties on social media platforms.

(g) Safe harbor for certain emails and text messages relating to the collection of a debt. A debt collector who communicates with a consumer by sending an email or text message in accordance with the procedures described in § 1006.6(d)(3) does not violate paragraph (a) of this section by revealing in the email or text message the debt collector's name or other information indicating that the communication relates to the collection of a debt.

§ 1006.26 Collection of time-barred debts.

(a) Definitions. For purposes of this section:
(1) Statute of limitations means the period prescribed by applicable law for bringing a legal action against the consumer to collect a debt.
(2) Time-barred debt means a debt for which the applicable statute of limitations has expired.

(b) Legal actions and threats of legal actions prohibited. A debt collector must not bring or threaten to bring a legal action against a consumer to collect a time-barred debt. This paragraph (b) does not apply to proofs of claim filed in connection with a bankruptcy proceeding.

§ 1006.30 Other prohibited practices.

(a) Required actions prior to furnishing information.
(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (a)(2) of this section, a debt collector must not furnish to a consumer reporting agency, as defined in section 603(f) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681a(f)), information about a debt before the debt collector:

Official interpretation of 30(a)(1) In general.

1. About the debt. Section 1006.30(a)(1) provides, in relevant part, that a debt collector must not furnish to a consumer reporting agency, as defined in section 603(f) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681a(f)), information about a debt before taking one of the actions described in § 1006.30(a)(1)(i) or (ii). Each of the actions includes conveying information about the debt to the consumer. The validation information required by § 1006.34(c), including such information if provided in a validation notice, is information about the debt.

2. Reasonable period of time. Section 1006.30(a)(1)(ii) provides, in relevant part, that a debt collector who places a letter about a debt in the mail, or who sends an electronic message about a debt to the consumer, must wait a reasonable period of time to receive a notice of undeliverability before furnishing information about the debt to a consumer reporting agency. The reasonable period of time begins on the date that the debt collector places the letter in the mail or sends the electronic message. A period of 14 consecutive days after the date that the debt collector places a letter in the mail or sends an electronic message is a reasonable period of time.

3. Notices of undeliverability. Section 1006.30(a)(1)(ii) provides, in relevant part, that, if a debt collector who places a letter about a debt in the mail, or who sends an electronic message about a debt to the consumer, receives a notice of undeliverability during the reasonable period of time, the debt collector must not furnish information about the debt to a consumer reporting agency until the debt collector otherwise satisfies paragraph (a)(1) of this section. A debt collector who does not receive a notice of undeliverability during the reasonable period and who thereafter furnishes information about the debt to a consumer reporting agency does not violate paragraph (a)(1) of this section even if the debt collector subsequently receives a notice of undeliverability. The following examples illustrate the rule:

i. Assume that, on May 1, a debt collector mails the consumer a validation notice as described in § 1006.34(a)(1)(i)(A). On May 10, the debt collector receives a notice of undeliverability and, without taking any additional action described in § 1006.30(a)(1), subsequently furnishes information regarding the debt to a consumer reporting agency. The debt collector has violated § 1006.30(a)(1).

ii. Assume that, on May 1, a debt collector mails the consumer a validation notice as described in § 1006.34(a)(1)(i)(A). On May 10, the debt collector receives a notice of undeliverability. On May 11, the debt collector mails the consumer another validation notice as described in § 1006.34(a)(1)(i)(A). From May 11 to May 24, the debt collector permits receipt of, monitors for, and does not receive, a notice of undeliverability and thereafter furnishes information regarding the debt to a consumer reporting agency. The debt collector has not violated § 1006.30(a)(1).

iii. Assume that, on May 1, a debt collector mails the consumer a validation notice as described in § 1006.34(a)(1)(i)(A). From May 1 to May 14, the debt collector permits receipt of, monitors for, and does not receive, a notice of undeliverability and thereafter furnishes information regarding the debt to a consumer reporting agency. After furnishing the information, the debt collector receives a notice of undeliverability. The debt collector has not violated § 1006.30(a)(1) and, without taking any further action, may furnish additional information about the debt to a consumer reporting agency.

(i) Speaks to the consumer about the debt in person or by telephone; or

(ii) Places a letter in the mail or sends an electronic message to the consumer about the debt and waits a reasonable period of time to receive a notice of undeliverability. During the reasonable period, the debt collector must permit receipt of, and monitor for, notifications of undeliverability from communications providers. If the debt collector receives such a notification during the reasonable period, the debt collector must not furnish information about the debt to a consumer reporting agency until the debt collector otherwise satisfies paragraph (a)(1) of this section.

(2) Special rule—information furnished to certain specialty consumer reporting agencies. Paragraph (a)(1) of this section does not apply to a debt collector's furnishing of information about a debt to a nationwide specialty consumer reporting agency that compiles and maintains information on a consumer's check writing history, as described in section 603(x)(3) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681a(x)(3)).

(b) Prohibition on the sale, transfer for consideration, or placement for collection of certain debts—

(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (b)(2) of this section, a debt collector must not sell, transfer for consideration, or place for collection a debt if the debt collector knows or should know that the debt has been paid or settled or discharged in bankruptcy.

Official interpretation of 30(b)(1) In general.

1. Transfer for consideration. Section 1006.30(b)(1) prohibits, among other things, a debt collector from transferring for consideration a debt that has been paid or settled or discharged in bankruptcy. A debt collector transfers a debt for consideration when the debt collector receives or expects to receive compensation for the transfer of the debt. A debt collector does not transfer a debt for consideration when the debt collector sends information about the debt, as opposed to the debt itself, to another party. For example, a debt collector does not transfer a debt for consideration when the debt collector sends a file with data about the debt to another person for analytics, scrubbing, or archiving. A debt collector also does not transfer a debt for consideration when the debt collector reports to a credit reporting agency information that a debt has been paid or settled or discharged in bankruptcy.

2. Debt that resulted from identity theft. Section 615(f)(1) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681m(f)(1)) states that no person shall sell, transfer for consideration, or place for collection a debt if such person has been notified under section 605B of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681c-2) that the debt has resulted from identity theft. Nothing in § 1006.30(b)(1) alters a debt collector's obligation to comply with the prohibition set forth in section 615(f)(1) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act.

(2) Exceptions—

(i) In general. A debt collector may transfer for consideration a debt described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section if the debt collector:

(A) Transfers the debt to the debt's owner;

Official interpretation of Paragraph 30(b)(2)(i)(A).

1. In general. Under § 1006.30(b)(2)(i)(A), a debt collector who is collecting a debt described in § 1006.30(b)(1) may transfer the debt to the debt's owner. However, unless another exception under § 1006.30(b)(2) applies, the debt collector may not transfer the debt or the right to collect the debt to another entity on behalf of the debt owner.

(B) Transfers the debt to a previous owner of the debt, if the transfer is authorized under the terms of the original contract between the debt collector and the previous owner; or

(C) Transfers the debt as a result of a merger, acquisition, purchase and assumption transaction, or a transfer of substantially all of the debt collector's assets.

(ii) Secured claims in bankruptcy. A debt collector may sell, transfer for consideration, or place for collection a debt that has been discharged in bankruptcy if the debt is secured by an enforceable lien and the debt collector notifies the transferee that the consumer's personal liability for the debt was discharged in bankruptcy.

(iii) Securitizations and pledges of debt. Paragraph (b)(1) of this section does not prohibit the securitization of a debt or the pledging of a portfolio of debt as collateral in connection with a borrowing.

(c) Multiple debts. If a consumer makes any single payment to a debt collector with respect to multiple debts owed by the consumer to the debt collector, the debt collector:

(1) Must not apply the payment to any debt that is disputed by the consumer; and

(2) If applicable, must apply the payment in accordance with the consumer's directions.

(d) Legal actions by debt collectors—

(1) Action to enforce interest in real property. A debt collector who brings a legal action against a consumer to enforce an interest in real property securing the consumer's debt must bring the action only in a judicial district or similar legal entity in which such real property is located.

(2) Other legal actions. A debt collector who brings a legal action against a consumer other than to enforce an interest in real property securing the consumer's debt must bring such action only in the judicial district or similar legal entity in which the consumer:

(i) Signed the contract sued upon; or
(ii) Resides at the commencement of the action.

(3) Authorization of actions. Nothing in this part authorizes debt collectors to bring legal actions.

(e) Furnishing certain deceptive forms. A debt collector must not design, compile, and furnish any form that the debt collector knows would be used to cause a consumer falsely to believe that a person other than the consumer's creditor is participating in collecting or attempting to collect a debt that the consumer allegedly owes to the creditor.

§ 1006.34 Notice for validation of debts.

(a) Validation information required.

(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (a)(2) of this section, a debt collector must provide a consumer with the validation information required by paragraph (c) of this section either:

Official interpretation of 34(a)(1) In general.

1. Deceased consumers. Section 1006.34(a)(1) generally requires a debt collector to provide the validation information required by § 1006.34(c) either by sending the consumer a validation notice in the manner required by § 1006.42, or by providing the information orally in the debt collector's initial communication. If the debt collector knows or should know that the consumer is deceased, and if the debt collector has not previously provided the validation information to the deceased consumer, a person who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate operates as the consumer for purposes of § 1006.34(a)(1). In such circumstances, to comply with § 1006.34(a)(1), a debt collector must provide the validation information to an individual that the debt collector identifies by name who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate.

(i) By sending the consumer a validation notice in the manner required by § 1006.42:
(A) In the initial communication, as defined in paragraph (b)(2) of this section; or
(B) Within five days of that initial communication; or
(ii) By providing the validation information orally in the initial communication.

(2) Exception. A debt collector who otherwise would be required to send a validation notice pursuant to paragraph (a)(1)(i)(B) of this section is not required to do so if the consumer has paid the debt prior to the time that paragraph (a)(1)(i)(B) of this section would require the validation notice to be sent.

(b) Definitions. For purposes of this section:

(1) Clear and conspicuous means readily understandable. In the case of written and electronic disclosures, the location and type size also must be readily noticeable and legible to consumers, although no minimum type size is mandated. In the case of oral disclosures, the disclosures also must be given at a volume and speed sufficient for the consumer to hear and comprehend them.

(2) Initial communication means the first time that, in connection with the collection of a debt, a debt collector conveys information, directly or indirectly, regarding the debt to the consumer, other than a communication in the form of a formal pleading in a civil action, or any form or notice that does not relate to the collection of the debt and is expressly required by:

Official interpretation of 34(b)(2) Initial communication.

1. Bankruptcy proofs of claim. Section 1006.34(b)(2) defines initial communication and states that the term does not include a communication in the form of a formal pleading in a civil action. A proof of claim that a debt collector files in a bankruptcy proceeding in accordance with the requirements of the United States Bankruptcy Code (Title 11 of the U.S. Code) is a communication in the form of a formal pleading in a civil action and therefore is not an initial communication for purposes of § 1006.34.

(i) The Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 1 et seq.);
(ii) Title V of the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act (15 U.S.C. 6801 through 6827); or
(iii) Any provision of Federal or State law or regulation mandating notice of a data security breach or privacy risk.

(3) Itemization date means any one of the following five reference dates for which a debt collector can ascertain the amount of the debt:

Official interpretation of 34(b)(3) Itemization date.

1. In general. Section 1006.34(b)(3) defines itemization date for purposes of § 1006.34. Section 1006.34(b)(3) states that the itemization date is any one of five reference dates for which a debt collector can ascertain the amount of the debt. The reference dates are the last statement date, the charge-off date, the last payment date, the transaction date, and the judgment date. A debt collector may select any of these dates as the itemization date to comply with § 1006.34. Once a debt collector uses a reference date for a debt in a communication with a consumer, the debt collector must use that reference date for that debt consistently when providing the information required by § 1006.34(c) to that consumer. For example, if a debt collector uses the last statement date to determine and disclose the account number associated with the debt pursuant to § 1006.34(c)(2)(iv), the debt collector may not use the charge-off date to determine and disclose the amount of the debt pursuant to § 1006.34(c)(2)(vii).

2. Subsequent debt collectors. When selecting an itemization date pursuant to § 1006.34(b)(3), a debt collector may use a different reference date than a prior debt collector who attempted to collect the debt.

(i) The last statement date, which is the date of the last periodic statement or written account statement or invoice provided to the consumer by a creditor;

Official interpretation of Paragraph 34(b)(3)(i).

1. Last statement date. Under § 1006.34(b)(3)(i), the last statement date is the date of the last periodic statement or written account statement or invoice provided to the consumer by a creditor. For purposes of § 1006.34(b)(3)(i), the last statement may be provided by a creditor or a third party acting on the creditor's behalf, including a creditor's service provider. However, a statement or invoice provided by a debt collector is not a last statement for purposes of § 1006.34(b)(3)(i), unless the debt collector is also a creditor.

(ii) The charge-off date, which is the date the debt was charged off;
(iii) The last payment date, which is the date the last payment was applied to the debt;

Official interpretation of Paragraph 34(b)(3)(iii).

1. Last payment date. Under § 1006.34(b)(3)(iii), the last payment date is the date the last payment was applied to the debt. A third-party payment applied to the debt, such as a payment from an auto repossession agent or an insurance company, can be a last payment for purposes of § 1006.34(b)(3)(iii).

(iv) The transaction date, which is the date of the transaction that gave rise to the debt; or Official interpretation of Paragraph 34(b)(3)(iv).

1. Transaction date. Section 1006.34(b)(3)(iv) provides that the itemization date may be the date of the transaction that gave rise to the debt. The transaction date is the date that the good or service that gave rise to the debt was provided or made available to the consumer. For example, the transaction date for a debt arising from a medical procedure may be the date the medical procedure was performed, and the transaction date for a consumer's gym membership may be the date the membership contract was executed. In some cases, a debt may have more than one transaction date. This could occur, for example, if a contract for a service is executed on one date and the service is performed on another date. If a debt has more than one transaction date, a debt collector may use any such date as the transaction date for purposes of § 1006.34(b)(3)(iv), but the debt collector must use whichever transaction date is selected consistently, as described in comment 34(b)(3)-1.

(v) The judgment date, which is the date of a final court judgment that determines the amount of the debt owed by the consumer.

(4) Validation notice means a written or electronic notice that provides the validation information required by paragraph (c) of this section.

(5) Validation period means the period starting on the date that a debt collector provides the validation information required by paragraph (c) of this section and ending 30 days after the consumer receives or is assumed to receive the validation information. For purposes of determining the end of the validation period, the debt collector may assume that a consumer receives the validation information on any date that is at least five days (excluding legal public holidays identified in 5 U.S.C. 6103(a), Saturdays, and Sundays) after the debt collector provides it.

Official interpretation of 34(b)(5) Validation period.

1. Assumed receipt of validation information. Section 1006.34(b)(5) defines the validation period as the period starting on the date that a debt collector provides the validation information required by § 1006.34(c) and ending 30 days after the consumer receives or is assumed to receive it. Section 1006.34(c)(3)(i) through (iii) requires statements that specify the end date of the validation period. If a debt collector provides the validation information in writing or electronically, then, at the time that the debt collector calculates the validation period end date, the debt collector will know only the date on which the consumer is assumed to receive the validation information. In such cases, the debt collector may use that date to calculate the validation period end date even if the debt collector later learns that the consumer received the validation information on a different date.

2. Updated validation period. If a debt collector sends a subsequent validation notice to a consumer because the consumer did not receive the original validation notice and the consumer has not otherwise received the validation information required by § 1006.34(c), the debt collector must calculate the end date of the validation period specified in the § 1006.34(c)(3) disclosures based on the date the consumer receives or is assumed to receive the subsequent validation notice. For example, assume a debt collector sends a consumer a validation notice on January 1, and that notice is returned as undeliverable. After obtaining accurate location information, the debt collector sends the consumer a subsequent validation notice on January 15. Pursuant to § 1006.34(b)(5), the end date of the validation period specified in the § 1006.34(c)(3) disclosures is based on the date the consumer receives or is assumed to receive the validation notice sent on January 15.

(c) Validation information. Pursuant to paragraph (a)(1) of this section, a debt collector must provide the following validation information.

(1) Debt collector communication disclosure. The statement required by § 1006.18(e).

Official interpretation of 34(c)(1) Debt collector communication disclosure.

1. Statement required by § 1006.18(e). Section 1006.34(c)(1) provides that validation information includes the statement required by § 1006.18(e). Section 1006.18(e)(1) requires a debt collector to disclose in its initial communication that the debt collector is attempting to collect a debt and that any information obtained will be used for that purpose. Section 1006.18(e)(2) requires a debt collector to disclose in each subsequent communication that the communication is from a debt collector. A debt collector who provides a validation notice as described in § 1006.34(a)(1)(i)(A) complies with § 1006.34(c)(1) by providing on the validation notice the disclosure required by § 1006.18(e)(1). A debt collector who provides a validation notice as described in § 1006.34(a)(1)(i)(B) complies with § 1006.34(c)(1) by providing either the disclosure required by § 1006.18(e)(1) or the disclosure required by § 1006.18(e)(2). The following example illustrates the rule:

i. ABC debt collector has an initial communication with the consumer by telephone. Within five days of that initial communication, ABC debt collector sends the consumer a validation notice using Model Form B-1 in appendix B to this part. ABC debt collector has complied with § 1006.34(c)(1) even though Model Form B-1 includes the disclosure described in § 1006.18(e)(1) rather than the disclosure described in § 1006.18(e)(2).

(2) Information about the debt. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(5) of this section:

(i) The debt collector's name and the mailing address at which the debt collector accepts disputes and requests for original-creditor information.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 34(c)(2)(i).

1. Debt collector's name. Section 1006.34(c)(2)(i) provides, in part, that validation information includes the debt collector's name. A debt collector may disclose its trade or doing-business-as name, instead of its legal name.

2. Debt collector's mailing address. Section 1006.34(c)(2)(i) provides, in part, that validation information includes the mailing address at which the debt collector accepts disputes and requests for original-creditor information. A debt collector may disclose a vendor's mailing address, if that is an address at which the debt collector accepts disputes and requests for original-creditor information.

(ii) The consumer's name and mailing address.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 34(c)(2)(ii).

1. Consumer's name. Section 1006.34(c)(2)(ii) provides, in part, that validation information includes the consumer's name. To satisfy the requirement to provide this validation information, a debt collector must disclose the version of the consumer's name that the debt collector reasonably determines is the most complete and accurate version of the name about which the debt collector has knowledge. A debt collector does not disclose the most complete and accurate version of the consumer's name if the debt collector omits known name information in a manner that creates a false, misleading, or confusing impression about the consumer's identity. For example, assume the creditor provides the consumer's first name, middle name, last name, and name suffix to the debt collector. In this scenario, the debt collector would reasonably determine that the most complete and accurate version of the consumer's name about which the debt collector has knowledge includes the first name, middle name, last name, and name suffix. If the debt collector omits any of this information, the debt collector has not satisfied the requirement to provide the consumer's name pursuant to § 1006.34(c)(2)(ii).

(iii) If the debt collector is collecting a debt related to a consumer financial product or service as defined in § 1006.2(f), the name of the creditor to whom the debt was owed on the itemization date.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 34(c)(2)(iii).

1. Creditor's name. Section 1006.34(c)(2)(iii) provides that, if a debt collector is collecting debt related to a consumer financial product or service as defined in § 1006.2(f), validation information includes the name of the creditor to whom the debt was owed on the itemization date. Pursuant to § 1006.34(c)(2)(iii), a debt collector may disclose this creditor's trade or doing-business-as name, instead of its legal name.

(iv) The account number, if any, associated with the debt on the itemization date, or a truncated version of that number.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 34(c)(2)(iv).

1. Account number truncation. Section 1006.34(c)(2)(iv) provides that validation information includes the account number, if any, associated with the debt on the itemization date, or a truncated version of that number. If a debt collector uses a truncated account number, the account number must remain recognizable. For example, a debt collector may truncate a credit card account number so that only the last four digits are provided.

(v) The name of the creditor to whom the debt currently is owed.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 34(c)(2)(v).

1. Creditor's name. Section 1006.34(c)(2)(v) provides that validation information includes the name of the creditor to whom the debt currently is owed. A debt collector may disclose this creditor's trade or doing-business-as name, instead of its legal name.

(vi) The itemization date.

(vii) The amount of the debt on the itemization date.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 34(c)(2)(vii).

1. Amount of the debt on the itemization date. Section 1006.34(c)(2)(vii) provides that validation information includes the amount of the debt on the itemization date. The amount of the debt on the itemization date includes any fees, interest, or other charges owed as of that date.

(viii) An itemization of the current amount of the debt reflecting interest, fees, payments, and credits since the itemization date. A debt collector may disclose the itemization on a separate page provided in the same communication with a validation notice, if the debt collector includes on the validation notice, where the itemization would have appeared, a statement referring to that separate page.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 34(c)(2)(viii).

1. Itemization of the debt. Section 1006.34(c)(2)(viii) provides that validation information includes an itemization of the current amount of the debt reflecting interest, fees, payments, and credits since the itemization date. If providing a validation notice, a debt collector must include fields in the notice for all of these items even if none of the items have been assessed or applied to the debt since the itemization date. A debt collector may indicate that the value of a required field is 0, none, or may state that no interest, fees, payments, or credits have been assessed or applied to the debt; a debt collector may not leave a required field blank.

2. Itemization required by other applicable law. If a debt collector is required by other applicable law to provide an itemization of the current amount of the debt with the validation information, the debt collector may comply with § 1006.34(c)(2)(viii) by disclosing the itemization required by other applicable law in lieu of the itemization described in § 1006.34(c)(2)(viii), if the itemization required by other applicable law is substantially similar to the itemization that appears on Model Form B-1 in appendix B to this part.

3. Itemization on a separate page. Section 1006.34(c)(2)(viii) provides that a debt collector may disclose the itemization of the current amount of the debt on a separate page provided in the same communication with a validation notice if the debt collector includes on the validation notice, where the itemization would have appeared, a statement referring to that separate page. A debt collector may comply with the requirement to refer to the separate page by, for example, including on the validation notice the statement, See the enclosed separate page for an itemization of the debt, situated next to the information about the current amount of the debt required by § 1006.34(c)(2)(ix).

4. Debt collectors collecting multiple debts. A debt collector who combines multiple debts on a single validation notice complies with § 1006.34(c)(2)(viii) by disclosing either a single, cumulative itemization on the validation notice or a separate itemization of each debt on a separate page or pages provided in the same communication as the validation notice.

(ix) The current amount of the debt.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 34(c)(2)(ix).

1. Current amount of the debt. Section 1006.34(c)(2)(ix) provides that validation information includes the current amount of the debt (i.e., the amount as of when the validation information is provided). For residential mortgage debt subject to Regulation Z, 12 CFR 1026.41, a debt collector may comply with the requirement to provide the current amount of the debt by providing the consumer the total balance of the outstanding mortgage, including principal, interest, fees, and other charges.

2. Debt collectors collecting multiple debts. A debt collector who combines multiple debts on a single validation notice complies with § 1006.34(c)(2)(ix) by disclosing on the validation notice a single cumulative figure that is the sum of the current amount of all the debts.

(3) Information about consumer protections.

(i) The date that the debt collector will consider the end date of the validation period and a statement that, if the consumer notifies the debt collector in writing on or before that date that the debt, or any portion of the debt, is disputed, the debt collector must cease collection of the debt, or the disputed portion of the debt, until the debt collector sends the consumer either verification of the debt or a copy of a judgment.

(ii) The date that the debt collector will consider the end date of the validation period and a statement that, if the consumer requests in writing on or before that date the name and address of the original creditor, the debt collector must cease collection of the debt until the debt collector sends the consumer the name and address of the original creditor, if different from the current creditor.

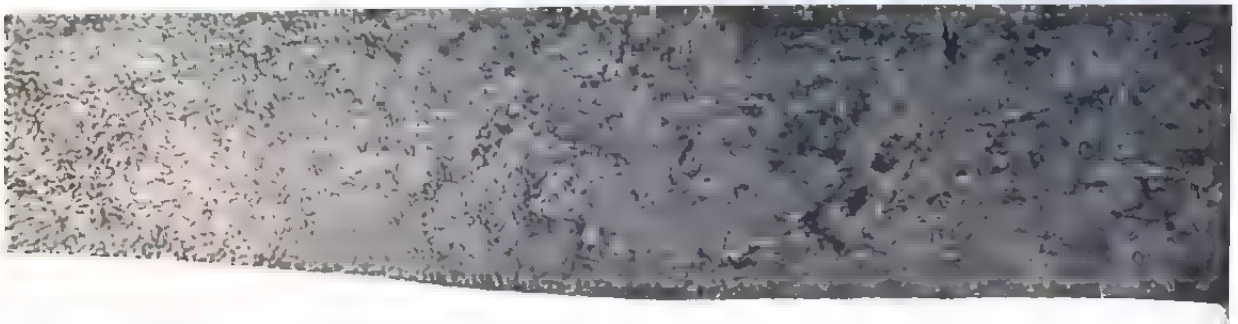
(iii) The date that the debt collector will consider the end date of the validation period and a statement that, unless the consumer contacts the debt collector to dispute the validity of the debt, or any portion of the debt, on or before that date, the debt collector will assume that the debt is valid.

(iv) If the debt collector is collecting debt related to a consumer financial product or service as defined in § 1006.2(f), a statement that informs the consumer that additional information regarding consumer protections in debt collection is available on the Bureau's website at www.cfpb.gov/debt-collection.

(v) If the debt collector sends the validation notice electronically, a statement explaining how a consumer can, as described in paragraphs (c)(4)(i) and (ii) of this section, dispute the debt or request original-creditor information electronically.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 34(c)(3)(v).

1. Electronic communication media. Section 1006.34(c)(3)(v) provides that, if the debt collector provides the validation notice electronically, validation information includes a statement explaining how a consumer can, as described in paragraphs (c)(4)(i) and (ii) of this section, dispute the debt or request original-creditor information electronically. A debt collector may provide the information required by § 1006.34(c)(3)(v) by including the statements, We accept disputes electronically at, using that phrase or a substantially similar phrase, followed by an email address or website portal that a consumer can use to take the action described in § 1006.34(c)(4)(i), and We accept original creditor information requests electronically, using that phrase or a substantially similar phrase, followed by an email address or website portal that a consumer can use to take the action described in § 1006.34(c)(4)(ii). If a debt collector accepts electronic communications from consumers through more than one medium, such as by email and through a website portal, the debt collector is required to provide information regarding only



t may provide information on any additional ıse information. The following information, alidation information required by paragraphs ıis section and from any optional information paragraphs (d)(3)(i), (ii), (iii)(A), (iv), (v), (vi) this section, and, if provided on a validation ottom of the notice under the headings, How do and Check all that apply::

n of 34(c)(4) Consumer-response information.

ılidation information is provided in writing or ıpt required by § 1006.34(c)(4) may be format- n Model Form B-1 in appendix B to this part.

ıpts. The following statements, listed in the fol- ıd using the following phrasing or substantially „ each next to a prompt:
o dispute the debt because I think:;
not my debt.;
ıount is wrong.; and
(please describe on reverse or attach additional n).

reditor information prompt. The statement, I ıd me the name and address of the original cred- phrase or a substantially similar phrase, next to ıddresses. Mailing addresses for the consumer llector, which are the debt collector's and the con- ; and mailing addresses as disclosed pursuant to)(i) and (ii).

- certain residential mortgage debt. For residen- , if a periodic statement is required under Regu- 1026.41, at the time a debt collector provides the a debt collector need not provide the validation ed by paragraphs (c)(2)(vi) through (viii) of this collector:

ıtion of 34(c)(5) Special rule for certain residen- '.

Official interpretation of 34(d)(2) Safe harbor.

1. In general. A debt collector who provides a validation notice that is neither a notice described in § 1006.34(d)(2)(i) or (ii), nor a substantially similar notice as described in § 1006.34(d)(2)(iii), does not receive a safe harbor for compliance with the information and form requirements of § 1006.34(c) and (d)(1).

(i) In general. Model Form B-1 in appendix B to this part contains the validation information required by paragraph (c) of this section and certain optional disclosures permitted by paragraph (d)(3) of this section. A debt collector who uses Model Form B-1 complies with the information and form requirements of paragraphs (c) and (d)(1) of this section, including if the debt collector:

Official interpretation of 34(d)(2)(i) In general.

1. Disclosure required by § 1006.18(e). Section 1006.18(e)(1) requires a debt collector to disclose in its initial communication that the debt collector is attempting to collect a debt and that any information obtained will be used for that purpose. Section 1006.18(e)(2) requires a debt collector to disclose in each subsequent communication that the communication is from a debt collector. Model Form B-1 in appendix B to this part includes the disclosure required by § 1006.18(e)(1). A debt collector who uses Model Form B-1 to provide a validation notice as described in § 1006.34(a)(1)(i)(B) may replace the disclosure required by § 1006.18(e)(1) with the disclosure required by § 1006.18(e)(2) without losing the safe harbor described in § 1006.34(d)(2). See comment 34(c)(1)-1 for further guidance related to providing the disclosure required by § 1006.18(e) on a validation notice.

(A) Omits any or all of the optional disclosures shown on Model Form B-1; or

(B) Adds any or all of the optional disclosures described in paragraph (d)(3) of this section that are not shown on Model Form B-1, provided that any such optional disclosures are no more prominent than any of the validation information required by paragraph (c) of this section.

(ii) Certain disclosures on a separate page. A debt collector who uses Model Form B-1 as described in paragraph (d)(2)(i) collector may use the name of the deceased consumer f you;

ating the consumer-response information required by 4(c)(4) to facilitate mailing; ng barcodes or QR codes, as long as the inclusion of is does not violate § 1006.38(b); ig the date the form is generated; and dding hyperlinks, if delivering the form electronically.

disclosures. A debt collector may include any of the information when providing the validation informal by paragraph (c) of this section. A debt collector who of the following information receives the safe harbor paragraph (d)(2) of this section, provided that the debt erwise uses Model Form B-1 in appendix B to this part, n of Model Form B-1, as described in paragraph (d)(2) of phone contact information. The debt collector's tele-contact information.

rpretation of 34(d)(3)(i) Telephone contact information.

al. Section 1006.34(d)(3)(i) permits a debt collector to phone contact information. Telephone contact informainclude, for example, a telephone number as well as the he debt collector accepts consumer telephone calls.

ference code. A number or code that the debt collector identify the debt or the consumer.
ayment disclosures. Either or both of the following
s:
A) The statement, Contact us about your payment options., sing that phrase or a substantially similar phrase; and
B) Below the consumer-response information required by aragraphs (c)(4)(i) and (ii) of this section, the statement, I nclosed this amount:, using that phrase or a substantially imilar phrase, payment instructions after that statement, nd a prompt.
isclosures under applicable law.
A) Disclosures on the reverse of the validation notice.
On the reverse of the validation notice, any disclosures hat are specifically required by, or that provide safe harors under, applicable law and, if any such disclosures are included, a statement on the front of the validation notice referring to those disclosures. A sufficient disc must include a statement on the front of the validation notice referring to those disclosures. A debt collector may comply with the requirement to refer to the disclosures by including on the front of the validation notice the statement, Notice: See reverse side for important information, or a substantially similar statement. If, as permitted by comment 34(d)(3)(iv)(A)-1, a debt collector places the disclosures below the content of the validation notice, the debt collector may comply with the requirement to refer to the disclosures by stating, Notice: See below for important information, or a substantially similar statement.

(B) Disclosures on the front of the validation notice. If a debt collector is collecting time-barred debt, on the front of the validation notice below the disclosure required by paragraph (c)(2)(ix) of this section, any time-barred debt disclosure that is specifically required by, or that provides a safe harbor under, applicable law, provided that applicable law specifies the content of the disclosure.

Official interpretation of 34(d)(3)(iv)(B) Disclosures on the front of the validation notice.

1. In general. Section 1006.34(d)(3)(iv)(B) provides, in relevant part that, if a debt collector is collecting time-barred debt, the debt collector may include on the front of the validation notice any time-barred debt disclosure that is specifically required by, or that provides a safe harbor under, applicable law, provided that applicable law specifies the content of the disclosure. For example, if applicable State law requires a debt collector who is collecting time-barred debt to disclose to the consumer that the law limits how long a consumer can be sued on a debt and that the debt collector cannot or will not sue the consumer to collect it, the debt collector may include that disclosure on the front of the validation notice. See § 1006.26(a)(2) for the definition of time-barred debt. For purposes of § 1006.34(d)(3)(iv)(B), time-barred debt disclosures may include disclosures about revival of debt collectors' right to bring a legal action to enforce the debt.

(v) Information about electronic communications. The following information:

(A) The debt collector's website and email address.

(B) If the validation information is not provided electronically, a statement explaining how a consumer can, as described in paragraphs (c)(4)(i) and (ii) of this section formulario en español (which means I want this form in Spanish), using that phrase or a substantially similar phrase in Spanish, next to a prompt.

(vii) The merchant brand, affinity brand, or facility name, if any, associated with the debt.

Official interpretation of Paragraph 34(d)(3)(vii).

1. Merchant brand. Section 1006.34(d)(3)(vii) permits a debt collector to include the merchant brand, if any, associated with debt. For example, assume that a debt collector is attempting to collect a consumer's credit card debt. The credit card was issued by ABC Bank and was co-branded XYZ Store. XYZ Store is the merchant brand.

2. Affinity brand. Section 1006.34(d)(3)(vii) permits a debt collector to include the affinity brand, if any, associated with the debt. For example, assume that a debt collector is attempting to collect a consumer's credit card debt. The credit card was issued by ABC Bank, and the logo for the College of Columbia appears on the credit card. College of Columbia is the affinity brand.

3. Facility name. Section 1006.34(d)(3)(vii) permits a debt collector to include the facility name, if any, associated with the debt. For example, assume that a debt collector is attempting to collect a consumer's medical debt. The medical debt relates to a treatment that the consumer received at ABC Hospital. ABC Hospital is the facility name.

(viii) If a debt collector is collecting debt other than debt related to a consumer financial product or service as defined in § 1006.2(f), the information specified in paragraphs (c)(2)(iii) or (c)(3)(iv) of this section.

(4) Validation notices delivered electronically. If a debt collector delivers a validation notice electronically, a debt collector may, at its option, format the validation notice as follows:

(i) Prompts. Any prompt required by paragraphs (c)(4)(i) or (ii) or paragraphs (d)(3)(iii)(B) or (vi)(B) of this section may be displayed electronically as a fillable field.

(ii) Hyperlinks. Hyperlinks may be embedded that, when clicked:

(A) Connect a consumer to the debt collector's website;

(B) Connect a consumer to the Bureau's debt collection website as disclosed pursuant to paragraph (c)(3)(iv) of this section; or

(C) Permit a consumer to respond to the dispute and original-creditor information prompts required by paragraphs (c)(4)(i) and (ii) of this section.

e) Translation into other languages.

Official interpretation of 34(e) Translation into other languages.

1. Safe harbor for complete and accurate translation. Section 1006.34(e) provides, among other things, that, if a debt collector sends a consumer a validation notice translated into a language other than English, the translation must be complete and accurate. The language of a validation notice that a debt collector obtains from the Bureau's website is considered a complete and accurate translation. Debt collectors are permitted to use other validation notice translations if they are complete and accurate.

(1) In general. A debt collector may send a consumer a validation notice completely and accurately translated into any language if the debt collector:

(i) Sends the consumer an English-language validation notice in the same communication as the translated validation notice; or

(ii) Previously provided the consumer an English-language validation notice, in which case the debt collector need not send the consumer an English-language validation notice in the same communication as the translated validation notice.

(2) Spanish-language validation notice—requirement to provide after optional disclosure. A debt collector who includes in the validation information either or both of the optional disclosures described in paragraph (d)(3)(vi) of this section, and who thereafter receives a request from the consumer for a Spanish-language validation notice, must provide the consumer a validation notice completely and accurately translated into Spanish.

§ 1006.38 Disputes and requests for original-creditor information.

Official interpretation

1. In writing. Section 1006.38 contains requirements related to a dispute or request for the name and address of the original creditor timely submitted in writing by the consumer. A consumer has disputed the debt or requested the name and address of the original creditor in writing for purposes of § 1006.38(c) or (d)(2) if the consumer, for example:

i. Mails the written dispute or request to the debt collector;

ii. Returns to the debt collector the consumer-response form that § 1006.34(c)(4) requires to appear on the validation notice and indicates on the form the dispute or request;

iii. Provides the dispute or request to the debt collector using a medium of electronic communication through which the debt collector accepts electronic communications from consumers, such as an email address or a website portal; or

iv. Delivers the written dispute or request in person or by courier to the debt collector.

2. Interpretation of the E-SIGN Act. Comment 38-1.ii constitutes the Bureau's interpretation of section 101 of the E-SIGN Act as applied to section 809(b) of the FDCPA. Under this interpretation, section 101(a) of the E-SIGN Act enables a consumer to satisfy through an electronic request the requirement in section 809(b) of the FDCPA that the consumer's notification of the debt collector be in writing. Further, because the consumer may only use a medium of electronic communication through which a debt collector accepts electronic communications from consumers, section 101(b) of the E-SIGN Act is not contravened.

3. Deceased consumers. If the debt collector knows or should know that the consumer is deceased, and if the consumer has not previously disputed the debt or requested the name and address of the original creditor, a person who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate operates as the consumer for purposes of § 1006.38. In such circumstances, to comply with § 1006.38(c) or (d)(2), respectively, a debt collector must respond to a request for the name and address of the original creditor or to a dispute timely submitted in writing by a person who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate.

(a) Definitions. For purposes of this section, the following definitions apply:

(1) Duplicative dispute means a dispute submitted by the consumer in writing within the validation period that:

Official interpretation of 38(a)(1) Duplicative dispute.

1. Substantially the same. Section 1006.38(a)(1) provides that a dispute is a duplicative dispute if, among other things, the dispute is substantially the same as a dispute previously submitted by the consumer in writing within the validation period for which the debt collector has already satisfied the requirements of § 1006.38(d)(2)(i). A later dispute can be substantially the same as an earlier dispute even if the later dispute does not repeat verbatim the language of the earlier dispute.

2. New and material information. Section 1006.38(a)(1) provides that a dispute that is substantially the same as a dispute previously submitted by the consumer in writing within the validation period for which the debt collector has already satisfied the requirements of § 1006.38(d)(2)(i) is not a duplicative dispute if the consumer provides new and material information to support the dispute. Information is new if the consumer did not provide the information when submitting an earlier dispute. Information is material if it is reasonably likely to change the verification the debt collector provided or would have provided in response to the earlier dispute. The following example illustrates the rule:

i. ABC debt collector is collecting a debt from a consumer and sends the consumer a validation notice. In response, the consumer submits a written dispute to ABC debt collector within the validation period asserting that the consumer does not owe the debt. The consumer does not include any information in support of the dispute. Pursuant to § 1006.38(d)(2)(i), ABC debt collector provides the consumer a copy of verification of the debt. The consumer then sends a cancelled check showing the consumer paid the debt. The cancelled check is new and material information.

(i) Is substantially the same as a dispute previously submitted by the consumer in writing within the validation period for which the debt collector already has satisfied the requirements of paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section; and

(ii) Does not include new and material information to support the dispute.

(2) Validation period has the same meaning given to it in § 1006.34(b)(5).

(b) Overshadowing of rights to dispute or request original-creditor information.

(1) Prohibition. During the validation period, a debt collector must not engage in any collection activities or communications that overshadow or are inconsistent with the disclosure of the consumer's rights to dispute the debt and to request the name and address of the original creditor.

(2) Safe harbor. A debt collector who uses Model Form B-1 in appendix B to this part in a manner described in § 1006.34(d)(2) has not thereby violated paragraph (b)(1) of this section.

(c) Requests for original-creditor information. Upon receipt of a request for the name and address of the original creditor submitted by the consumer in writing within the validation period, a debt collector must cease collection of the debt until the debt collector:

(1) In general. Sends the name and address of the original creditor to the consumer in writing or electronically in the manner required by § 1006.42; or

(2) Special rule if the current creditor and the original creditor are the same. In lieu of taking the actions described in paragraph (c)(1) of this section, reasonably determines that the original creditor is the same as the current creditor, notifies the consumer of that fact in writing or electronically in the manner required by § 1006.42, and refers the consumer to the validation information previously provided pursuant to § 1006.34(a)(1).

(d) Disputes—

(1) Failure to dispute. The failure of a consumer to dispute the validity of a debt does not constitute a legal admission of liability by the consumer.

(2) Response to disputes. Upon receipt of a dispute submitted by the consumer in writing within the validation period, a debt collector must cease collection of the debt, or any disputed portion of the debt, until the debt collector:

(i) Sends a copy either of verification of the debt or of a judgment to the consumer in writing or electronically in the manner required by § 1006.42; or

(ii) In the case of a dispute that the debt collector reasonably determines is a duplicative dispute, either:

Official interpretation of Paragraph 38(d)(2)(ii).

1. Duplicative dispute notice. Section 1006.38(d)(2)(ii) provides that, in the case of a dispute that a debt collector reasonably determines is a duplicative dispute, the debt collector must cease collection of the debt, or any disputed portion of the debt, until the debt collector either notifies the consumer that the dispute is duplicative (§ 1006.38(d)(2)(ii)(A)) or provides a copy either of verification of the debt or of a judgment to the consumer (§ 1006.38(d)(2)(ii)(B)). If the debt collector notifies the consumer that the dispute is duplicative, § 1006.38(d)(2)(ii)(A) requires that the notice provide a brief statement of the reasons for the debt collector's determination that the dispute is duplicative and refer the consumer to the debt collector's response to the earlier dispute. A debt collector complies with the requirement to provide a brief statement of the reasons for its determination if the notice states that the dispute is substantially the same as an earlier dispute submitted by the consumer and the consumer has not included any new and material information in support of the earlier dispute. A debt collector complies with the requirement to refer the consumer to the debt collector's response to the earlier dispute if the notice states that the debt collector responded to the earlier dispute and provides the date of that response.

(A) Notifies the consumer in writing or electronically in the manner required by § 1006.42(a)(1) that the dispute is duplicative, provides a brief statement of the reasons for the determination, and refers the consumer to the debt collector's response to the earlier dispute; or

(B) Satisfies paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section.

§ 1006.42 Sending required disclosures.

(a) Sending required disclosures—

(1) In general. A debt collector who sends disclosures required by the Act and this part in writing or electronically must do so in a manner that is reasonably expected to provide actual notice, and in a form that the consumer may keep and access later.

Official interpretation of 42(a)(1) In general.

1. Relevant factors. Section 1006.42(a)(1) provides, in part, that a debt collector who sends disclosures required by the Act or this part in writing or electronically must, among other things, do so in a manner that is reasonably expected to provide actual notice. In determining whether a debt collector has complied with this requirement, relevant factors include whether the debt collector:

i. Identified the purpose of the communication by including, in the subject line of an electronic communication transmitting the disclosure, the name of the creditor to whom the debt currently is owed or allegedly is owed and one additional piece of information identifying the debt, other than the amount, such as a truncated account number; the name of the original creditor; the name of any store brand associated with the debt; the date of sale of a product or service giving rise to the debt; the physical address of service; and the billing or mailing address on the account;

ii. Permitted receipt of notifications of undeliverability from communications providers, monitored for any such notifications, and treated any such notifications as precluding a reasonable expectation of actual notice for that delivery attempt; and

iii. Identified itself as the sender of the communication by including a business name that the consumer would be likely to recognize, such as the name included in the notice described in § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(C), or the name that the debt collector has used in a prior limited-content message left for the consumer or in an email message sent to the consumer.

2. Notice of undeliverability. A debt collector who sends a required disclosure in writing or electronically and who receives a notice that the disclosure was not delivered has not sent the disclosure in a manner that is reasonably expected to provide actual notice under § 1006.42(a)(1).

3. Safe harbor for notices sent by mail. Subject to comment 42(a)(1)-2, a debt collector satisfies § 1006.42(a)(1) if the debt collector mails a printed copy of a disclosure to the consumer's last known address, unless the debt collector, at the time of mailing, knows or should know that the consumer does not currently reside at, or receive mail at, that location.

4. Effect of consumer opt out. If a consumer has opted out of debt collection communications to a particular email address or telephone number by, for example, following the instructions provided pursuant to § 1006.6(e), then a debt collector cannot use that email address or telephone number to send required disclosures.

(2) Exceptions. A debt collector need not comply with paragraph (a)(1) of this section when sending the disclosure required by § 1006.6(e) or § 1006.18(e) in writing or electronically, unless the disclosure is included on a notice required by § 1006.34(a)(1)(i) or § 1006.38(c) or (d)(2).

(b) Requirements for certain disclosures sent electronically. To comply with paragraph (a) of this section, a debt collector who sends the notice required by § 1006.34(a)(1)(i)(B), or the disclosures described in § 1006.38(c) or (d)(2)(i), electronically must do so in accordance with section 101(c) of the Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act (E-SIGN Act) (15 U.S.C. 7001(c)).

§ 1006.100 Record retention.

Official interpretation

1. Three-year retention period. Section 1006.100 requires a debt collector to maintain records that are evidence of compliance or noncompliance with the FDCPA and this part starting on the date that the debt collector begins collection activity on a debt until three years after the debt collector's last collection activity on the debt or, in the case of telephone call recordings, until three years after the dates of the telephone calls. Nothing in § 1006.100 prohibits a debt collector from retaining records that are evidence of compliance or noncompliance with the FDCPA and this part for more than three years after the applicable date.

(a) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this section, a debt collector must retain records that are evidence of compliance or noncompliance with the FDCPA and this part starting on the date that the debt collector begins collection activity on a debt until three years after the debt collector's last collection activity on the debt.

Official interpretation of 100(a) In general.

1. Records that evidence compliance. Section 1006.100(a) provides, in part, that a debt collector must retain records that are evidence of compliance or noncompliance with the FDCPA and this part. Thus, under § 1006.100(a), a debt collector must retain records that evidence that the debt collector performed the actions and made the disclosures required by the FDCPA and this part, as well as records that evidence that the debt collector refrained from conduct prohibited by the FDCPA and this part. If a record is of a type that could evidence compliance or noncompliance depending on the conduct of the debt collector that is revealed within the record, then the record is one that is evidence of compliance or noncompliance, and the debt collector must retain it. Such records include, but are not limited to, records that evidence that the debt collector's communications and attempts to communicate in connection with the collection of a debt complied (or did not comply) with the FDCPA and this part. For example, a debt collector must retain:

i. Telephone call logs as evidence of compliance or noncompliance with the prohibition against harassing telephone calls in § 1006.14(b)(1); and

ii. Copies of documents provided to consumers as evidence that the debt collector provided the information required by §§ 1006.34 and 1006.38 and met the delivery requirements of § 1006.42.

2. No requirement to create additional records. A debt collector need not create and maintain additional records, for the sole purpose of evidencing compliance, that the debt collector would not have created in the ordinary course of its business in the absence of the record retention requirement set forth in § 1006.100(a). For example, § 1006.100(a) does not require a debt collector to create call logs showing that it has not attempted to communicate with any consumers at times that the consumers designated as inconvenient. However, if the debt collector maintains call logs, the call logs are evidence of compliance or noncompliance with the FDCPA and this part and the collector must retain them.

3. Methods of retaining evidence. Section 1006.100(a) does not require a debt collector to retain actual paper copies of documents. Records may be retained by any method that reproduces the records accurately (including computer programs) and that ensures that the debt collector can easily access the records (including a contractual right to access records possessed by another entity).

4. When the three-year record retention clock starts to run. Section 1006.100(a) provides, in part, that a debt collector must retain records that are evidence of compliance or noncompliance until three years after the debt collector's last collection activity on a debt. An event such as the debt collector transferring the debt for consideration to another party would start the running of the debt collector's three-year record retention clock with respect to the debt, provided that the transfer of the debt represents the debt collector's last collection activity on the debt. In contrast, the debt's discharge in bankruptcy, or the consumer's curing of default on the debt, would not represent the time at which the three-year record-retention clock starts to run if the debt collector continues collection activity on the debt after that time, which might occur when the debt is secured and an enforceable lien on the collateral that secured the debt survives the bankruptcy discharge (and collection activity pursuant to the lien continues after the discharge).

(b) Special rule for telephone call recordings. If a debt collector records telephone calls made in connection with the collection of a debt, the debt collector must retain the recording of each such telephone call for three years after the date of the call.

Official interpretation of 100(b) Special rule for telephone call recordings.

1. Recorded telephone calls. Nothing in § 1006.100 requires a debt collector to record telephone calls. However, if a debt collector records telephone calls, the recordings are evidence of compliance or noncompliance with the FDCPA and this part, and, under § 1006.100(b), the debt collector must retain the recording of each such telephone call for three years after the date of the call.

§ 1006.104 Relation to State laws.

Official interpretation

1. State law disclosure requirements. The Act and the corresponding provisions of Regulation F do not annul, alter, or affect, or exempt any person subject to these requirements from complying with a disclosure requirement under applicable State law that describes additional protections under State law that are not inconsistent with the Act and Regulation F. A disclosure required by State law is not inconsistent with the FDCPA or Regulation F if the disclosure describes a protection that such law affords any consumer that is greater than the protection provided by the FDCPA or Regulation F.

Neither the Act nor the corresponding provisions of this part annul, alter, affect, or exempt any person subject to the provisions of the Act or the corresponding provisions of this part from complying with the laws of any State with respect to debt collection practices, except to the extent that those laws are inconsistent with any provision of the Act or the corresponding provisions of this part, and then only to the extent of the inconsistency. For purposes of this section, a State law is not inconsistent with the Act or the corresponding provisions of this part if the protection such law affords any consumer is greater than the protection provided by the Act or the corresponding provisions of this part.

§ 1006.108 Exemption for State regulation.

(a) Exemption for State regulation. Any State may apply to the Bureau for a determination that, under the laws of that State, any class of debt collection practices within that State is subject to requirements that are substantially similar to those imposed under sections 803 through 812 of the Act (15 U.S.C. 1692a through 1692j) and the corresponding provisions of this part, and that there is adequate provision for State enforcement of such requirements.

(b) Procedures and criteria. The procedures and criteria whereby States may apply to the Bureau for exemption of a class of debt collection practices within the applying State from the provisions of the Act and the corresponding provisions of this part as provided in section 817 of the Act (15 U.S.C. 1692o) are set forth in appendix A of this part.

Appendix A to Part 1006—Procedures for State Application for Exemption from the Provisions of the Act

I. Purpose and Definitions

(a) This appendix establishes procedures and criteria whereby States may apply to the Bureau for exemption of a class of debt collection practices within the applying State from the provisions of the Act and the corresponding provisions of this part as provided in section 817 of the Act (15 U.S.C. 1692o).

(b) For purposes of this appendix:

(1) Applicant State law means the State law that, for a class of debt collection practices within that State, is claimed to contain requirements that are substantially similar to the requirements that relevant Federal law imposes on that class of debt collection practices, and that contains adequate provision for State enforcement.

(2) Class of debt collection practices includes one or more such classes of debt collection practices referred to in paragraph I(b)(1) of this appendix.

(3) Relevant Federal law means sections 803 through 812 of the Act (15 U.S.C. 1692a through 1692j) and the corresponding provisions of this part.

(4) State law includes State statutes, any regulations that implement State statutes, and formal interpretations of State statutes or regulations by a court of competent jurisdiction or duly authorized State agency.

II. Application

Any State may apply to the Bureau pursuant to the terms of this appendix for a determination that the applicant State law contains requirements that, for a class of debt collection practices within that State, are substantially similar to the requirements that relevant Federal law imposes on that class of debt collection practices, and that the applicant State law contains adequate provision for State enforcement. The application must be in writing, addressed to the Assistant Director, Office of Regulations, Division of Research, Markets, and Regulations, Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection, 1700 G Street, NW, Washington, DC 20552, signed by the Governor, Attorney General, or State official having primary enforcement responsibility under the State law that applies to the class of debt collection practices, and must be supported by the documents specified in this appendix.

III. Supporting Documents

The application must be accompanied by the following, which may be submitted in paper or electronic form:

(a) A copy of the applicant State law.

(b) A comparison of each provision of relevant Federal law with the corresponding provisions of the applicant State law, together with reasons supporting the claim that the corresponding provisions of the applicant State law are substantially similar to the provisions of relevant Federal law, and an explanation as to why any differences between the State statute or regulation and Federal law are not inconsistent with the provisions of relevant Federal law and do not result in a diminution in the protection otherwise afforded consumers; and a statement that no other State laws (including administrative or judicial interpretations) are related to, or would have an effect upon, the State law that is being considered by the Bureau in making its determination.

(c) A comparison of the provisions of the State law that provide for enforcement with the provisions of section 814 of the Act (15 U.S.C. 1692*l*), together with reasons supporting the claim that the applicant State law provides for adequate administrative enforcement.

(d) A statement identifying the office designated or to be designated to enforce the applicant State law. The statement must show how the office provides for adequate enforcement of the applicant State law, including by showing that the office has necessary facilities, personnel, and funding. The statement must include, for example, complete information regarding the fiscal arrangements for administrative enforcement (including the amount of funds available or to be provided), the number and qualifications of personnel engaged or to be engaged in enforcement, and a description of the procedures under which the applicant State law is to be enforced by the State.

IV. Criteria for Determination

The Bureau will consider the criteria set forth below, and any other relevant information, in determining whether the applicant State law is substantially similar to relevant Federal law and whether there is adequate provision for enforcement of the applicant State law. In making that determination, the Bureau primarily will consider each provision of the applicant State law in comparison with each corresponding provision in relevant Federal law, and not the State law as a whole in comparison with the Act as a whole.

(a)

(1) In order for the applicant State law to be substantially similar to relevant Federal law, the applicant State law at least must provide that:

(i) Definitions and rules of construction, as applicable, import a meaning and have an application that are substantially similar to those prescribed by relevant Federal law.

(ii) Debt collectors provide all of the applicable notices required by relevant Federal law, with the content and in the terminology, form, and time periods prescribed pursuant to relevant Federal law. The Bureau may determine whether additional notice requirements under the applicant State law affect a determination that the applicant State law is substantially similar to relevant Federal law.

(iii) Debt collectors take all affirmative actions and abide by obligations substantially similar to those prescribed by relevant Federal law under substantially similar conditions and within substantially similar time periods as are prescribed under relevant Federal law;

(iv) Debt collectors abide by prohibitions that are substantially similar to those prescribed by relevant Federal law;

(v) Consumers' obligations or responsibilities are no more costly, lengthy, or burdensome than consumers' corresponding obligations or responsibilities under relevant Federal law; and

(vi) Consumers' rights and protections are substantially similar to those provided by relevant Federal law under conditions or within time periods that are substantially similar to those prescribed by relevant Federal law.

(2) In applying the criteria set forth in paragraph IV(a)(1) of this appendix, the Bureau will not consider adversely any additional requirements of State law that are not inconsistent with the purpose of the Act or the requirements imposed under relevant Federal law.

(b) In determining whether provisions for enforcement of the applicant State law are adequate, consideration will be given to the extent to which, under the applicant State law, provision is made for administrative enforcement, including necessary facilities, personnel, and funding.

V. Public Comment

In connection with any application that has been filed in accordance with the requirements of parts II and III of this appendix and following initial review of the application, a proposed rule concerning the application for exemption will be published by the Bureau in the Federal Register, and a copy of such application will be made available for examination by interested persons during business hours at the Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection, 1700 G Street, NW, Washington, DC 20552. A comment period will be allowed from the date of such publication for interested parties to submit written comments to the Bureau regarding that application.

VI. Exemption from Requirements

If the Bureau determines on the basis of the information before it that, under the applicant State law, a class of debt collection practices is subject to requirements substantially similar to those imposed under relevant Federal law and that there is adequate provision for State enforcement, the Bureau will exempt the class of debt collection practices in that State from the requirements of relevant Federal law and section 814 of the Act in the following manner and subject to the following conditions:

(a) A final rule granting the exemption will be published in the Federal Register, and the Bureau will furnish a copy of such rule to the State official who made application for such exemption, to each Federal authority responsible for administrative enforcement of the requirements of relevant Federal law, and to the Attorney General of the United States. Any exemption granted will be effective 90 days after the date of publication of such rule in the Federal Register.

(b) Any State that receives an exemption must, through its appropriate official, take the following steps:

(i) Inform the Assistant Director, Office of Regulations, Division of Research, Markets, and Regulations, Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection, 1700 G Street, NW, Washington, DC 20552 in writing within 30 days of any change in the applicant State law. The report of any such change must contain copies of the full text of that change, together with statements setting forth the information and opinions regarding that change that are specified in paragraph III.

(ii) Provide, not later than two years after the date the exemption is granted, and every two years thereafter, a report to the Bureau in writing concerning the manner in which the State has enforced the applicant State law in the preceding two years and an update of the information required under paragraph III(d) of this appendix.

(c) The Bureau will inform any State that receives such an exemption, through its appropriate official, of any subsequent amendments of the Act or this part that might necessitate the amendment of State law for the exemption to continue.

(d) After an exemption is granted, the requirements of the applicable State law constitute the requirements of relevant Federal law, except to the extent such State law imposes requirements not imposed by the Act or this part.

VII. Adverse Determination

(a) If, after publication of a proposed rule in the Federal Register as provided under part V of this appendix, the Bureau finds on the basis of the information before it that it cannot make a favorable determination in connection with the application, the Bureau will notify the appropriate State official of the facts upon which such findings are based and will afford that State authority a reasonable opportunity to submit additional materials that demonstrate the basis for granting an exemption.

(b) If, after having afforded the State authority such opportunity to demonstrate the basis for granting an exemption, the Bureau finds on the basis of the information before it that it still cannot make a favorable determination in connection with the application, the Bureau will publish in the Federal Register a final rule containing its determination regarding the application and will furnish a copy of such rule to the State official who made application for such exemption.

VIII. Revocation of Exemption

(a) The Bureau reserves the right to revoke any exemption granted under the provisions of the Act or this part, if at any time it determines that the State law does not, in fact, impose requirements that are substantially similar to relevant Federal law or that there is not, in fact, adequate provision for State enforcement.

(b) Before revoking any such exemption, the Bureau will notify the State of the facts or conduct that, in the Bureau's opinion, warrant such revocation, and will afford that State such opportunity as the Bureau deems appropriate in the circumstances to demonstrate continued eligibility for an exemption.

(c) If, after having been afforded the opportunity to demonstrate or achieve compliance, the Bureau determines that the State has not done so, a proposed rule to revoke such exemption will be published in the Federal Register. A comment period will be allowed from the date of such publication for interested persons to submit written comments to the Bureau regarding the intention to revoke.

(d) If such exemption is revoked, a final rule revoking the exemption will be published by the Bureau in the Federal Register, and a copy of such rule will be furnished to the State, to the Federal authorities responsible for enforcement of the requirements of the Act, and to the Attorney General of the United States. The revocation becomes effective, and the class of debt collection practices affected within that State become subject to the requirements of sections 803 through 812 of the Act and the corresponding provisions of this part, 90 days after the date of publication of the final rule in the Federal Register.